Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

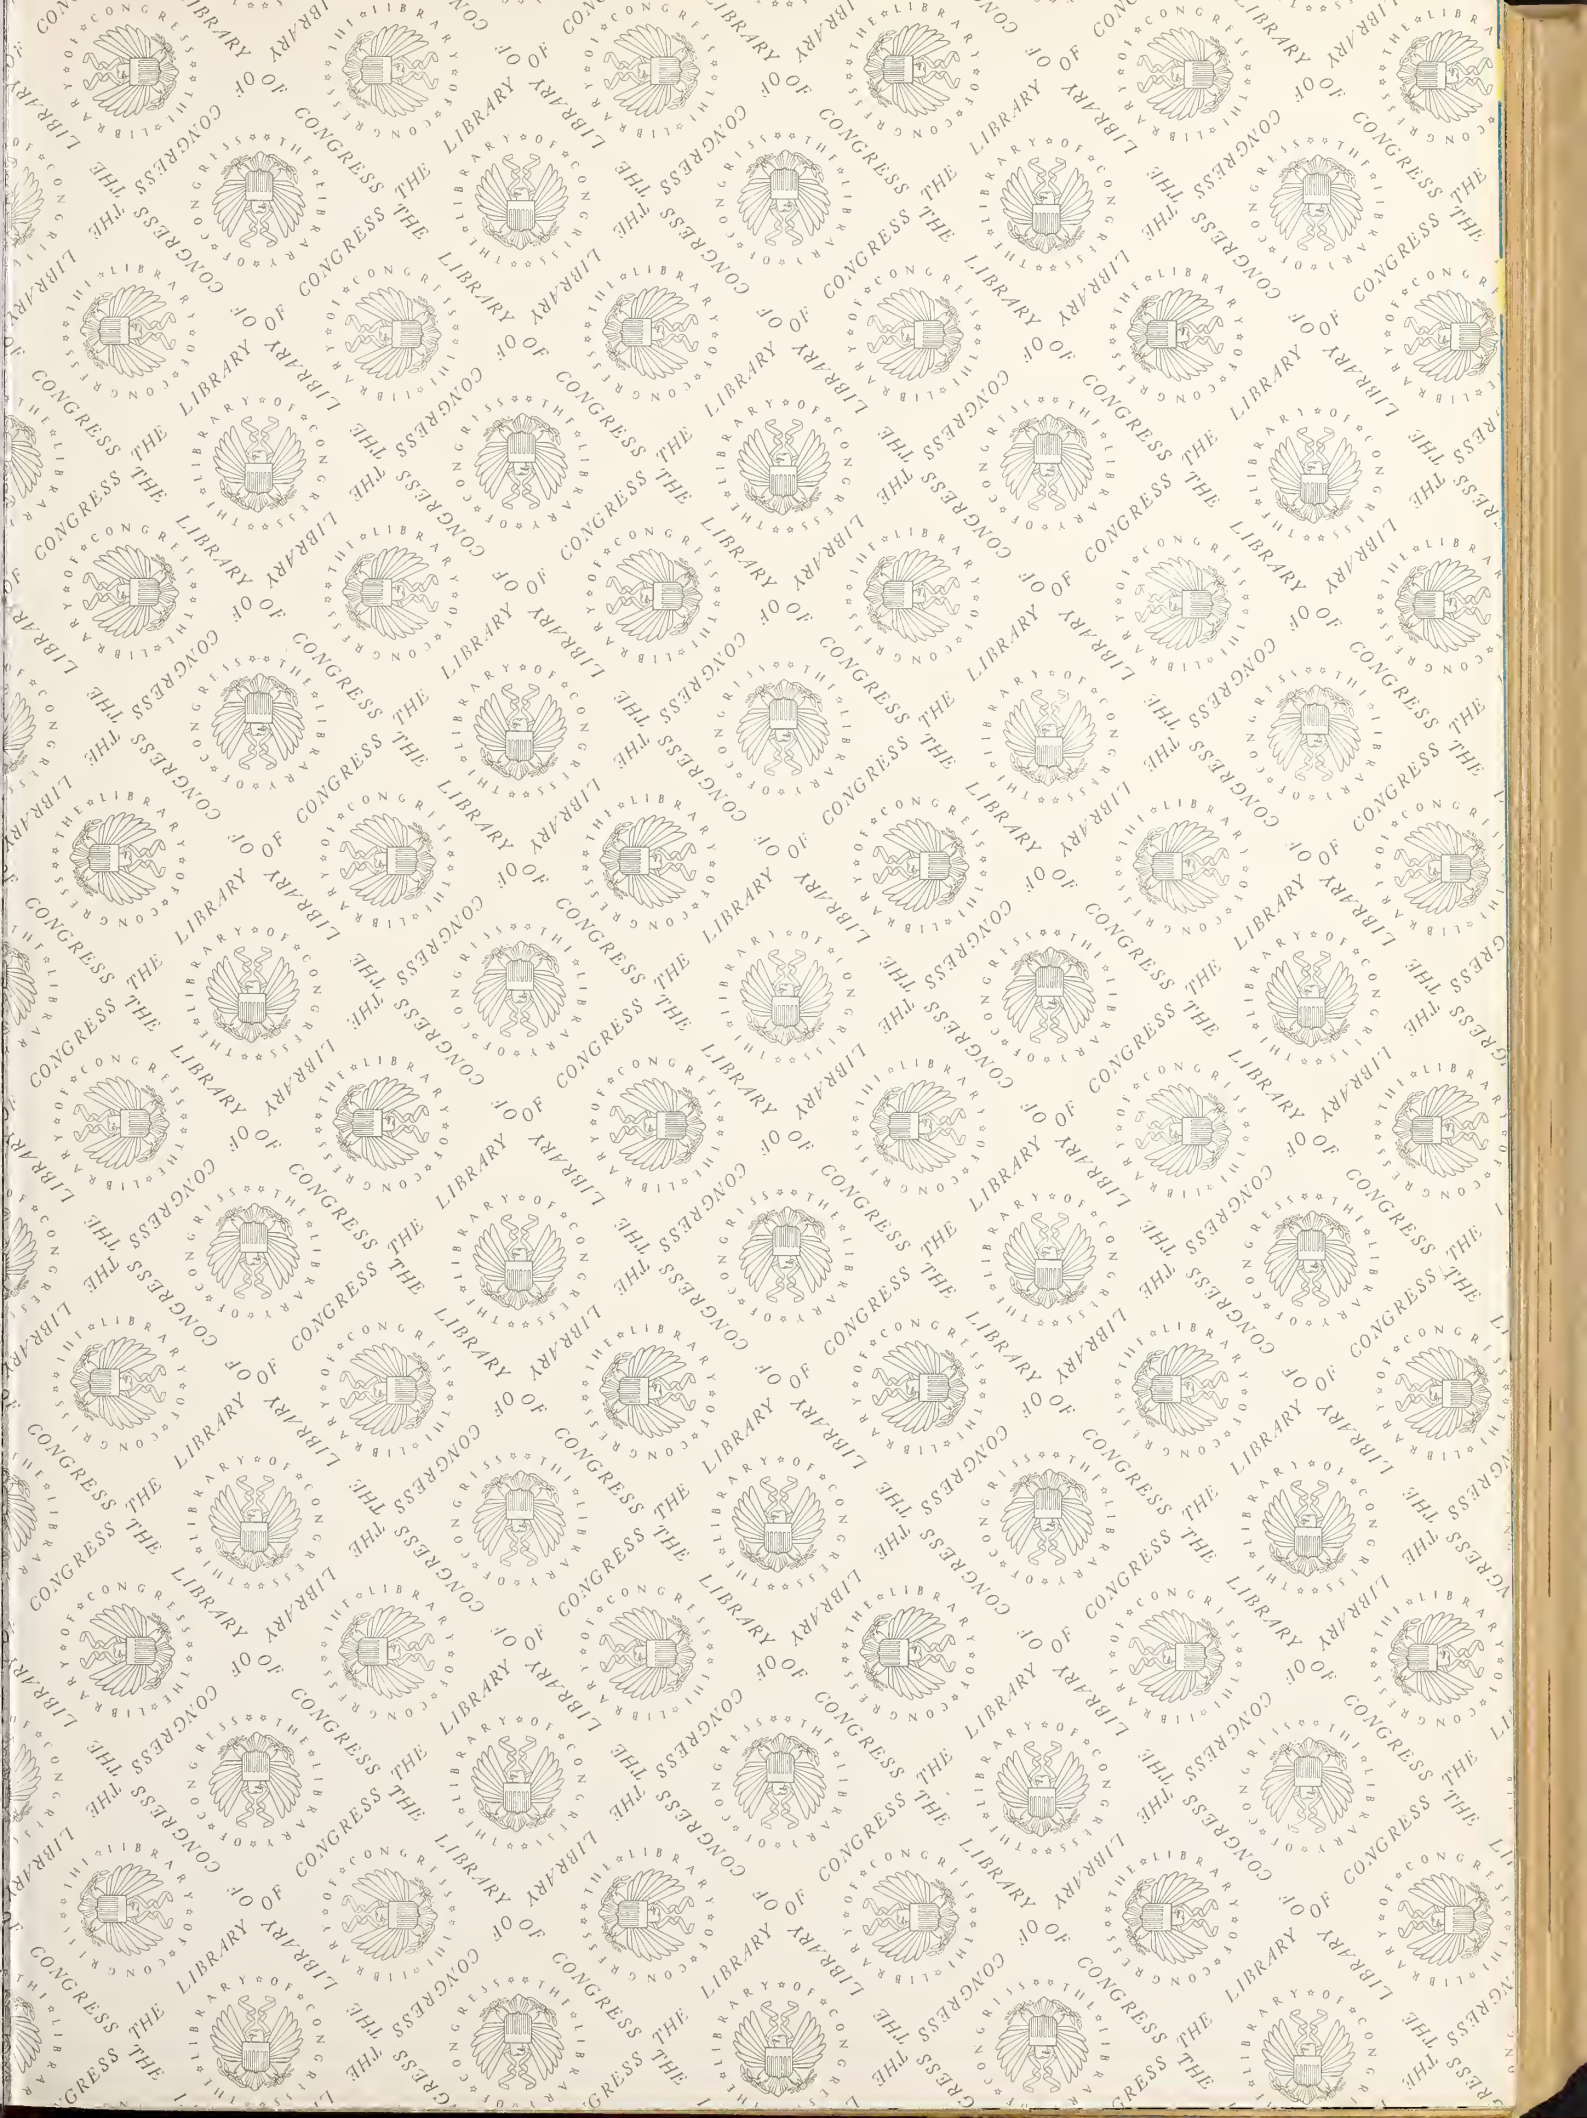
Motion Picture and Television Reading Room
www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record



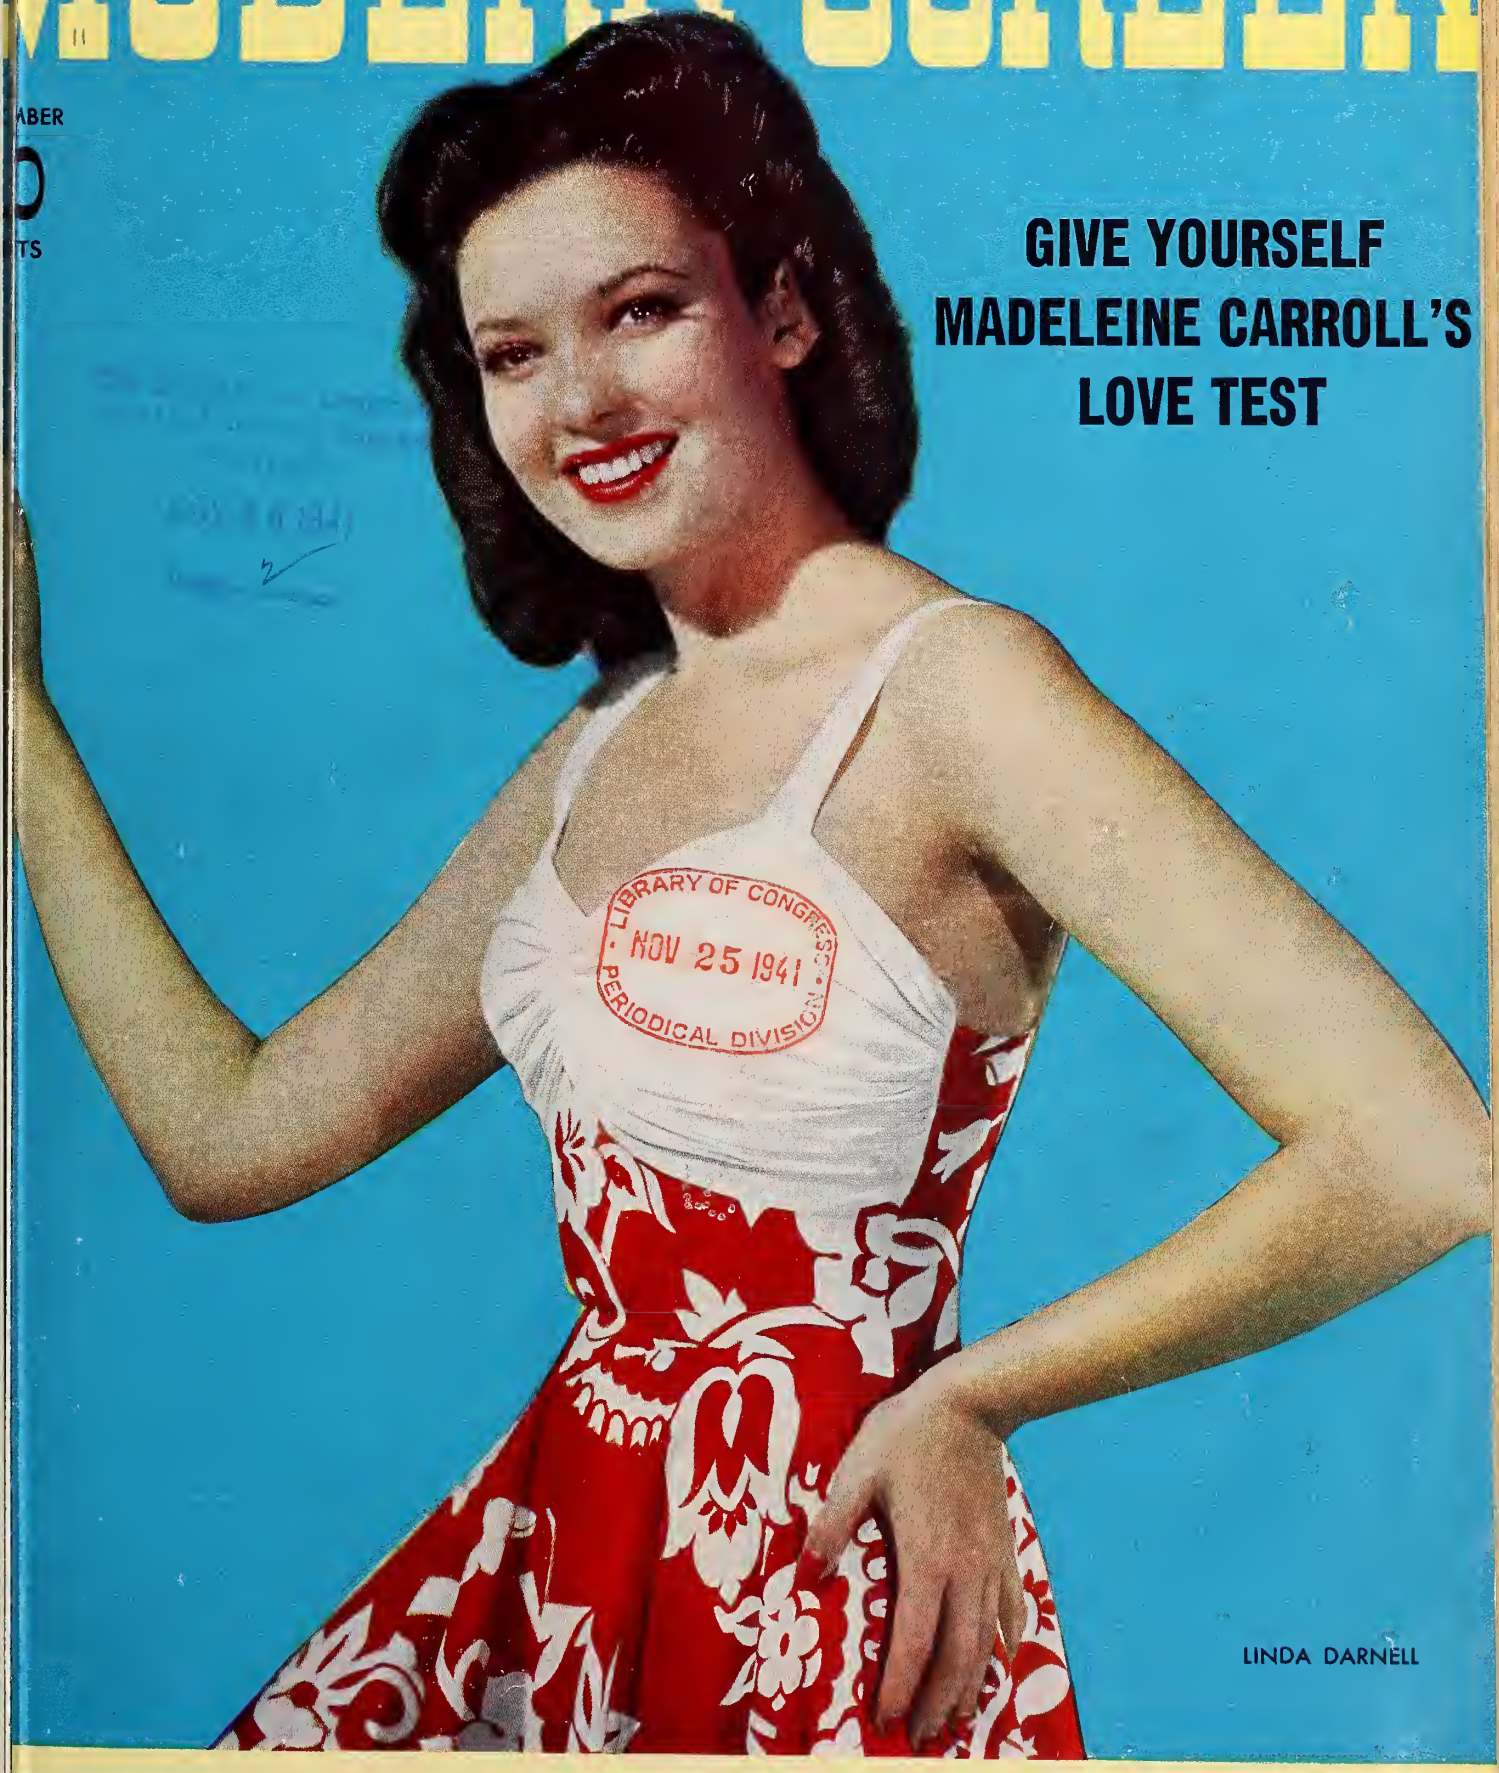
THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

MODERN SCREEN

ABER

D

TS



GIVE YOURSELF MADELEINE CARROLL'S LOVE TEST

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
NOV 25 1941
PERIODICAL DIVISION

LINDA DARNELL

WHY LINDA STAYS UNKISSED!

New— Pond's Exquisite Dreamflower Powder

Sweet magic for a Dream Girl

New Dreamflower Shades! Scorning to flatly match your skin, Dreamflower shades suffuse it with an added sweet delicacy of tone that miraculously seems your own!

New Dreamflower Smoothness—ethereally soft and clinging. Gives your face a dreamy "soft-focus" quality . . . an all-over smooth look almost too good to be true!

Adorable new box!—all little blossoms too sweet to be real—Dreamflowers! This new luxury in a big, big size—only forty-nine cents! 2 smaller sizes, too.

"Pond's new Dreamflower Powder is heavenly! Among those luscious new shades you can't help finding a flatterer. And such unbelievably silky texture!"

MRS. JOHN ROOSEVELT

"The darling new Dreamflower box caught my fancy first—and then the new powder itself won my heart. It's perfect!"

MRS. A. J. DREXEL, III

Free—All 6 Dreamflower shades

POND'S, Dept. 9MS PM, Clinton, Conn.

I'd love to try the new Dreamflower Powder, and see for myself how flattering it is. Will you please send me free samples of all 6 of the new Dreamflower shades right away?

*My name*_____

*Address*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

(This offer good in U. S. only)

PN1993
M334

Even if Heaven denied you Beauty—

YOUR STAR IS LUCKY.. if your Smile is Right!

Your smile is YOU! Help keep your gums firmer, your teeth brighter with Ipana and massage!

YOU don't have to be a beauty to have beauty's rewards—popularity, success, the man you want most to win.

Even if you're "plain" let your hopes soar high. Fortune can be more than kind... fortune can be lavish if your smile is right! A lovely smile is a magnet to others... the charm that wins hearts—and holds them.

So help your smile to be at its best. But remember healthy gums are important if you want your smile to have brightness and sparkle. That's why it's so unwise ever to ignore the first warning tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush.

Never ignore "Pink Tooth Brush"

If you see "pink" on your tooth brush ...see your dentist. He may merely say your gums have become tender because today's soft foods have robbed them of work and exercise. And like many modern dentists, he may suggest "the healthful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

Ipana is specially designed not only to clean teeth brilliantly and thoroughly but, with massage, to help firm and strengthen your gums. Massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums every time you brush your teeth. Notice its clean and refreshing taste. That invigorating "tang" means circulation is quickening in gum tissues—helping gums to healthier firmness.

Get a tube of economical Ipana Tooth Paste at your druggist's today. Let Ipana and massage help you to have a smile that lights up your loveliness!

"A LOVELY SMILE IS MOST IMPORTANT TO BEAUTY!"

say beauty editors of 23 out of 24 leading magazines

Recently a poll was made among the beauty editors of 24 leading magazines. All but one of these experts said that a woman has no greater charm than a lovely, sparkling smile.

They went on to say that "Even a plain girl can be charming, if she has a lovely smile. But without one, the loveliest woman's beauty is dimmed and darkened."

Start Today with

IPANA

TOOTH PASTE

A Product of Bristol-Myers

NOV 27 1941
C1B 519986

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

Whistling November finds the motion picture theatres doing very well, thank you.

★ ★ ★

For "The Chocolate Soldier" (not propaganda for candy or warriors) comes singing to the screens of America.

★ ★ ★

A lusty duet when Nelson Eddy joins with the sensational new star Rise Stevens.

Miss Stevens is unquestionably a thrush. Her voice has the liquidity of a babbling brook. Although unlike the famed stream of Tennyson it only goes on to the ultimate convincing note.

★ ★ ★

There has been some curiosity about this new excitement. It is a blending of two famous works.

★ ★ ★

Ferenc Molnar's "The Guardsman" has been embellished and enriched with the historic score of Oscar Straus' "The Chocolate Soldier".

★ ★ ★

It might well have been called "The Chocolate Guardsman".

★ ★ ★

But be that as it may it will unquestionably be called a great hit.

★ ★ ★

Eddy is in rare form. Director Roy Del Ruth gets a half-Nelson on his audience with a whole Nelson on his screen.

★ ★ ★

This is a film to see and to hear. To see beauty in the unstinted M-G-M manner.

★ ★ ★

And to hear "My Hero", "Sympathy", "The Chocolate Soldier" and other Straus songs of romance, as well as stirring pieces from Wagner, Schubert, Bizet.

★ ★ ★

In the cast also are Nigel Bruce and Florence Bates. Victor Saville's is the producing hand.

★ ★ ★

To be not brief but all-inclusive, "The Chocolate Soldier" has everything from A to...

★ ★ ★

Zip and zest.

—Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

MODERN SCREEN

Stories

Long Distance Love—Linda Darnell . . . 26
Up and Cummings—Robert Cummings . . . 28
The Other Side of a Legend—Hedy Lamarr . . . 32
Thumbs Down on Hollywood . . . 34
Oomph for Sale—Rita Hayworth . . . 36
He's "All Reet"—Bing Crosby . . . 40
Give Yourself the Love Test—Madeleine Carroll . . . 42
Adonis on Wheels—Robert Stack . . . 44
Skippy Remembers . . . —Jackie Cooper . . . 48
Pal Georgie—George Murphy . . . 52
Long-Haired Boy—Sabu . . . 54

Features

Mickey's 21 . . . 10
Party of the Month . . . 30
Candidly Yours . . . 38
For Dolls Only . . . 46
Garbo's Twins . . . 50
"The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . 78

Beauty

ABC's of Skin Care . . . 55
About Face for Winter . . . 56
Skin Care Chart . . . 58
What's Your Skin Score? . . . 59

Sub-Deb Fashions

Add These to Your Collection . . . 64
All-American Co-ed . . . 66

Departments

Movie Reviews . . . 6
Portrait Gallery . . . 19
Good News . . . 60
Modern Hostess . . . 70
Our Puzzle Page . . . 94
Movie Scoreboard . . . 98

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor

Cover: Linda Darnell appearing in 20th Century-Fox's "Rise and Shine"

Vol. 24, No. 1. December, 1941. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year; foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the postoffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Dallas, Texas; Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.

To thrill you... with laughter and song!

When M-G-M produces a musical it's the last word. Nelson Eddy as you've never seen him before giving a truly uproarious performance. Rise Stevens, sensational new singing star! Seductive chorus beauties! Spectacular sights to see! Forward march to merriment!

The Chocolate Soldier

starring

NELSON EDDY
RISE STEVENS

with NIGEL BRUCE · FLORENCE BATES

Based on Ferenc Molnar's "The Guardsman"
Screen Play by Leonard Lee and Keith Winter
A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture · Directed by ROY DEL RUTH · Produced by VICTOR SAVILLE

PACKED WITH PLEASURE!

Comedy romance of a matinee idol and a queen of melody. Hear them sing:

Oscar Straus' gayest love songs: "My Hero", "Sympathy", "The Chocolate Soldier", "Spy Song" and other marvels of melody, "Evening Star", "Song Of The Flea" and more, more, more!

MOVIE REVIEWS

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY—AA-1*

If this sad, nostalgic and poetically lovely story of remembered childhood in the Welsh coal mining country does not end as a candidate for "best-picture-of-the-year" honors, we shall miss our guess. Accompanied as it is in its unspoken passages by an insistent, heartbreaking commentary (like that of the interlocutor in "Our Town") in a voice which is that of the weary, disillusioned man into whom the boy we see on the screen has subsequently grown, it has the passion and vitality of immediate experience combined with the tenderness, the poignancy, the sentimental enchantment of long ago. With a fluent and sensitive script by Philip Dunne retaining the lovely quaintness of language of the novel, with John Ford's uncompromisingly realistic direction, and a notable cast which includes those two ruddy flowers of the Irish theater, Sara Allgood and Barry Fitzgerald, the picture is one of those which every person must see and judge for himself.

It is, above all, a deeply emotional picture, never far from tears. Transience and change and decay are everywhere implicit in the gaiety and beauty; the fragrance exists only in memory, like that of a small flower sentimentally pressed between the pages of an album. This is no film for star performers; the best actors are those who "act" least, who merge most successfully with the background, the emotional atmosphere, the anthracite realities of the story. On these subtly self-contradictory terms, Maureen O'Hara as Angharad, Donald Crisp as Mr. Morgan are peculiarly fitted for their parts. Walter Pidgeon as Mr. Gruffydd, Anna Lee as Bronwen, John Loder as Ianto, Roddy McDowall as Huw are also creditable castings. Occasional, strategic bursts of background chorusing by the Welsh Singers are nicely calculated to dissolve the hardest heart. Don't miss "How Green Was My Valley"; there aren't nearly enough pictures as good; there never can be enough.—20th Century-Fox. (Continued on page 8)

*Temporary rating. Owing to the necessity of going to press far in advance of picture release dates, our reviewer has been unable to see these films in completed form.

You Would Remember This Picture Always For Its Great

Love Story

You Would Praise It Solely For Its Thrilling Hitchcock

Suspense

You Would See It Just To See Its Two Brilliant

Stars....

And Here Are All Three

OF THESE EXCITING FEATURES COMBINED TO BRING YOU THE MOST THRILLING HOURS YOU HAVE EVER SPENT BEFORE A PICTURE SCREEN

He was charming enough to make many women love him... desperate enough to ruin the life of the one woman he loved.

Screen Play by Samson Raphaelson, Joan Harrison, and Alma Reville
AN RKO RADIO PICTURE

CARY GRANT

Finer Than In "Philadelphia Story" and "Penny Serenade"

JOAN FONTAINE

In Her First Picture Since "Rebecca"

Suspicion

FROM FRANCIS ILES' BRILLIANT NOVEL, "BEFORE THE FACT"

with SIR CEDRIC HARDWICKE • NIGEL BRUCE • DAME MAY WHITTY

Directed By ALFRED HITCHCOCK

ALL-AMERICAN CO-ED DRESS
by Marie Phillips
AS WORN BY
MARJORIE WOODWORTH
Featured in the Hal Roach Production
"ALL AMERICAN CO-ED"
The newest sensation in beautiful Tuscany rayon crepe —an ALTHAL fabric. Sizes 9-19 and 10-20. Colors: gold, royal, kelly, dark green, brown, black, red.
$7.95
At your favorite department store and specialty shop, or write to:
SURETY FROCKS
1400 BROADWAY, N. Y. C.

SITROUX
Triple-Tested
CLEANSING TISSUES

SOFTER Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

STRONGER As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made from pure cellulose.

MORE ABSORBENT Drinks in moisture. Ideal for beauty care and a thousand and one uses everywhere.

AT 5 & 10¢—DRUG & DEPT. STORES

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 6)

SKYLARK—AB-2*

Incredibly Claudette Colbert isn't getting enough attention from her husband, Ray Milland. So this interesting, good-looking chap, who's a guest at a drinking party in their swanky house (Brian Aherne) and who is practically overcome by the liquid hospitality, tells her she is really a "skylark" and that he wants to show her the moon. Claudette, who is obviously too smart to fall for that cheap lunar gag, decides to go skylarking anyway because she is sore at her husband for making so much money, or something, and says, "Okay, show me the moon." The drinking fellow knows she only means it in a nice way so that makes him drink more and the things he says get even crummier.

Ray isn't jealous when the skylark doesn't get home till after sunup. A practical fellow, he is just burned because she has made the wife of his biggest advertising account (Binnie Barnes) jealous by running off with her boyfriend. He orders her to call up and explain everything to Binnie, whom Claudette despises. No man can do that to a Colbert, as we know.

Claudette leaves her husband, and runs to Brian for legal and other assistance. She returns when Ray, as a pledge of his undying devotion, swears that he has quit his job. She leaves again when she discovers he was lying. It goes on and on: she's sailing away with Aherne on the moon; she isn't sailing away with Aherne on the moon (gets seasick trying to brew some coffee in the galley) Now, Ray's away, to South America; now there's Claudette flying after him on a plane. Skylark! It's positively an understatement!

Want to know what we think's the trouble with this picture? Here's our theory: Mr. Samson Raphaelson's story started as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post. Then it was published as a novel. Then it became a play and was produced on Broadway. Maybe this thing's been carried too far. It's just a thought.—Par.

P. S.

The snapshots of Ray Milland and Claudette Colbert in the Fifth Wedding Anniversary scrap book are the McCoy They're pictures taken of the two together when they made "The Gilded Lily" half a decade ago . . . Ernest Cossart has played 150 butlers, 20 valets and 10 headwaiters. Can't mix a drink to save his soul and burned his trousers the one and only time he tried to press them . . . Only authentic poster among the dozens of phonies dreamed up especially for the picture is the famous pointing poster of Uncle Sam, announcing "I Want You For The U. S. Army" . . . Brian Aherne spent all his time away from the set piling up air-time in his plane . . . Mona Barrie, Walter Abel's movie wife, says she'd rather be known as a clothes horse than as an actress . . . Colbert, while waiting for the picture to start production, spent a week at Sun Valley and toted home a trophy for winning the slalom race down Dollar Mountain. Zigzagged neatly between the markers for three-eighths of a mile in one minute, six seconds . . . The clump of four slender birch trees in the garden scenes are really slender poles covered with bark stripped from the canoes used in "North West Mounted Police." When the set was dismantled, the bark went back on the boats . . . Butch, the dog, is a refugee from the Los Angeles Humane Society . . . Warren Hymer, screen toughie, gets butterflies in his tummy from riding on trains, street cars and subways . . . A group of Cleveland girls have just announced formation of a "We Love Ray Milland" club . . . Claudette's hobby is photography. Loves fuchsia flowers and rich malts in the afternoon. Has never fainted, writes hurriedly in large heavy letters, won't pose for ice-skating art until she's had a few more lessons. Was the only member of the cast who didn't suffer mal-de-mer pangs during shooting of the storm-at-sea sequence. Said her immunity was due to a Chinese typhoon she'd once suffered through, aboard a 'round-the-world freighter loaded with a cargo of onions.

DUMBO—AB-1*

After a fabulous detour through the symphonic concert hall by way of Deems Taylor in "Fantasia" and a long sightseeing trip around and around the studio with Bob Benchley in "The Reluctant Dragon," Walt Disney is back where he belongs again: in his world of the little animals which behave and talk like people. The hero of "Dumbo" is a self-deprecating baby elephant who is sensitive about the abnormal size of his ears but who finally turns them into an aeronautical asset under the artistic impulsion of a mouse with the voice of Eddie Brophy and an inspirational sales spiel the burden of which is that every artist should have an agent. But "Dumbo" is not to be compared with "Snow White," "Pinocchio" or the unforgettable "Silly Symphonies"; its best gags are second-hand ones, quoted from previous Disney successes, and on the whole, in spite of a superficial slickness of finish, it represents a letdown from Walt's previous high standards of taste, characterization, originality and artistic integrity.

All this is not to say that "Dumbo" isn't superficially amusing, with good box office potentialities. The story is that expectant Mrs. Elephant is overlooked on the stork's regular visit to the winter quarters of the circus in Florida, but later on, aboard the special train going north, he arrives inopportunely, paging Mrs. Elephant from car to car in the pained voice of Sterling Holloway, with a special delivery package. The package is Dumbo, who receives his name from his mother's supercilious friends because of the unpromising appearance he makes with his unferociously flapping ears. Dumbo's mother loves him anyway and gets into trouble with the circus authorities when she fights to protect him from teasing crowds. But her maternal faith is rewarded when Dumbo makes a circus sensation by using his phenomenal ears for wings—the world's only flying elephant.

Some may find it incidentally amusing to see how many of the voice parts, which are spoken by well-known Hollywood character actors, they can identify If you are a Disney partisan, you may need something like this to help suppress your feeling of disappointment.—RKO.

P. S.

Disney artists did research for this one by donning make-up and joining the clowns during the circus' local per-

(Continued on page 12)

THE GREATEST MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT SINCE THE BLUES WERE BORN!
"BIRTH OF THE BLUES"
15-count 'em-15 of the Greatest Songs Ever Written, Sung and Swung as Never Before! IT'S A BLUE HEAVEN!
"MY MELANCHOLY BABY"
"MEMPHIS BLUES"
"SHINE"
"ST. JAMES INFIRMARY BLUES"
"TIGER RAG"
"CUDDLE UP A LITTLE CLOSER, LOVEY MINE"
"BY THE LIGHT OF THE SILVERY MOON"
"WAIT TILL THE SUN SHINES, NELLIE"
"AT A GEORGIA CAMP MEETING"
"WAITING AT THE CHURCH"
"AFTER THE BALL"
"ST. LOUIS BLUES"
"BIRTH OF THE BLUES"
"THE WAITER AND THE PORTER AND THE UPSTAIRS MAID"
"PADEREWSKI MINUET"
PARAMOUNT PRESENTS
"BIRTH OF THE BLUES"
with BING CROSBY · MARY MARTIN
Brian Donlevy · Carolyn Lee · Rochester
J. CARROL NAISH · Directed by Victor Schertzinger · A Paramount Picture
Screen Play by Harry Tugend and Walter DeLeon · Story by Harry Tugend
Paramount Pictures

ASK YOUR THEATRE MANAGER WHEN THIS BIG PARAMOUNT HIT IS COMING

Your Hands
ARE ALWAYS
OUT IN FRONT!

Harsh, unlovely hands and arms are a confession of failure —failure to keep yourself lovely, immaculate.

No need to apologize—to hide your hands, when you regularly use Chamberlain's — the clear, golden lotion that's never sticky or gummy. Keep your skin lovely all the time. Use Chamberlain's Lotion.

Buy it at all Toilet Goods Counters

Chamberlain's
LOTION

formance . . . Between shows, the boys made thousands of drawings of everything from tent stakes to bareback riders . . . In "Snow White" and "Pinocchio" the staff had to take care to portray the characters as they thought people had already pictured them, but "Dumbo" is a story purchased by the studio, and all restrictions were off . . . The entire production took only a year and a half. (Three years was the average time for Disney's other full length features.) Reasons: the staff is in the groove now on these long films, and the circus background was so simple and so much fun, the artists whizzed right along . . . Disney knows all the strengths, weaknesses, artistic likes and dislikes of his production artists and assigns them to their work accordingly . . . Toughie Edward Brody took a voice test and came away with the part of Timothy Mouse, tiniest member of the cast . . . Cliff Edwards (Jiminy Cricket) is back this time as Jim Crow . . . Bothered and Bewildered Sterling Holloway throws all his personality into the voice of the addle-pated stork . . . Spluttery Herman Bing's vocal chords got a workout as the ringmaster, shouting commands at the bossy matriarch of the elephants whose trumpeted replies are made by Verna Felton, best known as Dennis Day's overbearing mother on the Jack Benny broadcast . . . The choral work in the musical sequences was done by the King's Men, well-known in radio . . . Dumbo himself is voiceless . . . A couple of startling assignments were handed out to the artists: the man who drew the meanie whale, Monstro, and the fiendish devil in Fantasia's "Night in Bald Mountain" sequence, did most of the work on cute, lovable, definitely pathetic Dumbo. The artist responsible for the gargantuan dinosaurs (Fantasia) was handed the animation chores on tiny Timothy Mouse.

LADIES IN RETIREMENT—AB-1*

That form of theatrical magic which consists in generating and maintaining an atmosphere of eeriness by various technical devices (usually of a highly unscrupulous nature) is handsomely represented by Columbia's version of a brief Broadway play. Ingredients: old house on lonely, artificial-fog-draped marshlands of allegedly English coast; characters either eccentric, openly sinister or slightly touched in the head; murder; hidden money; eavesdropping and counter-eavesdropping; in a word, hokum. Competent performances by Ida Lupino, Louis Hayward, Evelyn Keyes, Elsa Lanchester help considerably. The illusion of reality is impeded only by the main exterior set, in which little tufts of spray-gun fog are hung out lugubriously here and there by the art director, like bows of mourning crepe.

Perversely inspired by protective affection for her two weak-minded, tittering sisters, Ida, companion of a flighty, aged, retired actress, clears the house one day by one ruse or another, and when the none-too-bright household returns the aged actress has vanished, leaving Ida as the new mistress of the house. Nobody suspects anything until Louis, another relative of Ida's, in the petty larceny game, arrives a few jumps ahead of the constabulary and brightly deduces what has happened. He shatters Ida's nerve with a staged ghost scene, aided by the eavesdropping housemaid, Miss Keyes, extorts money, is picked up by a police searching party in the marshes while trying to depart unobtrusively. But his machinations have let the maid in on Ida's secret, and Ida, convinced the jig is up, voluntarily goes to meet her just retribution. The weird sisters, whom she leaves with the sad rueful smile of a person who, with the best of motives, has tried and failed, will be cared for at the neighboring Priory. That's enough for Ida, just a misunderstood family girl at heart—Col.

P. S.

Honest-to-goodness grey-green, fog-shrouded marshlands were constructed around the all-in-one-unit house especially built for the "Ladies in Retirement." The swampland grass grew inches during the production and had to be plucked by hand to match the foregoing scenes . . . Cast members dispelled the brooding atmosphere of the set by thinking up wacky nicknames: viz: Ida Lupino, "Gloomy Gus"; Evelyn Keyes, "Lucy the Lug"; Elsa Lanchester, "Miss Butch" . . . Dressing rooms were a block away, so daily four o'clock tea was served in the set "dining room" . . . This is the first time Louis Hayward and his wife have worked together in a picture. They rehearsed their dialogue at home on their recording machine, enjoyed the whole business so much, they're planning to co-star again as soon as possible . . . Elsa Lanchester (whose book, "Charles Laughton and I," is having a record sale) first began frightening people as "The Bride of Frankenstein" . . . Edith Barrett, the other zany sister, made such a spine-chilling test, she was signed before the lab workers had time to develop the film . . . Evelyn Keyes is taking a college dramatic course at the University of California at Los Angeles . . . Director Charles Vidor once sang leads in opera . . . There are only eight principals and four bit players in the entire picture, and never more than five actors on the screen at the same time . . . Electricians working high in the catwalks spent half their time lighting the set, and the other half slapping at the mosquitoes that had moved in with the marshes . . . Ida (known to her friends as "Loop") thinks hands are more important to good acting than facial expressions. She'd like to be famous as a musician, and can't wait for the recordings of four of her newest waltzes to be released next month . . . Writer Garrett Fort skirted delicately around the dangerous themes of the plot, says he wrote the script "with the spectre of the Hays office code riding the rim of my typewriter."

TWO-FACED WOMAN—AB-2*

If anything could be more welcome to this department than a picture with Garbo in it, it is a picture in which Garbo is twins. In this one, the first since "Ninotchka," it seems that Melvyn Douglas is the brainiest magazine editor in the world, and that Greta (which seems more probable) is the most beautiful ski instructress in the world. Mr. Douglas, who is always urbanity itself, even when upside down in a snowdrift, condescends to marry the beautiful ski instructress, has a fight with her, and when he dashes off hurriedly to save his magazine (probably from Bernarr Macfadden) she refuses to go.

(Note: The name of Melvyn's magazine is "Tides and Currents," but it seems to be devoted to general subjects, not, as you might think, to cruising conditions along the Atlantic seaboard.)

In her tweediest manner, Greta follows Melvyn the Magnificent back to the big city, with some obscure strategy of her own. There she stumbles on a monkey

(Continued on page 14)

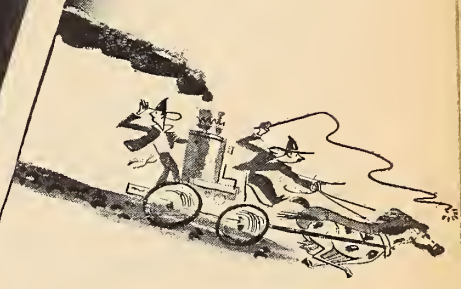
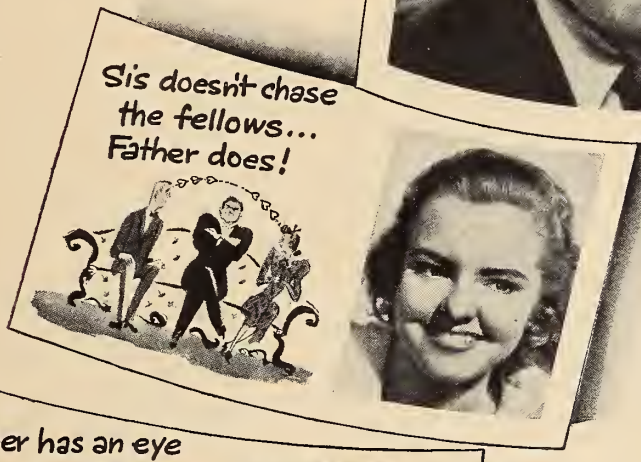
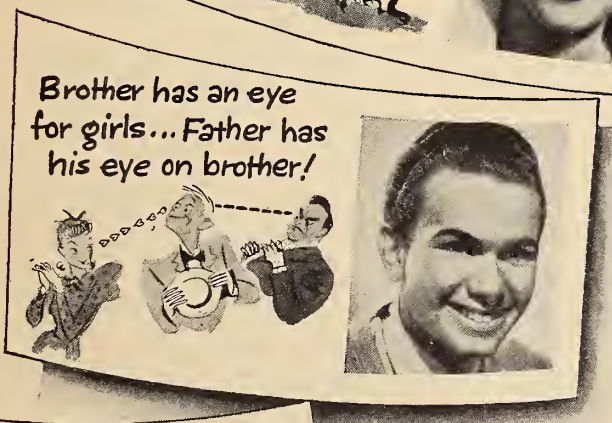
MAN! What a Man is FATHER!







WARNER BROS. delightfully present the most affable, laffable family that ever stepped out of America's screens . . . into America's heart!

FREDRIC
MARCH
MARTHA
SCOTT

In the big new hit based on the year's most celebrated best-seller!

"ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN"

With BEULAH BONDI • GENE LOCKHART
ELISABETH FRASER • HARRY DAVENPORT
LAURA HOPE CREWS • GRANT MITCHELL
Directed by IRVING RAPPER

Screen Play by Casey Robinson • From the Book by Hartzell Spence
Music by Max Steiner • A Warner Bros.-First National Picture

GOOD NEIGHBOR TALK ABOUT A BIG PICTURE

SI! Si! Amigos . . .
WE'RE tossing our SOMBREROS in the AIR for the gayest
FIESTA of the year!
AMERICA'S favorite
SINGING, riding, fighting
STAR, GENE AUTRY, crosses
THE Rio Grande for the MOST exciting adventure

OF his career!
GENE'S an all-star show
IN himself . . . But REPUBLIC has surrounded him
WITH its most lavish
CAST. There's your OLD pal,
SMILEY BURNETTE
AND amusing HAROLD
HUBER riding with
GENE across the plains . . .
THERE'S lovely FAY McKENZIE,
AS a sultry-eyed senorita who MELTS when Gene starts singing
"MARIA Elena," "Down Mexico WAY" . . . and lots
MORE! Fay's that SENSATIONAL DISCOVERY from
"MEET the People".
YOU'LL be wanting
TO meet her
AGAIN and again!
SI! Si! There's MUCHA Songs!
MUCHA Laughs!
MUCHA Thrills!
MUCHA Senoritas!
SEE! SEE!
"DOWN MEXICO WAY"
IT'S

A REPUBLIC PICTURE

wrench left lying around by a careless plot mechanic: viz., the evidence of a romantic relationship apparently still existing between Douglas the Devastating and that famous and very female actress, Constance Bennett. She concludes that if it's that sort of thing Melvyn likes (the dope!) she'll give it to him. Decking herself out in a hot Schiaparelli number, she pretends to be her own twin sister and nearly succeeds in alienating Douglas' affections from herself, but not quite, of course.

Back in the sky country in a little cabin perched cutely on the side of a glacier, Douglas discovers that his wife has tinted toenails and thus has been leading a double life. And, of course, when Connie bursts in with the news that there's no such person as Katherine, he is able to put two and two together. Result, Garbo wins Melvyn from herself, and Melvyn feels like a man who is going to have all the fun of bigamy without the double expense or legal headaches usually involved. He looks very smug, and we don't blame him a bit.—M-G-M.

THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER AB-2*

Nowadays, with old Vienna so remote, "The Chocolate Soldier" is apt to seem a trifle stale, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (a company wrongfully accused by that Senate Investigating Committee of using timely themes for propaganda or any other purposes) perhaps a wee bit stodgy for removing it just now from among the other shelved bon bons in its copyright files. One thing about a Metro operetta, though. The costumes and sets are always fresh, if the music and plots aren't; Nelson Eddy is always handsome and in spanking good voice. And there is usually a lovely feminine throat which one can gaze down wistfully, like an enamoured laryngologist. This time, to heighten the interest, the throat belongs to Rise Stevens, which isn't a command but another Metropolitan Opera star who makes her debut in this film.

Need we rehearse this time-tested story of the two vain and jealous and charming musical comedy stars who love each other but begin bickering the moment they are out of sight of the audience? The petulant, amusing accusations they hurl at each other, like a furious barrage of marshmallows? The way Karl, in order to test Maria's love, disguises himself as a Russian officer, makes violent love to his wife, is gratified when she repulses him, rendered sad and suspicious when she gives him a grain of hope?

Or how, when Karl at last, his faith restored, confesses the imposture, this little teasing devil of a Maria insists that she knew about it all along, but contrives to leave him just doubtful enough to keep him interested for the future? Well, here it is again, in its sweet, romantic entirety, sweetly interspersed with those mellifluous waltz tunes your grandfathers probably whistled. A battered but still marketable piece of theatrical confectionery.

All the same we'd like to see them do something different in the Viennese operetta line. Why not Paul Robeson in "The Chocolate Soldier"? Boy, that would be something!—M-G-M.

P. S.

Nelson Eddy's newest co-star, Rise (pronounced Ree-sa) Stevens, is constantly haunted by girls in groups of three, four and five. The youngsters are loyal members of the Nelson Eddy Fan Club, checking to see if the Metropolitan Opera Star is worthy of working with their beloved Mr. E. The studio yanked Miss Stevens off the train at Pasadena, put her in make-up and in front of the testing camera in less than two hours . . . Eddy kept in condition during the picture by cleaning off all the vacant lots within a mile of his Brentwood home . . . It took a crew of 12 men to get one of the most difficult shots ever made. The action required 5 stops of the 2,000 pound camera truck . . . Director Roy Del Ruth always keeps clocks out of scenes. Says there are too many people waiting to write in about a time boner . . . La Stevens cries when she's happy, hates aquariums, seals all her letters with silver wax and names "Octavian" from "Der Rosenkavalier" as her favorite operatic role . . . Three tourists who visited the set will never know unless they see this that they spent their time in vain. The Eddy-Stevens stand-ins were at work while they were there, but no one bothered to explain. The visitors came away slightly puzzled as to how the stars can look so unlike their screen images . . . Mr. Eddy advocates singing in factories and offices as a means of stepping up production and bolstering morale . . . He deserts his natural baritone and sings bass in one number . . . In the scene in which Eddy is concealed in a suit of armor, Rise closed the head piece too soon and nipped a nub off Nelson's nose . . . Ernst and Maria Matray directed all the dance routines, using 65 ballet and 10 eccentric dancers . . . Jeanette MacDonald made a special trip to the set to congratulate "Ree-sa" . . . Surprisingly few protests came to the studio about the new teaming . . . Miss Stevens is married to Walter Szurovy, European actor who acts as her business agent. Metro's keeping its fingers crossed, prays that the 5' 7", 130 pound, 29-year-old Rise will prove to be the singing-acting sensation of 1942.

BIRTH OF THE BLUES AB-1

That placid easy-going carelessness of croon-master Bing Crosby has apparently begun to infect some writing arms in the Paramount script department. In a picture supposed to take place in 1910, these luxurious hacks have incorporated modern boogie-woogie swing terms and a phrase which sounded suspiciously like "gone with the wind." With similar ingenuity, they have managed to turn out a story purporting to be concerned with the birth of the blues which does not include the name of W. C. Handy and blandly ignores that master's wonderful syncopated laments: "St. Louis Blues," "Memphis Blues," "Yellow Dog Rag" and others which, in their day, were just all the blues there were. This is like doing the story of the quintuplets without giving Dr. Dafoe a credit line. Finally, the next thing you know, they begin trying to sell us the notion that Bing was the fellow responsible for rhythm. You give the Paramount script department an inch and you're apt to get a feature-length production.

Perfectly valid as these objections are in themselves, it happens that they are not sustained by the picture, which is a highly amusing specimen of Crosbyana in the killer-diller vein, having no value at all as a period piece and nothing whatever to do with the blues. On that basis, it may be chalked up as a safe investment, and that way you know exactly what you're getting, like when you put your nickel in a juke box.

Mary Martin is a singer of sentimental ballads who is converted to the new faith. Brian Donlevy is a hot cornetist who is converted to Mary Martin until k. o.'d by Bing. And Eddie (Rochester) Anderson is a Crosby family retainer who is the professorial hero of the picture's most brilliant rhythmic highlight: a music lesson in the new forms illustrated with disembodied, Walter Damrosch instrumental effects on the sound track. Very intriguing.—Par.

P. S.

Seven-year-old Carolyn Lee, self-styled "character actress," says she'd like to have 14 children . . . Before she "grew up" her ambition was to be a waitress . . . Eight of America's most famous popular musicians share close-ups with the stars: Paul Whiteman, Benny Goodman, Ted Lewis, Duke Ellington, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey and Louis Armstrong. The eighth, the late George Gershwin, is represented by a photograph . . . The Bing of Crosby rises at 4:30 A. M. every morning to clock his much-kidded-about ponies. Local bettors are hoping he brings back a couple of fleet-footed fillies from South America . . . Bing got a letter from Davie Niven during making of the picture, announcing that Niven has been made a major in the British Army . . . J. Carroll Naish is financing a factory for the manufacture of machine tools needed in national defense work . . . Baby Carolyn wore out two dresses, four pairs of panties and Bing Crosby's stomach during shooting of her bannister-sliding scenes . . . Victor Schertzinger, composer-turned-director, has just received a renewal of the copyright of one of his greatest song hits—"Marcheta." If he'd have written it a few years before he did, he could have used it in the picture . . . Mary Martin is acting as business manager and adviser for her 18-year-old protegee, singer Margie Garland . . . Brian Donlevy's secret ambition is to own a pair of suspenders for every pair of trousers . . . The entire cast went fruit juice nutty, stopping several times a day for drinks. It was Grapefruit for Lee, Orange Juice for Donlevy and a cocoanut-grapefruit mixture for Crosby. Mary Martin took carrot juice straight. There were so many horse racing enthusiasts on the set, the assistant director abandoned the usual "Places, please" summons and blew "Call to the Post" on a bugle instead.

THE STORK PAYS OFF

Patterned after "A Slight Case of Murder" of beloved memory, this rib-tickler relates how Racketeer Victor Jory experiences a change of heart, yearns for respectability after falling in love with Rochelle Hudson, proprietress of the Stork's Club, a nursery. Chief laugh-provider is Jory-henchman Brains Moran, your old pal Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, who, with two sidekicks, take care of Jory's gang rival, Ralf Harolde. When there is no other way to come clean to

 Modern Screen's New Way of Rating Films

Point 1—According to its production value: Expensiveness of cast, settings, etc. Rating, A, B, or C.
Point 2—According to artistic value: Taste, screen play, direction. Rating, A, B, or C.
Point 3—According to entertainment value. Rating, 1, 2, or 3.
In the review section of this issue of Modern Screen, only the first seven films have been reviewed and rated. Following them, the editors present a brief synopsis of every other picture to be released during the current month, leaving each reader the option of judging them on the basis of his or her own tastes and preferences.

Wake your skin to New Loveliness with Camay — Go on the "MILD-SOAP" DIET!

This lovely bride, Mrs. John B. LaPointe of Waterbury, Conn., says: "I can't tell you how much Camay's 'Mild-Soap' Diet has done for my skin. Whenever I see a lovely woman whose skin looks cloudy, I can hardly help telling her about it."

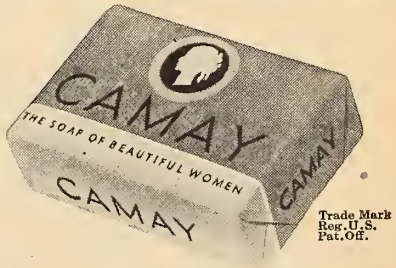
Even many girls with sensitive skin can profit by this exciting beauty idea—based on the advice of skin specialists, praised by lovely brides!

YOU CAN BE lovelier! You can help your skin—help it to a cleaner, fresher, more natural loveliness by changing to a "Mild-Soap" Diet.

So many women cloud the beauty of their skin through improper cleansing. And so many women use a soap not as mild as a beauty soap should be.

Skin specialists themselves advise regular cleansing with a fine mild soap. And Camay is milder by actual test than 10 other popular beauty soaps.

Twice every day—for 30 days—give your skin Camay's gentle care. It's the day to day routine that reveals the full benefit of Camay's greater mildness. And in a few short weeks you can reasonably hope to have a lovelier, more appealing skin.



Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

✓ Camay is milder by actual recorded test—in tests against ten other popular beauty soaps Camay was milder than any of them!

Go on the CAMAY "MILD-SOAP" DIET!

Work Camay's milder lather over your skin, paying special attention to nose, base of the nostrils and chin. Rinse with warm water and then 30 seconds of cold splashings.

Then, while you sleep, the tiny pore openings are free to function for natural beauty. In the morning—one more quick session with milder Camay and your skin is ready for make-up.

his lady love, Victor gives himself up to the D. A., impresses a judge with his urge to honesty. He gets off with a 24-hour jail sentence, is elected an Assemblyman—and wins Rochelle.—Col.

SECRETS OF THE LONE WOLF

Warren William's newest batch of trouble as the reformed Lone Wolf begin when Inspector Thurston Hall spirits him on board a yacht to explain how Napoleon's jewels, brought to New York for sale, can best be guarded against jewel thieves. While Warren is demonstrating, a gang gets busy and starts all concerned, including Warren's valet, Eric Blore, on an exciting merry-go-round. Bait to get Warren to join the gang is pretty Ruth Ford, pursued from France by lovesick Roger Clark. Twice during these shenanigans the jewels disappear, but Warren pits ingenuity and brains against the thieves, winds up with the jewelry recovered and Chief Crook Victor Jory safe in handcuffs.—Col.

UNHOLY PARTNERS

To establish his consuming dream, a metropolitan tabloid, fearless newshawk Edward G. Robinson has to accept the backing of Gangster Edward Arnold, but with William Orr's help, he begins to buck Arnold from the start. William learns that Arnold is forcing a number of men, including lovely singer Marsha Hunt, to take out insurance with himself as beneficiary. They all owe Arnold gambling debts. When Robinson threatens to expose the racket, Arnold kidnaps William, holds him as hostage. In an ensuing battle, Robinson kills Arnold, realizes he can't marry Laraine Day, his secretary, whom he loves deeply. Turning over the paper to her and William, he goes off on a suicidal transatlantic flight sponsored by the paper, is never seen again. William and Marsha end up wed.—M-G-M.

THE GAY FALCON

Debonair amateur criminologist George Sanders, known as "The Falcon," promises fiancee Anne Hunter that he'll give up sleuthing, but weakens when Wendy Barrie, secretary to party-giver Gladys Cooper, begs him to protect Lucille Gleason and her fabulous Monsoon Diamond at a forthcoming dance. The job of tracing the man who murders Lucille and swipes her sparkler is complicated for him, however, when a resentful Anne takes up with shady Turhan Bey. The Falcon, of course, gets his man—or rather his woman. When the smoke and corpses clear out, it's Gladys Cooper who's the villainess!—RKO.

SMALL TOWN DEB

It's Ugly Duckling Jane Withers, 15, spectacled, pig-tailed, who does the fixing for Sister Cobina Wright, Jr., who's trying to capture Rich Boy Friend Bruce Edwards—for Brother Jackie Searle, who's trying to land himself a babe—and for Dad Cecil Kellaway who's hung the family fortunes on a hunk of land. In the process, Brother Jackie transforms Janie into something upswept and dazzling with her glasses packed in a bureau drawer, and she winds up with a date with Renovated Buddy Pepper, her longtime worshipper from afar. Through Janie's conniving, Cobina gets her Bruce, and Father Cecil closes his land deal, so everyone's happy.—TCF.

CONFIRM OR DENY

A delayed action bomb is ticking off its last seconds. The steel girder of the ersatz air raid cellar are slowly staggering under the weight of bomb rubble. The body of his telegrapher lies still and crushed somewhere in the cellar. But Don Ameche, crack American journalist, is too busy to be bothered. He has a story to get out. The story of Adolf Hitler's imminent trip to London. So much for the mood. For further details, see Don Ameche, Joan Bennett, Roddy McDowall in this, Hollywood's most recent bid for the attention of that Senate investigating committee.—TCF.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE

Crooked Judge Robert Barrat runs things to suit himself around Cottonwoods, Arizona, until Cowpuncher George Montgomery rides in one day, searching for the daughter of his sister kidnaped many years earlier. Judge Barrat is trying to steal water rights from Rancher Mary Howard, but George soon gets his trusty six-shooter busy on that program. When the Judge rustles Mary's cattle, George halts a stampede, wounds a masked rider, who turns out to be a girl, Lynne Carver. George hides her, rides back for medical help, but tangles again with the Judge's gang, which wounds him in a gun battle at Mary's ranch. Mary nurses him back to health in time for the final showdown with the Judge and his henchmen. George tricks them, lures them into the valley where he had hidden Lynne, buries them under an avalanche of earth and rocks. Lynne turns out to be the niece he had been hunting for so many years.—TCF.

Keep going in Comfort!...

Why be a "Sitter-Outer" when Fibs (the Kotex tampon) permits you to keep going in comfort every day... regardless of the calendar! Worn internally, Fibs give comfortable, invisible sanitary protection. No belts, pads or pins are needed, and there's no chafing—no disposal problem. Then, too, Fibs are convenient to carry... one takes no more space in your handbag than an ordinary lipstick.

A Dozen Fibs only 20¢. (You get not 8—not 10—but 12 for 20¢.) Fibs are quilted for safety as well as comfort... easy to insert without artificial means. (When you buy Fibs, you pay for no mechanical gadget to aid insertion... for none is needed.) Get a package of Fibs today! You'll be especially grateful for the chafe-free comfort they give.

FIBS*—the Kotex* Tampon

Not 8—Not 10—but 12 FOR 20¢

*Trade Marks Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

FLYING CADETS

Edmund Lowe, World War I ace, teaches flying at his brother's (Frank Albertson) aviation school, makes love to his brother's fiancee, Peggy Moran, subscribes 100% to the philosophy of fun. Older than he admits, not the flyer he was, he's still a hero to Student Pilot Frankie Thomas. With reason. Lowe's the boy's dad—a stranger to his son and his abandoned wife—but, stubbornly, a hero. Oddly antagonized by the boy's devotion, Lowe is unnecessarily strict, grounds him. To redeem himself, Frankie takes up a ship—beyond his experience—on a test flight. That's when they tell Lowe who the crazy kid is. With death prompting him, Lowe learns about life, lives to redraft his philosophy of fun.—Univ.

SUNDOWN

Here is intrigue and rebellion in the deep jungles of Africa. Gene Tierney, mysterious and alluring, is the lone woman involved, and it is through her fearlessness and cunning that open rebellion among the natives is averted. Romance crops up inevitably when Gene meets Bruce Cabot, the local commissioner, and wedding bells are imminent at the thrilling finale.—U.A.

NEVER GIVE A SUCKER AN EVEN BREAK

This one's less slapsticky and more whimsical than W. C. Fields' usual picture. Gloria Jean is his ward, and the pair decide to make a fortune selling wooden nutmegs to the Russion colony in Mexico. Their Mexican odyssey is hilarious—especially when W. C. encounters Susan Miller who lives on a mountain peak and has never seen a man before. There's a trick O. Henry ending that'll leave you chuckling.—Univ.

LONE STAR RANGER

Football is easy! You can always spot the enemy because he wears a different uniform. But in Johnny Kimbrough's one-man crusade to help the Texas Rangers out of a hole, the bad boys wear halos over their roscoes. Johnny meets Sheila Ryan on a held-up stage coach. Bandits have made off with her necklace. Mentally he promises Sheila the bauble for a wedding present, tracks it down, but unfortunately puts the bandits in the custody of the halo mob: Jonathan Hale and Truman Bradley. Jonathan and Truman make the fatal error of assigning their trigger men to a dead-or-alive job on Johnny. When the smoke clears and the Rangers have swept up the bodies, it's another touchdown for Johnny. And a bride. You know—the one with the necklace.—TCF.

MEN AT LARGE

The murder of a German seaman in a N. Y. newspaper office on the same night that German Air Ace Richard Derr escapes from a Canadian prison camp sets would-be reporter Marjorie Weaver and Newshawk George Reeves on a spy hunt that tangles them with Blind Botany, master of a fiendish espionage ring. The trail leads to sinister Harmonica Hall, Canadian theater, where Marjorie and George are recognized by their enemies, barely escape with their lives after faking a mind-reading act. Foiling Botany's plans to send out news of a British convoy, George reveals himself as a G-man, overpowers the murderous Botany and winds up with an overcome Marjorie in his arms.—TCF.

(Continued on page 104)

Meet the Bride who wouldn't stay for Breakfast!
A joyous reunion of the stars of "THE LADY EVE" BARBARA STANWYCK ☆ HENRY FONDA
in Wesley Ruggles'
You belong to Me
with EDGAR BUCHANAN
Roger Clark · Ruth Donnelly · Melville Cooper
Screen play by Claude Binyon
DIRECTED BY WESLEY RUGGLES · A COLUMBIA PICTURE

Two movie dates you'll want to keep this Fall!

TERRIFIC BETTY GRABLE

NEW "IT" MAN VICTOR MATURE

THRILLING CAROLE LANDIS

Together in the most exciting picture you will see this year!

HOT SPOT

with

Laird Cregar • William Gargan • Alan Mowbray • Allan Joslyn

Directed by H. Bruce Humberstone • Produced by Milton Sperling

Screen Play by Dwight Taylor • From the novel "I Woke Up Screaming" by Steve Fisher

20th CENTURY FOX

JACK OAKIE • GEORGE MURPHY • LINDA DARNELL

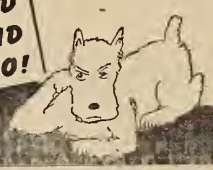
WALTER BRENNAN • MILTON BERLE

in Mark Hellinger's

RISE and SHINE

THEY'RE ALL COMPLETELY WACKY ... BUT, OH, WHAT FUN THEY ARE!

THE LAUGHS COME LOUD, LONG . . . AND CLOSE TOGETHER! AND THERE'S MUSIC, TOO!



with

Sheldon Leonard • Donald Meek • Ruth Donnelly • Raymond Walburn

Directed by Allan Dwan

From the story by JAMES THURBER

RAY JONES

MARGARET SULLAVAN

Universal talent scouts spotted tiny, lustrous Margaret Sullavan in "Dinner at Eight" on Broadway and carried her off, nolens volens, to Hollywood. "Maggie" loved the stage, not the screen, objected to vast publicity, large parties, Hollywood "Society" events, didn't want to be remodeled and hated being dressed up and interviewed. So Miss Sullavan and the powers compromised. She did her best in "Only Yesterday," "Little Man, What Now?" "The Good Fairy," "So Red the Rose" and "Next Time We Love," but still remained Margaret Sullavan, born 1911 in Norfolk, Virginia. She is still a sincere young American, impish and serious in turn, wears her hair simply, never plucks an eyebrow, dotes on slacks and dirndls, avoids previews and premieres and does away with interviewers with charming but cool yesses and noes . . . After "Three Comrades," she trod the boards in "Stage Door" but soon hied back to hubby Leland Hayward, children Bridget, William and Brooke and house in the country. She is fond of sports, but her hobby is "just looking." Loves dogs, dreaming up new coiffures, Gene Autry movies and kids. (Plans to add three more little Haywards in the next five years.) Universal's "Appointment for Love" is her latest film.

DON AMECHE

Give Ameche spaghetti, popcorn, kennel and racehorse jargon, and he's positively out of this world! Counteract (if you have the heart) with baby chatter, lettuce and coffee with sugar 'n' cream. A practical joker, he sinks as low in the name of humor as copping Ty Power's jalopy, making off with all 4 wheels. As a kid he bulldozed his mom and pop into toting him everywhere by pretending he couldn't toddle. Played dumb in school with an eye to shining in the deficient kids' class. But Encino, Cal., over whom he lord-mayors it, thinks he's funny and a darned good egg, to boot! Those perfectly heavenly Ameche mattresses are hand-picked by Don who used to be in the business. (Job came to an abrupt halt when he fell asleep once too often on a test-trial!) Dogged-determined, he brushes off opposition with a grin. Even plunged ahead when his screen-test director spake words that would daunt a lesser man—"You have a funny chin, and, well, you're just not the handsome type. You will ruin yourself on the screen." Don took to big collars to glamourize chin and neck; has since made some 26 smash hits, currently topping in 20th Century-Fox's "Confirm or Deny." A far cry from that first prep-school feminine role played with 2 shiners!

BETTY GRABLE

That St. Louis woman, Betty Grable, could do an elegant tango at 4, and it's improved with age. So has the rest of the lady. She used to be chubby, freckle-faced, a terrific spitfire. And look at her now! 23-inch waist, gardenia-puss and the disposition of an angel. The last she attributes to 10 hours sleep nightly—no matter what. That and tuning in on every Dodgers game are her two fetishes. She flew East for 24 hours not long ago just to see them in action! Short-termed as Mrs. Jackie Coogan and has been a grass widow since Oct. 11, 1939. Is currently being courted via the mails by a prince and a N. Y. tycoon, but only has eyes for smootheroo George Raft. He's on to her two idiosyncrasies (allergy to orchids and aversion to foreign restaurants) and pampers her with out-sized gardenias and charcoal steaks at Chasens. Not to mention an elegant mink coat—and its twin for her cute mother whom he loves. She now employs a secretarial staff to help with her fan mail—mainly requests for locker art from the Army and Navy and invitations to prep school proms. Looks like the staff will need some reinforcements when the boys see her co-starred with Vic Mature ("that gorgeous hunk") in 20th Century-Fox's newest musical, "Hot Spot!"

TYRONE POWER

Perched high on the corner drugstore stool, little Ty Power's brow wrinkled in perplexity as he pored over his chocolate soda and fan magazine. He just couldn't believe that movie stars were real, honest-to-goodness people like himself. Today one of the nation's screen idols, he's just as human as the rest of us—keeps his weight down by daily exercise, takes the stairs two at a time. Smokes a pack of cigarettes per day and is perpetually forgetting his phone number. He's superstitious about whistling in his dressing room for fear of scaring the benevolent gods away. Gets the willies in elevators and small rooms; thinks the walls are closing in on him! He smacks of the man in the street the way he slouches around in shorts, sings off-key, plays his hunches. The woman in his life is wife Annabella, whom he met on the "Suez" set. She retired when they wed, but has recently been hankering after a comeback. Ty's most recent claims to fame are 20th Century-Fox's "A Yank in the R. A. F." and "Son of Fury."

RUTH WARRICK

Orson Welles' discoveries have a way of going places, and St. Louis, Mo.'s Ruth Warrick's no exception. Neighboring Kansas City liked the looks of the 5' 6", 120-lb., blue-eyed kid, elected her their "Miss Jubilesta" and god-sped her off to N. Y. There she debuted on City Hall steps with an armful of turkeys for Mayor La Guardia. So nifty a job did she do of this and soap opry-ing on the radio, it wasn't long before she was exposed to the great Mr. Welles and shot upwards in the world in "Citizen Kane" and currently in United Artists' "The Corsican Brothers." Radio proved her forte romantically, too, 'cause it was there she met Eric Rolf, her hubby and papa to 9-month-old Karen Elizabeth. She can coax music out of a piano and violin like a one-man band. Reads constantly and has something of a literary bug, harking back to a $5 prize for a "Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis" thesis in high school. Hates bridge and dieting. And it's no wonder, what with a figger like hers and angel food à la Warrick around the house!

LONG DISTANCE LOVE

Linda rarely wears corsages; loves cut flowers, and Jaime wires some weekly.

Jaime (pronounced Hy-may) invests fortune on Los Angeles calls—$13.30 for every six-minute chat with his muchacha.

She invariably cuts her week-end trips to Palm Springs short to be at home when his "air-mail special" is due.

SOPHIE'S elbow jabbed Linda's ribs. "There he goes now," she breathed, moon-eyed.

Linda caught a glimpse of the tall figure, heading for study hall. "Hm. I don't think he looks like so much—"

"That's because you've got Hollywood on the brain. Wait'll you meet him—"

It was April, 1938. Linda was fourteen, and thought her heart was broken. Hollywood had just shipped her home. A few months ago she'd left Dallas in glory, all set for a movie career. A talent scout, spotting her face in a photographer's window, had sold Twentieth Century-Fox on the idea that this could be America's new dream girl. But it hadn't worked out. They'd patted her head and sent her back to her school books. "You're too young," they said. "Maybe in a couple of years—"

So now she was back with the crowd, going to Sunset High every day as if Hollywood had never happened. Well, that was all right—for the time being. There'd be another time. She'd see to that. She wasn't green enough to believe that somebody was suddenly going to press a buzzer and say how about that kid we had up from Dallas a while ago. She'd make her own breaks. How, she didn't know, but on one point her mind was made up. Some day she'd be an actress in Hollywood.

—Hm, there was that Spanish boy again that all the girls were in such a dither over. They couldn't seem to talk ab t anything else. They kept rushing up and asking Linda if she'd met him. Well, Linda hadn't met him, and if she never met him, she'd survive, thanks. Linda had problems, and boys were no part of them.

So they met one afternoon in the third floor hall outside the gym. Linda was with Sophie, who introduced them. "Linda Darnell—Jaime Jorba." They stood talking till a teacher shooed them out. Then Jaime walked home with them. Sophie was dropped at her door, and he went on to Linda's. Jaime met her mother, who liked him. The details of that day are vague to Linda. She remembers only that they talked and stood and kind of looked, and it was wonderful.

If love at sight happens, it happened to Linda and Jaime. Linda didn't call it love then. She had more sense than the average fourteen-year-old. Set apart from childhood by her beauty, masculine admiration was nothing new. She'd never let it turn her head. For this her mother was partly responsible. On the subject of males, Mrs. Darnell's a crusading cynic, her battle cry being: "Don't believe a thing they tell you."

Linda laughed at this, but half believed it. Anyway, you couldn't fall seriously in love (Continued on page 74)

BY JEANNE KARR

Three years ago, a slim, dark-eyed Spanish boy whispered to a 14-year-old girl, "Linda, some day you'll be my wife . . ." Puppy love? See what you think when you've read their story!

He gave her two crosses when she visited him in Mexico—this ebony one, which she wears constantly, and a silver one.

"I'll tell you a secret," the handsome guy with the yellow stuff on his face grins across the luncheon table. "My real name is Charles Robert Orville Cummings. The Orville is for Orville Wright, who invented the airplane. My mother saw him fly before I was born. I guess maybe that's how it all started."

He's talking about his yen for airplanes—Airacobras and Hudsons, Boeings, Grummans and Lockheeds, P-37's, PBY's and F-2's, B-17-C's, AT-7's and Q-99's and all those things that, for my dough, look best in anagrams or alphabetical soup. But then I can't take my airplanes or leave them. Bob can take them and zoom all over the continent with the greatest of ease.

Just the other week, for instance, he found himself in Wichita, Kansas, picking up a new Cessna pleasure job for himself. He had a whole fantastic week away from the camera so the first thing he knew he was high in the sky at the controls of a twin-engined Cessna bomber flying over the Dakotas to Winnepeg, Canada. An RCAF officer had said, "We're having a bloody awful time finding pilots to ferry these bombers to Canada," and Bob had yelped, "What about me?" He made two trips and gave his salary to the British war relief. At the completion of his second run he flew his own ship back to Hollywood. But as he waved goodbye, he shouted to the Canadian ground crew, "Maybe I'll be seeing you!" Which brings us to the point of this story, to wit:

That the best movie star aviator in Hollywood by long odds is Charles Robert Orville Cummings and that this fact is quite likely to hoist him out of Hollywood at the very peak of his career.

About the first assertion, Bob Cummings is pretty self-conscious. When I suggest it, he gets a panicked look and tries to slide under the table, protesting, "I'm just another guy who flies." So I'll just take it away here for a few facts.

First of all, Bob is Captain C. R. O. Cummings, U. S. Army Air Corps, Reserve—and you don't get a commission like that building balsa-wood models. He's been flying fifteen years and has enough credited hours to make a time-clock blush for shame. He's the only star in Hollywood who has had both a transport license, instructor's permit and a private certificate. He's had five planes of his own, has operated his own aviation school. He's the only instrument flyer in the Hollywood colony. And he's never had even a minor crack-up (knock wood).

"I've offered myself for active duty any time the Air Corps will have me," Bob told me. "I'd just as soon quit pictures tomorrow and fly for the army or for myself." I might add right here that Robert Cummings is having the greatest break of his dramatic life in "Kings Row," that he's hustling back and forth between studios making two pictures at a time and that his loan-out salary is rising like the defense appropriations Congress votes each week. After years of some of the damnedest maneuvers for acting success, Bob Cummings has more of it than he can handle. Yet he'd ditch it all for a steady seat in a plane. It's not all patriotism, either.

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

Up and

Bob's marriage to Viv is his second. First, to a hometown gal, was brief and stormy.

The how-come of this traces back to the real light of Robert Cummings' life—aviation. When he was just a high school kid in Joplin, Missouri, he took a ride in a barnstorming Jenny one day—and has never been the same since.

It was a flimsy crate almost as old as Bob, it seemed, with a wheezing engine, wood propellor and a complete lack of paint. But to Bob it looked like a dream ship. The sign propped against its flimsy fuselage said "$2.50 for a thrilling ride in the sky." Bob approached the flyer, a "war ace" who turned out to be an ex-plumber.

"I've only got $1.25," said Bob. The "ace" looked into Bob's desperately eager face and said, "Okay, kid. Hop in." They caromed off the field and bobbed, sputtering into the Missouri air. Bob came back to terra firma lighter in both pocket and head, but his eyes gleamed like light bulbs. He'd looked into a new world—and it was for him.

"Up to then," recalls Bob, "I wanted to be a doctor. My dad was a physician. As a kid I used to ride around with him on his calls. Acting? Say—I didn't know a dramatic role from a hotcross bun. What I (Continued on page 89)

Cummings

BOB'S DISCOVERED A BRAND NEW WORLD, AND HE WOULDN'T TRADE IT FOR A DOZEN ACADEMY OSCARS!

Bob lives in slack suits and wears them till they fall apart. His wife wan't buy herself a new stitch till it's an "absolute necessity."

ds mast of his salary an gad- "Spinach III"—so named be- ne and Viv are vegetarians.

Is always taking his plane apart and reassembling it. Has one other "pas- sion on wheels"—his slinky red car.

Now that Chaplin and Goddard have definitely said good-bye, he's rebounding with Jinx Falkenburg. She's covered (but literally) more mags than any model alive.

Those old clothes horses, Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale, were a walking fashion show. Stole side-shows' thunder as they strolled down midway.

Party of the month . . .

Hollywood Thespians acted like kids when Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus came to town!

Lana Turner and Tony Martin loved the clowns! Lana's buying the first house she's ever owned, right next door to childhood hero, Gary Cooper. Furniture's all custom-made.

Mr. and Mrs. Gargantua received in a tuturistic poleless Bel Geddes tent. Among celebrated guests were the very English Ronny Colman and his British wife Benita Hume.

Henrietta, the debutante giraffe, caught Shirley Temple's fancy. She and her bosom companion Carol Abrams barely tore themselves away in time for the big show.

Lynn Bari left Hubby Walter Kane mid-circus to flirt with clown Janator. Walt (mgr. of the Brown Derby) just gifted her with a retroactive engagement ring, too!

Fred MacMurray and the missus talked about the thrilling trapeze stunts for days after! Screamed madly when Ella Ardelty swung seventy feet across the tent!

So dead-set was Jean Parker on coming with Hubby Douglas Dawson, she played hooky from the "No Hands on the Clock" set. They were wed last St. Valentine's Day.

It was at the circus that Kog first proposed to Ann Sothern (seen above twixt Bob Taylor and Hank Fonda). She's planning a 2-month trip to N. Y. with Mrs. Ray Milland.

Photos by Staff Photographer Bob Beerman

THE OTHER SIDE

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

Ravishing!

Ecstasy!

Hedy bids fair to become the synonym for glamour in our day.

"I was out with Hedy Lamarr last night," cracks Bob Hope. "All right, so I wasn't out with Hedy Lamarr. Can't a man dream?"

Tell a young modern she's pretty. "Yeah, Hedy should start worrying." That's the approved comeback. Not Linda nor Ann nor Madeleine, dillies all. Hedy. She's the symbol, the legend, she sums it all up.

This is the story of the other side of the legend.

As an honest woman with eyes in her head and a mirror, she values the face the Lord gave her. On the other hand, she's lived with it all her life. It doesn't stagger her. It embarrasses her to be eyed with reverence and told in swooning notes that she's gorgeous. She likes Dorothy Parker's name for her—Old Homely. In acknowledgment, she and Jamesie, her son, called his first doll Parker.

One of the nicest qualities you'll discover in Hedy is her mania for honesty. She takes her stand on no high moral ground. It's just that lies make her feel "as if I walk through cobwebs. In my country, we have a saying: If you lie once, people don't believe you even when you tell the truth. I'm a fanatic about it."

Since the truth is easier to her, she refuses to play up to the popular concept of a glamour gal. A friendly person, she finds the top of a pedestal cold and the may-I-touch-the-hem-of-your-garment approach tedious. Which is one of her reasons for avoiding big shindigs and meeting new people. "I have to work my way through what they think I am, and it's too much effort. Then maybe they don't like it when they find out I'm not like that, so I don't bother—"

Stylists have pleaded with her in vain to change her hairdo. She can't be bothered. She cut herself some bangs once but decided she couldn't think well under them. Ann Sothern started fooling with her hair one day, and Hedy liked the effect. But she has no personal maid, and to do it herself would have meant fussing with curlers, so nuts, said Hedy, and went back to her center part. Because she won't sit under driers, her hair looks awful after washing till it "half settles down." She knows she ought to brush it, but doesn't.

That she and Ann, another straightshooter, should be buddies, isn't surprising. "I love her," says Hedy, "because she says what she means—without ruffles."

OF A LEGEND

As unexpected as Venus eating a hamburger is this close-up of Hedy Lamarr!

"Without ruffles" wouldn't be a bad text for Lamarr. She carries hats but never wears them, and her favorite carrying hat is one she bought five years ago in Vienna. She hates to be fitted for clothes, that supposedly essential adjunct to glamour. "If I could have them by pointing to this or that, yes. But to go there and fit, no. I can't stand still."

Her normal procedure is to cut from the pages of Vogue or Harper's Bazaar the models that take her eye. Having admired these to her heart's content, she sticks them in a drawer and orders half a dozen sports numbers at sixteen per. Slacks, white shoes and no socks are her preferred daytime costume. At night she wears housecoats. "Because I go only to my very best friends, and to your very best friends you can wear housecoats. Also in this you can look fat or thin, and nobody knows—"

She insists she looks fat at the moment. It's all right with her though, because when she's thin she orders new clothes to her sorrow. After a moment's musing, she added: "Probably if I fall in love, I'll buy myself a lot of dresses—"

She's not in love now. She calls her men friends "good old pals." It speaks well for them both that Gene Markey, who used to be her husband, is still her friend and on dropping-in terms. So is Reginald Gardiner. The man she sees (Continued on page 83)

Hedy's crazy about drive-ins for quick pick-ups. Her hobby's inventing things. Has just had a war patent accepted by Inventions, Inc.!

Loves to eat. In her first M-G-M starring pic, "I Take This Woman," opposite Spence Tracy, she gained 12 pounds on snacks!

26-year-old Hedy's been divorced twice, is going easy on future matrimonial missteps. Currently chums with John Howard and Reggie Gardiner.

thumbs DOWN on hollywood

YOUR HOMETOWN MAY NOT HAVE

So you want to come to Hollywood? Stay where you are. Look, do I care? There's plenty of room for us both. But the Chamber of Commerce has no strings on me, either, so I'm telling you for your own good you won't like it here—

Why? Because Hollywood is the garden spot of the world where they can't grow lilacs. They bring a few branches down from the North and stick 'em in florists' windows, just to make you feel worse. Because chocolate sodas are served with vanilla cream. Sure, you can ask for chocolate. See what it gets you. The fish-eye and vanilla. Because after Philip Dorn tore your heart out in "Underground," they promoted him into "Tarzan's Secret Treasure." Because when you double-park for a split second, you get a ticket, but when the other guy double-parks in front of you and waves you to swing 'round him into perdition, there's never a cop for miles around.

Because the radio programs you want to hear at night come on at four or five. Because Paul Muni isn't working, he's too good. Because when you ask for anything and coffee, they bring you the coffee first, and you boil while it chills. Because they've dropped the endearing habit of giving you your second cup on the house. Because studios work till six and all day Saturday. Because the papers tell you that the certain wife of a certain star is playing around with a certain leading man, and you beat your brains out trying to figure the answer when you ought to be minding your own damn business. Because there's only one Joe Pasternak. You'll hate Hollywood. Because you cross a bridge, and it says Los Angeles River, and you look down and it's mud. Because the newspapers spank Melvyn Douglas for being humane. Because roses grow on sticks instead of bushes and look like spinsters with water on the brain and smell like nothing. Because for eight months it's one lovely lousy day after another, and blue gets to be a very monotonous color, and you wouldn't believe how sick to death you can get for one soul-shattering crash of thunder. Because, while we're on the subject of weather—and nuts to you, city fathers—either it never rains or it never stops. Because football players keel over with sunstroke on Thanksgiving Day. Because the native trees never come out all green at once but wear last year's tattered foliage like a slattern with her dirty petticoat showing under

ILLUSTRATIONS BY CHARLES SAXON

By Ida Zeitlin

HEDY LAMARR—BUT IT'S STILL A COUPLE UP ON GLAMOURLAND!

a clean dress. Because there aren't any chestnut vendors on street corners in the autumn, and there isn't any autumn. You can chalk that one up twice. There isn't any autumn. There's no zip in the air and no color in the leaves and no clouds scudding across the high sky, and the calendar says it's October, so you wear your fall clothes with a difference—the difference being sweat. Because there's no autumn. For my part you can chalk it up twenty times and set it to a dirge.

There's no snow either. Santa Claus shaves his beard and changes his red flannels for shorts. And Christmas trees, born to be glimpsed through frosty windows, sit out on front lawns dripping naphtha, poor things, from their deluded branches.

Oh, yes, you'll simply adore Hollywood, because the water tastes like dust and ashes, and the Russian rye like hell. Because when they say a show, they mean a movie, and when they say back East, they mean Ioway. Because Forest Lawn, a cemetery, is the tourists' delight. Because males think they look darling in berets and kerchiefs, and females ditto in slacks, high heels and fur coats. Because your blood gets so thin that before you know it you're hoisting your own superior carcass into catskin.

Because the woman in the next booth at the beauty parlor knows for a fact that the Dennis Morgans are divorcing, though the Dennis Morgans are as close to divorce as Mickey and Minnie Mouse. Because the gift shops sell Indian jewelry made in Los Angeles. Because if you take a bus to get downtown, it's an all-day job, but if you drive, you won't get there at all, having been killed while making a left turn. Because there's only one Ingrid Bergman. Because kids on roller skates whack the heads off geraniums. Because dopes with bad manners who happen to be movie fans stand outside the Brown Derby and stick autograph books under the noses of other dopes with bad manners who happen to be movie stars and brush them off.

Of course, you don't have to stay in Hollywood. Nobody does. When it's hot, you can go to Catalina where it's just a little hotter, and let the sun bake out what brains you have left. Or you can take the roller coaster drive up to Arrowhead and sit sneering at the lake they make such a noise about—you who have seen the glories of Saranac and Placid.

When it's cold—the California word for comfortable—you can go to Palm Springs. There's a treat for you. Coney Island in pink stucco, and if you're lucky you'll catch a glimpse of (Continued on page 99)

Oomph FOR SALE

BY JAMES REID

Glamour is Hayworth's business and it ought to be a cinch—but life isn't all mink and orchids for this Hollywood career gal!

"I had to be sold to the public just like a breakfast cereal or a real estate development or something new in ladies' wear."

Rita Hayworth crossed one long, lovely leg over the other. Her full, generous lips curved in that smile that you've seen on more magazine covers lately than any other smile in Hollywood.

She had agreed to tell something that she hadn't told before—the deep dark secret, the inside story, of her sudden success.

"You see," she explained, settling back with that it's-a-long-story look in her eyes, "I made a big mistake right at the very beginning. I started as a dancer. After that, it took a lot of doing to persuade Hollywood to think of me as anything else.

"I was doing specialty dancing in a big hotel at Agua Caliente with my father, Eduardo Cansino, when Fox 'discovered' me. There was talk of putting me in the title role of 'Ramona,' and I was given a few dance numbers in 'Dante's Inferno' and a couple of other pictures.

"Then the studio changed heads. Mr. Zanuck wanted a big-name star for 'Ramona,' and they let me go."

Rita smiled wryly at the recollection of that day, five years ago, when she had walked out the front door of Twentieth Century-Fox and sat down on the concrete steps to cry her heart out—because she had been fired. It's hard to have your dreams crushed when you're only 17.

"I don't know how long I sat there sobbing. Probably an hour or more. Until suddenly it dawned on me that there wasn't a single person in all Hollywood who was going to take either the time or the trouble to feel sorry for little Rita Cansino. 'Crying isn't going to get me anywhere,' I said. 'The only way I'm going to get anywhere is to show 'em. Make 'em eat those words they spoke when they gave me the bad news. We're afraid your talents are limited—to dancing.'

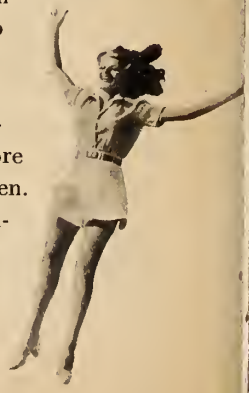
"So, with grim determination, I made the rounds." Rita smiled again, in recollection. "And the only jobs I could get were in Westerns—at little out-of-the-way studios that nobody had ever heard of."

She has been under contract to Columbia for so long that people don't stop to wonder how Columbia ever happened to sign her. The untold story about that is: One day during the making of a gangster epic, Rita overheard the assistant director say, "Too bad that girl can't speak English." She saw red. So that was what was holding her back, was it? She steamed up to the director and said, boiling, "I want to get one thing straight. I can speak English as well as anybody on this set. I'm as American as anybody here. I was born in New York, grew up in the United States, and have a high school diploma." This outburst called her to the attention of the entire lot, including the Front Office. Result: a contract as a stock player and a switch to an American name, Hayworth.

"Then I married Eddie," Rita continued. She was referring to successful businessman Edward C. Judson (his specialties are oil and real estate)—older, wonderfully tolerant of her burning ambition to get ahead in films.

"After I changed my name, I expected wonders to happen. But my roles didn't become any bigger or any better. I came home one night, desperate, and asked Eddie to tell me what was wrong.

"He thought a moment and said, "You're trying to sell a product named Rita Hayworth. In business, a man doesn't wait for people to discover what he wants to sell. He advertises.



"He also pointed out that the most successful businesses spent money to earn more money. I was earning $175 a week then. So every week, half of it went into additions to my wardrobe, improvement in my personal appearance, and half into voice lessons and dramatic lessons.

The logical (Continued on page 95)

A fat raise jacked Rita's salary to $3,000 weekly. She squanders it on dresses ($7,000 yearly), shoes ($75 a pair) and chocolates—at least 5 lbs. a week.

Rita smokes, wears scarlet nail polish and has received 500 proposals. Lost 8 pounds while dancing with Astaire in Columbia's "You'll Never Get Rich."

That Ginger Rogers-Geo. Montgomery romance is doing an on-again-off-again. He's been barred from movie-going during production of "My Gal Sal." Seems he involuntarily apes previous night's heroes all next day on the set!

candidly yours

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT IN HOLLYWOOD — BY THE LATE-TO-BED BRIGADE!

Gary Cooper and Sandra, that gorgeous wife of his, Ciro-ing with Jack Benny. Jack's crazy about kids, plans to adopt another one to play with his adored foster child, Joan Naomi.

You couldn't find a more camera-shy subject in all Hollywo than Naval Reservist Dr. Joel Pressman! During shore lea went partying with wife Colbert and Mary Livingstone

The Bob Taylors, Ronny Reagans and Joel Pressmans treated themselves to big blowout at Ciro's. Janie Wyman wouldn't say "yes" or "no" when queried on that certain coming event!

Here's the guy behind Errol Flynn scenes—Johnny Meyers—the Irish swashbuckler's side-kick and social-engagement-arranger. Off for a spot of fun for himself with Lupe Velez.

It'll be a first anniversary for Bob Preston and his cute actress wife, Catherine Craig, this Nov. 8th. Bob's been up to his neck in work on "Midnight Angel" and "Reap the Wild Wind."

Rumor has Evelyn Ankers and Glenn Ford practically hitched, with wedding bells to ring around Christmas. Everybody's wondering what all those dates with Ann Miller add up to!

AY

t"

Bing lounges through a rehearsal with his 200-pound protégé, John Scott Trotter.

Crosby, who banged a mediocre drum in high school, is always giving pointers to Spike Jones—ace skinbeater in Trotter's band.

Bing's oldest son, Gary, is insanely jealous of papa's clinches with five-year-old Carolyn Lee in "Birth of the Blues"—Bing's twenty-fifth picture for Paramount!

"The Groaner"—with scriptwriter Carroll Carroll and Producer Bob Brewster—is terribly color-blind. He loves pink, and his outfits are a succession of eye-knocker-outers.

THAT'S CROSBY-CODE OR JIVE JARGON FOR PRETTY SUPER—WHICH IS BING ALL OVER!

Bing Crosby is a great guy. That's the plain, unadulterated truth.

I'm not his press agent, you understand. I went into this story with a large box of salt in my left hook. I intended to take all statements made with generous pinches of same.

Well, the salt flew, but the result was the same. Crosby is a fine guy. He's for me.

Bing, as you may have heard somewhere, is one of the biggest men in show business, both in pictures and radio. His contract with Kraft reads like a section of the Defense Program. It calls for a mere $5,000 a week in salary, plus his choice of any music he has a mind to sing or hear. And there is the additional matter of the pact's running for ten years! No one else in the racket can even come close to that for duration.

But Crosby? A stuffed shirt? An "I'm-the-star" boy? Ha!

Take this for an example: When Bing first went on the Kraft show, it was understood that there was to be no audience. Bing didn't like 'em. He was a bit on the shy side, years ago.

Bob Burns was also signed for the program. And Bob had come from vaudeville. He had to have laughter, a living ear into which he could work so that he could time his material. Burns stipulated that there be an audience when he was on the show.

So that's the way the two contracts have always read. Bing's says, "No Audience." Bob's says, "Definitely an audience." Despite the fact that it is supposed to be Bing's show, for Bob's sake he skips his rights. There is a large and admiring throng in the studio every Thursday night!

The secret of Bing's success on the air is, of course, his informality, his normalcy, his casualness. He doesn't try to be "romantic," and he doesn't insist upon being the whole show, in any sense.

Underneath, Bing is a guy who cannot quite believe that all this has happened to him. He think's it's wonderful, yes. But there must be something wrong somewhere.

This attitude is expressed in his preface to the story of his life which his brothers, Ted and Larry, wrote: "It's difficult for me to imagine anyone seriously interested in my biography," says Bing. "This thing is hardly offered as a guide to aspirants for success in show business, but only indicates what a lucky guy I am—so far." Which goes to show he takes nothing too seriously—not even his career.

An hour show in radio is usually the cause of numerous headaches, many conferences, painstaking rehearsal and much jittering.

But not Crosby's. The preparation of Crosby's show is the signal for all the fun-loving people for miles around to come in for a jam session. I have walked into the studio many times and seen twenty or thirty kindred spirits lolling in the empty seats, adding their dialogue to "The Groaner's."

The keynote of the whole works was set years ago when Bing first began sputtering slang into a mike.

That slang is his own, for your information. He has always talked that way and probably always will. Back in Spokane, you see, he was a sports enthusiast. He swam. He played golf. He went mad over football and baseball. Then he became fascinated with music. The upshot is that his language is a conglomeration of a musician's jive and a sportswriter's.

When he went on the air, Bing didn't see any good reason why he should become excruciatingly formal.

He skips the glamoooor with (Continued on page 81)

Give yourself the

BY GLADYS HALL

love test

THINK YOU'VE GOT GROUNDS FOR MARRIAGE?

TAKE MADELEINE'S CUPID QUIZ AND BE SURE!

When Madeleine Carroll married Captain Philip Astley in England a few years ago, she wasn't in love with him! She knows it now. She could have known it then—by the love test!

If you happen to be the most beautiful woman in the world, love somehow gets to be an important hobby. If you happen also to be the brainy type—with a flock of academic degrees-you ought to be able to distill enough wisdom from your experiences to relegate Dorothy Dix to the backfield.

And for all her beauty, Madeleine has a steel trap mind, with a penchant for trussing up her conclusions in a neat, scientific package. Her love test—the business that would have spared her the Astley fiasco—is as simple to apply as a mustard plaster—and when you're through testing yourself, you can answer the all-important question: "Am I in love?" with a simple yes or no.

"When making the test," Madeleine said, "it is well to begin with the fact that so many girls go about moaning because no one is in love with them.

"The first question to ask yourself is this: 'Am I ready for love? Do I thoroughly understand that it is a job, not a plaything? A life-work, not a week-end vacation? Am I ready to take pain hand-in-hand with pleasure? Monotony along with excitement? Am I as willing to serve as to be served?'

"If you are a flibbertigibbet of a girl, a self-indulgent type who wants to be given endless attentions, petted and spoiled, you may as well keep on moaning that no one is in love with you. Because no one can afford to be! If, on the other hand, you are sincere, capable of facing reality, capable of self-sacrifice and willing to make it, you may find love—and hold it. As I hope to do.

"But it isn't going to be easy. Love is one of the great, elemental human experiences along with birth and death. It brings pain as well as fulfillment. If you think otherwise, you have never known love.

" 'But how,' you may ask, 'can I determine whether I am in love or—just running a temperature? How do I make the love test?'

"Well, I'll tell you how I did it. You begin with an experiment like this: let's assume that you think he is in love with you, and you know darned well you are in love with him. All right, suppose he is a draftee. What is your reaction? Do you figure, 'Well, I'm certainly not going to cool my heels, waste my youth while he's in camp! I'm going to have myself some fun!' Or do you get a job, help your mother (Continued on page 87)

Explanation of Hayden's walkout is that he's torch-carrying for Carroll—both in "Bahama Passage."

Madeleine and Capt. Astley were married for 6 yrs., but she knows now that she was never in love with him!

She risked her life clippering to France to see Richard. Is it love? The "love test" is helping her find out.

Teetotaler Stack's chalked up an amazing record in his 22 years: Speaks German, French and Spanish like a native, sports a Phi Beta Kappa key, gets second most fan mail (next to Durbin) at Universal!

With Bill Orr and cook Howard at his ski lodge, complete with 12-bunk dormitory wing and kitchen-bar!

BY ZEPHA SAMOILOFF

Rounding a corner in his racing auto or romancing under the kleigs—you can't see that Stack fellow for dust!

Apple of record-smashing Stack's eye is his "Thunderbird." Claims 50 m.p.h. speed-boating brings out latent genius in a man!

The young man with the Marxian (Harpo) hair and the Baerish (Max) shoulders had just come from a turn on the lake in a speedboat and his coiffure was something out of a brochure on Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde with definite overtones of the Fredric March treatment. He was trying unsuccessfully to calm it down and somebody cracked that he looked as if he had just purchased a new fright wig.

"This mop's a headache in more ways than one," he admitted, putting a bit of bile in his words. "In the first place, I resent a man being blonde under any circumstances and figure everyone else should. I almost have to shellack this wool to keep it and my necktie both in focus for close-ups. It does get around, but chiefly up."

By this time he was sitting, or had sat, all over his chair. He has a calm voice and a disarming drawl and gives the impression, in his speech, of being a little on the languid side, but physically he's as restless as an alley cat on an electrified fence.

You can't help liking the guy. You'd like him even better if you were a football coach and had come upon Bobby's hobby is building and driving hopped-up automobiles (far cry from Ab Jenkins' professional job!). Held roadster speed record of 115.68 m.p.h. in 1940.

In his 5th film, "Badlands of Dakota," with Ann Rutherford, he plays his first really grown-up role. Studio policy of keeping him youthful has long been a pet peeve of his!

ADONIS ON WHEELS

him among your sophomore candidates for end. He's six feet, one inch tall and weighs a hundred and eighty-two pounds, a large segment of which is shoulders. He moves with the unconscious rhythm of a hungry panther, which is the way a football coach likes to see his end candidates move, and he has the kind of hands a Scotchman sees dipping into his cash register in a nightmare. Big!

He had a collarless camel hair coat draped over one of the gosh-awfulest loud swatches of plaid ever to escape a pair of kilts which he was wearing for a shirt. He seemed to think this attire a bit gaudy for the occasion and hastened off to his lodge to change it. He came back, presently, in another jacket whose Glenurquhart motif set up a clamor that rattled the glassware on the back bar half a block away.

Sports clothes, of course, were just made for this guy, who held the world's junior and senior skeet shooting titles before he was twenty-one. It is also a matter of public record that he and his brother, Jim, won an international speed boat title, that he was a crack tennis player in college and that he was one of the best amateur oarsmen in the world.

He was one of the best polo players on the Pacific Coast and led his University of Southern California quartet to a conference championship in his sophomore year. According to Bob Presnell and Snowy Baker, the two ablest polo teachers on the coast, he was headed for a spot as an internationalist until he and a horse got mixed up in a spill one day. His knee was smashed and his wrist broken, and they shot the horse.

Inasmuch as this was the fourth time the wrist had been broken and he already had been promised that first kiss at Deanna Durbin, he began to think seriously of his career. He gave up polo, selling his eight ponies and reducing his insurance premiums by buying a racing automobile with the proceeds.

Friends pointed out that cyanide would have been less expensive. He ignored the tip. To date he hasn't had any accidents with his racing car, having been tutored in the art of avoiding same by Ab Jenkins, mayor of Salt Lake City and holder of two-score world's speed records, but that doesn't mean he has forsaken abrasions.

He is one of the few known human beings who managed to get himself hospitalized by fetching his features up sharp against a wave. It happened at Lake Yosemite, while he was trying to fracture the world's hydroplane record in his "Thunderbird." He'd managed to get the contraption up to seventy-seven miles an hour, which is four miles faster than the current universal record.

A patrol boat, misjudging (Continued on page 96)

When Joan Carroll returned in a blaze of glory from her B'way stint, her dad surprised her with a huge playhouse. She's furnished it with loot from co-members of "Panama Hattie's" cast; made a stage out of the front porch and puts on shows for her dolls. This is her May Robson act.

She's kind of a prodigy but nice and normal about it. Memorized the complete book and score of "Panama Hattie"; can sing and do figure skating. Has a yen to take up ballet dancing. She reads fabulous numbers of books—loves Pollyanna and the Oz stories.

for dolls only

A "Carroll Capers" first night is something to see! Superman wouldn't miss one. Neither would Scarlett O'Hara or the Quints—and Charlie McCarthy has a permanent seat in the bald-headed row!

Most of Joan's 200 dolls are kept in glassed-in cupboards, but four live permanently in the playhouse—Marilyn, Cecile (one of the quintuplet dolls), Susie and Pemmie, a bald-headed boy doll. Names all dolls after the people who give them to her. Oldest one is "Jimmy," who belonged to her big brother when he was one. Owns the original model for Disney elephant, "Dumbo."

When her pals come to visit, they eat all meals in the playhouse, dubbed "Panama Hattie." Closest chum is stand-in Patty Pyle. They never discuss business and rarely invite any boys. Here's Joan's favorite imitation—pickle-puss Arthur Treacher.

"TREASURE ISLAND"

Aug. '34. Pirating with blustery Barrymore!

"O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY"

Oct. '35. Reforming a teetering Wally Beery!

"THE CHAMP"

Nov. '31. His favorite role as "Dink" with Beery.

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

Jackie's tickled pink with his new role as leading man to best-gal Bonita Granville in RKO's jazz-historical "Syncopation."

"THE DEVIL IS A SISSY"

Sept. '36. Growing up and tough-guying it with Freddie Bartholomew and Mickey Rooney!

"SKIPPY"

Apr. '31. First saw his name in lights at age of 7.

SKIPPY REMEMBERS . . .

15 YEARS OF MOVIE-MAKING BEHIND HIM, AND KID-WONDER COOPER'S HOTTER THAN EVER!

He's dated at 19. Jackie Cooper—the kid who was hot back in the days of Red Grange and Gene Tunney. Coolidge the Sphinx was president. And Clara Bow was the It Girl.

But 1941 doesn't faze him in the least. He's the good-looking chesty kid, just this side of draft age, shouldering his way into the Blitzkrieg 40's.

"Jackie," I said, "let's talk. Let's talk about those fifteen years . . . about people and you . . . not dates and not career . . . but . . ."

"Sure," said Jackie Cooper, veteran. "You know, I was just remembering today . . . why . . . just remembering."

So we talked. And this is it.

* * * * *

"I remember when I was ten and I did a picture called 'The Bowery.' It was Darryl Zanuck's first film, shot on space rented at the United Artists lot. George Raft was in it. And Fay Wray. She was the busiest star in the business, glamorous and gorgeous and my big love. The picture was shot in four weeks—not enough for me—I had a terrible crush."

Jackie smiled.

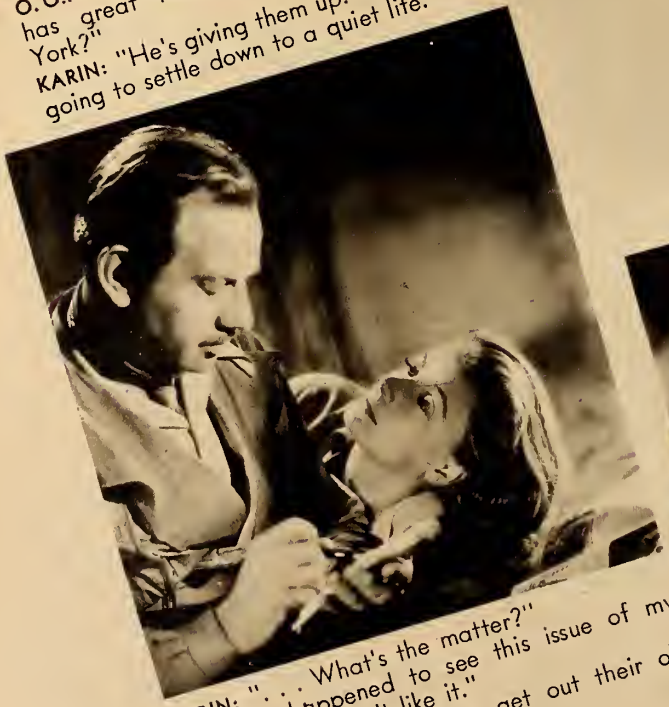
"There was one before that. My first love was when I was doing 'Our Gang' for Hal Roach. Teacher was a blonde named June Marlowe, and I was so in love with her . . . But the pay-off occurred a few months ago. A beautiful woman came up to me and said, 'Hello, Jackie.' I didn't recognize her, but she knew me. It was June Marlowe. And standing there that morning, chatting with her, I remembered with a pang that first love . . . gosh . . ."

Somehow we rambled from love to Mickey Rooney. But that's the way it goes, from one thing to another, when you remember.

"The old crowd," said Jackie Cooper, "used to get together in each other's houses and put on gag shows. Once we decided to take over Victor Hugo's Sunday night floor show. We all rehearsed like mad. I was supposed to go on with my orchestra. Judy Garland was to sing. And so on. Then Mickey came in, asked if he could play my drums (Continued on page 68)

GARBO'S TWINS

O. O.: "Don't you know your husband has great responsibilities in New York?"
KARIN: "He's giving them up. We're going to settle down to a quiet life."



KARIN: ". . . What's the matter?"
BLAKE: "I happened to see this issue of my magazine. I didn't like it."
KARIN (smiling): "Let them get out their old magazine."

BLAKE: "Wait a minute, Griselda. Don't forget I'm a married man."
GRISELDA: "No matter how much you get married, you and I are inevitable!"

M-G-M'S SOPHISTICATED NEW COMEDY PROVES THAT TWO GARBOS ARE DEFINITELY BETTER THAN ONE—AND WITH MELVYN DOUGLAS THROWN IN, THE WHOLE THING'S KIND OF TERRIFIC!

BLAKE: "Karin is so decent—she is so innocent, so cute, so good . . . I love you."
KATHERINE: "But how can you? I'm far from innocent and not very good!"

STORY

When Larry Blake's (Melvyn Douglas) doctor told him to forget his old news weekly for a while and go off for a rest in the mountains, he never anticipated this! Bingo—the first day at Snow Lodge, Larry fell for the skiing instructress, Karin Borg (Greta Garbo), one of those wind-swept women with snow on her eyelashes and fire in her heart. She didn't drink, she didn't smoke—and she couldn't see gay blade Larry for dust. The romance got off to an unpropitious start, but somehow wound up at the altar!

Everything was idyllic, till Blake's partner O. O. Miller (Roland Young) and his secretary Miss Ellis (Ruth Gordon) routed them out of the honeymoon cabin and dragged Larry back to the office—sans bride!

Karin did a slow burn in the wild white wastes for a while, then trekked to New York to see what was doing. Found hubby gadding with an old flame—Griselda (Connie Bennett)—a siren and snake if there ever was one. Karin, the placid, the bucolic, saw red and decided that if he wanted oomph, bigod she'd give it to him. With Miss Ellis' help, she turned devastatingly glamorous, posed as Katherine, her own twin sister, and went shamelessly on the make for her husband. She was mysterious, provocative, ten times the femme fatale Griselda ever thought of being. And Larry was mad about her. There was moonlight, champagne, Katherine in one (Continued on page 86)

PRODUCTION

Right in line with the "Garbo Speaks," "Garbo Laughs campaign is the "Garbo Rumbas" blurb the exhibitors might use. Long before the rumba sequence was scheduled to be shot, Greta practiced it in a projection room while she watched the rumba-teaching Pete Smith short, "Cuban Rhythm." She chalked huge squares on the projection room floor and followed the screen dancers' movements.

Rumors of a romance with Dance Instructor Robert Alton were phony. Alton, blonde, good-looking, 32-ish and the highest paid dance teacher anywhere, was hired to coach Garbo for her one dancing scene. Garbo asked him to dance it with her for the actual scene. Alton refused—said he wasn't an actor. Garbo marched to the front office, told them she'd be more at ease in front of the camera dancing with Alton because they'd practiced so long together. Alton was in make-up and ready to work at 8:00 the next morning.

As usual, the "No Visitors" sign was up. Joan Crawford crashed the set, exchanged a few pleasantries with Greta. Later in the day Greta passed Joan's dressing room, heard her singing. "I hope I can do as well when I sing," was Garbo's comment.

Four singing messenger boys, sent to the set to warble birthday greetings to Director George Cukor, lost their voices completely when they got a glimpse of Miss G. She invited them to stay awhile, (Continued on page 85)

In "Rise and Shine," Georgie dances and romances with Linda Darnell. Says he averages 140 miles of dancing in a movie!

pal georgie

No freckles, no red hair, no temper—just what kind of an Irishman is this guy "Murph"?

"That guy is a regular Pollyanna," George Murphy's friend Cagney will say with left-handed admiration. "He's got an explanation available for every single one of his fellow man's shortcomings."

Being Irish, George ought (by all the saints) to be quick to wrath. He isn't. Being Irish, he ought, furthermore, to start launching left hooks or maybe those nice, handy one-twos whenever he has been crossed, his feelings wounded or his pride dented. But he doesn't.

On the contrary, he is the most peace-loving citizen in Hollywood. He will not only meet people halfway but will go 90 per cent of the other 50 per cent whenever the occasion arises. He will even waive his personal rights—and he has. The touch too much is that he will defend to the death those who overstep their bounds and encroach on his preserves.

The explanation for George Murphy is simple: he likes people, that's all. Which, apparently, goes double, as you shall see for yourself.

Take that last trip he made to New York as a starter. All he did was to walk out of his hotel, step into a cab, lean back and start to tell the driver where he was bound when the following dialogue was set in motion by the hackie, a total stranger:

"Hi, George! Howza boy?"

"Fine, thanks. How's yourself?"

"Can't kick."

"Swell. Suppose you could find your way over to Dunhill's?"

"It's a cinch, George."

Well, that 14-block trip (as the crow flies) consumed 90 minutes. The cabbie just wouldn't let George out. He kept circling Dunhill's like a man doing turns on the Indianapolis speedway. And talking by the yard. First, he gave George an analysis of the pennant chances of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Next he tackled the subject of the draft. Finally he got down to the main topic: Was there any guy in town George wanted "handled"? Anyone at all—a couple of guys, for that matter. Maybe a party had given George some guff and needed an arm broken to loin him a lesson. Just leave him name the guy. In time Murphy managed to make it clear that for the time being everything was jake, but that if anything ever came up and he needed anyone handled he'd let him know. When the gabby cabbie finally did pull up in front of Dunhill's, George pulled out a ten spot, grinned, handed it to the driver and got ready to sprint.

"Nothin' doin'," said the hackman. "I didn't pull the flag down. The ride was on the house."

It took five minutes of Irish eloquence before the cabbie gave in. A guy didn't take money from a pal, did he? He was still shaking his head sadly when he drove off.

Just how genuine is the Murphy affection for his fellow man can be guessed at by noting that throughout his long and hectic career as one half of a dance team that came up from nothing, only once did he lose his patience and his temper.

He and his partner Juliette Johnson (now Mrs. George Murphy) were dancing in a New Haven cafe when a ringside oaf made a disparaging remark about male dancers. Murphy waited until the last encore was over. Then he marched over to the table, lifted the offending lout by the scruff of the neck and clipped him. Just once was all.

The effect of that single act of violence has never escaped him. That bob in the beard hurt Murphy considerably more than it did the louse who had caught the punch. In one way he was scared of what he had done. In another way he was disgusted with himself. Scared that he might have acquired a bad habit. Disgusted that he had selected New Haven, of all places, as the setting for his shame. What kind of a loyal son of Eli was he to be brawling within sight of the spires of Yale where his late and revered father, Charles Murphy, had once served as physical director? And where he, himself, had picked up a degree in mining engineering?

From that date on, heels and schlemiels operated with impunity. Let some ringside sniper vocalize to the effect that male dancers were panty-waists and George was a cinch to come back with:

"That's right, brother."

It got the audience on his side, for one thing. Too, it had a sobering effect on him—something like counting ten. He did come close to backsliding one night out Richmond way. He and Juliette were waiting for the cue before hitting the deck when some Southern gentleman made a sneering remark.

George turned white. Blood began pounding in his ears. Before he could do anything about it the cue had sounded, and the two were out on the floor and being chased by a baby spot (purple). Juliette carried that whole first chorus by herself while George debated his next move. The answer came to him in a flash. He was dancing for money, wasn't he, and snide remarks were part of the occupational unpleasantness, weren't they? Besides, the obstreperous one was probably pie-eyed. By the time he had finished the number he was in high spirits, so high that when he passed by the table where the Southern wit was ensconced behind a bottle of sloe gin he grinned broadly at him and remarked:

"Hospitality, yes, siree. That's what I like about the South."

It was inevitable that once he had clicked in pictures he should wind up as Hollywood's Pal Georgie. That he has made the grade is as obvious as the topography of Carole Landis.

You could prove his claim to the title of Hollywood's Pal Georgie by cataloguing his friends, worthies like the Messrs. Cagney, Montgomery, O'Brien, Astaire, Romero, Hope, Milland, Overman, Menjou, Crosby, etc., all of whom swear by him.

You could bolster your point by setting down some of his high offices, the presidency of the Westside Tennis Club, the vice-presidency of the Screen Actors Guild, his chairmanship of the actors committee to franchise the agents, his membership on the advisory committee of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, etc., etc.

You could clinch it by a camera study of George Murphy during a recess in production on a set. The Murphy dressing room is the center of all activity. Here directors plot gags and new "business" with him. Here visit extras who want to bum a cigarette from him or to ask to demonstrate a particular step that they were fond of—a routine he did for the "Broadway Melody of 1940," maybe. Here gather the camera crews to swap laughs. Here congregate the Hollywood columnists in search of anecdotes, quips and jests with which to enliven their daily stint. Here trek the studio publicity boys to get George to help them dream up gags to exploit the picture. He's good at thinking up story angles for everyone but himself. He once spent three hours telling a lady interviewer from New York all about his friend Cagney, who wasn't even in the picture, by the way.

Burgess Meredith describes Murphy as a "gentleman who exists in a perpetual state of Mardi Gras fever." Maxie Rosenbloom speaks of him glowingly as "a slephappy gee." Maxie would. The way Fred Astaire sees it, "George Murphy has got life licked."

An inspection of George Murphy as an operating husband tends to corroborate all three of the curbstone psychiatrists.

He most emphatically does not conform to the stereotype.

Juliette Murphy will tell you that the thing she likes best about George is the fact that after 12 years of married life he manages to keep alive the soul-warming illusion that he's still courting her.

He takes leave of her and the modest Murphy home (sans badminton or tennis court) mornings as if he were going on a long journey, but never fails to leave a note of good cheer even if he (Continued on page 92)

37-year-old Murphy looks and acts about 17—says he does it with 13 hrs. sleep nightly.

long-haired boy

Sabu's next is "Jungle Book," the set of which is the most primitive place he's ever seen. His native Mysore, India, boasts electric refrigerators and excellent schools!

Alex Korda's brother, Zoltan, has taken a fatherly interest in Sabu. He's directed all his films—British and American.

SABU, OF THE GARBO COIFFURE AND MAHOGANY SKIN, IS REALLY AS AMERICAN AS MICKEY ROONEY!

Sabu Dastagir was born seventeen years ago in Mysore, the most fabulously rich and modern province in Southern India. His father was Sheik Ibrahim, one of the Maharajah's best mahouts (elephant keeper). Orphaned at the age of 10, he existed on a monthly pension of 2 rupees (about 72¢) given him by the Maharajah.

He was brought to England when he was thirteen, and two years later to America as a reward for his swell work in "Drums." Today, Korda's "Elephant Boy" earns a four figure weekly salary that keeps him and his brother Shaik pleasantly comfortable in a gray stucco Hollywood hillside home. The pair live frugally. All the money over and above their modest expenses is carefully salted away in the bank. The boys usually speak English around the house but sometimes lapse into their native Hindustani.

Shaik is Sabu's legal guardian and a tough trader when it comes to business deals. He's arranged matters so Sabu can retire on a nice-sized income in the next few years, if he wants to. Another "guardian" is Zoltan Korda, Sabu's director, who lived in India for a long time and is a student of its traditions and history.

Sabu's crazy about midget auto races, jitterbugging and wienie bakes at the beach. Drives both a Ford station wagon and a Buick convertible. Loves speed and has to be cautioned not to go faster than 55 miles per hour. He's a member of the Hollywood Athletic Club and works out daily, boxing, wrestling and swimming. He's especially good at the latter, ranking (Continued on page 85)

A B C's of skin care

BY CAROL CARTER

Virginia Grey—M-G-M beauty, now appearing in "Whistling In the Dark."

TEN EASY STEPS IN A CLEANSING FACIAL FOR EVERY TYPE OF SKIN—YOUNG OR OLD

The beginning of all skin beauty—and health—is cleanliness—inside and out. So the first thing we're going to talk about this month is a cleansing facial to put you in "the pink" and, if repeated every week or so, to keep your skin lovely all winter long through ice or snow or wind; or even—if you're lucky enough to live in the south—through just one more season of sun tan.

How do you go about it? First, comb back your hair and whisk it out of the way into a colorful kerchief, a bit of neat, bright net or one of those dainty pastel-colored rubber head bands. (Our point here is that you don't have to look drab or frowsy, even when you give yourself a facial. You can look neat—even gay!)

First, here's the equipment you'll need. A soft-bristled complexion brush, a cake of pure, bland soap, a jar of cleansing cream, a bottle of skin freshener, a few puffs of cotton, a jar of tissue or lubricating cream, a supply of facial tissues and a clean, dry towel.

Second, scrub your whole face thoroughly with a soft brush and soap, paying especial attention to the nose and the area surrounding it, the crease of your chin and the middle of your forehead. These are the spots where oil glands are most active and where dirt is most likely to clog and become obstreperous, and don't forget to scrub that neck of yours—back, front and sides. Winter coat weather does appalling things to otherwise nice, self-respecting neck skin, and that's how it becomes dark, coarse and decidedly unladylike.

After the scrub, rinse thoroughly in warm—never hot—water and dry with a clean linen or Turkish towel.

Third. You're ready now for a good lathering with cleansing cream. Spread it on fairly thick all over face and neck, using, of course, your clean, dry fingers. Work cream into skin with smooth rotary motion, then, while it is pliable and well lubricated, pat it. Under your chin, use the backs of your hands to pat, stroking firmly from side to side with alternating hands. Massage from chin to each ear in a firm crescent stroke, then from chin across each cheek upward, (Continued on page 72)

Use the tips of your fingers to blend it in with your natural skin tones.

Protective lotions will help keep your hands, arms and neck soft and youthful.

Wear a foundation base under make-up to smooth and protect your complexion.

BY CAROL CARTER

ABOUT FACE FOR

Posed by Lucia Carroll, currently in Warners' "Wild Bill Hickok Rides"

Remove cream with tissue in an upward and outward motion.

Then, apply cleansing cream lavishly for its softening as well as cleansing effect.

Keep your skin fresh and stimulated by frequent scrubbings with soap and water.

HERE'S HOW THE SCREEN'S GLAMOUR GIRLS KEEP THEIR COMPLEXIONS SO BEAUTIFUL!

WINTER . . .

We hear a lot about the naturally lovely skin of youth, but, unfortunately, it isn't always so. Many young things do have flawless complexions, that's true, but there are many others whose skins are dull, sallow and neglected looking. A lovely complexion is a girl's most precious possession—in fact it's the background for the rest of her beauty—so keep your skin healthy and clear by giving it everyday attention. Taking care of it not only makes you more attractive now, but it's your best insurance for continued good looks as you grow older.

Such radiant complexions as Lucia Carroll's, Hedy Lamarr's, Linda Darnell's and the rest of the screen lovelies aren't a matter of chance. They are the result of cleanliness, stimulation and protection—and sparkling health and vitality. Skin, you know, isn't a mere outer covering for the sake of looks alone. It's a living organ of the body, several layers thick, with all sorts of duties to perform. It regulates temperature, throws off dead tissue and body waste and serves as a protective covering for bones and muscles. It's constantly renewing itself, so if your complexion isn't all that it ought to be, it isn't too late to restore its loveliness. With such face-savers as rich emollient and cleansing creams and softening lotions, mild soap, skin toners, astringents and bleaches, you can cleanse, soften and stimulate it from the outside. Then, you can work hand in hand with nature and improve it from within by taking care of your health. Since skin is nourished by blood vessels and capillaries in the underlying layers, be sure that you eat three balanced meals each day containing plenty of green vegetables, fresh fruits, milk, butter, cream and eggs and other healthful foods. Also drink plenty of water—at least eight glasses a day—to help keep the blood stream purified. Get as much fresh air and exercise as you can and sleep eight to ten hours each night.

To make your complexion transparently clear and smooth, keep it scrupulously clean, free of dead, dull tissue and blemishes that result from dirt and oil allowed to remain in the pores. Cleanse it thoroughly at least twice a day, always before applying new make-up and before retiring at night. If your skin is normal, you can use either liquefying or cold creams, for these not only remove dirt and soil but have a decided softening effect. Leave the cream on as long as possible, then remove it with cleansing tissue in an upward motion. You can further tone up your face and remove every vestige of cream by applying a skin freshener. Or you may prefer that clean, invigorated feeling that scrubbing with mild soap, warm water and a complexion brush gives. Then, if you like, smooth a rich tissue cream or lotion into your skin after rinsing with cold water.

This time of year delicate complexions are constantly being exposed alternately to cold, blustery winds, then drying indoor heat—both of which may rob the skin of natural oils and leave it sore, dry and flaky. So beware! Little lines and wrinkles begin whenever skin lacks the necessary lubricants to keep it soft, supple and resilient. You can keep your complexion dewy moist and soft all winter long—if you cleanse it frequently with cold cream and keep it well-lubricated with such emollients as tissue cream or a special dry skin cream. Massage them into your skin regularly before retiring and leave them on overnight. When making up, always apply a creamy foundation first, to provide a smooth surface for other cosmetics and to protect skin from chapping and drying out. Then remember to keep hands, throat and elbows smooth and soft by using protective lotions and creams regularly. If dry and crepey, they look out of place with a youthful complexion.

Wind and weather do play havoc with unprotected complexions, but dry skin is also aggravated and sometimes even caused by fatigue, nervousness, too little exercise or rest, or a diet lacking in fats, such as milk, butter and cream; so watch your health!

If your old summer tan, in which you once took such pride, has left your skin dark, muddy and dry-looking, you can restore its softness by using creams and lotions lavishly. Then, use a bleaching cream regularly to bring back its natural color. There are no two ways about it—delicate, fair complexions look far more attractive than tan ones with rich winter costume colors and furs.

Perhaps, oily skin is your problem and your nose forever shines despite your best efforts to keep it powdered. It's caused, you know, by over-activity of the oil glands and needs immediate and conscientious care. If left unchecked, the abnormal amount of oil forced through the pores will enlarge their size, and if these become clogged or irritated, they develop into unattactive blemishes. Your best way of correcting a too-oily skin is to keep your face scrupulously clean and stimulated by frequent soap and water scrubbings—and you can also use liquefying cream, which is slightly drying. Then, after cleansing, apply an astringent or a toning lotion which is not only stimulating and drying, but helps to return pores to their normal proportions. In making up, avoid all oily creams and make-up. Use a foundation with an astringent base. Also check up on your health and diet. Your system may be run-down or you may be indulging too freely in sweets, rich foods and starches.

Paradoxically, some complexions are both oily and dry, for the majority of oil (Continued on page 72)

Dorothy Lamour, Poromount stor, soon to be seen in "Moloya"

MODERN SCREEN'S SKIN CARE CHART

BY CAROL CARTER

if you have	use these products	how and when to use
NORMAL SKIN	Mild tailet saap, camplexion brush. Cleansing cream, either liquefying ar cald; Cleansing latian ar prepared pads. Skin freshener. Faundatian base—cream, cake or liquid.	Scrub face with lather of mild saap and lukewarm water at least ance every day. Soften and cleanse skin by applying cream lavishly, leaving an 2 ar 3 minutes. Remave with tissue. Alsa use cleansing latian ar pads. Apply skin freshener ta remave traces af cream and ta tane up skin. Apply faundatian base before making-up.
DRY SKIN	Cald cream, cleansing tissues, aily ar mild soap, camplexian brush. Special dry skin cream, tissue cream. Cream-type make-up base.	Apply cleansing cream and remave before washing with saap and water. Apply tissue ar dry skin cream immediately after saap and water scrubbing. Massage these inta face every night. Always apply faundatian cream before making up.
A SUMMER SKIN HANG-OVER	Cald cream, cleansing tissues. Tissue or dry skin cream, saftening latian. Bleaching cream, skin pack, pore cream.	Cleanse face with cold cream ta saften skin. Apply tissue ar dry skin cream ar latian before retiring ta saften and stimulate skin. Use bleaching and pare creams, alsa skin pack regularly according ta directians.
CHAPPED SKIN	Cald cream, cleansing tissue. Pratective cream ar latian. Rich tissue cream.	Cleanse and saathe face with aily cream. Remave with cleansing tissues. Apply pratective creams ar latians after cleansing, alsa before gaing autdaars. Pat tissue cream inta skin at night.
OILY SKIN	Mild soap, camplexian brush, liquefying cleasing cream, cleansing latian, cleasing pads. Skin freshener, taning latian or astringent. Liquid ar cake faundatian base.	Cleanse face frequently during day and before retiring with soap and water, liquefying cream, cleansing latian ar prepared pads. Tone up skin after cleansing with astringent, freshener ar taning latian. Apply liquid or cake-type faundatian base before making up.
ACNE	Mild saap, complexion brush. Special cleansers ar beauty grains. Special acne lotian, pore cream, skin pack.	Scrub face with brush and soap at least twice every day. Use special cleanser ar beauty grains ance a day. Apply special acne latian, pare cream, etc., at night. Use skin pack according ta directians at least ance a week.

WHAT'S YOUR SKIN SCORE ?

These quiz questions might stump the experts, but not you — for here are the answers, also —

Q. On what do the health and beauty of my skin depend?
A. On good general health, a well-balanced diet, plenty of drinking water, cleanliness—internal and external—fresh air, exercise, enough sleep and relaxation, protection by good cosmetics and stimulation by massage.
Q. How is my face skin different from the rest?
A. Because it is less protected and also because a lot of good looks is expected of it, face skin requires special care, even though it is basically the same as any other skin.
Q. Why protect my skin?
A. Because exposure, wind, cold, sudden temperature changes, etc., coarsen and age skin. And because "nerves," illness, fatigue, neglect, etc., destroy its beauty and therefore must be counteracted.
Q. How can skin be protected?
A. By applying oily and softening creams and lotions before exposure to weather, and at night before retiring.
Q. What will protect my skin against signs of age?
A. Rich, oily creams and lotions, applied daily and nightly with correct massage and patting exercises.
Q. Why does my skin need stimulation?
A. To insure good circulation and healthy muscle tone, both of which are essential to skin beauty.
Q. What is a normal skin like?
A. Normal skin is fine-textured, firm and fresh-looking, with all pores functioning easily and normally.
Q. What are the signs of a dry skin?
A. Lines, a parched look, wrinkles, a smarting sensation or a tight, drawn feeling and a tendency to "eat up" all creams and oils applied to it. Hard blackheads or embedded pore secretions that refuse to flush themselves out —all these indicate a too-dry skin.
Q. What are the signs of an over-oily skin?
A. Too much shine, coarse pores, soft blackheads, make-up and powder that won't adhere. Cleansing tissue pressed against an over-oily skin will plainly show the excess oil.
Q. What are the three basic principles of external skin care?
A. Cleanliness, stimulation and lubrication (or protection.) Soaps, cleansing creams and skin fresheners cleanse. Special creams, certain oils, astringents, packs and masks stimulate. Rich, oily creams and softening lotions lubricate and protect.
Q. How should soap be used on my skin?
A. Soap should be used in the form of a rich sudsy lather on a clean soft-bristled complexion brush or a coarse, sturdy wash cloth. Never rub the cake directly on your skin. Rinse well with warm—not hot—water, and pat dry with a clean towel.
Q. Does hard water affect proper cleansing?
A. Yes. Soften it by adding a good water softener or a little borax.
Q. How can I best remove make-up?
A. Apply cleansing, cold or theatrical cream lavishly a few minutes before washing with soap and water.
Q. How should I cleanse a chapped, irritated skin?
A. Apply an oily cream, allow it to remain as long as possible. Cleanse with creams and lotions entirely while irritation is at its worst. Use a very mild, oily soap and dry your skin thoroughly after each wetting. Follow with a protective film of cream or lotion.
Q. How can I avoid rough, red hands?
A. Massage frequently with oily cream or lotion, dry very thoroughly after each washing. Never go outdoors with wet hands. Never go out without first protecting them with cream or lotion and putting on gloves before exposure to cold or wet weather. Wear soft, white overnight gloves to bed over hands well-lubricated with a rich cream or lotion. Wear rubber gloves for all wet or dirty housework, dishwashing, etc., keeping hands as dry and clean as possible. Use those excellent hand creams before and after every exposure.
Q. How can I clear my skin of whiteheads?
A. Stimulate circulation by a complexion brush used freely with mild soap and warm water. Massage in deep, firm rotary motions. (Always lubricate fingers with cream when massaging.) Use ice-cold astringents after thorough cleansing. If individual pressure is necessary, sterilize a needle or a smooth-edged pair (Continued on page 72)

M-G-M's Ruth Hussey whose next will be "H. M. Pulham, Esq."

Jawn Barrymore and W. C. Fields toast-mastered the merry premiere of "Silver Screen" revue at Wilshire Bowl Theater Restaurant. Show was engineered by film director and producer John Murray Anderson . . .

BY SYLVIA KAHN

GEORGE SANDERS MARRIES HOLLYWOOD HIGH SCHOOL GIRL! MILTON BERLE'S SCHNOZZ GETS ITS THIRD REVAMPING!

Short Shots

William Lundigan is literally getting a build-up from M-G-M. They've instructed him to fatten up to the tune of another 14 pounds . . . Joan Crawford is plotting a concert tour with Dancer Paul Draper. She'll do the vocalizing . . . Cowboy actor Tom Keene, playing a dual role in "Wild Horse Valley," has one scene in which he shoots it out with himself . . . Irene Dunne is a cartwheel-turner. She does it easily and often . . . Victor McLaglen's ranch used to belong to Mrs. Gary Cooper's folks . . . Frail Ida Lupino is the hardest-working member of the Los Angeles Ambulance Corps. She attends meetings twice weekly, is studying machine gun marksmanship and how to take apart and put together automobiles . . . Bill Powell and Myrna Loy, who have co-pranced through 11 domestic comedies since 1934, know their stuff so well, they assist studio scripter with dialogue and gag scenes . . . A numerologist changed Bill Henry's name to Scott Jordan. That's the way you'll know him from now on.

The plan's afoot to boost Kay Kyser as another Harold Lloyd . . . Duke Ellington's name is practically on the dotted line for Orson Welles' production of "The Magnificent Ambersons" . . . Slim Talbot, Gary Cooper's stand-in for the past 15 years, is quitting the boss at the completion of "Ball of Fire." He'll manage an Oregon Cattle ranch . . . A Sunset Strip floral exhibit, known for years as the "Japanese Gardens," has switched its name to "Oriental Gardens" . . . Garbo never uses milk or cream on her breakfast cereal. She bathes it in coffee, instead!

Via Clipper From London

Mail from England gets pounced on first thing these mornings. The minute the letters have been read twice through, they're circulated among the friends of the writer and worn to tatters by the time they get back to the original owner.

Here's an especially interesting note sent to Sir Cedric Hardwicke by Ralph Richardson, who's just been promoted to an RNVR Lieutenant-Commander. Richardson is remembered by American fans for his beautiful performance in "Four Feathers" and "The Citadel":

"Thanks so much for your letter. I saw you the other day in a film —'Victory.' What a beautiful story it is, too. And what a grand title just at this time. . . .

"Do you see Alex Korda or Tim Whelan? Do remember me to them. I often think, but somehow it's so hard to write—I must write again to Alex. . . .

"Our poor old Green Room has gone absolutely. No one was killed, I believe. There was only one member there. I don't know who it was—but he was in the 'gentlemen's' room at the time. I don't know what did happen to him, but it saved his life! I wonder if he has ever dared go into a 'gentlemen's' room again!

"Laurence (Ed.—Olivier is now serving in the Fleet Wing of the RNVR) has finished his training and has made a splendid officer. I think he likes his work very much. I had his job for a year. . . . Ralph."

The Yaks Are Coming

Ronald Reagan's head may look ordinary to you, but the other day it was the scene of the biggest Hollywood brainstorm in months. Seated on the "Kings Row" set with character actor Harry Davenport, Ronnie was suddenly fascinated by the handsome, full-blown beard taped onto Davenport's chin. The more he looked, the more he was intrigued. At last his curiosity got the better of him. Jumping from his chair, he hustled over to Perc Westmore's make-up lab to find out what ingredients went into the making of Davenport's false fuzz.

From Westmore he learned that all movie beards are composed of wool shorn from the back of the wild yak of Tibet. And the Tibetans, far from dumb, soak Hollywood $35 a pound for the stuff. That was bad enough, Ronnie was told, but since the outbreak of the war the wool has been unattainable at any price.

Ronnie thanked Perc and left him. But a few moments later he was back. His face sparked with excitement. He had decided to become a yak-breeder and he wanted Perc for a partner.

Perc got the idea and now both boys are pulling strings like mad trying to get a half dozen or more Tibetan beard-growers into this country! And to prove they're not gagging, they've even opened negotiations for an 800-acre playground for their pets, near Mt. Whitney!

And how is Mrs. Jane Wyman Reagan reacting to her husband's yak-happiness? Surprisingly coolly. Says she:

"I think it's kind of nice. Ronnie can always clip one of the darned things and play Santa Claus for the baby!"

Golden Boy

Runner-up in the Brainstorm League is Brian Donlevy. Brian recently returned from a location trip that took him into the Old West country. Passing through some Nevada ghost towns, he was reminded of those dreamers and adventurers who had panned for gold in '49. He recalled stories of men, hundreds of them, who had met with fabulous success or miserable disappointment there on the desert, before abandoning their little communities for the comforts of the city.

And as he mused Brian began to feel a great idea stirring in his head.

When he got back to Hollywood, Brian did something about his idea. He picked up a pen and wrote a letter to the Governor of Nevada. In it he offered to finance the paving of all the streets in all the ghost towns (they're still visited by tourists) if the Governor, in return, would grant him the right to reopen the deserted mines.

Brian's convinced "Thar's still gold in them thar hills." If the Governor gives him the go-ahead nod, he'll hop into his prospector's cap, grab a pick and shovel and start digging!

Entertainment was divvied up between old-time stars in the revue, and spectators. Geo. Burns of the latter group was crowned Queen of Something or Other by A. Rutherford . . .

Plot dealt with history of motion picture industry. Between acts, star-studded audience buzzed over the Martin-bequested giant sparkler on Lana Turner's third finger, left hand . . .

GOOD NEWS

CONTINUED . . .

Double Crosspatch

Doesn't the sight of a lemon or the sound of a knife scraping across a plate make you wonder what's happened to citrus-faced, raspy-voiced Ned Sparks? We wondered, and found out, too.

Seems Canadian-born Ned used to make a lot of pictures and a lot of money here in Hollywood, but the big greenbacks never budged from his pay envelope until they were well across the U. S. border invested in his native land. Sparks recently took a trip up home to look over his real estate holdings. When the time came to return to the Cinema City, his sour-puss scrunched up into the most acid expression. He discovered that Uncle Sam considers him an alien, and war restrictions prohibit his re-entering this country unless he has a bona fide offer of employment actually waiting for him. Which he does not.

Ned Sparks nursing a grouch in pictures is depressing enough. The real thing must be an awful lot harder to take!

Didja Know

That Maggie Sullavan, mama of three (Brooke, 4; Bridget, 2½, and Bill, 5 months) considers six children an ideal family. . . . That All-American Johnny Kimbrough packs his tootsies in size 12D shoes; boasts 14½-inch ankles and 17-inch calves. . . . That Errol Flynn and Bruce Cabot are sharing the same apartment . . . That gals who follow coiffure trends set by the movies are in for a dizzy season. In "H. M. Pulham, Esq." Hedy Lamarr ties her famous long bob into a sophisticated bun. And in "Two-Faced Woman," Greta Garbo snips her much-imitated pageboy down to a tricky short bob . . . That Deanna Durbin's flying bug is the cause of those graying temples in Universal's front office? Every chance she gets, Deanna hies her million-dollar person into Bob Cummings' plane and up they go. Accompanied by Mrs. Cummings and Vaughn Paul, of course . . . That Broderick Crawford has the whole town suggesting attractive names for a new-born baby. He'll need them in December . . . That Alexis Smith has given Warner Bros. a written guarantee she will not marry for three years . . . That George Sanders will play Cobina Wright Jr.'s papa in "Son of Fury"?

"Christmas—Humbug!"

Whenever Christmas rolls around, Hollywood's happy citizens begin to brood. Eleven out of every twelve months they peer up at the sun, smile smugly to themselves and bless their options for keeping them in such lovely climate. But about this time of the year tears come to their eyes when they look at their kiddies. Nostalgia sets in. They remember the snowy, cold, holly-decked holidays of their own youth, and almost to a man resolve to do as much as they can to give their poor little tykes a story-book Christmas.

For example, there was the time Dick Arlen felt it his paternal duty to play Santa Claus for his kids. Days before the Yuletide he locked himself in his room, practiced waddling around in a scarlet, pillow-stuffed suit and energetically rehearsed dialogue in the booming tones of Old St. Nick.

Then the big morning dawned. As the first rays of the sun cut through the balmy California skies, Dick shinnied up his roof top and started down the chimney. But that was one part of his routine he had forgotten to rehearse. In good old vaudeville fashion he found himself stuck in the flue, with the lower half of his torso visible from the living room!

The crowning blow was delivered by his young son, Rickie, sprawled on a rug and absorbed in a new toy railroad. Rickie looked up disgustedly, snapped: "For gosh sakes, pop—what are you doing in there?" and promptly returned to the more mature pleasures offered by his toys!

The Nightmare Before Christmas

Arlen's adventure reminds us of that other Yuletide when Frank Morgan was persuaded to go into a Santa Claus act for the benefit of a group of kiddies at a Palm Springs Christmas party. Frank wasn't keen about the whole idea, but he finally decked himself out in red-and-white suit, shaggy hair and eyebrows, rosy cheeks and rosier nose. According to the plans, he was to bounce into their midst, shout a hearty "Hallo-ooo-OOO" at the little dears and bounce out again.

Frank arrived early and climbed into his costume. Finding himself with time to kill, he poked his head through the doorway to see how the young ones were getting along. Frank should never have done that. He knows it now. For the moment the kids spotted him, their faces screwed up in terror! Frankenstein in a Hitler mustache couldn't have frightened them more! Screams of horror rent the air! Mamas rushed to remove their hysterical offspring, and the party ended in a complete rout!

Almost An Angel

The other evening Alan Marshal appeared in "The Devil's Disciple" at the Lobero Theater in Santa Barbara. In the middle of the last act he found himself with a noose around his neck which was supposed to lift off but wouldn't. As Alan's face grew redder and redder, the audience's howls grew louder and louder. And the loudest howls of all came from a sweet, old lady seated in the third row. May Robson was remembering a similar incident in her own career.

Martha Raye claimed a goodly percentage of attention with Jack Gleason, bosom chum of estranged spouse Neal Lang. Said there's a slight chance of reconciliation . . .

Dottie Lamour and Greg Bautzer hopped a plane from Chicago so's to make the show on time. He's been vacationing in N. Y., joined her midway cross country to fly back . . .

Some years ago, May was co-starred in a play with an actor she thoroughly detested. Every night they did a long scene climaxed by the leading man plunging his hand into his pocket and pulling up a sealed envelope which he would rip in half and toss at her feet.

This gesture of contempt, though part of the story, irritated May particularly. One evening she felt she simply couldn't take it. So—old darling that she is—she got hold of the envelope before the performance and into it slipped a paper-thin hankie!

Came the big scene. The actor pulled out the envelope and tried to tear it. No dice. He tried again. Still no dice. He grew wild-eyed and angry. In his rage he never thought of crumbling or merely dropping the stubborn prop. For fully five minutes he struggled while May stood by, impatiently tapping her foot. At last, well-satisfied with herself, May took the envelope from him, airily flipped it into the wings, and the show went on.

Attention, Mr. Roosevelt!

For our dough, Gracie Allen is still Queen of the Zanies. When an inventors' convention came to town the other day, Gracie sent out word she would appear with an exhibit of her own. This, said her announcement, would consist of:

(a) A sweater knitted out of macaroni. Not only warm, but nourishing.
(b) A transparent newspaper so wives can see their husbands at breakfast.
(c) A building that goes up and down. To eliminate elevators.
(d) And for men, a shaving mirror with the upper half of Clark Gable's face on it—"so that it will look as though you're shaving Clark in the morning, instead of your same old face."

It is not reported how the men of science feel about Gracie's entrance into their ranks. However, it is rumored one disagreeable sobersides took another aside and cranked: "That Allen person! I wish she'd stick to running for President—and not interfere with serious men!"

Mae and the West entourage (Carradine, Barrymore and LaRue). Her alleged hubby's suing her again—for a paltry $1,000 monthly support!

Jigger-Bug

May's little prank is kid stuff compared to Charles Laughton's favorite theater gag. Laughton thinks it's great fun to fill whisky decanters used onstage with real firewater.

His pet story concerns the time he was in a London show with a bumptious, "ahty" sort of guy who often impersonated drunks but boasted he was a teetotaler. In the opening act, the young man always strode to a decanter containing tinted water and poured himself four or five slugs of what was supposedly the deadly liquid. The night Laughton pulled his fiendish trick, the actor confidently approached the decanter and, to his great horror, discovered it filled with Laughton's own private stock. The scene called for him to swallow five jiggers of the stuff. He was desperate. But gallantly he put it down.

P. S. The poor fellow passed out cold after the first act curtain and an understudy finished the evening!

Tee For Two

This is by way of warning an up-and-coming leading man—married, though not too securely—that he'd better slow down on his extra-curricular Casanova-ing.

His technique is interesting. He hangs around a swank country club and makes dates to play nine holes of golf with the first woman of his acquaintance who comes along. If everything progresses well and he finds the lady a congenial companion, he begins his "let's get friendlier" campaign. When his game is up to par, he reaches the "life is so short—let's have fun while we can" stage, before they've gone halfway round the course.

The poor sap committed a tactical error, though, in handing the identical line to a half-dozen lassies. The gals got together one morning and compared notes. And now they're working up a subtle revenge that'll make our hero confine his mash-ie shots to his golf game—but strictly!

Hip-Hip Harry

Don't mention Harry the Hippopotamus within earshot of the Metro research department. During filming of a recent Tarzan picture, a couple of the studio publicity boys thought it would be a sensational idea to get some shots of Harry ferociously splashing around in a tankful of water. Harry's ugly puss, damp, glistening and frightening, could be planted on billboards all over the country to lure kiddies and their parents into theaters, they figured.

One thing remained to be checked. Before they dumped the animal into the aqua, they had to be sure hippos swam. "Why, of course" and "What a silly question!" memo-ed back the research department. "Doesn't the very name come from the Greek hippos (horse) and potamos (river)?"

Reassured, the boys set up the tank, lined up the cameras and maneuvered the hippo onto the runway leading to the water. Harry snorted and snuffled his way along the path, and ever so reluctantly tiptoed into the deep. And as he walked, he began to sink! Deeper and deeper he went, until only a thin line of upward-floating bubbles marked his progress!

After several anxious minutes, Harry was still at the bottom of the tank and showed no sign of coming up. Finally, the prop boys, scared stiff, ran for some pulleys and, with every muscle strained, yanked him to the surface.

To this day, no one knows why Harry didn't rise to the occasion. And the research department is in disgrace. They think maybe the tank was too narrow. Or maybe Harry just wasn't in the mood!

"A Man's Home . . ."

Any house graced by the presence of W. C. Fields is bound to be the House Terrific. We dropped by the Great Man's lair the other A.M. and came away with a notebook crammed with interior decorating suggestions. We'll use 'em if we ever furnish a mad house.

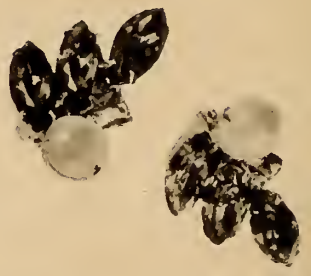
For instance, in his bedroom we found a barber chair, a massage table and an ice cream freezer. Smack in the center of the living room was a tremendous pool table, and the entire building was equipped with an amplifying system. Fields, we discovered, issues orders through a portable mike!

He has a wonderful library, owns all books which mention himself as well as the complete works of his two closest friends, Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler. He subscribes to every magazine printed in the United States, and in his files you'll find anything from the American Mercury to the Mouthwash Digest. He uses them to get ideas for gags!

But the nicest thing about Fields is his talent for good hosting. He is usually barefooted when he greets his company and dressed in cunning blue shorts. If a guest asks for a drink of Scotch, he hands him a full bottle!

And how he does consider the ladies! Lest he offend their tender sensibilities, he has little black curtains spotted over his study wall. They conceal the most risqué pictures this side of Dante's Inferno, and Fields will expose them for men only! (Continued on page 100)

M-G-M's Annie Rutherford adores costume jewelry, thinks it adds slews of chic to her wardrobe.



Glamour on the half-shell—you in these slinky milky white earrings with ruby stones! Wear 'em with full dress or sirenish afternoon togs.

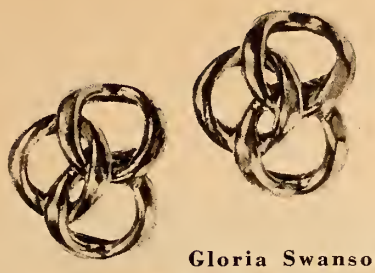
You'll be up to your ears in drama in these Berjac ceramic mask earrings and clips. Who wouldn't turn for a second look?

For making an Impression on him — this delicately moulded gold leaf pin on your right-front shoulder.

For sparkling up your 1940 black, these gold flowers with sapphire centers in a bracelet and pin by Karu.

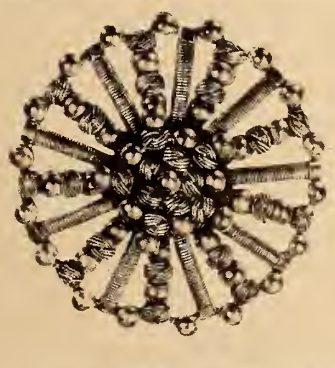
If you go in for the bizarre, you won't want to miss this swirling silver ring with turquoise stone.

By Elizabeth Willguss



Gloria Swanson stuff—these smarter than smart two-tone gold link earrings that look heavenly with sport or dressy garb.

Add a note of whimsy with a glittering white ceramic horse perched on your lapel. Harness and hoofs in gold. By Berjac.



Your leading man won't be able to drag his eyes off this intriguing silver wheel pin modeled on an Indo-Chinese original.

Just the ticket for you sweater-setters. A wooden sport bracelet with leather lacing for that vital feminine touch!

Military tactics in the glittering manner! Pin this shiny trumpet with its swish dangling chain to your lapel. By Karu.

ADD THESE

to your collection

$1 EACH AT LEADING DEPARTMENT STORES.

"ALL AMERICAN CO-ED"

Sparkling MARJORIE WOODWORTH, who has just finished a featured role in Hal Roach's new production, "ALL AMERICAN CO-ED"

Marjorie is wearing the well-tailored, fresh-looking All-American Co-Ed dress. Hers is kelly green. Of Tuscany rayon crepe, it also comes in gold, royal blue, brown and black. Only $7.95 at Kaufmann's, Pittsburgh, or your favorite department store.

FOR THE STORE NEAREST YOU WRITE TO MODERN SCREEN FASHION EDITOR

Picture Book Glamour

Sugar Plum and Gingerbread

Cutex on her fingers, Cutex on her toes, she shall have fun wherever she goes . . . in these gay new picture-book nail shades by Cutex.

SUGAR PLUM—a real fairy-princess color—deep, dark, exciting! GINGERBREAD—warm and amber-tinted—a cunning new snare for your dashing prince charming! There's fairy-tale magic, too, in the way Cutex flows on...in its sparkling, flattering lustre! Only 10¢ in the U. S. If you go in for "simpler sophistication," try the new Cutex charmer—SHEER NATURAL.

Northam Warren, New York

new nail shades by CUTEX

For that "Professional Look"—and Longer Wear USE 2 COATS

GRIP-TUTH...

HOLDS the beauty of your hair-do!

Exclusive!
NOT a comb. Each SPLIT tooth (like tiny spring) grips gently, holds firmly, keeps hair secure — GRIP-TUTH's patented principle!

MARJORIE WOODWORTH
Hal Roach Studios Star

Grip-Tuth slides easily into place . . .

Invisibly holds your coiffure firm!

Hold your coiffure lovely as Hollywood stars do — with Grip-Tuth, the modern, better hair retainer. Any style — waves, curls, puffs — all are kept "beauty-salon-perfect" with Grip-Tuth. The split tooth grips gently, holds firmly, keeps your hair-do secure all day.

NOTE: If notion counter or beauty shop can't supply you, send 25c for card (two retainers). State hair color.

GRIP-TUTH: Diadem, Inc., Leominster, Mass., Dept. 72

Nu-Hesive Surgical Dressings, by our affiliated company, are one of our contributions to National Defense.

Fresh AS A MORNING GLORY

See how gloriously young your skin looks with HAMPDEN'S powder base! It helps hide blemishes, faintly 'tints' your complexion, and keeps it flower fresh for hours and hours.

POWD'R-BASE hampden

25c also 50c & 10c sizes
Over 15 million sold

SKIPPY REMEMBERS

(Continued from page 49)

a minute. And once he got on them, he was glued. He drummed all the afternoon, and there was no rehearsal. But the show at Hugo's went well anyway. Mickey did a slow motion wrestling act that was terrific.

"I'll never forget the time I went over to the Palladium and invited Tommy Dorsey and his entire band over to my house for an afternoon jam session. In the middle of the afternoon, Mickey blew in. He made a bee-line for the drums and treated us to a solo all that afternoon. When it was over I said:

"'Mickey, why don't you just relax, take it easy, and if you want, I'll try to give you a few pointers.'

"And he answered, 'Naw—I'll figure it out myself!'

"That's Mickey. 'I'll figure it out myself.' That must be the key to his success."

WE MADE some comment about Jackie's own success and about the great cinema he acted in when he was eight, "The Champ," which starred Wallace Beery.

"That was some experience, working with Beery," admitted Jackie Cooper. "He loved to tease me. He'd tease me about going to school and he'd call me 'Fat.' I was young and fresh I suppose, so I talked back to him. He was really a big name, and everyone yessed him. And if he was in a bad mood, no one spoke to him. But me, I'd tease him, too, call him, 'Mr. Grouchy'—and he loved it and felt better.

"I remember a lot of things about 'The Champ.' Joan Crawford saw it. She invited me and mother over for dinner. She was married to Doug Fairbanks, Jr., then, and also had a house guest, Tallulah Bankhead. Joan told me to call her by her first name and we became fast friends. She gave me a present, and believe it or not, every year since 1930, she has sent me four—everything from a watch to an atlas—on St. Valentine's Day, Easter, Christmas and my birthday—in return, I've sent presents to her!"

We asked Jackie what he recalled about his first great hit, the unforgettable "Skippy," the seeing of which became a fad like majong and Eskimo Pies. After seeing "Skippy," Helen Ferguson (Jackie's publicity agent) invited Jackie and his mother, Mabel, over to her house. She also invited over half of the University of Southern California football team. Jackie went out on the front lawn and played football with the 200-pound pigskin toters and wouldn't stop until he was panting, bruised and bathed in perspiration!

"My uncle, Norman Taurog, directed 'Skippy,'" Jackie said. "It was a lesson for a youngster. My biggest trouble was crying. Whenever the tears failed, Norman would appear very disappointed. 'Well,' he sighed, 'don't worry about it. But I just somehow figured you were a better actor than you are.' That was enough. I'd bawl like hell."

A favorite of Jackie's was Richard Dix. He remembered the year 1933 when, at the age of eleven, he played in "Donovan's Kid" opposite him.

"Boy, Richard Dix was big in the business," said Jackie. "He helped write and direct his pictures and he starred in them at RKO. He took a liking to me, and he gave me all the breaks. For example, in all the big close-up scenes he would play with his back to the camera to give me a better chance. I'll never forget one scene. Richard Dix was a gangster. I was his kid. He was consoling me. He turned me around, so my face was over his shoulder into the camera and only the back of his neck showed! And another thing. Dix's contract read that his name alone got top billing. Yet he insisted that it be billed Richard Dix and Jackie Cooper in 'Donovan's Kid!'"

And then, of a sudden, we were talking about picture-making itself. Had he ever really enjoyed making a picture?

"You bet. Remember 'The Return of Frank James'? Most of my scenes were riding scenes. And that, to me, was heaven! Because I've always been a bug on riding, and I have a four-year-old horse of my own called Jet Black. I keep him out in the Valley in a public stable, between Jerry Colonna's and Edgar Bergen's horses.

"Anyway, my knowledge about horses—like knowing that you must keep rolling when you fall from a horse—helped me a lot in the Frank James epic. They had an Indian pony I was to ride, but he wasn't a jumper, and they didn't know how to make him jump a three and a half foot fence. So I took him away from the set, piled up boxes which he could kick over without being hurt and taught him to leap. Then I used brush piled higher. Finally he was ready, and he made the solid fence easily in the scene.

"Oh, that Frank James thing was fun. I'll never forget Fonda and my tutor—sitting on the edge of the set arguing about books and trying to stump one another with questions!"

For some reason, the mention of Fonda's name brought another name to Jackie's mind. That of the late Chic Sale, character actor and humorist. Jackie told us he'd played opposite Chic in "When A Feller Needs A Friend."

I DIDN'T even recognize him when he first arrived on the set," admitted Jackie. "In pictures he was always old and wore a beard. But he turned out to be a young man! We were great pals, and he'd have me over to his house to play with his son, Dwight. And when I came over, he always had a present for me."

Jackie then went on to speak of Orson Welles, whom he admired. He had worked with Orson a year ago March in an hour radio version of "Huckleberry Finn." Orson started the radio show off by saying, "There have been nasty and unfounded rumors that I, myself, will attempt to essay the role of Huck Finn. That is an outrageous lie. I have someone here much better, far superior—"

"That was an unforgettable experience," confessed Jackie. "But it was hard work, too. The night before the show we rehearsed from eight at night to four in the morning! Then slept four hours. Got up at eight in the morning and sweated until four in the afternoon, then rested and went on with the show! Whew! Orson rehearsed wearing earphones. I wanted to try them. Most guest actors did, and while Welles always refused, he let me wear the earphones. So in reading lines, I could hear the music and my own voice at the same time—weird—and fatal to many!"

Jackie spoke of Orson Welles' capacity for concentration. Recently, at the USO benefit in Hollywood, Jackie went backstage. The place was a madhouse. Tumult. Activity. Bette Davis retyping a script. Bob Taylor in a heavy discussion.

The orchestra tuning up. Stage helpers running about.

"And there in the middle of the floor, wearing glasses, calmly smoking a pipe, feet propped up on a table, and happily reading a thick book, sat Orson Welles," revealed Jackie. "He spotted me as I entered. 'Jackie,' he said, 'I saw you in "Ziegfeld Girl." I didn't like the picture. I liked you. Keep it up.' Then he wheeled, went back to his chair, to his pipe and to his book on philosophy. What a man!"

Thinking aloud now, the Kid was. One thing and then another. All revealing. Much nostalgic.

"One night I was out on a date with Pat Stewart," he said. "It was about one in the morning. Maybe later. We were coming around a curve on Sunset across from Schwab's drugstore. Another car came weaving toward me. Suddenly it was upon me. I swerved to my right and was forced on the curbing. The other car swerved, hit a post, turned completely over. I stopped, jumped out and raced across the street. I dragged the driver out. A young fellow about my age; drunk but unharmed. Then I rushed around the car, yanked the door open, and the girl tumbled out on her head. She was drunk, too, but absolutely unhurt. I sat her down. And pretty soon she opened one eye, then both.

"'Are you all right?' I asked.

"She stared at me a moment. Then in a split second was on her feet with her arms about me, screaming, 'Wow! You're Jackie Cooper! Don't deny it!'

"That's what I'll always remember as —Fantasy in the Night!"

THERE were other remembrances, little ones and strange . . . The time when Jackie Cooper and his struggling mother had a shack at Venice Park on the ocean, and a blonde named Dixie Lee rented a tiny room from them, and a slight fellow who sang at the Cocoanut Grove dropped around nights to take her walking. He said shyly that his name was Crosby, but you could call him Bing . . . And there was the picture with Deanna Durbin and the fun working on it because Deanna had to have two hours for lunch so she could take her singing lesson, and had to be off at four, so that you never really worked too hard, not really . . . And toiling in "The Ziegfeld Girl" and sitting on a stool for hours chatting with Lana Turner, she so beautiful and so happy to indulge in a bull session about Life . . . And riding on the surf near the breakwater out in front of Fay Bainter's house with the wind in your face and Fay's warnings in your ears . . . And making a "C or D" picture at Metro years ago and watching an extra, a gloomy Russian, get twenty-five dollars for enacting a vicious gangster and thinking that maybe he should be a comedian. Then finding out he had a funny name like Mischa something or other, maybe that last name was Auer . . . And remembering . . .

We were walking back to the Cooper house. And he was saying he didn't ever want to go on the stage especially, that movies were all right, an art and a career in themselves. And that he wanted to make an historically true picture, some day, about an Irish lad who'd formed a guerilla gang to fight the English in the Irish Rebellion and had been killed at his mother's grave. And that, if he continued to earn money, he'd sink more of it into annuities.

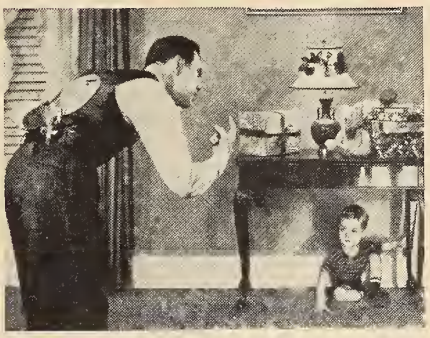
Suddenly the phone in the house rang.

"Excuse me," said Jackie. "That must be Bonita calling!"

His second fifteen years had already started!

"Bill Todd—how can you spank that child on Christmas!"

1. I've always said taking care of kids was a woman's job. But I never realized how much I meant it until my wife went off to the hospital to have our second baby. I was home all alone with young Bill—and boy, was I scared!



2. Things weren't going too badly till Christmas Day. Billy needed a laxative and so I got mine and tried to give him some of it. Well, you've never heard a rumpus like the one Billy made when he saw that laxative!

3. He simply refused to take it. When I tried to force it down him, he got even by spitting it all over my new tie. I was just about to smack him when my wife's sister walked in. She works for a children's doctor.

4. "What are you giving that child?" she asked. "An adult laxative? You could shock his nervous system that way! Billy should get a laxative made especially for children. Doctor recommends Fletcher's Castoria."

5. "You can really rely on Fletcher's Castoria," she added. "It's thorough yet mild. Not a single harsh drug in it. I'll run down and get a bottle right now. It's safe and efficient and I bet it will solve Billy's laxative problems for years!"

6. When she came back, I gave Billy some Fletcher's Castoria and sure enough—he loved it! He even insisted on putting the bottle under the tree with the rest of his presents. We're never without Fletcher's Castoria now. It's the best answer I know to a child's laxative problem.

Now—Mrs. Todd Saves Money on Fletcher's Castoria!

By buying the large family-size bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, you make a worth-while saving. Ask your druggist for the family-size bottle.

Chas. H. Fletcher CASTORIA

The SAFE laxative made especially for children.

the "MacRaymonds" entertain

Smiles of anticipotion from the stors of "Smilin' Through."

By Helen Holmes

HOLLYWOOD'S MOST GRACIOUS COUPLE ARE TOGETHER IN A NEW DOMESTIC ROLE

"For the first time in our four years of marriage, Jeanette and I are sure of having dinner together." We were somewhat startled to say the least, when Gene Raymond made this statement on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer set the other day. Gene and his beautiful wife Jeanette MacDonald are appearing together for the first time in "Smilin' Through."

"Average couples are usually together at dinner time 360 out of 365 days a year," Gene went on. "But in Hollywood joint dinner hours for a husband and wife working in films are rare. And we are having loads of fun being host and hostess to the many friends we've been unable to entertain at the same time before."

Naturally we jumped at the chance to inquire what the "MacRaymonds," as they call themselves for fun, serve when they entertain. And Gene replied that he could do better than tell us. Whereupon he immediately produced the beautiful picture we have printed.

He explained that a photographer was taking some pictures at their home the other day. Every once in a while, a few tantalizing odors would be wafted through the air. Slowly but surely the photographer worked his way toward the kitchen. He arrived just as a gorgeous turkey was taken from the oven. The rest is easy to guess. Gene and Jeanette posed with the turkey just before the guests arrived. A picture worthy of Technicolor.

We were delighted to receive from Jeanette some of her most treasured "company" recipes. The MacRaymond Turkey with Sausage Dressing is as wonderful as it looks in the picture and all the recipes are grand for holiday entertaining.

AVOCADO AND SHRIMP COCKTAIL

1 large avocado
½ lb. fresh shrimps
½ cup chili sauce
1 teaspoon bottled horse radish
½ teaspoon Worcestershire
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon salt

Chill avocado, cook shrimps in boiling salted water gently for 15 to 20 minutes. Remove shells and dark veins. Chill. Blend together chili sauce, horse radish, Worcestershire, lemon juice, mayonnaise and salt. Shortly before serving, peel avocado and cut in cubes. Arrange avocado with shrimp in 6-8 sherbet glasses, then top each with some of the sauce. Garnish with lettuce and a wedge of lemon.

ROAST TURKEY

Select turkey, have it drawn and singed. Have it weighed after it is drawn and make a note of this weight. Remove pin feathers and wash turkey. Dry thoroughly, rub inside with onion and salt. Fill the neck and body cavities with stuffing. Sew and truss. Rub outside of turkey with onion and unsalted fat (salad oil is the best). Place in an uncovered roasting pan, do not add water. Roast according to the chart on page 77.

To Make the Gravy: Pour off excess fat in the pan after removing bird. If there is a good quantity of drippings in the pan, add from one to two quarts of boiling water. If the quantity of drippings is small be careful not to dilute the flavor by adding too much water. Add salt and pepper to taste and boil gently. Scrape all brown substances which adhere to pan into the gravy. In a small bowl place a level tablespoon of flour for each cup of liquid in pan. Add enough cold water and beat to make a thin roux. Add this to the liquid in the pan, stirring constantly and boiling. Cook gently for 5 minutes.

For Giblet Gravy: Saute in butter or other fat the giblets and an onion. Remove the liver, which should be sufficiently cooked. Add water to cover the remaining giblets, season and simmer until tender. Mince the giblets and add them to the gravy. The broth from the giblets may be used in place of part or all of the water in the gravy.

SAVORY SAUSAGE DRESSING

3 qts. stale (not hard) bread crumbs
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
1 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon pepper
¾ cup butter
½ cup chopped onion
1 egg
1 pound sausage meat

Combine bread crumbs with seasonings. Saute onions and celery until tender in the butter in a very large skillet. Add crumbs and brown, stirring crumbs from the bottom. Saute the sausage meat and break it up in

(Continued on page 77)

Maybe You Have a Cinderella, too

Who's this? . . . Not that drab little thing who's never been dated. Not 'Droopy', the one that always looked like a fugitive from a washtub. Say . . . she's smooth!

• • •

It's sad to see a gay, young spirit, stifled by dingy, half-washed dresses. But not serious. Nothing a bar of Fels-Naptha Soap can't cure.

Keeping a school girl's varied wardrobe thoroughly clean is no job for ordinary soap. Party dresses to wash gently. Grime to get out of rough and tumble things. Gay colors to keep clear and bright. And sweaters—oodles of them every week!

To this complicated washing job Fels-Naptha Soap brings two extraordinary cleaners. Gentle, active naptha and richer, golden soap. These two get dirt out—all of it—with little rubbing and no rough handling. Quickly, too—and that's important.

Probably your own disposition will keep pace with daughter's 'oomph' rating, if you start using Fels-Naptha Soap—now.

Golden bar or Golden chips—
Fels-Naptha
banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

EX-LAX MOVIES

MOTHER KNOWS BEST

MOTHER: You haven't heen yourself all day. I think you need a laxative.

ALICE: O-h, Mommy! Do I have to take that nasty old medicine again?

MOTHER: No, Darling. Here's a laxative you'll really enjoy. It's Ex-Lax!

ALICE: Yummy, this is fun to take! It tastes just like swell chocolate.

MOTHER: You slept like a top all night. How did that Ex-Lax work?

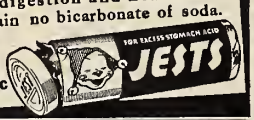
ALICE: Fine, Mommy! And it didn't upset me the way that other laxative did.

The action of Ex-Lax is thorough, yet gentle! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable movement that brings blessed relief. Ex-Lax is not too strong—not too mild—just right. Take Ex-Lax according to the directions on the label. It's good for every member of the family. 10c and 25c at all drug stores.

EX-LAX The Original Chocolated Laxative

GASSY STOMACH Get fast, longer relief from excess stomach acid discomforts with JESTS! Great for acid indigestion and heartburn. Taste good. Contain no bicarbonate of soda. Guaranteed by the makers of Ex-Lax.

10c A ROLL—3 for 25c



FREE HOLLYWOOD ENLARGEMENT

Just to get acquainted we will make a beautiful PROFESSIONAL enlargement of any snapshot, photo, kodak picture, print or negative to 5 x 7 inch FREE. Please include color of eyes, hair, and clothing for prompt information on a natural, life-like color enlargement in a FREE FRAME to set on the table or dresser. Your original returned with your FREE PROFESSIONAL enlargement. Please send 10c for return mailing—Act Quick.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. 120
HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

ABOUT FACE FOR WINTER . . .

(Continued from page 57)

ducts are concentrated along the nose, chin and forehead, and these parts may be giving off too much oil while others lack sufficient lubrication. Cleanliness, of course, is your first step in taking care of this type of skin. Then use drying methods for the too-oily parts and provide supplementary lubrication to the dry areas. Whenever possible, cleanse your face thoroughly before renewing make-up and be sure that your puffs for powder and rouge are always fresh and dainty.

No matter what type of complexion you have, blackheads are inevitable when skin has been improperly cleansed and the pores become clogged. They're most deglamorizing, so get rid of them as soon as possible. The minor ones will come out of their own accord after a few days of faithful scrubbing. You can remove stubborn ones by softening your face with a towel wrung out in hot water and pressing them out with a sterilized comedo extractor. Never use your fingers for this operation, for they may carry infection. In fact, it's a good idea to keep hands away from your face at all times. After removing the blackheads, touch the parts with alcohol or some other antiseptic to ward off possible infection.

An unexpected engagement can be a source of delight—if your face is always ready to meet an emergency. Even after a hard day's work, you can look glowing and rested if you know how to give your complexion a quick pick-up. If your face feels drawn and dry, cleanse it thoroughly, then slather on a rich tissue cream, leaving it on while you bathe. After removing the cream with tissue, apply a stimulating tonic that will give your complexion a becoming pink hue. Or, you may find time for a stimulating facial mask—they're available either for dry or oily skin—that will soften lines and leave your skin clear and lovely. A clear, soft complexion is the only background for other cosmetics.

Take care of your skin now if you want to keep it always young and lovely.

WHAT'S YOUR SKIN SCORE?

(Continued from page 59)

of tweezers and press ever so gently. Cleansing tissue or a clean, soft kerchief or towel should be used between fingernails and face to prevent scarring skin.

Q. How can I cover skin blemishes?

A. There are excellent skin-colored creams, pastes and sticks especially made for just such purposes. Tinted make-up foundation bases are also helpful. Match your powder to your deepest skin tone, also to your make-up base. Offset blemishes with extra-bright make-up.

Q. Why should I use facial tissues?

A. Because dirt, germs and grime collecting on towels, kerchiefs and all materials used more than once, may cause skin infections, etc. Tissues are clean, gentle, sanitary, economical (they save lots of laundry) and also very convenient.

Q. What shall I do for an adolescent skin?

A. Scrub, scrub and scrub again, morning, noon and night with a soft, clean complexion brush, mild soap and soft water. Use a bland, non-greasy cream or lotion for protecting as well as for a powder base. Do not use heavy, oily creams. Liquefying cleansing creams are best for you. Use only simple cosmetics and these sparingly if any inflammation or broken skin is present. Get plenty of sleep, sunshine, outdoor exercise, eat simple foods and drink quarts of water. Special beauty grains and skin cleansers may be used once or twice weekly. Avoid rich foods.

Q. What is a good, simple daily skin care routine?

A. Do your soap and water scrubbing at night so that pores are left clean and free to breathe while you sleep. If skin is dry, follow with a lubricating cream. If skin is oily, repeat this cleansing in the morning. If it is dry, use water only and a cold or dry skin cleansing cream. Remove excess with tissue, apply foundation base, then make-up. Cleanse thoroughly at least once in mid-day. Repair make-up when needed. Use astringent on an oily skin, a lubricant on dry skin, the very last thing every night.

ABC's OF SKIN CARE

(Continued from page 55)

stopping at each temple. (Never massage dry, unlubricated skin. And pat—don't stretch or pull.)

Fourth. Continue your massage using deep rotary movements around the mouth, especially over the parenthesis lines on either side. Then with a lighter, gentler touch massage up beside your nose and around under each eye to the temples. Repeat this several times.

Fifth. Your forehead should be stroked firmly upward and outward, then horizontally across the entire length. Besides cleansing, this relaxes tired nerves.

Sixth. Massage front of neck with upward strokes and use a rotary motion around sides and back.

Seventh. With cotton or facial tissue moistened in skin freshener, remove all cream. You'll be surprised how much deeply embedded soil comes with it. And how soft and comfortable your skin feels.

Eighth. Now spread on a rich, lubricating cream if your skin is normal or dry. (If it's oily, skip this step.) Leave lubricating cream on for five or ten minutes, if possible. While you're waiting, lie down and relax, covering each closed eye with a bit of cotton wrung out in cold water, eye lotion or skin freshener.

Ninth. Remove this cream with tissue or cotton wrung out in astringent (skin freshener).

Tenth. Your face is ready for make-up, and this you already know how to apply, if you've been following our last three or four articles.

If your skin is sluggish or oily, treat it to a circulation mask every week or two. These stimulate circulation and may leave a slightly tingling or burning sensation, but it is all in a good cause and will really do a much-needed job for you. Follow with a lubricating cream if skin feels uncomfortable. However, don't use a circulation mask if your skin is thin, dry or has broken veins.

In that case use a pick-up type of mask, of which you'll find several good ones in any variety, drug or department store. These create an illusion of beauty, leaving the skin fresh and pleasantly glowing. These masks are usually in cream form and are refreshingly scented to give an added lift to your spirits.

There are also masks to help contract enlarged pores and to aid in dislodging

(Continued on page 74)

PROTECT YOUR NAILS

make them more beautiful

with DURA-GLOSS

3 NEW COLORS

Spicy DURA-GLOSS Shades

RED PEPPER CINNAMON NUTMEG

Spice-Colored BEDFORD DRESSES to harmonize at leading department stores

What a lovely feeling it is—to spread out your ten fingers, newly-jeweled in lustrous Dura-Gloss, and admire their unequalled beauty! No, no other polish is quite as satisfying! For Dura-Gloss brings with it that peace of mind that comes from having the best manicure and the most beautiful fingernails in the world!

It's good to know he'll look at those fingers—take them in his hand. Good to know you'll be admired. No woman who wears Dura-Gloss ever went wanting for compliments, or for something to say herself! And so many millions have switched to Dura-Gloss that it's no wonder America has a real affection for this new and different nail polish formula!

Are your fingernails the most beautiful? Ask yourself this question, now —and examine Dura-Gloss closely, at any cosmetic counter. Not a dollar. Just a tiny dime!

WHY DURA-GLOSS EXCELS

To produce a polish that yields exceptional wear, that does not chip off readily, that dries hard with unparalleled brilliance, the Dura-Gloss formula contains a specially formulated resin almost identical to the world's most treasured resins which come from fossilized trees buried deep in the earth since prehistoric times. (Amber, from which precious jewelry is made, is one of these resins . . . cherished for its exceptional gem-like hardness and incomparable luster.) This is why Dura-Gloss puts a finish on your nails of such surpassing brilliance, luster and adhesion. See for yourself what a marvelous polish Dura-Gloss is . . . do it today!

10¢

at beauty counters everywhere

DURA-GLOSS

Lorr Laboratories,
Paterson, New Jersey
Founded by E. T. Reynolds

FOR THE MOST BEAUTIFUL FINGERNAILS IN THE WORLD

Make a date with summer this winter!

Take the trip on pocket money . . in Super-Coach warmth and comfort

Let a Greyhound Super-Coach turn winter into summer for you—in practically no time at all, and for a lot less money than you'd think! Meet up with the sun months ahead of schedule—beside the sea in Florida, golfing along the Gulf, getting brown as an Indian out in the Hopi country of the Southwest, or taking life easiest in California. When you go by Greyhound it's a sightseeing trip all the way —and you have your choice of an entirely different trip coming back, at no extra cost. In fact, the money you save on Greyhound's low fares will buy extra vacation pleasures, extra vacation clothes. So keep your date with summer—now!

Send coupon to nearest of these Greyhound offices:

New York City • Cleveland, Ohio • Philadelphia, Penna. Chicago, Illinois • Fort Worth, Texas • Minneapolis, Minn. San Francisco, Calif. • Boston, Mass. • Washington, D. C. Detroit, Michigan • St. Louis, Missouri • Lexington, Kentucky Charleston, West Virginia • Cincinnati, Ohio • Richmond, Virginia • Memphis, Tennessee • New Orleans, Louisiana

GREYHOUND

Mail this coupon to nearest Greyhound Information Office, listed above, for a full-color pictorial booklet, "FLORIDA TRAVELOGUE" ☐, or "CALIFORNIA—ALL THE WEST" ☐. Please check the one desired.

Name _____

Address _____ MO-12

blackheads. These might be called pore masks when you go shopping for them. They are deeply penetrating and stimulating and require from ten to thirty minutes to apply. Don't ever apply a mask on a face that's less than immaculately clean. And whenever possible, relax or rest while it's doing its good work.

In our article "About Face For Winter" in this issue, you'll find a lot of other helpful tips on cold weather skin care. And in our "Chart" and "Skin Score Quiz" are many other useful suggestions. So let it never be said we haven't tried our best to arm you well against one of skin's most aging and deglamorizing foes —Old Man Winter with his allies, cold and changeable weather.

Give your face a special treat after cleansing by using Pond's Dreamflower Freshener with a cotton dab or cleansing tissue. It gently invigorates circulation, making your complexion feel fresh and tingly and giving it a glowing, healthy color. Dreamflower Freshener comes in a smart bottle with a low rounded base which rises to a graceful stem—a charming addition to your dressing table.

Did you ever stop to consider that hands need as much care as faces, for they get just as much attention? You can keep yours smooth and youthful by using Irresistible "Whip-Text" Hand Cream regularly. It's neither sticky nor greasy and goes on easily, leaving your hands alluringly soft and lovely. Why not try a jar today?

It's easier to look fresh and dainty when you have your beauty aids all assembled in one convenient place. Princess Pat "Keep Neat" Kit is the ideal ensemble for school and business girls and busy women everywhere. It contains eight important beauty aids besides a complexion sponge and cleansing tissues. It's handy for week-end visits.

Flattering, shapely fingertips are a "must" for every well-groomed girl. If your nails are broken and unattractive, give them extra lubrication by applying Cutex Brittle Nail Cream after you wash your hands and nightly before retiring. Used regularly, it will help to restore nails to health and pliancy.

LONG DISTANCE LOVE

(Continued from page 26)

at fourteen. It sounded silly. But no boy had ever made her feel the way Jaime did. It wasn't his looks so much, though he was good to look at—slender, broad-shouldered, clear olive skin, soft brown eyes under dark hair. With his continental finish, his poise and quiet courtliness, he seemed older than his twenty years and made to order for romance. These things undoubtedly drew her. What held her was the quality she recognized below his surface charm—a combined gentleness and strength, a devotion to principle, a depth of feeling which he kept under rigid control. She couldn't have analyzed all this, but she felt it—felt it so strongly that the catalogue of his virtues sometimes overwhelmed her, and she found it hard to believe that this paragon had fallen for her.

He left room for no doubt on that score. From the day he set eyes on her, there was only Linda in the world. Every day they walked home from school together. He came to see her every night. Now and then they'd go out to dance, but Mrs. Darnell frowned on too many outside dates, so they'd throw back the living room rug and dance at home. Jaime gravely approved the rules of Linda's mother. Where he came from, girls older than Linda were chaperoned as a matter of course.

Because of the troubles in Spain, the elder Jorba had sent Jaime and his mother from Barcelona to stay with kin in Mexico City. His mother was there now. Handicapped by his lack of English, Jaime had applied for a visitor's visa and stopped over in Dallas to take English classes at the high school. His visa would be up on May 29th. They tried not to think about it.

Linda told him she wanted to be an actress. He didn't pretend to like it. The idea was repugnant to all the instincts rooted in him by training and background. He tried to understand and, in all honesty, didn't succeed too well. "Actresses drink," he said gloomily.

Linda swore she wouldn't.

"They say such things about Hollywood—"

"It's mostly talk—"

"You'll change—"

"If I do, it'll be my fault, not Hollywood's. But I won't change, Jaime. Anyway, I don't think so—"

He took her hand. "Linda, some day you'll be my wife—" He'd said that before. It sounded like a fairytale, but she never knew quite how to answer, so she kept quiet. "Couldn't you give this up—?"

"I can't remember when I haven't wanted to be an actress, Jaime. I've got to try—"

"Well—then you've got to try. But promise me one thing," he went on earnestly. "Don't let them put too many paints on your face." She had to laugh then. He hated make-up, hated to see her use anything but lipstick. With Jaime she walked around, looking pale.

His visa was extended to June 4th, when school closed. As part of the final assembly program, Linda was to tell about her Hollywood experience. Jaime watched from his seat in the auditorium. She looked so lovely and spoke so simply —no airs, no arrogance, no preening—a girl as sweet as her face. Tomorrow he'd have to go and when would he ever see her again? His jaw tightened. Next day he told her that he wasn't leaving yet.

Linda, steeled for farewells, found herself torn between joy and conscience. His mother was waiting for him in Mexico City. The immigration authorities had been kind, but what would they say to this? Well, Jaime hadn't asked her, he'd told her. She couldn't force him to go, she reminded her conscience. He stayed through June and July. There were certain technicalities, and for a while the immigration people looked the other way. It was like living at the edge of a precipice, but Linda refused to peer over the edge.

One night Jaime said: "Some friends of my uncle are coming in tomorrow. I'll have to spend my time with them. So I won't be seeing you for a few days." That was on August 14th. On the 19th came a letter postmarked Mexico City. "If I'd had to say good-by to you," wrote Jaime, "I should never have been able to go."

It was weeks before she quit crying herself to sleep. He'd grown into the warp and woof of her life, and now he was gone. "And I never even told him I loved him, I never kissed him once," she sobbed into her pillow. Not that she hadn't cared enough. Once or twice, dancing together, she knew that Jaime had wanted to kiss her. But sensing her shyness, knowing that she'd never been kissed, Jaime forbore. Well, she couldn't kiss him by mail, but the second oversight could be remedied without any more stupid waste of time. She wrote him that she loved him. And carried his exultant answer around with her till it fell apart.

This is a love story, so we needn't go into the details of Linda's return to Hollywood. There was a beauty contest, which brought her again to the notice of the studios. Six months after she and Jaime had parted, she was under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox. Her first letter from Hollywood was not to her mother, but to him.

"If it makes you happy, I'll try to be happy for you," he wrote. But he wasn't a good pretender. He hated to see her being kissed by other men, even in a picture. He hated to feel that she belonged in a sense to the public, whose approval had brought her success. When the gossip columns chattered of her dates with Mickey Rooney, Linda got a letter that made her hair curl. "Look, my darling," she wrote, "I can't stay home every night. I've got to go out with someone. Let the columns say what they like. It's you I love, and nobody else."

SHE was fifteen when she made "Hotel for Women." She was eighteen in October. Older heads have been addled, but good, by the dizzy whirl of a movie star's life. Linda kept her own values. You meet all kinds in Hollywood, as anywhere else. Lots of them called her a prude. She didn't smoke. She refused to be kissed or mauled. The maternal eye was still vigilant, and she didn't seem to mind. She'd promised Jaime not to drink and kept the promise at no cost to herself. To her the stuff tasted nasty. "You'll get over it," she was told. "Let me know when you've had your first drink. I'll buy you your second." People thought you were queer if you didn't do things their way. "So I'm queer," said Linda.

She met many men who were both charming and attentive. Except for Jaime, she might have been attracted. How could she tell? For Jaime was always there, her talisman and gauge. Who else would be so constant, loving her thousands of miles away? Who else would try so patiently to understand her? True, he didn't always succeed, but by golly, he tried. The others could get along nicely without her. Jaime couldn't. Puppy love, they called it. Maybe. She had her own yardstick. She'd discovered it one day when a boy she'd gone out with had turned jealous. Linda was furious. She refused to see him again. Yet Jaime was jealous, and she gloried in it. "That proves it," she cried to herself, as one who's stumbled on proof of a miracle. "It means he has a right to be jealous, because I belong to him."

Their letters flew to each other by every mailplane. She'd rush back from a couple of days at Palm Springs to be at home when his letter was due. They made plans which came to nothing. Linda couldn't get time enough between pictures to go to Mexico. Jaime applied for a visitor's visa, but the record of his former overstay worked against him. After wangling a ten-day permit at last, he fell ill at Nogales on his way north. Didn't recover till the ten days were up.

He wrote that his mother was returning to Spain. He wasn't going with her. He

LI'L ABNER by AL CAPP

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

OH UNHAPPY SADIE HAWKINS DAY!!- THET THUNDERIN' HERD IS GAININ' ON M-ME!!!
AH'LL KETCH HIM!!- WE'LL MAKE A MIGHTY HAN'SOME COUPLE!!
AH AIMS T' KETCH TH' LUCKY DAWG AN' MAKE HIM MAH BLUSHIN' BRIDE-GROOM!
AH IS GITTIN' MIGHTY WEAK!!- ONLY OLD MAN MOSE KIN SAVE ME NOW!!!
THAR HE GOES, ACROSS TH' RAVEEN!
MAH SON-YO' CAIN'T RESISK TROUBLE WIF-OUT PLENTY O' RESISKIN' VITAMINS AN' MINERALS!- HAVE A BOWL OF THIS 5-MINUTE CREAM OF WHEAT AN' SEE WHUT HAPPENS!!
OH DEE-LISHUS CREAM OF WHEAT! MAH FAV'RITE FOOD!!
GULP!- TH' BRIDGE IS UP!!- HE SAVED HIMSELF - TH' COWARD!!
OH MOURN-FUL SADIE HAWKINS DAY!!
'TWERE JEST LIKE MAMMY COOKS!- SO EASY T' DIGEST!-
NO MATTER WHO COOKS CREAM OF WHEAT -IT'S ALLUS GOOD!
OLD MAN MOSE IS RIGHT!! DELICIOUS 5-MINUTE CREAM OF WHEAT GIVES YOU EXTRA VITAMIN B1 AND BODY-BUILDING MINERALS AT LESS THAN 1¢ A SERVING!!
VITAMIN B1!
5-MINUTES!
IRON!
PHOSPHORUS!
CALCIUM!
5 MINUTE
CREAM OF WHEAT REGULAR
CREAM OF WHEAT

Capr. 1941, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"5-MINUTE" AND "REGULAR"

"Cream of Wheat" Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

*ROGERS
SILVERPLATE
by Oneida Ltd.
silversmiths
EXTRA SILVER WHERE YOU NEED IT
ONEIDA LTD.
ONEIDA LTD.
This MARK IS YOUR GUARANTEE
*The ONEIDA LTD. name — a mark of quality — appears on the back of these Oneida Ltd. lines:
WM. A. ROGERS
1881 ROGERS
Simeon L. & George H. Rogers Company

didn't say it was because of Linda, but he didn't have to. Linda was frantic. Jaime's parents weren't young. Suppose something happened and he wasn't there, it would be her fault. She'd have to see him. For his sake and hers, she must make sure that he wasn't staying for nothing. More than two years had gone by. Maybe people were right when they called it puppy love, said she'd get over it, meet someone who shared her background. She had to find out.

Her agent had arranged for her to make a personal appearance at the Kansas City Horse Show. "Would there be time for me to go down to Mexico City after that?" she asked him.

WELL, maybe I could fix up a few personals there—"

"I don't want any personals. I want to see the boy I'm in love with and find out whether I'm still in love with him—"

It was managed. Instead of a fee, the Horse Show Committee agreed to give Linda and her mother round-trip plane fares to Mexico City. She wrote Jaime. He wanted to meet her at the border. "Don't even meet me at the airport," she begged. "I couldn't bear having a lot of people around. Come to the hotel."

The plane flight was an agony of suspense and doubt. A dozen times she asked herself, shall I turn back? Of course she wouldn't, but there was relief in the thought. It would save her the crucial moment of meeting. Suppose he'd changed. That would be bad enough. Suppose he found her changed. That would be worse—

She didn't feel changed. Yet by all logic the thing was impossible. She'd been fourteen, she'd known him five months, their worlds were alien. He was a Spaniard, bred to the tradition that women belonged on a pedestal, to be bossed and adored. She was an American, high-spirited, independent—yet less independent with him than with anyone else—selfish as the next one, too, else she'd be willing to give up her career—

The questions beat against her brain, and there were no answers. The plane landed at four. She was met by studio representatives. This trip was scheduled as a vacation, but she was resigned to the fact that there would be certain obligations to discharge, courtesies to exchange. She only hoped there wouldn't be too many. At the hotel she bathed and changed, put on her simplest dress, removed all the make-up she could stand seeing herself without. The bell rang. "Dear Lord," prayed Linda, "don't let anything happen now. Let him like me still—" Linda's eyes met Jaime's, and all the questions were answered.

Not till later that evening did they have a few minutes alone. After dinner the studio people came in to discuss plans. "Look," said Linda, "I didn't come down for the scenery or for work. I came down to see a friend of mine. This is he—" They were polite, but publicity was their job. Jaime stood stiffly aside, saying neither yea nor nay. This was Linda's business. When they'd gone, Linda went into his arms. They kissed for the first time—

In bed that night she cried her heart out. It was Dallas all over again, only worse. They couldn't marry nor even make plans. Apart from everything else, she felt sure that Jaime wouldn't marry her while she worked. Some girls could combine career and matrimony—but not with Jaime as a husband. Jaime in Hollywood—that was a bad joke. They'd think him a prude.

As it turned out, even those three weeks in Mexico weren't their own. Much as she liked Jaime, Mrs. Darnell felt that Linda was still too young to go about unchaperoned. Four days were given to interviews. Photographers pleaded in vain with Jaime for pictures. When a camera bore down, he faded into the background. The official tendency, on the other hand, was to soft-pedal him. Till Linda, quietly as always, said: "Unless he comes to the party, I won't be there." Or at the suggestion that he be seated at the far end of a table, "His place is right beside me." When there was dancing, she danced only with Jaime or her host. If she forgot, he had only to look and down she sat, outwardly demure, secretly enchanted. They went to see "Brigham Young" together, which proved a mistake. During the love scenes, Jaime looked the other way. Then the manager turned the spotlight on them. Jaime sat white-lipped, and Linda felt like a heel. "It proves his point," she thought miserably. "That you don't belong to yourself even, much less to him." Their happiest day was spent going through the beautiful church of Our Lady of Guadelupe. Jaime bought two crosses for Linda, one ebony, one silver.

THE last night came. As they stood on the hotel balcony together, Jaime reached for his billfold and took out a worn St. Anthony. "I don't like you to fly, Linda, but since you must, I want you to have this. My mother gave it to me, I give it to you, my St. Anthony will keep you safe—" They stood looking out over the city lights. Then— "How much longer will you have to work?"

"My contract has five years to go—"

"Darling, won't you give it up?"

The answer came painfully. "I can't, Jaime. I've had such wonderful breaks. I can't say good-by and toss it all out of the window. In five years I'll be twenty-two. That's not so old," she whispered in a forlorn bid for a laugh that didn't come off. They clung together, knowing that five years was eternity.

The plane left at seven-thirty. Jaime had breakfast, then drove to the airport with them. Linda was sure nobody else would get up at six to see them off. But she'd reckoned without her hosts. A Mexican band was there, playing "Good-by, Linda." Delegations were there, filling her arms with roses. A girl and boy wanted to say good-by, but the girl was a movie queen, so they couldn't. Dry-eyed now, Linda pulled a rosebud from her armful. She and Jaime parted with a formal handclasp. No one could see that the rosebud had changed hands. The plane took off. The crowd scattered. Only Jaime stood there, waving his handkerchief, while the ship circled the field.

Their letters still fly to each other by every mail plane. The silver cross or the ebony always hangs round Linda's throat on a silver chain. The worn St. Anthony is tucked in with her driver's license. They go on hoping. Maybe Jaime will get in under the quota. Maybe they'll marry. Maybe a miracle will happen. Through the welter of uncertainties, one light shines clear. They love each other.

THE MacRAYMONDS ENTERTAIN

(Continued from page 71)

small pieces. Place all in a large bowl, add beaten egg and broth to moisten. Toss together with a fork. This will stuff a 12-pound turkey.

CRANBERRY-APPLE RELISH

Put 2 cups cranberries and 1 pared, cored apple through the food chopper, using coarse blade. Quarter one orange and ½ lemon, but do not remove the skin. Remove seeds; then put the fruit and skin through the food chopper. Add 1¼ cups granulated sugar to the fruit mixture, and blend well. Chill several hours before serving. Makes 3 cups.

ORANGE CHARLOTTE

4 teaspoons granulated gelatin
⅓ cup cold water
⅓ cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup orange juice and pulp
3 egg whites
½ pint cream

Soak gelatin in cold water. Dissolve sugar in hot water, add gelatin and fruit juices. Chill in refrigerator, when thick beat until frothy. Add egg whites stiffly beaten and fold in whipped cream. Line a quart melon mold with sections of oranges which have been drained on paper towels. Fill mold with mixture and chill on rack in refrigerator for several hours. Unmold and serve in slices. Serves eight to ten persons.

ROASTING TEMPERATURES

(Use uncovered roaster) (Add no water)

TURKEY Weight		Temperature Slow Oven	Time
10 lbs.	drawn	(300°F)	30 min. per lb.
10 to 15 lbs.	drawn	(300°F)	20 min. per lb.
15 to 20 lbs.	drawn	(300°F)	18 min. per lb.

INFORMATION DESK
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

See RITA HAYWORTH in "You'll Never Get Rich"—a Columbia Picture

ROYAL CROWN
COLA
"My favorite cola"
says lovely Rita Hayworth
"Winter or summer . . . I like the lift of a frosty bottle of Royal Crown Cola!"

How Rita proved one cola tastes best . . .

"THEY GAVE ME leading colas in plain paper cups," says Hollywood's Rita Hayworth. "And there was so much difference in taste—well, it didn't take me two seconds to pick my favorite! 'This is it!' I announced.

"'OKAY, SWEETHEART, you and the United States agree,' they told me. 'It's ROYAL CROWN Cola!' Winter and summer, it's my favorite pick-up now." (Only 5¢ for a big bottle that fills not one but two full glasses!)

ROYAL CROWN
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
COLA
Best by Taste-Test!

PICK UP A CARTON . . . AND LET IT PICK YOU UP

COPYRIGHT 1941, NEHI CORP.

"The man who came to dinner"

Monty believes his part is more of a satire on Geo. Bernard Shaw than on Alexander Woollcott. Throughout the film, his greeting to Bette is, "Hello, Repulsive."

To Monty Woolley goes the doubtful distinction of being the most famous dinner guest in America. In two years he sat through 738 consecutive Broadway performances of "The Man Who Came To Dinner," wearing out four pairs of pants in the process!

Today, at Warner Bros., hitched into new trousers, Woolley is busily enacting the rascally, mean, delightful "Man" for the 739th time, only taking time from his labors to cast an occasional superior sneer in the direction of such second-rate diner-outers as Elsa Maxwell, Carol of Rumania and a long line of Hollywood moochers.

With his contours ensconced in the same wheel-chair that embraced Herbert Marshall's in "The Little Foxes," he is breathing new venom into his role of the distinguished bearded lecturer, Sheri-

In the movie, Nurse Mary Wickes endures one insult after another, but look what goes on when the camera's back is turned!

Dick Travis (Bette Davis' discovery and now her leading man) weighs an even 200 pounds. Has one burning ambition in life—to meet Babs Stanwyck!

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Penguin Pete was given to Warners by Admiral Byrd. He has a stand-in!

dan Whiteside, who slips on an icy pavement as he arrives to take dinner with a pleasant, respectable Mid-Western family. The family, consisting of Billie Burke, Grant Mitchell and their two children, finds itself stuck with the great man till the broken leg, incurred in his fall, is mended.

In the four weeks he is with them, Sheridan Whiteside makes a roaring hell of their peaceful household. He forbids the family to step out of their upstairs bedrooms! He threatens violence if they dare use their own telephone—then himself calls Bali, London, Paris and Tokyo! He fills the house with wild-eyed murderers, paroled from the county jail, a deadly octopus, four penguins, a mummy case and a dozen Chinese students! He also entertains lively eccentrics like Ann Sheridan, Reginald Gardiner and (Continued on page 80)

Cake gives Durante hives, but he has to eat it in "Dinner." Told Monty, "My body never had a blemish until I came to woik in this pitcher."

ON THE AIR AND EVERYWHERE, IT'S—

FINER PLEASURE PLUS REAL PROTECTION
AMERICA'S FINEST CIGARETTE

YOU CAN'T HELP INHALING—BUT
YOU CAN HELP YOUR THROAT!

IT'S a fact—all smokers sometimes inhale. More smoke reaches delicate nose and throat passages. And chances of irritation increase! But now look at the findings of eminent doctors who compared five leading brands of cigarettes... and report that:

IN STRIKING CONTRAST TO PHILIP MORRIS—IRRITANT EFFECTS OF THE FOUR OTHER LEADING BRANDS AVERAGED THREE TIMES AS HIGH—AND LASTED MORE THAN FIVE TIMES AS LONG!

Some inhaling goes with smoking... but worry about throat irritation need not go with inhaling. Change now to PHILIP MORRIS — for pleasure without penalties. Why wait?

Help Yourself to Beauty 3 Important Ways

See How Much This Medicated Cream Can Do for Your Skin

★ ★ ★

★ Nurses were the first to discover the extraordinary merit of this snow-white, greaseless, MEDICATED cream, Noxzema—both as an aid to complexion beauty and for the relief of red, chapped hands. Now more than 15 million jars of Noxzema are sold yearly! Women everywhere use it as a night cream and powder base to help improve poor complexion, also to help keep hands soft, smooth.

The reason Noxzema does so much is because it's not just a cosmetic cream. It's MEDICATED. (1) It helps heal externally-caused pimples and the tiny cracks in chapped skin. (2) It helps smooth and soften rough, dry skin. (3) It has a mildly astringent action.

Why not get a jar of Noxzema and try using it for just 10 days? See if you don't notice it helping your skin grow smoother, softer, clearer!

SPECIAL OFFER! Here's your chance to try Noxzema at a real saving! Right now all drug and cosmetic counters are featuring the big 75¢ jar for only 49¢—for a limited time only. Get a jar today, and see how much it can do to help you!

SOLVE THE HOSIERY SHORTAGE

BY DYEING YOUR OLD "ODD" STOCKINGS INTO LOVELY MATCHED PAIRS WITH RIT

• Just take those unmated stockings (honestly, haven't you a drawerful?) and dye them with gentle RIT! You'll get extra pairs this way that cost hardly anything . . . saving precious silk hosiery that is hard to get. Saving dollars, too!

• RIT is quick, easy and sure to please. If you are dyeing one dark and one light stocking, it's best to take the color out of both with White RIT. Then re-dye any shade you prefer. Especially popular shades are Rust, Tan and Light Brown; also Black! At your nearest store.

28 Colors
Sold everywhere

NEVER SAY DYE... SAY RIT TINTS & DYES

Jimmy Durante, and tries to crack up the romance existing between his bright-as-a-button secretary, Bette Davis, and her newspaperman-lover, Richard Travis.

Out of character, Monty Woolley is only slightly less capricious. Born with the fancy tag of Edgar Montillion Woolley 53 years ago in New York City, he got his book-larnin' in private schools and wound up at Yale University where Songwriter Cole Porter was his closest pal. Later he taught drama at Yale and numbered among his students Thornton Wilder, Philip Barry and Stephen Vincent Benet. Before switching to acting, he took a shot at stage direction and once fired instructions at a freak-nosed comic named Jimmy Durante. He loves explosive designs in ties, hates fresh air and exercise, always keeps his windows shut and blinds drawn and would sleep 20 hours a day if he didn't have to earn a living.

WOOLLEY can thank his beard for putting him where he is today. Being the only genuine article in the business, it's pushed him into breaks clean-shaven chins would never get. He sprouted it 13 years ago just for the devil of it, but had it in mind long before then. As a whiskerless lad, he used to startle the skin off his mother by turning up in false beavers!

In Hollywood, the muff has been insured for $10,000. One of the clauses in the policy states Monty may not smoke unless his beard is encased in a fire-proof snood!

Like all stage folk, Woolley has little patience with Hays office censorship—thinks everything was fine until "that Moral Squad reared its prissy head." For example, he objects to the deletion of his opening line from the play, always a sure-fire laugh-getter. It occurs when the noted lecturer has been lifted from the slippery street. A fluttery crowd waits for him to say something brilliant. Whiteside recovers his poise, stares stonily ahead and in frozen tones announces: "I may vomit!" The Hays office ordered that one out as too unpleasant.

The same rule held for the line in which Whiteside addresses his nurse as "Miss Bed Pan." When you hear it, Mary Wickes, recruited from Broadway (where at the age of 18 she played Henry Fonda's grandmother in "The Farmer Takes A Wife"), will be hailed as "Miss Stomach Pump!"

The only one who triumphs over the Hays office is Bette Davis. She defies the "no sweater" ruling by wearing a little turtle-necked number under a V-necked blouse!

Cinderella-boy of the film is 28-year-old Richard Travis, plucked at Bette's insistence from Warner Bros. shorts and lifted overnight to leading man stature. A magnificent 6-foot-three-er, Travis is blonde, grey-eyed, Arkansas-born and—intelligent.

But he still doesn't know what hit him! Suddenly finding himself sponsored by Bette Davis, vamped by Ann Sheridan, and coached by Josephine Dillon (the ex-Mrs. Clark Gable) has all but knocked him cold. However, first reports say he's doing fine. For Newcomer Travis, as well as other members of the cast, "The Man Who Came To Dinner" promises to be a Blue Plate Special—served complete with all the trimmin's!

ATTENTION, INFORMATION DESK FANS!

We're closing for alterotions ond won't be able to onswer your letters ony more. Wotch our spoce for o brond new department!

HE'S "ALL REET"

(Continued from page 41)

everyone. When he has opera stars on the Music Hall, for instance, he talks golf to them in rehearsal. Or horses. Or how the Dodgers are coming out. They are only nice people, after all. He imagines that they are probably pretty tired of adulation. He would be.

And the great ones—the Flagstads, the Iturbis, the Robesons—love him. They take his kidding and dish it right back to him. They send him presents and letters from all over the world. Between themselves, too, though they admit that Bing doesn't even take singing seriously, they declare that he possesses the finest diction they have ever heard. From Flagstad, brother, that's a compliment!

Bing doesn't take singing seriously, you know. John Scott Trotter told me how he learns a song.

"I play it over to him once," Johnny said. "Bing listens with his pipe in his mouth. Then he takes the words and sings the tune—either with or without pipe. If there is any new music on the show, he may go over it once more before we go on the air. That's all there is to it!"

John paused a moment. "The thing that amazes me about the boy, though," he added, "is that often—particularly on the opening song—Bing will have no introduction. He will have to snatch the first couple of notes out of nowhere after Ken's announcement!"

BING won't sing songs which he believes have questionable lyrics. And he won't use songs which he doesn't think are well-written. The upshot is that he carols every tune as if it is the finest he has ever heard. He'll knock himself out to use a tune by a friend or by someone who needs a plug. That's something he takes for granted: he needed help once, too, didn't he?

Along the same line, if he hears an unknown he likes, he'll pull strings to get him to the Hall. For instance there was the case of Jimmy O'Brien, the young tenor you heard not so long ago. His appearance came about this way:

One night, Bing and Dixie were out at the old Lamaze Restaurant for dinner. There was a kid out there, singing Irish ballads as if he had composed them himself. Bing thought he was fine.

He went up and talked to the boy, and they discovered that they both thought certain songs were great. The result was that Bing and Jimmy sang duets for about two hours.

The next day, Bing dropped into the offices of J. Walter Thompson, the advertising agency which handles his show. "I heard a kid last night I think is good," he told the boys. "Give him a listen, will you?"

They did. And Jimmy O'Brien was a featured vocalist on the Music Hall a couple of weeks later.

Ken Carpenter said it for me: "He's a great guy for giving other people a break!"

Take, for instance, Pat Friday. Bing heard her at the Victor Hugo. She was going to college then. He got her on the program during her summer vacation. Take the Music Maids. Bing caught them at the Universal lot when he was making a picture. They were signed for Kraft.

Take Johnny Mercer. Johnny wasn't exactly unknown in the music business, of course, but he was as far as the public

Fewer Colds!..Shorter Colds!

Imagine getting through the winter with less sickness, less worry and expense due to colds! . . . That's what happened in a test that lasted 154 days and included 2,650 school-age children . . . Vicks ABC Plan demonstrated its real worth. Reports of Doctors show that the children who followed this simple home-guide had fewer colds . . . shorter colds . . . actually less than half as much sickness from colds. Think of that! Now Vicks ABC Plan may do less for you and your family—or it may do even more . . . IT'S CERTAINLY WORTH TRYING . . . And here is all you need to do . . . Ⓐ Just observe a few simple health rules. Ⓑ Use Vicks Va-tro-nol at the right time. Ⓒ Use Vicks VapoRub at the right time.

When to Use These 2 Clinic-Tested Medications

AT FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE—or even the slightest sign of nasal irritation—put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril and feel this special medication go to work. Va-tro-nol is designed to aid your natural defenses against colds and help prevent many colds from developing . . . IF YOU SHOULD HAVE A HEAD COLD, Va-tro-nol does three important things to relieve distress . . . (1) Shrinks the swollen membranes. (2) Soothes the irritation. (3) Helps to clear out the nasal passages. And quickly makes breathing easier! Follow the complete directions in the folder.

Clinic-Tested
VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

IF A COLD SHOULD STRIKE—slip by precautions—relieve misery the IMPROVED Vicks way. This 3-minute treatment makes Vicks VapoRub give EVEN BETTER RESULTS THAN EVER! . . . PENETRATES to upper bronchial tubes with soothing medicinal vapors . . . STIMULATES chest and back surfaces like a warming poultice . . . WORKS FOR HOURS to relieve coughing and congestion in upper breathing passages, ease muscular soreness or tightness. To get this improved treatment with all its benefits, follow simple directions in the package.

Clinic-Tested
VICKS VAPORUB

You'll Find Complete Details of Vicks ABC Plan in Your Package of Vicks

The Nearest Thing to Natural Curly Hair

Frederics—one of the great names in permanent waving — announce another notable new discovery! A permanent wave that looks and acts like natural curly hair!

This wonderful new Frederics Permanent Wave contains NO beauty-stealing, metallic salts whatever — cannot possibly dry your hair or make it frizzy, dry or brittle. There is no set "permanented" look — even the first day.

And while you're getting this natural-looking permanent, there are no disagreeable chemical odors; no possibility of dizziness or headaches — no painful pulling or stretching of the hair. It's so quick, so cool, so comfortable, you hardly know your hair is being waved.

NO FRIZZ

NO KINKS

NO BRITTLE HAIR

Don't guess, don't hope, don't wish! Say to your hairdresser, "I want a Frederics Tru-Curl permanent." Then see that the Tru-Curl wrappers and lotion are taken from a sealed individual package. In this way you will know that you are getting what you pay for . . . a Genuine Frederics Tru-Curl Permanent . . . America's Finest Permanent Wave.

• Frederics Tru-Curl permanent waves, when given with a Frederics controlled-heat permanent waving machine, are 50% cooler—50% more comfortable. Waving with low temperature protects the hair, preserves its life, lustre and loveliness. See that a Frederics machine is used.

frederics tru-Curl permanent wave

E. FREDERICS, INC., (Dept.205), 44-02 11th St., L. I. City, N. Y.
Send me a list of Frederics Franchise Salons in my community. Also FREE BOOKLET which reveals the "inside story" on permanent waving.

Name .....

Address .....

City..... State.....

P.S. Send 10c (in coin) for a Salon Size bottle of Frederics famous Color-Perfect Nail Enamel, "It stays beautiful longer". (Specify shade polish you now use.)

was concerned. America sings songs but rarely notices who writes them. So Bing made records with John for the fun of it, things like "Mister Meadow Lark" and "Bob White." They certainly didn't hurt the Mercer boy!

Take John Scott Trotter. Bing first knew Johnny 'way back when "The Groaner" was one of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys. Later, when Crosby went into "Pennies From Heaven," Trotter did the orchestrations on the Johnny Burke tunes for that show.

Jimmy Dorsey's band was on the Music Hall at the time, but Jimmy had a hankering to go East. When he left, Bing remembered J. Scott's work and sent out a call for him even though John had never had a band of his own before. He had been Hal Kemp's ace arranger, but he had never toted a stick. As you know, Scott came West, gathered together the best bunch of musicians he could find and has been knocking out terrific stuff ever since.

There's also the story of Jerry Colonna's introduction to the great American public. This is typically Crosby, in more ways than one.

Jerry started out as a trombone player. He had, in addition, a pair of lungs. His rendition of "You're My Everything," for example, made the annual hog-calling champ sound like a man with acute laryngitis.

But, though Bing was helpless with laughter every time he thought of Jerry, no one but a select few seemed to have heard of him.

Therefore, one night on the air, Bing finished his song and became deadly serious. "Ladies and gentlemen," he announced, "tonight we have the honor of presenting that stellar baritone, Dr. Giovanni Colonna, late of La Scala, Milan. Dr. Colonna's glorious voice has unfortunately been too long unheard in America. It is my particular pleasure to introduce him to you!"

And, on the unsuspecting listeners, the endless, siren-like note with which Jerry begins "You're My Everything" was suddenly foisted. Bing stood by the microphone and howled. And, from then on, Dr. Colonna was a solid sensation!

Bing loves to do things like that. Anything that is out of the ordinary groove is fine for Crosby. That's why his show and its rehearsals are such a delightful madhouse.

For one thing Bing doesn't have any dress rehearsal—a breach of radio etiquette which floors the producers of other programs. Instead, he wanders in about one o'clock (he's on the air at five from Hollywood), greets the boys, has a tremendous lunch which raises hell with his diet and finally ambles in the direction of the microphone. There he sits on a tall stool, takes off his jacket (invariably disclosing the most frightfully brilliant shirt you have ever laid an eye on), lights his pipe and goes to work.

Only it isn't work. Even though, according to Connie Boswell, he can accomplish more than any three guys, he never seems to be under a strain. He has fun. The result, whether it be a picture, a record or a broadcast, is casual, friendly.

The show is timed as he rehearses, for there may not be another chance to do it. He runs over the tunes he is going to sing, pipe in mouth. He goes through the dialogue spots with the guest stars and Carpenter. And, though he will take a thing again and again if he feels it isn't right, he usually gets it the first time. His lack of labor on the script results in the spontaneity for which the Music Hall is famous.

If the script is too long, he invariably suggests cutting one of his songs. And the reason for this isn't laziness by any means. "People hear me sing too much," he says. "They'll get tired of listening after a while."

When the run-through has been accomplished, the group relaxes until show time. Bing, his writer, Carroll Carroll, his producer, Carpenter, and the rest sit in the control room and chat. If there is an important race on, they listen. Or they settle the problems of the nation.

Bing has grown famous for his consideration for the people on the program with him. At Christmas time, for instance, he goes out of his way to find some gift for each one which has a personal significance. He is grateful for the suggestions of others, and appreciates the part his cast plays in making the Music Hall a success.

He could have anything he wanted in radio, either from Kraft or a dozen companies, but he's perfectly satisfied with that particular group. Everything is going swell. He likes the gang. They have fun. Why change?

Well, I listened to the boys and girls. I watched them in rehearsal and noted the ease with which they did their chores. I saw the obvious liking they had for the guy on the high stool. You can't act that, you know! Then, I threw away the box of salt I had brought with me.

Bing Crosby is a good gent. And I'll slug every single man who says he isn't!

YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for you—that up-to-the-second chart of your favorite "westerns" you've been begging for! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they got their start and studio addresses of over sixty of those rough-riding heroes, leering villains and wide-eyed heroines of your pet "horse opries"! Made up in a most attractive form, it will make your album proud as anything. Just send five cents in coin or stamps with the coupon below and your new revised chart is as good as lassoed!

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Please print name and address plainly

THE OTHER SIDE OF A LEGEND

(Continued from page 33)

most of is still old flame John Howard.

"He knows me and my bad habits and takes me as I am. On Saturday night, make-up or no make-up or slacks, that's fine with him. He loves music as I do. We sit home and listen to recordings, and I get mad at him because he has a beautiful baritone voice, but he won't sing. Or we go to his house. He lives with his parents, who are rather young for parents and very sweet. We all play gin rummy together. And ask questions out of the Information, Please book to see who is brightest. Who is? Oh—now one, now another. But all this doesn't mean I am going to marry him, because I have no such plan. It means simply that I like to be with these people, they are so sweet—"

THE nightspots haven't seen her in over a year, unless you choose to consider drive-ins nightspots. That's where she goes with John after a movie. "Because—" with a wriggle of well-being—"you can sit in the car, and it's dark and you sort of get things poured right in front of your nose." John has learned the wisdom of duplicating her order. Otherwise, she eats his, too—out of curiosity. Another post-movie treat is prowling through one of those omnibus drugstores, which draw her as Bullocks-Wilshire's doesn't, and from which she emerges content with a powder puff or peanuts.

She always thinks she'll sleep till noon, always wakes at seven and breakfasts in bed on "orange juice, coffee and sort of toast and things," skimming the papers meantime. Then she'll call a friend or two. Her phone conversations are noteworthy for two reasons. You think they'll never stop, but when they do, it's sudden. "Well, goodby," says Hedy and hangs up.

Her bedroom is furnished in plain mahogany—no chaise longue, no silk pillows, no frilled vanities. She slips a terry-cloth, initialed, over her tailored gown, showers, and sits down at her dressing table, which is barer than most—toilet water, a couple of perfume bottles, a silver comb. The hand mirror is conspicuous by its absence. When she makes up, it's with powder, lipstick and a little eyebrow shadow. Often she'll just comb her hair and call it a day. She doesn't like nail polish but does use a heavy perfume, specially blended.

Jamesie's been clamoring for a visit to his friends, the monkeys. So she packs him into the car—a dark blue coupe, upholstered in red leather, with initials designed by herself—and they start for the zoo. Nana goes along. If you take it for granted that Nana is Jamesie's nurse exclusively, you're dead wrong. "Our nurse," Hedy emphatically corrects you.

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send todoy for the new, up-to-dote list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is o convenient size to handle or keep in o scrop-book. To receive o list, all you hove to do is write to us ond osk for it, enclosing o lorge, self-oddressed ond stomped envelope. Don't forget thot lost item, os no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Informotion Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, New York.

TANGEE

Red-Red*...ACCLAIMED THE NEWEST AND TRUEST OF REDS Here is the long-sought true red...a red so clear and pure it is a perfect foil for all fashion shades—an exquisite complement to this year's lavish furs. And Tangee's pure cream base helps protect your lips against splitting, peeling, coarsening—keeps them smooth and lovely. Try both lipstick and rouge in the Tangee Red-Red shade. Try Tangee's Famous Face Powder, as well. It is clinging, lasting, un-powdery.

Another Tangee Lipstick Favorite—THEATRICAL RED . . . a bright and vivid shade with the same famous Tangee cream base. Matching rouge, of course.

DON'T LET "SOAPING" DULL YOUR HAIR

GLORIFY IT WITH HALO!

Let Halo Shampoo Rid Your Hair of Soap Film!

OLD-fashioned "soapy" shampoos leave a dulling film on hair . . . film that makes it hard to curl.

But just try one Halo shampoo . . . because Halo contains no soap, therefore Halo leaves no dulling film! It's made with a new-type ingredient!

Halo leaves your hair radiantly lovely and easy to manage . . . reveals its natural virgin color.

And when you shampoo with Halo there's no need for a lemon or vinegar after-rinse. Halo makes billowy lather in hardest water.

Get Halo Shampoo—today, in generous 10c or larger sizes! Halo has the full approval of Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Recommended Seal No. 2273 Good Housekeeping Bureau Conducted Good Housekeeping Magazine

HALO SHAMPOO

A product of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company

FREE ENLARGEMENT

Just to get acquainted with new customers, we will beautifully enlarge one snapshot print or negative, photo or picture to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose this ad with 10c for handling and return mailing. Information on hand tinting in natural colors sent immediately. Your original returned with your free enlargement. Send it today.

Geppert Studios, Dept.1263, Des Moines, Iowa

BEAUTIFUL 7-JEWEL ELGIN WATCH YOURS

One year TO PAY IN FULL

Choice of ELGIN WALTHAM ILLINOIS Movement

LATEST styled ring. 1/20th 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with 9K, 50 point, Simulated Diamond and six brilliants

YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin, Waltham or Illinois wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $3.89 anytime within a year (total only $7.39. Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.

H. KENDALL JEWELERS
Topeka, Kansas Dept. MM-1241

They find themselves on Los Feliz Boulevard, which is the street of antique shops, packed with the copper, hobnail glass and other "sweet foolish" things which Hedy collects. So Nana and Jamesie dump her, proceed to the zoo and collect her on the way back. At home she gives Jamesie his swimming lesson and lunch and settles him for a nap. Nothing's allowed to interfere with these rites when she's not working. James, a romantic, can't see why she ever should. James say nn for don't. "Nn go to work, I go to work," he cajoles her.

She enjoys fussing round the place, painting bookshelves, training ivy from a copper bowl, rearranging furniture. Publicity hinted that she likes to cook. She smiled like a seraph and said, "I hate it, no matter what you yell here on the side. I'd rather go to a drive-in." Nevertheless, she'll turn her hand to it on occasion.

She keeps her evenings free. "Plans," she assures you gravely, "are the main evil of all the evils in the world. If I feel like seeing somebody, I go. If they're not at home, I go to somebody else. There must be somebody home some place. If not, I like my own house. I have recordings, I listen to symphonies on the radio, I chat with my Nanny, I crochet on my afghan which is called the Unfinished Afghan, because always I buy more yarns and they never come even—"

Her closest friends are the MacMurrays, the Menjous, Ann Sothern, Janet Gaynor and Adrian, Phyllis Laughton, the dramatic coach, and her husband, George Seaton. Like John Howard, they know her and her bad habits. She can drop in for the evening or leave after ten minutes. She can say what she means—without ruffles—and does.

"Whatever happens to me bad, I yell it out, I scream, then in a minute it's over. That's why I must have people around who don't mind if I'm like that. Life is too short for sour faces."

She's no exhibitionist, hates bright lights and invariably heads for the corner of a crowded room. She doesn't see her rushes, nor scream if a dress fails to hang right. The studio was agog over her test for "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," in which she ages to about forty-five. "Did you see it, Hedy?" they asked.

"No, I didn't, because the soundman said it was all right."

She can take dancing or leave it and doesn't know the rhumba. She swims for fun, not exercise, likes tennis matches, Garbo, Bette Davis and frankly-junk jewelry, not junk that tries to be real. She doesn't wear her real jewels, there's been no occasion, but she enjoys looking at them and mistrusts the sincerity of women who say they don't give a hoot for the stuff.

SHE'S an optimistic icebox raider. Knowing perfectly well what they had for dinner, she can't squash the hope that something else may have sneaked in. She takes what she can get, however, and has been known to sit crosslegged in bed at midnight, consuming cold artichokes, salad and corned beef hash. She admits readily to a healthy appetite, less readily to a yen for composing verse—which she calls "writing down silly things at night." It can't be too bad, for the acid Miss Parker once praised it, but Hedy won't tell you what she said. She's superstitious about black cats and the 13th, and the only English word she can't pronounce is February. It comes out Febrrrrr.

The difference between Hedy and the legend of Hedy can be reduced to a word. Legends are remote, Hedy is warm. She loves people and jokes and the comradeship of the lot and the give-and-take of the man on the street. In the hospital with an infected tooth, she got her biggest kick out of a lollypop, sent "from one sucker to another." She listened enchanted for half an hour to a cop who bawled her out in a nice way about how a girl driving alone at night should click up the handle of the opposite door and keep her purse on the seat beside her.

"I felt like his daughter," she said.

When she first came to the studio, a publicity man who was no sentimentalist but thought she was swell, voiced his affection by hailing her with "Hello, Stinky." She caught the spirit, if not the letter of the tribute, and proceeded to give it back as "Hello, Stink."

Her friendship, when given, is wholehearted. There's the story of the girl on the lot who eloped without warning her.

"Look at her," said Hedy when the culprit showed up after the honeymoon. "I tell her everything and look at her, she marries without me." Indignation stymied her. "Now I don't care if you have triplings—"

It took a good five minutes to bring her around to forgiving and forgetting.

QUESTIONNAIRE

Just this once, won't you answer our questionnaire without a reward? We're trying desperately to catch up with your thousands of requests for autographed portraits and can't take on any more just yet. So for filling out the questionnaire we're offering just THANKS.

What stories or features did you enjoy most in our December issue? Write 1, 2, 3 at the right of the titles of your 1st, 2nd, 3rd choice.

Long Distance Love (Darnell) ☐
Up and Cummings (Bob Cummings) ☐
Other Side of a Legend (Lamarr) ☐
Thumbs Down on Hollywood ☐
Oomph for Sale (Hayworth) ☐
He's "All Reet" (Crosby) ☐
Give Yourself the Love Test (Carroll) ☐
Skippy Remembers (Cooper) ☐
Pal Georgie (Murphy) ☐
Long-Haired Boy (Sabu) ☐
For Dolls Only (Joan Carroll) ☐
Garbo's Twins ☐
"The Man Who Came to Dinner" ☐
Good News (Gossip) ☐
Adonis on Wheels (Stack) ☐

Which one of the above stories did you like least? .....

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, 149 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK CITY

LONG-HAIRED BOY

(Continued from page 54)

third at the club. Loves to rhumba and conga. Goes fishing and hunting every chance he gets. Even his choice of clothes show the U. S. A. influence. He's very particular about the cut of his suits; prefers sports clothes that are a far cry from the regulation white shirt and trousers he used to wear in Mysore. Hasn't learned to like American hats though and still sticks to turbans. Has a stock of silk, ceiling high, from which he chooses the eight yards of material he wants to wind around his head for the day. Always wears red turbans for formal occasions—and paradoxically he's about the only actor in "Jungle Book" who doesn't wear a turban in the picture. An aviation enthusiast, he can reel off the records of every kind of aircraft. He wants to join the R.A.F. and in one more year he'll be eligible as far as age is concerned.

Sabu is 5 feet, 5 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds; has one of the healthiest young bodies in Hollywood. His reading taste runs to adventure books, and he still loves to go to the movies. His ideal girl is one who enjoys all sports—swimming, hunting, etc.—and likes to laugh and have a good time. He speaks with only the barest suggestion of an accent, peppering his conversation with American slang, like "Golly" and "Wow." He is absolutely fearless; has a way with animals and uses no double for his scenes with "man-eaters." He has no pets of his own.

Sabu's favorite stars have long been Mickey Mouse, Charlie Chaplin and Gary Cooper. Lately, he's added two female favorites to his list—Merle Oberon and Gloria Jean. However, there's just one woman in his life at the moment—his Southern colored cook. She rarely cooks Sabu's native dishes for him, but plies him with fruit, vegetables and indescribable Southern fried chicken. That's because the only meat she doesn't serve is pork. Sabu is an extremely devout Mohammedan and cannot eat it.

GARBO'S TWINS PRODUCTION

(Continued from page 51)

and later the kids bicycled back to their office and explained to a disbelieving boss that they were late returning because they'd been eating watermelon with Greta Garbo. The only invited guest was Peter Douglas, Melvyn's nine-year-old. Douglas first checked with Greta to see if she minded having him there. The kid was very polite, but obviously more interested in the technical aspects of the set than in the Silent Swede.

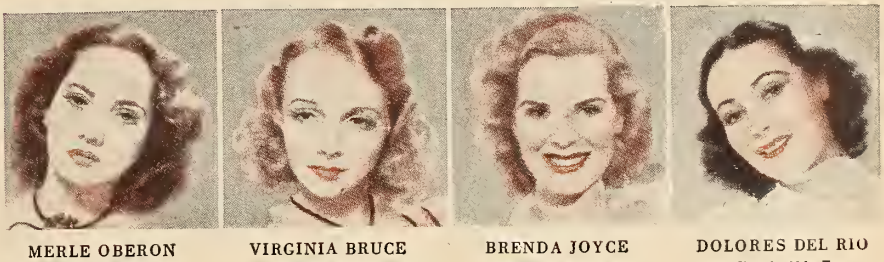
Funniest sight on the set was Roland Young, standing only one foot away from the sense-disturbing Greta, reading "Berlin Diary" while the workers re-lit the set for their next take. He finished the entire book this way.

Constance Bennett showed up with a portable dressing room. She's free-lancing, and takes it to every studio she goes to. Prevents friction as to who gets the fanciest dressing room. Greta and Connie spent hours talking between scenes. Connie re-designed a negligée Garbo wears in one scene so it would look sexier. It did. Censors were peeping through their fingers at it and run-

To kindle Love

LIGHT UP YOUR TYPE

MYRNA LOY . . . AMERICAN BEAUTY BLEND — Lovely light-dark blend with peach tones. For accent, use Woodbury Windsor Rose. For exotic effect, Brunette.



MERLE OBERON
The Ivory Skin Type
Creamy skin, ivory tints. For striking clearness, Woodbury Rachel. Or for deep, velvet tone, Blush Rose.

VIRGINIA BRUCE
The Cameo Skin Type
Fair skin with cameo-pink tints. For delicate bloom, use Woodbury Flesh. For radiant warmth, use Blush Rose.

BRENDA JOYCE
The Honey Skin Type
Amber skin with gold tints. For deeper accent, Woodbury Champagne. For a rosy look, use Windsor Rose.

DOLORES DEL RIO
The Tropic Skin Type
Vivid skin, dusky or olive tones. For luscious richness, use Woodbury Brunette. For copper glow, Champagne.

LEADING Hollywood directors say: "Step up your type to step up your appeal."

They add, "It's skin, not hair, that determines type". So decide—which of the five basic skin types are you?

Then learn the biggest news in make-up! Woodbury has created a new Color Controlled Powder to do things—Hollywood glamour things—for your type. Thanks to Woodbury's exclusive Color Control, it's super-clear (no color blobs or streaks), super-fine and super-clinging.

For new glamour in your life, get this new Woodbury Powder.

WOODBURY Color Controlled POWDER

New! Woodbury Matched Make-up (Powder, Rouge, Lipstick for your type), all for $1.00. Woodbury Powder also in 10¢, 25¢, 50¢ sizes.

FREE! 6 GLAMORIZING SHADES!

Paste on penny postcard . . . to get 6 type-dramatizing samples new Woodbury Color Controlled Powder. John H. Woodbury, Inc., 8122 Alfred St., Cincinnati, O. (In Canada: John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario) Please include tube new Foundation Cream.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____

New under-arm
Cream Deodorant
safely
Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses, or men's shirts. Does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration, keeps armpits dry.
4. A pure white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering, for being harmless to fabrics.

Arrid is the largest selling deodorant ... try a jar today

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS
(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

FREE CLUB PIN & RING CATALOG
PINS 30¢ up—RINGS $1.50
Quality made ... silver, gold plated, etc. Our new book shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs by Bastian craftsmen ... oldest, largest makers. Write for your Free copy today!
BASTIAN BROS. Dept.53, Rochester, N. Y.

Brush Away
GRAY HAIR
.. and Look 10 Years Younger

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 28 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

ning for fire buckets during the preview.

Both gals wear short haircuts. When production began, Hair Stylist Sidney Guilaroff had to decide whether long hair belonged on Garbo the Ugly Duckling or Garbo the Glamorous. He decided the short bob was more soignée, designed a special hair-do inspired by Botticelli's cherubs. The hair falls an inch and a half below the nape of the neck and is very short around the temples and sides of the head. Guilaroff predicts the style will send the women of America rushing to their beauty parlors for duplicate arrangement. Garbo's hair is a special shade called "Moonlight Blonde," achieved by means of an aquamarine rinse. Guilaroff got the idea for the shade when he saw Greer Garson's red locks in the technicolor moonlight of "Blossoms in the Dust."

Garbo, with her wonderful sense of humor, laughed and laughed when she discovered the wardrobe designed for her as the dowdy twin copied her own personal taste in clothes . . . slacks, sweaters and floppy hats. She was absorbingly interested in Adrian's ultra designs. Spent hours in the fitting rooms for the first time in her career.

Greta wears a bathing suit in this, the second time she's ever appeared in one on the screen. First time was in "Peter the Tramp," a slapstick comedy made in Sweden, in which she splashed around for two reels à la Mack Sennett bathing beauty and slapped the leading man in the face with a fish. The bathing suit in "The Twins" is a bare-midriff number in midnight blue. Between scenes, she spent her time swimming in the set pool. Is very good at it.

Metro's waiting to see if any special style in clothes or hats catches on as strongly as the Empress Eugenie hats, the pill box lids or polo coats. (All made popular by Garbo in previous pictures.)

Flato, the jeweler, loaned the Studio $500,000 worth of beautifully set diamonds. One of the "extras" working at all times was a special detective. Garbo loves jewelry but just to look at—not to wear. She liked the feather-like diamond sprays best. Wears one of them perched against her hair at the temples; it quivers as she moves.

Those who had worked with and watched her say Garbo's secret of acting success is the "follow through" of her delivery. She doesn't speak a line of dialogue and let it go at that. There's an intangible something in the air when she finishes speaking—a projection of her personality and the thought behind the words that's caught up by whomever she's addressing. She catches their reply on the bounce, delivers her next line and so establishes a rhythm that lifts any scene right out of a rut.

The mood of the picture always sets the mood for her between scenes. Because this one is comedy, she was very gay most of the time. She really comes to life, though, when she gets in front of the camera. All shyness, hesitation, self-consciousness is gone. As long as that lens is trained on her, no necessary emotion is held back. She says "The minute I begin a scene, I forget all about the camera." All she remembers is that it's there.

An apparently untraceable buzzing noise on the sound track turned out to be made by Garbo's electric fruit and vegetable mixer. (Keeps it in her dressing room and whips up glasses of carrot and beet juice à la Dr. Hauser for quick energy between scenes).

Greta's nickname in Sweden was Keta. Once changed her real name, Greta Gustaffson, to Gussie Berger.

Director Cukor has worked with Greta on one other picture—"Camille."

It took Greta exactly 20 minutes to learn one dance routine that most professionals couldn't have mastered in an hour.

"The Twins" is a tentative title. M-G-M was toying with the idea of releasing it as "The Garbo Picture." May still do it.

Bob Sterling, one of Greta's pursuers in the picture, shoots nine holes of golf before going to work every morning. Real name is Hart. When he was playing his first leading role (in the re-make of "Bad Girl" for Fox), he discovered the electricians were making twice as much as he. Almost decided he was in the wrong end of the business. Is six feet, one and a half inches, weighs 180, has brown hair, blue eyes.

Garbo had such a good time working with Melvyn Douglas in "Ninotchka," she asked for him for this one. Melvyn rumbad with Garbo during the day. dashed home, gathered up wife Helen and rushed down to the Cocoanut Grove to practice the steps he'd learned during the day by teaching them to Mrs. D elegant Schiaparelli number after the other, and inevitably he proposed, promising to divorce his plain little country wife.

GARBO'S TWINS
STORY

(Continued from page 51)

He whipped up to Snow Lodge to tell her, giving "Katherine" just enough time to deglamorize and get back into her Karin routine. When Larry arrived, she was waiting for him, looking cool and chaste and faithful—an oasis after the feverish excitement that was Katherine. He not only couldn't bring himself to mention the divorce but found himself loving her all over again!

The next morning, however, he had reached a decision. He told Karin he couldn't live without her, but neither could he do without the stimulation, the headiness of Katherine. He proposed a variation on the design for living theme, saying his dual nature required both of them to make him happy. Karin was just on the verge of storming out of the room and out of his life forever, when O. O. and Miss Ellis barged in, followed by Griselda, who was triumphantly shrieking the news that there was no such person as Katherine—she and Karin were one and the same! Larry looked around for his little chameleon of a wife, but she had fled on her skis. He was after her, groping his amateurish way along the dangerous path. Gradually, he picked up speed and hurtled past her completely out of control. The lake was dead ahead and he crashed through the ice and disappeared.

Naturally, Karin rushed to get him out, and once he was safe and sound, she let him deluge her with a thousand icy kisses. "Everything will be swell now," he whispered incoherently between chattering teeth—"Because no matter which one I fall in love with—Karin or Katherine—for the rest of my life, it's bound to be one of you!"

GIVE YOURSELF THE LOVE TEST

(Continued from page 43)

at home, turn your energies to War Relief projects—in short, so fill the time that you have the feeling you are working with him as well as for your country while you are waiting for him to come back?

"If the former is your attitude, you are not in love with him. If the latter, you may well be."

(Madeleine, by the way, practises what she preaches. Upon completion of her last picture, "Bahama Passage," with Stirling Hayden, she left immediately for Canada for a two months stay, in order to be there when Richard de la Rozière is in port.)

"Or suppose he is working on some defense project in the home town," Madeleine was continuing. "Suppose he doesn't call you every night. Are you petulant? Feel neglected? Or do you figure there may be a good reason? Do you tell yourself that perhaps what he is doing is a part of something so tremendous and significant that even love is temporarily dwarfed?

"Depending on the answers you can make to these questions depends the quality of your love for him.

"Still another factor in the test is this: When he is with you for an evening, are you willing to spend the evening his way? This is really a definitive part of the test because it proves two things, (a) whether you are genuinely self-forgetful when you are with him and (b) whether you have interests in common. Because you are going to need interests in common, basic ones, at any rate, if you expect to share your life with a man.

"When I say 'basic ones' I mean—well, permit me to use myself as an example: yachting is a hobby with me. I was once a crack hockey player at the University in England. Now, it is not necessary to me that the man I love share my enthusiasm for yachting or hockey. These are superficial things. But

Hoss opera heart throb, Lynn Merrick's in Republic's "Apache Kid."

Maureen O'Hara appearing in 20th Century-Fox hit, "How Green Was My Valley". The favorite way to charming hands —use Jergens Lotion!

"LOVE can be strong and Beautiful when Hands are silken-soft," says MAUREEN O'HARA

(Lovely Hollywood Star)

JUST TRY AND DO HOUSEWORK AND HAVE SILKEN-SOFT HANDS!
I'VE MANAGED FOR YEARS, DEAR, WITH HELP OF JERGENS LOTION. JERGENS TENDS YOUR HAND SKIN WITH BEAUTY-GIVING MOISTURE.
WELL, ANNE BEGAN RIGHT AWAY TO USE JERGENS LOTION AND NOT LONG AFTER:
TO THINK THESE DARLING SOFT HANDS KEEP HOUSE FOR ME!

Have almost professional soft-hand care . . . so easily

Rough, coarse hands say you're careless about yourself. Because people know—by using Jergens Lotion, you can easily have delightful hands. Yes! Jergens Lotion tends your hand skin with 2 special ingredients many doctors rely on to help rough skin to heavenly smoothness. Quick to use—never sticky. Regular use helps prevent dismal roughness and chapping. 50¢, $1.00; introductory sizes 10¢, 25¢. Soon have "darling soft hands"; start now to use Jergens Lotion.

JERGENS LOTION

FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

FREE!... PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE

MAIL THIS COUPON NOW

(Paste on a penny postcard, if you wish)

The Andrew Jergens Company, Box 3726, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada: Perth, Ontario)

Please send me—free—my purse-size bottle of the famous Jergens Lotion.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

All morning I'd been simply SKATING through the stores—shopping. My face felt like a mask—dirty, shiny!

Mary—what'll I do? I've a lunch date with Jack in 2 minutes. How can I spruce up my face? I must do something.

Use a Coolies pad! Coolies are complexion life-savers. Practically give you a facial in 1 minute—and so refreshing!

Oh, perfect! See the dirt, stale make-up and shine come off. Why didn't somebody tell me about Coolies before!

"Darling," said Jack, "you must have been at the beauty parlor this morning. Your complexion looks as if you were 6!"

BIG PRICE REDUCTION

DRESKIN

COOLIES

NOW ONLY* 25¢

(formerly 60c)

for big HUMIDOR JAR

Also 10¢ humidor jars. Ask for "SPECIAL" (dry skin)—or "REGULAR" (oily skin) COOLIES at toilet goods counters everywhere.

Coolies are America's largest-selling facial cleansing pads—soft, dainty pads of cloth, saturated with the famous skin-cleanser and refreshant—DRESKIN. Use one pad to remove shiny surface oils, dirt, stale make-up from face and neck. Easy to use as a powderpuff—prepares skin perfectly for NEW make-up.

—making pictures is a passion with me. Reading and music are deep needs of mine. The man I love would need to share my enthusiasm for pictures, my love of books and music. I adore walking along the beach, barefoot. He would have to love that, too. Why on earth should a man have to love walking barefoot along a beach, you're wondering? I'll tell you why: because it is my love of the sea that makes me do it, that makes me live always by the sea. It is a wildness in my nature that must be mated with the same elemental thing in a man.

BUT to get back to the willingness to spend an evening as a man wants to spend it: for myself, I detest going to night clubs. Yet when Captain de la Rozière is in town, I know he enjoys doing just this because his job of ferrying bombers is a lonely one. A dangerous, dark one. And his reaction, when he is off duty is, reasonably enough, a craving for bright lights, wine and music. It is a need in him which I feel I understand. And it is very important that we sense the needs of those we love.

"Another thing I have always loathed is bowling! Richard loves it, and I find myself enjoying a bowling alley when I am with him. I wouldn't enjoy bowling with anyone else alive.

"I'm not saying that girls should be doormats for men, trotting at the male beck and call whether they like it or not. But I am saying that if you can sense what is a real need in one you love and can enjoy meeting that need, it is love. And this, like all the experiences of love, must be a mutual thing, as true for the man as for the woman.

"There is another very fundamental question which must be included in the love test. It is this: Ask yourself, 'Would I want this man to be the father of my children?' Be absolutely honest on this.

"Personally, I know of only two men I have ever met of whom I could bear to think as the father of my children. One is Captain Astley, who was my husband. The other is de la Rozière, who may become my husband.

"I know girls are apt to think that jealousy is flattering . . . they think it means a man is mad about them, possessive, passionate, all the flaming things. It doesn't, really. Jealousy is a vile, awful thing. In the first place, if you try to make a man jealous, or vice versa, it means you are trying to hurt one another. You do not hurt the thing you love.

"Jealousy is lack of trust. It is lack of faith in the integrity of the one you 'love.' It means you have no confidence in him and none in your own desirability or worth.

"So, when you are making your test, ask yourself, 'Am I jealous of the man I love? Is he jealous of me?' If the answer to these questions is 'yes,' you are not in love with him. He is not in love with you. It is infatuation you feel or hunger. But hunger is not love. It is far more enduring, a much more discriminating instinct.

"Which brings me to the most important point I want to make in outlining this test. It is this: Girls and boys, too, should be brought up to expect physical attraction. They should be taught that they will feel bodily urges, time and time again, and sometimes for completely unworthy and unsuitable objects.

"Don't you suppose I have felt it? Many times? Of course I have. Working, as I do, with the most physically attractive men in the world—the Boyers, Haydens, MacMurrays, Flynns, Powers—how could I not feel attracted to some of them, at times? Men and women are made of flesh and blood and animal instincts. Put attractive men and beautiful women together in close proximity with common interests, with—" Madeleine lifted silken brows over laughing eyes, "with love scenes to do," she said, "and—what can you expect? Exactly!

"But I have learned to distinguish between the transient urge of the blood and the lasting compulsion of love. I no longer think that every time a man stirs my pulse, it is love I feel.

"Because just as it is true that men and women are made of flesh and blood, have animal instincts, it is equally true that we have minds and souls and spiritual impulses. And both must be satisfied if we are to call what we feel by the name of love.

"So here is a very definite question to ask yourselves when you are attracted to a man: 'Would I like this man if I did not love him?'

ASK yourselves whether you are crazy about him only when he is making love to you. Ask yourself whether you would be interested in talking with him if he never made love to you again. Would you enjoy his mind as well as his love-making?

"Upon the honest answer to these questions rests the score you are adding up in the case of love versus infatuation.

"Another part of the test is to go out with other men when you think you are in love with one man. I have tried this on myself, often, and it works. I mean, if I go out with other men and find that I can be very gay, charming, have a wonderful time, it is not likely to be love I am feeling for the absent male. But if, running like a low refrain, haunting and persistent throughout the evening, is the thought, I wonder where he is now? I wonder what he is doing—

"This may seem superficial, but it is one of the surest tests. And it is based on a sound premise. Because to share things, especially wonderful times, thrilling adventures, glamorous experiences . . . champagne and moonlight and music, with the beloved . . . that should be one of the necessities of love.

"'Do I put on an act for a man?' is another question it will profit you to ask yourselves. We all of us know, if we're honest with ourselves, when we are putting on an act. If you are, girls, you are not in love. Because love, being one of the fundamental emotions, as I cannot repeat too often, is honest. True love IS reality. You cannot be unreal about it.

"Remember one thing more: You always think it is love at first! That is Dame Nature's canny way of trapping us. So before donning the orange blossoms and veil, give yourself this love test as I've outlined it below. It may take a little time for you to do it carefully and conscientiously, but do take it. I am!"

Am I trusting and understanding if he doesn't call every night?

Do we share basic interests in common?

Am I willing to spend the evening his way?

Would I want him to be the father of my children?

Would I like him if I were not in love with him?

When I'm with other men, do I keep wishing I were with him?

Am I completely myself with him?

How to score: All yeses, true love; one no, infatuation which may deepen into love; more than one no, passing fancy which will never amount to anything.

UP AND CUMMINGS

(Continued from page 29)

really liked was work with my hands. I was taking all the high school manual training, auto shop, mechanical drawing and stuff they'd let me take. After that plane ride, I knew I had to learn to fly myself. But that was against doctor's orders."

His dad didn't see any sense in raising a healthy son and having him end up in a heap of broken bones. And if anything ever looked like death traps it was those faltering fuselages of the early twenties. The paternal answer was no. But Mrs. Cummings, remember, had seen Orville Wright fly. "Mother slipped me the money for flying lessons," Bob reveals. "I soloed in three hours. The next thing I knew I was buying a plane. I didn't have any money—but that didn't make a bit of difference."

THE old J-5 Travelair that Bob and two other air-minded young promoters dug up cost $600. "Six hundred dollars worth of promises," explains Bob. It cracked up still unpaid for. Bob wasn't in the wreck, and the pal who was, got off with scratches. By the time the trio had worked out the debt, Bob's high school days were over, and he was headed for Carnegie Tech and a mechanical engineering degree. As a freshman in Tech he knew more about flying crates than some of the instructors. And from personal experience. He used to disappear from the campus on week-ends and show up at a commercial field in Pittsburgh clutching the remains of his collegiate allowance. What the rest of Carnegie's Joe Colleges spent on heavy dates and beer busts, Bob plunked on sky sprees in the new jobs designers were turning out. He never missed a model.

"Later on in New York," relates Bob, deserting his sandwich for the interesting subject, "when I was experimenting on the wearing qualities of four-dollar shoes and the nutritious merits of the Automat, I used to swear off flying each week like a drunkard. Then, when I ought to have invested in a square meal or a new shirt, I'd go over to Long Island and blow my couple of bucks just to handle the controls of some beauty I saw parked on the air field. I couldn't help it.

"I'm not posing as any prophet," he says, "but I had a theory, even as a college kid, that the future of America was in the air. I wasn't the only one either. There were hundreds of air-minded kids like myself scattered all over the land just begging for a chance to get going in the air. But it was expensive, and nobody in Washington seemed to look on popular aviation as anything but a country club lark. Gosh!"

You might be wondering just how C. Robert O. Cummings ever ditched the real stuff to soar in artistic flights of the drama. I ask him, and he comes back like this:

"Did you ever hear of the Depression?"

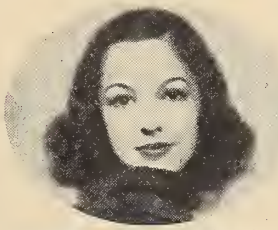
When he finally copped his degree from Carnegie, budding engineers were what big business had much too much of. There was a future in aviation—but that's where it was—in the future. The nice checks Bob had been getting from home had to stop because his father fell permanently ill. Not only did the youth Cummings have to make a career and a living, but he faced the possibility of being grounded unless he figured a way to dig up some funds.

He was hammering together some sets

Dances 10 Miles a Day!

She chooses Odorono Cream for her Daintiness Routine

Jean Bjorn, Nassau teacher, holds all partners entranced by her exquisite daintiness.



Marcia Lewis, of Pittsburgh, keeps that "early-morning freshness" through the day.

Erminie Dougherty, of New York—exquisitely dainty, winter or summer!

● Gervais Wallace—glamourous Arthur Murray teacher—averages ten dancing miles a day! It's an exciting but strenuous way to earn a living, and her deodorant must be as "sure" as her footwork. That's why Arthur Murray dancers choose Odorono Cream to combat underarm odor and dampness.

Follow their lead! Get Odorono Cream today! It's non-irritating, non-greasy, non-gritty. And it ends perspiration annoyance from 1 to 3 days! Generous 10¢, 39¢ and 59¢ sizes, plus tax, at your favorite cosmetic counter.

THE ODORONO CO., INC., NEW YORK

1 FULL OZ. JAR—ONLY 39¢
(PLUS TAX)

ENDS PERSPIRATION ANNOYANCE 1 TO 3 DAYS

GIVES YOU MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

ALSO LIQUID ODORONO—REGULAR AND INSTANT

That's why thousands of women everywhere are turning to MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP as the perfect powder base for the make-up glamour men admire.

A powder base or complete make-up, it imparts a velvety smooth finish, helps conceal blemishes and keeps your complexion gloriously fresh-looking all day long. Try it today!

5 flattering shades, including EVENING WHITE for evening wear.

MINER'S Liquid MAKE-UP

10c, 25c, & 50c at cosmetic counters

FREE Generous Sample

Send coupon and 3c stamp

Peach . . . ☐
Rach. . . . ☐
Brun. . . . ☐
Suntan. . . ☐
Eve. White ☐

MINER'S, 12 E. 12th St., Dept. M42, New York
I enclose 3c stamp to cover mailing cost. Send me generous sample of Miner's Liquid Make-up FREE!
Name.....
Address.....

If you prefer a cream base . . .
Try MINER'S FOUNDATION CREAM with Lanolin—10c at all 5 and 10's

FALSE TEETH AS LOW AS $7.95

Per Plate, DENTAL PLATES are made in our own laboratory from your personal impression. Our workmanship and material GUARANTEED or purchase price refunded. We take this risk on our 60-day trial offer. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY! MAIL POST CARD for FREE Material and Catalog of our LOW PRICES. DON'T PUT IT OFF — Write us TODAY!
BRIGHTON - THOMAS DENTAL LABORATORY,
Dept. 899 6217 S. Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill.

Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

BROKEN, SHORT —Ugly

LONG, TAPERING —Lovely

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails—have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habite. Will not harm nor soften natural nails. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-N, 5251 W. Harrison St., Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

for a college play one day when the leading man stubbed his toe or something, and they hauled Bob down from the rafters to fill in. When the show was over, the director said, "Cummings, you're darned good! You ought to take a crack at Broadway. I understand they can use a few leading men."

"Acting!" cried Bob as if someone had handed him a hotfoot. "Not for me—that's sissy stuff!"

"Maybe so," said the director, "but there's real dough in it."

THERE wasn't much in it for Robert Cummings, though. Not enough to keep him flying at first. Not until he pulled the fabulous hoax that Broadway still talks about, sailed to England and came back with a veddy, veddy British accent and a couple of phony names like Blade Stanhope Conway and Brice Hutchens. That got him some jobs in an era when an Oxford slur was all the Broadway rage and started him off on the business of being a professional poser.

"But the funny part is," Bob is confessing, "I never looked on acting as a permanent thing. I always thought I was just making some easy hay—even when I got into some good shows like the Follies and cashed checks such as I'd never seen before. It was even that way when I came to Hollywood. My real ambition was to be transport pilot."

Not that Cummings didn't give acting all he had. Bob gives everything he does all he has and then some. Nobody has plugged more for himself or performed more theatrical nip-ups to get along. He pulled a brash hoax with a sugar-molasses Texas twang on King Vidor to get his first Hollywood camera chance in "So Red the Rose" when it looked as if he'd have to hop a freight back to New York with his wife and family. He's improved himself conscientiously and thoroughly as an actor all along the way. It shows in his work.

But in Bob's ranch home today for every tome on the art of the drama (and there aren't too many), there are fifty big volumes on aeronautics, navigation, military tactics of the air, aviation engines, aerodynamics, the theory and practice of this and that. They clutter up the place.

A guy as crate-happy as that was bound to get whatever he wanted in the air. Bob got his transport license at last, and it was okay with him to quit the glamour of Broadway and start herding an airliner.

He was doing all right in Manhattan at the time, too—playing the lead in Earl Carroll's Vanities and doubling in radio shows. But he put in his application for a pilot's job. There was a slight hitch—there weren't any jobs. He heard Southern California was the air center of the future—they'd just held the National Air Races there—and so, what do you think? —uh-huh, Bob came right on out to Hollywood.

Now, it's best to skip the early artistic saga of Cummings in Movieland. But on the aviation side—that's different.

IN HIS spare time—and Bob had plenty of that—he hung around Mines Field in Los Angeles. Pretty soon he had some pals, one especially named Peterson, whom Bob thinks is about as good in the air as they come. Peterson is now chief inspector for the Aeronautical Service so maybe he's right. Anyway, they got together and decided what Southern California needed was another flying school. The Peterson Flying Service resulted with Bob as a partner. They contracted for six planes and enrolled a flock of students. Bob secured the first instructor's rating ever put on a private license, and things were set to go. Only—there wasn't any money.

"I would hate to say that my first movie check vanished in thin air," grins Bob. "But you can guess what did happen."

The Peterson Flying Service is extinct now, but it has some kind of a record. From it sprang three flying clubs (still alive and kicking and founded by Bob Cummings). And not one Peterson student, many of whom are winging around for Uncle Sam today, ever cracked up or had a minor mishap. Bob Cummings is twice as proud of that as he could be of an Academy Oscar. And that brings us to Art versus Aviation.

Bart Marshall lost a foot last war. This time, he's minding the home front. You'll see him as Shirley Temple's dad in "Girl on the Hill."

Movie Hollywood has never handed Bob Cummings too much fun, fortune or even fame until just recently. It's almost unbelievable, but he made nineteen pictures at Paramount on his first studio contract, and still when he got the pink slip there, hardly anyone knew who he was. They were still "discovering" Robert Cummings when he showed up with Deanna Durbin at Universal in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." They discovered him the other day with Jean Arthur in "The Devil and Miss Jones." They'll probably discover him all over again in "Kings Row."

"In my first pictures," he remembers, "I was always a young kid about to go over the top and get killed or a kid who didn't have the guts to go over the top or who went over and ran back. When the weakling-in-an-awful-spot era passed, I became Mr. Cute Kid, gay, flippant and pretty obnoxious, I'm afraid."

THIS sort of thing depressed him, and the mysterious ways of Hollywood further balled up his enthusiasm for being a great star. He believes he's been consistently under-rated and held down at Universal. His own bosses told Sam Wood Bob couldn't possibly do "The Devil and Miss Jones" until Wood called him over and asked his personal opinion. "Can you handle the emotional scenes?"

"Sure," said Bob, "I know I can."

"All right," Wood replied, "if you know you can, you can. That's the only opinion I'm interested in."

What Sam Wood thinks about Robert Cummings now is pretty easily proved by the fact that Wood postponed "Kings Row" for five weeks waiting for him to star in the sensitive part of "Parris Mitchell," written especially for Tyrone Power. But Wood apparently thinks Bob is a better actor than Ty.

These things please Bob Cummings, of course, but they don't especially thrill him right now. For one thing, work is ganging up on him, and he's exhausted. He has made six pictures since the first of the year and that's almost one a month. He tells me:

"I feel like a six-day bicycle rider at this point. I'm pedalling back and forth between 'It Started with Adam' and 'Kings Row.' Lines of dialogue are chasing themselves around in circles in my brain. Half the time I don't know which way's South or what time it is. I haven't had my plane off the ground in weeks."

Which is serious to Bob Cummings. Much more serious than the fact that the Hollywood society columns pass him by, and the gossip tidbits gleaned at gay movie night spots and plush parties seldom include his name. He just doesn't go in for that. His life is rather a closed corporation and a harmonious, happy one with his dainty blonde wife, formerly Vivian Janis. They met when both trouped with the Ziegfeld Follies, and they've lived happily ever after. Vivian flies the Cummings' Cessna cabin job, Spinach III, and helps Bob navigate on their cross-country trips.

For a long time Bob and Vivian had a house in the unfashionable part of old Hollywood and would probably be there yet if the place hadn't got to be a stop on the rubberneck bus tours.

"I didn't mind that so much," laughs Bob, "but when they got out, looked in at the window while I ate my breakfast

"My Mom's a Modern!"...

MY MOM knows the answers . . . and tells 'em to me! She's a good sport . . . that's what makes it so swell!

For instance, a fancy new hair-do wouldn't stop her from taking a quick trip on a toboggan with the crowd. And she can skate circles and figure-eights around me any winter day!

When the big holiday doings come up, Mom spends hours helping me pull myself together . . . fixing me up from nails to nylons so I can't help but click.

She taught me the trick of never missing any fun that's coming my way, too — even on those trying days of the month.

You see, Mom took me in hand early . . . told me about Kotex sanitary napkins. How Kotex is more comfortable because it's less bulky . . . less apt to rub and chafe.

She doesn't just dish things out in headlines!

It was Mom who put me wise to the fact that Kotex has a moisture-resistant "safety shield" and flat, pressed ends (they mean a lot to a girl's confidence in these days of bias-cut clothes). I always know my secret is safe with Kotex.

Of course, Kotex in 3 different sizes — Junior, Regular, and Super — is swell. To me they're just like play-suits, date dresses and formals: each one suits a different day's needs — perfectly.

But I was talking about Mom. She's a modern like me . . . isn't she a peach?

Be confident . . . comfortable . . . carefree

— *with Kotex !

Completes a girl's education. Send today for the new free booklet "As One Girl To Another". It gives the answers to your intimate questions . . . tells what to do and not to do on "difficult days". Just send your name and address to Post Office Box 3434, Dept. MM-12, Chicago, Illinois, and you'll get a copy FREE.

(*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

and commented on my table manners, I decided it was time to move!"

He lives now on a ranch in Van Nuys surrounded by dogs, chickens, ducks, walnuts, oranges, berries, beans and all sorts of things agricultural. He has just built his mother a house on the property, which, I might add, is just a hop, step and jump from Hollywood's United Airport. It would be.

For Bob Cummings' body may be on a picture set, but his heart and head are still in the clouds—the real variety. So are his bad habits, by the way. Bob smoked like a furnace until he started specializing in high altitude flights with an oxygen tank. After breathing the vital gas in high heaven, he found a cigarette tasted like cabbage when he came down. He had no desire to smoke and hasn't for a couple of years. He tried the cure on his wife and older brother, and it worked there, too. Now Bob is almost as bad as an anti-tobacco crusader about taking a high ride and dropping the weed.

Matter of fact, he's a steady crusader for aviation in all departments. As I said, many of Uncle Sam's flyers owe their start to Bob Cummings today. He got his lawyer brother interested in flying, and he's Lieutenant Colonel and judge advocate in the Air Corps Reserve. The Cummings are great pals of Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul. The other day Bob whipped the newlyweds down to San Diego for Deanna's first ride. On the way she remembered, "Oh, heavens!" gasped Deanna. "This is against the law!"

"Against what law?" inquired pilot Bob.

"It's in my contract that I can't go up in a plane," confessed Deanna.

"Then it's a silly contract," observed Cummings scornfully, giving the throttle the gun. "We'll just rise above it."

Bob himself had a brief scuffle with studio notions like that and not long ago. He has been getting himself as fit as possible for army duty, which means he has to qualify for complete instrument rating to fly anything like a bomber. Before he herded the twin-engine bombers to Canada, a Canadian Royal Air Force inspector had to check up on him, because bomber pilots are supposed to have 2,000 hours of army flying. One trip around the field with Bob, though, and he signalled "Okay."

Just the same, for Uncle Sam, Bob is boning up on all sorts of night studies and instrument flying when he can get a few hours to run out to the airport. "I've put myself on unlimited call," Bob informs, "which means they might call me tomorrow and I'd go—right now."

But all this flying started giving Universal the jitters recently. They called Bob in and suggested he stop it. "We'd like to write a 'no-flying' clause in your contract," they began.

"That's a swell idea," Bob said. "Why don't you write one with Hitler, too?"

PAL GEORGIE

(Continued from page 53)

has to tell a funny story or do a burlesque clog that he did for her when they first met, before they had teamed up and were still "from hunger" solo hoofers.

Nights when he comes back with a load of newspapers, magazines and comic books under his arm, he'll do a Fuller brush routine at the front door. Or pretend he's a census taker. Juliette Murphy, who is quick like a wink when it comes to gags, does a little gagging herself and finally lets him in. He brings her goofy gifts, an old edition of Godey's Ladies' Book one night, a weird and useless Rube Goldberg invention or maybe some leechee nuts. Once he brought her a cook book written in Russian.

"It belonged to the Czarina," he said proudly.

"I wonder if the Czarina would mind deciphering it," Juliette wanted to know.

You are not going to hear as you do about most of the Hollywood gentlefolk (thanks to pressure from the publicity department) that the Murphys are stay-at-homes who wouldn't step into Ciro's if impresario Billy Wilkerson presented them with a season pass.

They do step out and cut a rug or two every now and then. Inevitably there will come the moment when George will automatically start to slide into a fancy routine, one they did, say, in "Shoot the Works."

"Why, George!" Mrs. Murphy will say to him with mock surprise. "For free?"

Now and then they cut loose a bit, and the first thing you know they have the floor to themselves the while amateur patrons stand by awed and admiring.

Then, of course, there are the Murphy parties.

George and Juliette will have rocked along for a spell living the dinner-book-radio-bed routine when all of a sudden George will toss his copy of Life onto a table, jump up as if he had been slipped the old hot foot and yell:

"What do you say we throw a party tonight?"

Mrs. Murphy knows the symptoms only too well. Also that the malady is chronic and incurable. Being a philosopher, she will say:

"It's a swell idea."

Well, in ten minutes Georgie has rung up everyone in Hollywood who lives even remotely out his way. And strangely enough he gets amazing response, considering the fact that he insists that his guests come right over and never mind dressing. Once Ray Milland did exactly that and whipped over in Paisley pajamas toting a copy of "King's Row" which he had been reading when Murphy's ukase arrived. On hand were the Menjous, Cagneys, Frank Ross and his bride, Jean Arthur, Cesar Romero, Frank McHugh, the Roger Pryors, etc., etc.

At a party George Murphy shines like the star of Bethlehem on a Christmas tree. He is a trimmed-down male edition of Elsa Maxwell. What does that mean?

TYPEWRITER
1/3 PRICE
STANDARD OFFICE MODELS
About 1/3 MFRS. ORIG. PRICE
Easiest Terms as Low as 70¢ a Week
All models completely rebuilt like new.
FULL 2-YEAR GUARANTEE
No Money Down—10 Day Trial
Send for FREE price smashing literature in colors. Shows all models. See our literature before you buy. SEND TODAY.
FREE COURSE IN TYPING INCLUDED.
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCH.
Dept. 1261, 231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.
10c A DAY

New 11-Minute Home Shampoo

Mothers and daughters stay young together when sunny, golden curls and smart, blonde coiffure are both glowingly lovely. Because of its delicate texture, particular care is needed to keep blonde hair from fading, darkening, losing attractiveness. That's why smart blondes throughout the country use BLONDEX, the new 11-minute home shampoo made specially for blondes. It removes dull, dingy film and brings out every glorious highlight. Absolutely safe even for children's hair. To give hair beautiful lustre and radiance, top off shampoo with Blondex Golden Rinse. Can be used on all shades of blonde hair. Both cost but a few pennies to use. Get Blondex Shampoo and Golden Rinse at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

MODERN SCREEN COMES THROUGH AGAIN!

This time with an exclusive letter from our English correspondent, chock-full of first-hand news about your old friends Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Dick Greene and Dave Niven! In our January issue, on sale December first. Don't miss it!

He starts off as host, turns emcee and winds up as the triple-threat chief performer. He sings wheezy songs that go back to 1902 before he was born, sings them for laughs; Cagney, Montgomery and Pryor joining him in a barber shop quartet. He goes through an ad-lib routine of patter, ranging from tent-show spiels to the type of stuff Bob Hope rattles off (courtesy of some very clever Paramount script-writers). And, of course, he does some fancy hoofing and all of it spur-of-the-moment stuff. Occasionally, Cesar Romero will hop up and go into a duet with George. Lord knows how they do it, but they manage to reel off some hilarious and impromptu take-offs of Veloz and Yolanda, the De Marcos and even a pair of ballerinas. Veterans of the Murphy parties arrive home exhausted: it's a case of guest-participation with a vengeance.

Mostly Friday night is Stag Night for Murphy and the boys. They leave their wives at home (being smart wives, they have banded together for these occasions and take turns in entertaining in the absence of their spouses, at bridge, backgammon, etc.) and truck on out to the Stadium fights. Cagney sits back quietly and watches the matches as calmly as a professor. Bob Montgomery is amused. Murphy is excited. He invariably cheers lustily for the loser.

Fights over, they pile into somebody's station wagon and head for Dave Chasen's, which, by the time they arrive, will be packed with the Friday-night habitués, Mickey Rooney, Jack Warner, Preston Sturges, etc. They will settle down in their favorite corner, North by East, order up potions and get to gabbing. Maybe Phil Regan will join them. Or George Raft and Killer Gray. Or Burgess Meredith with a blonde on each arm. Irishmen manage to predominate, which makes it just ducky for Cagney, who is an authority on Irish history and owns a magnificent library on the subject. When Professor Cagney speaks, the boys have to stop rattling the ice in their glasses in order to hear him. He talks low and slow. But brilliantly. Somehow when he's holding forth on his favorite subject, Geraldine Fitzgerald and her Irish husband, Edward Lindsay-Hogg, will drop in out of nowhere.

From ga-ga to gags, Bob thumbnails the Hope the world knows in "They Got Me Covered," his autobiography. First chapter's entitled, "I Was Born; or, It Could Happen to Anyone."

Nowhere is Pal Georgie more in his element than on the golf course. The most popular member of the Lakeside Country Club, he is that rarity of rarities, a golfer who gets a big kick out of it whether he shoots a 90 or a 190.

"Can you do a buck and wing?" he demands of Adolphe Menjou or Frank Craven, both good golfers, when they hoot at him for dubbing a drive.

Held down to an allowance of $40 a week by his agent, he doesn't have very much money to gamble. A dollar a hole is his absolute top.

"For marbles!" Bob Hope says in good-natured derision.

It's after the game when Murphy and party trudge back into the clubhouse that you get a glimpse of his popularity. Weissmuller gives him the Tarzan yell. Bing Crosby hails him with a tongue-twisting greeting (the same kind of formidable talk he uses on the air). O'Brien will call him over to tell him a new joke. The shine boy cuts loose with a spot of soft shoe dancing. Murphy goes into the dance with him and in a few seconds they're really going to town. Even the boys engaged in a little poker-playing leave the table to watch. Waiters stop in their tracks.

"A Gaelic beatitude, this fellow Murphy," says tribute-paying chum, Bing Crosby, "a benefactor of all humanity."

First and Only CANDY served the "Quints"!

UM-M-M! You'll agree with the "Quints" and millions of Americans that Baby Ruth is candy at its finest! You'll love the luscious, velvety-smooth coating, the chewy caramel and tasty opera cream center, the abundance of golden, freshly roasted peanuts which make up this great candy bar. Baby Ruth is good food — good for you. Its ingredients are all pure, wholesome foods—nourishing and delicious. Enjoy a big bar of Baby Ruth today!

CURTISS CANDY COMPANY
Chicago, Ill.

"Baby Ruth, being rich in Dextrose, vital food-energy sugar, and other palatable ingredients, makes a pleasant, wholesome candy for children."

Allan Roy Dafoe, M.D.

RICH IN DEXTROSE Food-Energy Sugar

IRRESISTIBLE You

WITH

Irresistible RUBY RED

Glamorous daring red for your lips with IRRESISTIBLE RUBY RED Lipstick... a color that flashes like precious rubies. Wear this richest of reds as a brilliant accent to all costumes. Ruby Red Lipstick is WHIP-TEXT to be softer, smoother, non-drying, and keeps your lips lovelier longer. Matching Rouge, Face Powder and Foundation.

Only 10c each at all 5 & 10c Stores

IT'S Whip-Text
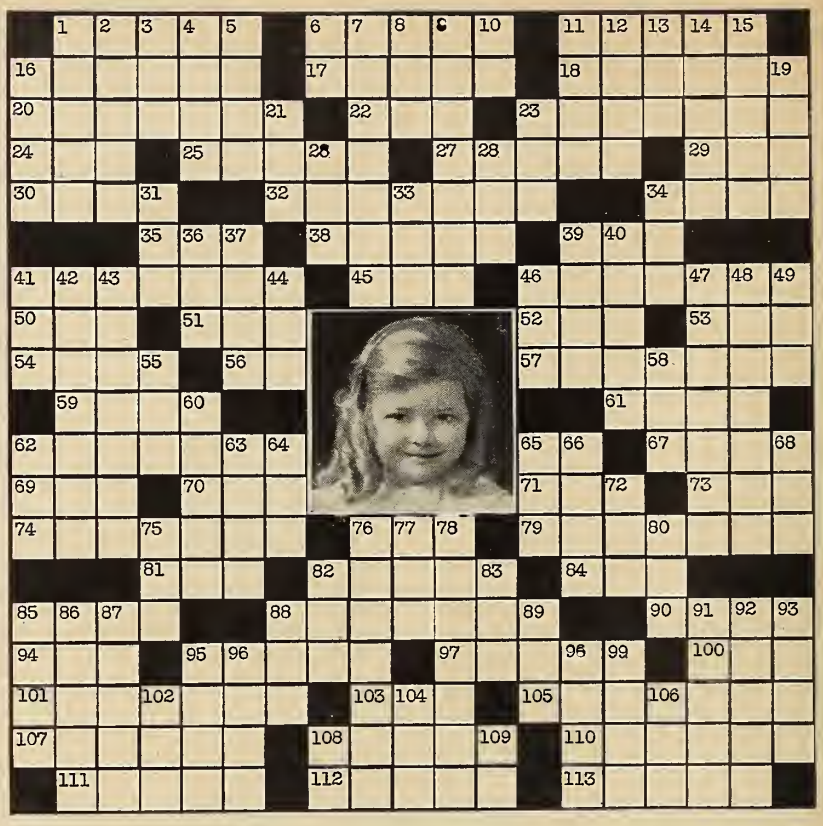
LASTS LONGER...
SMOOTHER

USE IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME

OUR PUZZLE PAGE



Puzzle Solution on Page 101

ACROSS

1. Custer in "They Died With Their Boots On"
6. Cary Grant's real name
11. Bitter herbs
16. "Information - - - - -"
17. - - - - - Jones
18. Femme in "Cadet Girl"
20. Romantic lead in "Charley's Aunt"
22. Auditory organ
23. With Shirley in "Kathleen"
24. Small mound
25. Femme in "They Met In A Taxi"
27. Present in "Tarzan" films
29. Light brown
30. Heraldry: grafted
32. Secretary in "Ellery Queen" series
34. "- - - Woman Is Mine"
35. Star of "Nothing But The Truth"
38. Stupid person
39. Disfigure
41. Star of "Skylark"
45. Kath - - - Grayson
46. Marian in "The Hardy Family"
50. Comic in "Hellzapoppin'"
51. Star of "Nevada City"
52. Juvenile in "New York Story"
53. Man's name
54. Nests
56. Medico
57. Girl in "Barnacle Bill"
59. Beauty in "The Pittsburgh Kid"
61. A Shirley Temple toy
62. Singer in "Week-End In Havana"
65. Accomplish
67. Persian monetary unit
69. Republic's little singer
70. "- - - Wife"
71. Shade tree
73. Scotch for "one"
74. Gratifies
76. Rod
79. Traditions
81. Where movies are filmed
82. Home of movies: abbr.
84. "The Bride C - - - C. O. D."
85. Mr. Summerville
88. Large water bird
90. Prevaricator
94. She's in "Under Age"
95. - - - - - Cregar
97. "Dr. Kildare"
100. "That Night In - - -"
101. "The Land Of Liberty"
103. Armed conflict
105. Bowmen
107. Last name of 46 Across
108. Wife in "Blood And Sand"
110. "Andy Hardy"
111. Father of "The Hardy Family"
112. Edible bulb
113. What "Champion" is

DOWN

1. Femme in "The Parson Of Panamint"
2. Lease again
3. Claude - - - ns
4. Greek mountain
5. Daniel Boone in "Hurry, Charlie, Hurry"
6. Spanish article
7. Marilyn in "Lady Be Good"
8. Wing
9. Doctor in "Hold That Ghost"
10. Jo - - Litel
11. Opposite "Lydia"
12. "Anne of Windy Pop - - - -"
13. Miss Munson
14. - - - - - Fellows
15. Biblical mountain
16. Short subjects' commentator
19. Japanese coins
21. Nothing
23. Star in "Love Crazy"
26. Colonel in "Arizona Bound"
28. Actor in "Dr. Jekyll And Mr. Hyde"
31. Recede
33. Arid
34. Three: prefix
36. Above: poet.
37. - - - - Crawford
39. Nothing but
40. Pungent
41. Against
42. Opposite "That Hamilton Woman"
43. Male lead in "Puddin' Head"
44. Norse god of war
46. Glamorous Elsie is this
47. Singer in "Dancing On A Dime"
48. Geraldine Fitzgerald's homeland
49. Swiss river
55. Talented girl in "Ladies In Retirement"
58. Beetle
60. Positive terminal
62. Member of Legislative Assembly: abbr.
63. Composition for two performers
64. "- - - Gratia Artis"
65. Director Roy - - - Ruth
66. Genus of olive
68. Joan - - - lie
72. Our star's studio
75. Doctrine
76. Husband of 46 Across
77. "- - - Baba Goes To Town"
78. Ace screen villain
80. Elongated fish
82. "That - - - tain Age"
83. Girl's name
85. Easy task
86. Tibetan monks
87. Inactive
88. Bergman's daughter
89. Extinct government code
91. She's grand in "Unfinished Business"
92. Ventilated
93. Blooming
95. Legal claim
96. Land measure
98. Blunders
99. "- - - land Yard"
102. Anne Sbirley's studio
104. Cuckoo
106. Garden implement
108. Behold
109. Article

OOMPH FOR SALE

(Continued from page 36)

place to go in search of ballyhoo was the studio publicity department. "The press agents asked me if I had any violent objections to leg art. I said no. That was one thing I wasn't shy about, thanks to my background as a dancer. Willing subjects, they said, were hard for photographers to find."

Her first break in Life magazine was a bathing suit shot. And because she was so co-operative about posing, that magazine has since given her a half-dozen breaks and pictured her on the cover twice!

"But please don't get the idea," she went on quickly, "that I confined myself exclusively to leg art. I posed for layouts showing beauty treatments, the home life of a starlet and then 'how not to behave in a night club.' But," she admitted frankly, "the shots in bathing suits were what started the publicity ball rolling."

AND what set it catapulting?

"The studio," confided Rita, "had an idea that was a flash of genius. They said, 'Every time you hear of a best-dressed woman in Hollywood, she's always a star. Why don't we try something new—give you a build-up as the best-dressed starlet?'

"Even before the fashion build-up started, Eddie and I realized the importance of always looking well-groomed in private life. That was how I got my first real break. After I acquired one $500 outfit, we went to the Clover Club, figuring that there would be more people there than anywhere else. At a nearby table sat Harry Cohn, head of Columbia, and Howard Hawks, who was going to direct 'Only Angels Have Wings.' I didn't know it, but Mr. Hawks was still looking for a girl to play Cary Grant's ex-wife. Even though he'd never seen me before, he said, 'That girl could play the part.'"

That role in "Only Angels Have Wings" meant a lot to Rita, but it didn't mean much to the public. She was on the screen for only about two scenes. And yet the public interest in her kept mounting steadily. There was only one explanation: Publicity.

"Eddie and I really went all-out in our campaign, invested $15,000 in clothes and made a practice of night-clubbing every Saturday night. The photographers took my picture. Columnists became Hayworth-conscious. People mentioned me in the same breath with stars.

"A couple of magazines asked me to pose for covers—space usually reserved for stars—and I did a few big billboard ads. A national picture magazine heard about the $15,000 wardrobe and covered a picture-story on it, calling me the best-dressed star!"

What single publicity stunt had paid the biggest dividends?

Quick as a flash, she said: "The time I put on the $250,000 pearl dress. No other publicity stunt in 1940 got the space that that did. Maybe you remember the dress. It was made of 40,000 pearls of seven different sizes—as an ad for the Imperial Pearl Syndicate. It weighed thirty pounds. It took fifteen dressmakers six weeks to make it. And at least fifteen guards surrounded it every time it was put on exhibition.

"The fashion editor of Columbia heard that I. Magnin and Company was going to show it here. She gave Magnin's a

"My Husband fell out of Love"

How a wife overcame the

"ONE NEGLECT"

that often wrecks romance

I COULDN'T UNDERSTAND IT when Paul's love began to cool.

We'd been so gloriously happy at first. . . . But now he treated me as if . . . as if there were a physical barrier between us.

Finally I went to our family doctor and explained the whole situation frankly. "Your marriage problem is quite a common one," he told me.

"Psychiatrists say the cause is often the wife's neglect of feminine hygiene. That's one fault a husband may find it hard to mention—or forgive.

"In cases like yours," the doctor went on, "I recommend Lysol for intimate personal care. It's cleansing and deodorizing, and even more important—Lysol solution kills millions of germs on instant contact, without harm to sensitive tissues."

I bought a bottle of Lysol right away. I find it gentle and soothing, easy to use. Economical, too.

No wonder so many modern wives use Lysol for feminine hygiene. And . . . as for Paul and me . . . we're closer than ever before.

Check this with your Doctor

Lysol is NON-CAUSTIC—gentle and efficient in proper dilution. Contains no free alkali. It is not carbolic acid. EFFECTIVE—a powerful germicide, active in presence of organic matter (such as mucus, serum, etc.). SPREADING—Lysol solutions spread and virtually search out germs in deep crevices. ECONOMICAL—small bottle makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. CLEANLY ODOR—disappears after use. LASTING—Lysol keeps full strength indefinitely, no matter how often it is uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

PASTE THIS COUPON ON A PENNY POSTCARD

What Every Woman Should Know

Free Booklet Sent in Plain Wrapper

Lehn & Fink Products Corp.
Dept. M. S. - 1241, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Send me (in plain wrapper) free booklet on Feminine Hygiene and many other Lysol uses.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

Copyright 1941 by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

Even busy housewives can now have
"VELVET HANDS"

Do your hands redden and crack, feel dry and rough after housework or laundry chores? Then discover BARRINGTON! Housewives and secretaries, salesclerks and nurses—women who regularly use this fragrant, unusual new cream say there's nothing quite like BARRINGTON for making the hands feel like velvet. Buy a generous size 44c, 25c or 10c jar today—at leading 5 and 10c stores, independent variety, drug and department stores. Or write North American Dye Corporation, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Barrington Hand Cream

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

★TRANSPARENT ★ ROOFLESS ★ PARTIAL ★

$6.85 to $35

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. FREE impression material, directions, catalog and information. Write today to U.S. DENTAL CO., Dept. C-104, Chicago, Ill.

60 DAYS' TRIAL

FREE!

IT'S SO EASY TO KNOW ABOUT

Feminine Hygiene

Facts every woman should know—for her satisfaction. No reason to be without information.

The MODERN WAY

A simple, dainty, medicated suppository — cleansing, deodorizing, astringent and soothing—ready for instant use—that is Boro Pheno-Form, for years the choice of thousands of smart women. So simple, convenient and satisfactory!

Simple, because each single medicated cone is complete in itself. Convenient, because ready for instant use. Satisfactory—three generations of women testify to its satisfactory use.

FREE!

Interesting and informative booklet explains the Boro Pheno-Form way of Feminine Hygiene. Get your copy now.

Ask Any Druggist Anywhere—or write
Dr. Pierre Chemical Company
162 No. Franklin St.—Chicago, Illinois—Dept. L14

DR. PIERRE'S BORO PHENO FORM

sales talk about having me model it—me, instead of Hedy Lamarr or Ann Sheridan or Dorothy Lamour or someone else better known than I was. I'll never know how she managed that. And I didn't know she had managed it—I hadn't even heard about the dress—until I had a frantic phone call from her. I was at Catalina on a yacht, when she finally caught up with me.

"This was Monday noon. 'I've been trying to reach you since Friday,' she gasped, and told me about the dress, and how she had promised I would model it for newspapermen on Monday afternoon and for photographers on Tuesday. Only how was I going to get back to town in time? There wasn't a plane reservation to be had. I camped at the seaplane landing, hoping against hope that someone would cancel out. Finally, at 3 o'clock, someone did. The fashion editor had gray hair by the time I arrived—but I did get there.

"The real ordeal, though, came on Tuesday. I stood in that dress from 4 to 7, posing for each photograper in turn. One photographer, for a national magazine, had been promised an exclusive shot showing me being helped into the dress. (The way I got into it, by the way, was to sit on the floor and then rise by degrees as two women unrolled it, inch by inch, down over me.) It took a little doing to give him his exclusive shot. They smuggled him into the ladies' lounge, where his competitors wouldn't look for him, then escorted me there to pose for him. And all the while the matron was wringing her hands and moaning, 'Dear, dear, this is against the rules!' "

Couldn't she have made life simpler for herself by refusing to pose for three solid hours in a thirty-pound dress?

Rita smiled for the umpteenth time during our interview. "I loved it. Any time photographers gang up on me, I love it. And why shouldn't I? It's part of my business, my career, isn't it, now?"

ADONIS ON WHEELS

(Continued from page 45)

the speed at which Bob's craft was traveling, carelessly cut across his bow, threw a heavy wash into his tack, upended the Thunderbird and hurled him fifty feet into the air. And fifty feet later, he busted himself up like an isinglass Christmas apple. "For gosh sakes, don't tell Betzi," were his first post-coma words.

Betzi is his mother, Mrs. James Langford Stack, born a member of one of California's pioneer families, married into a family as highly placed and wealthy as her own. Today, mother of a son of twenty-five and Bob, she remains one of the most strikingly beautiful women of her time, one of her son's favorite dates.

Which brings us around to the matter of his romances. It is only natural that he should be pursued by goggle-eyed females with about as much gray matter between the ears as a golf trophy. But it isn't so natural that traveled women, older women, women as popular in their own right as he in his, should vie for his company. Yet they do.

Bob has been variously reported as engaged to about everyone from Olivia de Havilland to Miss May Robson, but he hasn't yet been engaged to anybody. One of his most publicized romances was with Deanna Durbin, but that wasn't any romance at all. Deanna married Vaughn Paul as she'd long intended to do, and that was that. In the meantime, Bob had been reported engaged to Miss Cobina Wright, Jr.

Engagement or not, it is a strong friendship. Their social backgrounds are more or less equal, they are both blonde, they are athletic and they are alive and vital young sophisticates. Today, Cobina probably is Bob's closest woman friend.

Not so long ago he was reported deeply interested in Olivia de Havilland. The rumors sent your reporter snooping about the better boites in an effort to turn up a gay romance, but, while there was some gaiety, there was absolutely no romance. It developed that Bob had been out with Olivia just once, at a Hollywood dinner party for a War Relief event.

Considering the fact that women find his company so desirable and are hardly modest about saying so, he spends an abnormally large amount of time with men. Al Jepson, mechanic for his boats and his racing automobile, and salty Ab Jenkins . . . both talk his language, which is speed and outdoors, and they make boon companions.

Another pal is William Orr, Hollywood

The lead in Odets' "They Clash by Night" is new plum for veteran Joseph Schildkraut, shown at the Hotel St. Moritz' Continental Cafe de la Paix.

actor who is nearer Bob's own age than his other companions. Orr is an outdoors citizen, too, fond of speed boats, automobiles, horses, skiing, fishing, hunting and flying. Whenever the pair are on layoff at the same time, they are together, but the exigencies of Hollywood life don't often permit this.

Bob also spends considerable time with his uncle, Richard Bonelli, the famous Metropolitan Opera Company baritone, who is married to his mother's sister.

Bob once advised Signor Bonelli against trying out the new Stack boat . . . the Flying Cloud. Signor Bonelli, himself a celebrated wrecker of feminine hearts not so many years ago, laughed politely. There wasn't a boat afloat, he said, that could scare him.

"Sail on, sailor," said the signor, breaking into "Sailing, Sailing, Over The Bounding Main," until his baritone voice undulated over the waters and charmed the pine trees and sequoias bowing appreciatively in the breeze. Off went the Flying Cloud, picking up a thirty-mile-an-hour gait almost instantly.

"Sailing, Sailing, Over The Bounding Main," ululated Signor Bonelli gaily.

The craft picked up more speed. The water churned behind her. The waves were slipping past at forty miles an hour. The gaiety in Signor Bonelli's voice ceased at forty. At forty-five Bob barely distinguished the notes. The Flying Cloud hit forty-nine and was still climbing.

SAILOR Beware, Sailor Take Care," sang the voice, with the gauge at fifty which is mighty close to a world record for a racing runabout. Finally, he croaked: "Many Brave Hearts Lie Asleep in the Deep-uh-uh." And that was all. Signor Bonelli had found dubious sanctuary in the bottom of the cockpit.

Bob doesn't have a Beverly Hills or Brentwood house of his own but lives with his family in a wing of the Ardmore Avenue home in Los Angeles. He does have a lodge at Tahoe, however, and is spending virtually all of his layoff time there building a ski house. The lodge was handed down from his grandmother and grandfather and so was the big house on Ardmore. There's a swimming pool on the town house grounds now, his sole genuflection to the responsibility of being a movie star.

He got into pictures for one reason; because he wanted to. As a high school student, he wanted to be an actor. He attended all plays and movies he could find time for and devoured Shakespeare. In fact, at twelve he was the John Kieran of 411 South Ardmore.

About the "kid" roles the folks at Universal dish out to him, he complains, "I've been with older people all my life. Frankly, I feel a little silly in those high school kid roles. Still, maybe that's the way I act . . . a little half baked. If that's the case, it's up to me to grow up dramatically.

"Certainly I'm serious about acting," he says, "and all this baloney about my having eight million dollars is harmful. I haven't got eight million. I haven't even got one million. I've got to make my living the same as anyone else, and I hope to make it in pictures. So why shouldn't I be serious?"

He looked pretty grim about that. Then he grinned, his slow, half abashed grin, and said:

"Now that we've got the 'corn crop' in, how about a spin in the Flying Cloud?"

So far as these tired old eyes can see, there's not much wrong with a young man of twenty-two who can take himself in his stride that way. He is still the same Bobby no matter whether he has eight million bucks or eight bucks.

. . . Returns from forbidden land to tell of strange experiences.

DO WE HAVE TO DIE?

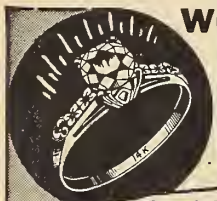
A strange man in Los Angeles, known as "The Voice of Two Worlds," reveals the story of a remarkable system that often leads to almost unbelievable improvement in power of mind, achievement of brilliant business and professional success and new happiness. Many report improvement in health. Others tell of increased bodily strength, magnetic personality, courage and poise.

The man, a well-known explorer and geographer, tells how he found these strange methods in far-off and mysterious Tibet, often called the land of miracles by the few travelers permitted to visit it. He discloses how he learned rare wisdom and long-hidden practices, closely guarded for three thousand years by the sages, which enabled many to perform amazing feats. He maintains that these immense powers are latent in all of us, and that methods for using them are now simplified so that they can be used by almost any person with ordinary intelligence.

He maintains that man, instead of being limited by a one-man-power mind, has within him the mind-power of a thousand men or more as well as the energy-power of the universe which can be used in his daily affairs. He states that this sleeping giant of mind-power, when awakened, can make man capable of surprising accomplishments, from the prolonging of youth, to success in many fields. To that eternal question, "Do we have to die?" his answer is astounding.

The author states the time has come for this long-hidden system to be disclosed to the Western world, and offers to send his amazing 9,000-word treatise—which reveals many startling results—to sincere readers of this publication, free of cost or obligation. For your free copy, address the Institute of Mentalphysics, 213 South Hobart Blvd., Dept. 114E, Los Angeles, Calif. Readers are urged to write promptly, as only a limited number of the free treatises have been printed.

Lovable
THERE'S MORE
TO BEAUTY
THAN
A PRETTY FACE
Beautiful Marie Wilson, Hollywood screen star . . no wonder most girls prefer Lovable — the less-than-o-dollar brassiere with million-dollar appeal! Be lovable—write Dept. M for free style book.
LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO.
358 Fifth Ave., New York
In Canada: Canadian Lady Corset Co., Ltd., Montreal



WOMEN MUST SPARKLE!

Ask glamorous celebrities —exciting women of style! No need for $1000 diamonds. This fiery BLU-BRITE* ZIRCON diamond dazzles everyone — and fools experts!

FREE!! Rush a penny post card for our special XMAS catalog. JUST SEE these exotic, diamond-dazzling BLU-BRITE* ZIRCON creations—Now 98% less expensive than diamonds.

AMERICA'S ONLY DISTRIBUTOR OF BLU-BRITE*—THE FINEST ZIRCON MINED.

*Trademark

KIMBERLY GEM CO., Inc.
503 5th AVE. Dept. 3E NEW YORK CITY

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home; not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. For 30 years millions have used it with complete satisfaction. $1.35 for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE
BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. M 12-41
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Name
Street
City State
GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
Accent on Love (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Adventure in Washington (Columbia)	3★
Affectionotely Yours (Warners)	2½★
Aloma of the South Seas (Paramount)	C 2½★
*Appointment For Love (Universal)	3★
Arizona Bound (Monogram)	C 2½★
Back Street (Universal)	3★
Bad Man, The (M-G-M)	C 2½★
Barnacle Bill (M-G-M)	2½★
Big Store, The (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Billy the Kid (M-G-M)	C 3★
*Birth of the Blues (Paramount)	3★
Black Cat, The (Universal)	2½★
Blondie in Society (Columbia)	C 2½★
Blood and Sand (20th Century-Fox)	C 3½★
Blossoms in the Dust (M-G-M)	4★
Bride Came C. O. D., The (Warners)	3½★
Caught in the Draft (Paramount)	3★
Chorley's Aunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Cheers for Miss Bishop (United Artists)	4★
*Chocolate Soldier (M-G-M)	3½★
Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
Citizen Kane (RKO)	4★
City Limits (Monogram)	C 2★
Come Live With Me (M-G-M)	3★
Comin' Round the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
Cowboy and the Blonde (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Cracked Nuts (Universal)	2½★
Dance Hall (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Dead Men Tell (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Devil and Miss Jones, The (RKO)	3½★
Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (M-G-M)	3★
Double Dote (Universal)	2★
Dressed to Kill (20th Century-Fox)	3★
*Dumbo (RKO)	3½★
Father Takes a Wife (RKO)	2½★
Flame of New Orleans, The (Universal)	3½★
Flight From Destiny (Warners)	2½★
Footlight Fever (RKO)	2★
Footsteps in the Dark (Warners)	3★
Forced Landing (Paramount)	2½★
Free and Easy (M-G-M)	2★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Getaway, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Girl, A Guy and A Gob, A (RKO)	3★
Girl in the News (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Gone With the Wind (M-G-M)	4★
Great American Broadcast, The (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great Lie, The (Warners)	3½★
Great Mr. Nobody (Warners)	2½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Hello Sucker (Universal)	2½★
Here Comes Happiness (Warners)	2½★
Here Comes Mr. Jordan (Columbia)	4★
Her First Beau (Columbia)	C 3★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Columbia)	2½★
Hit the Road (Universal)	C 2½★
Hold That Ghost (Universal)	3★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universol)	2½★
Horror Island (Universal)	2★
*How Green Was My Valley (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Hullabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
Hurry, Charlie, Hurry (RKO)	2½★
Ice-Capades (Republic)	2½★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I'll Wait For You (M-G-M)	2½★
In The Navy (Universal)	3½★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
It Started With Eve (Universal)	4★
Kiss the Boys Goodbye (Paramount)	3½★
Knockout (Warners)	2½★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	C 3½★
*Ladies in Retirement (Columbia)	3½★
Lady Be Good (M-G-M)	3★
Lady from Cheyenne, The (Universal)	3★
Lady from Louisiana, The (Republic)	3★
Land of Liberty (M-G-M)	3★
Last of the Duanes (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Las Vegas Nights (Paramount)	2★
Life Begins for Andy Hardy (M-G-M)	C 3★
Life With Henry (Paramount)	C 2½★
Little Foxes, The (RKO)	4★
Lone Wolf Takes a Chance (Columbia)	2★
Love Crazy (M-G-M)	3½★
Lydia (United Artists)	3½★
Maisie Was a Lady (M-G-M)	2½★
Major Barbara (United Artists)	C 3½★
Man Hunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Man Made Monster (Universal)	2★
Manpower (Warners)	3★
Man Who Lost Himself, The (Universal)	3★
Meet John Doe (Warners)	4★
Melody for Three (RKO)	2½★
*Men in Her Life, The (Columbia)	3★
Men of Boys Town (M-G-M)	C 3★
Million Dollar Baby (Warners)	3½★
Mr. and Mrs. Smith (RKO)	3★
Mr. District Attorney (Republic)	2★
Mr. Dynamite (Universal)	2★
Model Wife (Universol)	3★
Moon Over Burma (Poramount)	2½★
Moon Over Miami (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Murder Among Friends (20th Century-Fox)	3★
*My Life with Caroline (RKO)	3★
Navy Blues (Warners)	C 3★
Night Train (20th Century-Fox)	4★
*Nothing But the Truth (Paramount)	3★
Officer and the Lady, The (Columbia)	2½★
One Night in Lisbon (Paramount)	3★
Out of the Fog (Warners)	3½★
Parson of Panamint (Paramount)	3★
Penalty, The (M-G-M)	3★
Penny Serenade (Columbia)	3½★
People vs. Dr. Kildare (M-G-M)	2★
Pittsburgh Kid, The (Republic)	2½★
Pot O' Gold (United Artists)	3★
Power Dive (Paramount)	2½★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Rage in Heaven (M-G-M)	3★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universol)	C 2★
Reaching for the Sun (Poramount)	3½★
Reluctant Dragon (RKO)	3★
*Repent at Leisure (RKO)	2½★
Ride on Vaquero (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Ringside Moisie (M-G-M)	2½★
Road to Zonzibor (Poramount)	C 4★
Rookies on Parade (Republic)	C 2½★
Round-Up, The (Paramount)	3★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint in Palm Springs, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
Sea Wolf, The (Warners)	3½★
Sergeant York (Warners)	4★
Scattergood Pulls the Strings (RKO)	2½★
Scotland Yard (20th Century-Fox)	2★
She Knew All the Answers (Columbia)	3★
Shepherd of the Hills (Paramount)	3½★
Shining Victory (Warners)	2½★
Sis Hopkins (Republic)	3★
*Skylark (Paramount)	3★
Smiling Ghost, The (Warners)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Spring Parade (Universal)	C 3★
Strange Alibi (Warners)	2½★
Sunny (RKO)	3★
Sun Valley Serenade (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
*Suspicion (RKO)	3★
Sweetheart of the Campus (Columbia)	2★
That Uncertain Feeling (United Artists)	3★
That Hamilton Woman (United Artists)	3½★
That Night in Rio (20th Century-Fox)	3★
There's Magic in Music (Paramount)	2½★
They Dare Not Love (Columbia)	2★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Met in Bombay (M-G-M)	3★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Tight Shoes (Universal)	3★
Time Out For Rhythm (Columbia)	2½★
Tobacco Road (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO)	C 3★
Tom, Dick and Harry (RKO)	4★
Too Many Blondes (Universal)	2★
Topper Returns (United Artists)	3★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
*Two-Faced Woman (M-G-M)	3½★
Two in a Taxi (Columbia)	2½★
Underground (Warners)	3½★
Unexpected Uncle (RKO)	2½★
Unfinished Business (Universal)	3½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Wagons Roll At Night, The (Warners)	3★
Washington Melodrama (M-G-M)	3★
Westerner, The (United Artists)	C 3★
When Ladies Meet (M-G-M)	3★
Whistling in the Dark (M-G-M)	3★
Woman's Face, A (M-G-M)	3½★
Yank in R. A. F., The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Ziegfeld Girl (M-G-M)	3½★

THUMBS DOWN ON HOLLYWOOD

(Continued from page 35)

Lana Turner strolling down Main Street in shorts. So you decide to go home across the mountains, and you ask is there snow in the mountains, and they all say no. So you climb by a succession of hairpin twists and suddenly find yourself teetering like Chaplin's house in "The Gold Rush" at the brink of a chasm, having skidded on a strip of ice that got there by oversight.

When your pulse has slowed down to a hundred and twenty, you crawl back and go forward on the theory that the worst must be over. They said there was no snow in the mountains, didn't they. You turn a corner, and there's snow. You turn more corners and there's more snow. At the end of an hour you've made fifteen miles and acquired the gray streak in your hair that you always thought would be so becoming. You come to a ranger's cabin and a sign, reading: "Use chains or proceed at your peril." You wonder what you've been proceeding at up to now. You wonder why they waited fifteen miles to break the news. You turn back. It's dark. The snowbanks begin to look cozy. You head into one and snuggle down for the night. Death by freezing is tidier than a broken neck. You really love Hollywood now. They haven't any snow—

Until you get back. Then the glow wears off. Because pregnant women go shopping in pajamas. Because Glamorpuss coos through the mike at the premiere: "I just know Clark Gable's going to be wonderful." Because it's legal to drive forty miles in a twenty-five-mile zone. Because bananas are sold by the pound, and the best oranges go to New York. Because Yuma isn't far away and stars call each other "my sweet." Because if you think astrology's the bunk, you're a leper. Because columnists, safe behind their American citizenship, heckle British actors to go home and fight. Because when you ask for scallions, they look blank, and when you point, they beam and say, "Oh, green onions!" Because you get irked with the gas station guy's, "Fill 'er up?" and say coldly, "Four gallons," and get the same all-embracing service and feel like a worm. Because an actor like James Stephenson had to wait three years for a break. Because a man like James Stephenson died.

BECAUSE every visiting jerk who knows your brother-in-law's third cousin wants to be taken to a studio. Because when you rent an unfurnished apartment, you have to buy your own stove and frigidaire. God help you. Because they serve hot dogs on round rolls and no sauerkraut. Because when you like a movie star, you're a toady, and when you don't, you're a jealous cat. Because there's a grain of truth in both charges. Because you get ants with your lease. Because you always thought of palm trees as something poetic in a travelogue, till you came to Hollywood and found they were up-ended brooms to catch the dust of the ages. Because nobody has a right to all the charms, graces and talents heaped by a partial providence on Carmen Miranda. Because there's only one Raft and the Killer—

Which reminds me. In Hollywood, funerals are hawked by every third billboard and woo you sweetly with promises of burial on the instalment plan. If you're blind or can't read, don't fret. The message will be wafted to you over the airwaves. "Just phone," the Hearse Brothers implore you, "and leave the rest to us." "The only place where you can be buried in Colonial style," sniffs the Martha Washington Mortuary, a whit more exclusive. You've lived early American all your life, so you think maybe you ought to die Colonial. On the other hand, it's your last chance at variety, and an eighteenth-century crypt sounds pretty sharp. This leads to endless speculation, which might be better employed on accessories for your new suit. So you wander into Bullock's-Wilshire, and ask absently to see the latest thing in winding-sheets—

And if that doesn't hold you, there are the brats whooping à la Tarzan outside your window while you wrestle with significant thoughts like these. And the cads who want you to read their scenarios but never have time to read yours. And the stars who hire other stars' fired servants to hear what they can hear. And the actor who spreads out his paper to devour Harrison Carroll's column at the football game, never mind whether you see the play or not. And the gals who part their hair in the middle and go mooching down Hollywood Boulevard, dreaming they're Hedy for a day. And the restaurants advertising New York cuts, but try and find one. And the studios telling you their players don't smoke or drink, and you can't even wash out their mouths with lye. And the scorn you feel

Why Hollywood Women LOSE Their MEN!

BROKEN ROMANCES are the worst blight on Hollywood's reputation. Why can't the loveliest women in America hold their men? Learn from their unhappy experiences. Screen Guide tells the intimate truth!

Other Scoops in December Screen Guide:

Greta Garbo Exposed—Now she's no longer such a mystery!
How Bette Davis is facing the new crisis in her career.
Why Bing Crosby won't retire—no matter what "they say"!
Is Joan Crawford ready to try an escape from Hollywood?
Why Irene Dunne is Hollywood's most "interesting" woman.
Ann Sheridan's own personal wardrobe—real-life fashions.
How Joan Fontaine found her formula for happy marriage!
How "Blondie" gets along without "Dagwood" in private life.
Giant Portrait of Claudette Colbert in Full Color!

Fool-Proof Four-Day DIET!

SPECIAL! Hollywood's own diet, designed for stars and now available to you only in Screen Guide! Lose a pound a day—and then follow simple instructions to avoid gaining them back. Created by Terry Hunt, served at "The Brown Derby," followed by the most important stars. It's yours!

SCREEN GUIDE DECEMBER ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

SMART GIRL! No "time out" for regular pain on her calendar! For she knows about Midol—how it relieves the needless functional pain of menstruation, and redeems "lost days" for active living!

Among thousands of women recently interviewed, more reported using Midol for this purpose than all other preparations combined. And 96% of these Midol users said they found Midol effective.

Don't hesitate to try it. Midol contains no opiates. One ingredient is frequently prescribed for headache and muscular pain. Another, exclusively in Midol, acts quickly to relieve the spasmodic pain peculiar to the menstrual process. If you have no organic disorder calling for special medical or surgical treatment, Midol should help you as it has helped many others. At all drugstores—large size, only 40¢; small size, 20¢.

MIDOL
Relieves Functional Periodic Pain

Give Your Lazy Liver This Gentle "Nudge"

Follow Noted Ohio Doctor's Advice To Relieve CONSTIPATION!

If liver bile doesn't flow freely every day into your intestines—constipation with its headaches and that "half-alive" feeling often result. So stir up your liver bile secretion and see how much better you should feel! Just try Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients with constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only stimulate bile flow to help digest fatty foods but also help elimination. Get a box TODAY. 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

BUNIONS
ENLARGED OR TENDER JOINTS

Doctor's New Quicker Relief!

Stop suffering! If you have painful bunions, enlarged or tender joints, you'll get quick relief with the New Super-Soft Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. Feel the world of difference these thin, soft, soothing, cushioning pads make . . . how much they lift shoe pressure off the sensitive spot. New in design and texture and 630% softer than before! Do not come off in the bath. More economical! Cost but a trifle. Sold everywhere.

NEW Super-Soft Insist on genuine Dr. Scholl's!

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

for sluggards who never walk, till you find yourself driving to the drugstore for a tube of toothpaste.

Hollywood's a husk. Because the houses aren't heated. Because you buy stationery at a typewriteria. Because the honest name of hamburger is defiled by such obscenities as nut- and chickenburger. Because when you ask a star's friends for human interest stories, they eye you with loathing and think you mean sex. Because sometimes you do. Because Harriet Hotcha won't have her beneficences publicized, but tears the publicity boys apart when they're not. Because magazines won't take your stories on beginners who won't give you stories when they get to the top. Because there's only one Buddy De Sylva—the only bigshot in the entire town who talks like a human. Because the universal form of assent is "You bet."

I know. You still want to come to Hollywood. All my talking has been but in vain! You've learned your lesson. It sticks out of every page. Why do you want to come? All together, class. Because there's only one Hollywood. You bet.

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 63)

The Summon Up

Funnyman "Rags" Ragland gets this month's booby prize for being honest to the point of insanity. "Rags" and his car were caught in the middle of a traffic skirmish a couple of weeks ago, and a few days after the incident a weary, subpoena-bearing deputy staggered through the door of "Rags'" agent's office. Please, he wanted to know, did a John Morgan Lee Ragland work there? He'd been searching for him all over town, and no one could tell him who the fellow was.

"Rags'" agent, ever on the side of law and order, asked the man to be seated. He'd be delighted, he said, to call his client and tell him he was wanted. The deputy gulped. Such co-operation was staggering. As he slumped into a chair, the agent located "Rags" on a Metro sound stage.

"A subpoena?" yelled "Rags" over the set noises. "Keep that guy there! I'll be right over to get it!"

There was a low moan in the office. The deputy had collapsed to the floor.

Who's That Knocking At My Door?

It was a cinch to tell which guests were dyed-in-the-wool Hollywoodites one evening at Ciro's a few weeks ago. They were the ones who remained completely blasé when Lois Andrews Jessel, expecting a visit from the stork within the fortnight, rose and did a snappy rumba with hubby George.

Everyone else in the club stared in amazement, not wise to the casual manner with which folks in the industry approach the hallowed state of motherhood. Instead of retiring quietly to some secluded spot and sewing on tiny garments, movie people—Mary Martin and Anne Shirley, to name two—keep right on working without giving their delicate conditions more than a passing thought. Both Veronica Lake and Constance Moore finished their pre-baby pictures just in time to meet the stork at the hospital!

The ones who really get the headaches and sick spells are the production managers and the cameramen. Margaret Sullavan's expected heavenly bundle was responsible for the "Back Street" cast working day and night to beat the leggy bird. In Geraldine Fitzgerald's case the last scenes made before her baby was born had to be photographed as long shots or with Geraldine posed prettily behind chairs and tables. Orson Welles practically ignored Dorothy Comingore's "enceinte" condition and made no attempt whatsoever to conceal her rounded figure in "Citizen Kane."

All of the girls enjoy working until the last possible moment. They have only one fear—that their offsprings will be born with the imprint of a camera stamped on their tiny backs!

The Big Sissie!

Orson Welles, that wonderful hulk of man, may be a surcharged Superman to you. But to Claudette Colbert, Jeanette MacDonald, Rosalind Russell and the rest of the girls who attended Designer Irene's fall fashion show, Remember this pair? Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels are blitz-torn Britain's favorite radio team. N. Y.'s Stork Club was a first stop on a visit here.

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Orson Welles is just a sweet old darling.

For two hours the Wonder Boy sat beside his ladylove Dolores Del Rio in the showroom at Bullock's-Wilshire watching the models go by. The only man in the room, he made himself as completely "to home" as your mother-in-law when she drops in for the week-end. With his big voice drowning out the feminine chatter, he commented frequently and authoritatively on soufflés, marquisettes and velvets. And while Dolores looked proudly on, he illustrated his points by clutching his hips, adjusting imaginary shoulder straps and finger-drawing bust lines on his own substantial bosom.

For the comment that whizzed by our head, we should say that Dolores was the most envied woman present. And if there were any battles in Beverly Hills that night, it was because Orson was being held up as a model male to husbands who never notice their wives' clothes—until the bills come in!

Orbuceldum?

At Republic they're convulsed over this one.

Herbert Yates, president of the studio, had a luncheon engagement with a very important exhibitor. The exhibitor, he had been warned, was a rabid Gene Autry fan. Autry brought more business into his theater than Ty Power and Errol Flynn combined, and to one man at least he was the greatest actor on earth.

But how to entertain the fellow? Enthusiasm like that deserved special consideration Yates felt, and he was going to see that the fellow got it. Yates thought and thought and thought. Then came a brilliant idea. Summoning double-talking Cliff Nazarro, he invited him to join the party. To the exhibitor he said:

"Gene is out of town, but here is his writer, Mr. Kratz. He will tell you how we make Autry pictures."

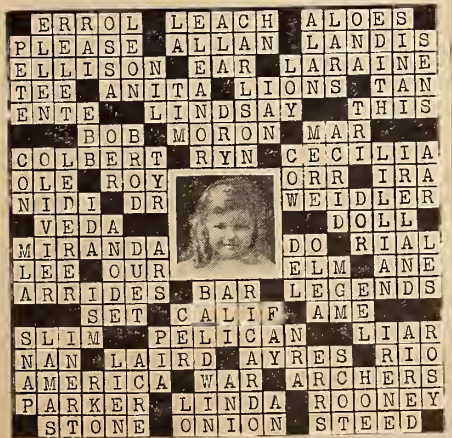
"Delighted," said Cliff. "Tell me, sir, do you crassalavam to your relgondina? We always try to wilgasnay so that Autry can ralsfiam on his fortenate. Don't you agree?"

The exhibitor glanced at Yates. He was nodding gravely. He looked back at Cliff. Nazarro couldn't have been more serious at his grandmother's funeral. The poor man's head began to spin. At the end of an hour, he excused himself and stumbled to the door.

Several days later, Yates found a confidential memo in his mail. It was from his friend, the exhibitor.

"I enjoyed our lunch very much," it read. "And I still think Autry pictures are grand.

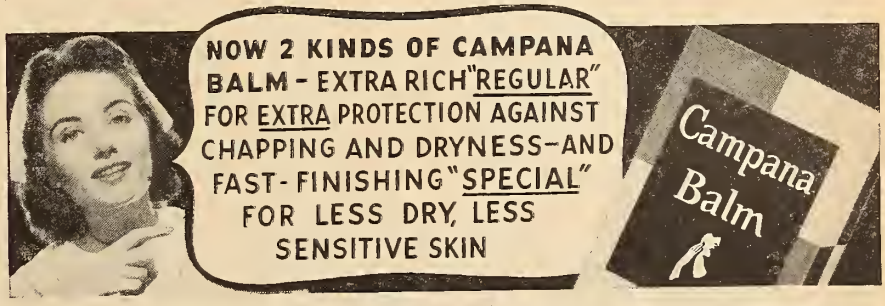
Solution to the Crossword Puzzle on Page 94



CENSORED—Men censor the girl with ugly, chapped skin. Romance fades quickly for a girl if her hands are not alluringly soft and tempting to hold. Keep your hands smooth and soft, free of chapping with CAMPANA BALM—all winter long.

"CROW" (2 KINDS)—With CAMPANA BALM you get "2 KINDS" also—(1) Fast-finishing "SPECIAL" BALM for less dry, less sensitive skin and for mild weather, mild climate use—(2) Extra rich "REGULAR" BALM that gives extra protection (especially in cold weather).

ACTION—You get DOUBLE ACTION when you use CAMPANA BALM—(1) SOFTENING action, from special beautifying and softening ingredients—(2) PROTECTING action against outside irritants. Softening action alone is not enough. You get BOTH in "double action" Balm!



NOW 2 KINDS OF CAMPANA BALM - EXTRA RICH "REGULAR" FOR EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST CHAPPING AND DRYNESS-AND FAST-FINISHING "SPECIAL" FOR LESS DRY, LESS SENSITIVE SKIN
Campana Balm

BE BREATHLESSLY EXCITING
Blue Waltz
Thrilling moments that every girl longs for, dreams about. Why not make them real? Invite adventure and romance with the magic fragrance of Blue Waltz Perfume, the haunting bewitching scent that no man can resist. Its subtle intoxicating fragrance whispers your charm, gives you new confidence in your own loveliness. Just try it and see!
BLUE WALTZ PERFUME 10¢ at all 5 & 10¢ stores

My Skin Care May Help You

Here's a good tip from little Miss Constance Blake, who like many youngsters, depends on Resinol Soap and Ointment for the daily care her delicate skin requires.

Why not use Resinol Soap to cleanse and refresh your skin? Then see how smooth and soft it feels.

For skin irritations, externally caused, apply specially medicated Resinol Ointment. It allays the burning itch, and so aids healing.

Buy both from any druggist today, and follow this special skin care. For sample write Resinol, MO-10, Baltimore, Md.

Resinol OINTMENT AND SOAP

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!

Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.
NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
1315 Michigan Ave., Dept. 2569, Chicago

$1260 to $2100 Year

TO START

Prepare at once for 1942 Examinations

Men — Women

Thousands appointments each year

Mail Coupon Today—SURE

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. D257, Rochester, N.Y.

Rush FREE list of U. S. Government big pay JOBS. 32-page book describing salaries, hours, work. Tell me how to qualify for one of these jobs.

Name.....

Address.....

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

But his writer—he seemed a little nervous. Don't you think he needs a vacation?"

Hollywood Yarn

Try to beat this! In "The Man Who Came To Dinner" there's a long scene requiring yards and yards of dialogue. As a wind-up, Jimmy Durante bursts into camera range and interrupts the proceedings to bestow gifts from Hollywood on Monty Woolley. He saves the best for the last. Holding up a tightly knitted mass of yarn, he chortles, "Look, Whitey! Lana Turner's sweater!"

After a hard day's work the scene was pronounced perfect. That evening it was run off for the front office executives. The following morning, a messenger boy handed Director William Keighley a note. It was from his bosses. "Sorry, Bill," it ran. "You'll have to shoot the whole works over. This time have Jimmy enter and say, "Look, Whitey! Alexis Smith's sweater!"

Silly? Not at all. Miss Smith is being treated to a star build-up by Warner Bros., and why, reason the execs, give a free publicity plug to a rival studio's cutie when you've got a swell sweaterful like Alexis playing for the home team?

Disa and Data

Hands off Milton Berle's nose! It's in a delicate condition, thanks to a third re-doing . . . Joan Bennett startled week-enders at the El Rancho Vegas Hotel by turning up at poolside with a diamond and aquamarine pin on her swim suit shoulder strap . . . From now on, Bob Stack appears in "A" pictures only. It's in his new contract . . . Nice gesture of Mrs. Herbert Marshall's. She's called on noted painter William Earl Singer to do a portrait of Marshall's daughter by Edna Best . . . James Cagney's sis-in-law, Boots Mallory, has penned a poem entitled "One If By Sea" . . . And in "Captain of the Clouds" Jimmy warbles a barroom ditty composed by Alan Hale . . . Nancy Kelly always wears a pair of socks when she goes to bed!

Hollywood bachelorettes were dealt a stunning blow when George Sanders disclosed his marriage to Elsie Larson, former Hollywood high school girl . . . When you hear "cheris" and "mon cheres" floating through the air, you're in the presence of Gene Tierney and Groom Oleg Cassini. They chat in French . . . Before becoming an actress, Louise Beavers was Leatrice Joy's maid . . . Hair-dos aren't the only things to go short in wartime. Dresses are due for an upward cut, also. In "Bedtime Story," Loretta Young will wear hers a half inch above her knees. The studio figures, by the time the picture's released, that'll be the fashion . . . Martha O'Driscoll had so many running scenes in "Air Raid" she wore out two pairs of shoes . . . With Sonja Henie off the Fox lot, Linda Darnell is taking over the Norwegian Nymph's dressing room.

Virginia Bruce's new son has been christened Christopher Briggs Ruben . . . And Warner's "Blonde Bombshell," Alexis Smith, bowed to the world as Margaret Alexis FitzSimmons Smith . . . It was Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger who tossed the farewell party for Joan's ex, Gene Markey, before Markey departed for the Navy . . . Remember the Mauch twins, kid sensations of "Prince and the Pauper?" They're messenger boys at Warners! . . . Orson Welles is sprouting a new beard . . . Jimmy Durante collects royalties on Halloween masks made in his image!

Good News About Louise Beavers

"I'm probably the only actress in Hollywood who wouldn't look good in a sarong," sighs 5'4", 189 lb. Louise Beavers, negro-mammying it in movies since 1924. She's played real-life servitor only once—to old-time heroine Leatrice Joy. It was that lady's cinematic successes that inspired Louise to look to a film career for herself. Despite the fact that she'd never had an ounce of dramatics in her life, she went after her goal with Machiavellian intent, broke into minstrels, barnstormed over the country in musicals, one day got a summons to Hollywood. She still rolls her eyes in holy horror when she thinks of that first movie test. Her disappointment of her screen self was terrific and even now she comes from her previews looking like something the cat dragged in! Claims she's fundamentally cut out for a singer, not an actress. Out of respect to her mom who iron-handedly supervised scales and piano practise, she kept her christened name as her screen tag. Hell-bent on a singing career from the very first, the idea of cigarette smoking never entered her fuzzy head. A genuine Yankee, she was born in Cin-

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACTS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, AND MARCH 3, 1933 of MODERN SCREEN, published monthly at Dunellen, N. J., for October 1, 1941.

State of New York } ss
County of New York }

Before me, a Notary Public, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Helen Meyer, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she is the Business Manager of MODERN SCREEN and that the following is, to the best of her knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1933, embodied in section 537, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business manager are: Publisher, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Editor, Albert Delacorte, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Managing Editor, None; Business Manager, Helen Meyer, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

2. That the owner is: Dell Publishing Company, Inc., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Margarita Delacorte, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by her.

HELEN MEYER, Business Manager.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 16th day of September, 1941.
PATRICIA COYNE
Commission Expires March 30, 1943.

TEETHING PAINS RELIEVED QUICKLY

WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved promptly.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist and has been used by mothers for over fifty years. One bottle is usually enough for one baby for the entire teething period.

Just rub it on the gums

DR. HAND'S TEETHING LOTION

Buy it from your druggist today.

ENLARGEMENT

DE LUXE NATURAL TONE

2 for only 29c each, 4 for only 99c. Just send this ad with any photo or negative. Send No Money but pay plus postage on delivery. Free 6x9" Studio Folder with each oil Colored Enlargement. Dept. S. 17

FREE

NEW YORK ART SERVICE
5800 Mosholu Ave., New York City

GUARANTEED JEWELRY

Solid sterling silver Birthstone Ring; or lovely 13 set sparkling Dinner Ring; or an All-Occasion Ring with simulated Ruby and 8 brilliant marcasites; FOR selling 4 boxes of Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Send No Money. Order 4 salve.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO, BOX 23, WOOOSBORO, MARYLAND.

FALSE TEETH

from WORLD'S LARGEST DENTAL PLATE MAKERS

SEND NO MONEY!

★TRANSPARENT ★ ROOFLESS ★ PARTIAL ★

$6.85 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. FREE impression material, directions, catalog and information. Write today to U.S. DENTAL CO., Dept. CX-104, Chicago, Ill.

FREE!

DANGEROUS TO BABY FEET

The X-Ray shows how outgrown shoes injure baby feet. Better buy the correct but inexpensive WEE WALKERS and get a larger size often. Ask your baby doctor. Sold in the Infants' Department of these low-profit stores.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co., Inc. Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. I. Silver & Bros.
McCrory Stores Schulte-United F. & W. Grand
G. R. Kinney Company

WEE WALKER Shoes FOR wee WALKERS

FREE: Baby foot measuring scale in pamphlet on fitting. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

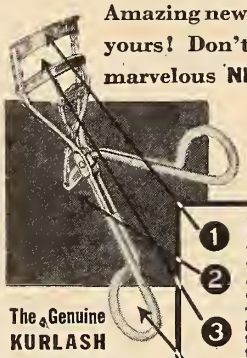
cinnati, reared in California and never spoke a word of Negro dialect in her life before she studied it scientifically for screen parts! Cites "Imitation of Life" as her most dramatic role. Her mom died just before production started, and there was no necessity for glycerine tears! Beavers' praises are long and loud on the subject of Claudette Colbert, who helped pull her through the aching hours at work and who has since consistently lent a friendly hand. Seventeen years of movie-making haven't accustomed her to reading script "cold," and she still insists on poring over her lines hours before rehearsal to get the "feel" of her part. After hours, she plays tennis, knits and keeps her Colonial manse spic and span. She'll walk a mile for a dinner of broiled steak, buttered string beans, baked potatoes, green salad, deep dish apple pie, oftentimes cooks it herself. Her mailbox's overrun with fan letters from nostalgic souls who yearn for the old days of Southern mammies. Louise is the nearest thing they know to it. Injecting new life into that old saw about the ideal Desert Island set-up, she chooses no Adonis. The Flying Yorkshireman would be her choice "because he could fly without a machine and help get me out of the situation!" Wouldn't want to go without her Bible, which she can read, reread, anytime, any place, still get something out of it. Her choice of animal is the cow 'cause milk's her favorite food and she could exist solely on that. Playing mammies has given her southern tastes, and she'd take a bottle of honeysuckle perfume to keep her from falling in love with the island. For food she'd take a bushel of potatoes, which, together with the milk, would keep her digestively happy. Negro spirituals (from a vic) would pervade Louise's ideal atmosphere, esp. "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Ain't Gonna War No More." She steers clear of romantical conversation quoting the old proverb about bad luck for one who kisses and tells. Made an exception of the rule for us and told about her first date who was lost to the cause from the moment they stepped out the door. She spelled him down in a spelling bee at a box supper, was forever denied his love!

Louise Beavers lost her first love by trouncing him in a spelling bee!

Sensational NEW WAY TO EYE BEAUTY!

The NEW CUSHION-GUARD EYE-LASH CURLER

Amazing new eye beauty can be yours! Don't delay! Get this marvelous NEW Cushion-Guard Kurlash now!



1. The NEW Cushion-Guard... softens contact in curling.
2. The NEW better leverage... curls lashes quicker, easier.
3. The NEW wider opening... makes it easier to insert lashes between curler bows.
4. The NEW larger finger loops... give firmer grip and more accurate curling.

The Genuine KURLASH plus four great improvements... Price remains... $1.00

KURLASH

The Only Complete Eye-Beauty Line

THE KURLASH COMPANY, INC.

Rochester, New York • New York City • Toronto, Canada

Can't Keep Grandma In Her Chair

She's as Lively as a Youngster— Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

"The Work I Love"

AND $20 to $25 A WEEK!

"I'm a TRAINED PRACTICAL NURSE, and thankful to CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING for training me, at home, in my spare time, for this well-paid, dignified work."

YOU can become a nurse, too! Thousands of men and women, 18 to 60, have studied this thorough, home-study course. Lessons are easy to understand and high school education not necessary. Many earn as they learn—Mrs. R. W. of Mich. earned $25 a week while still studying. Endorsed by physicians. Uniform and equipment included. Easy tuition payments. 42nd year. Send coupon now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

Dept. 2312, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____ Age_____

City_____ State_____

WALK AWAY YOUR Corns

Felt pad (C) helps relieve pain by removing pressure. Medication (D) acts on corn.

In a few days corn is gently loosened so it may be easily removed.

● Now you can help relieve pain, remove corns while you walk!

Here's how: First the soft felt pad helps relieve pain by lifting off pressure. Then the Blue-Jay medication gently loosens the corn so that in a few days it may be easily removed, including the pain-producing "core"! (Stubborn cases may require more than one application.)

Blue-Jay Corn Plasters cost very little—only a few cents to treat each corn—at all drug counters.

BAUER & BLACK BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

Kidneys Must Clean Out Acids

Excess acids, poisons and wastes in your blood are removed chiefly by your kidneys. Getting up Nights, Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes, and feeling worn out, often are caused by non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Usually in such cases, the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess acids and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee wrapped around each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of the full cost unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose under this positive money back guarantee so get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

NEW! LATEST MODEL! POCKET RADIO NO TUBES BATTERIES

DURABLE PLASTIC CABINETS DUAL BANDS — MICRODIAL. Fits your pocket or purse—Wt. 6 ozs. ABOUT CIGARETTE PACKAGE SIZE! PATENTED FIXED POWER CRYSTAL! No upkeep—OWNERS REPORT 2-3 YEARS OF SERVICE!—THOUSANDS SOLD! M. L. of Ill., says "MIDGET RADIO WORKS FINE"! ONE YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE. Shipped complete ready to listen with instructions and Tiny phone for use in homes, offices, hotels, in bed etc. NO ELECTRICITY REQUIRED! Send only $2.99 (M. O., Cash, Check) for postpaid delivery or GUARANTEE to pay postman $2.99 plus postage charges on arrival. PRICES MAY GO UP—GET YOUR MIDGET NOW! "MAGICTENNA" ELIMINATES OUTSIDE WIRES.

MIDGET RADIO CO., Dept. W-12, KEARNEY, NEBR.

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on Psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing true photographic proof of results also FREE.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Generous trial bottle sent FREE to those who send in their Druggist's name and address. Make our famous "One Spot Test" yourself. Write today for your test bottle. Print name plainly. Results may surprise you. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547 Northwestern Station, Dept. 2609, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

©1935 LAKE LAB

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 17)

MOON OVER HER SHOULDER

Lynn Bari, feeling neglected by Husband John Sutton, who dishes out matrimonial advice on the radio, tries to win him back and fails. Nursing her disappointment on a long, lonely walk, she's picked up by Dan Dailey, Jr., who takes her to his yacht, only remnant of a large fortune, persuades her to go along on fishing trips with him and Alan Mowbray, rich fisherman. Lynn likes the trips, conceals her identity, realizes that Husband John isn't even aware of her daily trips. The idyll ends, however, when Dan falls in love with her. Conflicted, she writes anonymously for advice to her husband. Dan does the same. Showdown comes when John invites Dan to his home, and jealousy flares into a fist fight. Lynn's agony over the shellacking her husband is taking makes her realize it's he she loves.—TCF.

HOT SPOT

Young playwright Vic Mature no more than meets Carole Landis and plans to build her up into a great star than he becomes involved in her murder. Detective Laird Cregar point-blank accuses him of the killing and comes harrowingly near pinning evidence on him to a jury. All in all, Vic puts in a tough few months of it, somewhat softened by the presence of Carole's sister, Betty Grable.—TCF.

PARIS CALLING

Working for an underground body of 20th century French patriots, Elizabeth Bergner falls in love with American flyer Randy Scott, goes through hell and high water hiding him from Gestapo agents. For endangering the safety of the group, she's brought before the Chief of the Underground, forced to prove her innocence and sincerity. In so doing, she slays her ex-suitor, Basil Rathbone, betrayer of France, narrowly escapes death escaping to safety in England with Randy and the other conspirators.—Univ.

THE MALTESE FALCON

Private investigator Humphrey Bogart's up to his neck in mystery and intrigue again—this time in connection with the search for a fabulously jeweled statue, the Maltese Falcon. A gang of ruthless criminals headed by Mary Astor and Peter Lorre hire Bogart to find the falcon, keep him in hot water with murders and unscrupulous business methods. There's a good twist, but we don't want to spoil it for you by telling too much!—W.B.

GO WEST, YOUNG LADY

The whole town of Headstone unites under hero Glenn Ford to capture desperado Onslow Stevens and his gang, who've robbed the town of its last cent. Ann Miller, dancer in Charlie Ruggles' saloon, unwittingly betrays Stevens, who was a case of mixed identity all along. Most thrilling scene is the finale in which Penny Singleton and her army of townswomen, armed with rolling pins and kettles, down the bandits once and for all. Penny and Glenn discover each other, of course, as the picture fades out.—Col.

Attention Movie Fans!

5000 FACTS ON YOUR FAVORITES

50 BEAUTIFUL AUTOGRAPHED PORTRAITS

with

500 WORD BIOGRAPHIES FOR EACH

General Information CHART ON 100 STARS

ALL YOURS

in the New Winter Issue of

SCREEN ALBUM

Here's the biggest dimes worth of Hollywood lore on the newsstands today! For only ten cents you can now have an album of beautifully printed autographed portraits of 50 of your favorite movie stars, both new and old—each accompanied by a thrilling detailed biography. In addition, a new feature charts inside up-to-the-minute information and little known facts on over 100 stars—an amazing amount of inside information to have at your fingertips. Don't miss this new winter edition of SCREEN ALBUM. Get a copy today.

NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE

ONLY 10c

(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10c to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.)

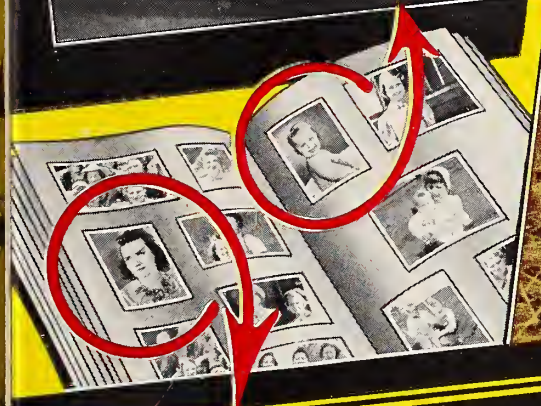
MODERN SCREEN READERS GIVEN

FREE ENLARGEMENT



Just to Get Acquainted We Will Beautifully Enlarge Your Favorite Snapshot, Photo, Kodak Picture, Print or Negative, to 5x7 Inches Absolutely FREE!

Everyone admires pictures in natural colors because the surroundings and loved ones are so true to life, just the way they looked when the pictures were taken, so we want you to know also about our gorgeous colored enlargements. Think of having that small picture or snapshot of mother, father, sister or brother, children or others near and dear to you enlarged to 5 by 7 inch size so that the details and features you love are more lifelike and natural!

Over one million men and women have sent us their favorite snapshots and pictures for enlarging. Thousands write us how much they also enjoy their remarkably true-to-life, natural colored enlargements we have sent them in handsome black and gold or ivory and gold frames. They tell us that their hand-colored enlargements have living beauty, sparkle and life.

You are now given a wonderful opportunity to receive a beautiful enlargement of your cherished snapshot, photo or kodak picture FREE. Look over your pictures now and send us your favorite snapshot, photo or kodak picture (print or negative) and receive your beautiful free enlargement. Please include the color of hair and eyes for prompt information on a second enlargement beautifully hand tinted in natural, lifelike oil colors and placed in a handsome free frame to set on the piano, table or dresser. Your original is returned with your enlargement (10c for return mailing appreciated). This free enlargement offer is our way of getting acquainted and letting you know the quality of our work. Just send the coupon with your favorite snapshot, print or negative right away, as this free enlargement offer is limited. Write DEAN STUDIOS, Dept. 569, 118 No. 15th St., Omaha, Nebr.

SEND COUPON TODAY

Enclose this coupon with your favorite snapshot, picture, print or negative and send to Dean Studios, Dept. 569, 118 No. 15th St., Omaha, Nebr.

Name.....

Address.....

City..... State .....

Color of Hair .....

Color of Eyes .....

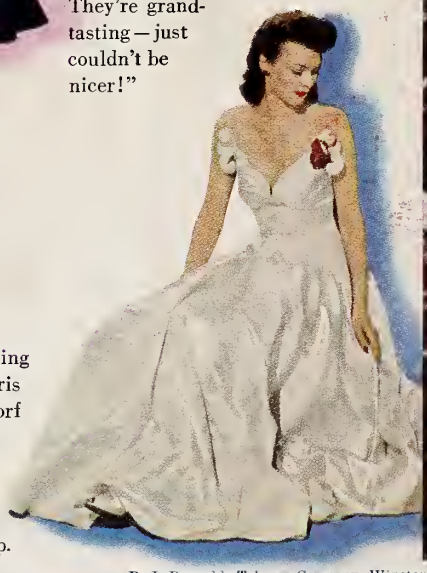
"Less nicotine in the smoke means a milder smoke—so Camels are my favorite cigarette"

Leslie Morris

BERGDORF GOODMAN'S DISTINGUISHED DESIGNER

PETITE and charming, Leslie Morris (seated, smoking a Camel) wears a soft suit of her own design...navy wool frosted with ermine lapels. Noted for her magnificent interpretation of the simple, she seasons a red wool sheath with a jacket embroidered in gold thread, banded in mink. "All the time I'm smoking a Camel," she says, "I enjoy it thoroughly. So much milder—and full of marvelous flavor! My guests prefer Camels, too, so I buy my Camels by the carton."

AT LEFT, a distinctive Leslie Morris silhouette of flame-blue velvet...diaphanous star-studded veil. Prominent among designers who are making America the source of fashion, Leslie Morris says: "I find it's more fun to smoke Camels. They're grand-tasting—just couldn't be nicer!"



AT RIGHT, baroque evening gown from the Leslie Morris winter collection at Bergdorf Goodman. White slipper satin appliquéd with velvet scrolls . . . inspired by the ruby-and-diamond shoulder clip.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

THE SMOKE OF SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS CONTAINS

28% LESS NICOTINE

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself!

BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested — slower than any of them — Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

CAMEL

The cigarette of Costlier Tobaccos

MODERN SCREEN

NUARY
10
ENTS

DEC 31 1941
Copy

Scoop! INTIMATE LOVE LETTERS OF THE STARS

The light ale preferred by millions of beer drinkers

THE lightness of Ballantine's Ale comes as a pleasant surprise to those who still think that ale's on the "heavy" side.

But it's the Ballantine flavor that has won beer drinkers so completely . . . a flavor so superb that it could come only from the very finest of ale yeasts.

Join the Ballantine regulars in a glass today—and chances are you'll decide that from now on you're an ale man yourself.

Look for the 3-RING trademark standing for PURITY, BODY, FLAVOR; and call for Ballantine's Ale. Costs no more than the better beers. Sold coast to coast.

BALLANTINE PURITY BODY FLAVOR ALE

America's largest selling Ale

P. Ballantine & Sons, Newark, N. J.

Beauty may not be your Birthright

BUT HEADS WILL TURN .. if your Smile is Right!

There's magic in a lovely smile! Help yours to be sparkling—with Ipana and Massage.

LOOK about you, plain girl! The most popular girl isn't always the prettiest girl. It's true in the world of the stage and screen—it's true in your own small world.

Heads do turn—eyes do follow—hearts do respond—to even the plainest face if it flashes a winning, glamorous, sparkling smile.

Make your smile your beauty talisman. Keep it as enchanting as it should be. Help it to be a smile that wins for you the best that life has to give. But remember that, for a smile to keep its brightness and sparkle, gums must retain their healthy firmness.

"Pink Tooth Brush"—a warning!

If you ever see "pink" on your tooth brush—see your dentist right away. It may not mean serious trouble, but let him decide. He may say simply that your gums need more work . . . the natural exercise denied them by today's soft foods. And like thousands of dentists, he may suggest "the helpful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

Ipana is specially designed, not only to clean teeth brilliantly and thoroughly but, with massage, to help firm and strengthen your gums.

Massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums every time you brush your teeth. Notice its clean, refreshing taste. And that invigorating "tang" tells you circulation is increasing in your gums—helping them to better health. Get a tube of Ipana Tooth Paste today.

"A LOVELY SMILE IS MOST IMPORTANT TO BEAUTY!"

say beauty editors of 23 out of 24 leading magazines

Recently a poll was made among the beauty editors of 24 leading magazines. All but one of these experts said that a woman has no greater charm than a lovely, sparkling smile.

They went on to say that "Even a plain girl can be charming, if she has a lovely smile. But without one, the loveliest woman's beauty is dimmed and darkened."

Start Today with

IPANA

TOOTH PASTE

A Product of Bristol-Myers

17 1941

©C1B 524064

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

They Live With Their Boots On 26
Vocal Boy Makes Good—Dennis Morgan 32
Self-Made Siren—Carol Bruce 34
Too Many Husbands?—John Payne 36
Christmas—It's Colossal 38
"I Wrote a Letter to My Love—" 40
Mad Hatter—Lilly Dache 46
"Hello, Evvabody"—Kay Kyser 48

FEATURES

Candidly Yours 30
Party of the Month 44
"They Died with Their Boots On" 50

BEAUTY

Give Good Looks for Christmas 52

FASHION

What Shall I Give Him? 59
Six Secrets for Santa 60

DEPARTMENTS

Movie Reviews 6
Our Puzzle Page 12
Modern Hostess 14
Movie Scoreboard 16
Portrait Gallery 19
Good News 54
Co-Ed 58

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Associate Editor
SYLVIA WALLACE, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor

Cover: Judy Garland, appearing in M-G-M's "Babes on Broadway"

Vol. 24, No. 2, January, 1942. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year; foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the postoffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second-class entries at Seattle, Wash., San Francisco, Calif., Dallas, Texas, Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

'Tis the month before Christmas and all through the movie houses there are a lot of wonderful films to be seen.

★ ★ ★

This column is in the present and future tense. Since it is a Christmas issue, we will first talk about the present.

★ ★ ★ ★

There is the Garbo picture. Of "Ninotchka" caliber—debonairy and de-lovely.

It is called "Two-Faced Woman"—practically a double feature in itself.

★ ★ ★ ★

And every single feature of Garbo is something to behold. Ask co-star Melvyn Douglas.

★ ★ ★

Comes too, "H. M. Pulham, Esq."—which so many have read. Hedy Lamarr and Robert Young step right from the pages as the saying goes.

★ ★ ★ ★

"Panama Hattie", the famed Broadway trip-hammer of hilarity, gives us more Ann Sothern hospitality and Red Skelton's hornpipes of pandemonium.

★ ★ ★ ★

Spencer Tracy, the matinee and evening idol, and Katharine Hepburn, who also is no idle idol, appear in the picture of the year.

Entitled "Woman of The Year".

★ ★ ★ ★

And then also on this Yule season list, we're including "Babes on Broadway" which we deliver with all sorts of golden predictions of being something to dance in the streets about.

★ ★ ★ ★

That is, the dancing in the streets will be done after you've seen the dancing in the theatre.

★ ★ ★ ★

It's all to the merry, merry.

★ ★ ★

And at the same time let us wish you a happy, happy.

—Santa Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

It's on the screen SO

ROAR AMERICA!

"The Man Who Came to Dinner"

NOTHING COULD BE FUNNIER!

WARNER BROS! NEWEST HIT. With
JIMMY DURANTE • RICHARD TRAVIS
BILLIE BURKE • REGINALD GARDINER
Directed by WILLIAM KEIGHLEY
Screen Play by Julius J. & Philip G. Epstein
From the 2-year-run stage success by
GEO. S. KAUFMAN and MOSS HART
Produced by Sam H. Harris

Your theatre manager will tell you the opening date.. that's your night to howl!

17 1941

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR
Published in this space every month
The greatest star of the screen!

'Tis the month before Christmas and all through the movie houses there are a lot of wonderful films to be seen.

★ ★ ★

This column is in the present and future tense. Since it is a Christmas issue, we will first talk about the present.

★ ★ ★ ★

There is the Garbo picture. Of "Ninotchka" caliber—debonairy and de-lovely.

It is called "Two-Faced Woman"—practically a double feature in itself.

★ ★ ★ ★

And every single feature of Garbo is something to behold. Ask co-star Melvyn Douglas.

★ ★ ★

Comes too, "H. M. Pulham, Esq."—which so many have read. Hedy Lamarr and Robert Young step right from the pages as the saying goes.

★ ★ ★ ★

"Panama Hattie", the famed Broadway trip-hammer of hilarity, gives us more Ann Sothern hospitality and Red Skelton's hornpipes of pandemonium.

★ ★ ★ ★

Spencer Tracy, the matinee and evening idol, and Katharine Hepburn, who also is no idle idol, appear in the picture of the year.

Entitled "Woman of The Year".

★ ★ ★ ★

And then also on this Yule season list, we're including "Babes on Broadway" which we deliver with all sorts of golden predictions of being something to dance in the streets about.

★ ★ ★ ★

That is, the dancing in the streets will be done after you've seen the dancing in the theatre.

★ ★ ★ ★

It's all to the merry, merry.

★ ★ ★

And at the same time let us wish you a happy, happy.

—Santa Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

©C1B 524064

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

They Live With Their Boots On 26
Vocal Boy Makes Good—Dennis Morgan 32
Self-Made Siren—Carol Bruce 34
Too Many Husbands?—John Payne 36
Christmas—It's Colossal 38
"I Wrote a Letter to My Love—" 40
Mad Hatter—Lilly Dache 46
"Hello, Evvabody"—Kay Kyser 48

FEATURES

Candidly Yours 30
Party of the Month 44
"They Died with Their Boots On" 50

BEAUTY

Give Good Looks for Christmas 52

FASHION

What Shall I Give Him? 59
Six Secrets for Santa 60

DEPARTMENTS

Movie Reviews 6
Our Puzzle Page 12
Modern Hostess 14
Movie Scoreboard 16
Portrait Gallery 19
Good News 54
Co-Ed 58

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Associate Editor
SYLVIA WALLACE, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor

Cover: Judy Garland, appearing in M-G-M's "Babes on Broadway"

Vol. 24, No. 2, Jonuory, 1942. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Modison Ave., New Yark. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publicotion at Washington ond South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. ond Canodo, U. S. subscriptian price $1.00 a year; Conodian subscriptian $2.00 a year; foreign subscriptian $2.20 a yeor. Entered os second-class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the postoffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of Morch 3, 1879. Additional second-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Froncisca, Colif.; Dallas, Texas; Savonnah, Go., and New Orleans, La. The publishers occept no respansibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictionol matter are fictitious. If the name of ony living person is used it is purely o coincidence. Trademark No. 301773

It's on the screen SO

ROAR AMERICA!

"The Man Who Came to Dinner"

NOTHING COULD BE FUNNIER!

WARNER BROS! NEWEST HIT. With

JIMMY DURANTE • RICHARD TRAVIS
BILLIE BURKE • REGINALD GARDINER

Directed by WILLIAM KEIGHLEY

Screen Play by Julius J. & Philip G. Epstein

From the 2-year-run stage success by
GEO. S. KAUFMAN and MOSS HART
Produced by Sam H. Harris

Your theatre manager will tell you the opening date.. that's your night to howl!

MOVIE REVIEWS

LOUISIANA PURCHASE—AB-1

This light political satire in terms of music, dance and neat De Sylva-Ryskind flippancies has been transplanted almost bodily from the Broadway stage with nothing but William Gaxton taken away and little added save Technicolor and Bob Hope. Its locale is still a Graustarkian state referred to without let or quibble as Louisiana; its people still include those fashionable stage favorites, Victor Moore, Vera Zorina and Irene Bordoni; and its satire, though hardly calculated to remove the skin from its victims or even probe beneath it, at least gives a pleasantly opera-bouffe illusion of actual events, characters and places. All this together with a dossier of a dozen songs and melodies by Irving Berlin makes "Louisiana Purchase" one of the season's better investments.

In the screen version Bob is an honest though guilty-looking state representative who cares for nothing except the bright lights and girls of New Orleans, and Victor Moore is a slightly scatter-brained United States Senator who is conducting a Federal investigation of Louisiana state politics. Bob is framed by his grafting political colleagues to take the rap in the investigation and most of the comedy results from his frantic efforts, in sheer self-preservation, to sidetrack the Senator's inquisitive probings. Another amendment to the stage play is the addition of a smashing filibuster climax in which Bob reduces the crooked state legislators to gibbering impotence by reading to them from encyclopaedias, mail-order catalogues, etc.

"Louisiana Purchase" has a slick professional finish. Its comedy is handled by Hope with his usual aplomb and ingratiating casualness, but its girls, its dances and its decorative numbers, like the spectacular Mardi Gras sequence, are at least equally noteworthy. —Paramount.

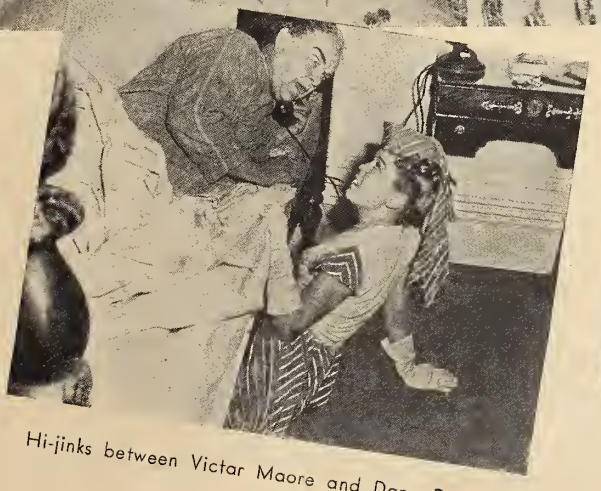
(Continued on page 8)

P. S.

Three "Louisiana Purchase" set workers inveigled Bob Hope into chipping in with them as part owner of a horse. Hope did, but never saw the animal. Every morning, he'd ask one of his partners, Bill McKay, how the nag was doing. Bill's answer was always the same—"My quarter did pretty good in the work-out this morning; if your quarter does as well, I think we'll have something!" . . . Bob's Metal Products Company is going full blast, turning out kitchen and office equipment for Uncle Sam's battleships . . . Maxie Rosenbloom took a terrific beating from cast members when a columnist printed the news that he had ordered pink water for his swimming pool to match his house . . . Dona Drake is the former Rita Rio, the gal who used to lead a very successful all-girl orchestra . . . Irene Bordoni, one of the six original stage cast, started a new fashion fad by carrying her lipstick in the heel of her shoe . . . Hope had to watch out for Victor Moore, one of the best scene-stealers in the business . . . When the cast took up their stage roles again, they had to spend two weeks unlearning all the dialogue they'd memorized especially for the picture . . . The technicolor used in the picture is progressive. It starts in black and white, with the first note of color appearing when a red-haired secretary walks into an office . . . The only near-catastrophe happened when Slapsie Maxie happened to glance up at the exact moment a couple of potted geraniums toppled out of a second story window. The resulting dents and bumps on his face and head weren't even noticeable . . . Buddy de Sylva, top executive of Paramount Pictures out here, says of the three shows he's produced on Broadway during the last year, this is the one he most desired to bring personally to the screen. (Other two were "Panama Hattie" and "DuBarry Was a Lady") . . . Production had to shut down for a few days while Hope recovered from a terrific case of sunburn. On Bob's first day back to work, he still looked like a stand-in for a lobster. Pal Bing Crosby wandered over from his own set, stood looking at his suffering chum. "Hiya, Hope," he said. "What's cooking?"

*Temporary rating. Owing to the necessity of going to press far in advance of picture release dates, our reviewer has been unable to see these films in completed form.

Bob Hope, Zorino, Irene Bordoni and Vic Moore!



Hi-jinks between Victar Maore and Dana Drake.

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, Bab Hape and company.

EXCITING CHRISTMAS GIFTS ...

VERONICA LAKE—Currently Starred in Paramount's Picture "Sullivan's Travels"
. . . wearing the famous "LA CONGA" cardigan (Style N-912) with the flattering shirred saddle-shoulders. Accompanied by fetching, matching grosgrain-ribbon hair-bow . . . Colors: Natural, Antilles red, blue, pink, green, maize, white, black. Sizes: 34 to 40.
Only about $3

PATRICIA MORISON — Starred Currently in Paramount's Picture "Night in New Orleans"
. . . wearing the dashing "VOLGA" tux-effect cardigan (Style N-650). Ideal for skiing, skating, sleighing and other sportivities as well as social activities. Distinguished by tri-colored jacquarding . . . Colors: Natural, maize, red, white and black. Sizes: 34 to 40.
Only about $4

"Glamour-knit"
SWEATERS by Lois-Anne

Creating a Sensation
With the Entire Nation! . . .
At All Smart Shops . . .
Please Write for Name of Nearest Shop and for Free Style-Booklet "N"

You'll Look More Glamorous in a Glamour-Knit Sweater

CENTRAL KNITWEAR MILLS
1370 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 7)

RISE AND SHINE—AB-1

James Thurber's "My Life and Hard Times" has been considerably livened up and made perhaps a wee bit harder to take on the screen where it masquerades under the innocent alias, "Rise and Shine." Mr. Thurber's people and the odd things they do and the odder things done to them by fate never had more than a purely coincidental resemblance to life, but the people and incidents of "Rise and Shine" have even less than that. In their case, the usual cautionary screen foreword, designed to obviate law suits, might be safely dispensed with, for on the basis of the events and characters in this madhouse of improbable mirth, no human being could sue the company: only pixies, trolls, kobolds and Ohio leprechauns. No matter how popular Mr. Thurber may become as a fictioneer, even though he should eventually become known to his former associates on the New Yorker as "Edna" Thurber, nobody can say that his humor is "earthy."

Since Mr. Thurber's original, as we remember it, lacked a seasonal football twist, Mr. Hellinger, the producer, and his merry mechanics have generously supplied one in the person of a nit-brained star halfback, Bolenciecwcz, whom you will perhaps recognize under the more familiar name of Jack Oakie. This Bolenciecwcz, it seems, is a lodger in that curious household described by Mr. Thurber in his imaginative autobiography, and if he wasn't put there by Mr. Thurber in the first place, no one can deny that the way Oakie plays him, he belongs there. In fact, he may well turn out to be your favorite pixie.

Though "Rise and Shine" lacks the type of actors who are somewhat repulsively known as "big names," it employs a rich cast of secondary players, including, besides Mr. Oakie, George Murphy, Linda Darnell, Walter Brennan, Milton Berle, Donald Meek, Ruth Donnelly and Raymond Walburn. If it bores you, you'd probably be bored at a dog-fight.—TCF.

P. S.

George Murphy has a formula for liniment that'll take cramps out of your muscles in no time. Got it from his father, Coach Mike Murphy, who trained athletic teams at Yale for nearly fifty years . . . Donald Meek was once an aerialist—before he ran away to the Spanish-American war. He's been bald since he was 17, as a result of tropical fever . . . Hermes Pan, dance director, is asked sixty times a day if that's really his name. It is . . . Sheldon Leonard, heavy de luxe, is partner in an Eastern art printery, known as Fine Arts Reproductions . . . Ruth Donnelly and Raymond Walburn held a bang-up reunion on the set. They hadn't seen each other for twenty years when they were acting in the same play on the New York stage . . . Jack Oakie, whose waistline expands or contracts according to the role he plays, lets his belt out to the last notch for his part as the plump and unpeppy "Boley" Bolenciecwcz . . . He and Mrs. Oakie bought Barbara Stanwyck's ranch in the valley, where they raise prize Afghan hounds . . . One of the hounds, incidentally, is a refugee, sent over to them by a friend in England "for the duration" . . . Walter Brennan gets a long-sought-for chance to be funny on the screen, playing an octogenarian lunatic . . . Screwiest of the six songs composed by Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger is the football march, "Hail to Bolenciecwcz." When the University of Southern California band finally learns it, it'll become a permanent fixture in its repertoire . . . After twenty years of impersonating a comedian, Milton Berle plays an addled mobster who thinks he's a horse . . . Linda Darnell finally gets a chance to play a girl her own age. She turned eighteen while making the picture, and that's the exact age of the co-ed in the script.

THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON—AB-1

When you first heard the electrifying news that romantic Errol Flynn had been assigned to play General Custer, you probably suspected that Warner Brothers would figure out some way to make Errol survive the famous "Last Stand," as he did "The Charge of the Light Brigade." Dismiss that suspicion as unworthy. As far as the Last Stand is concerned, history and Warner Brothers are in grim agreement: in June, 1876, at the Little Big Horn, Custer's cavalry unit, outnumbered and encircled by Crazy Horse's 4,000 yelling Sioux, died to the last man. Currier & Ives, early American engravers, once portrayed it in heroic poses and fervid coloration; now Warners have done the job even more picturesquely, and Errol goes down with the rest. Nothing has been added, nothing taken away.

The story follows the robustious, he-man career of George Armstrong Custer from his mule-back matriculation at West Point to his final sacrifice on the plains, including his service in the War Between the States, his post-war boredom and roistering, and his happy but stultifying married life with Beth Bacon, a mighty pretty gal who resembles the movie actress, Olivia de Havilland. Before being restored to active duty on the frontier, it seems, Custer turned down a tempting offer from a stock-rigging company that wanted to exploit his name and reputation, and on the frontier he clashes with the same company (appropriately known as the Sharp Brothers) whose trading-post saloon has demoralized the Seventh Cavalry.

Cleaning out the saloon and restoring discipline to the regiment, General Flynn also compounds a peace with the Sioux on his promise that the white man's infiltration into the Black Hills country will cease. But a phony gold boom engineered by his old enemies, the Sharps, send prospectors pouring into the Black Hills, and in order to save these witless folk Flynn rides again, as at Balaklava, knowingly to destruction. After it's all over, his wife receives a letter containing enough information to get the Sharp gang properly punished. Whether that part is according to history or not, we couldn't say.—W. B.

HELLZAPOPPIN'—AB-1

That Broadway institution modestly known as "Hellzapoppin'" (and when you hear the word "institution," we hope you instinctively think of barred windows and padded cells) has been transferred to the screen with amazing impropriety and madcap humor: in other words, with complete and absolute fidelity to the stage version. "Hellzapoppin'," as you've possibly heard, is where vaudeville went to when it died, so if you don't hate vaudeville (and who could?) you are almost certain to find something to laugh at in "Hellzapoppin'."

Since it's just a movie, though, naturally its performers can't come out into the audience and place chickens, ducks and other unexpected objects into your lap or run screaming down the aisles bearing potted plants and other outlandish properties, though the movie has tried to capture some of this odd magic by bringing a girl usher and a projectionist into the script. But nothing else is missing, neither Olsen nor Johnson, neither the woman calling dolefully for "Oscar," nor the man with the phenomenally growing rubber plant. And in addition there are a number of strictly screen innovations more or less, including Hugh Herbert, Martha Raye and Mischa Auer.

The story is that Olsen and Johnson go out to Hollywood to make a movie, and the movie director keeps insisting that there must be a story, and Olsen and Johnson keep insisting that "Hellzapoppin'" has run for four years on Broadway without a story, and finally there you are with no story. That's the story. When "Hellzapoppin'" was first produced, dignified and scholarly drama critics suggested that the public should not encourage this sort of thing by patronizing it. But it's too late to worry about that now. The damage is already done.—Univ.

P. S.

Martha Raye's automobile accident during filming of the picture was much more serious than anyone knew. Her first thought when she regained consciousness was how mad the assistant director would be when he found out she'd have to stay away from work . . . Olsen and Johnson were completely fascinated by the technicalities of the semi-disappearances they do à la "Topper" . . . During early conferences, the boys thought it'd be a swell idea to hand the customers those little red and green cellophane spectacles, so they could use stroboscopic stuff . . . Walter Winchell, who was the only critic to plug the stage show when it opened in New York, is still trying to get two extra passes for front row seats . . . Robert Paige, who used the name of David Carlisle for a while, once romanced with toothpaste-heiress Hazel Forbes, who was once married to Rita Hayworth's husband, Eddie Judson . . . Lewis Howard spent his time between scenes making sketches of his fellow performers . . . Everyone who visited the set was presented with a pin in the form of a tiny screw and a ball—which made them life members of the "ancient and august order of screwballs." . . . Olsen has a house-guest who's been with him for three years—a hefty comedienne named Shirley Wayne. She came to dinner one night and never went home . . . Hugh Herbert pops into the picture at the very end. He has only one word of dialogue but is doing the part as a special favor to Olsen and Johnson . . . Jane Frazee is half of the Frazee Sisters, a singing duo that broke up when her sister married Writer Norman Krasna . . . For retakes on the picture, the boys were rushed back to California from the East, given their lines and made up for the cameras in the taxi on their way to the studio from the train. They worked two hours and then flew back to New York.

(Continued on page 10)

Loveliness may soon be Yours! Go on the CAMAY "MILD-SOAP" DIET!

This lovely bride, Mrs. Robert G. Johnson of New Orleans, La., says: "The Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet is such an easy way to help bring out the loveliness of one's complexion."

Follow this way to a lovelier complexion—based on skin specialists' advice—praised by lovely brides!

"I'M SO THRILLED . . . being a Camay bride! When people tell me that my skin is lovely, I'm rewarded in full for my persistent devotion to the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet. Many nights I was so sleepy . . . many mornings I was in such a hurry, but never once did I neglect to follow the 'Mild-Soap' Diet routine faithfully." So says Mrs. Robert G. Johnson.

Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

A little time . . . a little care . . . and you, too, can be lovelier with the help of the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet. For no woman's skin can be truly beautiful if she fails to cleanse it properly. Or if she uses a beauty soap that isn't mild enough.

Skin specialists themselves advise a regular cleansing routine with a fine mild soap. And Camay is more than just mild . . . it's actually milder than the 10 famous beauty soaps tested. That's why we say your way to new loveliness is to "Go on the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet tonight!"

GO ON THE "MILD-SOAP" DIET TONIGHT!

Work Camay's milder lather over your skin, paying special attention to the nose, the base of nostrils and chin. Rinse with warm water and follow with thirty seconds of cold splashings.

Then, while you sleep, the tiny pore openings are free to function for natural beauty. In the morning—one more quick session with this milder Camay and your skin is ready for make-up.

(Continued from page 9)

KATHLEEN—AB-2

The biggest news in this picture, of course, is Shirley Temple, who is making a courageous comeback at the age of twelve. You'll be surprised how much and yet how little Shirley has changed from babyhood days, when she used to pacify the Riffs with a smile and put Queen Victoria at ease with a lisped word: how tall she's grown and how she can deliver snippy, even positively naughty lines. Of course Shirley only delivers these lines where they'll do the most good, for basically she is still our Shirley and we—old dodderheads that we are—hope she remains so, at ever-increasing options, till she's at least 65 and eligible for an old-age pension.

The present story, nicely calculated to display the NEW Shirley Temple to best advantage, concerns a neglected little girl in a big house; her preoccupied, widowed, Gail Patrick-chasing papa, who looks like Herbert Marshall; her enemy, the snooping housekeeper (Nella Walker); her friend, Felix Bressart, the swap-shop keeper, to whose delightfully cluttered premises she occasionally escapes via a laundry chute and a bicycle. Puzzled by his daughter's anti-social attitude, papa brings in a psychiatrist who, in turn, brings in crisp, cool, starchy but essentially rumple-able Laraine Day. Laraine, who is evidently being weaned gradually from the clinical Kildare series, plays a doctor, a specialist in psychological disorders. Of course we all know that it's really papa who needs to be psychoanalyzed and boy, does it happen to him when Laraine gets in her cool, clean work! Papa comes out completely cured of Gail and the housekeeper, loving Shirley and looking as psychologically fresh as any man could who resembles Herbert Marshall.

You never saw Shirley Temple fail to put over a picture and you needn't go to this one expecting to see a spectacular failure who has burnt herself out before her thirteenth birthday. The author, the director and the rest of the cast may falter, but not Shirley, and Shirley, after all, is the big news.—M-G-M.

P. S.

Shirley Temple, now 12 and a high-school freshman, attends Westlake School for Girls . . . One of her pals there is Sarah Lynn, daughter of her movie papa, Herbert Marshall . . . During production, a tutor picks up her lessons daily at the school and brings them to the set . . . One of the props needed for the picture was a portrait of a woman, supposedly the deceased wife of Herbert Marshall. The painting you'll see is one of Greer Garson, who coincidentally played Marshall's wife in their last picture, "When Ladies Meet" . . . Laraine Day has just been notified that she was chosen the best star bet among the young Hollywood players by the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America . . . She passed her 21st birthday during production and is rejoicing because she can sign her own contracts now . . . Marshall takes an active part in all British War Relief activities. He was seriously wounded during active service with the Fourteenth London Scots regiment in World War I . . . Gail Patrick was signed to a juicy contract by Metro because of her exceptionally good work in the last two pictures she's done for them . . Felix Bressart tries to change the style of his moustache in every picture . . . Shirley dons high heels, formal gown and up-swung hairdo for a sequence in which she imagines herself to be 18 . . . The other formal she wears is an exact copy of her own favorite—a floaty, wispy creation that she wears to the dances at Harvard Military Academy . . . She's crazy about drawing. James Montgomery Flagg visited the set to sketch her and was amazed at her fashion designs. Said they had an excellent sense of proportion and color . . . Shirley would like to know who her No. 1 fan is. He never signs his name, but he's been sending her flowers on the 23rd of every month since 1935. On her birthday, he sends her a box of sugar lumps with her name marked on each one!

PLAYMATES—AC-1

A movie with Kay Kyser and his band is one thing (and a lot of people admire Kay, too, and justifiably so), but a movie with Kay Kyser and his band AND John Barrymore, Lupe Velez, May Robson and Patsy Kelly is, after all, a lot more movie for your money. That way, much of the burden is taken from Kay and considerably more from the audience, at least from that sedate, middle-aged portion who don't thrill deeply at the prospect of sitting for an hour or more gazing down a tuba's throat. That way Junior and Cissy get their name band, and the old folks get their Barrymore who played Hamlet or something once way back during the early Twenties.

With Jack the Ribber as a foil, the bespectacled Mr. Kyser gains enormously in charm, whimsical appeal and even romantic interest, for the late great Profile is no longer much competition in that respect even for the slightly indiscriminate Kyser. One thing you may have to get used to, but it seems to be the new trend in pictures: Kyser plays a band leader named Kay Kyser; Barrymore plays an aging Shakespearean actor named John Barrymore. Unless you're on to these things, it may be slightly confusing that May Robson doesn't play May Robson but Kay's North Carolina grandma, that Lupe Velez plays not Lupe Velez but a female bullfighter named Conchita, and that Patsy Kelly plays a press agent named Lulu, not Patsy. We hope you're following.

The plot—call it a plot, though it's really just a playful pretext—hinges on a scheme cooked up by Patsy and a colleague, whereby John gives Kay lessons in Shakespearean repertory which, in turn, give John publicity (it seems he needs it in this picture) and a radio commercial. Ginny Simms is Kay's romantic interest, and other featured members of the band are Harry Babbitt, "Ish Kabibble" and Sully Mason. If Kyser is one of your favorites, you'll like this one; if not, there's still a chance you won't be too desperately fatigued.—RKO.

P. S.

The Bard of Avon can't be resting easily in his grave these nights. RKO has "Henry the VIII," "Macbeth" and "Ophelia" jitterbugging all over the place for this one . . . Muzzie May Robson celebrates 55 years of stage and screen work playing "Juliet" to John Barrymore's "Romeo" . . . Set workers did get a terrific thrill, though, when "Jawn," cornily rendering Hamlet's soliloquy, suddenly stopped hamming and recited the immortal lines in the true Barrymore tradition. The silence of that huge sound stage full of people was more eloquent than any applause he'd ever received . . . Lupe Velez likes her name pronounced in two syllables, please . . . Her two pups, tiny chihuahuas named Mr. Kelly and Mrs. Murphy, worked with her in the picture. The mischievous little devils ruined every take, and Lupe was overheard threatening to have them made into tamales . . . Kay Kyser made a special recording of a song ribbing everyone in the company, cast and crew . . . Patsy Kelly ad libbed so well, writer James Kern said she ought to have screen credit . . . Ginny Simms, during the time she was with Kyser's orchestra, trekked nearly 200,000 miles on barnstorming tours and was never once late . . . 5 musical specialties were written especially for the talents of the Kyser boys by Jimmy Van Husen and Johnny Burke . . . Peter Lind Hayes won the role of Kay's publicity agent by doing imitations of Barrymore and Kyser. "What," chorused the two stars, "do they need us for?" . . . Lupe, who never misses seeing a fight at any of the local stadia, gets a swell chance to practice what she's always screaming at "zee fight-ers." She and John have quite a tussle. Mr. B's only comment: "It was all quite reminiscent."

THE LADY IS WILLING AC-2

That good-looking Dietrich gal is back again and in another one of those specially tailored comedy creations in which she always looks so fetching—or nearly always. "The Lady is Willing," however, is no "Destry Rides Again"; in fact there is hardly an unpedestrian moment in the script from first to last. Those involved (in the worst sense of the word) include Fred MacMurray, who has had such dull ones lately that he has begun to deliver his lines like a Fuller Brush salesman who has been thrown out twice already, and Director Mitchell Leisen, who did so much better last month with "Hold Back the Dawn." If only you could just look at Dietrich without listening to MacMurray, or better still without even listening to Dietrich, the picture might be a lot more fun. But there's always that dialogue.

The plot is not so good, either. Seems that New York's most beautiful actress (You Know Who) retrieves New York's most adorable foundling from among a gaping tenement house crowd and summons New York's greatest baby specialist (Fred). Greatest Baby Specialist remains to specialize in Most Beautiful Actress, saving her from a comical kidnap rap and making it possible for her legally to adopt Most Adorable Foundling by gallantly marrying her and moving in with his colonies of pregnancy-test rabbits.

Now you are probably thinking that Beautiful Actress and Greatest Specialist are going to have a falling out, and that Most Adorable Foundling is going to contract a nice case of infantile plot-alysis in order to bring them together again. Well, sir, as a matter of fact, that is exactly what happens. How did you guess it? Ever think of becoming a screen writer yourself?—Col.

P. S.

Before Marlene Dietrich tripped over a toy fire engine and hit front pages everywhere with her fractured fibula, she used to entertain between scenes by twining her classy gams around a carpenter's saw and serenading cast and crew with "The Rosary" . . . She learned to play the musical saw years ago and will oblige with a demonstration any time you ask her . . . For his first "character role," Fred MacMurray greyed his hair at the temples . . . Ruth Ford reads her lines as a Gallic maid with the new Free French accent. Says it differs from the French now being spoken in occupied territories—less guttural . . . Director

(Continued on page 13)

THE GREATEST MUSICAL COMEDY EVER FILMED !

Imagine! The funniest guy on the screen, Bob Hope —in Technicolor! Gorgeous dancing star Zorina—in Technicolor! Victor Moore, Irene Bordoni and a hundred lovely Louisiana belles—in Technicolor! A million laughs . . . scene after scene of indescribable loveliness . . . all yours, in the greatest musical comedy ever filmed!

LOUISIANA PURCHASE

IN TECHNICOLOR!

A Paramount Picture starring

BOB HOPE
VERA ZORINA
VICTOR MOORE

with Irene Bordoni • Dona Drake

AND 100 LOUISIANA BELLES

SONGS EVERYBODY DANCE ♪ YOU CAN'T BRUSH ME OFF ♪ LOUISIANA PURCHASE ♪ IT'S A LOVELY DAY TOMORROW ♪ WHAT CHANCE HAVE I WITH LOVE ♪ I'M LONELY AND YOU'RE LONELY ♪ FOOLS FALL IN LOVE

Music and Lyrics by IRVING BERLIN

Directed by IRVING CUMMINGS • Screen Play by Jerome Chodorov and Joseph Fields • Based on the Musical Comedy by Morrie Ryskind • From a Story by B. G. DeSylva

"LOUISIANA PURCHASE" IS COMING SOON. ASK YOUR LOCAL THEATRE MANAGER FOR THE DATE!

WALT DISNEY'S
DUMBO

NOW IN A COMIC BOOK

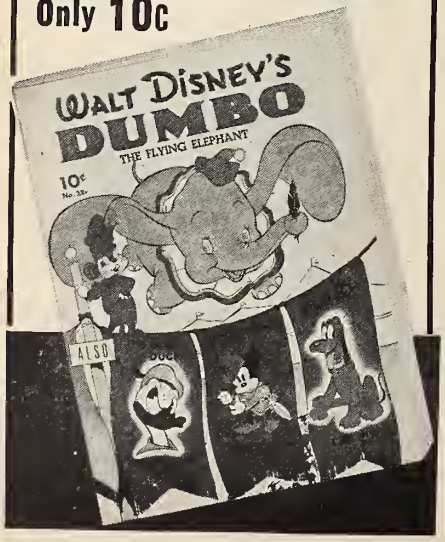
The critics rave and the public applauds. The genius of Disney captivates everyone, and DUMBO is his biggest, funniest hit. Critics call it his masterpiece—his most endearing character creation.

©W.D.P.

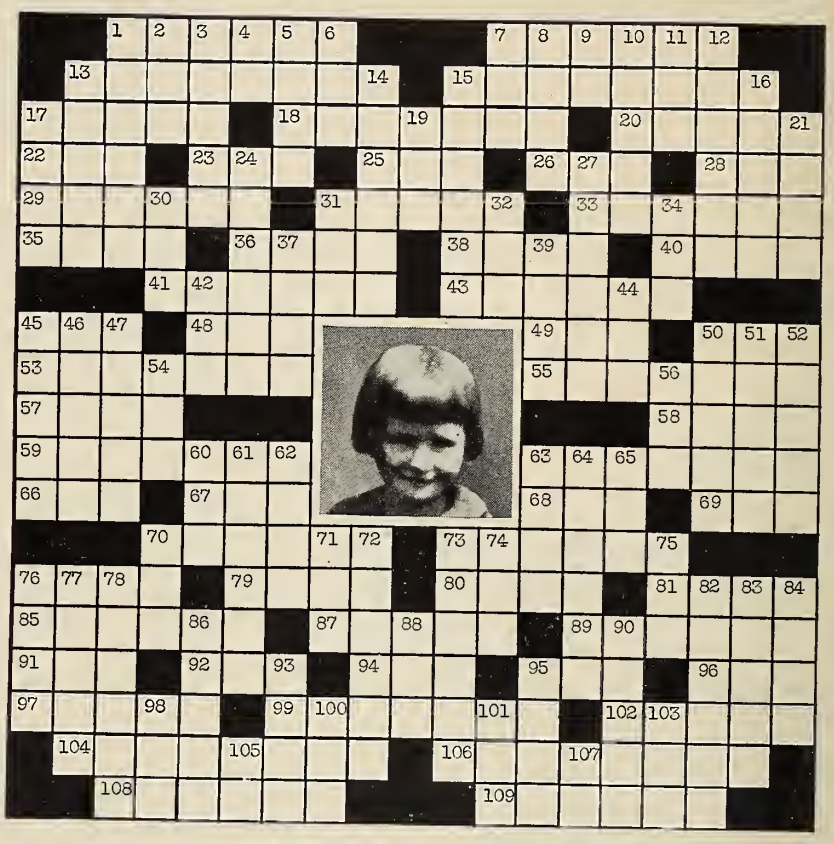
THE KIDDIES WILL LOVE IT

The delightful story of DUMBO is now yours to keep in this beautiful full-color comic book. Here is the complete story of the movie told in comic strip form, with the drawings taken from the actual film itself, the only authorized Disney DUMBO comic book being published. Here is a clean, wholesome, fascinating comic, beautifully printed in full color, that both adults and children will love. It's a book to keep and enjoy—and it's only ten cents!

Now On Sale Everywhere Only 10c



OUR PUZZLE PAGE



Puzzle Solution on Page 81

ACROSS

1. With Deanna in "It Started With Eve"
7. Opposite Holden in "Texas"
13. Star in "Time Out For Rhythm" (pictured)
15. Gold-digger in "The Man Who Came To Dinner"
17. Starred in 53 Across
18. What Eleanor Powell is to Merrill Pye
20. Film producer
22. Wine cup
23. Anne Gwynne's "oomph"
25. Lillian - - - nell
26. Beery's pal in "Barnacle Bill"
28. "Nine L - - - s Are Not Enough"
29. Opposite 13 Across
31. Number of Lane sisters in films
33. Hags
35. Br - - - - Marshall
36. Dill
38. Mad sister in "Ladies In Retirement"
40. Singer in "Angels With Broken Wings"
41. Star of "Tom, Dick And Harry"
43. A hunter
45. Rita Hayworth's name is C - - - ino
48. 551: Rom. num.
49. Indian
50. Angry
53. Hilton's novel-film: "The - - - - - -"
55. Related
57. Sea bird
58. Actress in "How Green Was My Valley"
59. Character actress: Una - - - - - -
63. Sullavan's rival in "Appointment For Love"
66. Corded fabric
67. Man's nickname
68. Arabian garment
69. Scan
70. Actress in "When Ladies Meet"
73. A "motion picture" to Greer Garson
76. Femme in "Sullivan's Travels"
79. Arrow poison
80. Roman road
81. Color
85. Un-jealous hubby in "The Feminine Touch"
87. "They - - - - - By Night"
89. Willows
91. By birth
92. Insect
94. Marjorie - - - n
95. Canadian province: abbr.
96. Malt beverage
97. Lamprey fisher
99. She came back in "Father Takes A Wife"
102. Actor-band leader
104. Hold back
106. Real name of 13 Across
108. What Palm Springs is to stars
109. A drum

DOWN

1. Star of "My Life With Caroline"
2. Actress in "You'll Never Get Rich"
3. Regina in "The Little Foxes"
4. Printer's measure
5. Slaps Marlene in "Manpower"
6. Pa - - - c Knowles
7. "Reap - - - Wild Wind"
8. Length of film
9. Hesitating word
10. Motion picture director
11. Room in a harem
12. Deep gully
13. Dr. Gunther in "Appointment For Love"
14. What Hayden and Flynn have in common
15. What films are projected on
16. Actor serving in England
17. Judy Garland's husband
19. Correlative of "neither"
21. Emil.o in "Street Girl"
24. "Sunny"
27. Card game: Fr.
30. Burmese gibbon
31. "The Four Daugh - - - s"
32. Yale
34. Aged
37. Actor Hamilton
39. Complacent
42. Queer
44. Above: poet.
45. Male film player
46. Feminine relative
47. Strip of leather
50. March's home in "One Foot In Heaven"
51. What chatterers do in theaters
52. Shirley - - - - -
54. Veda Borg's middle name
56. Human being
60. A doze
61. M-G-M's dead-pan songstress
62. Autry's "check" on Champ
63. "Small Town Deb's" star
64. Mrs. Alexander Korda
65. A conceited actor
70. Dry, as wine
71. Dour comedian
72. Jeffrey's role in "Underground"
73. Ideals of good citizenship
74. A follower: suffix
75. "There's M - - - c In Music"
76. Last name of 13 Across
77. Mohammedan prince
78. Dancer in "Sweetheart Of The Campus"
82. Star of 28 Across
83. Star of "Flying Blind"
84. Belgian river
86. Stags
88. He's in "Dr. Jekyll And Mr. Hyde"
90. To take off
93. Russian ruler
95. "In Name - - - -"
98. Point of the compass
100. Bob Hope's lively faculty
101. Away
103. Peruvian plant
105. International language
107. Eleanor Ho - -

(Continued from page 10)

Mitchell Leisen is one of the most versatile men in Hollywood. He's half-owner of an exclusive tailoring shop; owns, directs, produces a dancing revue starring Mary Parker and Billy Daniels; is now in the midst of drawing up plans for a new Palm Springs resort (he used to be an architect) . . . New leading man Roger Clark is so busy, he can't find time for a golf game. Rigged up a putting arrangement in a 7x7 space in his dressing room . . . 11-months'-old "Baby X" was a pretty grouchy little number all during production. Even the combination of being held in Marlene's arms and having the director make a fool of himself by playing peek-a-boo failed to bring the faintest wreath of a smile to the youngster's rose-bud lips. As a last resort, Sterling Holloway was brought in. The sad-faced, wild-haired Sterling just stood in front of the baby. The kiddie took one look and burst out in ripply chuckles . . . Marlene didn't wear just any old cast on her leg. Hers was bright pink and streamlined. Got around the annoyance of having crumbly bits of plaster settle under her foot by having her maid blow 'em out via the vacuum cleaner.

THE SHADOW OF THE THIN MAN

William Powell takes Myrna Loy to the races for excitement . . . and gets it! A jockey is found dead in the club shower. But Bill refuses to help until Alan Baxter, newspaperman, is shot. In rapid succession, a pair of innocent suspects are taken into custody and another murder is committed. After several suspenseful moments, Powell tells all, thereby startling Myrna and everyone else involved.—M-G-M.

TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE

A scientific expedition pops up just in time to save Johnny Sheffield from the tortures of the savages. Tarzan appears, thanks the white men for saving his foster son and agrees to be their guide

. . . but forbids gold hunting. When one gold-hunting member of the expedition is stymied by Tarzan, he takes Maureen O'Sullivan and Johnny as hostages, then takes a shot at Tarzan. Rallying a small army of elephants, Tarzan rescues Maureen and Johnny . . . dispenses with two of the white men . . . sends the other back to civilization laden with gold. —M-G-M.

BLONDIE GOES TO COLLEGE

When Dagwood (Arthur Lake) tells Blondie (Penny Singleton) he wants to go to college, she thinks he's crazy. Nevertheless he goes . . . and so does she. The muddle begins when campus flirtations set in, but things really get hot when Dagwood is arrested for kidnapping Baby Dumpling (Larry Simms). Blondie finally untangles the mess by simply telling the truth . . . and when she does, even Dagwood's knocked for a loop.—Col.

BEDTIME STORY

At the three points of this triangle are Loretta Young, actress, Fredric March, husband playwright, and their newly purchased farm in Connecticut. After Fredric breaks his promise to give up the theater for the farm, Loretta leaves for Reno—is lured back—but finally goes through with her divorce, despite March's wild and varied schemes. Her subsequent marriage to a social registrant is found illegal, to Loretta's secret relief . . . and she is re-united with March after a lusty brawl between him and husband No. 2. Loretta is inveigled into her husband's new play which creates a first-night sensation . . . but more sensational is her curtain-call announcement that the play will close in 5 months due to an "Act of God!" Fredric March faints but the day is saved!—Col.

A DATE WITH THE FALCON

George Sanders (the Falcon) is about to give up sleuthing to marry Wendy Barrie and become a broker when he is involved in his second diamond mystery. This one revolves around a secret formula for making fake diamonds real as life. The gangsters lead the Falcon a merry chase before they're rounded-up. In the end, the secret formula is found in the pocket of the Falcon's stooge (Allen Jenkins), much to his and everyone else's surprise.—RKO.

FOUR JACKS AND A JILL

The "Four Jacks," headed by Ray Bolger, live by their music and their wits. Anne Shirley lives by her wits alone. Securing a better job for the "Four Jacks," she also replaces torchy June Havoc as singer. But one night Desi Arnaz and a pal wander into the nightclub and gum up the works. Things are further complicated by June and her gangster-fiancé. In the end, Ray gets Anne . . . the band gets out of jail . . . and the much-deserving gangster gets it in the neck.—RKO.

(Continued on page 16)

Why Arthur Murray Dance Teachers Prefer Odorono Cream

WHEN you teach dancing for a living, you can't take chances with daintiness! That's why the glamourous girls who teach dancing in Arthur Murray's famous Studios are so crazy about Odorono Cream. They can dab it on and dance all day without fear of underarm odor or dampness!

Non-irritating, non-gritty, non-greasy—Odorono Cream ends perspiration annoyance safely 1 to 3 days! Generous 10¢, 39¢ and 59¢ sizes, plus tax, at all cosmetic counters.

THE ODORONO CO., INC., NEW YORK

1 FULL OZ. JAR—ONLY 39¢ (Plus Tax)

ENDS PERSPIRATION ANNOYANCE 1 TO 3 DAYS

GIVES YOU MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

ALSO LIQUID ODORONO—REGULAR AND INSTANT

CHRISTMAS GIFT IDEAS

Beautifully packaged foods make exciting gifts

BY HELEN HOLMES

If you want to have your friends really love the gifts you give this Christmas, try making home-made candies and cookies. With the simple recipes we are printing, and just a little time and effort, you will give your gifts distinction that's entirely lacking in those you've hurriedly purchased and into which you have not put a little of yourself.

Lovely Margaret Hayes, who is appearing in Paramount's production of "Louisiana Purchase," says that every gift, no matter how simple, should have a glamorous wrapping. She uses colorful Christmas papers and outside wrappings of clear Cellophane. By securing the folded edges with Scotch Tape and decorating with bows and pompons of Scotch Gift Wrap Tape, she is easily able to make her presents look so mysterious and exciting that her friends can hardly wait until Christmas to open them.

If you will mail the coupon we are printing at the end of this article you will receive an extremely helpful little booklet, "MAGIC AT YOUR FINGERTIPS," which gives directions and illustrations of many easy and attractive ways of wrapping your Christmas Gifts.

CHRISTMAS CUT-OUT COOKIES

- 3½ cups sifted cake flour
- 2½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup butter
- 1¼ cups brown sugar, firmly packed
- 2 eggs, unbeaten
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- 1½ teaspoons lemon juice

Sift dry ingredients together. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating after each. Add vanilla and lemon juice; then add flour, a small amount at a time, and blend thoroughly. Chill until firm enough to roll. Roll ⅛-inch thick on a slightly floured board. Cut with floured cutters, brush with glaze and decorate. Place on slightly greased baking sheet and bake in a hot oven (425°F.) for 5 to 10 minutes.

Cutters to use for cookies: Round and scalloped cutters, Christmas tree, star and crescent-shaped cutters.

Decorations: Granulated sugar, mixture of cinnamon and sugar or colored sugar. Chopped nuts. Tiny colored candies. Cocoanut, raisins, currants, lemon or orange peel. And green citron for holly stem and leaves.

Glaze: Mix together 1 egg yolk and ¼ cup of milk. Brush lightly over cookies before baking.

ALMOND BUTTER CRUNCH

1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
¾ cup finely chopped blanched almonds, lightly toasted
4 squares Baker's Dot Chocolate

Add butter to sugar in saucepan. Place over low flame and stir constantly until sugar is dissolved. Cook until a small amount of mixture becomes very brittle in cold water (310° F.), stirring occasionally to prevent scorching. Add ¼ cup nuts. Pour into lightly buttered pan, 8 x 8 x 2 inches. Cool. Heat chocolate over boiling water until partly melted, then remove from boiling water and stir it rapidly until entirely melted. Spread ½ of chocolate over top and sprinkle with ½ of remaining nuts. Cool until chocolate is firm. Invert crunch and cover with remaining chocolate. Sprinkle with remaining nuts. Cool until chocolate is firm. Break in small irregular pieces. Makes about 1¼ pounds crunch.

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Please send Xmas gift-wrapper folder MAGIC AT YOUR FINGERTIPS.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....
Number Street

CITY..... STATE.....

(Coupon may be pasted on post card.)
This offer expires Jan. 1, 1942.

THE LIFE AND LOVES OF AN EXCITING WOMAN!
DAVID... her pulses throbbed...
ROSING... she learned from him...
ROGER... her heart glowed...
VICTOR... sheer devotion!
Loretta Young
IN
THE MEN IN HER LIFE
with
CONRAD VEIDT • DEAN JAGGER
JOHN SHEPPERD • OTTO KRUGER • EUGENIE LEONTOVICH
Based on a novel by Lady Eleanor Smith • Screen play by Frederick Kohner, Michael Wilson, Paul Trivers
Directed by GREGORY RATOFF • A GREGORY RATOFF PRODUCTION • A COLUMBIA PICTURE

(Continued from page 13)

AMONG THE LIVING

There's plenty of gore at the hands of insane Albert Dekker who supposedly died many years before. Once out of his straight-jacket, he strangles his aged negro attendant and a girl for whom he had a passing fondness. When the papers blurt out the truth about Al Dekker and his murderous tendencies, a reward is offered. His innocent twin brother (also played by Dekker) is tracked down and almost lynched. Fleeing the mob, he trips over the body of the violent Dekker whom he finds dead. The crowd, arriving at his heels, is convinced of his innocence.—Par.

MELODY LANE

If Leon Errol of Kornies Breakfast Food weren't nuts about music . . . and nuts in general . . . Don Douglas, his advertising man, would have had no difficulties. Trouble is that Errol insists on sitting in with the band during his big network programs. Anne Gwynne, Don's aide, succeeds in signing up an unsuspecting cornbelt band. After many hectic rehearsals and an equally hectic kidnapping of Baby Sandy, Anne Gwynne sets things straight and just incidentally marries Robert Paige, the band leader, while Mary Lou Cook (band member) snags Don Douglas.—U.

NIGHT OF JANUARY 16th

Playing for high stakes, Nils Asther embezzles $20,000,000 of stockholders' money and then skips. Police find his wristwatch, assume that he's dead and hold his secretary, Ellen Drew, for murder. Stockholder Robert Preston bails Ellen out, believing she'll lead him to the $20,000,000. Evidence piles high against her until she and Robert, working on a hunch, trace Nils Asther to Havana. Cuban police are about to arrest Robert and Ellen for disappearing during her trial when . . . but why spoil the story?—Par.

OBLIGING YOUNG LADY

Things start happening when Edmond O'Brien, roving newspaper reporter, gets his face slapped by Ruth Warrick. From then on he pursues her hot-and-heavy until she is whisked away by her fiancé. Being the perfect secretary, she takes her boss's daughter, Joan Carroll, to a mountain hotel to spare her the notoriety of a court battle between her parents. There they bump into O'Brien. Situations arise which force Ruth and Edmond to play mamma and papa to little Joan. The trick works to everyone's advantage.—RKO.

(Continued on page 81)

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
Accent on Love (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Adventure in Washington (Columbia)	3★
Affectionately Yours (Warners)	2½★
All That Money Can Buy (RKO)	3½★
Aloma of the South Seas (Paramount) C	2½★
Apache Kid (Republic)	3★
*Appointment For Love (Universal)	3★
Arizona Bound (Monogram) C	2½★
Bad Man of Deadwood (Republic)	2½★
Bornocle Bill (M-G-M)	2½★
Big Store, The (M-G-M) C	3½★
Billy the Kid (M-G-M) C	3★
*Birth of the Blues (Paramount)	3★
Black Cat, The (Universal)	2½★
Blonde from Singapore, The (Columbia)	2★
Blondie in Society (Columbia) C	2½★
Blood and Sand (20th Century-Fox) C	3½★
Blossoms in the Dust (M-G-M)	4★
Bowery Blitzkrieg (Monogram)	2★
Bride Came C. O. D., The (Warners)	3½★
Burma Convoy (Universal)	2½★
Buy Me That Town (Paramount)	3★
Caught in the Droft (Poramount)	3★
Charley's Aunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chon in Rio (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
*Chocolate Soldier (M-G-M)	3½★
Christmos in July (Poromount)	3★
City Limits (Monogram) C	2★
Come Live With Me (M-G-M)	3★
Comin' Round the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
County Fair (Republic)	2★
Cracked Nuts (Universal)	2½★
Dance Hall (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (M-G-M)	3★
Doctors Don't Tell (Republic)	2★
Dressed to Kill (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Dumbo (RKO) C	3½★
Ellery Queen and the Murder Ring (Columbio	2½★
Father Takes a Wife (RKO)	2½★
Flying Codets (Universal)	2★
Forced Landing (Poromount)	2½★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fox,	2★
Gangs of Sonoro (Republic)	2½★
Gay Falcon, The (RKO)	2½★
Getaway, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Great Dictator, The (United Artists)	3½★
Great Guns (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Great Profile, The (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Harmon of Michigan (Columbia)	2★
Hello Sucker (Universal)	2½★
*Hellzapoppin' (Universal)	3½★
Henry Aldrich for President (Poramount) C	3★
Here Comes Mr. Jordan (Columbia)	4★
Her First Beau (Columbio) C	3★
He Stoyed for Breakfast (Columbio)	2½★
Hit the Road (Universal) C	2½★
Hold Back the Down (Poromount)	3½★
Hold Thot Ghost (Universal)	3★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Honky Tonk (M-G-M)	3★
How Green Wos My Valley (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Hullobaloo (M-G-M)	2★
Hurry, Charlie, Hurry (RKO)	2½★
Ice-Capades (Republic)	2½★
If I Had My Way (Universol) C	3★
I'll Wait For You (M-G-M)	2½★
In The Navy (Universal)	3½★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
It Started With Eve (Universal)	4★
*Kathleen (M-G-M)	3★
Knockout (Warners)	2½★
Knute Rockne—All Americon (Worners) C	3½★
*Ladies in Retirement (Columbia)	3½★
Lady Be Good (M-G-M)	3★
*Lody is Willing, The (Columbio)	2½★
Lody from Louisiona, The (Republic,	3★
Land of Liberty (M-G-M)	3★
Last of the Duones (20th Century-Fox) C	2½★
Low of the Tropics (Warners)	2½★
Life Begins for Andy Hordy (M-G-M) C	3★
Life With Henry (Poramount) C	2½★
Little Foxes, The (RKO)	4★
*Louisiana Purchose (Poramount)	3½★
Love Crazy (M-G-M)	3½★
Lydio (United Artists)	3½★
Moisie Was a Lody (M-G-M)	2½★
Major Barbara (United Artists) C	3½★
The Maltese Falcon (Worners)	3½★
Mon ot Large (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Man Hunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★

Picture	General Rating
Manpower (Warners)	3★
Married Bachelor (M-G-M)	3★
*Men in Her Life, The (Columbia)	3★
Million Dollar Baby (Warners)	3½★
Mr. ond Mrs. Smith (RKO)	3★
Mr. District Attorney (Republic)	2★
Moonlight in Hawaii (Universal)	2½★
Moon Over Burma (Paramount)	2½★
Moon Over Miami (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
My Life with Caroline (RKO)	3★
Navy Blues (Warners) C	3★
Never Give A Sucker An Even Break (Universal)	3★
Night Train (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Nine Lives Are Not Enough (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Nothing But the Truth (Poramount)	3★
Officer and the Lady, The (Columbia)	2½★
One Night in Lisbon (Paramount)	3★
Out of the Fog (Warners)	3½★
Parson of Panamint (Paramount)	3★
Passage From Hong Kong (Warners)	2★
Penny Serenade (Columbia)	3½★
People vs. Dr. Kildare (M-G-M)	2★
Pittsburgh Kid, The (Republic)	2½★
*Playmotes (RKO)	3★
Pot O' Gold (United Artists)	3★
Power Dive (Paramount)	2½★
Pride ond Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal) C	2★
Reluctant Dragon (RKO)	3★
Repent at Leisure (RKO)	2½★
Ride on Vaquero (20th Century-Fox) C	2½★
Ringside Moisie (M-G-M)	2½★
*Rise ond Shine (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Rookies on Parade (Republic) C	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint in Palm Springs, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
Sergeont York (Warners)	4★
Scattergood Pulls the Strings (RKO)	2½★
Scotland Yard (20th Century-Fox)	2★
She Knew All the Answers (Columbia)	3★
Shepherd of the Hills (Paramount)	3½★
Shining Victory (Warners)	2½★
Sing Another Chorus (Universal)	2★
Sis Hopkins (Republic)	3★
*Skylark (Poramount)	3★
Smiling Ghost, The (Warners)	2½★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal) C	2½★
Spring Porade (Universal) C	3★
Stronge Alibi (Warners)	2½★
Sunny (RKO)	3★
Sunset in Wyoming (Republic)	3½★
Sun Valley Serenade (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Suspicion (RKO)	3★
Sweetheort of the Compus (Columbia)	2★
Tonks a Million (United Artists)	3★
Texas (Columbia)	3½★
That Uncertain Feeling (United Artists)	3★
There's Magic in Music (Poramount)	2½★
They Dare Not Love (Columbio)	2★
*They Died With Their Boots On (Warners)	3½★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Met in Bombay (M-G-M)	3★
This Woman is Mine (Universal)	2½★
Those Were the Days (Poramount) C	2½★
Tight Shoes (Universal)	3★
Tillie the Toiler (Columbio)	2★
Time Out For Rhythm (Columbia)	2½★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO) C	3★
Tom, Dick and Horry (RKO)	4★
Too Many Blondes (Universal)	2★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
*Two-Faced Woman (M-G-M)	3½★
Two in a Taxi (Columbia)	2½★
Underground (Warners)	3½★
Unexpected Uncle (RKO)	2½★
Unfinished Business (Universal)	3½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Wogons Roll At Night, The (Warners)	3★
Washington Melodroma (M-G-M)	3★
Weekend for Three (RKO)	3★
Westerner, The (United Artists) C	3★
When Ladies Meet (M-G-M)	3★
Whistling in the Dork (M-G-M)	3★
Woman's Face, A (M-G-M)	3½★
Yank in R. A. F., The (20th Century-Fox)	3★
You'll Never Get Rich (Columbia)	4★
Young As You Feel (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Ziegfeld Girl (M-G-M)	3½★

ALEXANDRE DUMAS' STRANGEST STORY
OF TWO BROTHERS WITH BUT A SINGLE SOUL!
TWINS . . . invisibly bound to each other for life—yet worlds apart and enemies to the death! . . . living, loving, fighting as one man! When one brother holds a beautiful woman, the other thrills to her love! When one brother writhes under the lash, the other feels his pain! Dumas' most unusual, most exciting drama—now dwarfs all previous achievements of the adventure screen!
Edward Small presents
ALEXANDRE DUMAS' masterpiece of adventure and romance
THE CORSICAN BROTHERS
STARRING DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR.
RUTH WARRICK · AKIM TAMIROFF · J. Carrol Naish · H. B. Warner
Henry Wilcoxon · John Emery · Gloria Holden · Veda Ann Borg · Directed by Gregory Ratoff
Screenplay by George Bruce · From a free adaptation of the Dumas story by George Bruce and Howard Estabrook · Released through UNITED ARTISTS

WATCH FOR AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT ABOUT THIS AMAZING PICTURE FROM A LEADING THEATRE IN YOUR CITY!

GREAT FAMILIES make great pictures!

from the days of "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" and "CIMARRON"... through "CAVALCADE" and "BEAU GESTE"... down to "THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD," "THE GRAPES OF WRATH" and "GONE WITH THE WIND"...

great families make GREAT PICTURES!

...and now to the screen comes the brave story of a family never conquered—not by armed men or hardship, hunger or hate—nor by the turbulent years that stole the greenness from their valley.

WALTER PIDGEON
as GRUFFYDD

MAUREEN O'HARA
as ANGHARAD

ANNA LEE
as BRONWEN

RODDY McDOWALL
as HUW

DONALD CRISP
as GWILYM MORGAN

PATRIC KNOWLES
as IVOR

SARA ALLGOOD
as MRS. MORGAN

JOHN LODER
as IANTO

Twentieth Century-Fox presents

Richard Llewellyn's

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY

with

WALTER PIDGEON • MAUREEN O'HARA • DONALD CRISP

ANNA LEE • RODDY McDOWALL

John Loder • Sara Allgood • Barry Fitzgerald • Patric Knowles

Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK • Directed by JOHN FORD

Screen Play by Philip Dunne

Watch for CLAUDETTE COLBERT in "Remember the Day"

Gene Tierney

She's like a Petty drawing and wishes she weren't. Whittles 14 pounds off those curves before each picture. Mostly rumba-ed it away before starting work on her latest role in U. A.'s "Shanghai Gesture." Prefers the scent of fresh paint and gasoline to "Tabu." Adores her brother Butch and all James Thurber nonsense!

Walter Pidgeon

Pidgeon-hole Pidgeon? Not on your life! Warbling his way through musical comedies was O.K. for a starter. But exploding into song at the point of a baton is hardly a full-time vocation for a 200-pound chunk of virility like Walter. Anyhow, that's how HE felt about it. Better to sit and wait than to be typed for the rest of his life. So Pidgeon sat and waited, shifting his position from New York to Hollywood, until one day the heavy-duty roles started rolling in. So faint in the distance were his musical comedy days that Hollywood almost forgot the whole thing! And there was that nice, fat role in "How Green Was My Valley," just waiting to be snapped up. Paradoxical guy, Walter did the snagging. Judging by his latest part in M-G-M's "Design for Scandal," his snagging record is still tops. Cast so many times as the world-weary cocktail-guzzler, you'd never suspect him of carrot-eating and muscle-flexing. Or book-collecting, either. Hard to believe beet-tops, salad greens and travel books could nurture such a manly hunk of glamor. Yet there it is—6' 3", 200 lbs., with shoulders like a halfback and a face like "The Thinker"!

Relaxed as a whirling dervish, Roz has all 10 fingers in different pies! She writes unpublished reams—dreams up her own clothes—puts her heart into her conversation and her feet into "bunny shoes" when they're out of camera-view. Hates gossip, despite her natural talent for it in "The Women." Incurably curious, she's busy as a tourist, visiting sets, chatting with all-comers. M-G-M could use a Boy Scout troop to bring her back alive while she holds up production of "Design for Scandal," teaing with Joan Crawford. A lively bundle of contradictions, she thinks sleeping's a waste of time, but rarely crawls out of bed before noon when she's 'twixt pictures. Is happiest in a houseful of people, but lived alone. Has a swimming pool, but is allergic to cold water. Bats 1000 in glamor, but, though 30, her marriage record was strictly zero until temptation stalked in—in the person of Freddie Brisson, actors' agent. Used to say, "When you've got a gal like Hazel (Garbo's ex-maid) to take care of you, why clutter up the house with a husband?" Contradicted even that, two months ago, with not so much as an "Excuse it, please!"

Rosalind Russell

When other Hollywood guys his age were staggering the box-office, where was Bob? Selling fountain pens! Wasn't until March, 1940, that he changed his name and his vocation—signing "Sterling" instead of "Hart" to a 20th Century-Fox contract. Toyed around with the idea of acting while credit-managing for a rubber company. Finally got to Hollywood green as grass and started an intensive course in gate-crashing. Wangled a test from Columbia—rang a bell—and got a year's contract. Only bit parts, though. Started brushing up on salesmanship again when the break came in "Bad Girl." Judging from his current film, M-G-M's "Two-Faced Woman," the breaks are still coming. Back home in Newcastle they still talk of how Bob used to chase down the athletic field like the true son of a Chicago Cub. No telling where he might have wound up if not for that ankle injury he got on the freshman squad at Pitt. Had another accident not long ago but took it in his stride. Bumped into the rear of a car in Beverly Hills. Got out muttering, "Just like a woman," and found Hedy Lamarr at the wheel. A little informal for an introduction—but it will do!

Robert Sterling

"Me play second fiddle to that Model-T Romeo?!"

"Me play Shakespeare with that Corn-fed Quiz Quack?!"

THEY SAID IT COULDN'T BE DONE— BUT WE'VE GOT 'EM TOGETHER!

The Ol-l-ld Professor of the Air Waves
And That Son-of-a-gun of the Royal Family
Convulsively Combined in Kay's Biggest Song-studded Comedy!

KAY KYSER

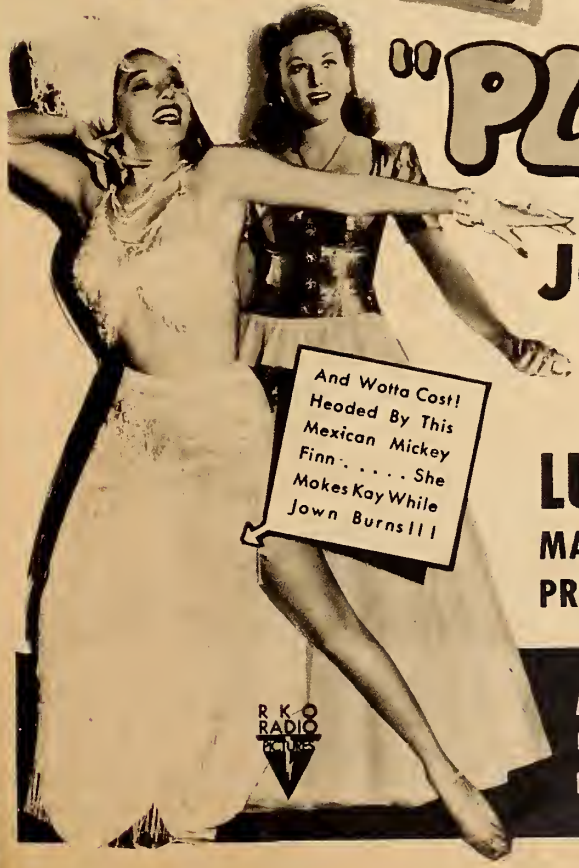
In

"PLAYMATES"

With

JOHN BARRYMORE

SEE KAY... Ploy Shakespeare ...Go Goofy Over Lupe ... Launch 5 New Song Hits.
SEE JAWN... Rumba with Robson ... Rassle with Lupe ... Duel with Koy.



And Wotta Cast! Headed By This Mexican Mickey Finn-.... She Makes Kay While Jown Burns!!!

LUPE VELEZ • GINNY SIMMS

MAY ROBSON • PATSY KELLY • PETER LIND HAYES

PRODUCED AND DIRECTED BY DAVID BUTLER

Screen Play by James V. Kern

Plus* KAY KYSER's Famous BAND

In A Sensational Spectacle, "Shakespeare in Swing" featuring

Harry BABBITT • Ish KABIBBLE • Sully MASON

ERNEST A. BACHRACH

James Craig

If James Craig ever writes an autobiography it won't be entitled "Ten Easy Steps to Success," because his is no get-rich-quick story! Started selling papers, drove a truck, worked his way from construction crew to oil field and finolly to sales department of General Motors. Reached the point where he could finally sign his name to a check and threw it all up, hell-bent for Hollywood. Judging by RKO's current film, "Valley of the Sun," Tennessee's boy has made good . . . and he's none the worse for wear. A towering 6' 3", he not only looks like a man of action—he is. Frisked his way casually through the United States, Conado, Mexico and Cuba, picking up a fluent ocquaintance with Spanish. Worked his way to England on o cattle boat—did o pretty noble job of Boy-Scouting during the Palm Beach hurricane back in '26. Small wonder he went about the adventure film, "Rigadoon," as though it were old stuff! And that's the guy whose porents hoped he would be a minister. Strictly a man's man, he knows more about fish and moose than he does obout women. Asks the inevitoble question, "How is she on Southern fried chicken and hot biscuits?"

She loves horses, stray cats, blue-murder mystery yarns, candid cameras. Above all, she loves a guy named John Barry, publisher—wears the sparkler that's been in his family so long it's a tradition. Lives up to the Barry tradition other ways, too; by squinting at golf balls and household budgets with Yankee sharpness—by promptly discarding time-worn socks—by rising and shining for breakfast with hubby. Recalls how a wad of gum almost gummed up her debut with Fred Waring at the Roxy Theater in New York—but unsheathed her talent for comedy. Still tops in rollicking roles, but occasionally excursions into sheer drama—currently Warners' "Blues in the Night." Grew up from "Four Daughters" to "Four Wives" and later to "Four Mothers," but didn't outgrow her 18" waistline—the smallest in Hollywood. Never outgrew the nickname "Pat," either, though managed to slough off the "Mullican." It's do-or-die when Pat gets going. It was almost "die" when she took up horseback riding. Thrown three times the first day, she found herself in one of those rare spots she couldn't wiggle out of with a grin and a wisecrack!

Priscilla Lane

THEY LIVE

Clippered to Modern Screen from our London correspondent! The first exclusive account of four plucky English screen stars who exchanged Hollywood bright-lights for British Isle blackouts!

BY C. A. LEJEUNE

34-year-old Olivier's been in Eng. a year now. In 1940 made "Pride and Prejudice" with Greer Garson.

'Tis rumored in London that Larry and Vivien Olivier are expecting a wee one in the very near future!

WITH THEIR BOOTS ON

At a luncheon in London the other day, Producer Gabriel Pascal, before taking off for Canada in a bomber, had a few choice things to say about certain English actors in Hollywood. "Our sweet little birds," he called them, "who cable since eighteen months, I come home by Clipper. . . . They send me telegrams of congratulation on 'Major Barbara,' " he added darkly, "and promise to work with me. I think that in time I bring them all home by way of Canada."

His remarks set us thinking of other homing pigeons—English stars from Hollywood who haven't needed any Machiavellian cunning to bring them back to their homeland. Vivien Leigh . . . Laurence Olivier . . . David Niven . . . Richard Greene . . . four players who took the first boat home as soon as things began to look sticky over here. How has England and the war treated them? we wondered. Where are they? What are they thinking and doing? England is a pretty small country, but it's big enough to do a good job of hiding three service men and a navy wife who don't care to be found.

We ran Miss Leigh down first. We interviewed her amongst two buckets of sand (for fire bombs) and two of ice (we can't think why) inside the stage door of the Haymarket Theater. She was in the middle of a rehearsal of Shaw's "Doctor's Dilemma," which will go out on the road next Monday for a three months' tour of the blitzed areas. She was wearing a black tunic suit with brass buttons and a pronounced military influence. She has let her dark hair grow long, demurely parted down the middle, but definitely long: "Because," she says, "I can put it up in a minute with one comb and I'm ready for anything."

Pressed about how the war had treated her, she grew distressed. "But, sweetie," she said—for we have known Vivien long enough to make such addresses regular—"it hasn't treated me in any special way. I can't seem to make them understand in America that I'm just doing what every other Englishwoman is doing now. We had a newspaper woman from Hollywood in here the other day, and she thought I was pulling her leg when I told her I was cooking and doing the housework and growing the vegetables. But it wasn't an act—you know that. That sort of thing is just automatic."

Capt. Dave Niven (above with Loretta Young) wed Primula Rollo, woman's auxiliary air force officer, in Oct. '40.

THEY LIVE WITH THEIR BOOTS ON (CONTINUED)

She looked rather darkly at the bucket of ice, which was beginning to wilt down the sides of her black sandal shoes. The stagedoor keeper, a fatherly type, suggested we might like to sit in his box and cleared a wooden chair of a bottle of milk, a cracked tea-pot, the mid-day paper and a cat. A minion from somewhere backstage stuck his head around the door to remark there was always Diana's Room. "Why, yes, of course," cried Vivien. "Diana won't be in till tonight's show. She won't mind." So we moved on from the buckets to the star dressing-room, where telegrams stuck in the mirror and pinned on a wooden screen wished Miss Diana Wynyard all the best for the opening of "No Time for Comedy."

"Larry should be in at any minute now," Mrs. Olivier went on. "He always looks in at rehearsal if he happens to be up in town. He had to go to the Admiralty for something today. He's a Loot in the Fleet Air Arm now, you know. Got his second pip. He does about three hours' actual flying each day and is on duty at the R.A.F. station from 8:15 till 5. I get him his breakfast before he goes and his supper when he comes back."

We said we thought a brief time-table of her day would be nice. She said it wouldn't be nice a bit, just dull. They had a hideous little bungalow in Hampshire, she said, handy for Larry's work, with one cook-general to do the odd jobs and keep an eye on the cat. Larry's old secretary was lost somewhere in France, their maid had stayed on in America, and the chauffeur was in the Army. . . . The cat, in case we were interested, she added, had one green eye and one blue and a squint. It came from the local pub, and its name was Tissie.

We said we would still like that time-table, and she said that she'd warned us, but here it was:

"We get up soon after six, earlier than we ever did for films. Then after breakfast Larry goes off to the station, and I do the housework and answer my letters and do the food. We live in quite a little country place, you know, so I call up the stores in the nearest town, and they put the food on the local

Posing with Zarina in May, '40, little did Greene know he'd be duty-bound for Britain 3 mos. later!

Instead of machine-gun shooting, Dick Greene has been furloughed to shoot motion picture film in Denham, Eng.

'bus, and in the evening I pick it up at the bus-stop and cook it for supper, just as dull as that.

"Until recently I've been reading plays in what spare time I had. We meant to do 'Claudia,' you know, but that fell through. Then we fixed on 'The Doctor's Dilemma,' and for the last three weeks I've been up in town rehearsing every day. I get home about eight o'clock, so I don't see much of Larry. Several nights a week he's on duty all night.

"I still drive the old Invicta. Do you remember how she stalled across your driveway five years ago? She's fourteen years old now and makes fearful noises and stalls nearly all the time, but she still goes when she wants to. The other day I brought her up from Southampton, all loaded up with bags and bedding and the cat and the cook-general, and she stalled right across a country lane. I got the man who was doing the removal to hitch his van up behind and push."

We asked Vivien about the grim old house in Chelsea, which had been the Oliviers' headquarters when they first came home from America. "Old Durham Cottage?" she said. (Continued on page 62)

Reports say Dick has seen active service in Egypt. Above, with Alice Faye in "Little Old New York."

CANDIDLY YOURS...

It's just what every Main Streeter dreams of—this sparkling Hollywood night life!

Desi Arnaz is perpetually amazed at wife Lucille Ball's superstitions! Claims she carries a roll of "lucky money," refuses to ride thru tunnels and even balks at pre-breakfast singing!

Photographs by Staff Photographer Bob Beerman

Lana Turner pulled a fast one during her visit to Lake Arrowhead recently. Concealed her identity under a brunette wig, and not a soul recognized her! Lately she's had Hollywood gasping over her electric blue roadster and matching suit. Above with Tony Martin.

Playboy Blake Gardner keeps 20-year-old Ann Miller (ex-Lucille Ann Collier) and everybody else in town guessing about the very mysterious source of his fabulous fortune!

Linda Darnell is as proud as Punch of her family. Thrille sister Monte and brother Bubber to death by posing with 'er at a premiere. Often drags 11-yr.-old sister along on dates

Ever since the birth of their wee bonnie lass last August, John Detlie (M-G-M set designer) and wife Veronica Lake have been telling friends they'd like four more exactly like her!

According to Mischa Auer, he'll soon be altar-trekking with current heart-throb Joyce Hunter, with him at Ciro's. He's an avid post-card sender; keeps chums' P. O. boxes packed!

One look at Bill Powell dispels rumors of his illness. Wife Diana Lewis goes to the studio with him every morning bright and early to take tap, vocal, ballet and dramatic lessons!

That huge cat's-eye-and-ruby ring Betty Grable slipped or Geo. Raft's finger on his recent 37th birthday was 'way too large. Had to be chopped down a few sizes at the jewelers

VOCAL BOY

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

Gets such a kick out of their Sears Roebuck gasoline lawn-mower, he's worn the lawn practically bald!

Warbles to the tune of an old Steinway he's had for years. Won't give it up for sentimental reasons!

A perfect physical specimen (6′ 2″, 195 lbs.), he dreads getting fat. Warned his maid not to tempt him with yams!

Dennis loves to go moose and duck hunting in Utah. Takes the missus along to watch and roast the quarry!

LIFE WITH MORGAN'S A SONG! TROUBLE

IS HE NEVER SINGS THE SAME TUNE TWICE.

JUST ASK THE GIRL WHO OWNS HIM!

MAKES GOOD!

First thing Dennis did after finishing "Captains of the Clouds" was chuck sleeping bags in the Ford station wagon, take to the hills with Lillian. Parked kids with his folks in Beverly Hills!

■ Hollywood almost ruined Dennis Morgan's amiable disposition—snared him with a contract, dangled parts under his nose, jerked them away before he could nibble, frazzled his once-velvet nerves. For the first time, Lillian, his wife, heard him snarl and meditated schemes for his deliverance which didn't work. He was finally sprung by a Kitty named Foyle just in time to avert permanent damage.

Even with Kitty it was a near thing. In a triple play Morgan had been bunted from Metro to Paramount to Warners, who weren't sure they wanted to lend him to RKO. Sam Wood, the director, swore and Dennis prayed. He haunted the front office, and the sight of his face wrung the heart of the front office secretary. At length Wood phoned the head boss, then in Honolulu, for a plain yes or no and was told, sure, why not? That's how it happens in Hollywood.

Lillian was frankly thrilled when the fans started giving tongue after "Kitty Foyle." She loves to see him surrounded by autograph hunters. To cloak his own gratification, Dennis gibes at hers. "Just a little country hick—" She grins widely and asks him just exactly who does he think he's fooling around here, anyway!

They're a close corporation—Dennis and Lillian, little Stan, baby Kristin and the two elder Morners, who have come to Hollywood to be near the children. Before each picture Father Morner inquires: "Are you nervous, Lillian?" If she's not, he's not. As they gathered round the radio to hear Dennis sing for the Lux program, he eyed her anxiously. "Little nervous tonight?"

"Well—just a little maybe—" then, catching sight of his face, "Oh, not about Dennis, Father Morner. I'm having a tooth out tomorrow, didn't you know?" And the gullible man relaxes.

He feels a special proprietary interest in his daughter-in-law since he was with Dennis when Dennis first saw her. They'd just moved to Marshfield from Prentice, Wisconsin. It was Poppy Day. Dennis noticed the red sweater first, then the girl inside it. Her hair was dark, she was selling poppies, and her blue eyes shone with compassion—why, he didn't know. He wanted to buy a flower but hadn't the nerve. Lillian looked after him. "That poor good-looking boy with a limp," she sighed. (It was only a temporary kind of lopsided spring acquired in frosh football.) (Continued on page 66)

Got her start warbling "The Lord Done Fixed Up My Soul" in La. Purchase. Planed to Hollywood 4 years from the day she signed her first Broadway contract!

That report that Carol likes to cook is no malarky. Finds slaving over a hot stove relaxing and often concocts yummy menus when mom's away!

BY GENE SCHROTT AND JEAN KINKEAD

Self-made Siren

She's a glitter gal, is Bruce, with her champagne colored skin, those incredible lashes that you could knit a pair of socks out of and the oomphy mouth with the chronic grin. For a solid year she was to Broadway what Brenda Frazier was to Park Avenue—only more so. Her name in every column, a different swain practically every night, champagne on the house at the Stork Club. Sophisticated, gorgeous and as hard to get as a Noel Coward pun. Most of her dates were one night stands, but there was one boy—let's call him Bill—she used to see quite often. She doesn't see him much now because she's in Hollywood and he's in Brooklyn, but there are air mail specials and there are memories, and who knows what the future holds? His real name wouldn't mean anything to you, but if you're a Carol Bruce fan—and nine out of ten people are—his story will.

"I guess I was kind of crazy about Carol even when she was a kid—thirteen or fourteen," he told us the day we cornered him for a Bruce session. "Not that I'd ever have let on to the gang. She wasn't that kind of a girl—cute or pretty or anything. She was chubbyish and her teeth were all wrong, but she had sort of an air, if you know what I mean. She walked as if she were Mrs. God, and she had a wonderful low voice, even if every word she said was pure Brooklynese.

"I used to traipse over to her house pretty regularly, to be coached in math, I'd tell the boys—she was a whiz at it—and Carol got to be my ideal woman. She was so damn sweet and gentle. She'd always be darning some socks for Mr. Levy—that's her dad; her real name's Shirley Levy, you know—or whipping up a dress for her kid sister Marilyn. I'd watch her there in the lamplight and never notice the double chin or the funny nose. I used to think she was sort of beautiful.

"When she was fourteen, Mr. Levy's business failed, and they were terribly poor. Carol left school, and for seven dollars a week she slaved in some little hole-in-the-wall stocking shop on Fulton Street. Nights she'd go to high school at Erasmus Hall. All this put the skids on my courtship a little, but occasionally I'd amass the price of two balcony seats at the Strand and

Her second Hollywood flicker to date (first was "This Woman Is Mine") is "Keep 'Em Flying" with Dick Foran and Bill Gargan for Universal Studios.

An ardent Brooklyn Dodgers fan, she stayed glued to the radio during the World Series! Celebrated her 22nd birthday on November 15th.

She banks a four-figure salary, had a "name day" at the World's Fair and her picture on Life— that $7-a-week Brooklyn salesgirl, Carol Bruce!

Has to diet like mad to keep her current 5'5", 114 pound figure. Exercises daily by strenuously dancing and tumbling, gets pounded twice weekly by a masseuse!

on a Saturday night we'd be off. One time we went and there was an amateur show—and that's when The Thing happened. One minute we were sitting together, her hand warm in mine; and the next second she was down on the stage singing a torch song as only she can and bringing down the house. She won twenty-five dollars for that.

"Later on that night, over our chocolate sodas, she told me things she'd never said before. 'I can sing, Bill,' she said. 'You know what that means?' 'Sure,' I said, kind of dazed and hurt by her sudden rise to the heights while I was still earthbound. 'You'll be famous, maybe. And rich. You'll be able to buy yourself mink coats and stuff.' 'Crazy—I don't care about that,' she told me. 'But if I could only make enough so that Pop wouldn't be so worried all the time and so's Mom could stop sewing.' Then wistfully—'And maybe have some left over for a car and a pretty house.' She turned to me suddenly. 'Gee, Bill, wouldn't you like to live in a swell house with a garden and trees and drive a long, slinky convertible a mile a (Continued on page 70)

29-year-old Johnny hails from Roanoke, Va. blueblood stock. Never touches cigarettes, but goes berserk on clothes and flying!

TOO MANY HUSBANDS?

BY JAMES REID

Not so, says Anne Shirley! Johnny Payne's multiple personality just adds zest to their marital bliss!

Exercises strenuously every A.M. to keep his 6' 3", 190-lb. figure in shape!

"I'm not just one guy who's always the same," grins John Payne. "I don't think anyone is, really. Most people have seven or eight different sides, and so have I."

Under pressure, he started enumerating them for us.

"There's the guy who acts for a living—or at least tries to act," he said. "Then there's Payne, the demon musician, who's apt to pop out any time, but especially late at night. And Payne, the struggling author, who, every so often, hypnotizes himself with colossal ideas. There's the up-and-at-'em guy, the strenuous athlete. He's the opposite of Lazy John, who doesn't want to do anything except relax. Then there's the guy who likes to laugh—and the guy who likes to argue. And a few others I can't think of right now.

"I was very, very lucky," he pointed out, "to fall in love with a girl as tolerant as Anne."

But wasn't there a chance that Anne Shirley also was lucky—to fall in love with a man with a make-up like his? Life couldn't be monotonous with him around.

"I can't speak for Anne," said John. "All I can do is to speak for myself. For me, life doesn't get monotonous. And I suppose I can thank my assorted urges for that."

If his assorted urges had anything in common, it was a battle against boredom. 'Way back, the other John Paynes kept nagging the one who had to work for a living: "Instead of constantly changing jobs because you crave variety, why don't you look for a job that would keep changing?" So he looked and he looked—and he discovered acting.

"It's less monotonous than most jobs I can think of," John opined, crossing those long legs of his. "Not that life doesn't ever get dull around a movie studio. Only, with each new picture, you're working with a new cast and a new story. And in each picture (Continued on page 64)

Claims he enjoys kissing screen heroines, especially if he gets paid for it! Anne Shirley visited him on the set of "Remember the Day" (with Claudette Colbert) to check up!

He and Anne were married Aug. 22, 1937, after a 5-week courtship. Occasionally spree at Ciro's on Sat. nights; oftener stay home and keep 1½-yr.-old Julie Ann company!

Christmas — It's

● In Hollywood it's bigger—the trees are higher, their decorations thicker, the presents cost more, Santa's beard is longer, his belly fatter, the chimes ring louder, the holly's redder and the mistletoe whiter, the fun starts earlier and ends later—as a little something extra tucked in the toe of their socks, glamour gals give their boy friends reversible cuff-links of star sapphires and rubies—big shots throw dinners climaxed by oyster-shells in the finger bowls—pry the shells open and collect a gen-u-eyne pearl—it's terrific, brother!

Nobody works in the studios on the day before Christmas. Desks are piled with gifties and the air is charged with thrills. Gertie the stenographer and Marie the script girl exchange notes on their hauls, which include Chanel No. 5 and handmade lingerie—because even players who are hell-cats during the year turn into ministering angels on December 24th.

At noon all pretense of business as usual is discarded. Phones ring only with last-minute invitations to parties. Huge Christmas trees blaze in the commissaries. On the sets cameras stop grinding, and good cheer starts flowing. Stars kiss extras, and extras decide that Hollywood's a swell place after all, and maybe they'll get more work next year. By four the lots are deserted. All but a skeleton staff have trooped off by car and bus to Beverly and Hollywood and Venice, to spacious homes and furnished singles, for their private festivities.

We can't follow the little people. Theirs is the blessing of anonymity. The stars, poor unfortunate dears, have to give us a peek or we'll call them heels—

Peek in at the Ray Millands. They're trimming the tree. With particular pleasure this year because Daniel David's two, old enough to take an interest. A gang has come in to help—Butch Romero and the MacMurrays and Ann Sothern, minus Roger. Last Christmas Roger was with her. MacMurray works hardest, kidding the pants off holiday sentiment because he loves it, and God forbid anyone should guess. Ray takes movies, which he'll show at the drop of a hat throughout next year. He's itching to give Mal her present, contains himself till the last guest goes, then dashes upstairs. It's another bijou in the beautiful set of matched sapphires he's been adding to each Christmas.

Ann makes it a point to be home by eleven-thirty for a special Christmas rite. Every year her mother returns to Minneapolis to sing at the holiday services in the old church. Ann was feeling very low one season—her mother away, Roger away, fourteen months of job-

COLOSSAL!

BY JEANNE KARR

WHEN HOLLYWOOD UNTIES ITS PURSE-STRINGS, IT

MAKES DIAMOND JIM BRADY LOOK LIKE AN AMATEUR!

lessness behind her, nothing ahead. On the dot of eleven-thirty a package arrived—a record of her mother's voice, "Noel" on one side, "Silent Night" on the other. Ann shed a few helpful tears and phoned her mother at midnight. Every Christmas Eve since she's played the record at eleven-thirty and phoned her mother at midnight.

Some players give thoughtfully, some to get it over with—even as you and I. Joan Crawford's among the most meticulous. She carries the personal touch to lengths. She has a phobia about price tags, won't trust the shops to remove them, has everything sent to her home and does all her own wrapping. But literally. If a friend offers to help, she hovers to see that the job is done right. Crawford's Wilshire they call her place around holiday time, Bullock's-Wilshire being the swank department store. She spends more on gift wrappings than most people do on their gifts. Tags must be tied on, because stickers might fall off, and she writes every card herself. . . . Olivia de Havilland's another who won't delegate her giving. To Livvie a present by hand is worth two in the mail. She arrives at the studio with a carload, and if you happen not to be there that day, she may have to hire a G-man but she'll track you down. . . . Dennis Morgan's gifting chums with a miniature record of his own inimitable voice.

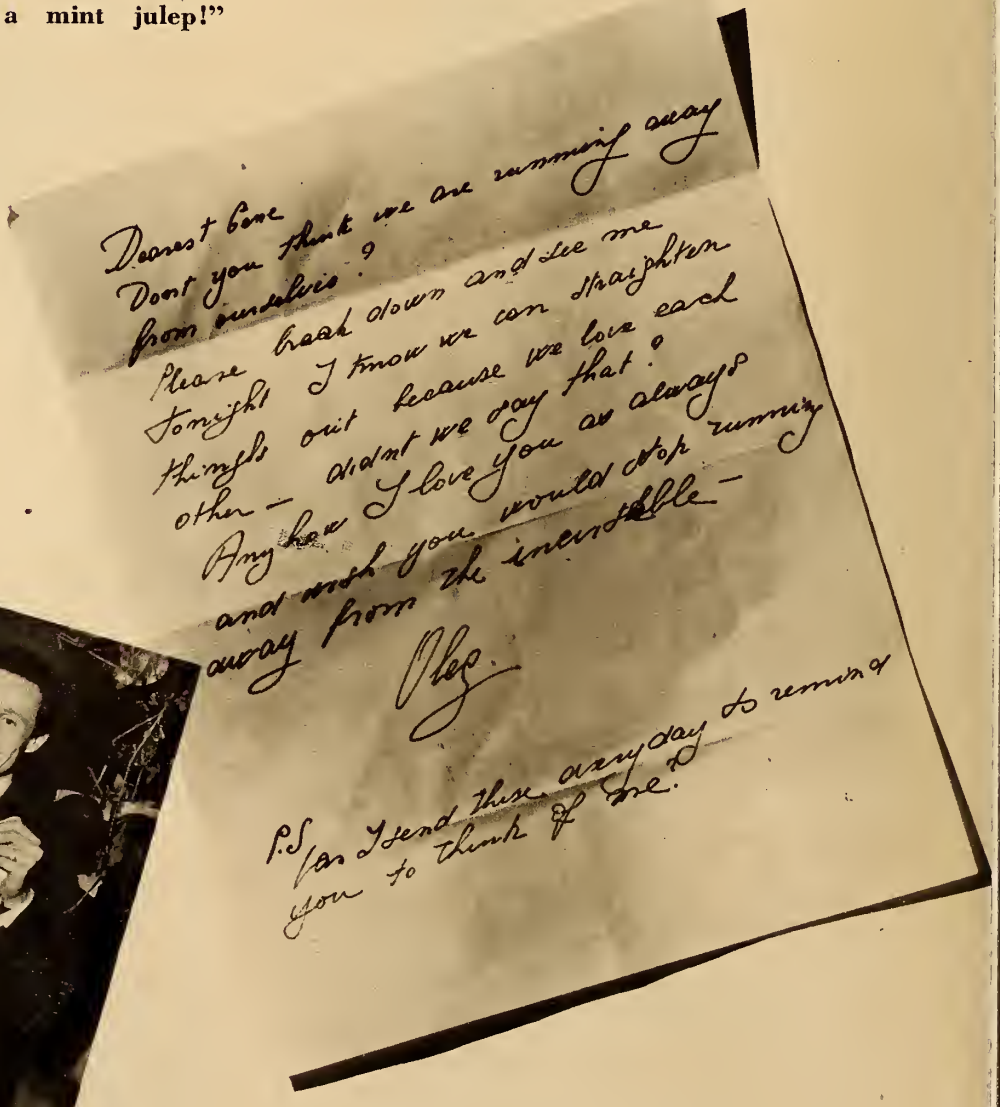
Fred Astaire's motto is: "Give what they won't buy for themselves." He presented one friend with a pair of gold garters, monogrammed, from Cartier's. Himself, he wears the fifty-cent kind. . . . Bonita Granville and her mother are making their gifts this year at a tenth of the usual cost, turning the balance over to war relief, hoping the time and effort expended will compensate for the difference in value. It goes without saying that Bun will have Christmas dinner with Jackie—at his house, if his mother's well enough—if not, at hers. Jack's going to play Santa Claus at a local orphanage, an ambition he's nursed for years while waiting for his voice to change. . . . Errol Flynn sends a case of Scotch to the publicity boys he's played hide-and-seek with all year. This washes out his sins and clears the slate for another twelvemonth. . . . If you're on Greer Garson's list, you'll get a real English fruit cake baked by a cherished recipe of her mother's. If you're a special pet, you can look forward to (Continued on page 76)

ILLUSTRATIONS BY CHARLES SAXON

"I wrote a letter to my

"Cut the hearts and flowers," says Hollywood. "That Valentino approach is dated; Love in '41 is fresh as a mint julep!"

BY DOROTHY SPENSLEY



Dearest Love
Dont you think we are running away from ourselves?
Please break down and see me
Tonight I know we can straighten things out because we love each other — didnt we say that?
Anyhow I love you as always and wish you would stop running away from the inevitable —
Oleg
P.S. As I send these every day to remind you to think of me.

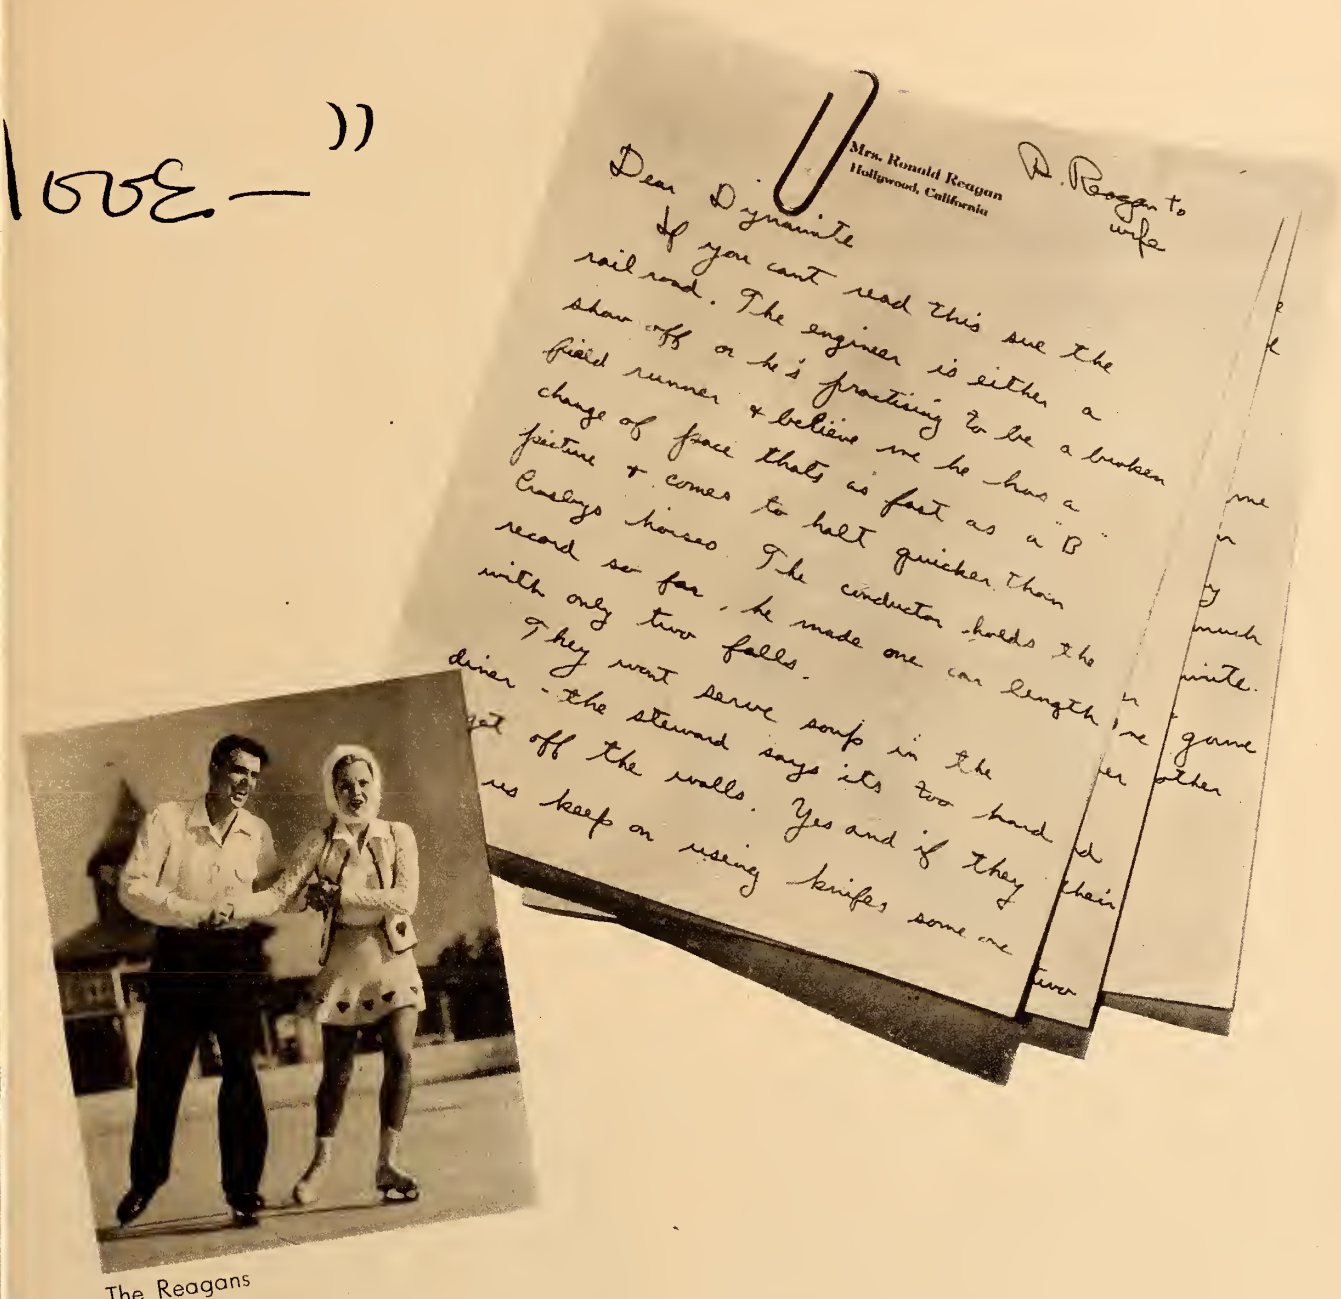
The Cassinis



love—"
Mrs. Ronald Reagan
Hollywood, California
R. Reagan to wife
Dear Dynamite
If you cant read this see the rail road. The engineer is either a show off or he's practicing to be a broken field runner + believe me he has a change of pace that's as fast as a B picture + comes to halt quicker than Cowboys horses. The conductor holds the record so far, he made one car length with only two falls.
They wont serve soup in the diner - the steward says its too hard to get off the walls. Yes and if they dont keep on using knifes some one

The Reagans

CONFIDENTIALLY, the love letter writers of Hollywood are on the brusque, humorous side (with exception), leaving the heavy passion stuff for business hours. The sultry "I love you, I love you, I love you" days went out when Vitaphone came in; the modern soul outpourings have a Powell-Loy tinge, accent on comradery, an honest reflection of love and life and action in our swift Vitamin Age. Ready? Here we go.

The romantic wire-pullers

Bob Taylor to Mrs. Bob Taylor (Barbara Stanwyck) from the "Billy the Kid" location at Santa Fe, New Mexico, February 18, this year:

Mrs. Robert Taylor.
Beverly Hills, Cal.

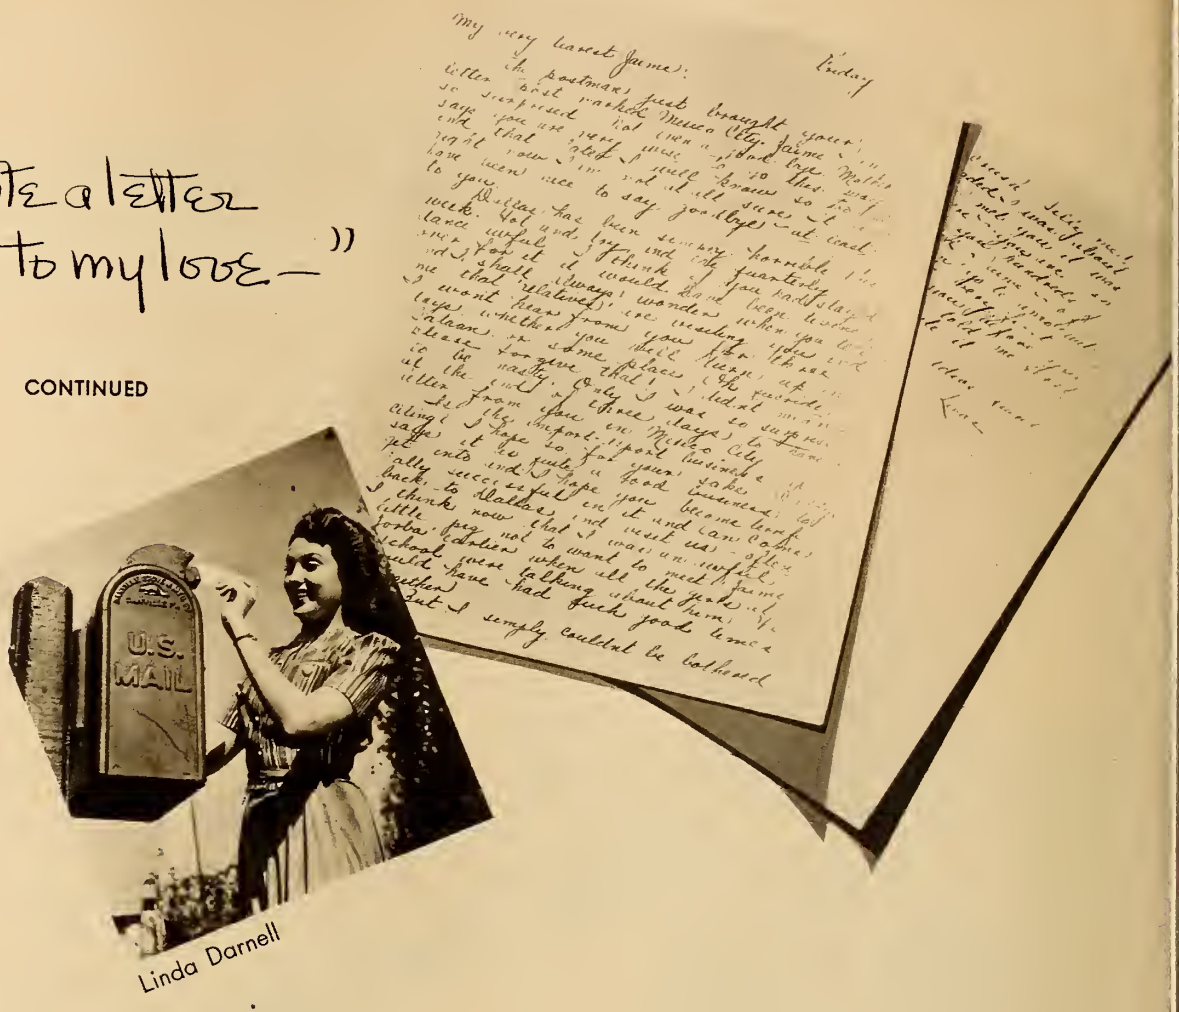
Dearest Doll: I wish I could be with you, Jack, Mary and the gang at Ciro's. We have a four A.M. call for tomorrow and that means early to bed for this cowboy, but don't forget to think of me thinking of you as you dance out the last one. I'm counting the minutes until I see you again. As ever,

Bob.

This wire, sent five years ago from Chicago where he

"I wrote a letter to my love—"

CONTINUED



Linda Darnell

was making personal appearances, cinched it for Gene Raymond with Jeanette MacDonald. When he returned, he proposed; was accepted.

Miss Jeanette MacDonald,
Beaverly Hills, Cal.

Stop interfering with my career. Couldn't remember my lyrics this afternoon. Love.

Gene.

Jack Oakie on Las Vegas, Nev., location for 20th's "Thanks for Everything" to Venita Varden Oakie when he hears that her Afghan hound, Afghani Shah, has won a dog show "first":

Mrs. Jack Oakie,
Beverly Hills, Cal.

I knew he'd do it, honey. When it comes to picking thoroughbreds Oakie wins hands down and this includes you, too. Shooting winds up Friday and Poppa flies in Saturday, so skip week-end plans and concentrate on your ever-loving Jack.

Poets' corner

Love note to a honey-blonde, accompanied by red roses. Madeleine Carroll's suitor, name unrevealed, revives the Golden Age of courtship and borrows from the poets (Mr. Heine). Maddy inspires such things.

"Your clear, violet eyes pursue me;
Dance before me, day and night.
And I wonder how to answer,
How to solve those sweet, blue riddles."

And then from the sublime to the ridiculous. Ray Middleton, singer-turned-actor for Republic, is not sure it was love; but a New York girl, when he stood her up on a date and rehearsed a show instead, sent him a large heart, garnished with ribbons and flowers and the verse:

"Roses are red, violets are blue,
Sugar is sweet, but this is you!"

We forgot to say—the heart was cut from center ham!

Pop to Mom notes

Croon Prince of radio (Bing Crosby) dashes off a little something from San Francisco to Friend Wife. Tough, but tender. Sure-fire with the women.

Dear Mrs. C.—
What was that you were (Continued on page 78)

The Holdens

The Millands

Conspicuously absent was Producer Walter Wanger, who unexpectedly clippered to England to make an independent film. Wife Joan danced with bigwig Darryl Zanuck!

Dietrich (gorgeous in ermine) came with Jean Gabin, thus dispelling rumors of their tiffing. Sat with her cast-hobbled leg hoisted up on a chair!

Dottie Lamour's popularity's rising by leaps and bounds; hired two more secretaries to answer the reams of fan mail pouring in. Greg Bautzer's still the man in her life!

Despite the missus' attempts to cheer him up, reticent Gary Cooper gloomed all evening. Reason: his new pic in which he warbles 2 songs, spouts reams of conversation.

Party of the month

She rented half of Ciro's and invited 140 stars—but guest of honor Wanger didn't show up at Joan Bennett's "Sundown" premiere party!

Ty and Annabella got a big kick out of Ciro's maitre d'hotel Pancho. Prompted by studios, he reminded guests of time they started work next day, emptied place by 2 A.M.

Dead-set on making a comeback in "The Captain of Koepenick," Mary Brian talked shop with escort Reggie Gardiner and Ginger Rogers. Was very first one to leave.

Linda Darnell, Ann Miller and John Hyde were late arrivals from Linda's 18th birthday party. Come Feb., she's enrolling in philosophy courses at U. C. L. A.!

While Martin's away, Lana Turner's been touring the town with Bobby Stack. She recently got her final divorce decree from Artie Shaw, was voted No. 1 favorite of army!

Those perpetual romancers, Rita Hayworth and her combination hubby-business manager, Ed Judson, held hands during entire premiere!

"Sundown's" star Gene Tierney was center of attention. Told Rita Hayworth she hoped to woo her estranged parents back soon, had already built a lush in-law guest house!

Lilly dubs Loretta Young and Anita Louise "perfect hat girls." Loves to design for them 'cause they look heavenly in everything from pork pies to snoods!

Mad Hatter

BY KAAREN PIECK

Loretta's lavish lids in "The Men in Her Life" were Dache-designed and cost Columbia Studios an even $21,000!

SHE TOPS HOLLYWOOD CROWNS WITH CHIC—

THAT MERRY MAD-CAPPER LILLY DACHE!

Dietrich was a tough customer! Always clung to mannish felts till Dache captured her fancy with this!

The imaginative Lilly goes the limit on topknots for Anita Louise! Dreams up her most surrealistic models in the lush green padded cell for special clients!

● If the only guy has been snagged by the Army, an oil company in South America—or God forbid—another dame, there's just one thing for it. Nope, not a solitary binge, but a new hat. Sounds silly, but it's the one and only cure for a broken heart. When Marlene Dietrich tiffs with Jean Gabin, nothing yanks her out of the doldrums like ordering fifty-five or sixty (literally!) hats from Lilly Dache. And when the war communiques have just about flattened Madeleine Carroll, she stratoplanes to N. Y. and likewise perks herself up with a dash of Dache. It works like a charm and here's why, according to Lilly. "No woman can feel too depressed when she knows she looks simply knockout, and the right hat can make a Lamarr out of the world's plainest jane."

kind of a dream job . . .

All very well for the cinema kids who can invest in a $750 creation and never feel it, but what about us? Ah! Really terrific news. Lilly has given us the four unbreakable rules she uses to help her clients select their hats (we'll give 'em to you later). They're guaranteed to turn you into kind of a dream job and your brand new swain's fancy to pre-Spring thoughts of you-know-what. Can you wait? First, a quick gander at the Dache at work with her favorite clients, the stars.

bonnet strategist . . .

She receives them in the green taffeta padded cell she concocted in a whimsical moment. "They're wonderful," says Lilly. "I love them all—but don't think they're not problems. There was Loretta Young, for instance. About five years ago, she had a colossal-brim phobia—that one, with her angel face! Simply lived in those huge beach umbrella-ish things. I finally talked her into trying a darling tiny one which I softened with a veil. She loved it; bought lots of them and in exactly one month every Mrs. Tom, Dick and Harry had a veil!" Loretta Young and Anita Louise occasionally play guinea pig for the mad hatter's wilder schemes. Loretta, for example, was the original snood-girl. On her it was out of this world, and the rest of us gals went immediately snood-happy. We got them in every color, wore them night and day, fancied ourselves smootheroos. Which, to digress, was a big mistake. Dache says, "Never copy a style that is wonderful on somebody (Continued on page 80)

BY IDA ZEITLIN

"hello, evvabody"

COLLEGE KIDS APPLAUDED FIRST! THEN IT SPREAD LIKE GOSSIP! NOW EVERYONE LOVES THAT BEGOGGLED PROF. KAY KYSER!

Prof. Kyser (appearing in "Playmates") helps celebrate Bing's honorary degree—Master of Caper-cutting from Gonzaga.

Kay Kyser, M.A. (Master of Amusements from N. Y. U. in 1937), dishes it out to Harry Babbitt, Ginny Simms, Ish Kabibble and Sully Mason!

● Kay Kyser's band breaks records. Up north in Spokane the floor broke down under the collective weight of one dancehall crowd. Down south old farmers, who don't know from swing or the theater but who love Kay, shuffle up to the box office, unbuttoning pocketbooks. The boys' Crossley rating is almost double that of their closest competitor, Guy Lombardo. They're the only band whose pictures, bare of star movie names, gross with the big money-makers.

RKO wasn't the first studio to make them an offer. It was the first studio Kay said yes to. One outfit offered him such a wad of dough that, when he turned it down, the producer called him crazy. So did the agency. Kay admits it was hard to say no, but, after consulting the boys, he said it. He wouldn't make love, he hasn't the face for it—anyway, not on the screen. He held out for a story that would let the boys be themselves—as he thinks Mrs. Smith of Arkansas, who tunes in every Wednesday night, pictures them. Mrs. Smith is more important to him than all the crowned heads of the entertainment business.

Jules Stein, president of the Music Corporation of America, took director Dave Butler to Catalina to hear the boys play. Butler talked to Kay about a picture, and Kay fell on his neck because their ideas coincided. According to Kay, they'd all be dead, cinematically speaking, if it weren't for Butler. "You don't know how much blood he gave to put us across," he says appreciatively.

The first day on the first picture was murder. The boys shook, and the eyes of the boss were glazed. It took him five hours to walk through a door, take off his hat and say hello. He looked like a man walking through the little green door to the Chair. Finally Butler said, "Print it," and Kay relaxed. When the picture was finished, he re-shot the first three days' scenes. It grossed over a million and was topped by "You'll Find Out." RKO has the band cinched for three more after "Playmates."

They're veterans now. On the set of "Playmates" they relaxed all over the place. Gandees, the pianist, plays practical jokes in a quiet way. Lyman Snow corners anyone who'll talk baseball and wept with Dem Bums when dat ball bounced off Mickey Owen's mitt. Harry Babbitt sits at the piano, trying out ditties with Rocky Hillman, the guitarist, who's had a lot of tunes published. Ginny knits and smiles and looks lovely, and they all adore her. Sassy Sully Mason goes round visitin'. He was pals with Barrymore the day after they started. "Looka me," he crowed. "L'il ole No'th Ca'lina boy, workin' in pitchers with John Barrymore."

Sully's the liveliest, Ish the quietest. While the others clown around, Ish sits, fooling with the valves of his trumpet. Or he plays gin rummy. Alone, if he can't find a partner, dealing himself (Continued on page 72)

According to Harry, Ish Kabibble and Sully, Kay has two all-consuming passions—making music and downing chocolate ice cream cones by the gallon. Kay eats to keep merry; relaxes to keep sane; murmurs modestly, "I'm no real musician—just a business man with a flair for gags."

Sully Mason keeps robust on grapes from Ginny Simm's farm and fried chicken sent twice monthly by Kay's mother!

"THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON"

BY LORRAINE STEVENS and KAY HARDY

FITZHUGH LEE: "Mistah Custah, into how many fragments does a 12 lb. shell burst?"
CUSTER: "Into not less than two, sir."

CUSTER: "I have never been so happy in all my life, Mrs. Custer."

NOTE TO CAMERAMAN: Pull back and tilt down to show Custer and Beth walking through a bridge of crossed sabres, to the strains of the Wedding March.

BETH: "There is a price for which this letter can be bought—Colonel Custer's price. Mr. Taipe, you'll resign your office as Commissioner."

CUSTER: "I was an easy last in my studies at West Point, Sir, I'm afraid."
WINFIELD SCOTT: "Confidentially, young man, I saw those West Point examination papers myself."

GENERAL SHERIDAN: "Mr. Custer, when an officer deliberately disobeys orders in action, there can only be one of two consequences . . . a medal or a firing squad. You seem to have drawn the medal."

TAIPE: "If your men are drunken sots, that's your responsibility—not the company's."
CUSTER: "Sots! You cheap, boot-licking politician—You contemptible parasite!"

CUSTER: "Cover your own fronts. Don't fire to a flank. Aim low—sight at their feet—and TAKE YOUR TIME, BOYS!"

STORY

There are certain men whom destiny has singled out for her own. George Armstrong Custer, soldier and military genius, was one. From the day he entered West Point as a plebe, his career was marked with the tragedy and conflict to come. Within the very first twenty-four hours of his arrival at the Academy, he had made two enemies. They were to change the course of his entire life.

The first was Major Romulus Taipe, officer in charge of cadets. Silent, stubborn—he deliberately misinterpreted an episode which had merely been born of Custer's ignorance of Academy regulations and threatened expulsion. His second conflict was with Ned Sharp, a senior cadet. Arrogant, malicious hazing angered the hot-tempered young plebe beyond endurance. Later in the day he dropped Sharp with a jolting right to the chin.

Instantly, openly triumphant, Taipe had him arrested and brought before Colonel (Continued on page 74)

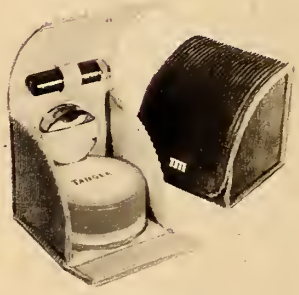
PRODUCTION

The 100th Flynn-to-de Havilland kiss rolled off the cinematic assembly line five minutes after filming began . . . Flynn's comment: "Olivia has beautiful lips. She keeps her eyes open, and they get that sweet misty look." Says Olivia: "Errol is so sweet. He never lets me get a kink in my neck." . . . This is their eighth picture together . . . Flynn consumes 10 to 15 cups of tea a day . . . Make-up man Ward Hamilton had to learn the correct method of applying war paint to the 16 Sioux Indians, hired by the studio from the Standing Rock Agency, Fort Yates, North Dakota . . . Warner Bros. was bombed with letters from "Custer-philes," people who knew some little-known anecdote about the General or had some grisly souvenir of the massacre they wanted to sell . . . Writers Aeneas MacKenzie and Wally Kline spent 10 weeks on research and 13 weeks actually writing the script . . . actual filming took 3 months . . . Most exciting part of the picture is the accurate film (Continued on page 75)

Give good looks for Christmas

A lucky stacking-tae find is a Cutex manicure set, filled with needs far fingertip beauty. Available in twa shades of blue, red ar tan leatherette. Only 60 cents.

This parasal girl in the crystal clear arbor canceals a graceful battle af Cheramy April Shawers perfume. A charming gift far $1.00.



A haney af a gift is Tangee's "Tuck-away," fitted with pawder, rauge and lipstick. Available in blue, tan ar red. $2.50.

Beauty and Christmas ga together, so give her a Cashmere Bauquet gift set—complete with talcum pawder, face pawder, cald cream, lipstick and skin latian. 50 cents.

Any girl will delight in the sparkling luxury af Djer-Kiss Bath af Bubbles. $1.00.

She's a happy girl wha receives this thrilling box af glamaur aids by Lady Esther. It contains faur-purpose cream, colagne, face pawder, rauge and lipstick. 50 cents.

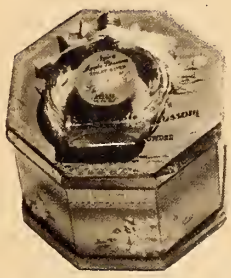
Here's a ramantic tria. Hudnut's Yanky Claver, Vialet Sec and Spring Lilac perfumes, dane up in an exquisite package. A bargain far $3.00.

Lovely to look at, but better to own, is Pond's Beauty Box, containing cold cream, vanishing cream, Dreamflower powder and freshener and Danya hand lotion. 50 cents.

Fitch's Set for An American Gentleman includes brilliantine, hair tonic, skin lotion and dandruff-remover shampoo. 50 cents.

Civilian or service man, he'll welcome Woodbury's set, containing shave cream, after-shave lotion, powder and facial soap. $1.00.

Santa Claus had plenty to do with Irresistible's Christmas box. It includes cologne, perfume, talcum powder, face powder and lipstick. You can buy it for 50 cents.



A glamorous gift combination is Lander's Spicy Apple Blossom bath powder and matching toilet water. 25 cents.

You'll make a lasting hit if you present her with a smart Dura-Gloss kit of manicure necessities. It comes in either red, green or blue fabric. Costs just 50 cents.

Traveler or homebody, she'll adore a Princess Pat "Keep-Neat" Kit, fitted with eight beauty aids besides a complexion sponge and tissue. $1.50.

by Carol Carter

GOOD NEWS

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Despite a study lined with story-rejection slips, John Payne bravely scribbled another novel, "The Sun Shines Bright." Day it was finished he and the missus celebrated at Ciro's!

Sheridan-Harvard feud off!

Tony Martin gets 1-A rating!

Vanderbilt column nixed!

Gable tiffs with Fox!

Gobs honor Jane Russell.

Tierney pulls a Godiva!

No breadlines for Mae West!

Donlevy a poet at heart.

Va. Hill baffles Hollywood!

Leslie Howard an expectant grandad!

Hill and Kale

It'll be a great day for Hollywood when John Carroll takes plumpish, black-eyed Virginia Hill to be his blushing bride. If the pair do bounce to the altar, John will bring into the great Movietown family the most fantastic personality it has known since Bogus Prince Romanoff was in his prime.

At 23, Virginia Hill is a woman of mystery. Her wealth is unestimable and untraceable, though it is surmised her three marriages (the first occurred when she was 14) might have had something to do with it. Her extravagances are notorious. A $1,000 evening gown, the gem of Designer Irene's fall collection, draped her body only three or four times before she gave it to a friend. Other gowns for which she pays from $100 to $400 are often discarded without being worn at all.

Her parties are reminiscent of something that went out with the Romans. Starting with two or three couples, Virginia frequently finds herself winding up the night hosting a mob of fifty. One evening she rented the Mocambo and its entire staff for a private shindig. Conservative estimators say that little social cost her well over $3,000!

It's always cash on the line for Virginia Hill. She travels with gobs of it tied in a rubber band. She's never used a checkbook even to pay bills for her Chicago apartment, her New York and Hollywood hotel suites, automobile upkeep, maid and secretary.

There's no denying, Husband Number Four will have to step fast to keep pace with the mad, exciting Miss Hill. But if anyone can do it, John Carroll is the boy. He's not exactly a rest cure, himself!

Maid in Hollywood

We want to go on record as having publicly apologized to Maria Montez for any cracks we may have made about her excessive night clubbing. We had the gal all wrong! Word has just come to us, via her press agents, that the gorgeous Maria isn't really interested in dates and boy friends. Maria's real purpose in running about, we are told, is to gather material for a book!

She's got it half-finished, too. Titled "What I Know About Hollywood Men," it contains two sections on "My Experiences With Hollywood Wolves!"

Wonder how Bruce Cabot will feel when he discovers he was literally just another chapter in Maria's life!

Gratitude Zero

Don't talk charity to the shapely, G-stringed maidens at Earl Carroll's theater-restaurant. After the way their last effort backfired, they'll leave the "help thy neighbor" stuff to long-haired missionaries and saintly spinsters!

It seems the girls read in the papers, recently, that poor Mae West didn't have a cent. In the courtroom where her troublesome husband, Frank Wallace, was suing her for non-support, Mae had confided in a sympathetic judge that she and cash were absolute strangers. This admission of poverty went right to the Carroll cuties' heartstrings. Wiping the tears from their mascara, they quickly shot a wire to Mae offering to toss a huge benefit show with all proceeds to go to the depleted West coffers. So what happened? The following morning came a return wire:

"Don't believe all you read in the papers," it said. "I am not broke. I am only down to my last few millions. After Wallace's lawyer tried to check on my properties, annuities, stocks, bonds and jewels and couldn't get very far, he finished up by asking me how much cash I had with me. I told him none. And I didn't. I never carry any!

"The papers picked up my remark saying I had no cash. That's how the report that I was broke started. But you know me, kids. I'm no sucker. If you still want to give me something, you can give me a nice new scissors—to clip my coupons!

"I'm getting rather tired now, girls, writing out this telegram. A forty carat hunk of ice is weighing down my third finger!

"Thanks anyway, and I'll be over to see you sometime. . . . MAE"

John Hubbard

"My first romance came to a dead stop before I was 6," John Hubbard reminisces. "Ran into a little difficulty with my big brother who could lick me with one fist tied behind his back." Then beams, "Romance No. 2 sprawled over a full 9 years . . . with the knot finally tied in 1938." Thumbnail-sketches his generously curved, generous-hearted wife tersely. "She smokes . . . drinks sparingly . . . wears her hair long . . . keeps her nails and her personality shining bright. She's strictly my idea of how not to be bored on a desert island." Says her formula for hooking him ought to be pretty sound dope for other gals. "Don't giggle! Don't goggle-eye your date in hopes of a one-night conquest. Don't goo and gurgle over him. But DO be feminine. Girls who wear pants just don't get pampered." Lois must have arrived at that magic formula in second grade because it was way back then that she snagged John. But both of them were patient. It wasn't until he made good in "Dramatic School" that he made for Indiana like a homing pigeon and married Lois. Being a thoroughly domestic guy, John likes the idea of four children equally assorted . . . and throws out his chest in parental glee when chit-chat turns to his 1-year-old daughter. When he's not cooing over her, he's puttering around the house . . . "messing," he calls it . . . and chatting about little nothings with Lois whom he complains he doesn't see half enough. Sometimes their dialogue breaks up at dawn . . . but only when he's 'twixt pictures. Otherwise he crawls under the covers at 9:30 on the nose and stays there until 5 A.M. He insists, "Acting's my purpose in life . . . wouldn't give it up if I had a bank account with 6 zeros in it. Being somewhat of a contradiction myself, I'd give my eye-teeth to do a split-personality job like 'Jekyll and Hyde. To avoid news-blues, I only glance at headlines but literally live from one 'Flash Gordon' to another." Won't jump through hoops to get himself into print, either . . . definitely a hush-man when it comes to his private doings. Six ft. tall and a lean 165 pounds, he looks

After home-loving Costello's N. Y. opening, he and wife checked into a hostelry, arose at 4 A.M. and cabbed out to Paterson, N. J. All so's he could sleep under his own roof!

That cozy twosome Gloria Vanderbilt and Pat deCicco break night club curfew laws right and left when 17-yr.-old Gloria stays out till the wee small hours. Above, with Rita Hayworth.

GOOD NEWS

CONTINUED

athletic . . . outdoorish. Actually, he's rarely stirred to physical activity . . . and then with a violence that borders on madness. Long a devotee of bull-fighting, he tussles with a phony bull on wheels insisting, "It's really awfully dangerous. Look at those horns . . . bigger than real ones." Adds, "I also mess with flying, singing and weight-lifting, filling in with golf and badminton. By popular demand I gave up the piano and concentrated on baseball and hookie." That was only after Mother Hubbard dismissed it as a bad job. "Couldn't bother with notes," says John. "Played by ear but it used to get in Mom's hair . . . and then she'd get in mine with a firm hold and forcibly remove me from the piano." Loves music, though. Bows low to Artie Shaw but takes Tschaikowsky's "Fourth" in his stride. Thinks the latter, plus "Tom Sawyer," would be his choice if he had to Robinson Crusoe it. Adds, "In a spot like that I'd prefer the rich, full-bodied perfume of steak to Chanel No. 5." In nostalgic moments he tells the story of how life with father got tough when 11-year-old John got the nicotine-urge. "Then and there, Dad staged a smoker . . . handed me a big black cigar and said, 'Go to it, Johnny-boy!' The hangover lasted 5 years!"

Short Shots

Gary Cooper's friends are dubbing him Cupid. He's studying bow and arrow technique with famed archer Howard Hill . . . Rita Hayworth modestly credits her success to the good-luck caul which covered her head when she was born . . . Lloyd Nolan's next vacation will take him to the Pribilhof (no kidding!) Islands in the Bering Sea. He's signed up as deck hand on the seal-hunting schooner, "Penguin" . . . Rudy Vallee keeps an indexed file of his lady friends' photos. When he expects a femme visitor he wades through his collection and sets the proper portrait on his piano. The lovely lady, flattered as all get-out, invariably swoons into his waiting arms . . . Gloria Vanderbilt, all set to write a daily newspaper column called "Facts and Chatter," had the stunt nixed by the family lawyer. . . . Horsy, outdoorsy Gene Autry haunts antique shops looking for dainty music boxes . . . There's a second Dolores in Orson Welles' life. Dolores Costello has been awarded the lead in Orson's next production, "The Magnificent Ambersons." He tested her from nine o'clock one evening till five o'clock the next morning before handing her the part . . . In ten Hollywood years, Guy Kibbee has never owned an overcoat. When he treks into the no'th country, he borrows Oliver Hardy's . . . Tony Martin is even tops with his draft board. They rate him 1A and he'll be the next "name" to slip into khaki . . . Cobina Wright, Jr., will soon present hubby Corporal Beaudette with a sweater knitted by her own tiny hands. Funny thing is, it's the same one she started last year for Prince Phillip of Greece . . . Norma Shearer's literary chum, Erich Remarque, is a 20th century version of a man without a country. Recently denied German citizenship, he's feverishly at work applying for U. S. papers in Los Angeles courts . . . A huge package containing six loving cups landed on buxom Jane Russell's front doorstep the other morning. Postmarked "U. S. Navy," the accompanying note came from gobs who had picked her as "the girl we'd most like to have waiting for us in every port" . . . Ann Sheridan, once voted "least likely to succeed" by the snooty Harvard Advocate, has been named honorary editor of that crimson (but literally!) sheet along with Prexy James Bryant Conant!

Business Comes First

That's what Marlene Dietrich and hubby Rudolf Seiber alibied when queried on their 2-year separation. Upon her arrival in Manhattan a few weeks ago, she rushed into his arms, painted the town red with him during her stay there. Daughter Maria, who's long been yearning to make a movie, will face her first kleig this winter!

Vanished Glory

When Ramon Novarro retired in 1935, he was cozily sitting on a fat $500,000 bank roll. He had plenty of fun, but he was no exception to that old saw about having your cake and eating it! Just the other day he was spending the P.M. in the Hollywood pen because he couldn't raise $150 bail. Said his lawyer who paid the $50 fine, "Novarro isn't any more busted than Mae West."

Didja Know

That W. C. Fields, who'll be 58 in January, rated a passing grade when an insurance doctor gave him a physical exam for a $50,000 policy? Later Fields told a judge he was ill when he bought the annuity, wanted it canceled because, "I'd have to live forever to break even" . . . That movie singers suck red candy drops before Technicolor close-ups? Gives their tongues the proper carmine tinge . . . That Rise Stevens' mama is tagged Sahah . . . That Annie Sheridan promises to raise an acre of mint on her new ranch—to accommodate her julep-drinking buddies . . . That correspondents from England reveal Leslie Howard is almost a grandfather . . . That there will be no more dog-at-fireplug scenes flashed on your neighborhood theater screen? The Hays Office has given the routine its official scowl!

That Cash and Carry, widely used in magazines and newspapers to describe Barbara Hutton and Cary Grant, appeared first in this column in November, 1940 . . . That on Uncle Sam's records, Joel McCrea is listed as a farmer, not as an actor . . . That funnyman Lou Costello will godfather Joe DiMaggio's expected heir . . . That

Two of the town's most popular kids-about-town, Geo. Montgomery and Lana Turner. Geo. used to be a Hollywood bartender, but neither touches the stuff nor smokes these days!

Martha O'Driscoll (who's taken on false curls and glamour) with Edw. Ashley. She's just bought her first home, a farm at Toluca Lake! Lives with her mom and kid brother.

Rags Ragland lunches on a glass of bourbon and wheaties . . . That Mary Brian, testing at Warners, is expected to make a sensational comeback . . . That Ann Sheridan, working in "Juke Girl," refers to herself as "Jerk" girl . . . That Mrs. Henry Fonda has just returned from Mexico City where Diego Rivera spent a month painting her portrait . . . That Arthur Treacher's friends call him "Pip" . . . That Milton Berle is the proud owner of a specially built trailer, equipped with portable shower bath—a gift from his Mama . . . That everytime Mrs. Albert Dekker has a baby, Mr. Albert Dekker buys a new pup to grow up with the child . . . That Jackie Cooper signs his checks, Jack R. Cooper—the "R" standing for Richard after his idol, Richard Dix . . . That tough, hard-bitten Brian Donlevy scribbles poetry between takes?

Income Tactics

"Them that has, gits" is no idle phrase in Hollywood! Did you know stars augment their salaries by renting personal belongings to studios? When Metro was on the hunt for a particular kind of horse to be used in a Tarzan picture, Bob Taylor rented his own four-footer at a figure which kept the animal in alfalfa for a year!

Even little Shirley Temple picks up a juicy bit of ice cream money via the rental route. She loans out pets from her menagerie at a tidy fee.

However, when it comes to these lend-lease deals, the undisputed champ is Paulette Goddard. That girl must have been born under the dollar sign! At this writing, her ultra swank mink coat, a gift from a doting admirer, trots home to its mistress with 200 studio smackers a week!

Pins and Needles

Every woman who's ever moaned about not having "a thing to wear" is going to fall flat on her face when she hears that svelte, clothes-conscious Gene Tierney gave away all her gorgeous dresses the day after her marriage to Count Oleg Cassini!

For weeks now, Gene's been running around in a tired-looking cotton frock, shocking fashion editors who call for interviews and offering no explanation to her embarrassed studio.

The truth, as always, is simple. Now that she's married to Dress Designer Cassini, Gene will wear nothing but Cassini-designed costumes. And Oleg has been so busy creating clothes for her screen roles, he hasn't had a chance to work on her personal wardrobe.

"We're going to tear into some things as soon as my current picture is finished," Gene says. And pridefully, "Then everyone will see how really gifted my Oleg is!"

Fashion Notes

Admittedly it's a fight to the finish between New York and Hollywood for the title "world's fashion center." But one look at filmdom in its finery ought to flatten the most dyed-in-the-wool Manhattaner with envy! There's been nothing like the Hollywood street scene since pre-war Parisian days . . . Style-setter Joan Bennett Mata Hari-ing it in a slinky Chinese orchid brocade with daring slit skirt . . . Annie Sheridan defying every known law of gravitation with two feather birds perched on a bronze velvet draped turban. One winged creature doing a power dive from the top; the other swooping up toward her left temple. Ann claims she doesn't give a fig for fashion but completely fell for this one while modeling it for a magazine cover. Has ordered two more exactly like it, one in emerald green for her purple dress, another in Paradise blue to set off her favorite black . . . Out-blazing all the stop lights in town, Ida Lupino in her new firemen's red double-breasted greatcoat, with vent back. Keeps it simple with a little matching red cap perched on the back of her head . . . Mrs. Herb Marshall tying up traffic on Hollywood Boulevard in a blue and green nubby woolen plaid with tremendous raglan sleeves and widely flaring hemline . . . Rita Hayworth, original as usual, adding a sable collar to lift her three-quarter length evening wrap out of the common ermine herd!

Here's a hint to you gals who must do or die with one good dress . . . Take it from Pat Dane, M-G-M newcomer who literally lives in one favorite black basic job of simple cut. With it she sports gorgeous lids so varied as to change the entire ap- (Continued on page 68)

That social lion Bobby Stack and Annie Rutherford at Ciro's. During the Archduke Felix of Austria's lecture tour of the West Coast, Bobby and his mom were his exclusive hosts!

West Coast torridest romance to date is that of Laraine Day and songster Ray Hendricks. Opening of new night club Café Society drew one of biggest crowds of the season.

The Pat O'Briens (she's Eloise Taylor, actress) will celebrate their 10th anniversary on Jan. 23rd. Both adore their three adopted kids, Mavourneen, 7; Sean, 3, and baby Terrence!

CO-ED

Comes a time in every woman's life when she's too big to run to mother with all her problems. Here's our answer—Judy Garland's darling mom, Mrs. Gilmore, who's promised to fairy-godmother for us every issue!

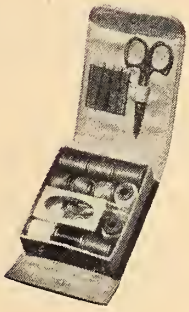
When Judy heard I was going to write a column she insisted the first subject should be, "How to get your man." Maybe that's because, being married only a few months, she felt qualified to give me a few pointers. Sue, my other daughter who is engaged to a draftee, thinks what to wear and how to behave when you visit an army camp would be a good beginning and very timely. I'm ignoring them both, and this will be a sort of general first aid chat. I'll get specific in succeeding months.

First of all, every girl wants more than anything else to be popular. But how to go about it? By being friendly, interesting, and just as attractive as we can be with the material at hand. That's honestly all there is to it, and you can begin getting that way instantly. Start in on the family with the friendliness angle and watch it become a habit. When your mother wakes you in the morning, don't greet her with a grouch and a grunt. Start the day with a "Morning, Mom, are you as pert as you look this bright and sunny day!" Go out of your way to be nice to little brother, no matter how much it may hurt sometimes. He presents a marvelous opportunity for the development of tact and patience. And how about practicing a line on your Dad? If you're shy and tongue-tied around the boys, a bit of breakfast banter with Father will give you the masculine angle on things. Furthermore, this unexpected attention will make him glow, and in a few days he'll be asking you to the Army-Navy game. If you've made a previous date to shop with the girls, break it. Go and learn all you can about football. Dad won't mind answering silly questions, and it'll give you a good background for the game you'll attend with your favorite beau.

Explore this famous man's world a bit and acquire at least a nodding acquaintance with sports, books, music, world events. Know who won the World Series, and that Koussevitsky is an orchestra conductor not a Notre Dame end. Suddenly, you'll find yourself not only getting interesting but interested. A million new vistas will open up to you, and you'll be paving the way to a well-balanced and happy life . . . Just two words of caution before we get on to beauty. Don't turn into a limelight snatcher and don't concentrate on just dazzling the stagline, completely forgetting the female contingent. Popularity with the girls is every bit as important (Continued on page 82)

WHAT SHALL I GIVE HIM?

You mean that boy in the army or navy, don't you?

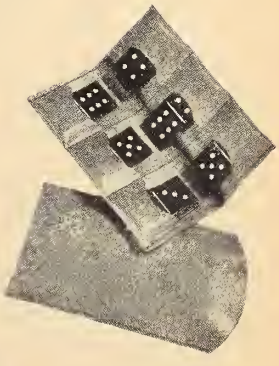


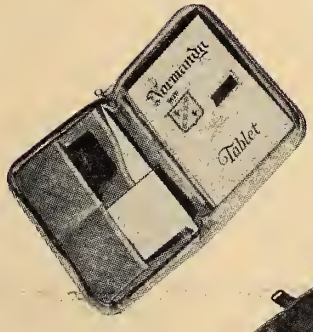
● He may be your best beau and then again he may be just the boy who lived next door. Anyway, you're going to send him something for Christmas, and you wonder what!

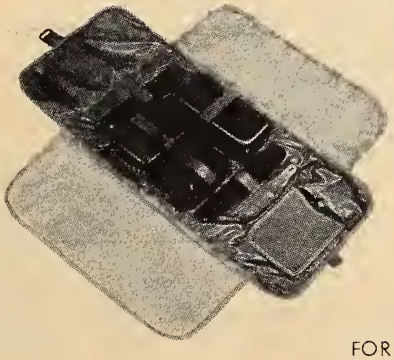
We've been doing some sleuthing on our own and got an earful from several Hollywood leading men, now working for Uncle Sam. In true army and navy fashion they refuse to be quoted, but we can tell you this—they all agree that the boys hate to be made conspicuous. So forget that beautiful leather job you've been eying for weeks and concentrate on something khaki for the army and don't turn up your nose at sewing kits for they do use 'em.

Now for the navy. Without benefit of any cosy U.S.O. headquarters at sea, the navy spends its off-duty hours with deck sports, movies every night and games. They go in for bridge, backgammon and chess as well as just plain dice. So consider games—ones that won't upset at every lurch of the ship.

Here are enough ideas to Christmas-cheer a dozen boys who used to live next door as well as your o. a. o. (one and only). So it's up to you!







FOR GIFT INFORMATION TURN TO PAGE 81

SIX SECRETS FOR SANTA

If you're half as good as the stars at wheedling Santa into Christmas whims, you'll do all right. Here's a peek at some of his personal correspondence from Hollywood.

SANTA DARLING:

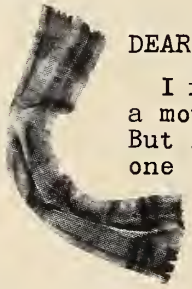
Far be it from me to complain—BUT—the fact I go gaga over ice and snow doesn't mean I want to find embroidered mittens in EVERY package. No sir, Santa. I like to choose my own ice trappings, but to see me REALLY swoon give me a divine new bag. Oh, yes, and a frame for you-know-who's picture. Could you arrange it?

Affectionately,

Anita Granville

Here's a red one in corduroy.

Something new—it'll hold his picture, too.

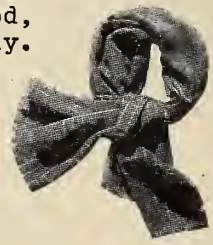


DEAR SANTA:

I feel as though I ought to keep quiet like a mouse and ask for nary a thing this year! But if you insist you're in the giving mood, one of the new scarfs would do very nicely.

Thank you so much,

Carol Bruce



Two plaids—a wool for day and chiffon for night. But I've much more in mind for you.

WHY NOT . . .

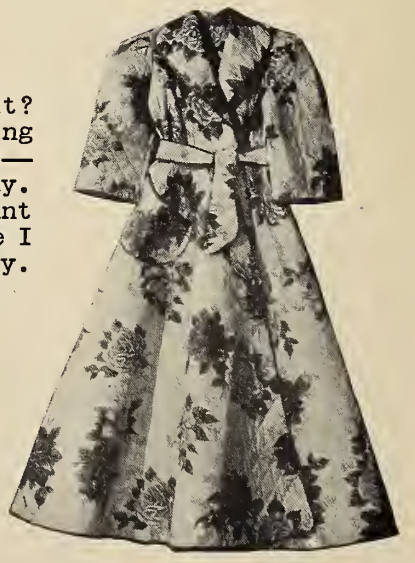
- Scatter sequin butterflies from the five and dime on your black velvet wrap.
- Wear a red heart on the back of your head—stitched to the crown of a white pompadour pillbox.
- Jump on the band wagon! One if wide, three if narrow. In black taffeta or bright red, blue and green, on a full-skirted date dress. Match a faille bag to one of the bands.
- Wear white, the pet of the season. An icecream wool for suit or dirndl.
- Make your own sparkle scarf—sew purple sequins on a green wool square.

SANTA DEAREST:

Funny how you change, isn't it? F'r instance this year everything I want seems to be for the house—like the clock I saw the other day. But Bill and I want to treasure hunt together. What you can do is see I get a new housecoat, bright and gay.

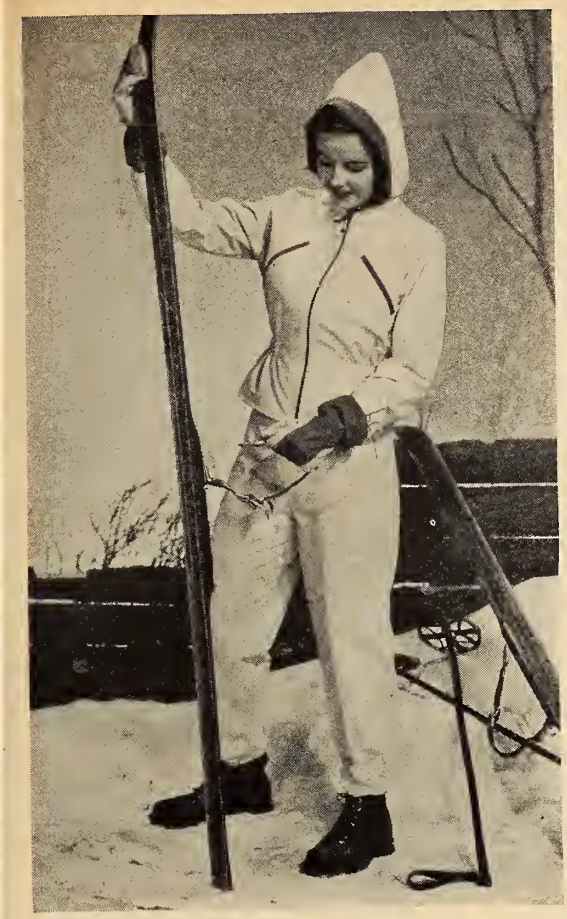
Most gratefully,

Brenda Marshall



Lots of happiness, Brenda, and here's a robe splashed with roses.

BY ELIZABETH WILLGUSS

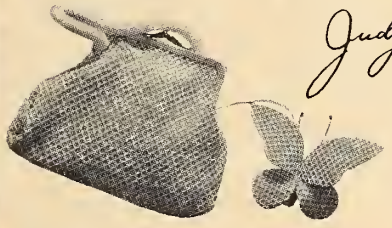


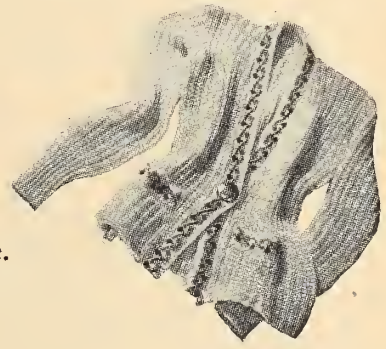
HELLO SANTA:

I want so many things I don't know where to begin. A ski suit, for example. A new evening bag that glitters. Some more bracelets — good, thick, chunky ones. A really super frame for Dave's picture. A light and foamy cardigan. I could go on and on, but this will give you an idea.

Forever yours,

Judy Garland





You'll get them all, but, meanwhile, these are a start.

SANTA DEAR:

What the world would do without you, I can't imagine! When you come to my name in your little book, jot down a J. That's it, a J for JET jewelry, sizzling with drama.

As always,

Lana Turner

This takes me back to the old days.

SANTA OL' DEAR:

You've guessed it. Six white blouses . . . to wear with suits. Tailored, yes, but not dull. You know, stitching and tucks here and there. Six white blouses. The sophisticated luxury of it all!

Thanks a million,

Veronica Lake

Here are two out of six.

For further fashion information turn to page 81

STARS IN FASHION . . .

- Joan Bennett sparts o huge gold heart clip with "I Love You" scrawled in diamonds.
- Maureen O'Sullivan cuts her old lace into lengths and wears it Mexican fashion, as a wrap. Have you any old lace lying about?
- Pat Dane goes for the sombrero of the South American gaucho. Hers, a shiny replica with tiny dangling balls!
- Loretta Young never forgets the flattery of pearls with black. Her newest black crepe is pearl-embroidered.
- Irene Dunne sophisticates the middy-blouse in a stunning lame dinner gown.

THEY LIVE WITH THEIR BOOTS ON

(Continued from page 29)

"Poor old Dismal Durham? Oh, it was blitzed ages ago. We weren't in it at the time, were down staying with Ralph Richardson, who's in the Staff Office of the Fleet Air Arm. But our friends Ursula Jeans and Roger Livesey were there and spent the night mostly under the kitchen table. It was blast, not a direct hit, but—you remember that glass roof?" (We did, and the dreary, dark back-yard and the sad clematis Larry was trying to grow between the stones) "Of course that all came down into Ursula's dresses and over the furniture, and it was a frightful mess. We had to take everything out, though the house is still standing. All the ceilings and carpets were ruined."

AT this point the Minion put his head round the door again and told Vivien they had nearly finished That Bit on the stage, and she had better come. Realizing belatedly that the talk had never got round to films at all, we asked her, as we made for the stage door and our old friends, the buckets of ice, whether she or her husband had any film plans in mind. No, she assured us, not a thing. She hardly saw any pictures these days, she said, except "Lady Hamilton," which Larry had taken her to by main force, and Leslie Howard's "Pimpernel Smith," which was really her favorite film. For entertainment, she said, she and Larry went to vaudeville. Anything to laugh. . . .

Meanwhile, our spies suggest that if Vivien does relent and do anything on the screen this year, it may be (a) Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" (b) Daphne du Maurier's new novel, "Frenchman's Creek" or (c) "Jane Eyre," for which she has always had a hankering.

The next on our list of inquiries was David Niven, whom we very fortunately encountered in Claridge's. And when we say fortunately, we mean fortunately, for David is probably the most elusive of all the film stars in England.

A soldier by training and tradition—for all his people are Army people—he came home to join one or other of the Services. He had a yen for the R.A.F., having flown back from France to England in the bottom of a bomber, disguised as a mail-bag or something and surrounded by what he called "perfect Dawn Patrol types." But old habit overruled this romantic dream, and he became a soldier in the Rifle Brigade. He became a soldier with such zeal that he has risen to the rank of Major and married a Commandant in the A.T.S. The Army owns him, body and soul. Film executives may tear their hair and chew on their cigars, but David Niven remains quite unperturbed. He is perfectly ready to make a picture, if the Army gives him leave. But in the meantime, he is Somewhere on Operations, Somewhere on Manoeuvres, Somewhere on a Special Roving Commission. Tracked down for the moment and involved in a story conference, he suddenly looks at his wrist-watch, raises those five sardonic lines on his forehead and says, "Sorry, I'm on duty. I've got to go." And he goes, becoming another invisible unit in the war machine. It's somehow tonic.

When caught in Claridge's, where he was lunching with non-professional friends, David Niven looked the perfect hero of a service film, brown as a nut, lean and smart in his uniform with a green cord on the shoulder, which looked fine but didn't mean a thing to our lay mind. He was nonchalant, gay and friendly, and used a lot of Army slang, particularly the address, "Chum," picked up from the Australians, we gather. Occasionally he would flip a penny idly across his knuckles, the way he learned to do for "Eternally Yours."

He was palpably unwilling to talk about films, being far more interested in His Men, meaning, we suppose, his regiment or whatever a Major in the Rifles has, and what good boys they were, and how they had been escorting a convoy past a popular race-course the other day, and what they said to him, and what he said to them, and what happened, and what were the odds on the winner.

He admitted, though, that he had leave to make one film, and that the film when it came off, would be "The First of the Few," Leslie Howard's biography of R. J. Mitchell, the Spitfire inventor. Leslie himself produces, directs and plays the Mitchell part, starting on locations Monday. David is to be the test pilot who becomes a Schneider Cup winner and goes through the whole tale, flying successive models of the Spitfire and falling for all the girls as he goes along, until he sobers up at forty and finds his affinity in the Boss's secretary.

NO date has yet been fixed for David Niven's arrival on the floor. It happens, or so we suppose, in His Majesty's good time. We have it hard, though, from Leslie's sister and business manager, Irene Howard, that "The First of the Few" will be Niven's first ex-army date. No one has anything hard from Leslie himself. He is as vague and disarming as Niven: an infuriating and irresistible pair. Old friends in Hollywood, they carry on their absurdly off-hand association here. When they confer on the telephone, they address each other as Slingsby and Trubshaw, wholly imaginary characters. No one yet has been able to discover, and we fancy both Leslie and David have forgotten the primeval origins of Trubshaw and Slingsby.

In passing we would note that it's funny the way Leslie Howard creeps into this story, which didn't set out to be about him at all. Actually, though we should hate to make an issue of it, Leslie Howard is just about the most significant film figure in England at this moment. That vague, retiring, forty-plus-something star, with his tired old clothes and horn-rimmed spectacles, can be found at the end of every avenue, behind every significant movement in this country. We suppose he has vision or something. Certainly he has loyal friends and valuable connections. What is more important to us, he has integrity. We have known Leslie for fifteen years, and in all that time we have never heard anyone, anyone for whom we had the slightest respect, criticize him adversely.

Vivien and Larry thought his film, "Pimpernel Smith," the best they had ever seen. David Niven prefers to work for him. Young Richard Greene, our fourth quarry, turns out to have been an old friend of Leslie's in Hollywood. He can't keep him out of the conversation. When the army swallowed up Trooper Greene a year ago, only Leslie Howard could have told the film world where he was. But Leslie didn't.

We got Richard Greene's own story in a dressing-room at Denham, where he is spending his first army leave making a Fleet Street-Dunkirk film for Columbia release, called "Unpublished Story."

Richard Greene, 2nd-Lieutenant Greene of the Royal Armoured Corps—which means Tanks—is a young man to whom, if we were a man and had one, we should solemnly remove our hat. The baby of our homing film stars, with most of his friends and what looked like all his future career in Hollywood, he almost certainly feels the break in his life more than the others.

He hadn't David Niven's traditional army background to pull him home. He hasn't the Oliviers' green-room circle, their stage detachment from screen affairs, their unbroken threads of interest just waiting to be picked up again, war or no war. Richard Greene was only nineteen when he left England to go to 20th Century-Fox and "Four Men and a Prayer." He had never made a film. The most noteworthy thing he had done in his own country was to model for a popular advertisement of hair-cream. The posters still haunt him, a little fly-blown now, prewar and incredibly young. He looks at them with malice. His imitation of a smiling youth pouring cream on his hair is vicious, a joy to behold. He hates the stuff, he says bitterly, would like to put it on record that he never used it.

Richard Greene was very happy in Hollywood, and it meant a big decision for him to throw it all up and come home and join the Army. He slipped out of Hollywood, he says, with only two people knowing where he had gone. (One, which argues hard sense, we feel, was a member of the publicity department. The other was not specified, and we were far too tactful to ask.) He ducked the English ship-news reporters and vanished, just vanished into thin air. An aunt in Kensington ("No one has more aunts than me," says Richard proudly) blocked a blind trail. That was September, 1940, and since then, until two weeks ago, he has simply played the Invisible Man. Here is Richard's own story.

I GOT back to England on September 6th," he says diffidently and adds, "Stop me if I'm being boring. I saw my first blitz over Liverpool from the deck of a ship. It was my first sight of England under war conditions, and I felt I was watching it all through a plate-glass window. We were twelve miles away, and it didn't seem real at all. I watched it all night, and in the morning I went ashore. We had seven alerts in Liverpool that day and several genuine raids. It was just the beginning of the blitz, and everything was chaos and confusion, nothing was sorted out properly yet. It was my first experience, not exactly of panic, for there wasn't any panic, but of emergency, of doing everything for yourself, standing on your own feet. . . .

"I can tell you it was an absolutely new experience for anyone coming from Hollywood, where everything is done for you. You had to queue up for trains. You had to wheel your own barrow with your baggage—when you could find it. I don't believe I should ever have got my baggage through, but finally a porter recognized me and got my stuff into the station master's office. Our train was due out at 11:15 p.m., but just as dusk came on—that was my first experience of the black-out—the sirens sounded again, and I was herded down into a funny little shelter in the station cellars until 3 a.m., when the train left, four hours late.

(Continued on page 64)

PROTECT YOUR NAILS

make them more beautiful

with DURA-GLOSS

3 NEW COLORS

Spicy DURA-GLOSS Shades for Fall and Winter

RED PEPPER CINNAMON NUTMEG

This is RED PEPPER

Naturally, when your nails are radiant with the fresh sparkling color and gleaming highlights that Dura-Gloss gives them, you'll feel elated, jubilant, good! You'll know the feeling of poise, of importance, that goes with wearing Dura-Gloss.

Thousands of women have already switched to Dura-Gloss, and many of them write us that they are amazed at the way Dura-Gloss "stays with" their nails for days on end. Why not try it yourself today?

WHY DURA-GLOSS EXCELS

To produce a polish that yields exceptional wear, that does not chip off readily, that dries hard with unparalleled brilliance, the Dura-Gloss formula contains a specially formulated resin almost identical to the world's most treasured resins which come from fossilized trees buried deep in the earth since prehistoric times. (Amber, from which precious jewelry is made is one of these resins . . . cherished for its exceptional gem-like hardness and incomparable luster.) This is why Dura-Gloss puts a finish on your nails of such surpassing brilliance, luster and adhesion. See for yourself what a marvelous polish Dura-Gloss is . . . do it today!

10¢

at beauty counters everywhere

DURA-GLOSS

Lorr Laboratories,
Paterson, New Jersey
Founded by E. T. Reynolds

FOR THE MOST BEAUTIFUL FINGERNAILS IN THE WORLD

(Continued from page 62)

"We got to London in the morning, and it seemed like a different world. You wouldn't have thought anything had gone wrong with London at all. It was a lovely sunny day, and the streets were busy, full of taxis, men in uniform, everyone going about their ordinary jobs. After an hour or so in London, I felt lonely and called up Leslie Howard at his home near Dorking. It was a Saturday, and Leslie told me to come down for the week-end.

"It was while I was at the station waiting for the Dorking train that the first big London blitz started. You remember—the one that began at 4:30 in the afternoon, when they attacked the docks and lit up the fires for the night blitz. That night Leslie and Ruth Howard and I drove up to the top of Box Hill and watched the blaze over London. I can tell you it made me pretty mad.

"That was Saturday, September 7th. On that Monday I came up to London with Leslie, and we took a flat on the top floor of a block in Chelsea. That night they nearly got us. The bomb went right through the other wing of the building, and there was dust and a nasty choky smell and lots of smoke. I've been through a lot of London blitzes since then, but that was the closest I ever had. It's a bad script really, you know, getting over my biggest thrill in the first three days here. I suppose it initiated me or something. Anyhow, I didn't have much time to think. I joined up on the Thursday. On Friday the 13th—my lucky day—I went down to my unit in Surrey for three months.

"It's hard to explain, but living down there I felt right out of the world. I was just a trooper, part of the army, completely cut off from the people I knew in private life. I never thought of getting to a telephone and calling them up. I used to go to the local pub at night with the boys. Beyond a few people who would have been awkward in any case about me being a film star—you know the sort—everyone was grand. You can live down all these things, you know, even a film reputation. . . . These things are only a handicap if you assume them as a handicap. . . . Luckily the barmaid recognized me, and that was often a help.

"I was lavatory man for a week, swilling cigarette ends, polishing the brasses, all the rest of it. After a time I was recommended for a commission, and I went up to Sandhurst, where I had measles twice in five months, English and German type, with a week off between. I was really damned ill. I spent Christmas with the Howards. Then I got my commission and managed to get up to London every now and then.

"There were changes in London, of course, since that September day when I got home, but I loved every minute of it. I can't help feeling that London's absolutely at its best just now—living in its greatest moment of time. Sometimes I think that if I live to be a hundred, I shall never get that same kick out of London again. It's silly, I suppose, but when I remember London evenings spent with friends in the middle of the blitz, nothing else seems to matter much. I spent all my army leaves in London. It's a funny thing, I couldn't tear myself away. I'm not one of the cool collected sort who like bombs, but I somehow felt that if I didn't stick it, I should look back with a kind of grudge against myself for the rest of my life. Those were great days."

We asked Richard Greene about his re-entry into films, and he said, well, the idea cropped up just before he got his commission. March it must have been. "It happened quite informally," he said, "over a friendly chat. Somebody said to me, 'By the way, a friend of mine, Tony Havelock Allen, Valerie Hobson's husband, is going to make a picture about Fleet Street during the blitz. Would you be interested in playing lead?' Honestly, I hadn't given a thought to films up till then. I had scarcely realized there was a different life from the army. But I thought to myself, 'Well, you're going to be an officer, it would be grand to have a bit of money in the old kitty, enough to pay the mess bill and buy the Colonel that drink.' So gradually the thing materialized, and here I am."

Richard Greene plays a tough type in "Unpublished Story," a war correspondent who comes back from Dunkirk and breaks up a Fifth Column Peace Plot. Valerie Hobson plays opposite him, as the fashion editress who gets onto straight reporting when the bombed office tumbles about her ears.

Second Lieutenant Greene has a couple of rooms in a private house near Denham Studios, goes to see every picture he can—("I didn't see any when I was in the ranks, it made me homesick")—and likes "Rage in Heaven," "The Letter" and "A Woman's Face" best of what he has seen. Asked whether he has any message for the film-going public, he says, yes, he would like to put it on record about not using that hair-cream, and also that he thinks he has profited immensely by what he has been through. "I'm glad I have had this year of war," he says. "I wouldn't have it any other way. In many ways this business has done a lot of people, myself included, a great deal of good." The war's so short, he says, that he doesn't want to waste any of it making a second film. Then he adds, diffidently, that he'd like to go out and drive a tank in Libya.

TOO MANY HUSBANDS

(Continued from page 37)

you're a different guy—or fondly imagine you are.

"It doesn't matter what your job is," said John, "if you're interested in it, you're apt to take it home with you. You talk about it. You relate how you did this or that. There's a lot of 'ham' in everybody, not just actors. Only actors are lucky enough to get paid for it.

"Do you know what I did with the first big dough I made in Hollywood? For years, I had been sleeping cramped—or else with my feet sticking out six inches past the footboard. I made up my mind I was going to be comfortable at last. So I went down and bought the biggest bed ever made.

"I'm always going overboard on clothes—but there's no reason for that. When I'm not working, you'll find me in sweaters and slacks. I don't dress up when I don't have to. But instead of going out and buying two suits at a time, I go out and buy five, all dark colors. I've got about twenty or twenty-five suits, and I never wear any of them. I keep alibiing to anyone who's interested that I've got to keep up my screen wardrobe. And then I get another script that has me in costume. I haven't been able to wear my own clothes in the last four pictures."

He usually tries to get his hands on the script about three weeks before he goes into a role—so that he can do a lot of worrying in advance about every scene.

Love scenes, too—?

"Well, yes and no," he said. "Love scenes are part of the job. But usually," he admitted, "they're fun. Any guy's a liar who says he doesn't like to kiss a pretty girl. That's the easiest thing in the world to do—especially when you get paid for it."

Most people insist on feeling sorry for Hollywood husbands and wives on the grounds that they give so much of themselves to their work, they don't have anything left for each other. What about that—?

"Listen," said John, "I don't give any more of myself to my job than an airplane worker gives to his.

"Music is important to me. I've been studying music since I was a punk. I used to do a lot of orchestral arranging and tune-writing—and I still do some, because I get a kick out of it. I usually inflict them on Anne for her opinion. She says, once in a while, 'That one's good!' But I don't know. She's the girl who hums Grieg's Concerto off-key. Every time she does it, I see red. 'Listen, honey,' I tell her, 'Grieg did all right. Why don't you leave him alone?' And then she sees red.

"A musician—even a musician of sorts—is a hard man to get along with. Only I simplify life for people around me by not putting on a one-man jam session more than a couple of times a week. And then only when I'm alone.

"It would be bad enough if I were just a tunesmith, but I'm a would-be short-story writer, too. It's always a toss-up, which one is going to burn the midnight electricity. Sometimes they both stay up. The musician will sit down at the piano and say, 'I want you to hear this,' and go into a concert—until suddenly the writer will say, 'Bub, you've got me in just the right mood for that story I've been thinking about. Now would you mind disappearing?' This writer guy has to be alone to work, too.

"I'm inclined to be a very thorough worrier. If today stinks for me, the whole week stinks. I have three or four ways to try to pull myself out of it."

One of the ways is to be athletic—which brought up the subject of the up-and-at-'em guy, the strenuous type.

"If I don't keep fit," he said, "I don't feel good. When I'm making a picture, I work out every morning in the pint-sized gym I had built in the house. When I'm not working, I get outdoors. I shoot some golf and play tennis and go swimming in the ocean. I take long walks and long horseback rides. Sometimes Anne wonders if she understands this side of me. 'Do you have to be so rugged?' she'll ask. 'I never exercise, and I'm healthy.' The funny thing is, I can't argue that point. She doesn't exercise, and she is healthy.

"If my passion for the outdoors staggers Anne, her passion for night clubs staggers me. She loves 'em. She loves to get me into a tuxedo. I'll tell her, 'Honey, you dress up in your finest, but I'll settle for a dark suit.'

"However, I enjoy night clubs on Saturday night—because Anne doesn't mind being awakened at the crack of dawn when I get up to go horseback-riding."

And how about Lazy John—the opposite of the strenuous athlete? What was he like?

"Well, he's a difficult sort. The black sheep of the bunch. He comes around about once a year—usually when hot weather sets in—and everybody's glad he doesn't show up oftener.

"When he takes over, I can't even find the energy to pick up the telephone. I don't want to talk to people. To get away, I go hunting—and I don't fire the gun once. I go fishing and never bait the hook. I go down to the beach for a swim and end up just lying in the sand. I don't touch the piano. I don't take the case off the typewriter. I sit and read. I sit and dream. I sit and think about places where I'd go—sometime. And I sleep and sleep and sleep."

But that other guy, the one who liked to laugh—he couldn't be so difficult.

"I don't know about that," said John. "Under his influence, I tell the corniest jokes, which I remember for years and embellish a trifle with each retelling.

"However, nobody has to be on guard against my pulling practical jokes. I'm not much of a comic myself—but I'm a sucker for anyone who is. Abbott and Costello kill me. So does Jack Oakie. And so do a dozen others like Benny and Hope. That wonderful harmless humor of theirs can bend me double any time."

He thought of the guy who argued too much. "Sometimes I wonder if I'll ever learn to keep my mouth shut."

And, by the way, what was he like as a husband—?

"Why should I lead with my chin? No man can ever tell that for himself. You have to let results do the talking. And Anne and I get along fine."

He isn't hard to please. He has simple tastes—in food, in surroundings (his house is a small French Provincial), in practically everything else. But he doesn't assume that other people are easy to please.

He likes his job and he works hard at it. He'd like to last a long time at it if he can. In everything else, he's easy-going. He's a good loser at tennis, golf and gin rummy.

No matter how late he goes to bed, he likes to get up early. It's a hangover from his boyhood on a Virginia farm. To him, early morning is the best part of the day.

He's modest, no publicity hound. If he makes a mistake, he's the first one to point it out. If someone else makes a mistake, he's the last one to mention it.

No matter what he might tell you himself, all those seven or eight Johnny Paynes add up to one swell guy!

• • •

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

There was the night that "The Wizard of Oz" opened at Grauman's Chinese Theater. Most of the movie stars brought their children to give them a treat. After the picture was over a radio announcer stopped Joan Bennett to ask her what her daughter, Melinda, thought of "The Wizard of Oz." Little Melinda answered, "I didn't like it. It's for children."

My favorite kid story concerns the time George S. Kaufman was on his way to Hollywood. It was Christmas week, and he knew that he would have to buy a Christmas present for the small son of a certain actor, if only for appearances sake. Kaufman turned to Moss Hart and asked, "What can I buy the kid that he can hurt himself with?"

"For Orchid Freshness tomorrow, try my Beauty Nightcap" says Ilona Massey:

'When cameras roll close, my skin has to be super-smooth. So nightly, I have a Beauty Nightcap. And the 'magic' in this Nightcap is Woodbury Cold Cream. My complexion says, 'There's no cream like it!' "

Every night Ilona cleanses with Woodbury, for its special beauty oils help relieve the dryness that may lead to tiny lines.

Then, removing this cream, she applies a fresh film for all-night softening. An exclusive ingredient purifies Woodbury constantly, faithfully, so it's cream she can trust.

"Try it nightly," says Ilona, "to have a complexion that every man adores."

WOODBURY COLD CREAM

Beauty Nightcap of the Stars

Try Ilona's beauty secret. Get Woodbury Cold Cream today. Large jars are 50¢ to $1.25. Introductory sizes are 10¢ to 25¢.

For special skins—special creams. If your skin is normal, Woodbury Cold Cream is all you need. If oily, cleanse with Woodbury Cleansing Cream. If dry, use Woodbury Dry Skin Cream at night. For any skin, use new Woodbury Foundation Cream for a powder base.

VOCAL BOY MAKES GOOD

(Continued from page 33)

On the set of "Captains of the Clouds," Dennis and Cagney used to chew the fat about their respective childhoods. They were both fistic experts—but Jim fought for self-preservation, Dennis for fighting's sake. To his mother's disgust, he wrested from his gang the title of Toughie Morner. "I hafta fight," he explained, "else they'd call me sissy for singin'."

It was a pleasant uneventful boyhood—swimming hole, sand-lot baseball, hunting with his father from the time he could carry a gun, summers at the lumber camps his father ran. He sang for fun, but lumber was to be his living. He said nuts (to himself, being polite) when the voice coach at high school suggested the possibility of a singing career. Even after he won the state contest, he said it. Shy about his voice, he stood on the platform, eyes down and sang Under the Wide and Starry Sky. There was a hush before the applause thundered, and Lillian ran backstage, eyes streaming, convinced that the voice coach wasn't so dumb. Dennis laughed.

BY now these two were head over ears in love. Pursuing private inquiries, Dennis had discovered that the Poppy Girl was a senior, too, and in three of his classes. He switched programs, so they'd be in all five together. The boy she'd thought she liked, who'd gone away to college, faded from Lillian's horizon. She wasn't allowed to have dates at night, but Dennis could come over and study with her, an arrangement short of ideal, since a younger sister studied in the same room. Efforts at bribery proved fruitless. Chaperoning was fun. At five-minute intervals the little fiend would peek under the table to make sure they weren't holding hands.

At Carroll College, which they both attended, Dennis studied business administration, played football, soloed with the Glee Club, sang in local theatres and churches for extra cash. He and Lillian planned to marry as soon after graduation as they could afford it. Dennis was going to be assistant purchasing agent for a lumber firm in Milwaukee owned by a friend of his father. That was the winter of '30-'31. The firm of his father's friend collapsed. So did lumber in general. Dennis was cornered. He had to earn money, and the only thing he'd ever earned money by was singing. He applied to a local radio station and was taken on at thirty-five a week as singer, poetry-spouter and sports announcer. That settled it. Radio would be his career. He enrolled at the conservatory for intensive vocal training.

A year later he transferred to the Chicago Conservatory. An orchestra leader who heard him sing at a friend's home got him a job at the State Theatre. The manager of the Palmer House, who heard him sing at the State Theatre, asked him to audition for their swank new supper club, where he wowed the customers with his own arrangement of One Alone from "The Desert Song." "We'll give you a hundred a week," said the Palmer House.

"Okay," said Dennis, "and a week off to get married."

The wedding took place in the garden of the Vedder home. Lillian wore ivory lace, and the pesky sister was a penitent bridesmaid in green taffeta. "Be sure to speak up," Dennis had admonished his bride. "It annoys me at weddings, you never can hear the girl." The ceremony was marked by a startlingly loud response from the bride and a smothered mumble of nothing from the groom.

Life in Chicago was lovely for a year till slack season closed the Palmer House supper club, and Dennis couldn't find another job. By the time the baby was born, his father had been reduced to fishing numbers out of a hat at bank night affairs, with a song in between to tune up the crowd. Came the day when thirty cents stood between the Morgans and hunger. While Dennis went out to arrange a loan on the furniture, a ten-dollar birthday check arrived for Lillian. The financial corner had been turned. Before the ten vanished, a job appeared.

Mary Garden gave Morgan to the movies after failing in a campaign to give him to opera first. The day after he sang "Xerxes" for the University of Chicago, drawing critical raves, Mary sent for him. She'd found a backer for "Carmen" and was hunting a Don José. Dennis was elated but not nervous, being sure of himself when he sings. Anyway, he'd reached the fatalistic conclusion that a man can but do his best. Doing his best, he sang a couple of ballads and Luce Van le Stelle from "Tosca." Mary was impressed. She led him across the street to the old opera house, planted him on the stage and bade him sing the Flower Song. Italians sing the final B-flat full voice, the French sing it mezzo voce, a process involving most tenors in difficulty. Out of compliment to the French school and Miss Garden, Dennis sang it mezzo and clinched the sale. "An artist, an artist!" cried the ebullient Mary, dashing down the aisle. "This is my Don José."

HE never was, alas! The prospective angel got cold feet and flapped out of the picture. But Garden's enthusiasm for the Morgan mezzo remained undimmed. Swallowing her own disappointment like the lady she is, she arranged that Dennis should meet a vice-president of Metro. Result—test and contract. "Shall I take it?" he wired Lillian, who was visiting the folks in Wisconsin.

"If you like it, I like it," she answered. And that started the Hollywood chapter of adventure.

They drove out in an old Packard which they swear might have served as an advance model for "Grapes of Wrath." It was packed to the fenders with all they owned in the world. Dennis talked tenderly to the sick tires, hoping to cajole them to do the impossible, but they blew up. Every hundred miles one tire blew up. Almost to the fraction, they could gauge their progress by the blow-outs. Nothing daunted Dennis. Metro was waiting for him. First he patched, then he bought new tires. Having allowed no margin for new tires, their funds approached the vanishing point. Even that didn't matter, because Metro was waiting. Still, they did have to meet daily bills.

One night they stopped at a hotel instead of the usual auto camp because the baby had caught cold. Dennis, thinking how badly Metro would feel to learn of his plight, went down to the bar, strictly to ponder, which he could do for nothing.

"You seem rather down, son. What's the trouble?" He lifted his eyes to meet those of a Texas ranger, so friendly that the whole story came out. Pulling a wad from his pocket, the man peeled a hundred off and handed it over. He would take no denial, he wouldn't even take a note. Whenever Dennis finds human nature distasteful, he thinks of the Texan and recovers his balance.

Metro was waiting—with a six-week lay-off, which for all practical purposes save money, stretched to two years. He was paid, but he didn't work. The story's been told too often to bear repetition. Nelson Eddy got the singing roles. Dennis pleaded, then howled, that he didn't have to sing, he could act or turn handsprings or wiggle his ears. Pleas and howls died away together in a vacuum. Metro released him, and Paramount let him play gangsters for six months. He and Lillian were packed for departure when Warners lured him with honeyed hints of "The Desert Song." So they put him in quickies. It took Sam Wood to get him out. Recently Metro offered Warners thirty-five hundred a week for the loan of Dennis Morgan to play "Rio Rita." Dennis Morgan. You know. The guy who used to be Stanley Morner. The guy we had out here for a couple of years, but we couldn't use him then. Yeah, that one. Warners turned them down.

Lillian says Dennis has reverted to normal. He no longer gnashes his teeth or mutters in dreams that Metro's waiting for him. Just before Christmas last year they moved into their own house opposite Andy Devine's in the valley. The Devines are good neighbors. They don't kick about Dennis' vocalizing as the neighbors in Chicago did. Of course they're not quite so close.

Like the sensible parent of a child, Dennis takes care of his voice without coddling it. You don't hear him gargling all over the place or fussing about drafts. His few simple rules include a brief rest before singing and two hours of practise every day that he doesn't work. The voice, he points out, is temperamental, even when the singer isn't. If you don't watch it, it won't be there.

He's the kind of husband who has definite tastes on home decoration and his wife's clothes. Lillian meets him halfway on up, depending on circumstances. She sent back a pair of drapes he didn't like, because he had to live with them, too, and it seemed only fair. They agree that she looks best in tailored things, being tall. But he glowers at small hats, which she loves, so she keeps them for hen-parties. He hates slacks with a deep and abiding hatred. She finds them comfortable around the house. When Dennis is home, she wears skirts. She's learned about men since her bridal days when she wept because he wouldn't eat his applesauce for breakfast. "But it's good for you—" "But I don't like

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send todoy for the new, up-ta-dote list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio addresses. It is o convenient size to hondle or keep in a scrap-book. To receive o list, oll you have to do is write to us ond osk for it, enclosing a lorge, self-oddressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that lost item, os no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, New York.

it—" "But I went to a lot of trouble making it—" "But I didn't ask you to, did I?—" We all know how it goes. She used to run home not to her mother, but to his, and even when she was wrong, Mrs. Morner took her part. She hopes she'll be wise enough to do the same when her own son marries.

They both find night clubs depressing, filled with unhappy faces. Dennis finds bridge almost equally depressing. "How many bridge players do you know who are interesting people?" he demands of his wife, who enjoys an occasional game.

"Quite a few," she returns tranquilly and names them. He still won't play bridge. His idea of a pleasant evening with friends is a barbecued dinner followed by gab. If they ask, he'll sing, being none of your coy pests. Lillian still thrills to his voice as she did when he sang Requiem for the high-school contest. Little Stan used to think no one sang like his father, till he heard John Charles Thomas. "I'm afraid he sings gooder than Daddy, Mum. Will Daddy feel bad?" Since John Charles is Dennis' singing idol, his son was rewarded for discrimination. His daughter gets rewarded just for existing. Dennis thinks she's a poem. She's also a coquette who barters kisses for presents.

TRAINED to the outdoors from childhood, he grabs what few chances he gets at hunting and fishing. For the rest, he plays tennis, swims, mows the lawn, trains with the White Sox when they come to California. He's a rabid ball fan and bats above average. In a recent game—Comedians Vs. Leads—he socked a home run over the fence. When he works, he smokes too many cigarettes, then changes to a pipe on the theory that a pipe's out most of the time.

He's got his share of those masculine quirks which keep life from getting dull. If Lillian thinks the roof needs painting, she'll choose her moment and say: "I think that's a good idea of yours, to have the roof painted—" then, while the power of suggestion is at work, "Let's do it now. Andy and Dorothy Devine just had theirs done, we could get the same man." Later Dennis surveys the fait accompli and tells her that was a good idea of his, to have the roof painted.

He likes things tidy without liking to put them away. One of his less constructive habits is slinging a damp towel over the foot of the bed. When Lillian points out the stain, someone else did it. Except for work, his sense of time is inaccurate. If he phones that he'll be home in twenty minutes, the maid says: "All right, Mr. Morgan, I'll get dinner ready for an hour from now."

He likes to bring guests home on the spur of the moment, so Lillian always plans for at least one extra. Dinner is simple—meat, two vegetables and a salad. No potatoes for Dennis, because they're fattening. Theoretically, no dessert—though he's never been known to turn down home-made chocolate ice cream.

His passion for candlelight is second only to his passion for firelight. They eat by the one and listen to records by the other. If the choice of music is left to Dennis, it's likely to be Tschaikowsky or anything John Charles Thomas sings. Another favorite diversion is reading aloud. Lillian loves it. They sit up till two or three in the morning, drinking cup after cup of tea and finishing the book.

Warners still talk of doing "The Desert Song." It's a project they remove from the shelf and dust off each year. Dennis still says he doesn't have to sing.

"But if anyone else gets 'The Desert Song,'" he adds thoughtfully, "I'll get the producer—alone—in a dark alley—"

"I'm tired of pretending"...

YOU want to be yourself! You're fed up with pretending to be gay and gurgly . . . when you're gloomy and unsure of yourself.

You just don't feel like cutting up . . . or cutting rugs, either.

But if you break your date, and let some pretty prowler blitzkrieg your man, you'll find yourself getting dusty on a shelf.

So learn to keep going—smile, sister, smile—no matter what day of the month it is!

How do other girls manage?

How do up-to-date and dated-up girls manage to shine and sparkle on "difficult days"? Ask them! See how many of them tell you they choose Kotex sanitary napkins!

Why? . . . in the first place, Kotex is more comfortable! Not the deceptive softness of pads that only "feel" soft. Kotex is made in soft folds that are naturally less bulky . . . more comfortable . . . made to stay soft!

Besides, Kotex has a new moisture-resistant "safety shield" for extra protection! And flat, pressed ends that mean no more embarrassing, telltale bulges.

So now you know why Kotex is helping millions! Why it's more popular than all other brands of pads put together! You know why you should try Kotex next time!

Be confident . . . comfortable . . . carefree
—*with Kotex!

DO'S AND DON'T'S FOR GIRLS! Send for the new booklet "As One Girl To Another." Lots of tips on how to make "difficult days" less difficult. Mail your name and address to Post Office Box 3434, Dept. MM-1, Chicago, Ill., and get your copy FREE.

*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

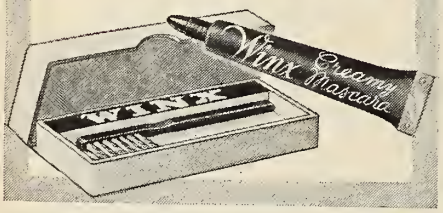
Eyes RIGHT! for Romance

Eyes are always right when you use WINX.

WINX brings out the natural beauty and charm of your eyes—enlivens your whole appearance—gives you a new, fascinating loveliness. Try WINX today.

WINX Mascara (either solid or creamy) makes lashes appear darker, longer, more luxuriant. For complete eye make-up use WINX Eyebrow Pencil and WINX Eye Shadow. All are water-resistant, easy to use. Insist on WINX for finer quality. At drug, department or 10¢ stores.

Winx
FOR LOVELY EYES



Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails—have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Will not harm nor soften natural nails. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15A, 5251 W. Harrison St., Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 57)

pearance of the costume and made people forget they ever saw it before . . . If you wanna snare that man of yours, wear blue and more blue, says Edward Stevenson, RKO designer. Claims you can please every last one of 'em in one good blue. On opposite side of the fence, Paulette Goddard maintains there's nothing quite like fluid-fitting gold evening gowns to put suitors in a marrying mood, i.e., that super-sirenic topaz beaded number in "The Lady Has Plans."

Brenda Marshall claims ownership of the most unusual necklace in town, but she can't wear it! To date, it's a collection of old silver dollars gathered by hubby Bill Holden while on location in New Mexico. Trouble is, it's illegal to punch holes in U. S. currency, consequently they can't find a way to hitch 'em together! Undaunted, Bill swears he's gonna bring back more for a bracelet next time he's down Mexico way!

Gene Tierney's strutting husband Count Cassini designed stuff during fittings! She's as proud as Punch of his togs, particularly adores an evening dress he's whipping up —fitted black bodice with yards and yards of pink skirt, with an all-over coverage of huge lacy black grapes! . . . During filming of "The Fleet's In" at Paramount, commissary lunchers are having the thrill of a lifetime. Just the other day, Dottie Lamour pranced in and threw them all for a loop in a wicked black beaded gown cut unprecedently low in back . . . and just as low in front!

Leave it to Orson Welles to out-originate them all! On his CBS radio show he appeared in a white terry cloth suit which he himself designed. Says it's the most comfortable thing he's ever worn, not too warm, not too cold, doesn't wrinkle, cleans easily. All the men on the show want one like it now, but Welles thinks they'll look too much like a patrol of ski troopers!

The Men In Her Life

As we go to press we learn Roz Russell has become Mrs. Freddie Brisson, and Hollywood has lost one of its most enduring Bachelor Girls. But Hollywood forgets quickly. With Roz out of the running, it will soon find another shoulder to carry the title of Number One Unmarried.

Likeliest candidate, according to the consensus, is star-eyed, 25-year-old Olivia de Havilland. Easily the most popular date in town, Olivia has successfully eluded matrimonially-minded men and today hasn't even one broken engagement to her credit.

It's a pretty sure bet that when Olivia does make her vows she will make them to a man older than herself. Though girlishly young, de Havilland has always displayed a natural bent for the polished sophisticate. Consider her single date with Bob Stack. It was just that—a single date. For repeat jobs, Olivia invariably turns to men who are ten or more years her senior.

Oddly enough, she seems to be attracted to the former husbands of fellow actresses. Until he married, Franchot Tone, a Joan Crawford ex, was her frequent companion. On her last trip East, it was Lew Ayres, one-time spouse of Ginger Rogers, who topped her date list. Gene Markey, short-lived mate of Hedy Lamarr, still writes her regularly from his naval post. And currently, Roger Pryor, returned to the ranks by Ann Sothern, is very capably filling the de Havilland "escort" bill.

True, it's almost impossible to turn around in this town without bumping into someone's divorced husband. But Olivia doesn't use the bumping process to meet her men. They seek her out. And before long, one of them will take her in—to see a preacher!

Half Tone

Bruce Cabot and Pat Di Cicco mourned him like a brother. Joan Crawford looked back down the years and frowned slightly. A dozen chorus girls tore up his picture. And the town knew the news before it was spoken. Franchot Tone was married.

Who is the new Mrs. Tone? Where does she come from and what does she do? Before her wedding, no one gave a darn. Now, as Mrs. Franchot, poor Jean Wallace is being dissected like a laboratory frog.

Happily she can stand the scrutiny. She's a nice, wholesome youngster and a compliment to Franchot's judgment. Her real name is Jean Walasek. She changed it when Earl Carroll brought her to Hollywood after she won a Carroll-conducted beauty contest in Chicago. Her first picture was "A Night At Earl Carroll's," and Paramount put her under contract after they viewed it. She was born October 12, 1923, and wouldn't say "yes" to Franchot, who is 36, before her 18th birthday.

Jean plays the clarinet, has a beautiful singing voice and can cook, too. Her gal pals in the Carroll chorus will testify to that. She used to invite them to her apartment for her specialty, an Italian-cooked dinner.

When she reads, she prefers Poe, though her favorite book character is Dickens' "Scrooge." In music, she goes for Deep Purple. And her pet aversion (Franchot, please note) is a man who won't talk back!

Oh, Da Colonna!

Paramount is developing two new comedians: (a) Muk, the 6-year-old chimpanzee who stole "Malaya" from Dorothy Lamour, and (b) Jerry Colonna, the 36-year-old monkey-shiner who steals laughs from Bob Hope.

Muk's just a newcomer to the movie scene. People aren't curious about him yet. But Jerry's been around a long while, and requests for information about the lad are burying our desk. So here goes:

His real name is Gerard . . . He has a perpetually sore upper lip because fans are always tugging at his mustache to see if it's real. It is . . . Married for ten years, his wife has never seen him without that six-inch adornment (he trims it to six inches between pictures) . . . As a kid, he yearned for a mustache that would outstrip any sported by the men in his home town. Today, there isn't a Bostonian who can match him . . . He's worn the lip lace for 14 years . . . Once sued a studio that tried to make him shave it off.

Had his own band at 18, but didn't learn to read music till he hit 23 . . . Any time he wearies of the funnyman racket, he can return to trombone playing . . . He's one of the top musicians in the business; used to play alongside Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw, Bunny Berrigan and Claude Thornhill in the old Dorsey Brothers' band . . . Has a great voice when he's not gagging. Can hold a note a minute and five seconds without getting winded.

Though definitely not a glamour boy, the bulk of his fan mail comes from women. What's more, they all want Colonna photographs—affectionately autographed!

Special Delivery

Hollywood is fast becoming a town where they make more babies than pictures! After the recent flood of new arrivals (Mary Martin's, Veronica Lake's, Virginia Bruce's and Connie Moore's), it seemed fairly certain that movie folk would settle down to digesting their latest citizens before bringing in a storkload of fresh ones. But that, apparently, is not to be. Now rumor has it that Joan Bennett, Lucille Ball, Judy Garland and Deanna Durbin are on the expectant list!

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Of all the tots to hit the colony in recent months, the most impressive was the one delivered to Jack Carson and his radio-singer wife, Kay St. Germain. The little fellow weighed 10 pounds, 5 ounces at birth! And is Jack proud of his young husky? Just listen:

"What a guy!" he gloats. "The first baby I ever saw who was born eating a steak sandwich!"

Family Affairs

Mickey Rooney's mom and dad, though divorced and wed to new mates, meet every Sunday at Mick's. They bring their current spouses, and all five enjoy a cozy dinner . . . Bill Holden and Brenda Marshall, interviewing a pair of Chinese servants, were amazed when the applicants interrupted to ask for their autographs . . . Like all homey folk, Marlene Dietrich likes to spend Christmas with her family. She and daughter Maria will hit the Eastbound trail to pass the holidays in New York with their husband and daddy, Rudolph Sieber.

Where You Go . . .

Barbara Stanwyck was rehearsing for a broadcast at CBS a short time ago, when Hubby Bob Taylor arrived to take her to dinner. While Bob waited for Barbara to run through her lines, Roger Pryor stepped up to him:

"How about you doing one of our shows, Taylor?" he asked. "Say the word and you can have either Claudette Colbert or Myrna Loy as your leading lady."

From over his shoulder, Bob heard the clop of a falling script. In a moment Barbara was at his side.

"Listen, chum!" she upped to Roger. "That means three evenings of rehearsal and all day Sunday working with one of those queens! If the sponsor doesn't mind my doing two broadcasts in one season, I think I'd better do the play with Bob!"

Bob pouted and everyone laughed—BUT—three weeks later when Mr. Robert Taylor appeared as star of the Screen Guild Theater, there was Mrs. Robert Taylor trading lines with him at the other side of the mike!

Reelisms

Jackie Cooper dons a false mustache for "Syncopation" . . . Roy Rogers, appointed honorary mayor of Studio City, moved to Encino two weeks later . . . Ray Milland is a sucker for paintings used as set decorations in his pictures. Buys them up like mad . . . Red Skelton's new home is so huge, he has signs in the foyer reading, "Straight ahead to the dining room," "Playroom: through the kitchen, fourth door to the left," etc. . . . Charles Butterworth, anticipating sensational business when he personal-appearanced in his home town, South Bend, Indiana, met with a terrific freeze instead. Seems once-cordial friends and neighbors had learned of his divorce from Ethel Butterworth—and they no like such thing out Notre Dame way! . . . Back in football after a fling at the flickers, Tommy Harmon and Johnny Kimbrough are taking a terrific kidding from sports columnists . . . Ronald

Do you Secretly long for Romance?

Linda Darnell and George Murphy starring in 20th Century-Fox' Musical "Rise and Shine". Easily have thrilling hands, yourself—with Jergens Lotion.

Know the Lovely Part soft Hands can play— Linda Darnell

(Lovely Hollywood Star)

Linda Darnell's Lovely Hands

YOUR hands, too, can be rose-leaf smooth, cuddly-soft!

A little coarse, now? Jergens Lotion will soon help that! It's almost like professional hand care—with those 2 ingredients many doctors use to treat neglected, harsh skin.

If you'll use Jergens Lotion regularly—you'll help prevent that disappointing roughness and chapping. Because Jergens supplies softening moisture for your skin. No stickiness! $1.00, 50¢, 25¢, 10¢. Always use Jergens Lotion!

JERGENS LOTION FOR SOFT ADORABLE HANDS

FREE! PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE (MAIL THIS COUPON NOW)

(Paste on a penny postcard, if you wish)

The Andrew Jergens Company, Box 3733, Cincinnati, Ohio
(In Canada: Perth, Ontario)

I want to have those soft hands Linda Darnell advises. Please send purse-size bottle of Jergens Lotion—free.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

PAZO RELIEVES THE TORTURE OF SIMPLE PILES

For relief from the torture of simple Piles, PAZO ointment has been famous for more than thirty years. Here's why: First, PAZO ointment soothes inflamed areas — relieves pain and itching. Second, PAZO ointment lubricates hardened, dried parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, PAZO ointment tends to reduce swelling and check bleeding. Fourth, it's easy to use. PAZO ointment's perforated Pile Pipe makes application simple, thorough. Your doctor can tell you about PAZO ointment. Get PAZO ointment from your druggist, today.

Grove Laboratories, Inc.
Dept. 200-MM-5, St. Louis, Mo.

FREE Offer Limited. MAIL TODAY! (Good only in U. S. A.)

Gentlemen: I want PAZO, FREE! (Mailed in a plain wrapper)

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

FREE CHART

STUFFED-UP NOSE

If thick, gummy mucus plugs your nose—causes morning hawking, coughing—loosen and liquefy it with HALL'S TWO-METHOD TREATMENT—soothes and cools. Ask your Druggist. Satisfaction or money back! Send postcard for FREE Health Chart TODAY! F. J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 31, TOLEDO, OHIO

STERLING SILVER BLOCKS INLAID AT POINTS OF WEAR GIVE LIFETIME BEAUTY TO THIS FINE SILVERPLATE.

HERE HERE

50 PIECE SET $63.25. OTHER SETS AS LOW AS $36.25. AT AUTHORIZED DEALERS. Prices include Federal Tax.

HOLMES & EDWARDS STERLING INLAID° SILVERPLATE

Copyright 1941, International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Div., Meriden, Conn. In Canada, The T. Eaton Co., Ltd. °Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Colman once appeared in Westerns . . . Directors of the Screen Guild radio show, of which Roger Pryor is M. C., will ask Ann Sothern to appear as "Maisie." The sly devils hope working together will bring about a Sothern-Pryor reconciliation . . . Clock collector Cesar Romero had to silence his most precious timepiece. It pealed like Big Ben and woke the baby next door—Julie Payne, daughter of John and Anne . . . Life of any party is John Carroll doing a deadly impersonation of Nelson Eddy singing, Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life. Even Nelson himself would love the wild flourishing and melodramatic warbling!

A Relative Matter

There are always a couple of weak links in a family, even if it's a movie star's. If you have a lazy uncle who stopped working when McKinley was president, or a younger brother whose idea of achievement is getting the 8 ball into a side pocket, you know what we mean.

But while your relatives may mooch an occasional buck or two, movie stars' relatives too often take it for granted that when there's an actor in the family he ought to immediately assume responsibility for the entire clan.

At this very moment, one of the screen's top-notch feminine stars is being politely blackmailed by her own aunt. Aunty either gets a bigger allowance or a couple of family skeletons will begin rattling—and not too gently, either! The star is raging. She'd like nothing better than to phone the F. B. I. and turn her chiseling relative in. Unfortunately, however, there's a clause in her contract (as there are in many others) specifying that all family leeches must be provided for in order to avoid unfavorable publicity.

Do you wonder that dozens of our leading players are almost driven to do what one not-too-bright cinema blonde did? She wrote a letter to mathematically-minded Albert Einstein, asking if she could consult him on a problem of relativity!

Reluctant Dragon

It's a funny tale that Columnist Hedda Hopper tells about Sir Cedric Hardwicke's initial get-together with playwright George Bernard Shaw.

Hardwicke heard one day that the great Irish dramatist considered him the finest actor in the business. Thrilled as a babe, he approached Shaw and asked if it were true.

Shaw looked at him coldly. "Heavens, no!" he snapped. "You're my fifth choice. The four Marx Brothers come first!"

Disa and Data

Robert Preston once played Julius Caesar in a stock company headed by Ty Power's mother . . . By the time "I'll Take Manila" is completed, Eleanor Powell will have gone through 150 pairs of hose. She requires four a day; pays around $8 a pair . . . Carole Landis, advised by wire that her lonesome Great Dane had pined down to 170 pounds, flew all the way from New York personally to feed him his raw meat . . . Radio's darling, Kay Kyser, doesn't own a radio of his own . . . Ona Munson who just finished slinking her way through "Shanghai Gesture," won't step before the camera unless she's wearing a wig. Says it's the only way she can forget herself and get into character . . . Orson Welles says he and his Dolores will go to the altar in January . . . Ray MacDonald's pals have nick-named him "Pinocchio." They think he looks like the little guy . . . Carmen Miranda's real bosses are not 20th Century-Fox, but Olsen and Johnson! They were responsible for her discovery in South America and now share her contract with the Shuberts . . . The result of Myron Selznick's commission suit against ex-client Errol Flynn resulted in a settlement for 40,000 bucks . . . John Hubbard and Rochester both own prize fighters. Their battling babies fought the other evening. Hubbard's boy won . . . Hollywood's tittering at that comedian who, failing to be recognized by fans, walks up to them and introduces himself. He also snatches their autograph books and insists upon presenting them with his signature—on the space reserved for Gable and Taylor . . . The Louis Haywards (Ida Lupino) own a dog named "Edward-Who-Is-Not-To-Pick-The-Flowers." Don't ask us why! . . . On her 18th birthday, Linda Darnell threw off the shackles of time-clock punching, a welfare-worker chaperon and four hours of daily school work!

Panta-Loonies

Ann Sothern visited Ann Sheridan on the night location of "Juke Girl."

"Sothern," said Sheridan, "I've got a fashion tip for you. 'Oomph' undies, they're called. C'mon away from these wolves and I'll give you a peek."

Off in a corner, Ann Sheridan looked cautiously around. Then she raised her skirt high above her thighs. "Like 'em?" she asked, coyly.

Ann Sothern looked—and gulped. For embracing the Sheridan shape, from hip bone to knee-top, was a pair of heavy pink woolies! It gets mighty chilly on night locations, and a cold draft, looking for a place to land, apparently doesn't know the difference between a movie star and a manicurist!

SELF-MADE SIREN

(Continued from page 35)

minute with the wind roaring in your ears and blowing your hair?'

"That was five years ago," Bill smiled. "She's got that convertible now—a long, slinky Buick—and every cop in Hollywood knows it personally. Boy, has she collected tickets for speeding—and talk about accidents! Nothing serious, you know. A fender here and a mud guard there. She spent so much time talking to judges in traffic courts the studio had to ground her while they were making 'This Woman Is Mine.' What a gal!

"Anyway, she kept winning contests right and left, and eventually she got a chance to sing for Nat Brusiloff, program director for WOR. Nat introduced her to Mike Spector, an agent, who—as everyone knows—was her Svengali. He had her teeth straightened, her nose remodelled, her figure streamlined. He gave her voice lessons and cured her Brooklyn accent. He even gave her a new name, adapted from Nat Brusilloff's daughter Carol's. Then he got her the series of jobs that eventually landed her in 'Louisiana Purchase' on Broadway.

"Gosh, it sounds simple when you rattle it off like that—but I'll never forget the months of mi-mi-mi-ing while she was getting her voice in shape. And how she couldn't chew gum—which she craves—on account of the braces, and how embarrassed she was at first talking completely un-Brooklyny. 'Gee,' she'd keep saying every few sentences. 'Me and Katie Hepburn.' Then she'd yell out to the kitchen—'Hey, Mom, culture comes to Flatbush. Come on in and listen to me talk.'

WELL, the night 'Louisiana Purchase' opened, I was in the second row—teeth chattering like anything. I didn't see a thing until Carol came on. She came out on the stage kind of hesitantly and I was close enough to see she was trembling. I found out later she'd cried in her dressing room for an hour before and had to be literally pushed on the stage. Maybe I imagined it, but it seemed to me a sort of gasp went up from the crowd when they first saw her—Lord, she looked wonderful!—and after she'd finished 'The Lord Done Fixed Up My Soul' in that indescribable velvety voice, fifteen hundred blasé first nighters clapped and clapped till I thought my heart would burst I was so proud of her. After the show I went back-stage, and the place was mobbed. Messengers running with flowers, the press begging for interviews, and dozens and dozens of stage door johnnies. At last her door opened and she came out. She tried to get through the wall of black coats and white shirts, scared and sort of bewildered. One chap took her arm—'Miss Bruce, I'm Al Bloomingdale. I wonder if you'd join our table at El Morocco.' Another one wanted her for supper at Twenty One.

"She smiled blindly at everyone and kept going till she found what she wanted. 'Oh Mom!' She threw her arms around a quiet little woman standing in the back. 'And Pop!' A big hug for the oldish, chubby man looking uncomfortable but unspeakably proud in his recently acquired tails. 'Oh and Bill. Gee!' We ploughed out of the place, and after Mr. and Mrs. Levy had gone home, she turned to me and said, 'You know what I'd really like to do?' 'You name it,' I told her. 'The Stork, El Morocco—' 'What I'd really like,' she said, 'is to ride for miles and miles on a Fifth Avenue bus. On top where the wind can blow my hair from here to blazes. Want to?' We invested in two bags of peanuts and rode up and down Riverside Drive for three hours, holding hands, counting stars, not talking much about anything.

"By the time 'Louisiana' had run a year, the Hollywood offers were so tempting that Carol kissed Broadway and Bill good-bye and signed up with Universal. I'd read about her in the columns every night. About how she was living alone and loving it in a penthouse in Beverly Hills; and how she was being seen everywhere with Matty Fox, but that her heart really belonged to her Pygmalion, Mike Spector. All of which gave me a few laughs, as I knew from Carol's letters she was living on the second floor of a two-family house with her mom and her sister Marilyn. Matty Fox is her boss and she Ciro's with him occasionally, but I'm optimist enough to believe her when she says, 'it definitely ain't love.' With Carol and Mike it's strictly business only.

"I trekked out to Los Angeles not long ago on business, and naturally I dropped over to Carol's. I was crazy to see her, but in a way I was scared. She was big time now; she couldn't help having changed a little bit. I walked down the charming quiet street their house is on and thought back to a noisy block in Brooklyn, with kids yelling in the street and the smell of suppers cooking from every window. There, finally, was the house. I stopped and looked at it a second—trim and lovely. No wash lines strung all over the place. No mangy palm in the living room window. I tore up the stairs, rang the bell, and in a second there was Carol. She had on navy blue slacks and a big red bow in her hair. 'Hi Garbo,' I said, and she dragged me inside.

"The house was done in royal blue with a lot of mirrors. 'Hollywood Empire,' she informed me without enthusiasm. 'It came with the place.' A huge radio-victrola was bleating 'Blue Champagne,' Mrs. Levy was in the kitchen looking just the same as ever, simple and kindly, and Marilyn was bounding in and out periodically with hordes of cronies. So this, I thought to myself, was Glamour at home. Gosh, I was relieved!

"We went bowling that night, and on the way home we talked about stuff and things. 'Well, I got the car, Bill,' she said—'It's in the shop right now, fender trouble, and Mom doesn't have to sew anymore, and Marilyn has a new bike. But I still can't believe any of it's real.' I pointed to a theater marquee across the street. Carol Bruce in big white lights. 'It's real,' I said. 'Honey, that's you.' She looked up at me, those bright blue eyes suddenly serious. 'Nope—isn't it funny, Bill. That's not me. I look different and I talk different, but inside I'm still Shirley.'

BILL stopped talking to me for a second and looked thoughtful. "And that's the swellest part of her. Nothing real and good about her has changed. She'd still rather go bowling with 'the kids'—as she's always called her pals since way back at Erasmus Hall—than have a date with Clark Gable. She doesn't drink, but she's not a bit W. C. T. U.-ish about it. She hasn't gone in for flashy clothes. Lives in suits and tailored things, though her evening clothes are definitely siren. She's still embarrassed in a too-low decolletage. She doesn't affect a taste for 'good' music or 'good' books. The Carol I used to know loved swing and Kathleen Norris, and she still does, God bless her. Her whole living room is strewn with records—and not a symphony among them—just Goodman, Shaw and her beloved Calloway. She puts on a record the first thing in the morning, and she always listens to something just before she goes to bed. Music is a religion with her. She's not ashamed of her mother, though she talks with an accent and refuses flatly to glam up even slightly. She can still speak 'Brooklyn' with the best of us when she wants to—often does when she gets excited—and Lord, what a Dodger fan! She's living right now for the next World Series." He paused and we prodded him.

What about Carol and him? "Well, I guess the way I feel kind of sticks out all over, doesn't it? But Carol—no, she's not in love. I think she looks on me as sort of a brother. Listen to what she wrote me the other day." He pulled a letter out of his pocket. "No romance yet, Bill. The right guy just hasn't hove in sight. But when he does, boy, watch me go to work on him!" I think she'd like to get married, but she wants love to sock her between the eyes. None of this lukewarm stuff for Carol. In the meantime, I'm sort of hanging around . . ."

Yeah, Bill. You and ninety-nine other guys. Now we know the reason why.

New under-arm
Cream Deodorant
safely
Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses, or men's shirts. Does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration, keeps armpits dry.
4. A pure white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering, for being harmless to fabrics.

Arrid is the largest selling deodorant . . . try a jar today

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS

(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

FREE ENLARGEMENT Just to get acquainted with new customers, we will beautifully enlarge one snapshot print or negative, photo or picture to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose this ad with 10c for handling and return mailing. Information on hand tinting in natural colors sent immediately. Your original returned with your free enlargement. Send it today.
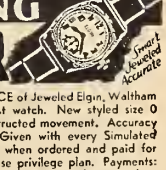
Geppert Studios, Dept. 163, Des Moines, Iowa

LOOK AT THIS AMAZING WATCH and RING OFFER

LEATHER OR LINK BRACELET



Choice of ELGIN WALTHAM ILLINOIS Movement

One year TO PAY IN FULL

LATEST styled 1941 ring. 1/30 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with 7/K. 50 point, Simulated Diamond and six brilliants

YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin, Waltham or Illinois wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $3.50 anytime within a year (total only $7.00). Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.

A. KENDALL JEWELERS
Dept. MM-142 Topeka, Kan.

When Chest Colds Strike Give-

—give the important job of relieving miseries to the IMPROVED Vicks treatment that takes only 3 minutes and makes good old Vicks VapoRub give BETTER THAN EVER RESULTS!

ACTS 2 WAYS AT ONCE to bring relief . . . PENETRATES to upper breathing passages with soothing medicinal vapors . . . STIMULATES chest and back surfaces like a warming poultice . . . and WORKS FOR HOURS to ease coughs, relieve muscular soreness or tightness, and bring real comfort.

To get this improved treatment—just massage VapoRub for 3 minutes ON BACK as well as throat and chest, then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warmed cloth. Try it!

For Better Results

VICKS VAPORUB

The Improved Way

DRI-KLEEN CLEANS FABRICS LIKE NEW!

SEND 10c for one gallon trial packet

DRI-KLEEN cleans and de-moths suits, dresses, rugs, upholstery, etc., at trifling cost. Removes grease, fruits, perspiration and other stubborn stains like magic. Odorless! Non-explosive! Never injures hands or skin! Economical 50c size makes 10 gallons cleaning finid. At your dealer's—or order direct, postpaid, from DRI-KLEEN • 180 W. LAKE ST. • CHICAGO, ILL.

Stop that Itch

Relieve itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, rashes and other skin troubles. Use cooling antiseptic D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Stops itching quickly. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Ask your druggist for D.D.D. Prescription.

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

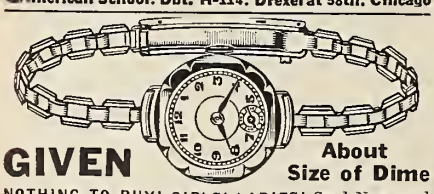
Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H. S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School. Dpt. H-114. Drexel at 58th. Chicago



GIVEN About Size of Dime

NOTHING TO BUY! GIRLS! LADIES! Send Name and Address. Charming Watch or Big Cash Commission. Send No Money. Given—SIMPLY GIVE AWAY FREE Colored Pictures with famous White Cloverine Brand Salve for mild burns and chaps, easily sold to friends at 25c a box (with picture FREE) and remitting as per catalog. SPECIAL: Choice of 25 premiums for returning only $3 collected. 46th yr. Nothing to buy. Send for Salve and pictures, postage paid by us.

WILSON CHEM. CO., INC., DEPT. 10-32, TYRONE, PA.

HELLO EVVABODY

(Continued from page 49)

both hands. Where Sully knocks himself out laughing at something, you may, if you look fast, detect the melancholy ghost of a smile on Ish's face.

Kay buzzes around, the hardest-working of the lot. Their schedule includes pictures, a weekly broadcast, four to eight recordings a month, barnstorming and hotel dates. The business for all this goes on in Kay's bean. Every chance he gets, he heads for his dressing room, flops on the couch for five minutes, arms hanging, then downs a sandwich and a milk shake, his slogan being: "When things get tough, eat." Those five minutes, he swears, are as good as an hour's sleep. Despite tension and an appearance of skinniness, he weighs a hundred and ninety, all muscle. "Punch it," he invites doubters.

HAL KEMP got him started. They put on a couple of musicals together at North Carolina with Kay directing the show and Hal the music. Before Hal left college, taking his band with him, he talked Kay into organizing another for dear old N.C. Kay knew nothing about music except that he liked it. So he abandoned his A.B. course and enrolled for classes in theory, harmony, arranging, sight-reading and the clarinet.

The South took his band to its heart, so they tried their luck in Ohio during summer vacation and got the cockiness knocked out of them. But to James Kern Kyser a sock in the jaw means fight. He dusted himself off, went back to college, found new men, enlarged the band and worked like mad to give it the polish it needed.

One day their rehearsal was interrupted by a knock. The man who stood in the doorway said: "I stopped for a look at the campus on my way up from Florida and heard your music. Sounds good to me. I'm Al Lang, run Meadow Beach at Mentor-on-the-Lake in Ohio. Like to hire you boys for the summer." The figure he named convinced Kay he was kidding.

Just in case he wasn't, Kay tore round to Western Union. "Find out who Al Lang of Meadow Beach is," he wired a friend.

"Relax," came the answer. "He only owns half the town." As their first conquest of the North, that summer remains one of their sweetest memories.

The next crisis developed a couple of years later. They'd worn themselves out in the territory they'd been working and were perilously close to the rocks when an offer came from the Bal Tabarin in San Francisco. If they made the grade, they could stay indefinitely. If not, they were through in four weeks. In the parlor of Kay's Rocky Mount home, the boys debated. They decided to chance it.

If they didn't steal, they begged and borrowed to the limit. Driving their own cars, some of them had to break penny banks to get across the last toll bridge to the Golden Gate!

Kay says they didn't play very well that night. But Frisco liked their infectious spirit of good will, which was then pretty much as it is now. "And if Frisco likes you," says Kay, "they don't care how bad you are." The Bal Tabarin kept them on for a year. Then they were grabbed by the Del Mar Club at Santa Monica.

It was while they were playing the Del Mar that a dark-eyed beauty walked in with her mother one day and asked for an audition. She'd sung with a trio at Fresno College and got herself a couple of dates in San Francisco after graduation. Kay thought she was swell, but he couldn't afford a girl singer. The day he could, he told Miss Virginia Simms, he'd send for her.

The day came in Chicago. Just as they thought night had settled down for good. They'd been engaged by the Black Hawk Café—their first big tryout east of the Mississippi. Fate seemed bent on trying them out, too. The drummer found the lock of his car picked and all his equipment lifted. Sure it was insured, but meantime he had nothing to play on. Gandee, guardian of the music scores, lost his way across the Rockies. In the midst of rehearsal, the bandstand caved in on them, breaking sundry instruments and damaging arms. At the last minute Sully Mason couldn't find his uniform.

None of which would have mattered if they'd clicked. But Chicago was a hotbed of bands, and Chicago said "So what?" to Kay Kyser's. Business didn't build. An apartment elevator fell, carrying half a dozen of the boys with it. A few weeks later one of the wives bore a premature baby. He's a healthy five-year-old now, but for a while it was touch and go with mother and child. Gloom enveloped them all. . . .

Till the Christmas holidays brought a torrent of trade to the Black Hawk. Boys and girls swamped the place. Attendance records were made that have never been broken. The band became an overnight sensation. Kay sent for Ginny Simms. From then on the ball never stopped rolling.

SASSY SULLY, George Duning and Ish have been with Kay from the start. Next in point of service come Gandee and Lloyd Snow. The boys were playing Washington and Jefferson College when Gandee wandered over from Uniontown. "Listen to me play?" he asked Kay. They listened as a gag, but before he'd finished Kay was figuring how he could use two pianos. Duning, the pianist, had long been ambitious to do arranging. So Kay gave him a year off to study at the conservatory, after which he returned as official arranger.

Snow, just out of the Navy, happened in at the Del Mar Club and asked Kay to let him know if he ever needed a bass player. "Need one right now," said Kay. "Let's try it." Harry Babbitt had his own band in St. Louis, for which he played sax and clarinet and sang. Kay offered him so much just to sing that he couldn't afford to turn it down.

Ish got his name from Irving Berlin's song, which he put across to such purpose years ago that the handle stuck. "Why not?" the professor queries. "His real name's Merwyn Bogue. Who wouldn't rather be Ish Kabibble?" He contrived his own antic haircut. It's quite simple. Comb it down and he looks like Dracula with bangs. Comb it back, and you wouldn't recognize the guy. In his normal, non-simpleton guise he's the band's paymaster.

Exclusive of Babbitt and Kay, the boys number thirteen. When he has to pick a new one, Kay investigates character and personality first, musicianship second. Otherwise, he makes only one arbitrary rule. No moustaches. He can't abide 'em. They travel by train or plane now—no more jaloppies—and boast eight natty changes of costume. On their radio program, they wear red-lettered white sweaters, which spell Lucky Strike when they run in and line up like a football team.

Hollywood's been their base since they started making pictures. A tight little group, they travel around together and often wind up at Ginny's, who lives with her father and mother and likes to rustle snacks for the boys. Outsiders are excluded from their yearly anniversary party. It's been rumored that on these occasions the boys allow Kay a few pipes on the clarinet. They talked him out of public performances long ago. His feelings were a little hurt, but he yielded for the greater good of the greater number.

The Kollege of Musikal Knowledge is four years old. Kay wanted something new for a second engagement at the Black Hawk, so the boys put their heads together. The boss stipulated audience participation, Sully dreamed up the name, someone else suggested a musical quiz, and little by little the thing took shape. Its success is largely tied up with Kay's ad libbing. "You should have heard the first three performances," he groans. No one else remembers them. With the fourth, he hit his stride and after sixteen hilarious weeks at the Black Hawk, Lucky Strike bought the Kollege.

As indicated earlier, Kay has a healthy respect for his fans. Nervous and hurried though he generally is, he'll always stop to sign autographs. First, because he's grateful. Second, because he's kindly. Third, because he considers any other policy shortsighted. If he tells a kid at the stage door he'll be back in five minutes, he's back in five minutes. He takes time to write "Thinkin' of you" over his signature. He heeds suggestion from his listeners. When a number of people wrote in that "Good-by, evvabody" sounded too final, he switched to "S'long, evvabody." He aches in sympathy with quizzees petrified by mike fright. He knows the feeling. That's why he sometimes lays the answer in their laps.

QUESTIONS most frequently asked by fans are whether this or that one's married, whether his Southern accent's real, who little Audrey is, why he says, "Yet's dance." (He says "Yet's dance" because in No'th Calina they don't bother with l's.) He finds that their novelty songs are the prime favorites—Little Red Fox, Bad Humor Man—and predicts that Romeo Smith and Juliet Jones from "Playmates" will soon join the number.

He's a good man to work for. Finding himself with three clear weeks before "Playmates" started, he toured the army camps, paying his boys full salary. Radio-conscious, he noticed that five of the camps lacked good machines and sent each a radio-phonograph, plus what he considered a representative collection of records. Not till Randolph Field wired: "What, no Kyser records?" did he catch the omission.

They like him at RKO. One reason may be apparent in the way he handled his close-of-the-picture party. Such parties are a Hollywood institution. Stars from other sets are invited, and executives and heads of departments. To his, Kay invited only those who had worked on the set through most of the shooting. "It's for us," he said. "So we can laugh and have fun over things that happened on the picture. Besides, if the grips and juicers see department heads around, they might get self-conscious and not enjoy themselves."

Kay and Ginny gave another party on the eve of the band's departure for a tour. For the first time in four years Ginny wasn't going. She kissed each of them good-by, and hers weren't the only wet eyes.

After "You'll Find Out" RKO hinted that they might want to sign her to a long-term contract. She consulted Kay. He said: "Don't rush it. Let them come to you." This year they made a definite offer and, again on Kay's advice, she took it.

It wasn't a happy feeling to quit the band but, sooner or later, she knew it would have to come. She's been signed to her own broadcast, too, the first sponsored five-minute program in radio. Kay says: "It's best for Ginny. The rest doesn't matter." Asked who would replace her, he'd answer briefly: "Nobody can replace her." Her successors, however, are Trudy Erwin and Dorothy Dunn, names unknown at this writing. Kay picked them for ability, not reputation.

Whether Kay and "the lovely lady with the beautiful voice" are married remains a mystery. Most people think they're not but will be and wonder what they're waiting for. They look domestic enough, when you bump into them at the Farmers Market, Ginny dropping small packages into a large market basket trundled by Kay, who wails: "What'm I doin' here, when I could be makin' music!" He fools nobody 'cause his eyes are filled with utter contentment.

I tried to pump what the newspapers call a well-informed source. "You ask 'em," said the source, shrugging his shoulders. "All I know is Kay's crazy about her. Sometimes I think they're married, sometimes I don't, and I hope to God I never find out till he tells me."

1.
Haenigsen
UPSET AS HUSBAND SAWS OFF CHRISTMAS TREE, MESSING UP NEWLY VACUUMED RUG
2.
BUT RECOVERS WHEN HUSBAND PRESENTS CHRISTMAS GIFT...A BISSELL FOR QUICK, THOROUGH CLEAN-UPS
3.
COMPLETELY HAPPY AS BISSELL'S HI-LO BRUSH CONTROL ADJUSTS ITSELF INSTANTLY TO NAP-LENGTH OF ANY RUG, CLEANING THOROUGHLY 4.
REGISTERS DELIGHT AS BISSELL'S "STA-UP" HANDLE STANDS UP ALONE WHEN SHE WANTS TO MOVE CHAIR
5.
PEEKS AT TOY BISSELL FOR DAUGHTER. RESOLVES TO USE EASY-EMPTYING BISSELL FOR ALL DAILY CLEAN-UPS .... SAVING VACUUM FOR HEAVY-DUTY CLEANINGS
6. See the Bissell Leaders, $3.95 to $7.50 —and others even lower
The "FLIGHT" $6.95
with the new "Feather Touch" Empty
BISSELL SWEEPERS
SWEEP QUICKLY—EMPTY EASILY
BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

ATTENTION, INFORMATION DESK FANS!

We're closing for alterations and won't be able to answer your letters any more. Watch our space for a brand new department!

THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON

(Continued from page 51)

Phil Sheridan for trial. Sheridan, struck with Custer's quiet refusal to tell why he had assaulted a superior officer, dismissed the case on a technicality. But a pattern of hatred and enmity had already been born between Custer and Sharp and Taipe. One that only death could end. And before death stepped in, though they could not know it yet, blood would be shed and lives lost because of it. . . .

The outbreak of the Civil War saw the country in need of every trained combatant it could muster. So, although Taipe protested it violently, Custer was graduated with his class. And it was at the graduation exercises that he met Sheridan's dark and very lovely niece, Beth Bacon. She was from Monroe, Michigan, as was Custer himself. But the Bacons, the wealthiest family in town, and the Custers, plain hard-working people, had not known each other.

NOW, when Colonel Sheridan smilingly suggested Custer show her around the West Point grounds, she did not hide her interest in the tall, blond young soldier. A little flustered by her teasing, her provocative charm, Custer repaid her coquetries with talk about the only thing he was interested in—his eagerness to be in the thick of the fighting. This very evening he was taking an early train to Washington, where he was confident he would get an assignment with the 2nd Cavalry.

Her open disappointment that he was not remaining for the dance, her coaxing that he stay over another train, would have flattered any other man. But he only shook his head, repeated that if he didn't leave when he had planned, there would be no vacancies left in the Cavalry. Suddenly cool under his refusal to stay, she murmured she would not dream then of detaining him and turned away. He was uncomfortable under her changed manner but unwavering in his determination. He thought then that it was the only thing in the world he wanted. He did not realize yet that Beth Bacon's image was already indelible in his heart.

It was to be long and embattled weeks before he saw her again. In Washington he had waited day after futile day in the outer office of the Adjutant General, for an interview. Yet others were receiving commissions and appointments. At last, when he had almost despaired of doing it, he did manage to see the official. It was Taipe, who, with great satisfaction, told Custer coolly that he could wait until every other competent officer had been assigned to a fighting unit.

Through General Winfield Scott, Custer was at last recommended for an officer's commission in the 2nd Cavalry. But Taipe unscrupulously blocked it by assuring Custer there wasn't an available horse to be obtained in Washington. For answer, Custer mounted Taipe's own thoroughbred and rode off to 2nd Cavalry Headquarters. And once there, the pattern repeated itself again. For his immediate superior officer was the openly sneering Ned Sharp, who reminded Custer that this time he would have to toe the mark under his command.

He was to be proven wrong about that, for the next day the Cavalry fought at Bull Run Creek. And it was Custer, deliberately riding against Sharp's orders, who held the bridge with his tiny handful of men until reinforcements could arrive. After which they carried him to the field hospital, his right arm shot numb.

Marching down the corridor triumphant, Sheridan decorated him for bravery. Just then Beth came into the ward. Custer's heart twisted at the sight of her. But wounded pride froze the compassion in her voice. She spoke curtly and walked by. The monotonous rows of silent beds, her sudden, stabbing awareness of death, brought her to. She was back—telling him.

But when he was able to return to Monroe, he told her unhappily that he couldn't ask her to leave her luxurious home for the rigors of army life. She raised steadfast eyes to his, refused to listen to him. They could be married immediately.

That evening, though, with the grim news that Lee and Stuart were attacking from the South, Custer was ordered back to his regiment with a General's commission. Taipe fought to block the appointment. Custer was insubordinate, he roared. But it was Custer's very insubordination, riding against orders, that brought him victory at Gettysburg.

His return home was pure triumph. People shouted his name, threw their hats into the air. But Custer had eyes only for the proud, radiant girl waiting for him. They were married that day with General Sheridan best man.

THEIR marriage was ideal, but, with peace restored, private life did not sit well with Custer. There seemed to be nothing he could do—and the opportunities he was offered would only have made flagrant political use of his name. For instance, the visit of Ned Sharp. Outwardly friendly now, Sharp and his father called one day to offer him a huge salary to head the Western Railroad Land & Trading Company, organized for the development of the Dakota Territories. Custer's contemptuous refusal added fuel to an already blazing enmity.

It was Beth, seeing his restless unhappiness, who secretly begged Sheridan to put him back on active service. He suspected nothing when the War Department ordered him to Fort Lincoln, Nebraska, to take charge of a regiment of Cavalry. He only knew the joy of doing something again.

Fort Lincoln, Custer bitterly discovered, was an appalling mess. The post was a shambles of untrained soldiers given to drinking and roistering. They obtained the liquor at the Trading Company building. And the owner of the Trading Company was Ned Sharp, who dared Custer to close the bar. It was run on Government franchise. Custer's ultimatum was brief, ominous. Every time he found it open, he would beat Sharp to a pulp. Sharp closed the bar. But his shifty eyes glared a promise of future retaliation.

Under Custer's iron hand, the immortal 7th Cavalry was born. A regiment whom he had fired with the desire to die with their boots on. And also, under his leadership, was born the peace treaty with the Sioux Indians. Their proud-faced Chief, Crazy Horse, gave the tribe's word they would abandon all territory except the Black Hills—in return for the White Man's promise that this region would never be molested. If that word were broken, every hostile tribe as far west as the Great Waters would gather for the most savage Indian massacre in history.

An era of peace and prosperity followed—prosperous for all but Ned Sharp and the two owners of the Trading Company—the elder Sharp and General Taipe. The westward pathway of their railroad had been blocked. Yet when Taipe arrived in Fort Lincoln with a Governmental appointment of Special Commissioner, Custer was not suspicious. He even ordered a review of the 7th Cavalry in Taipe's honor the next day—a fateful day. Swelling pride froze on his face when the squadron galloped into review. For every cavalryman was so drunk he could barely sit in his saddle.

With eyes that were terrible in their avenging fury, Custer strode into the wide-open Trading Company bar. Sharp's face was a mask of triumph. Berserk with rage, Custer threw Sharp across the bar, then attacked Taipe. For which Taipe, the accumulated venom of the years under his voice, ordered Custer court-martialed.

Custer's mood was black on the way to Washington to answer the charges against him. Even Beth's devoted assurance that no one could blame him brought no comfort. He had failed. And it was on the train that Custer learned, through the newspapers, of the reputed gold strike in the Black Hills. Already the territory was filling with prospectors. That must have been, Beth cried, what Mrs. Taipe had meant when she said thousands of people were coming to the Dakotas. She had said it days ago. And it was only yesterday the gold had been discovered. There was no gold. It was a conspiracy to break the Peace Treaty. To do it, Sharp and Taipe had had to get rid of him—Custer. They had deliberately incited him to assault. And now, the Dakotas would be on the verge of an Indian massacre.

But at the Congressional Inquiry, Custer's frantic warning was received in stony indifference. Mrs. Taipe's comment was only hearsay, they told him. Such evidence was only admissible in the case of a Dying Declaration, when the words were repeated or written in the certain knowledge of approaching death.

Defeated, his command only temporarily restored, Custer returned to Fort Lincoln. He was walking into certain death. But there was no sign of it on his face as he walked into Sharp's bar, suggested they have a drink together. Sharp was already more than a little drunk. A very few drinks later, his body slumped to the floor. Custer had the unconscious man bound, loaded into an Army supply wagon.

He went then to do the hardest thing he had ever had to do in his life. To say good-bye to Beth as though there were a chance of his coming back, ever—knowing as he did it that, with a

* Modern Screen's New Way of Rating Films

Point 1—According to its production value: Expensiveness of cast, settings, etc. Rating, A, B, or C.

Point 2—According to artistic value: Taste screen play, direction. Rating, A, B, or C.

Point 3—According to entertainment value. Rating, 1, 2, or 3.

In the review section of this issue of Modern Screen, only the first seven films have been reviewed and rated. Following them, the editors present a brief synopsis of every other picture to be released during the current month, leaving each reader the option of judging them on the basis of his or her own tastes and preferences.

bravery which matched his own, she would pretend that she believed him.

In the dawn, in his tent high in the mountain encampment, Custer scanned the pages he had been writing all night. Then he summoned a messenger, ordered him to deliver the letter to Fort Lincoln at once. Crook's column of Infantry, the messenger reported, had all been massacred. And now Crazy Horse was heading North to massacre Terry's outfit. Custer rose, his face grim. General Terry's infantry would have no chance of stopping six thousand Indians. Unless—Custer and his regiment could try and head them off.

He went out into the dawn, unlocked the supply wagon where Sharp, sober now, demanded to be released. Silently Custer complied. Sharp looked around in terror. The country was swarming with Indians. It would be murder to turn him loose without protection. To which Custer answered calmly that the regiment was riding in an hour. Sharp could ride with it if he chose. In answer to the other's shaking query as to where the regiment was riding, Custer's head was up, his voice ringing. It was riding, he said clearly, to Hell—or to Glory.

Only he knew it would be both. And that before the sun had risen, hero and coward alike would be given their chance to die with their boots on.

In the almost deserted Trading Company's office, Beth, fragile and poignantly pale in her widow's weeds, with General Sheridan standing protectingly at her shoulder, confronted Taipe and the elder Sharp with the letter Custer had written that night. It was a letter saying only what Custer had tried to say at the Congressional Inquiry. But he had written it in the certain anticipation of death, and as such, its information would be received in any court as a Dying Declaration. Its contents were sufficient to ruin Taipe and the elder Sharp. His throat dry with fear, Taipe offered to buy the letter for ten thousand dollars.

There was a price on the letter, Beth admitted. Her husband's price. First, that the Trading Company be dissolved. Broken by his son's death, there was no doubting the truth of Sharp's words as he promised it. And Mr. Taipe, Beth went on evenly, must resign his office as Commissioner. Silently defeated, Taipe signed the resignation put before him. And there was one more price. Beth addressed her next words to General Sheridan. The price the Administration must pay. It must make good its word to Crazy Horse.

That, General Sheridan told her gently, he had authority to answer. Authority from the President himself. He picked up Taipe's resignation, offered Beth his arm, smiling his pride and encouragement down at her as they left the room. Her soldier, he reminded her, had won his last fight after all.

She smiled bravely back at him. A hero's widow could do no less.

THE CAST

George A. Custer.....Errol Flynn
Elizabeth Bacon ("Beth" Custer) Olivia de Havilland
Samuel Bacon, Esq. Gene Lockhart
Fitzhugh Lee.....Regis Toomey
Major Romulus Taipe..... Stanley Ridges
Ned Sharp.....Arthur Kennedy
William Sharp...Walter Hampden
Gen. Phil Sheridan.....John Litel
Lt. "Queen's Own" Cook..... George P. Huntley, Jr.
Crazy Horse.....Anthony Quinn
California Joe...Charlie Grapewin
Sergeant Doolittle..Joseph Sawyer
Captain Webb.....Frank Wilcox
Captain McCook...Selmer Jackson
Senator Smith.....Minor Watson
Lt. Frazier.....DeWolf Hopper

"THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON"

(Continued from page 51)

reproduction of Custer's Last Stand at Little Big Horn, June 25, 1876. . . In spite of every possible precaution for the safety of over 1000 horsemen, 2 men were killed and dozens more injured . . . not one horse was so much as scratched . . . 2 ambulances, 2 doctors, 4 first aid men and nurses were standing by at all times . . . to weed out inexpert riders from among the applicants, Director Raoul Walsh had everyone jump his mount over a huge hedge-barricade, especially designed to show up flaws in horsemanship . . . Warners shelled out $100 a day to rent the Agoura Mesa, Hollywood's favorite battlefield . . . Flynn wields the actual sword used by Custer during the historic battle . . . Entire action of the Stand was caught by 8 cameras mounted on a 60 foot tower of welded tubular steel. . . . The exact replica of Fort Lincoln, built inside a stockade covering 5 acres, is seen on the screen for less than one reel . . . Olivia de Havilland's 15 changes of costly costumes dented the studio budget as deeply as their expensive battle scenes.

Greetings from

PHILIP MORRIS

America's Finest Cigarette

For Christmas giving—in gay Holiday packings

"When Busy Hands are CHAPPED"

MUST the hands that are busy all day suffer from chapping, cracking, or redness? No! If they are chapped, you will be delighted with the comforting effect of Mentholatum applied to the stinging, red, or cracked skin. Mentholatum quickly cools and soothes the irritation. It also assists Nature to more quickly heal the injured skin. Jars or tubes, 30c. For generous free trial size write Mentholatum Co., 156 Harlan Building, Wilmington, Del.

Recommended by Good Housekeeping Bureau

MENTHOLATUM

BUY DEFENSE BONDS and STAMPS

DOCTORS WARN CONSTIPATED FOLKS ABOUT LAZY LIVER

IT IS SAID constipation causes many human discomforts—headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness being but a few. BUT DON'T WORRY—For years a noted Ohio Doctor, Dr. F. M. Edwards, successfully treated scores of patients for constipation with his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now sold by druggists everywhere.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only gently yet thoroughly cleanse the bowels but ALSO stir up liver bile secretion to help digest fatty foods. Test their goodness TONIGHT without fail! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. All drugstores.

FALSE TEETH by MAIL

from WORLD'S LARGEST DENTAL PLATE MAKERS

$7.95 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL—Send No Money! Made for you from your own mouth impression! Money Back Guarantee of Satisfaction! FREE impression material, directions, catalog. U. S. Dental Co., 1555 Milwaukee Av., Dept. I-104, Chicago

U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS

START $1260 TO $2100 YEAR

Men—Women

Prepare NOW for 1942 Examinations.

Mail Coupon today sure

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. E256, Rochester, N. Y.

Sirs: Rush without charge (1) 32-page Civil Service book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.

Name .....

Address .....

CHRISTMAS—IT'S COLOSSAL

(Continued from page 39)

an alarm clock which will wake you to the tune of an Irish jig . . . Susan Hayward, half owner of an ice-cream shop on Santa Monica Boulevard, sends Christmas trees of frozen pistachio. . . . Above all gifts, George Sanders treasures that of slumber and has given notice that he'll sleep straight through the holidays.

Red Skelton's giving himself a Christmas present which simultaneously solves one of his major problems. Allergic to telephones, especially receivers, Red has a contraption installed which broadcasts incoming voices through a loudspeaker system in every room! Now he has only to sit before a mouthpiece and answer back!

LARAINE DAY thinks too many people give girls perfume and hosiery, because it's easy. She'd rather have a buck gadget for her beloved camera than a flock of nylons and has thoughtfully handed her mother a list of such gadgets, which her mother thoughtfully passes on to friends who ask. . . . Hedy Lamarr, a givin' fool, drives shopkeepers crazy, because she presents herself blandly at the last minute with a list that would choke Billy Patterson's horse and disrupts business anyhow by her simple presence. She thumbs her nose at California's May in December by painting her tree white and spraying it with tinsel, kidding herself that she's got sun sparkling on snow. Last year John Howard wrote her a Christmas letter, had it recorded and sent her the record in greeting and tribute. She put it away, saying: "I'll play it next Christmas and see if you still feel the same." He does.

On Christmas Eve the Raymonds gather a few friends—including Nelson Eddy and Allan Jones—feed them sandwiches and coffee, pile them into a truck and make the neighborhood rounds, singing Christmas carols. Carols at your window by MacDonald, Eddy and Jones aren't a bad holiday send-off. Eight next morning finds Jeanette and Gene at the Orthopedic Hospital with gifts for the children. Gene's been doing it for years, and since their marriage Jeanette's done it with him. They may bump into Bob Stack and his mother. Since Bob was a kid, the Stacks have made themselves responsible for the kids at the Orthopedic around holiday time. This year, though, they may pay their visit in advance. If Bob can get away, they'll spend Christmas at their Lake Tahoe lodge. . . . Jon Hall and Frances Langford desert Hollywood, too, for their farm in Florida. Ssss! hisses California, but the Halls grin and point out that Frances owes her first loyalty to her home state, and that Jon owes his to Frances. . . . It is a double celebration for Hump Bogart who'll celebrate his 41st birthday Christmas Day.

Bette Davis won't budge from the house, Christmas being strictly a family affair to be spent with her husband, mother, sister and brother-in-law. Her gorgeous tree was shipped all the way cross-country from her N. H. farm! The same goes for the Crosbys, whose kids feed the dogs and horses a gala breakfast before opening their own gifts. . . . Red Skelton brings six newsboys home, in memory of the days when he was a newsie himself, and Edna, his wife, scolds him for not digging up twelve. . . . Ann Sheridan invites her studio gang over—hairdresser, wardrobe woman, stand-in and favorite publicity man—presents her gifts with a casual, "Here, Jerk," and gets embarrassed as hell when they try to thank her. If driving the workmen nuts can do it, Annie will spend the holidays in her new home, the first she's ever owned. . . . So will Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul, celebrating with a dinner for both their families and visiting back and forth with Anne Shirley and John Payne, who live across the street and are close friends. Next to her nephew, Julie Anne Payne is Deanna's favorite baby. . . . John Barry and his mother will join Priscilla Lane and hers for Christmas dinner. . . . Rosemary's in New York with a show. Priscilla will return the compliment by spending New Year's at Victorville with John. . . . Ann Rutherford, who thinks servants are human, too, gives them the day off. Revelling in a kitchen to themselves, she and her mother cook dinner and serve it to a dozen guests, half of them boys in the service who can't get home. . . . Madeleine Carroll will be thinking of dear ones still farther away—the sister killed by a nazi bomb, the French orphans with whom she used to celebrate Christmas, to whom now she can only send food and clothing, wondering whether they ever reach them. . . . Geraldine Fitzgerald, from Dublin, decorated a miniature Christmas tree for the "Little People," a quaint old Irish custom.

It will be a happy day for the Bill Holdens with their appendices dropped and their options lifted. As a minor expression of gratitude, Bill has bought new robes for the Pasadena choir he used to sing with. The tree they'll trim for Brenda's little Virginia will tower in glory to the ceiling of an otherwise empty living room. Their business manager doled out enough for a down payment on the house, but decreed that furnishing would have to come out of their weekly allowance. Since Brenda gets twenty-five and Bill thirty-five, they hope to be furnished by Christmas, '42.

The star topping the Morgan tree was bought for Dennis's first Christmas and shines as brightly for his children. His parents come over on Christmas Eve, which the four adults spend with Alice and George Parrish, old friends from home. George is a music arranger, who works with Charles Previn. Next morning the Morgans greet the Christ Child in a charming ceremony. With little Kristin leading and Father Morgan bringing up the rear, they file down the stairs, carrying candles and singing "Silent Night"

MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

Ingrid Bergman and her husband stand at the window with baby Pia, who watches in breathless excitement for the star which the wise men followed. . . . Mary Livingstone opens Joanie's gifts as they arrive, sends duplicates to an orphanage and carefully re-wraps what's left. Jack feels it's a dirty trick, not on Joanie but him, since the most fun he gets out of Christmas is watching his daughter open packages.

The Ameches' place will look like Grand Central Station. A normal Sunday finds them prepared for twenty-five or thirty, so on Christmas Day the lid's off, the more the merrier and be sure to bring the kids along. By some magic of her own, Honore rules the hubbub unruffled and sends them all home happy. . . . Glenn Ford and his mother will have ten close friends in to dinner, and the closest of these is Evelyn Ankers. . . . Walter Pidgeon will flit from open house to open house, with periodic stops at his own, which is also wide open. . . . Judy and Dave will go to her mother's, if Dave can tear himself away from the new depot his new wife bought for the miniature railway he loves next best to Judy. . . . Lana Turner wakes up to find that a thoughtful Santa has heaped all her gifts at the foot of the bed. After opening each, she phones the donor her thanks. This gives her a restful day. . . . Carole goes mad, trying to hide his presents from Clark, who pries into closets like any six-year-old. She's taken to labelling packages POISON, since he pays no attention to NOT TO BE OPENED TILL CHRISTMAS. . . . Bob and Barbara spend the day with the Benny's. He gives her jewelry and luggage because he loves them. She'll give him an areoplane watch though she hates his plane. . . . Dolores Del Rio and Orson Welles are celebrating a Mexican Christmas "posada" with native Mexican singers and dancers joining in a parade around the house and gardens, carrying lighted candles and tiny statues of the Christ Child.

The Good Samaritan spirit runs rampant! Fay Holden (Ma Hardy to you) has a Wishing Well into which she and guests drop coins the year 'round. On Christmas Eve it's dredged and some fifty down-and-out families dine heartily on the proceeds! . . . Barbara Stanwyck has an arrangement whereby anyone who wants a meal at the Brown Derby is given one! "Guests" sign checks, thus avoiding any embarrassment! . . . It's the annual custom of a certain studio to invite from one to two thousand extras and their families to an elaborate feed. Toys are given youngsters, and their elders are entertained by professionals. . . . Mary Martin sends gifts to the girls she used to teach in Weathersford, Texas. . . . Mickey Rooney, too busy at the studio to do his own shopping, struck for enough time off to buy stuff for his mom. . . . Gene Autry will be with his rodeo. He remembers the men most players forget—exhibitors. Ten thousand bronze desk pads adorned with a cowboy on horseback will go out to them to say thank you from Gene for showing his pictures. . . . George Raft's quietly buying the town up for Betty and her mother and her sister and her little nephew. Betty's in despair because she knows it and can't make him quit. This is the truth. One of Betty's chief worries is the money George spends on her, one of George's that he can't spend enough. Of course, they'll both take in the opening of the Santa Anita race track. . . . Among her other toys little Maria Cooper will find a bunch of handcarvings, courtesy of Pop. On the "Ball of Fire" set Gary never stopped whittling—complicated things—a little torpedo boat, for one, which he sandpapered, painted gray and dug portholes into. People hung around, watching, hinting: "What you gonna do with 'em, Coop?" Coop blushed and allowed they were all for the kid. . . . Mae West feels definitely daunted. Says Santa Claus is the only man she doesn't know how to handle!

For a couple of the players, this Christmas will be marked by its contrast to last. Bob Sterling won't be lonely. His father, mother and two sisters have come to live with him in the Beverly house he's just bought. . . . If you'd told George Montgomery a year ago that he'd be spending next Christmas with Ginger Rogers, he'd have asked: "What's the gag?" Contrary to rumor, the romance is not on the rocks.

Strangest of all, a man who said he hated Hollywood made his words good. He could have had the town, tied up in red and green ribbons, for a Christmas gift. Instead, he's sailing the dangerous seas somewhere between Canada and Portugal on a cargo boat laden with dynamite, to help blast the schemes of the arch-enemy of peace on earth, good will to men. The Hollywood you couldn't stand salutes you, Stirling Hayden.

● ● ●

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

Joan Blondell's son, Norman, belongs to the small fry smart set. After Joan Blondell had had her baby, Dick Powell went home and told Norman that he had a baby sister. Norman was very elated, and he said to Dick Powell, "Daddy, can I phone mama and tell her the news?"

If You Were Married to HEDY LAMARR . . .

THAT'S every man's day-dream. But what sort of wife would this living synonym for glamour really make? Screen Guide visits Hedy Lamarr at home, to show you in an exciting photo-story Hedy as she might appear to her husband. See these intimate pictures—then decide whether you'd still like to marry Hedy Lamarr, if you were a man.

Other Big Features in January Screen Guide

How Hollywood Stars Go Broke: Facts and figures—not just guesses—show what wrecks movie fortunes.

Deanna Durbin: The girl who was afraid to grow up.

Cooper Gets Hep with Stanwyck: See what Barbara does to Gary in the sizzling comedy, "Ball of Fire."

Loretta Young knows how to be a lady in Hollywood.

Must Mothers Give Up Glamour? Veronica Lake is the living, lovely answer to that Hollywood question.

Abbott and Costello: Why you can't call 'em corny!

Hedda Hopper's Cafe Society catches stars off-guard.

New Stars Not Wanted: Alexis Smith tells why.

CANDID COLOR PORTRAITS of Jane Wyman, Loretta Young and Deanna Durbin (giant two-page photo) in January Screen Guide—plus news, reviews, beauty hints and the latest authentic Hollywood fashions.

SCREEN GUIDE
January 1942
HEDY LAMARR
Intimate Photos in This Issue!
Amazing Facts Reveal Why Hollywood Stars Go Broke!
What to Expect "If You Were Married to Hedy Lamarr—"
Extra! Deanna Durbin in a Beautiful Giant Colorphoto

SCREEN GUIDE JANUARY ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

MAKE CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EASIER WITH DEUBENER'S BASKETLYKE CARRIERS

Take old Santa's advice and put this attractive, convenient, strong carrier FIRST on every shopping list at YOUR Favorite Store.

You'll find them so useful to hold your Christmas Shopping Parcels, 10¢

DEUBENER'S Leatherlyke Shopping Bags, "America's Standard" for 22 years, (rope around bottom) give extra capacity, wear and value for 5¢

DEUBENER'S SHOPPING BAGS
GARFIELD PARK, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FALSE TEETH

LOW AS $7.95

90 DAYS' TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you by mail from your own impressions. You have satisfaction of MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Customers report satisfaction but you be your own judge.

SEND NO MONEY WRITE TODAY for FREE Booklet and Material.

CLEVELAND DENTAL SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. 97-A2, East St. Louis, Illinois

RINGS $1.50 PINS 30¢ up FOR YOUR CLUB!

Knit your group closer together, enhance pride of membership. Bastian's big selection, low prices, traditional quality have led the field for 46 years. Write for new Free catalog today.

BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 54, Rochester, N.Y.

POCKET CROSSWORD PUZZLES

Here's a new digest-sized puzzle magazine that fits handily into pocket or handbag, yet has large, easy-to-work diagrams. Contains 100 pages of the highest quality puzzles of varying degrees of difficulty, with many interesting novelty puzzles and features to add spice and variety.

You'll like this bright, handy new puzzle book—ask your dealer for a copy today.

Now On Sale Everywhere ● 10c

I WROTE A LETTER TO MY LOVE

(Continued from page 43)

saying about me not being an A-1 letter writer? Away one day and here I go. We had a good trip up and if you listened to the broadcast, you'll know it went off okay—I hope. Also, we'll be home a day sooner than we expected, probably Sunday, so get out the fatted calf and be prepared to say you missed me.

Tell the kids I am bringing them something each, but for the love of mike don't let 'em expect the moon. Gary informed me before I left that he wanted a motorcycle. Well, he isn't getting it—yet. And don't you expect much, either. I don't believe in spoiled wives. Treat 'em rough, I always say. Oh, what you say is different? Ouch!

Love
B

Ronald Reagan tells "Dynamite" (Jane Wyman Reagan) all about the trip to Seattle for the premiere of Warner's "Tugboat Annie." No slush, notice? It's love, streamlined.

Dear Dynamite:

If you can't read this, sue the railroad. The engineer is either a show-off or he's practising to be a broken field runner and, believe me, he has a change of pace that's as fast as a "B" picture and comes to a halt quicker than Crosby's horses. The conductor holds the record so far; he made one car-length with only two falls.

They won't serve soup in the diner; the steward says it's too hard to get off the walls. Yes, and if they let us keep on using knives, someone is going to butter the bald-headed guy at the next table.

What I'm trying to say is it's been a rough voyage. Speaking of voyages, we entered Tacoma by water and what a spot for a human interest writer. They stopped our train out along Puget Sound to transfer us to a boat. There were two boats moored to the long pier there. One boat (ours), a palatial yacht, the other the dull grey prison boat from McNeil's Island. We left our car and a dozen hand-cuffed prisoners left their barred Pullman at the same time.

It was quite a contrast as the two boats pulled away—one bound for the prison and the other headed for the fanfare of a world premiere.

Say, what am I writing this for anyway? Here I am on my way home—me and the letter will probably steam in at the same time, and won't I feel silly sitting there while you read how much I'm missing you? But if I don't write I'll get in another Gin Rummy game with Donald Crisp and lose my other half dollar.

All love,
Ronnie

Fiancé William Holden, away making "I Wanted Wings" for Paramount, writes tersely to Warner starlet Brenda Marshall. Her real name is Ardis, so don't be confused—Ardis Ankerson. They're married now.

Dear Ardis:

This place right now is like a furnace. The sun has gone down and it's 97. I think I'll be out of here in about six days. Although we had bad luck the first weeks due to sound, we can make up the time by shooting background plates.

You'll be glad to hear that I gave away my hat (the one you hated) to a drummer in a beer joint. It seems he uses a different hat for every piece, so I thought he might as well have mine to go along with the rest.

Darling, take care of yourself. I'll be home in a week.

Love,
Bill

Short Notes and Sweet Nothings Section

Barton MacLane makes a proposition, honorable and orange-blossomed, to Charlotte Wynters.

"I am lousy on dialogue. Will you direct me from now on?"

Uh-huh. She took the assignment.

Card, nestling next to gorgeous wrist watch, engraved with four hearts. The watch is enclosed in a nest of boxes, each one larger than the preceding and then wrapped in rumpled newspaper! It was Bill Powell's (Mr. Poo) gift to "Mousie" (Diana Lewis Powell) on the fourth monthly anniversary (May 5, 1940) of their marriage.

"With all my love to my 4-months bride!!!?&!"

Ray Milland pins a note to the Little Woman's lace-flounced pillow case as he leaves for an early "Skylark" location.

Dearest Mal, my favorite leading lady:

You looked asleep and too beautiful to disturb when I got up so I'm running off to location without the usual good-bye buss. You shall have to make up for it when I get home tonight—say, about eight. Don't wait dinner for me—unless you want, and I wouldn't mind if you did want to—

Ray

Buddy Rogers' proposal to Mary Pickford . . .

"I would like to use your swimming pool for the rest of my life—

Buddy"

Young Love Department

Linda Darnell, aged fourteen, writes a letter (and keeps a copy) to First-Love Jaime Jorba, Spanish refugee, in Mexico City where he has fled at the insistence of quota-minded American Immigration officials. Jorba has already over-stayed his permit because of the dark-eyed Darnell.

My very dearest Jaime:

The postman just brought your letter, post-marked Mexico City. . . . Jaime, I am so surprised. Not even a good-bye. Mother says you are very wise to go this way, and that later I will know so, too, but right now I am not at all sure. It would have been so nice to say good-bye— at least—to you.

Dallas has been simply horrible this week. Hot and dry, and the quarterly dance awful. I think if you had stayed over for it, it would have been divine, and I shall always wonder when you tell me that 'relatives' are visiting you and I won't hear from you for three days, whether you will turn up in Bataan or some place. Oh, querido, please forgive that! I didn't mean to be nasty. Only I was so surprised at the end of the three days to have a letter from you in Mexico City!

Is the import-export business exciting? I hope so, for your sake. Daddy says it is quite a good business to get into and I hope you become terrifically successful in it, and can come back to Dallas and visit us—often. I think now that I was an awful little pig not to want to meet 'Jaime Jorba' earlier when all the girls at school were talking about him. We could have had such times together!

But I simply couldn't be bothered to meet the school crush. Silly me! You know how pig-headed I was about the whole thing. When I met you it was quite different. You were —you are—so nice! I shall write you 'hundreds of letters,' as you ask. And —Jaime—of course it's always been 'yo te amo' with me about you from the very first. That's what I wanted to tell you before you left. But I'm glad you told me first, even if you had to write it.

Adios, querido,
Linda

As we go to press, comes the poignant news that Linda's Jaime has just married his cousin in Mexico City. Her farewell letter, which follows, reveals a mature Linda, who can take it on the chin gracefully—without bitterness.

Tuesday p.m.

Jaime dear—

I've written that so often. It seems strange I should be writing it now for the last time.

Shall I say I'm glad it ended like this? That wouldn't be altogether true. And it wouldn't be true either to say I'm sorry. But down deep in my heart, I know it's better for us this way.

We were both unhappy, Jaime. What hurt me most was making you unhappy. Yet I couldn't see any way out. Because we loved each other.

Yes, it was real. You wanted me to give up the movies. I couldn't, Jaime. Yet I knew it wasn't fair to keep you waiting, and my heart was torn. We thought maybe you'd be able to get to this country, knowing that even if you did, you'd hate Hollywood. I'll never forget your face that night when they turned the spotlight on us at the theatre. "You don't even belong to yourself," you said, "much less to me." If I'd looked ahead I'd have seen the end. But I suppose I didn't want to.

Your letter was so dear. Don't be sad or sorry about anything, please. It was lovely to the very end. I'll always be grateful for all your goodness to me. I'll always keep the memories—always—till I'm an old old lady and have no memory left.

And now there's nothing left to say except the most important thing of all—to wish you happiness. By the time you get this, your cousin will be your wife. I'm glad I met her, Jaime. I'm glad your wife won't be just a name to me. I'll be thinking of you together, and hoping that you both live happy forever after. That's the fairytale wish. They say if you wish it on a star, it comes true, so I've just gone to the window and wished it on a star for you and for her. I hope you won't think that's silly. Anyway, the wish goes to you both with all my heart.

Good-by and bless you.
Linda

Miss Bonita ("Bonnie") Granville, sixteen, writes a discreet note expressing maidenly interest in Drummer Boy Jackie Cooper. Three years later two of her wishes were granted—(1) they are "steadys" (2) they are making "Syncopation" together for RKO.

Friday a.m.

Dear Jackie:

There was so much excitement last night, with mother calling for me and saying goodnight to everybody and all, that I didn't thank you properly for having a wonderful time. And I didn't even mention the gardenia, did I? It was sweet of you to send it and I think you're pretty swell.

Gee, you certainly can drum—better than the time I was so angry at you for just forgetting me and paying all your attention to the jam session. And the boy with the cornet is a wonder. It's lucky he moved into the Valley; he'll be so good for your band.

Yes, like you, I'm looking forward to the time when we can go to the movies and dances and so on at night, and not have to be in so early. But, oh, well, I suppose everybody our age feels that way, anxious to grow older.

Jackie, I hope to see you more often in the future, socially, and I hope we can get a picture together some day, too. Wouldn't that be nice? Anyway, give me a jingle occasionally. Thanking you loads for a good time at the party,

Affectionately,
Bonnie

Something new—the Unsent Love Letter

Gene Tierney unearthed the following, written by her new husband, Oleg Cassini, as she rummaged through his secrétaire. It was written at a moment when Cassini thought Gene was about to wed another.

Dearest Gene:

Don't you think we are running away from ourselves?

Please break down and see me tonight. I know we can straighten things out because we love each other—didn't we say that?

Anyhow I love you as always and wish you would stop running away from the inevitable.

Oleg

P.S.—Can I send these every day to remind you to think of me?

Nostalgia Note

From seventy-ish Tully Marshall, now one of the seven professors in Goldwyn's "Ball of Fire," to Marion Fairfax who later said "yes." He was on tour with the Frohman "Gay Parisians." Date, December 12, 1898.

Dear Mike:

Here it is Sunday, and raining, and that means no bike lesson for you, and I'm sunk. That last alibi you pulled about not marrying me is the silliest yet. For three good reasons.

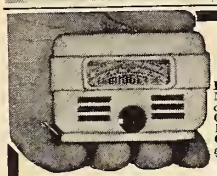
NU-GLOSS
The HAIR RINSE of the Master Hairdresser!
Used in 40,000 Beauty Salons
Now YOU Can Use It At Home!

Give your hair that extra touch of glamour—the sheen, the lustre of beautiful hair that men admire. NU-GLOSS—tints as it rinses—leaves hair soft and silky—not a permanent dye, not a bleach.

12 Flattering Shades
AT ALL 10c STORES
3 RINSES 10¢
TRY ONE TODAY!

FIRST AWARD OF MERIT N. Y. WORLD'S FAIR 1940
Ask for a NU-GLOSS Rinse at Your Beauty Salon.

Mail to: NU-GLOSS CO., 10 W. 36 ST., N. Y. C.
for FREE SAMPLE in Color Checked below:
☐ Platinum ☐ Golden Blonde ☐ Blue-Black
☐ Light Blonde ☐ Golden Brown ☐ Henna
☐ Honey Blonde ☐ Walnut Brown ☐ Lemon
☐ Ash Blonde ☐ Dark Brown ☐ Blue
NAME.....
City
Address..... State.....



NEW! 1942 MODEL POCKET RADIO! NO TUBES NO BATTERIES
BEAUTIFUL PLASTEL CABINETS
BAND-DIAL — HI-Q COIL — MAGNOPHONE Fits your pocket or purse — Wt. 5 ozs. ABOUT CIGARETTE PACKAGE SIZE— FIXED POWER CRYSTAL! CLEAR reception—Simple to Operate. OWNERS REPORT 2-3 YEARS SERVICE — THOUSANDS SOLD! M. I. of Ill. save:
"RADIO WORKS FINE" GUARANTEED TO WORK—ONE YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE. Sent complete ready to listen with instructions for use in homes, offices, hotels, in bed, etc. NO ELECTRIC "PLUG IN" REQUIRED—EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
SEND ONLY $1.00 (cash, M. O., check) and pay postman $1.99 plus postage on arrival or send $2.99 for postpaid delivery! LIMITED NUMBER LEFT —GET YOUR NEW MIDGET NOW—for real enjoyment! Ideal gift for anyone—ORDER NOW!
MIDGET RADIO CO., DEPT. W-1, KEARNEY, NEBRASKA

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!
Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.
NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
1315 Michigan Ave., Dept. 2361, Chicago

NOW CHANGE FROM OLD FASHIONED ROUGE!

Go modern with the completely different HAMPDEN'S rouge. This wonderful color cream is so easy to use • blends off to nothing • gives a soft, warm color, even in tone like "nature's blush". It's the rouge plus!

ROUGE-STICK hampden

25c in Drug and Dept. stores also 50c & 10c sizes
•
Over 5 million sold

Ambitious Business Women:

SEND FOR THIS FREE BOOKLET!

It tells of a business field, Accounting, that is a "natural" for many women—that is now wide open for you. Never but once before has that field offered such possibilities for your sex. You should know about them.

Along with this little booklet, we'll send full information about how you can prepare—quickly, at moderate cost, and in your spare time—for this interesting field.

If you are really in earnest about your future, write today for this booklet. There's no obligation—only challenging information that can change your entire future.

LASALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY
A Correspondence Institution
Dept. 1318-H Chicago, Ill.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

FALSE TEETH Low as $6.85

90 DAYS TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. Free impression material, directions. Booklet of New Styles and Information. Write today to

FREE SEND NO MONEY

PARKER DENTAL LAB.,
127 N. DEARBORN ST., DEPT. 27, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

TYPEWRITER 1/3 PRICE

STANDARD OFFICE MODELS
About ⅓ MFRS. ORIG. PRICE
Easiest Terms as Low as 70¢ a Week
All models completely rebuilt like new.
FULL 2-YEAR GUARANTEE
No Money Down—10 Day Trial
Send for FREE price smashing literature in colors. Shows all models. See our literature before you buy. SEND TODAY.
FREE COURSE IN TYPING INCLUDED.

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCH.
Dept. 161, 231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.
10c A DAY

FREE BOOK! Be a Nurse

Get this big new book! Brimful of pictures and fascinating true stories of women, 18 to 60, whom we trained at home in their spare time to be practical nurses. They are making good livelihoods, winning new friends, living successful lives. Read about Mrs. E. G., busy housewife who earned $430 in 3 months . . . Mrs. B. K., who runs her own rest home . . . Miss L. J., whose earnings are educating two small brothers. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. High school not necessary. Earn while learning. Easy payments. Equipment included. 43rd year. Send for your copy of this free book today. Address:

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
100 E. Ohio St. Dept. 231 Chicago, Ill.

First—I'm not 'the last man on earth.'

Second—There's no dodging Fate or something. I knew from the first it's got to be. We're doomed.

Third—I love you, damn you, I love you.

Tully

P.S.—And don't get all cherked up about that kid that's sending flowers every night. It's not your acting. Moreover, they probably don't cost him a cent. I found out this morning that his old man's an undertaker. Think it over.

T.

MAD HATTER

(Continued from page 47)

else unless you're sure it does something for you. Remember, just getting a new hat—no matter how ultra—won't take the place of getting the right hat."

Two more problem children are Dietrich and Garbo. Both have minds of their own and on their first visit to the padded cell dared to tell Dache what they wanted. Dietrich's heart was set on something mannish, but several hours later she left, defeated but ecstatic in a super feminine wimple (the first one ever invented, by the way). Garbo slouched in in one of her football game-ish pull-down brims, demanding its twin in another color—but she walked out on air in a Peruvian turban of multi-colored wool! Damn persuasive, these Daches, and no dopes, either.

JOAN CRAWFORD had the average American girl infatuation for off-the-face hats. Just couldn't see any other variety till Lilly showed her the light. Now the hat doesn't come wacky enough for Joanie, and she—as you probably know—was the first to try a cover-all turban.

And so it goes. The loveliest of them are millinery cowards. Madeleine Carroll hesitates to try anything too daring; Irene Dunne refuses to wear red hats; Judy Garland—like Vic Mature—is completely anti-hat; insists she looks atrocious in all of them. So if you're squeamish about trying a new style—obsessed with the idea you're a one-hat-woman, take heart. You're in swell company.

But how to get out of the rut when the budget says distinctly in cold black letters: New hat—$2.95. Well, wait till you hear. When Lilly first started her own millinery shop (back in 1925, after she'd been fired from Macy's for arguing with a floor manager), the materials for one hat always came to less than $2.00, and she can still turn out something pretty snappy for $1.00. Ann Rutherford has been known to duplicate $90 models for $1.50. S'help us!

So when you've decided on the kind of hat you can't do without—don't settle for anything less—buy the makings and whip it up yourself. If you absolutely can't cope with a needle, buy the untrimmed felt or straw part of the hat, then pick out the trimmings and have it done. Most large department stores have a section that will trim your hat for you without charge, providing, of course, you buy the potential style-setter in the store. Go around trying on hats like the one you plan to have made so's to be dead sure it's your ticket; and if you find one ready-made, so much the better.

Now for those rules:

1. If your he-chum is a "what-the-hell's-that-thing-on-your-head"-er, for heaven's sake drag him along when you go shopping. He'll be terrifically flattered, and somehow his taste is rather unerring. (In the very good cause of making the whole business a bit of a lark, Lilly's installing a snazzy bar for escorts right across the corridor from the padded cell!

2. Never buy a hat sitting down. Something may go divinely with just your face, but be completely out of proportion with the rest of you. For instance, very big hats make tiny girls look like mushrooms, and little hats turn Amazons into Happy Houligans. Take a long, searching look in a full length mirror before making that irrevocable decision.

3. Remember that a hat is not to keep your ears warm, but to make you look distractingly pretty and to express the real you. If you're kind of a screwball, do a Roz Russell and let your hats shout it to the skies. You can get away with phony birds perched at impossible angles and bunches of fruit over each ear. If, however, you're on the May Robson side, keep it conservative without getting grim.

4. Unless your figure rates the double whistle from truck drivers and your face is rather beautiful, don't try to launch a new hat style. It is either terribly annoying or screamingly funny to the average man to see a nothing-to-write-home-about woman sporting a radically new hat fashion.

SUMMING up, Lilly tells us that "the first law of chic is 'know thyself.' Get acquainted with your features and in the privacy of your own boudoir confess which ones aren't so hot and gloat over the good ones. Play down a large nose by wearing wide brims; wear veils to glamourize a mediocre complexion. If your brow is wide and lovely, show it off with an off-the-face. Flaunt gorgeous hair by wearing hats in vivid, eye-catching colors. Make a mental note of the type of hat that is simply taboo for you, thus narrowing the field when you venture out on your shopping expedition." Lilly paused a second and pondered. "Just one parting shot. I've always felt that a really good hat is sort of like a good friend. It wears well and you like it better every time you see it. You don't get tired of it from one season to the next, and you mourn its eventual demise from old age bitterly."

Before leaving Lilly's elegant establishment—an entire building on East Fifty-Sixth Street where she employs two hundred helpers and creates over 9,000 designs a year—we snuk a look at her little idea book. Here, confidentially, is a preview of next year's models!

There are going to be lots of those pirate-hats with up-sweeping brims and curtain-backs. (Originated for Loretta Young in "The Men in Her Life.") You'll be seeing lots of berets—but huge ones with flowing veils. (Dietrich will start the vogue in "The Lady Is Willing.") There'll be a big swing "back to black." Dache advises using color only as a fillip, never as a focus. Watch for the new crusader's helmet with its peaked visor and clean, sharp lines. And notice how all the new hats are firmly anchored on the head. Lilly's begun a campaign to annihilate the blobs of fluff that blow off though there's not a breath stirring.

Not to pun too fiendishly, but hasn't Lilly given us a perfectly gorgeous head-start on the rest of the girls? More glamour to you, now, and happy hatting!

REVIEWS

(Continued from page 16)

SING FOR YOUR SUPPER

Jinx Falkenburg, wealthy heiress, with philanthropic tendencies, interests herself in bandleader Buddy Rogers, who has one foot in the bread-line. Enrolling, incognito, as hostess of the Arcadia Dance Hall where Buddy's band is playing, she convinces him she can sing. Eventually Jinx is forced to tell Buddy her true identity, but takes it hard when newspapers break the story of society-heiress turning honky-tonk singer. Thinking it a publicity stunt of Buddy's, she huffs out of the picture. Buddy disappears, too, and it looks as though the whole thing is off when Fate and Buddy's wily business manager bring them together. —Col.

SIERRA SUE

Gene Autry's mind, most of the time, is glued to the problem of eliminating the poisonous devil weed from the cattle country around Sierra City. But he does find time for a few songs and a little romancing with Fay McKenzie. Things get hot for a while when a plane falls into the canyon where the cattle are corralled, causing a stampede. But Autry swings into action and saves the situation with his usual efficiency.—Rep.

HARVARD HERE I COME

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, having received a Harvard award for supreme pediculousness, gets back at 'em by enrolling at the university. It takes no time at all for Prof. Byron Foulger to prove by intelligence tests that Maxie is America's No. 1 Moron. National manufacturers pursue him because his endorsement of their products means an immediate jump in sales—so great is his appeal to other morons. Riding the crest of success, he decides to open a College Inn—sends for Arline Judge, who forms an organization known as "20,000,000 Jerks, Inc.," with Maxie as president. At the opening of the Inn, Maxie endows a school for morons at Harvard.—Col.

HONOLULU LU

Lupe Velez starts out by annexing three sailors and ends up with the entire fleet. When sailor Bruce Bennett learns that a charity contest for "Miss Honolulu" is about to be staged, he starts campaigning for Lupe, whom he knows only in her newly acquired role of burlesque queen. Meanwhile, Uncle Leo Carillo, unaware of Lupe's new venture into burlesque, campaigns for his niece. In the mad mix-up that follows, Lupe is torn between loyalty to the fleet and loyalty to her uncle. In the end, the fleet wins Lupe—Lupe wins the contest—and Uncle Leo wins a job, much against his wishes.—Col.

(Continued on page 82)

● ● ●

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

Eddie G. Robinson took his youngster, Mannie, who has never seen a silent picture and subtitles, to see Charlie Chaplin in "Modern Times." When Mannie was asked what he thought of the Great Chaplin, he replied, "I can't read. Chaplin can't talk. So I didn't like the pictures."

FASHION

(Continued from page 61)

FASHION MERCHANDISE SHOWN ON PAGES 60 AND 61

Bright red corduroy handbag, all ready to go places. $2.00 by Fri-lo.

Scotch thistle spray pin, "Loch Lomond," with two (count 'em) spaces for pictures. A Karu Christmas idea for $2.50.

Scarfs are in again to add color and zest to your clothes. Have a pastel plaid wool for daytime, by Glentex, and an Echo evening plaid in silver and blue chiffon.

Quilted cotton housecoat with shades-of-blue roses and green leaves on a dotted white background. Only $4.00 at Ohrbach's, N. Y.

White cotton poplin ski suit treated with Dupont's Zelan, the durable repellent that keeps you snugly warm. Ski jacket, $9.00, and ski pants, about $7.00. Both at Gimbel Bros., N. Y.

A warm and new-looking cardigan, the Volga sweater, a Glamor-knit that comes in luscious colors. Under $4.00, leading stores.

Rhinestone evening bag and matching butterfly hair ornament. Both for under $2.00 at Ohrbach's, N. Y.

Glamorous jet jewelry by Miriam Haskell at Saks' 34th St., N. Y. Earrings, $1; pin, $2.95; necklace, $3.95.

Two dangling, shimmering jet necklaces. Only $1.00 and wonderful with all-black sweaters.

Two magnificently tailored Joan Kenley blouses, the perfect Christmas present for any girl who loves suits, and what girl doesn't? An all-white rayon crepe with self-stitching and a white one, hand-whipstitched in red. $3.50 at leading department stores.

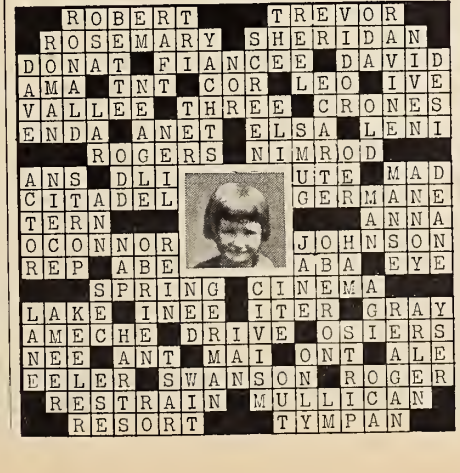
CHRISTMAS GIFT MERCHANDISE SHOWN ON PAGE 59

Khaki for the army: Sewing kit, $1.00; money belt, $1.00; shoe-cleaning kit, $1.25; complete utility case, $2.50; zippered writing case, $3.00. All at James McCreery, N. Y.

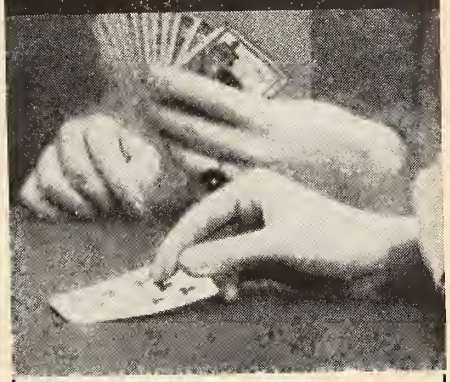
Games for the navy: Magnetic backgammon, $4.69; domino set, $.47; travel chess set, $2.82. R. H. Macy.

For store nearest you, write Elizabeth Willguss, Fashion Editor.

Solution to the Crossword Puzzle on page 12



Do You Want "Good Hands?"



Then Use This Unusual New Hand Cream To Keep Them Soft and Smooth

"Poor hands" can easily become "good hands." So don't worry if housekeeping —office work—or nursing duties leave your hands chapped, rough and unattractive. Just use Barrington Hand Cream regularly every day. This delicate, fragrant cream is specially prepared to relieve such discomfort. Buy a generous 44c, 25c or 10c jar today. Sold at leading 5 and 10c stores, independent variety, drug and department stores. Or write to

NORTH AMERICAN DYE CORPORATION
MT. VERNON, N. Y.

Barrington HAND CREAM

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

NEWEST STYLES

GLASSES $2.95 & UP COMPLETE by MAIL!

16 DAYS' TRIAL! SEND NO MONEY!

Good Looking! We GUARANTEE SATISFACTION or Your MONEY BACK. We also repair Broken Glasses. Write today for our catalog and information FREE

U.S. Eye-Glasses Co. 1557 Milwaukee Av. Dept. I-104, Chicago

DAZZLE YOUR FRIENDS!

No need for $1000 diamonds when fiery BLU-BRITE mined Zircons dazzle everyone—and fools experts. Write for special FREE! catalog of Exotic Zircon diamonds that cut glass, stand acid—98% cheaper than diamonds.

KIMBERLY GEM CO., Inc.

503 5th AVE. N.Y.C. Dept. 4E

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE) Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test". Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Give Druggist's name and address. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547, Northwestern Station, Dept. 2709, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB.

SPEAKING OF DEFENSE...
Rand DRESS SHIELDS
are my favorite protection
and of course
Rand BABY PANTS
AND CRIB SHEETS
are best for baby!
AT CHAIN & DEP'T. STORES • RAND RUBBER CO., B'KLYN, NEW YORK

FREE HOLLYWOOD ENLARGEMENT

Just to get acquainted we will make a beautiful PROFESSIONAL enlargement of any snapshot, photo, kodak picture, print or negative to 5 x 7 inch FREE. Please include color of eyes, hair, and clothing for prompt information on a natural, life-like color enlargement in a FREE FRAME to set on the table or dresser. Your original returned with your FREE PROFESSIONAL enlargement. Please send 10c for return mailing—Act Quick.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. 176
HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Sell WOODSTOCK TYPEWRITER

$7.95 60 DAYS TRIAL

FALSE TEETH AS LOW AS $7.95

Per Plate, DENTAL PLATES are made in our own laboratory from your personal impression. Our workmanship and material GUARANTEED or purchase price refunded. We take this risk on our 60-day trial offer. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY! MAIL POST CARD for FREE Material and Catalog of our LOW PRICES. DON'T PUT IT OFF—Write us TODAY!
BRIGHTON - THOMAS DENTAL LABORATORY,
Dept. 950 6217 S. Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill.

Solid sterling silver Birthstone Ring; or lovely 13 set sparkling Dinner Ring; or an All-Occasion Ring with simulated Ruby and 8 brilliant imarcasites; FOR selling 4 boxes of Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Send No Money. Order 4 salve.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO, BOX 23, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

Marvel $3.50 WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women
At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Free Booklet—The Marvel Co., Dept. 425, New Haven, Conn.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED

Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.

47c

3 for $1.00

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C.O.D. 78c plus postage or send 90c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.

STANDARD ART STUDIOS
113 S. Jefferson St., Dept. 1332-A, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

CO-ED

(Continued from page 58)

as a flock romance you'll discover.

And now—what about looks? They shouldn't really count so much, but everyone knows you can't sell merchandise, no matter how wonderful it is, in a dreary package. Know your type and make the most of it via make-up, clothes and accessories. Be careful not to get ahead of yourself. Judy had an experience we might all profit by. She couldn't wait to grow up to veils and velvets, and now that she is grown up, she wears pinafores and braids. She realizes now that if she had been allowed to wear spike heels, thick make-up and too chic ensembles, she would only have been a bad caricature of such sophisticates as Rosalind Russell and Hedy Lamarr.

Just a few parting shots now to help you successfully carry on the campaign.

Don't wear slinky dresses, spike heels, clanging jewelry and heavy perfume to school.

Don't get down to one lone crony, either male or female.

Do get proficient at some sport. Now's your golden opportunity, and you'll be sorry if you don't.

Do try out for the dramatic club. It's the best thing we know for developing poise.

Do try and read at least two good books a month. It develops a good background and will help you out in those conversational lulls that are bound to crop up sooner or later.

Do be immaculate about hair, nails and clothes.

Do keep your sense of humor no matter how terrifically disastrous the situation may be—and have fun!

REVIEWS

(Continued from page 81)

DON'T GET PERSONAL

It all starts when Hugh Herbert inherits his late uncle's pickle fortune and starts out for the Whippet Pickle Works, picking up Mischa Auer on the way. Two Whippet associates plot to cheat Hugh Herbert out of his share of the pickles while the love interest is sustained by secretary, script writer, and radio talent for the Whippet Works. Because of well-meaning Hugh, a merry scramble follows. The four young lovers are paired and re-paired. But finally, each gets his mate and the law its crooks—U.

SWING IT, SOLDIER

A case of mistaken identity, involving Frances Langford, results in a carload of chuckles for everyone but her. While still in the draft army, Ken Murray is commissioned by his tent-mate to look after wife Frances (The Lovely Lady of Song) . . . but is not told that Frances is twins. He does know, however, that the songstress is to become a mother and must leave her work. He does everything possible to stymie her efforts in securing the contract she and Don Wilson (announcer) are after. The trouble is that Frances' place has been taken by her twin sister. When Ken Murray discovers the truth, sister wins her radio show and Ken wins sister.—U.

THE DEVIL PAYS OFF

In this case, the devil pays off J. Edward Bromberg, shipping magnate, for traitorous acts against the U. S. Government. William Wright is commissioned to uncover the plot when the U. S. Navy suspects foul play. Margaret Tallichet is assigned to masquerade as his wife and plays the role so winsomely that Will refuses to give her up when the job is finished. It all ends happily enough when William escapes death at the hands of the villain, who, in turn, exposes himself and tumbles from the top of his broadcasting tower.—Rep.

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories or features did you enjoy most in our January issue? Write 1, 2, 3 at the right of the titles of your 1st, 2nd, 3rd choice.

They Live With Their Boots On ☐	I Wrote A Letter To My Love ☐
Vocal Boy Makes Good (Morgan) ☐	Mad Hatter ☐
Self-Made Siren (Bruce) ☐	Hello, Evvabody (Kyser) ☐
Too Many Husbands? (Payne) ☐	"They Died With Their Boots On" ☐
Christmas—It's Colossal ☐	Good News ☐

Which one of the above stories did you like least? .....

What 3 stars would you like to read stories about in future issues? .....

.....

List them 1, 2, 3 in order of preference .....

.....

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, 149 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK CITY

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

Never Before IN ANY MAGAZINE!

February MODERN SCREEN gets as close to Lana Turner as the satin nightie she wears and betrays her every secret to you!!!

Vegetables—ugh!
"Sextacy Girl"
Hates anything red . . .
Violins make her eyes drip . . .
Adores flouncy negligees . . .
50 suits—200 pr. of shoes . . .
Loathes exercise . . .
Can't fry an egg . . .
"Tony's just a friend."
Can sleep on her feet . . .
Smokes too much . . .

P.S. to all boy-crazy girls

Read CO-ED and get your man!

And send in for our February chart. Tells you how to dress on all occasions—and for all boys!

(A new Modern Screen department devoted to "What the 'TeenAge Girl should know.)*

MODERN SCREEN ON SALE EVERYWHERE DECEMBER 30th

DAYDREAMS COME TRUE WITH Beautiful Eyes
Do you long for the captivating loveliness that goes with feminine frills . . . with dates and dancing . . . with flowers and phone-calls and fun? Wishful thinking won't help— but Maybelline Eye Make-up will! Whether your eyes are dark or pale, large or small, they can highlight your face with new thrilling beauty, easily. Maybelline Mascara, in either solid or cream form, gives the magic illusion of long, dark, luxuriant lashes. Safe... non-smarting . . . goes on divinely and doesn't smudge off. Maybelline smooth-marking Eyebrow Pencil tapers the brows gracefully, making them far more expressive. Maybelline Eye Shadow adds a subtle touch of alluring mystery. All Maybelline shades harmonize with natural coloring, giving a soft realistic effect. So don't fail to get genuine MAYBELLINE . . . the glorifying eye make-up . . . the Eye Make-up in Good Taste! At Drug and Department Stores, or attractive purse sizes at all 10 cent counters.
Recommended Good Housekeeping Bureau
Maybelline
WORLD'S LARGEST-SELLING EYE BEAUTY AIDS

MODERN SCREEN

BRUARY

10

CENTS

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
JAN 19 1942
PERIODICAL DIVISION

LANA TURNER

Earl Christy

HY ARTIE SHAW'S STILL MAD ABOUT LANA

LADIES!

HERE IS SUCH A SPECIAL Introductory Offer TO READERS OF MODERN SCREEN

WE HOPE YOU DON'T MISS A WORD OF IT

Ladies . . . have you ever wished to own an expensive diamond ring? Well, you know that the marching armies of Europe have brought the diamond centers of the world to a virtual standstill. With genuine diamond prices shooting skyward, it might be a long, long time before your dreams came true. But here's amazing news. If you act now, today, you can obtain a beautiful solitaire replica diamond ring, nearly ¾ karat solitaire, one of America's greatest imitations, in a gorgeous sterling silver or gold-plate mounting, during one of the greatest value-giving advertising offers in all history! Simply mail the coupon below. Inspect this remarkable solitaire replica diamond, wear it for 10 days. If you aren't delighted in every way, you need not lose a penny!

HAVE YOU EVER WISHED TO OWN A BEAUTIFUL EXPENSIVE-LOOKING REPLICA DIAMOND SOLITAIRE?

Just think! No other type ring so beautifully expresses the sentiment of true love as a Solitaire . . . a replica diamond solitaire, gleaming in its crystal white beauty . . . exquisitely set in a sterling silver or yellow gold-plate ring that proudly encircles "her" finger . . . the perfect symbol of life's sweetest sentiment . . . an adorable token of love and affection. Replica diamonds are decidedly new and very fashionable. So closely do they resemble real diamonds in flaming, dazzling colors, the average person can scarcely tell them apart. So you, too, should inspect this replica diamond solitaire. Mail the coupon, see for yourself that it is one of the world's most popular ring styles. Consider your replica diamond on-approval for ten days. If it doesn't amaze you and your friends, return it and you aren't out a penny.

SEND NO MONEY...MAIL COUPON TODAY

TEST 10 DAYS on Guarantee of Full Satisfaction or Money Back

The beautiful, sentimental solitaire has a gorgeous, brilliant center replica, nearly ¾ karat size and two dazzling replicas on each side. The mounting reproduces in fine detail the same popular ring styling which has been the rage from Miami to Hollywood. It is the ring of youth, of love, of affection. You have your choice of genuine sterling silver or yellow gold-plate mountings. Remember, we're not trying to tell you these are real diamonds. The originals would cost $100.00, $200.00, or perhaps more. But these replica diamonds ARE one of America's greatest imitations. Not too big, not too flashy, it takes the closest inspection to tell the difference. Stage stars, celebrities, social leaders and millionaires don't risk their precious originals but wear replica diamonds without fear of detection. The solitaire is offered to you for only $1.00. The solitaire and wedding ring to match are specially priced at only $1.69...the perfect pair for only $1.69. Send no money, just mail the coupon below and deposit $1.00 for the solitaire alone, or $1.69 for both the solitaire and wedding ring, plus 10% Federal excise tax and postage charges. Inspect these beautiful replica diamonds. Wear them, see how real-like they sparkle, how amazingly brilliant they are, how envious your friends may be. Convince yourself—compare these replica diamonds with originals. Consider them on-approval, on free trial for ten full days. Then if you can bear to part with your rings, if you aren't satisfied in every way, return them and get your money back for the asking. Don't wait but mail thecoupon today!

"THE PERFECT PAIR"

The solitaire replica diamond ring, in either a sterling silver or gold-plated mounting, is offered at $1.00. The wedding ring to match is only $0.69 extra, both the solitaire and matching wedding ring for only $1.69. Mail the coupon today.

The Diamond Man, Dept. 503, 207 N. Michigan, Chicago, Ill.

FOR RING SIZE . . . Use the chart below. Cut out the strip accurately, wrap tightly around middle joint of ring finger. The number that meets the end of the chart strip is your ring size. Mark it down on the coupon.

Send a Letter or Order from Convenient Coupon

CLIP AND MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY

The Diamond Man, Dept. 503, 207 N. Michigan, Chicago, Ill.

Send for my inspection and approval, replica diamond rings as checked below. I will pay postman amount indicated, plus postage, on arrival on the understanding I can return the rings for any reason in 10 days and you will refund my money immediately without question.

☐ Replica Diamond Solitaire—$1.00, plus 10% Federal excise tax.

☐ Replica Diamond Solitaire and Matching Wedding Ring—Both for $1.69, plus 10% Federal excise tax.

Size..... ☐ Sterling Silver ☐ Yellow Gold Plate

NAME.....
(Print plainly)

ADDRESS.....

CITY.....STATE.....

Smile, Plain Girl, Smile...

Eyes Applaud, Hearts follow a Sparkling Smile!

Make your smile your beauty talisman. Help keep it bright and sparkling with Ipana and Massage.

HAVEN'T YOU noticed that it isn't always the prettiest girl who is the best-liked, the most popular?

Heads turn and hearts surrender to the girl who smiles! Not a timid, half-hearted smile—but a real smile—generous and gay. A smile that says, "Look, I'm in love with life!"

So wake up, plain girl—wake up and smile! You can steal the show if your smile is right. You can be a star in your own small world—you can win compliments—you can win love and romance.

But your smile must be right. It must flash freely and unafraid, lighting your face with beauty. And remember, for a smile to keep its sparkle, gums must retain their healthy firmness.

So if you ever notice a tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush—see your dentist! He may tell you your gums are tender because soft foods have robbed them of exercise. And like thousands of dentists, he may suggest Ipana and massage.

Take his advice! For Ipana Tooth Paste not only cleans and brightens your teeth but, with massage, it is designed to help the health of your gums as well.

For a Lovelier Smile—
Ipana and Massage

Massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums every time you clean your teeth. That invigorating "tang" means circulation is quickening in the gum tissue—helping gums to new firmness.

Get a tube of Ipana Tooth Paste at your druggist's today. Let Ipana and massage help keep your teeth brighter, your gums firmer, your smile more sparkling.

A Product of Bristol-Myers

Start today with
IPANA and MASSAGE

JAN-942

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

Begins the nineteen hundred and forty-second Annum Domini and the third year of this column.

★ ★ ★ ★

May our foes wither like the chilled leaves. May Decency find, with renewed vigor, the mislaid path plotted in the year one.

★ ★ ★ ★

So wisheth the philosopher Leo, Coeur de Lion.

★ ★ ★ ★

Each of us, in his own way, has his job to do. And ours is to entertain, to divert, to interest, to serve.

★ ★ ★ ★

We offer the best that the screen can provide. With each year the movies come to fuller flower. In addition to technique they have mastered pace and the tempo of the times.

★ ★ ★ ★

When you see—and you will see—Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn in "Woman of the Year", note this blending of action, merriment and modernity.

★ ★ ★ ★

It's the snappiest yarn that has come to the studio editor in many moons.

★ ★ ★ ★

Spence plays a hail-fellow sports writer named Sam. Kate plays a highbrow political columnist named Tess.

★ ★ ★ ★

Tess gets pretty stuffy about sports and one day Sam takes her to the ball game where she asks some pretty cute questions, to the disgust of the press box.

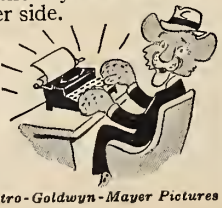
It's either war or love twixt Sam and Tess. All's fair in both.

★ ★ ★ ★

But, baby, what comedy comes out of the mixing of the two worlds—the people and the tall brows. That party where those who came over in the Mayflower rub elbows with the boys who are more on the cauliflower side.

★ ★ ★ ★

"Woman of the Year" is the Picture of the Year.



—Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

©CIB 527182

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

Lana Turner	26
My Son Mick—Mickey Rooney	30
First Love	32
Million Dollar Cowboy—Gene Autry	34
Days I Remember in 1941—Tyrone Power	38
They Got Me Covered—Bob Hope	40
Non-Stop Honeymoon—Ronald Reagan	42
Location Blues	48
Young Man With a Horn—Glenn Miller	50

FEATURES

Party of the Month	36
Candidly Yours	44
"H. M. Pulham, Esq."	52

BEAUTY

Modern Screen's Hand Beauty Chart	60
Charm is Hand-Made	62
Beauty at Your Fingertips	64

FASHION

Skate or Swim	58
Morn Till Night	59

DEPARTMENTS

Movie Reviews	6
Our Puzzle Page	14
Movie Scoreboard	16
Portrait Gallery	19
Good News	54
Co-Ed	66
Modern Hostess	78

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Associate Editor
SYLVIA WALLACE, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor

Cover: Lana Turner, appearing in M-G-M's "Johnny Eager"

Vol. 24, No. 3, February, 1942. Copyright, 1941, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year; foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the postoffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second-class entries at Seattle, Wash., San Francisco, Calif., Dallas, Texas, Savana, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.

TAYLOR 'N TURNER

"You're cruel, Johnnie. You're almost 100% bad. But whatever you are, darling, you're my man!"

They're dynamite in

JOHNNY EAGER

The flaming drama of a high-born beauty who blindly loved the most icy-hearted Big Shot gangland ever knew.

A MERVYN LeROY Production with

EDWARD ARNOLD

VAN HEFLIN · ROBERT STERLING · PATRICIA DANE

GLENDA FARRELL · HENRY O'NEILL · DIANA LEWIS

Screen Play by John Lee Mahin and James Edward Grant
A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE • Directed by MERVYN LeROY
Produced by JOHN W. CONSIDINE, Jr.

MOVIE REVIEWS

Stirling Hoyden ond Madeleine Corroll

BAHAMA PASSAGE—AB-2*

Legions of lovely girls all over America, it is said, have been panting for this moment: the debut of Stirling Hayden as a leading man—that big, brawny gorgeous, sun-bronzed sea god who has done even more to advertise the Nordic race lately than handsome Adolph. Well, here it is. The big moment has arrived, a tropical disturbance blown up from the Bahamas via Paramount (why can't Barney Balaban find something to film up here in the Temperate Zone?), and all the feminine barometers are down and all the movie-meters presumably are up. But are they? Well, dissenting males may solace themselves by looking at Madeleine Carroll, or possibly by reflecting that it's a pretty dry story for a tall, handsome sea god, and that the sea god himself as an actor is still a bit damp behind the ears.

The incidents with which Paramount has elected to bring drama to Bahama may place a slight strain on your gullibility if you care about such technicalities as proper motivation, consistency of character, reasonable probability or even just plain common sense, but there's an awful lot of them and they keep happening one after another. Seems that Stirling, who is a sort of amphibian Tarzan, is the heir-apparent to a lonely salt cay: population, 250 blacks, including faithful old Morales, and three whites; Stirling himself; Mama (Flora Robson) who hates the place like poison, and Papa, whom we don't get to know as he falls face down in a salt pool and dies at the beginning of the picture.

Mama thinks Papa was murdered by the colored population, has a recurrence of her phony heart trouble and swears she can't live on the island without another white man to protect her. This gives Stirling a (Continued on page 8)

P.S.

Stirling Hayden placed thumb to nose, waggled four fingers violently and bowed out of Hollywood after this one . . . Cast and crew spent seven and one-half weeks on desolate islands, trying to keep cool in the 90 plus degree heat that made the motors of the camera race, and emulsion on the film melt . . . Film was packed in air-cooled dark rooms and whisked to Hollywood laboratories by plane . . . 13 tents housed the troupe, one tent for the commissary and one for the company physician, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, who found the natives needed more attention than the Paramount men and women . . . Bathing had to be done in the sea, because the only fresh water is that drained from the roofs during storms . . . only means of communication with the outside world was through a "cable station" that boasted a ship-to-shore two-way radio communication set . . . Madeleine Carroll surprised everyone by bearing up beautifully under the primitive conditions. Wore no make-up for the film. Secured and kept an even tan that was just right for the Technicolor cameras . . . She and Stirling Hayden were guests at a party given in Nassau for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor . . . Sound track for the native chant made by a group of 50 native singers was recorded in the still of the night on the huge public grounds south of Government House on Nassau Island. The singers are members of the famed Ebony Choir . . . The entire company had to stop work from 11 A.M. until 2 P.M. because of the direct overhead rays of the sun . . . Biggest hardship of all was the terrific invasions of out-size mosquitoes and sand flies.

*Temporary rating. Owing to the necessity of going to press far in advance of picture release dates, our reviewer has been unable to see these films in completed form.

Hoyden ond Madeleine try to keep peoce between villoinous Leo G. Corroll ond trusted servont Leigh Whipper!

Watch These Three Danger Zones of Your Skin!

① EYE CRINKLES—Let my 4-Purpose Face Cream help you guard against signs of age—at this Danger Zone!

② NOSE PORES—Let my 4-Purpose Face Cream help you guard against big pores—at this Danger Zone!

③ BLACKHEADS—Let my 4-Purpose Face Cream help you guard against blackheads—at this Danger Zone!

By Lady Esther

There are three little areas of skin that you must watch with special care. For they are "danger zones" where blackheads may appear suddenly—where pores tend to become coarse—where little lines etch themselves into the skin.

What are these "danger zones"? Well, there is zone No. 1: the corners of your eyes, where tired lines and laugh crinkles form so easily. There is zone No. 2: the curve next to your nose, where pores get coarse-looking. And there is zone No. 3: the tiny valleys of your chin where dust and grease accumulate and sometimes harden into blackheads.

You don't need a lot of different creams and lotions to guard these "danger zones." For now there's one cream that takes care of four important needs of your skin! Yes, just one cream! My 4-Purpose Face Cream is complete in itself—asks no help of other creams or lotions. Not only does it guard the 3 "danger zones"—but it keeps your skin looking its cleanest, freshest and loveliest at all times.

Here's what it does: (1) It thoroughly but gently cleanses the skin. (2) It softens the skin and relieves dryness, flaking. (3) It helps nature refine the pores, helps beautify the skin. (4) It smooths the skin, prepares it for powder and make-up. You can expect a softer, smoother skin almost from the very first application!

Send for Generous Tube

Mail coupon below for a generous tube of my face cream! Try it as a powder foundation in the morning—as a cleansing and softening cream at night. See why more and more lovely women every day are turning to Lady Esther Face Cream!

Lady Esther 4-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

LADY ESTHER, (75)
7110 West 65th Street, Chicago, Ill.

Send me a generous tube of 4-Purpose Face Cream; also 9 shades of face powder. I enclose 10¢ for packing and mailing.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Toronto, Ont.)

(Continued from page 6)

pain, but to pacify Mama he imports a general overseer who is a bum and a cowardly tyrant (he insists on absolute authority even over Stirling) but who has a daughter. Boy! The new overseer, apparently fresh from the Dale Carnegie Institute, gets off to a fine start socially by slugging honest old Morales, and it takes the combined efforts of Stirling and the forgiving Morales to keep down an indigo uprising.

Meanwhile, Madeleine, who has been around, is piqued by Stirling's aloofness; she wonders what more even a sea god could want than what the whole student body of Columbia University wanted in 1939, viz., Madeleine Carroll on a desert island. But Stirling holds out longer than DiMaggio in the Spring, before he gives in, the galleries in a lot of neighborhood houses will probably be yoo-hooing him. (We forgot to say that Stirling has a wife on the mainland, and that's why he's so moral, though she isn't worth it as it turns out. Sick of sea gods, apparently, she runs away with a sailor from Kansas City.)

Well, there's the set-up and if, after all this, you still don't know how it works out, you'd better go look for yourself. The story, as you may have surmised, is a phony, but the backgrounds aren't; they're the real thing. And Stirling is a natural blond.—Para.

H. M. PULHAM, Esq. AA-2

A delicately satirical job of directing by King Vidor, a brilliant performance by Robert Young in the title role, a deglamourized, surprisingly human Hedy Lamarr as Marvin Myles, the career-girl menace, and a story which, up to a point, is full of both dramatic interest and authentic Bostonian regional flavor (no mean achievement, however qualified) are the high spots of Metro's version of John P. Marquand's novel. The film is too long, or seems too long, and ends disconcertingly in a sort of temperate, out-of-this-world praise of matrimony, respectability and the sacred necessity for dullness (varied with an occasional aimless motoring excursion into the country). But perhaps that is neither the picture's fault nor Mr. Marquand's. Perhaps that's just Boston.

At any rate, for the major portion of its generous length, this film succeeds in conveying the effect of an adequate transcription from life—or what passes for life on Beacon Hill—and also in stating the essentially unhealable cleavage between the old aristocratic tradition in American and the new pushing dollar-worship. It demonstrates that many of the old ways are superior and worth preserving, though for the most part they were narrow and out-worn. These are fine achievements for a motion picture supposed to be aimed at a theoretical box-office potential of eighty million largely undiscriminating souls.

Robert Young's performance as the dignified, gentlemanly, habit-bound, rather squeamish Pulham is admirably right except in certain dishonestly written scenes—notably the queer reunion in middle age with the businesslike Hedy, during which the dialogue not unnaturally appears to stick in his throat. It is a pleasure to get a look at Miss Lamarr so far removed from her make-up man and to note that she is still attractive in a basic way, though certain of her camera angles are by no means flawless. Ruth Hussey as the wife, Charles Coburn as the father, Van Heflin as a drunken liaison officer between the two worlds and Fay Holden as a mild Boston matriarch are all excellent in supporting roles.—M-G-M.

BABES ON BROADWAY AB-1*

It was probably inevitable that sooner or later there would be a sentimental get-together between Alexander Woollcott and Mickey Rooney, and this is the film at which we bow to the inevitable. The story (between vaudeville turns) is all about the desperate struggles of young ambitious theatrical folk in New York (seems they hang out at a joint called the Pitt-Astor Drug Store instead of the Stork Club). It begins with Woollcott sentimentalizing in front of an obviously dead microphone and ends with Mickey and Judy Garland taking bows at the conclusion of a smash musical originally designed by Mickey to raise money for slum kids' vacations. In the picture, Mickey's musical is such a success that it's a wonder Cole Porter and Rodgers and Hart don't go to the Pitt-Astor themselves and take a slug of strychnine.

Normally we shouldn't be bothered repeating the plot of a musical film, but in this case (don't stop us) it has a certain symbolical value: it shows just how much the public will put up with for the sake of a great actor like the Rooney. Seems there's these three kids, fugitives from Class 1-A in the draft, hoofing it for spaghetti money in a Greenwich Village basement. Fay Bainter, a talent scout who is probably morbidly fond of spaghetti, catches the act and makes an appointment for the boys to audition for a big Broadway producer.

The blabber-mouths tell about it at the old Pitt-Astor, and so many alumni show up, it queers the audition. Then Mickey gets the idea for this slum benefit from Virginia Weidler, who takes music from the papa of Judy Garland, whom Mickey meets when she is in a telephone booth crying—where were we?

All sorts of difficulties, both romantic and fiscal, crop up to keep Mickey and Judy unhappy and to keep the show from going on; but we've already told you it would be produced, so stop shoving. So all right, it gets produced. Also Mickey has a dream that's full of amusing Rooney-Garland impersonations. A regular circus; you'll probably love it all. —M-G-M.

P. S.

Carmen Miranda showed up on the set to coach Mickey Rooney for his impersonation of her . . . Took one look at him and screamed: "You are too cover up" and jounced his bodice down on his chest another inch . . . Rooney does a black-face number with Judy Garland. Both kids left their make-up on when they left the set. Judy caused a riot in a local market; Mickey dashed out to the golf course for a quick game and made the best score of his life—79 . . . Finale of the picture is an old-fashioned minstrel show. Director Busby Berkeley figures he climbed 3420 feet on the special rising camera photographing the 12-minute scene. Music for the number is supplied by a 100-piece orchestra augmented by a 24-piece banjo band . . . Mickey actually plays the banjo; pal Eddie Peabody, on leave from Great Lakes Naval Training Station, visited him at the studio and gave him a couple of pointers . . . In one scene, the pictures on the wall had to be actual Broadway players. Metro's legal department says all pictures used in their films must be M-G-M players. Studio discovered 14 people now under contract used to be on the stage. Tacked up were photos of Lionel Barrymore, Edward Ashley, William Powell, Van Heflin, Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas, Red Skelton, Lee Bowman, Sara Haden, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter and Lewis Stone. Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy were left out because the studio didn't think audiences would remember their stage flings . . . Mickey turned 21 during production, got his biggest thrill out of his mother's birthday present to him—an electric malted milk shaker, plus ten pounds of malt . . . Ray MacDonald does one of the smoothest numbers in the show, an impersonation of George Primrose doing a soft shoe routine. Ray broke his ankle two years ago, and doctors told him he'd never walk again . . . Besides La Miranda, Mickey impersonates Sir Harry Lauder and Richard Mansfield. Judy has a little tougher assignment—does Sarah Bernhardt, Fay Templeton and Blanche Ring.

THE JUNGLE BOOK-AB-1*

We sometimes wonder how Kipling managed to get along all those years without Alexander Korda or how Korda could get along now without Kipling. This time Mr. Korda has reopened one of Rudyard's tallest tales and released all of its quaint creatures and even quainter companionships upon a startled adult world. Thriftily, he allows Brother Zoltan to do the directing and Sabu, under personal contract, to be the star.

(Continued on page 10)

* Modern Screen's New Way of Rating Films

Point 1—According to its production value: Expensiveness of cast, settings, etc. Rating, A, B or C.

Point 2—According to artistic value: Taste, screen play, direction. Rating, A B or C.

Point 3—According to entertainment value. Rating, 1, 2 or 3.

In the review section of this issue of Modern Screen, only the first eight films have been reviewed and rated.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER!

MADELEINE CARROLL · STIRLING HAYDEN

TOSSED BY THE TIDES OF LOVE...

IN "BAHAMA PASSAGE"

IN TECHNICOLOR!

with FLORA ROBSON · LEO G. CARROLL
MARY ANDERSON · CECIL KELLAWAY

Produced and Directed by EDWARD H. GRIFFITH

Screen Play by Virginia Van Upp Based on a story by Nelson Hayes A Paramount Picture

ASK YOUR THEATRE MANAGER WHEN THIS BIG PARAMOUNT HIT IS COMING

Your Hands
ARE ALWAYS
OUT IN FRONT!

It's great fun to be out of doors, skating, skiing, tobogganing. But it's hard on delicate skin.

Your hands, arms, legs get pretty rough treatment. But Chamberlain's—the clear, golden lotion that dries so quickly — will assist you in keeping your skin soft, smooth and lovely. Use Chamberlain's Lotion regularly.

Buy it at all Toilet Goods Counters

Chamberlain's
LOTION

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 8)

The rest is largely a matter of whimsical zoology, with a cast made up of such well-known screen names as Shere Khan, the tiger, Rashka, the mother wolf, and so on. This is not to imply that Mr. Korda has skimped on his production; he has probably spent a good many shekels on atmosphere, animal sequences, native undress extras and other less tangible desiderata.

The story's rank improbabilities show up even more humorously on the screen than they do in print, but after all it's only a tale told by Joseph Calleia, impersonating a professional storyteller in the streets of old Khaniwari. What do you expect for a few pieces of silver —affidavits? On this tongue-in-the-cheek note the story opens, and of course, you remember the rest: how Messua's two-year-old son wanders off into the jungle, is adopted and reared by a mother wolf and becomes a friend of all the jungle animals.

There are narrow escapes and hidden treasure, and a pretty heroine (Patricia O'Rourke) and a friendly black panther who leaps at the villain's throat and a Keystone-Disney finish in which all the wild beasts in India surround the wicked village where Messua is imprisoned, ready to pounce on it at Mowgli's order if they don't release her. In short, it becomes constantly more apparent that this guy Kipling would have made a swell soap opera librettist.—U. A.

P. S.

"Sweetheart," the mechanical crocodile, is the only phony among $50,000 worth of wild animals brought from all over the world especially for the picture. She's an exact replica of a "croc" John Barrymore shot in Mexico a couple of years ago . . . Every sequence of the story was sketched beforehand by Art Director Vincent Korda and his staff. Vincent is the brother of Producer Alexander Korda and Director Zoltan Korda . . . The location spot, Sherwood Forest, rents for around $2,000 a month. Had to be leased three months before production so the "jungle" could be built. Part of the vegetation was brought directly from India; the rest is made up of brake ferns from Oregon, vines from Louisiana, bamboo from a Mexican border town . . . Props for the $1,500,000 Technicolor production were valued at $60,000. The greens alone cost $50,000 . . . Love birds were hired for $5 a day, had to be trained to eat from the lips of Rosemary De Camp . . . Rosemary recently finished a picture in which she played a foreigner with a heavy accent. The producer of that pic nearly nixed her chances for another good part because he'd never heard her speak English, thought the accent was natural . . . 70,000 coins used in the Lost City sequence were purchased from the late San Francisco Exposition . . . Korda also had 100,000 poker chips and felt pads sprayed with gold paint, so they'd look like gold pieces . . . 500 workmen worked day and night in three eight-hour shifts to construct the huge set . . . They built an artificial river, gauged its current so it would trickle through the lush vegetation at just the right speed to keep the plants from washing away or growing too rapidly . . . The liana vines had to be watched very carefully. They grow over night, covering whole streets and buildings . . . Grace Wiley's two hooded cobras kept the cast in jitters—their poison fangs have never been removed. Miss Wiley says serpents are pals and love affection.

JOHNNY EAGER—AB-2*

There may be a number of high hurdles between you and complete enjoyment of this film. First, you have to visualize Robert Taylor as a cold-blooded killer and big-shot racketeer, which may take a lot out of you. Next, you may find it difficult to put any stock in the story; let's just see. It appears that Lana Turner, the district attorney's stepdaughter and a student of sociology (with that pout yet!) contacts handsome, paroled Johnny Eager (that's Bob) in her field studies and is fascinated at first sight. Johnny, though, isn't so eager, —and fellows, you'll know what we mean when we say that this is high hurdle number two. Johnny is just fascinated by the idea of putting the fix on stepfather (Edward Arnold) so he can open up the dog-racing track he is operating under cover, without interference from the law. In his maneuverings he frames Lana on a fake murder rap and then blackmails the d. a. The track opens on schedule, but what a heel!

People love him, though, possibly because when he socks his closest friends in the jaw he sometimes does it with tears in his eyes, strictly from affection. Van Heflin, for instance, an aristocrat who uses big words and drinks too much, can't live without Johnny, though he is sometimes troubled by the old chap's casually homicidal ways. And of course Lana, the little moll, goes on loving him through thick and thin, and when we say thick we're thinking of the situations and characters, and when we say thin we're thinking of the story.

Everything goes from bad to worse, including Johnny. Van and Lana keep forgiving him, knowing it's just old Bob Taylor underneath, sweetest guy in the world, but some of his estranged colleagues obviously hate his entrails. It's pretty clear that our Johnny is being groomed for a first-class Mervyn LeRoy rub-out, but it's no cheap mobster that gets him in the end; it's destiny, in the shape of an honest cop who doesn't know what it's all about, and by that time nine out of ten people in the audience may be in the same fix.—M-G-M.

P. S.

The swanky bed Bob Taylor uses in the picture does everything but bake waffles and 'perc' coffee—has built-in radio, refreshment cabinet, clock, running water, servants' buttons, light switches, two telephones and a bookcase . . .

(Continued on page 13)

Bette Davis!
Ann Sheridan!
Monty Woolley!
(He's the man!)
Jimmy Durante
There never was a better reason for "going to the movies" . . . 'cause there never was a better movie to go to!
The most laughed-at play of our day—with this wonderful Warner Bros. cast (including the play's celebrated star) to make it even greater as a picture!
THE MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER

A WARNER BROS. PICTURE from the play by famous GEO. S. KAUFMAN and MOSS HART • Produced by Sam H. Harris with RICHARD TRAVIS • BILLIE BURKE • REGINALD GARDINER • Directed by WILLIAM KEIGHLEY • Screen Play by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein

"I love him because he don't know how to kiss—the jerk!"

Samuel Goldwyn, master producer, scores again with a picture both heart-warming and uproariously funny—the story of a sedate professor who knew all about dead languages and nothing about live ladies until a night club gal crashed his bachelor quarters and rhumbaed right into his heart.

Samuel Goldwyn presents

GARY COOPER · BARBARA STANWYCK

in Ball of Fire

Directed by HOWARD HAWKS

Released through RKO Radio Pictures Inc.
Screen Play by CHARLES BRACKETT and BILLY WILDER
Hear Gene Krupa with his drums and his famous orchestra

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 10)

Other furniture features are a huge backless couch and a hidden bar . . . Lana and Bob decided to take up archery during their spare time. Both are novices at the sport and will hold a shooting match any time now . . . Pat Dane has just received her 700th letter insisting she keep her hair long. The studio had announced that she would cut it for the picture . . . Lana moved into her new home during production. Nothing was ready yet, so she borrowed a bed from Judy Garland, two tables and a lamp from Ann Rutherford, a rug from Bob Taylor and a couple of chairs from Ann Sothern . . . Bob's new little boxer dog celebrated his first night in the Taylor menage by chewing up the only available script of "Johnny Eager." . . . Bob uses the swimming pool at his home to practise trout casting . . . Dan Dailey, Jr. trains horses in his spare time . . . Lana smuggled food onto the set for the sleek greyhound working in the picture "because he looked so hungry," then discovered the animal won't work after it's just been fed . . . Robin Raymond used to write publicity for fighters King Levinsky and Barney Ross . . . Barry Nelson says the best dramatic training he's ever had was the 15-minute radio show he worked on while in college. Said learning to express emotion by the voice alone was worth thousands of dollars . . . Jack Benny, pal of Taylor and Mervyn LeRoy, hung around the set a lot, earned the title of Unofficial Production Manager during rehearsals of the cockroach race scenes. The insects were temperamental and wouldn't race in the right direction. Finally Benny suggested, sensibly he thought, "Why don't you speak to the cockroaches, Mervyn?"

REMEMBER THE DAY AB-2*

At the beginning of this picture you may be startled to see Claudette Colbert walking into a Washington, D. C. hotel in the midst of a political rally disguised as an old-maid school teacher of approximately fifty-five summers. But don't let that discourage you, for as soon as Claudette sits down in a lobby chair and throws her head back reminiscently, the years drop away and here we are back in Auburn School before the World War. Claudette is young, and the man who is going to be President of the United States (his name, Dewey Roberts, is smeared all over the campaign banners in the lobby) was an upstanding, mildly obstreperous student, at such an early age showing signs of the being a potential leader of men. As she gets into her retrospective stride, Claudette

(Continued on page 15)

Even at winter parties— it's August under your arms!

Guard popularity, prevent underarm odor with Mum!

WINTER is a season of wonderful parties and wonderful times, if a girl is popular! So don't let underarm odor come between you and social success. In winter, as in summer, guard daintiness with sure, dependable Mum!

Even though you see no warning trace of moisture, underarms always perspire. Heavier clothing and heated rooms encourage danger for the girl who foolishly thinks that, in winter, she doesn't perspire!

Everyone does! That's why it's so foolish to trust just a bath to keep you sweet. A bath only removes past perspiration, but Mum prevents risk of future underarm odor. Use Mum for:

SPEED! 30 seconds to use . . . protects for a whole day or a whole evening.

SAFETY! Mum has won the Seal of the American Institute of Laundering as being harmless to fabrics. And Mum won't irritate skin, even after shaving.

DEPENDABLE! Mum guards charm, not by stopping perspiration, but by preventing odor all day or all evening. Mum is pleasant, creamy, fragrant—you'll like it! Get Mum from your druggist today!

WINTER WARNING: DAINTINESS IS NOW IN DANGER!

OF COURSE WE PERSPIRE IN WINTER, ELLEN, AND WARM CLOTHES CAN MAKE THINGS WORSE! I ALWAYS USE MUM!
TO HERSELF: WHAT A GRAND PARTY! AND MUM HAS KEPT ME FRESH THROUGH ALL THESE HOURS OF DANCING!
MUM
BRISTOL-MYERS CO. NEW YORK, N.Y.

For Sanitary Napkins

More women prefer Mum for this use, too, because it's gentle, safe . . . guards charm. Avoid offending—always use Mum.

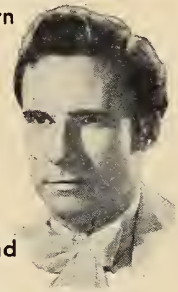
Product of Bristol-Myers

MUM

TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

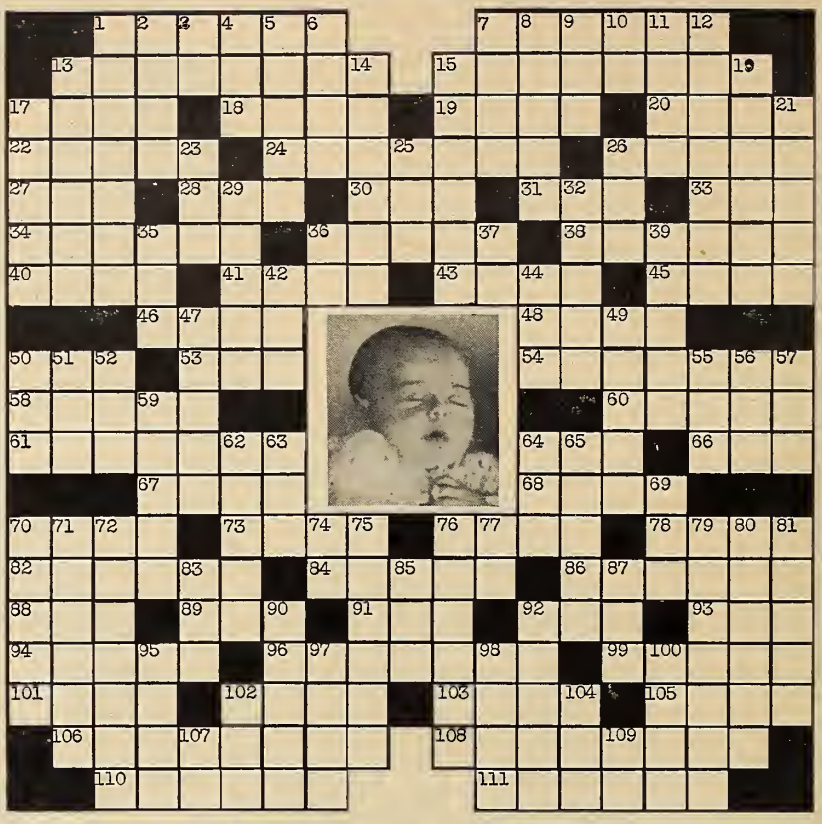
1942's BIG NEWS about a BIG PICTURE

HERE'S news about 1942's great NEW hit with the biggest cast OF stars Republic has ever ASSEMBLED. There's glamorous JOAN BLONDELL AS a Belle of THE old MISSISSIPPI IN the title ROLE of "LADY FOR A NIGHT." JOAN has NOT one—BUT two LEADING MEN!—HANDSOME JOHN WAYNE is ONE of her HEROES AND suave RAY MIDDLETON is THE other. The story is as big and EXCITING as its stars. And REPUBLIC has spared no expense IN making "LADY FOR A NIGHT" a vivid epic of life AMONG the fascinating people OF the old Southern ARISTOCRACY AND the colorful CROWD of DRAMATIC ROGUES who ply THE river for ROMANCE and ADVENTURE—and WHO don't mind BREAKING hearts as they go. IN addition to its three big stars, YOU'LL see such FAMED BROADWAY PLAYERS as PHILIP MERIVALE, BLANCHE YURKA, EDITH BARRETT, LEONID KINSKY, and MANY others. "LADY FOR A NIGHT" IS a picture for the years. It's



A REPUBLIC PICTURE

OUR PUZZLE PAGE



Puzzle Solution on Page 102

ACROSS

1. Movie-maker
7. Star of "It Started With Eve"
13. Entertainment centers
15. Star of 104-Down
17. Fruit
18. "- - - - Had Four Sons"
19. Fem in "You'll Never Get Rich"
20. List of players
22. Hero of "They Died With Their Boots On"
24. To Disneyize Cartoons
26. Star of "The Man Who Came to Dinner"
27. Slippery fish
28. Fem in "Juke Girl"
30. Comic in "Keep 'Em Flying"
31. Royal Field Artillery: abbr.
33. Ahs!
34. Pretended
36. Movie principals
38. Egg dish
40. Remarks
41. Goddard's real name
43. Hardy's pal
45. Weights of India
46. Ilona Massey's hubby
48. Roman date
50. "Dumbo's" prominent feature
53. Vivien Leigh's birthplace: abbr. across
58. Husband of 15-across
60. Star of "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day"
61. Penny Singleton's famous role
64. Previews of coming attractions
66. "Summer" to Boyer
67. "Sergeant York"
68. Eddy-Stevens treat in "Chocolate Soldier"
70. River in Belgium
73. Weird
76. First name of 15-across
78. Verbal
82. Russian dictator
84. Wading bird
86. To wit
88. Film container
89. Forever: poet.
91. Roman bronze
92. Film locale
93. Fasten
94. Tree
96. "Woo Woo" comedian
99. Housekeeper of 11-down
101. F - - - - a Inescourt
102. Musical instrument
103. Edible seeds
105. Sheet of glass
106. Desires
108. Long spears
110. Strikes
111. Most arid

DOWN

1. Inspector in "Ellery Queen" series
2. Aircraft
3. Parent
4. Gr - - - Garbo
5. Fortification
6. "Man Of - - - -"
7. A trifle
8. Penetrate
9. Luzon savage
10. Symbol for sodium
11. "- - - - Girl?"
12. Director Litvak
13. Find in "The Little Foxes"
14. Autry's side-kick
15. Deceits
16. Miss Ralston
17. Chirps
21. Film player's "exams"
23. Roddy McDowall is this
25. Extinct bird
26. Disney will produce "- - - bi"
29. Lead in "Buy Me That Town"
32. Star of "Wild Geese Calling"
35. Land of Liberty
36. 55
37. "Kathleen": init.
39. Theme
42. Conclude
44. G - - - Patrick
47. Coed in "Rise and Shine"
49. Rub out
50. Recede
51. - - - een Whelan
52. Soanish river
55. Wrath
56. Trap
57. Compass point
59. Heather - - - - -
62. French star in "Louisiana Purchase"
63. Organ of sight
64. Deanna's mother
65. Wife in "Unfinished Business"
69. Juvenile in "Niagara Falls"
70. Academy Award statue
71. Kind of type
72. He's in "Sundown"
74. Mary Martin's spouse: init.
75. Craves
76. Villain - - - - - - Calleia
77. "Accent - - Love"
79. Transplant
80. Foreigners
81. Mr. Overman
83. Suffix denoting profession
85. Our Star's greatest: "- - - ecca"
87. K - - - arine Hepburn
90. River in Europe
92. Character Gene Tierney played
95. Kind of cheese
97. Work units
98. Ingenue, Barbara - - - -
100. Epic poetry
102. Box office success
104. "Su - - - cion," a Hitchcock hit
107. Six
109. J - - l McCrea

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

even begins recalling long, complicated sequences and detailed stretches of dialogue from the past in which she herself took no part, and that's darn good recalling.

As these miraculous, second sight memories unfold we learn all about how Dewey (John Shepperd) fell in love with teacher, and how teacher, with that ravishing Claudettish smile, influenced him at crucial moments to keep on the right track in life: to follow his true bent and build boats, to go to Johnstown Prep instead of dropping out—things like that. Dewey was jealous of John Payne, the only man Claudette ever loved, but John went away to war and got killed. Dewey, it seems, married his persistent childhood sweetheart (Ann Todd) and now here he is making good down in Washington in a way that suggests his first name is really Wendell. And here they all are: Dewey and Mrs. Dewey up in their campaign headquarters, on the threshold of the White House, and Claudette down in the lobby lost in her tender recollections.

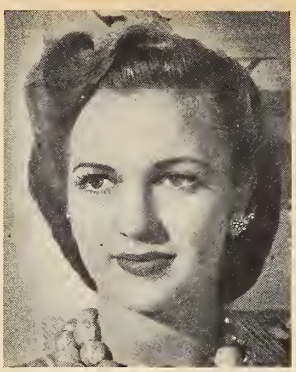
Convoyed by a flotilla of bodyguards and ward heelers through the lobby, dashing Dewey fails to recognize Claudette in her make-up. But later he makes amends for this unintentional snub by scrapping his prepared speech, dictated by the bosses, and coming out honestly in support of the incumbent President's foreign policy. Claudette, installed in the best gallery seats, beams approval. The heelers said it would mean throwing the election, and we have a feeling they were right. Something tells us Dewey Roberts was defeated in that campaign and is now stumping the country with swinging coat tails, wherever there is a crowd to listen, loyally backing the administration and looking forward with quiet confidence and perhaps just a touch of boyish wistfulness to 1944.—TCF.

P. S.

Claudette Colbert got around the "No Dogs Allowed on the Set" edict by taking out an actor's card for "Lulu Belle," her beloved French poodle puppy . . . Toughest problem of the prop department was getting furniture of the "Middle Gruesome" period, 1914-1916. Most of the stuff has been traded in so many times, it's fit only for the junk heap . . . Other studios had to rearrange their shooting schedule for two days. 20th Century-Fox was using every available "dignified type" player for the pre-presidential election rally scenes . . . Colbert's own handwriting looked pretty tired on the classroom blackboards, so for her role as a school teacher, she had to learn the orthodox Spencerian script . . . Chick Chandler has played so many newspapermen, he's decided to own a couple of papers himself. Is negotiating to buy a number of small-town dailies . . . Casting searched high and low for an expert on croquet, didn't know Director Henry King knows all the finer points of the game until they'd given up the search . . . Frieda Inescort and Claudette Colbert tried to keep it hushed up, but it finally got out that their first meeting was in a play called "Pearl of Great Price," one of the worst flops either one had ever been associated with . . . Make-up man Walter Pearce used color to age Claudette 25 years, stressing the progressive pallor that comes with age . . .

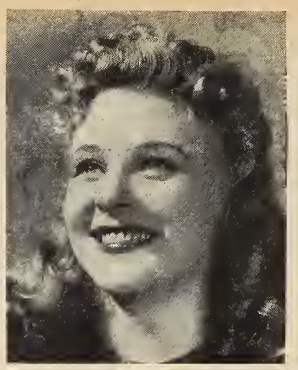
(Continued on page 83)

HIS BEDTIME STORIES WERE ABOUT OTHER WOMEN!
...It's a gay and giddy tale of love whispered at twilight...to put a smile on her lips...a gleam in her eye...and a laugh in your heart!
Fredric MARCH TELLS Loretta YOUNG
A Bedtime Story
"He whispers sweet nothings into too many ears!"
with ROBERT BENCHLEY · ALLYN JOSLYN · EVE ARDEN · HELEN WESTLEY
Screen play by Richard Flournoy · Story by Horace Jackson and Grant Garrett · Produced by B. P. SCHULBERG
Directed by ALEXANDER HALL · A COLUMBIA PICTURE



Cobina Wright, Jr.

It's hard to say whether Cobina out-glamours the men in her life or vice versa! There's been Prince Philip of Greece and gobs of others—but none so non-tarnishable as newly-acquired hubby, Corp. Palmer Beaudette! Cobina herself is a shimmering gold-plated thing with universal appeal. She was born into the social register . . . but good, until '29 . . . then made the Models' Directory and 25 U. S. dollars a day. She was voted "America's Most Beautiful Girl," "The Best-Dressed," "The Most Talented" . . . the most de luxe society songstress ever to invade the rank and file. Coolly, Cobina says she's interested in art for art's sake, but, as a meal ticket, it's simply fascinating!



Evelyn Ankers

What's Evelyn got that Frank Buck hasn't? Camellia skin, for one thing. And a stem-like torso, for another. But in their love of jungle fauna, they're surprisingly similar. Born in Valparaiso, Chile, she talks nostalgically of treks into the jungle with arrow-shooting natives in the underbrush. Evelyn debuted in Columbia; continued in London, where Alexander Korda found her. Shunting between England and South America like a goodwill ambassador, she was eventually waylaid in New York, or, more specifically, Broadway. From there, of course, it was but a quick leap to Hollywood where she's wowing 'em by her agility in all things from acting to athletics!

Maria Montez

They tell how McClelland Barclay started a search for a truly cosmopolitan woman to put on canvas . . . and how he stopped dead before this flame-haired beauty. But you hear less about how she ran away from the convent school on the Canary Islands . . . and how, eventually, the parental reins were slackened, and she was allowed to trip blithely over Europe. With her compelling beauty, it was logical that she should have wound up with a film contract. Valued among her heirlooms are crown jewels from the 15th century. Valued more is her Spanish love for all things beautiful . . . from opera to swing, from Rembrandt to Disney, from Dickens to you-name-it.

Evelyn Keyes

If you like placing personalities neatly in pigeon holes, put her along side Gloria Swanson and Leatrice Joy, because she's of their ilk. Evelyn danced her way across the South only to flunk the screen test she'd been sweating for. But chapter 2 finds Evelyn under the wing of a DeMille staff writer who saw gigantic possibilities in her petal-skinned, sloe-eyed oval face. Add to that a softness of speech, a thoroughbred air, and you'll understand why DeMille put her under contract. First presented over the air, the studio audience broke out into such hearty huzzahs, the echo was heard through Filmdom. From then on it was easy . . . and according to Ev wonderful fun!

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
Accent an Love (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Adventure in Washingtan (Calumbia)	3★
Affectionately Yours (Warners)	2½★
All That Money Can Buy (RKO)	3½★
Apache Kid (Republic)	3★
Arizana Baund (Monogram)	C 2½★
*Babes on Broadway (M-G-M)	4★
Bad Man af Deadwaad (Republic)	2½★
*Bahama Passage (Paramount)	3½★
*Ball of Fire (RKO)	3½★
Barnacle Bill (M-G-M)	2½★
Belle Starr (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Big Store, The (M-G-M)	C 3½★
Billy the Kid (M-G-M)	C 3★
Birth of the Blues (Paramount)	3★
Black Cat, The (Universal)	2½★
Blande fram Singapare, The (Calumbia)	2★
Blandie in Society (Columbia)	C 2½★
Blood and Sand (20th Century-Fox)	C 3½★
Blassams in the Dust (M-G-M)	4★
Bawery Blitzkrieg (Monagram)	2★
Bride Came C. O. D., The (Warners)	3½★
Burma Canvay (Universal)	2½★
Buy Me That Tawn (Paramount)	3★
Caught in the Draft (Paramount)	3★
Charley's Aunt (20th Century-Fax)	3½★
Charlie Chan in Ria (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Chacalate Saldier (M-G-M)	3½★
Christmas in July (Paramount)	3★
City Limits (Monogram)	C 2★
Come Live With Me (M-G-M)	3★
Comin' Raund the Mountain (Paramount)	2★
County Fair (Republic)	2★
Cracked Nuts (Universal)	2½★
Date With Murder, A (RKO)	2½★
Dance Hall (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Doctors Don't Tell (Republic)	2★
Dumbo (RKO)	C 3½★
Ellery Queen and the Murder Ring (Calumbia)	2½★
Father Takes a Wife (RKO)	2½★
Flying Cadets (Universal)	2★
Farced Landing (Paramount)	2½★
Fargotten Village, The	3½★
Free, Blonde and 21 (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Gangs af Sanora (Republic)	2½★
Gay Falcon, The (RKO)	2½★
Getaway, The (M-G-M)	2½★
Go West, Young Lady (Columbia)	2★
Great Guns (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Great Prafile, The (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Gunman from Bodie, The (Monogram)	2★
Harman of Michigan (Columbia)	2★
Hello Sucker (Universal)	2½★
*Hellzapappin' (Universal)	3½★
Henry Aldrich for President (Paramount)	C 3★
Here Comes Mr. Jardan (Calumbia)	4★
Her First Beau (Columbia)	C 3★
He Stayed for Breakfast (Calumbia)	2½★
Hit the Raad (Universal)	C 2½★
*H. M. Pulham, Esq. (M-G-M)	3½★
Hold Back the Dawn (Paramaunt)	3½★
Haneymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Honky Tonk (M-G-M)	3★
How Green Was My Valley (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Hullabaloa (M-G-M)	2★
Hurry, Charlie, Hurry (RKO)	2½★
Ice-Capades (Republic)	2½★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I'll Wait For You (M-G-M)	2½★
In The Navy (Universal)	3½★
International Lady (United Artists)	3★
International Squadran (Warners)	3½★
Isle of Destiny (RKO)	2★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
It Started With Eve (Universal)	4★
Jesse James at Bay (Republic)	2½★
*Johnny Eager (M-G-M)	3½★
*Jungle Book, The (United Artists)	4★
*Kathleen (M-G-M)	3★
Keep 'Em Flying (Universal)	3★
Knackaut (Warners)	2½★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	C 3½★
Ladies in Retirement (Columbia)	3½★
Lady Be Good (M-G-M)	3★
Lady is Willing, The (Columbia)	2½★
Land af Liberty (M-G-M)	3★
Last af the Duanes (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Law af the Trapics (Warners)	2½★
Life With Henry (Paramaunt)	C 2½★
Little Foxes, The (RKO)	4★
*Lauisiana Purchase (Paramount)	3½★
Lave Crazy (M-G-M)	3½★
Lydia (United Artists)	3½★
Maisie Was a Lady (M-G-M)	2½★
The Maltese Falcon (Warners)	3½★
Man at Large (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Man Hunt (20th Century-Fax)	3½★
Manpower (Warners)	3★
Married Bachelar (M-G-M)	3★
Millian Dallar Baby (Warners)	3½★
Mr. and Mrs. Smith (RKO)	3★
Mab Town (Universal)	2★
Maan Over Burma (Paramaunt)	2½★
Moon Over Her Shoulder (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Maan Over Miami (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Maanlight in Hawaii (Universal)	2½★
My Life with Caroline (RKO)	3★
Navy Blues (Warners)	C 3★
Never Give A Sucker An Even Break (Universal)	3★
New York Town (Paramaunt)	2★
Night Train (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Nine Lives Are Nat Enough (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Officer and the Lady, The (Columbia)	2½★

(Continued on page 106)

Silkier, Smoother Hair...Easier to Manage Lovelier Beyond Belief!

New hair-do with soft, natural-looking wave and curls . . . by Thomas Frank, famous Chicago hairstylist.

Amazing improvement in Special Drene Shampoo! Now contains wonderful hair conditioner to give new beauty thrills!

● If you haven't tried Special Drene lately —since it has that thrilling hair conditioner in it—you simply can't realize just how much lovelier your hair can look! Because it now makes the most amazing difference—leaves hair so much silkier, smoother . . . makes it behave better, fall into place more beautifully, right after shampooing!

Reveals up to 33% more lustre!

Yes! In addition to the extra beauty benefits of that amazing hair conditioner, Special Drene still reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or liquid soap shampoos! For Drene is not just a soap shampoo, so it never leaves any dulling film, as all soaps do! Hair washed with Special Drene sparkles with alluring highlights, glows with glorious, natural color. Do you wonder that girls everywhere are so delighted with this new improved Special Drene Shampoo?

Unsurpassed for removing dandruff!

And when it comes to removing dandruff, no special "dandruff remover" shampoo known today can beat Drene! You know how important cleansing is in removing dandruff—so just remember that for cleansing Drene is supreme! Try improved Special Drene right away—or ask your beauty operator to use it!

LOOK FOR THIS PACKAGE!

All Special Drene now at your dealer's in the blue and yellow package is the new, improved Special Drene containing

HAIR CONDITIONER

and is for every type of hair . . . dry, oily or normal. Just look for Special Drene —in the blue and yellow package!

Avoid That Dulling Film Left By Soaps and Soap Shampoos!

Don't rob your hair of glamour by using soaps or liquid soap shampoos —which always leave a dulling film that dims the natural lustre and color brilliance! Use Drene—the beauty shampoo with the exclusive patented cleansing ingredient which cannot leave a clouding film! Instead, it reveals up to 33% more lustre!

To make 1942 your greatest entertainment year!

20th Century-Fox is now producing these grand, new pictures you'll soon be seeing in your favorite theatre!

ASK YOUR LOCAL THEATRE MANAGER WHEN HE'LL SHOW THEM!

TYRONE POWER
in
SON of FURY
The Story of Benjamin Blake
with
GENE TIERNEY
Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK

BETTY GRABLE
VICTOR MATURE
JACK OAKIE
in SONG OF THE ISLANDS
in TECHNICOLOR

GINGER ROGERS
in ROXIE HART
with
ADOLPHE MENJOU
GEORGE MONTGOMERY

JEAN GABIN
IDA LUPINO
in Moontide
with
CLAUDE RAINS

Rita HAYWORTH
in
MY GAL SAL
in TECHNICOLOR

JOHN PAYNE · MAUREEN O'HARA · RANDOLPH SCOTT
in
TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI
in TECHNICOLOR

20th CENTURY FOX

NOW! STIRRING THE HEART OF THE NATION!

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY

Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK • Directed by JOHN FORD

EUGENE RICHEE

MARTHA O'DRISCOLL . . . There's a lilt to her laugh and a tilt to her nose that's Irish as shamrock. And then, of course, there's that name to prove her lineage. But for sheer directness of purpose, she's American to the marrow. Been doing odd jobs around the kleig lights since she was 13 . . . wowed them back in Phoenix, Arizona, when she was still reading her lines with a lisp of baby-talk. Modeled when she was 4. Whizzed out to Hollywood with Mom before her 14th birthday and danced herself into a Paramount chorus, glibly passing herself off as 18; and Hollywood, the super-sceptical, was taken in! Has finally worked herself up to a luscious, picture-book farmhouse of her own on Toluca Lake, which she shares with her mom and a kid brother. Came by success haunting studios, watching the stars twinkle and the directors hypnotize. Now she's something to watch in Paramount's "Reap the Wild Wind." Not just the luster of her acting, but that 118-lb. figger of hers and those surprising hazel eyes and that shining ash-blond head. If you like 'em dainty, Martha's your gal . . . or would be, if Richard Denning hadn't got there first.

RODDY McDOWALL . . . What a tausle-headed kid can da, single-handed, ta the great American public is really somepin' ta see! Sweeping the cauntry like a rumar, Raddy captivated all and sundry as Huw in "Haw Green Was My Valley." Gat the role partly because af the little Welsh maid the McDawalls used ta have in Landan. Rad had her accent down ta the last ralled syllable. And 20th Century-Fax now has Rad down an a cantract that will take him well inta maturity. He'll be mesmerizing mavie-gaers next in 20th's "San af Fury." Raddy laves architecture like some guys love faatball . . . laves movies even mare. Was fed Shakespeare right alang with his mashed bananas . . . has 16 British films ta his credit . . . used to sleep an the set between raids. Seeing na value in a check, he demands payment in cash; the studio pacifies him with a ten spot after each picture. Hated ta leave the electric excitement af British air raids but thinks Hallywaad manages ta be electric just naturally without help af jerries! Only plaint is it leaves him na time far architecture and thase frighteningly intricate maps and blueprints af his!

VIRGINIA GREY . . . If he's tall, dark and intelligent with an on-tune warble and a divine sense of the ridiculous, he's Ginny Grey's! She doesn't go for hand-kissing and heel-clicking! One look at her serene, shapely (5' 5", 117 lb.) beauty, and he'll fall at her feet along with half the cinema lads and joe jerks in the country. She won't drag him to night clubs, 'cause she had her fill of honky tonk during chorine days. Says her dream man must be fundamentally athletic to fill the bill. She'll give him plenty of competition swimming and shooting but won't budge on a golf course or tennis court. When he comes a-courtin', she and her sister Lorraine (her stand-in) will feed him one of the most gorgeous chicken and strawberry shortcake dinners he ever tasted. Her dad, one of the early film bigwigs, hoped and prayed none of his kids would enter the risky business. But his early death necessitated Ginny's working, and the first job she could get her hands on was the role of Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." At 14, she retired to teach contemporary social buds dancing. Back in films again, she's won fame and fortune and a coveted role in M-G-M's "Mr. and Mrs. North."

VIC MATURE . . . When the beautiful man was married, there wasn't a dry-eyed gal from here to Honolulu! Or anyhow, that's how the publicity department tells it. 'Cause Vic is the test tube baby of Hollywood publicists. Blames them for the 60,000 fan letters that deluged him after a five-minute bit in his first picture. True, he's a gorgeous hunk of stuff, but he'll probably sock the guy who says so. True, he's run the gamut of glamour from Betty Grable to Liz Whitney . . . but half the gals they had him sending orchids to, he never even knew. Doesn't dance a violent rumba; in fact, would rather sit it out. Doesn't sleep in green satin pajamas and never had a manicure in his life. Isn't sartorially splendid, either. Lives in floppy tweeds, goes hatless, is mildly claustrophobic, likes horse and buggy-ing. Avoided proposals of marriage with practiced skill until menaced by Martha Kemp. Could quit the flickers and retire for a while on the chunky fortune he just inherited . . . but why should he when there are roles like 20th Century-Fox's "Song of the Islands" just waiting to be snagged by guys with blue eyes, black hair and 198 lbs. of unpadded muscle?

MAUREEN O'HARA . . . Everybody's coming away from "How Green Was My Valley" utterly ga-ga over gorgeous Maureen O'Hara! Twentieth Century-Fox is taking advantage of its 5' 7", 124-lb. opportunity and again starring her in "To The Shores of Tripoli." Her mom and pop believed in starting their kids in young, put Maureen and the rest in the role of Jack the Giant Killer as soon as they could toddle across the stage of their back-yard playhouse. At 12, she was dubbed the "pocket size Bernhardt" by hometown Dubliners, and at 14, crashed the sacred precincts of the Abbey Players. Chas. Laughton thought she was wonderful, gave her a 7-year contract, sold her to the public in "Jamaica Inn." Maureen blithely leased a London mansion for 7 years, only to leave a week later for Hollywood. A few minutes before setting sail, she climaxed a whirlwind romance by wedding ass't. director Geo. Brown. Realizing that distance was lending no enchantment, she recently divorced him. Lives with her mom in a bungalow, is too scared of traffic to drive. Rummages around bookshops after Gaelic tomes on her days off!

FRANK POWOLNY

BRUCE BENNETT . . . Old-timers will remember him as Herman Brix, sensational U. of Washington athlete and Olympic Game champ! More recent arrivals know him as that super-duper actor in Columbia's "Honolulu Lu." Born in Tacoma, Wash., he's all of 6' 2" tall, weighs an even 192 lbs., got that way logging in his pop's lumber camp summers during high school. At college it was so much duck soup for him to out-row, out-tackle, out-run and -jump every senior star on campus. They put him in the Olympic Games in '28, sat back and crowed as he wielded a javelin that broke world records, shotput competing champs to shame. Requests galore besieged him to teach and coach. But he'd always nursed a yen to act, decided to take a lick at it in '32. His first film, "Touchdown," should have been easy as pie what with his football technique. But not so . . . ironically broke a shoulder in the first flicker game and was laid up a year. Only after his next pic, which left him stranded in Guatemala when the producer went broke, did the jinx break. Once back on shore, life's been a bowl of cherries to Bruce and his cute spouse Jeanette Cannon!

GRETA GARBO . . . Shy and gangling in tired tweeds and a slouch hat, yet as gosh-awful glamorous as anything Hollywood ever pulled out of its sleeve. When Garbo cried, you had "Camille" . . . when she laughed, you had "Ninotchka." (So welcome was that husky ripple of hers, she's doing a repeat in M-G-M's "Two-Faced Woman.") But whatever she does, you have a cameo of a woman as lustrous as mother-of-pearl. Many remember when she had John Gilbert hypnotized . . . and Mamoulian . . . and Stokowski. Right now they're taking a Boy Scout oath that she's married to Gaylord Hauser, but still, who knows? The studio crew likes to tell how Garbo's first English words were "apple sauce," she had heard it around the set so often. But uttered in that deep, sad voice, it took on new meaning. Other G. G. legends . . . that she spurns cosmetics . . . that she lopes along the countryside for miles each day . . . that she's a push-over for health diets . . . that the studio paid $400 a lesson to teach the long-stemmed beauty to rumba. Flagrant extravagance, what with all the guys that'd teach her for a smile!

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

Lana Turner

Caprice-ridden, whim-tossed Lana can reverse her field like an all-American back! That's part of what makes her so wonderful!

• Like a lovely, honey-haired star shell, Lana Turner exploded over New York and vicinity on her recent trip East. Like trailing sparks, rumors buzzed around her head. One that glowed brightest, kept gossip columnists at nail-gnawing fever heat, shouted that she and Artie Shaw would remarry.

They had lunched together, dined together, beamed cheerfully for photohawks. Lana was, if anything, more radiant than usual. Moody Artie seemed enveloped in a glow.

Another try at marriage? Another attempt to fuse two spectacular lives, two pyrotechnical personalities?

We don't know. We won't even guess. By the time you read this, Lana might be a dewy-eyed bride. She might be nursing the aftermath of a bitter quarrel with Artie, vowed to life-long spinsterhood. She might be anything.

We asked Judy Garland, Lana's closest friend. Judy grinned and threw up her hands. "She told me on the phone there wouldn't be a reconciliation. But I wouldn't put any-

She still loves dolls, has dozens. Keeps that little-girl complexion with cold cream and olive oil.

"When I was 10, I socked the boy next door in the nose. It was a very lovely sock, too," says Lana.

Lana, Judy Garland and Mickey used to do their high school cramming together outdoors on the set of "Love Finds Andy Hardy."

Lana Turner

CONTINUED

thing past Lana, to tell you the absolute truth!"

Judy and the rest of Lana's small circle remember only too well how insistently she denied any matrimonial intent before running off with Artie the first time. She meant it sincerely then, of course—and probably means it now.

Right now she's the hottest young thing on high heels in Hollywood. She's Miss America in the movie theaters of the land. There's no point in bringing up the polls, the box-office tolls, the honors, accolades or those 800 fan letters swamping M-G-M's mail room every day.

When a twenty-year-old lady successfully dishes off three pictures in a row with Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable and Robert Taylor, she has arrived. When her studio writes a new contract with a fat-figured new salary, she is in. When she checks a wedding ring for a professional future, she's pretty safe.

All this has given current rise to the Hollywood legend that Miss Lana Turner is suddenly something different from Miss Lana Turner. That's not necessarily so. She may work harder and play less but Lana is still Lana. And, like Popeye, she is what she is.

If anything, Lana Turner is typically young and thoroughly female. She is a show-off and she is shy. She is a dynamo when she likes, and dog-lazy when she doesn't. She is flashy; she has surprisingly good taste; she is shrewd. She is sentimental and she's also cold. She's independent but she's helpless, too. She's extravagant in some things and miserly in others. She's hardboiled and soft-hearted. She's cocky and inferiority complexed.

Most of all, Lana Turner is spectacular.

One close friend of Lana's says, "Lana can be not dressed up and still be dressed up more than anyone I know." By that she means there is something in the Turner personality which simply must bid for attention, relaxed or on the qui vive.

When Lana slips into slacks, the slacks are carefully tailored (and usually white). And there's an angora jacket, slippers, bag, blouse and the works, all carefully calculated in the color scheme. If her hair-do is careless, it is artfully careless. She's carefully groomed, her make-up in place.

When Lana returned from Honolulu, the first big trip of her life, she sported a marvelous Hawaiian chocolate-bar tan. She'd spent long days baking it in, carefully counting on the "Ohs" and "Ahs" it would win her back in Hollywood. The day she sailed home, an Island girl she'd met told her, "Don't count on keeping that color until you get home, my little malahini. Nothing fades faster than an Island tan. You'll lose it in the week on the boat."

Lana was horrified. The tan and its expected effect was a major trophy of the trip. The first day at sea she spent on deck but, to her eyes at least, the mahogany coat started to bleach. Every day thereafter she camped under a sun lamp!

When her boat docked, Lana tripped down the gangplank in a holy-white dress, setting off her preserved tan like a vacation poster. (Continued on page 70)

Tony Martin, now in the navy, squired Lana patiently for months, but it was no soap!

Lana's been night-clubbing with Bobby Stack (above at the Copa Cobana), flying with Roger Pryor.

Jimmy Hyde, Lana's agent, chins with her about "Johnny Eager," her latest plum. Her box-office appeal slumped somewhat after her marriage.

After dining with Artie Shaw in Chicago at 3 one morning, there were rumors of a second Shaw-Turner marriage attempt!

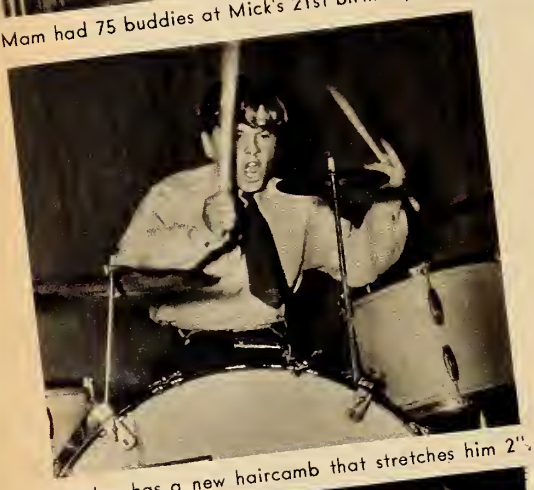
Washington fans who tore Lana's fox coat to shreds for souvenirs will be happy she's finally teamed opposite Taylor in "Johnny Eager."

Mrs. Turner runs her daughter a surprisingly close second in glamour! For her last birthday, Lana's mom gave her a piano. The RAF deluged her with gifts of shell fragments and war souvenirs.

My Son, Mick

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

Mam had 75 buddies at Mick's 21st birthday party.



Mickey has a new haircamb that stretches him 2".

Ginny Hill, Mick and Sid Miller breakfasted at 4.

Mick stale first scene at 15 mas. fram his dad.

Raaney pulls his Barrymore stuff.

● This is Mick as seen by his mother.

Mrs. Pankey is small. Blue eyes twinkle behind her glasses, and humor keeps her from being sappy about her ewe lamb. She wears her hair piled on top of her head with nine hundred curls. Allow eight hundred and fifty for poetic exaggeration—hers.

"My son gets to be twenty-one, and I can't have my hair cut. I like it short. It's a nuisance this way. But no, all of a sudden it has to be long and look like Spring Byington's. Every night he comes home, he says: 'Gee, Mom, your hair looks swell.' Buttering me up. Afraid I'll go out some day when he isn't looking and have it cut."

Mick knows she'd tie her hair into bowknots if that was what he wanted. The relationship between them is a nice thing to see. That she worships him goes without saying. Mickey gives as good as he gets. I saw him a few years ago when they lived at an apartment hotel. He was itching to buy her a house. "Sure, I'll live there, too, but first it's for her. She used to manage a bungalow court to keep us goin'. The day she gets a nice place of her own to manage, that'll be the prettiest day of my life."

He's forever bringing her things. (Continued on page 80)

Ava Gardiner, North Carolina cutie (at left), flaunts an oversized topaz friendship ring, courtesy of Mickey. At right, "old-timer" Ann Rutherford.

Rooney and Garland in "Babes on Braadway."

Mick laves his dog first, his chicken farm second.

When life slipped Mrs. Rooney a Mickey, it wasn't fooling! She's still got a hang-over . . . and loves it!

FIRST LOVE

Other loves may grow deeper, but none is so tender and cruel as that first poignant romance! Here are the puppy loves that Hollywood didn't forget!

BY JEANNE KARR

● Ray Milland was making his first Hollywood picture, playing his first love scene. Visitors stood around gaping. In those days studios weren't as fussy about visitors on the set. Besides, this was only a B. Besides, who was Ray Milland, anyway—?

The director said, "Roll 'em." Awkward with nervousness, Ray put his arms round the girl and bent to kiss her. Instead of meeting his lips, she burst out laughing. For a moment he stood there, white-faced, then wheeled and strode off. Returning a few moments later, he muttered something about a dizzy spell. Actually, an old wound had been opened—

Ray had been fourteen when Kathleen came to live in Neith. She was so beautiful, she dazzled him. He hardly dared raise his eyes to look at her. Yet he couldn't keep away from her, either. When she walked down one side of the street, he'd walk down the other, pretending he wasn't there. It was she who sent his heart skyward by speaking first. He'd borrow coppers from his sisters to buy candy for her. He dreamed of being her faithful knight, of gallantly saving her life.

Since nothing turned up to save her life from, Ray cooked up a plan. There was to be a Sunday school picnic by the river bank. In front of them all, he'd ride his bicycle up and down the bank as no bicycle had ever been ridden before. He'd be her knight on wheels instead of a horse. There'd be cheers and applause from the crowd, but she'd know he'd really done it just for her.

It went beautifully at first. The kids were enchanted.

"Faster!" they yelled. He pedalled furiously, took his hands from the bars. The bike struck a stone, wavered and tumbled him into the stream.

Wrapped ignominiously in blankets while a boy scooted home for dry clothes, he brooded. Kathleen hadn't come near him. When they started back after sundown, he lagged along by himself. At a turn in the road, Kathleen stood waiting.

"I'm sorry you got wet, Ray—"

His heart soared. "I only did it for you—" She looked so sweet, so angelically sympathetic that he lost his head. An arm stole round her shoulder, he bent to kiss her. And she laughed in his face.

He refused to leave the house for a week. But ten years had passed, and until the girl in the picture laughed, he'd have scoffed at the notion that the memory still hurt. It doesn't any more. He saw Kathleen on a visit to England three years ago. She's not a fairy-tale princess any longer, just the very nice wife of a London business man and the mother of three children!

ANN SHERIDAN

"Stinny called!" cried Ann. "He's coming over tonight."

"That's nice," said her mother placidly.

Mothers didn't understand, Ann decided, alone in her bedroom with her bliss. Stinny was coming over! Stinny, the dream prince of the high school, the young god every girl in the place would give her eyeteeth for. But they hadn't a chance. For the past year he'd been signed, sealed and delivered up to Helen—Helen whom Ann called her worst enemy and, when you asked her why,—"because she's a snob." As for herself, Stinny'd never given her a tumble. "Ludy's a nice kid—" (She was Ludy in those days, short for Clara Lou.) "Ludy's a very nice kid," he'd grin, and she'd burn.

Now he'd phoned and was coming over. Why? What about Helen? Well, she'd soon find out. Humming she bathed and got into her prettiest dress.

"Lo, Ludy."

"Hello." He was in a mood. Okay, she wouldn't pester him. If he wanted to talk, he could. If not, he could sit on the porch and be peaceful. After a while, he started talking—about school, about football, about the gang. Then he said, "I suppose you're wondering why I came over tonight."

"No. Just glad to have you."

He looked up at her from the lower step. "You're a nice kid, Lu—"

"So you've said before."

He laughed. "But this time I mean something different. Will you go to the dance with me next week?"

It slipped out before she could stop it. "What about Helen?"

"Nothing about Helen. We're through. Some girls," he added darkly after a pause, "are always wanting to get married."

So that was it. Well, that was fine. She didn't want to get married. How silly of Helen. Now she'd lost him. But how nice for Ann—

Till about three months later Stinny said, "Will you marry me, Ludy?" She thought he was kidding, and the discovery that he wasn't scared the daylights out of her. "I'm never going to marry," she told him. "I'm always going to live with my father and mother."

He gave her no peace. One night four of them went to a dance at Fort Worth. Stinny struck his favorite theme once too often. "You've got to quit," Ann flared, "or we're through."

"I'll never quit, Ludy."

Ann went home with the other boy. She wouldn't take Stinny's calls. At last he stopped calling. But before she left for Hollywood, he sent her a note. "I guess you've changed your mind about always living with your father and mother. But not about me. Good luck, Ludy."

JEAN GABIN

"Good night," said Jean.

"Good night," said Josette.

"Till tomorrow—?"

"Till tomorrow."

Gabin walked home, head in the clouds. They'd met that evening at a bal musette—the informal dance of the French working classes. (Continued on page 90)

Gene's been wooing his ex-schoolmarm wife, Ina Mae Spivey, ever since he first set eyes on her back in '32!

A goodly share of his fabulous $75,000 wardrobe is tied up in red and blue tooled leather boots at $40 a throw. Pays $50 for his ten-gallon lids!

Champ's gone Hollywood in a big way! Plays to the gallery and demands applause. Lives in deodorized stable and indulges in hoof manicures!

MILLION DOLLAR COWBOY

More exciting than his screen thriller-dillers—

the story of Gene Autry and the woman

he loves! Scooped by Modern Screen!

Currently filming "Sierra Sue," he gets away from it all week-ends at his small, servantless Melody Ranch.

BY JEAN FRANCIS WEBB

Gene's fan mail tops any other star's. Has had several proposals and once got a request to sign a $1,000 check.

Autry gives Champ the best. Air-conditioned van has hot and cold water and a groom!

● Midwinter wind cut mighty cold across the open country in Oklahoma. It rattled around the eaves of the postage-stamp St. Louis & Frisco station at Chelsea like ghosts at a barn dance.

Gene Autry, the railroad telegrapher, glanced up from his guitar as the door slammed open. Cold air whirled inside with the rangy stranger, and the kerosene lamp flickered. Blinking cold from his eyes, the newcomer grinned slowly.

"Was it you playin' that music, young feller?"

"Reckon it was," he answered the stranger modestly.

The man came closer, blowing on his hands. Friendly wrinkles fanned around his eyes. "How about knockin' off a little ditty now?"

The man listened. He even took over the guitar for a couple of numbers of his own, before he handed young Gene the telegram he had originally come to send. And as he did so, he grinned again.

"Young feller," he drawled, "you're wastin' your time on this railroad. You ought to be on the radio. Some day you'll make a heap of money with that voice of yours."

Will Rogers was the signature scrawled on the telegram. Holy cow! Will Rogers—the Will Rogers—had liked his singing!

Although Gene didn't know it, that same chill wind was blowing another fragment of fate closer across the prairie. The Big Depression was finally hitting Oklahoma. Even railroads had to cut down, somewhere.

It was a tough New York he hit, not long after the night he finally made his decision to follow Will Rogers' advice. Yet week after week, the dogged young man with the guitar kept at it.

Fate decided to drop in on him again one morning, like a hundred other mornings of waiting, in the anteroom of the RCA Victor Company. She was disguised, this time, as a pretty young switchboard operator. And all she said was, "You've been hanging around here with that guitar since I cut my first tooth. Someday I'd like to hear you use it." Gene tilted his head and began to give. It seemed to bring his beloved West closer. Big, cold-shouldering New York began to fade, and—"Where you from, son?"

He gulped as he answered, "Oklahoma, Mister."

"Like to hack out a couple of numbers, (Continued on page 68)

After dinner the Vaughn Pauls (Deanna Durbin) and Johnny Paynes (Anne Shirley) danced to a 6-piece ork (with Rooney at the drums), had their fortunes told and marveled at a magician's show. Before leaving at 2:30, they ate a buffet supper, were gifted with miniature favors.

Bob Stack brought chum Bill Orr's best gal, Virginia O'Brien, dead-pan singer. Both entered bubble-blowing contest but won no prizes!

Garland and Kooney came late in street togs after previewing "Babes on Broadway." Ann designed her own gown with skirt slit to knee Guests arrived at 8:30, immediately sat down to a fried chicken dinner served by 20 negro waiters and waitresses. Rand Brooks and Gloria de Haven were among 52 celebrities invited!

Mick was only guest to remember Ann's birthday and bring a gift—a make-up traveling case. Left with Ava Gardiner.

Party of the Month . . .

Ann Rutherford's 22nd birthday party was as big as a deMille production! Tossed by suitor Dave May's parents (dep't. store scions) in their 25-room mansion, it cost $2,000. Cake with frosting-inscribed "Happy birthday, Ann, stay as sweet as you are" contained music box pealing greetings!

BY TYRONE POWER
AS TOLD TO IDA ZEITLIN

Days I remember in 1941

More poignant than a love story, more intimate than a diary—here's a warm living picture of the real Ty Power!

Mexico City, January 8th.

• Saw my first bullfight. I didn't particularly want to. Rather see a good football game any day. Knew I wouldn't understand the fine points. You can't unless you're born to it or make a thoroughgoing study of it like Hemingway. "If I don't like it," I told Annabella, "I'll get up after the first bull and go out." She smiled. The smile that means she's not saying all she thinks. She was keener about going than I was. She's seen bullfights abroad.

Well, it's true I didn't get the fine points. All the time the crowds were yelling olé, olé, I wondered what the devil they were yelling about. I did enjoy the color and pageantry, though, and felt no impulse to leave. But even if I had, I'd have stuck.

We'd been seated where the crowds couldn't miss us, and apparently all twenty-five thousand knew we'd come to Mexico to shoot scenes for "Blood and Sand," with me as the matador. Which made me their personal concern. They smiled, waved, shouted advice, information, encouragement, and when something especially exciting happened in the ring, they'd rise as one man—or so it seemed to my self-consciousness—pointing from the ring to me and yelling their heads off. After one such mark of attention, my wife leaned over. "What would they think if you left?"

I grinned. "You tell me."

"'Sissy! He can't even sit and look at a bullfight. How can he look a bull in the face when he plays?'"

Off Mazatlan, January 31st.

We've had three perfect days on the island. Annabella kept recognizing spots from the endless diagrams I've drawn. "This is the cove—". "Here is the clump of palms—"

"You have been here before?" asked the boatman we hired to run us over.

"No, but my husband has talked and talked—"

After hearing so much about it, I was afraid she might be disappointed. But she fell as hard as I did that day I first clapped eyes on it and leased it from the Mexican government. (Continued on page 86)

Frances Farmer shares a sultry scene with Ty in "Son of Fury." Frau Annabella just refused 3 stage offers in N. Y.

Tyrone's just adopted his 7th dog from the city pound. Can't resist them, especially when they're homeless!

Annabella says, "We are never apart. I so completely fill my husband's life, there is no room for another woman."

Bob (rt. front) earned his first dime at 10, warbling on street corners! His mom, an English concert singer, coached his squeaky soprano.

"What a square meal would have done for this combination," says Hope of his early Ohio vaudeville team, discovered by Fatty Arbuckle.

The Chandler Motor Co. Quartet got their walking papers when the boss found them using his dictaphone for song recordings!

During production of "La. Purchase," Bob had to bleach his ruddy tan with lemon juice so he wouldn't Technicolor like an Indian!

THEY GOT ME COVERED

BY BOB HOPE

There was a great deal of excitement at the little house next door to the Barretts of Wimpole Street. My best friend was having a baby. Me. I was born in the year (see your local draft board), London, England. London and my father were very foggy that night. It was so foggy, I could hardly see the doctor before my face.

They decided to name me Lester Townes Hope, and at the time I didn't care much one way or the other. But when I grew up I began to care, and it wasn't one way—it was the other. So I changed it.

Our family left England shortly after I was born and sailed to America to forget. The next part of my childhood was spent in Cleveland, Ohio—a great city in spite of that. Becoming a child was a big step for me, and very often on my face.

I was such a beautiful baby. I had long golden curls down to my hips. Mother was proud of my mop of golden curls. Besides, they came in handy to polish the car with. It wasn't until I got my first haircut that I had to wear a shirt.

We had a pretty big family as families go, and ours just seemed to keep going. My father was the proud father of seven boys. In fact, he was the Bing Crosby of his day. He ruled the household with an iron hand. At least that was what it felt like. He spanked me so hard once I went to the fortuneteller and got his palm read. I always seemed to be in trouble with him. I used to spend so much time in the woodshed, once a year a man had to come over and treat me for termites.

One day my father laid down the law to me. Grabbing me by the nose he said: "Lester, run down to the barber shop and get a shave. You're going to start kindergarten today." That (Continued on page 88)

The Hopes live on a N. Hollywood estate, have 2 adopted kids, 2 Cadillacs and a station wagon!

Colonna is the music-maker of their program:

Bob's face got that-a-way when a tree fell on it. He and Colonna miss Brenda and Cobina on the program this year

NON-STOP HONEYMOON

Ronnie's brother is in radio. His dad owned a shoe store.

Reagan (at right) starred in Eureka College football.

It was a short hop from sports writing to sports announcing!

They live on love and like it—those blissful hom

● When Jane first met Reagan, she didn't believe he was true. By her own rating, Jane's a cynical wench. ("It's an act," says her husband. "I know.") Battling her own way from an early age, she came up against all kinds and ended by taking very few on trust.

Then along came Reagan, loving his fellow men. Jane would eye him in wonder and exasperation. "I'd like to hear you knock someone, just for a change—"

"Name him," said Ronnie, always obliging. Jane did. "Oh, he's okay. Always been swell to me. Don't believe everything you hear."

"But I didn't hear it, I know it."

"Well, maybe somebody conked him as a babe, and he never got over it. Anyway, what's it to us? Play golf."

"Ronnie, you really believe all that stuff, don't you? About people being decent, and they'd rather boost you than knife you?"

"Hell, yes. How could you go on living if you didn't?

By Kaaren Pieck

Shooting a scene with Edw. Robinson recently, Jane over-zealously kissed out his front tooth! That's "Nutsy" she's holding.

Ronnie leaves his usual billet-doux for Jane before starting for W. B. where he's making "King's Row."

Stop talking such nonsense and go on with your golf."

Jane swung her club and fell in love at the same moment. After two years of marriage she's more in love than when they started. She knows now by experience, not just intuition, that Ronnie's viewpoint stems from strength, not naiveté; from a steady faith and kindliness which draws a response in the same coin. People's eyes warm when his name comes up.

He measures values by the long view, not by the moment. "Look at the stars and remember that we all die." She's never seen him lose his temper. He gets mad, but controls it. And he won't waste anger on trifles. To his sense of proportion, anything's a trifle that involves no lasting harm.

Like the time Jane was driving him to the airport to see him off on a personal appearance tour. This was before they were married.

"I'll drive," said Ronnie.

"No, me. It's my car, and I know it better than you do."

She's a good driver. But she was wearing her first pair of wedgies, her foot slipped on the brake and she crashed into the curb. Sitting small and woebegone and somewhat shaken, she waited for the male to detonate. He pulled her against a comforting shoulder. "Janey, please," he said mildly, "next time I drive."

Jane's own temper is quick. That's why when she gets mad, she prefers not to have him around. "He makes me ashamed." She's tried to subdue it and thinks she's succeeded to some degree, but remarks dryly that her greatest success would still leave room for improvement.

However, Ronnie's softening effect on Jane is noticeable. One of those days at the studio when everything went wrong . . . her wardrobe, her make-up, her hair-do . . . Ronnie chose a bad moment to pop into the dressing room. His wife was laying down the law.

"Now, Janey," he said.

She turned. "Look, Reagan, (Continued on page 67)

nd-firesiders, Ronny Reagan and Janie Wyman!

Maureen's daddy Ranald warked his way thraugh callege as a life-guard . . . ance let a cow laase in girls' darm!

and Georgie Raft aren't seeing eye to eye rehung a Narma Shearer partrait in his raam that he dated her behind Grable's back

CANDIDLY YOURS

CONTINUED

Since splitting with Brent, Ann Sheridan's been forgetting it all with Cesar Romero (Ann Sothern's chum). Sheridan's tickled over rumors of that N. Y. doctor who sells oomph pills!

Fay Bainter, Greg Bautzer and Dottie Lamour at the Brown Derby. Those two diamond rings on Dottie's third finger, left hand, are definitely not engagement or wedding bands!

That old ex-Montana cowboy Georgie Montgomery's doing a turnabout into a Vic Maturish man-about-town! Chrismased at Ginger Rogers' ranch, night-clubs with Elyse Knox.

Jon Hall and the missus Frances Langford at the annual Helpers' Banquet in Hollywood. Frances is thrilled to death with her invitation to solo it on Bob Hope's nationwide show.

Ex-light-heavyweight champ "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom threw a huge shebang for filmdom's who's who. Comedian Billy Gilbert and his better half had the party in stitches!

Marlene Dietrich's first date after her trip East was with Jean Gabin at Ciro's. While in New York she visited hubby Rudolf Sieber and took her game leg to an M. D.

The Brian Ahernes' romance bloomed when Brian can a-courtin' Joan's sister Olivia de Havilland. Joan snagge and wed him one month after she first laid eyes on hir

Although Veronica Lake's the tiniest gal in town (5' 2", 98 lbs.) and a super-duper cook, she's just plain "Mousie" to spouse John Detlie. She reciprocates by dubbing him "Mutt."

The fur flew when "Reap the Wild Wind" director unwittingl put Ray Milland in a sham boxing match. Seems Ray was crackerjack boxer in World War I! Above, with Mrs. Millanc 36-year-old Bruce Cabot and 17-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt are still blissful. Arrived in New York on the same train from Hollywood, toured the bistros together during their visit!

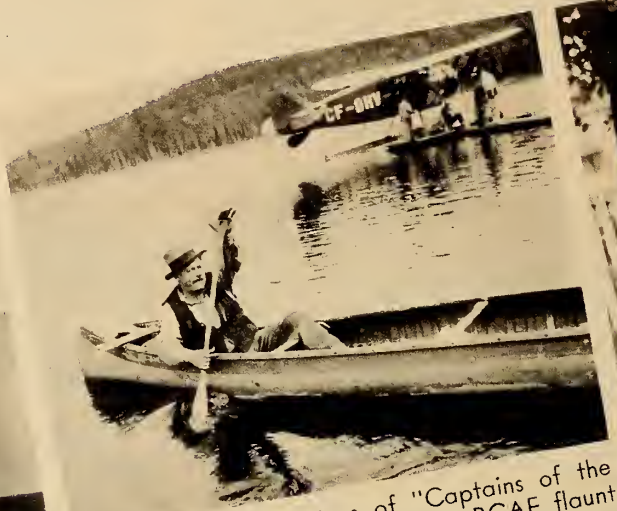
One puppy love that's still going strong—Buddy Pepper anc Jane Withers, steaking it at the Brown Derby. Buddy's proud as Punch of his new ditty which Gene Krupa's going to air

BY GEORGE BENJAMIN

"Location" Blues

Brenda Marshall's perpetual sunburn is a hang-over from her childhood on a sugar plantation, a problem for the Technicolor make-up man.



Alan Hale and co-stars of "Captains of the Clouds" gave nightly shows for the RCAF, flaunt certificates of appreciation from the airmen.

Brenda drove from "Captains'" Ottawa location to see the quints and Dafoe.

THAT DEVILISH OLD LOCATION JINX HAS TAKEN THE TWINKLE OUT OF MORE THAN ONE BRIGHT STAR!

● Somewhere on the gray Atlantic, Stirling Hayden is said to be steering Canadian freighters bound for Britain and loaded to the gunwales with dynamite, gunpowder and TNT.

If that touchy cargo, over which Stirling's taffy locks so gallantly wave at this point, ever goes off with a loud "BaLOOM!" it might possibly match explosions around Paramount studios, which still reverberate today. Paramount is the place where Mr. Hayden—just the greatest Hollywood hero bet since Clark Gable—recently told his thunderstruck bosses what they could do with their fame and fortune and strode away broke but happy—a sailor for to be.

That was a goodly spell ago, but today at Paramount those jilted big shots still bat their heads bitterly against the panelled wailing walls of their private offices. What they cry out, in sharp anguish, as they recall that big, beautiful box-office fish who got away, is just this: "Why, oh why did we ever send that guy off on location?"

It may be strictly a coincidence that Heavenly Hayden thumbed his nose at Hollywood right after his hectic "Bahama Passage" excursion to the Spanish Main.

But anything can happen on a Hollywood location—and it usually does.

Since the first camera company packed a stack of box-lunches and a month's supply of berets and ventured into the Great Outside World, Hollywood picture picnics have brewed all sorts of odd and interesting things—for both stars and studios.

From the time Lee Tracy almost started a war between Mexico and Hollywood by acting up down Mexico way on "Viva Villa," to the other day when Bette Davis got yanked off her honeymoon for "The Bride Comes C.O.D." and landed in Death Valley with cactus spines pincushioning her pants, cosmic events seem to bounce off the beam on Hollywood locations. Just note these nostalgic bulletins:

George Brent flies to Pensa- (Continued on page 94)

When "Valley of the Sun" called for an early Western town, RKO invaded Taos, N. Mex. James Craig and Lucille Ball ride its ancient carrousel.

During filming of saga starring James Craig, Eagles Nest Indians never knew they were being used as extras.

While making "Wyoming," a blizzard snowed in Wallace Beery and cast at Jackson Hole, Wyo. Supplies were toted by snowshoe parties.

The filming of "Bahama Passage" took Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden to a desolate island of 4 white people and 400 natives, 636 miles from Miami.

Madeleine didn't mind Salt Kay's lack of electricity or running water nearly so much as getting back to civilization after "Bahama Passage."

young man with a HORN

BY JEAN KINKEAD

There's nothing icky about Modernaires Bill Conway, Hal Dickinson, Ralph Brewster or Chuck Goldstein—Sax-playing Vocalist Tex Beneke or Maestro Miller.

A few notes, not strictly musical, about Glenn Miller

. . . . that $1,000,000 Pied Piper who pinches himself to see if it's really true, then starts jivin' for joy!

● It's eight o'clock in New York. Mobs of kids stand in line in the rain outside the CBS Playhouse waiting for the doors to open. Two half-pints slug it out for first place in line. . . . A drenched and harassed mama from Staten Island tells her daughter this better be good. "Good! He's just the best musician in the world, that's all. Number one bandleader for the third year in a row. A solid peacheroo. Good, she says!" . . . A couple of prosperous looking chaps want to buy the free admission tickets from two kids who look as if they could use the money. "Give you four bits apiece for 'em." "Y'crazy, mister. These is to hear Glenn Miller—in poisin!"

And there you have it. Glenn Miller on the air is superb, in the movies he's divine—but "in poisin," he's terrific. They tell you he looks like a business man, but don't believe it. He's big and sunburned and lives in sports clothes. He'd be all wrong in an office with those tap-happy feet of his and those devilish eyebrows that keep going off at tangents when the rest of his face is dead serious. He's a jittergent. But good. Ask the Ink Spots or Lily Pons or Deems Taylor about him. He's "hep," "beautiful to hear" and "brilliant," respectively. Ask the manager of the Glen Island Casino or the Meadowbrook or the Pennsylvania what bandleader is synonymous with Santa Claus. Why, at that famous dance held in Hershey, Pa., he demolished Artie Shaw's all-time house record of 4600. Glenn had 4900 of them sardined into the place with hundreds more eavesdropping outside. All of which adds up to much dough for the "jump joint" owners—and a fair piece of change for Mr. M. Last year the band grossed just under $1,000,000!

"I keep pinching myself," Continued on page 92)

Chummy McGregor's mess of piano helps make Glenn's rhythm section a "one-and-only." On the side he arranges.

Glenn was a top arranger before whipping together his own band; still heads his own staff of arrangers. Bass player Doc Goldberg succeeded Trigger Albert.

On hearing Bob Eberle, Glenn joshed, "You got a brother?" He did. A kid brother named Ray . . . and Glenn grabbed him. The latest Miller film is T.C.F.'s "Sun Valley Serenade."

At Tex Beneke's side is Marion Hutton, sister of "Panama Hattie's" jitterbugging Betty Hutton.

"H. M. Pulham, Esq."

By Jean Francis Webb and Kay Hardy

HARRY: "Where can you get me a job?"
BILL: "Where I'm working. The advertising business. J. T. Bullard, Inc. I'm in strong with Bullard."

MR. PULHAM: "Too many women—don't let them run you, son."
HARRY: "No, I won't, sir."

HARRY: "Yes . . . we've lasted."
MARVIN: "Over time and space."

STORY . . .

He hadn't heard from Marvin Myles in years. Twenty, at least.

One couldn't have found a more substantial, respected, middle-aged Harvard man in Boston than Harry Pulham. He had a wife and two children and a business which had been his father's before him. In his sensible routine there was no place for memories.

Strange how two bombshells could be tossed into that comfortable existence the same afternoon! A luncheon with Bo-Jo Brown, at which Harry let himself be talked into writing the class biographies for that approaching Twenty-fifth Reunion. And then the call from Marvin.

With a blank form in front of him, on which he was supposed to list age, birthplace, schooling, life after college—with the ghost of a light, eager voice still echoing in his ears—what chance had (Continued on page 74)

PRODUCTION . . .

The great secret Metro's been trying to keep from the world has finally popped out. Hedy Lamarr is not the languid lady they'd have you believe she is. The gal's a jitterbug! On the set of "Pulham" she didn't relax once. Puttered around sorting magazines, moving furniture, cleaning her dressing-room mirror. Took time off from her lunch hour to collaborate with song-writer Red Ruth-

MARVIN: "Don't worry, Mrs. Frenkel. We're not trying to sell you anything."

MARVIN: "I've always sat up on sleds."
HARRY: "You can't. You'd fall off on the curve. Just lie down behind me and hold on tight."

HARRY: "I brought some champagne. Of course lunch time's a little early, but I've never liked it without you."

ven on a torchy ballad titled, "Do You Believe It?" Director King Vidor let her be herself in the picture, had her deliver all her lines in fast tempo.

After emerging from story conferences with Author J. P. Marquand, Vidor went to work on a plan to have the script follow the book as closely as possible. He and his secretary acted out and recorded every single sequence. The original dialogue was retained and revised only if it didn't fit the timing of the character's actions. In one scene, pointing up the undeviating routine of Bob Young's business day, Vidor used a metronome to set the pace. Bob had to walk into the office, hang up his hat, unbutton his overcoat, hang it up, take off his gloves, walk to the desk, sit down, pick (Continued on page 76)

KAY: "He fell in the brook with his wrist watch on."
HARRY: "If that boy doesn't think enough of his wrist watch—Give me the letter—I'll write him."

Parade drew biggest mob (800,000) in its history. Rochester and Carmichael barely navigated Benny's ancient Maxwell. Jack and crew were heartbroken when they arrived too late to enter!

GOOD NEWS

BY SYLVIA KAHN

Hollywood Blvd. was transformed into Santa Claus Lane. Burns and Allen rode with their kids, Sandra and Ronnie, in a swan-drawn sea shell.

HIGH SPOT OF HOLIDAYS IS INAUGURATION OF SANTA—WITH ERSATZ SNOW!

"Dear Diary:"

Thurs., Dec. 4th: Diary, you'll split your sides at this one! Lunched at Fox with Vic Mature, and Vic told me the Encyclopaedia Britannica had chosen him Hollywood's "typical family man!" For posing with their books, they handed him a free set of Britannica and the Books of Knowledge for Martha's little girl. Betty Grable stopped by our table and derned if she wasn't crying! Betty's none too happy these days. She takes everything connected with her career very seriously, and all that talk about her snubbing and feuding with Carole Landis has her tear-drenching her pillow each night. She says not a snitch of it's true, and I believe her. When Betty left, Vic pointed out Maureen O'Hara. He thinks she's the cutest dish on the Fox lot. Imagine that! After spending the morning making love to Betty Grable! In "Song of the Islands", of course.

Sun., Dec. 7th: House-hunting down the street where Amelia Earhart's former home stands vacant. Miss Earhart built it just before she disappeared, and Eddie Albert rented it a while for $325 a month. I loved the house—but $30,000; Ouch! Said hello to John Carroll and his mother who were there when we came in. Later the agent told me John had almost made up his mind to buy the place. He seemed pretty happy about it—the agent I mean—so I didn't tell him that when I talked to John a year ago, he was almost buying another home, and he's almost bought a half-dozen since. John's a pretty unstable boy. He's actually purchased seven cars this year and traded them in one by one because he tired of their colors! And that beautiful trailer he owns—he's only taken it on one trip, and now it's parked on the M-G-M lot where Red Skelton and Rags Ragland use it for their gin rummy games!

Thurs., Dec. 11th: Over to RKO where June Havoc, sister of Stripteaser Gypsy Rose Lee, was doing a scene in "Powdertown." June had less protection on her derriere than Gypsy Rose ever had on a Minsky stage. Her dog, Napoleon, had chewed away the seat of her gown while it hung in her dressing room, and there'd been no time to repair it! June told me the Hays Office will not allow Gypsy Rose to appear in the filmization of her best-selling book, "The G-String Murders." Not that Gypsy Rose cares. She's satisfied with the $25,000 she received for the movie rights to "G-String."

Dropped in on the "Syncopation" set to say hello to Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper. Bonita's soundproofing the playroom in her North Hollywood home so that when Jackie and the kids come over for jam sessions, the noise won't disturb the neighbors. I know that'll be good news to Ann Sheridan. Annie's house backs on Bonita's, and the little Granville's "informals" have done her out of lots of sleep.

Thurs., Dec. 18th: To Warners to watch them make "Arsenic and Old Lace" which the studio says will be even better than the stage production. I saw Boris Karloff do the play in New York—and, Studio, you gotta go some to top that show! Just missed Barbara Hutton who was on the set all morning visiting with Cary Grant. Cary wouldn't let any of the camera boys take her picture.

Fire broke out before I left, but it was nothing serious. Everyone scrambled out of the stage except Priscilla Lane. Priscilla is assistant to her newspaperman husband, John Barry, on his Victorville Press, and the reporter in her wouldn't let her run out on what might have been a good story.

Went from "Arsenic and Old Lace" to "In This Our Life." Just in time to see Olivia de Havilland proudly exhibiting a sweater a soldier had knitted for her. Olivia shimmied out of the sweater and the conversation turned to food. Olivia is dieting and the cast, especially Bette Davis, rib her mercilessly by keeping up a running line of patter about food. While Bette goes on about juicy steaks and gooey pastries, Olivia's eyes register torture, but she takes it like a sport. I asked Bette about that hot chicken broth she drinks all day. She says it gives her pep.

Sat., Dec. 20th: Finally yielded to temptation and stopped in at the Finnish Bath Salon on the Sunset Strip. For ages I've wondered what goes on in that place. Now I know. The baths are supposed to be great health-givers. You steam yourself in a large stone grotto, and at the same time, beat yourself clean with fir boughs! There are five steps in the grotto, and the higher you go, the hotter it gets! Learned from the proprietress that Errol Flynn is the Miracle Man of the Finnish Bath world. His constitution is so amazing he can climb to the top and stay there a half hour without getting exhausted! Don't think I'd like to try it.

Tues., Dec. 23rd: For cocktails with Dorothy Lamour at the Bamboo Room of the Derby, where Dotty told me a Yuletide story. Many many Christmases ago when Dotty was a kid in New Orleans, she wanted a doll and baby

Big as life in the Las Angeles County sheriff's squad car were Dr. Watson (Nigel Bruce) and Sherlock Holmes (Basil Rathbane), escarted by sheriff's mounted posse!

Capt. Flagg and Sergeant Quirt of the U. S. Marines were represented by Edmund Lowe and Vic McLaglen. Swanked it in a rickshaw pulled by Chinese coolies!

GOOD NEWS

CONTINUED

buggy very badly. But her family was going through a tough period, and the most expensive gift her mother could get her was a baseball. Dotty took her baseball and never mentioned the doll and buggy again. Neither did her mother. Until last year when D. Lamour, Movie Star, came down to breakfast on Christmas morning and found, under her tree, the very toys she'd longed for back in New Orleans. She picked the gift card off the buggy handle, and read: "For my darling, I'm sorry this had to come twenty years too late. Love, Moms." And then Dotty bawled.

Autry-Suggestion

Why Gene Autry receives gobs of fan mail from expectant mothers we will never understand. But receive it he does. From every corner of the country, and all seeking pre-natal advice! Gene doesn't worry about answering those letters. His wife always comes to his rescue before he expires in a sea of blushes.

However, any letter requiring less specialized knowledge always enjoys his personal attention. Like the one that came from a worried mother in Kansas City.

"My little boy won't get into bed for his afternoon nap," it read. "Please, Mr. Autry, will you write and tell him he must? He'll do anything you say."

"I jumped on that one immediately," Gene told us. "I wrote back and assured that child that no matter where I was or what I was doing, I never let anything interfere with my afternoon nap. I said sleep made me big and strong!

"When I mailed the letter, I was well pleased with myself. I had helped a mother out and put a youngster on the right track.

"But do you know what happened?" Gene continued. "One week later I heard from the woman again. A frantic letter. She wanted me to send another note to her little boy. Seems ever since he got my first message, the child won't get out of his bed!"

Photo Phobias

To countless stars there is nothing so deadly as the candid camera—that little black box which mercilessly snatches their images in off-guard moments. But though the camera is quick, most stars are quicker still. In the slither of a second between the approach of the "birdie" and the flutter of the shutter, they manage to reach for their pet photo phobia—the expression or gesture that will make them prettier children in the final print.

For example: Veronica Lake plunges for her fur coat, slips it around her shoulders where it makes a flattering frame for her face . . . Jinx Falkenburg exclaims: "Isn't it too wonderful, darling!" "It's an animating expression," Jinx explains. "Makes me look wide awake!" . . . Marlene Dietrich, on the other hand, cuts her conversation dead. Claims a moving mouth contorts her face, making an ugly picture.

On the masculine side, there's George Raft who nervously goes deadpan . . . And Fred Astaire who wants the camera boys to shoot from their knees because the angle makes his hair look thicker . . . And Kay Kyser who ducks his cigars because he works for a cigarette company . . . And Mickey Rooney who asks the photogs to hold off till his horn-rimmed specs are hidden . . . And Charlie Chaplin, also vain about goggles, who smuggles his out of view faster than a flash bulb can pop.

Rita Hayworth and Dorothy Lamour, addicted to sexy, low-cut formals, skillfully shift an arm over their breasts when a cameraman focuses on a decolleté neckline . . . But Maria Montez wiggles into a more revealing position . . . Jeanette MacDonald nonchalantly raises a program or menu to her face. She's unnecessarily self-conscious about a double chin . . . If they're dancing, George Murphy hugs his wife closer . . . Ann Rutherford ruffles up her hair.

And last but not least, we have Lana and Tony who, in their scrappy days, would urge cameramen to "hurry it up, please," so they could drop their forced smiles and return to their unceasing bickering.

So you see, dear reader, those widely acclaimed "candid" pictures aren't so very candid after all! (Continued on page 100)

The Rudy Vallee Toyland float was complete with castle, guardhouse, John Barrymore, human Walt Disney characters, Rudy (as a toy soldier) and comic Joan Davis!

Mr. and Mrs. Red Skelton rode atop a bale of corn cobs. Red claimed it symbolizes his comedy, attached a placard reading, "Corn, we shuck it, we air it."

Billing themselves as Santa Claus McCarthy and Scrooge Bergen, Charlie and Edgar brought along a public address system to entertain the crowds. Besides them, there were over fifty celebrities in the parade!

SKATE or SWIM

Photographed at Westwood Tropicol Ice Gardens

• Going skating? Be sure to look spectacular whether you skate that way or not. Wear a princess skating dress in startling white corduroy—or a black velveteen skirt and vest with a bright red shirt. Snitch your ski sweater for skating, too.

• Going where it's warm, lucky you? Have at least two form-fitting swim suits for active swims and one of the new rubber sarong suits, also. Get a beach bag as big as all get-out and don't forget your sandals.

Louise La Planche, now appearing in Paramount's "Louisiono Purchose."

Photographed by Bob Beerman

Beverly Wilshire Hotel

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION TURN TO PAGE 85

MORN till NIGHT

With these special three in your clothes closet, you'll winter-into-spring in the very newest 1942 fashion!

Eva Gabor, petite Paramount starlet now appearing in "Midnight Angel."

• It's January and high time for a print we say! Get yourself a black and yellow one with solid black bodice, and don't overlook the bow.

For tailored moments, take twill, the current favorite, in a blue two-piece frock that can easily add a crisp white collar.

If you like winter white, the shirtwaist classic and contrast, then end your search, for here you are—the perfect black and white jacket dress that you'll wear and wear.

By Elizabeth Willguss

MODERN SCREEN'S Hand

FOR	USE THESE ITEMS	HOW AND WHEN TO USE THEM
A PERFECT MANICURE	Polish remover, cleansing tissue, cotton, nail brush, cuticle softener, orange stick, emery board, file, nail white, buffer, polish base, polish, polish protector and hand lotion or cream.	Remove old polish with special remover and cleansing tissue or cotton. Shape nails with emery board or file, then scrub in sudsy water with firm-bristled brush. After drying hands, ease back nail cuticle with orange stick dipped in softener. Apply nail white and rinse fingertips. Stimulate nails with buffer, then apply foundation and polish and polish protector. Massage hands with softening cream or lotion.
BRITTLE NAILS	Cuticle oil, nail conditioner, buffer, oily manicure preparations, rich hand cream or lotion, soft cotton gloves.	Use only oily manicure preparations. Buff nails nightly before retiring, then lubricate cuticles and tips with nail cream or special conditioner. Whenever possible, soak nails in warm oil five or ten minutes. Always leave excess lubricants on overnight. Soft cotton gloves, worn while sleeping, will help the penetration of oils.
OVER-OILY OR PERSPIRING HANDS	Mild soap, firm-bristled brush, astringent lotion, talcum.	Frequently wash hands with mild soap and firm-bristled hand brush. Rinse and dry thoroughly. Then use astringent lotion and talcum on palms.
CHAPPED HANDS	Mild soap, cleansing cream, tissues, rich hand cream or lotion, soft cotton gloves.	Wash hands with mild soap and soft hand brush, rinse and dry thoroughly. Or, cleanse hands with soothing cold cream, using soft tissues to remove excess. Massage hands with rich hand cream or lotion. Apply protective lotion or cream before going outdoors and always wear gloves. At night massage hands with rich lubricants and leave on overnight. Wear soft, porous cotton gloves to protect bedcovers.
DRY OR WRINKLED HANDS	Mild soap, hand cream and lotion, soft cotton gloves, rich lubricating cream.	Wash hands with mild soap. Rinse well and apply softening lation or cream immediately and always before going outdoors. Massage lubricating cream or special hand lubricants into hands before retiring and wear porous cotton gloves to help the penetration af oils.
ROUGH ELBOWS	Mild soap, hand brush, cleansing cream, lubricating cream, protective lotions.	If elbows are sore, loasen stubborn grime with cleansing cream. Remove with tissue. Scrub elbows with mild soap and lukewarm water, using a firm-bristled brush. Apply protective creams and lotions. Soften skin by massaging rich lubricating cream into elbows every night.

BEAUTY CHART

BY CAROL CARTER

WITH THESE FASHION COLORS	WEAR THESE SHADES OF NAIL POLISH, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK
GREENS	With bright green, wear orange-red, blue-red or red-red polish ond motching rouge and lipstick.	With dark green, wear red-red or blue-red polish and matching rouge and lipstick.	With olive green, weor burnished-red or orange-red polish ond orange-red rouge and lipstick.	With blue green, wear blue-red or orange-red polish and matching rouge and lipstick.	With chartreuse green, wear red-orange or burnished red polish and red-oronge rouge and lipstick.	With pole green, wear pink, rose, blue-red or orange-red polish ond hormonizing rouge ond lipstick.
BLUES	With bright blue, wear blue-red, red-red or bright pink polish ond blue-red or clear red rouge and lipstick.	With French blue, wear rose or blue-red polish and clear red or blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With medium blue, wear rose, blue-red or red-red polish and clear red or blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With novy blue, wear blue-red, red-red or bright pink polish and blue-red or matching red rouge and lipstick.	With green blue, wear orange-red or blue-red polish and motching rouge and lipstick.	With postel blue, wear pink or rose polish ond clear or soft red rouge and lipstick.
REDS	With vermilion red, wear red polish in matching intensity and clear red rouge and lipstick.	With orange red, wear red-orange or brown-red polish and red-orange rouge ond lipstick.	With wine, wear deep, dark red or blue-red polish and motching rouge ond lipstick.	With fuchsio, wear soft blue-red polish ond matching rouge and lipstick.	With bright pink, weor matching pink polish and soft red rouge and lipstick.	With postel pink, weor pink or blue-red polish and matching blue-red or soft red rouge ond lipstick.
PURPLES	With bright purple, wear blue-red polish and motching blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With subdued purple, wear blue-red polish in subdued shades and matching blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With red violet, wear bright blue-red polish ond matching blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With blue violet, wear blue-red polish and motching blue-red rouge ond lipstick.	With deep orchid, wear blue-red or shell pink polish and blue-red or soft red rouge and lipstick.	With pastel orchid, wear blue-red or shell pink polish and blue-red or soft red rouge and lipstick.
YELLOWS AND BROWNS	With bright or pastel yellow, wear orange-red or brown-red polish and orange-red rouge and lipstick.	With tan, brown or mustard, weor orange-red, red-red or brown-red polish and orange-red or red-red rouge ond lipstick.	With clear orange, wear orange-red or brown-red polish and orange-red rouge and lipstick.	With subdued orange, wear bronze-red or orange-red polish and orange-red rouge and lipstick.	With amber, wear burnished rose, red or copper-red polish and harmonizing red or orange-red rouge and lipstick.	With bronze, wear matching bronze or red-red polish and orange-red or red-red rouge and lipstick.
SPECIAL COLORS	With block, wear bright pink, red-red or blue-red polish and blue-red or cleor-red rouge and lipstick.	With white or ivory, wear red-red, blue-red, soft pink or rose polish and red or blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With gray, wear pink, rose, red-red or blue-red polish and clear red or blue-red rouge and lipstick.	With beige, weor pink, rose, blue-red or red-red polish and blue-red or clear red rouge and lipstick.	With silver, wear blue-red, red-red or rose polish and blue-red or cleor red rouge ond lipstick.	With gold, wear burnished red or brown-red polish and hormonizing orange-red or red rouge ond lipstick.

BY CAROL CARTER

Charm IS HAND-MADE

Jane Wyman holds beauty in her hands. She currently appears in "You're in the Army Now."

Nature didn't give us little girls one great big hand, but she did give us two potentially beautiful ones. And probably they are as tired of being our twin slave girls at the expense of their own beauty as Cinderella was of beautifying her sisters. It's time we let our hands do themselves a favor and start taking care of each other.

Anatomically hands are mostly bones, fibrous bands and ligaments, and besides getting harder usage than other parts of the skin, they have fewer oil glands, the palms none at all. So in addition to using protective creams and lotions every day, treat your favorite hands to heavy lubricants nightly. Massage each finger separately as if you were fitting a kid glove to your hand for the first time. Then, be as patient with the backs of your hands, working the cream in carefully to prevent their taking on that sandpaper tinge the next time you leave them gloveless in the wind. If your hands are very dry, give them an extra heavy dose and leave it on overnight, wearing soft cotton gloves to protect the blankets.

Rumor has it that Saturday is manicure day. If rumor is wrong, some other day surely ought to be. But for soft, alluring hands and smooth, healthy nails, regular daily care is imperative, too. It won't demand much time. Just make the most of the attention you do give your hands. Wash them with warm, not hot, water and bland, sudsy soap using a brush on grimy nails and knuckles. As you dry your hands thoroughly, get the jump on that Saturday manicure by pushing back the cuticle on each finger with your towel. Then follow up with a protective lotion.

To echo a national defense cry in the interest of charm. . . . To arms, girls! By that we mean be hand-conscious right up past the elbows. And you still won't be as elbow-conscious as the very men you strive to please. To avoid criticism from this honored gallery, here is what to do. Scrub the (Continued on page 98)

CAN YOUR HANDS PASS THE KISS TEST?

MAKE THIS TEST—Brush your lips across the back of your hand. Does skin feel rough, and uninviting? Now use extra quick-drying Cashmere Bouquet Lotion. Notice how smooth hands become.

HERE'S WHY—Because Cashmere Bouquet Lotion removes dead skin and surface scales instantly, it leaves your hands soft and alluring.

"PLUSH luxury!" you think, when you hear of a society beauty paying dollars for salon hand-treatments. But, with Cashmere Bouquet Lotion you can do it for yourself, many times a day, at about a penny a time. It's speedy, too, this Cashmere Bouquet Lotion treatment, for it works "quick as a kiss."

So after every dishwashing you can give your hands that kiss appeal. Because Cashmere Bouquet Lotion dries in ten seconds. No smeary, gooey stickiness. But blessed smoothness. And of course this lovely lotion imparts to your hands the perfume of Cashmere Bouquet—the alluring 'fragrance men love'.

In generous 10¢ and larger sizes at all toilet goods counters.

Cashmere Bouquet Lotion

FOR HANDS THAT MEN LOVE TO KISS

Another member of Cashmere Bouquet—the Royal Family of beauty preparations.

Groceful to her fingertips is Eleonor Powell, lovely M-G-M stor ond doncer. You'll see her next in "I'll Toke Monilo."

Beauty at your fingertips

Shapely, well-groomed nails are a "must" for every winning hand. Here are quick tricks for making yours lovelier!

BY CAROL CARTER

FINGERTIPS are such little things, it's amazing how important they are to beauty. But these days with busy fingers so much in fashion, they are constantly calling attention to themselves and how loudly they shout our virtues and failings. If they are graceful and well-groomed, they reflect fastidiousness and discrimination—characteristics we're proud to advertise. But if they are rough, chipped or indifferently manicured, they tell a decidedly unflattering story.

Long, slim patrician hands—possessed by all heroines in Victorian novels—are no longer our only standard for beauty. Those that are strong and capable, no matter what their size or shape, can look just as glamorous if they are smooth and soft with graceful tips. And no matter how lovely they naturally are, they'll be even more alluring if they receive an extra share of coddling. So treat your nails to a thorough manicure —weekly or oftener. It's a grand beautifier of healthy nails and a sure cure for almost all fingertip ailments —major and minor. Assemble all the soothing preparations and specially designed tools that make the job easy and pleasant in one place before you begin. Then you can work without interruption. Here's what you need: a bowl of sudsy water, polish remover, emery board, orange stick, cuticle softener, nail white, buffer, polish base, polish and polish protector, hand cream or lotion—and of course, those old stand-bys—cleansing tissue and cotton.

Begin by taking off all old polish with remover and cleansing tissue. Then, with your emery board shape your nails to becoming ovals, filing them from the sides toward the center. Dip your fingers into sudsy water and scrub them briskly with a good firm-bristled nail brush. Then, after drying, go around the cuticles and under the tips with a cotton-wound orange stick saturated with cuticle lotion. This will soften and remove dead tissue painlessly and easily. Apply nail white under each tip, then rinse your fingers again. When drying them, press back the cuticle with your towel. Then buff each nail eight to ten times in the same direction. It's grand for stimulating growth. Apply your polish base and allow it to harden before putting Toke off old polish with o special remover and cleonsing tissue.

Cuticle softeners ond oils keep noils heolthy ond eosy to monicure.

Apply your polish evenly in o few bold strokes. Let it dry slowly.

Use creom or lotion frequently to protect honds from roughness.

on colored lacquer. Some girls prefer to use their favorite polish as a base, but that is only a matter of preference. The point is to use two coats at least—the first to fill in minor depressions in the nails so that the second will adhere evenly. As a finishing touch, apply a film of colorless polish protector. It not only keeps lacquer from chipping easily but adds luster to your nails.

The right technique is important in applying polish if you want a smooth, long-lasting job. First, outline the moon in one continuous stroke, then cover the rest of the nail in about three parallel movements from moon to tip. If your nails are natural, becoming ovals, play up their beauty by leaving a small moon and narrow tip free of polish. But if you want to make round nails and short fingers appear longer, bring the polish out to the nail's edge, removing only a fine hairline for daily filing. If nails are square, you can make them more shapely by filing them to deep ovals at the sides. Then, apply the polish to leave curved moons and tips.

Busy or not, keep those hands of yours perfectly still for at least five minutes while the polish is drying. Waving them about or blowing on them may cut the time a little but is likely to result in ridges or bubbles or may cause the polish to run into the cuticle.

Dry, brittle nails that seem to shred or break at the slightest provocation cause more grief and bad temper among hand-conscious girls than anything else we know. But it's a condition that can be overcome if you know the cause and are willing to spend a little extra time pampering your hands.

Fingernails, you know, are made of the same substance as your hair and are formed below the visible part of your nail. They are nourished by the bloodstream, so any upset in your health—nervousness, systemic dryness, faulty diet or a serious ailment—may react on their activity. Those ugly horizontal ridges that you occasionally see on (Continued on page 99)

NEW!
Pond's Dreamflower Powder
POND'S
POND'S EXTRACT CO., NEW YORK, NET WT 2 1/10 OZS.
New Dreamflower Shades—cunningly blended not to stodgily match your skin—but to give your face a look of starry-eyed, colorful freshness!
New Dreamflower Smoothness—clinging as a cloud. To veil your face with a "soft-focus" finish—tender . . . young . . . infinitely caressable.
New Dreamflower Box—adorably garlanded with tiny blossoms too precious for this earth! Lovely big box—only 49¢! 2 smaller sizes, too.
"Pond's new Dreamflower shades are new and completely delectable . . . and the box is the daintiest, most feminine thing I've ever seen!" MRS. ERNEST DU PONT, JR.
Romantic "Find"!
NEW
Pond's "LIPS"
. . . stays on longer
2 BIG sizes Unusual values!
5 "Stagline" shades! (Be sure to try exciting magenta-toned Heart Throb —it's the season's hit color!)
Free—All 6 new Dreamflower Powder shades
POND'S, Dept. 9MS-PB, Clinton, Conn.
I want to see how the new Dreamflower shades and smoothness make my skin look lovelier. Will you please send me FREE samples of all 6 Dreamflower shades?
Name
Address
City
State
(This offer good in U. S. only)

BY JUDY GARLAND'S MOM

Co-ed

When to flirt and when to chum it? Here's how to suit the action to the guy!

● Last time I was telling you that Judy was after me to do a "Get Your Man" article. She put on the pressure, but good, this month, so here 'tis. . . . What do you really want for Christmas? The tall, pallid chap who says intense, brilliant things in English class? The husky one that's captain of the hockey team and thinks women are poison? Or the smoothie senior who practically has one foot in Princeton and who couldn't dance more like Fred Astaire? One of them is strictly for you, but how to get him? Here goes, if your prayer is "Santa, make mine a smoothie!"

He's usually handsome, lives in tweed jackets and bow ties, isn't particularly athletic and is invariably chairman of the Junior Prom Committee.

You'd better look to your nails and hair—he notices details. Skip the pigtail hair-do and unusual color combinations—he's a conservative at heart. Wants a girl he can show off but loathes being stared at. Try inviting him to your next party. Enchant him by looking cute and having dozens of swell records; cut him off a yard or two of your gosh-it's-fun-to-dance-with-you line and more in the same vein; then shut up and let him talk.

Don't pursue him, but smile at him from across the room occasionally. Don't get too smitten with this guy as he loves a harem and rarely can be monopolized by one gal, no matter how alluring. Never try to show him a new dance step; nothing annoys him more than learning things from women. By the same token, if you're kind of a brightie, don't divulge. He usually isn't.

Now, supposing your plea is "Make mine an athlete!"

He's generally no Adonis—probably has a broken nose or a bull neck, slouches around in sweaters turned inside out so it doesn't look as if he's flaunting his letter, is crazy to go to college—but strictly for sports, not higher education—blushes every time he has to make a speech in Assembly.

You'd better look scrubbed and pretty and unsophisticated for him. He can't cope with artificiality. Wear sweaters and skirts and tweedy things to make him comfortable. Read the sports pages religiously, and keep posted on how many goals he made or blocked or assisted in every game, so you can compliment him. Very quietly, of course. He dreads being the center of attraction. He's the type you can invite over of an afternoon to fix your bike or diagnose your dog's illness—real or fictitious! Whereupon you ply him with elegant hot chocolate and cake, not to mention intelligent sport chatter. Or if you've fallen heir to two tickets to a hockey match or basketball game, he's your man. Confine your conversation to masculine things, but give it the feminine touch. Don't be too smart about the game; a well-placed query is often balm to his ego.

Don't be wise-cracky. This lad likes the old-fashioned girl who's sweet, innocent and (Continued on page 97)

NON-STOP HONEYMOON

(Continued from page 43)

I love you very dearly and there's hardly a moment of the day when I wouldn't rather be looking at your mug than my own. But this is the exception. Now will you please get out before I say something I might regret?"

He kissed the top of her head and left. But in doing it he had flipped the imaginary chip from his true love's shoulder.

"Listen, you," said the hairdresser, taking her cue from Ronnie's departing wink, "I'm going to fix your hair the way I think it ought to be fixed. Then if you don't like it, you can kick me out, too. But you're going to sit still and be quiet till I get it done."

"Okay," she said meekly.

Reagan took his shameless ear from the door and left, whistling.

HE'S like a kid about presents—hers. During their courting days, having discovered her mania for Teddy Bears, he dragged her off the lot one morning and out to his car. In the corner sat a very large, very pink, very charming bear.

"Where did you get it?"

"Seattle!"

He had, too, this particular variety being unobtainable in the local shops. The bear's name is Boppo, and he now goes to bed with Maureen.

Ronnie's favorite trick is to buy Jane something and hide it, so she'll come on it unexpectedly and squeal. Anyway, that's the theory. In practice it doesn't work because that's the evening Jane's sure to feel lazy. She refuses to prowl. Drawers and closets hold no interest for her. She gets into a chair and stays there, impervious to suggestion. Feeling that another minute of this will throw him on all fours howling, Ronnie gets up, pulls her out of the chair, leads her to the bedroom and says firmly: "I have a present for you. Can you find it? No, you're too dumb. Here it is."

"Like to go antique-hunting?" he asked one day. Jane never says no to that. They're buying stuff for the new house.

He left her at the shop. "You go on in. I want to stop across the street for a minute." Presently he was back. "Hey, I found something. Come on over and see."

Something was a car, brand-new and beautiful, in the shop across the street. Jane's china-blue eyes rounded. "We're not getting a new one, are we?"

"No, but the guy wants us to try her. What can we lose?"

They took her for a spin which spun out till Jane grew uneasy. "Hey, don't you think we'd better get this car back?"

"Why? You own it."

She whirled on him. "I thought you said we're not getting a new car."

"We're not. You are."

On the other hand, he's opposed to surprises for himself. Jane felt guilty. Ronnie's LaSalle was four years old. He should have had the new car. She'd buy him one!

"Pop, if you bought a new car, would you get another green one?"

"I'm not buying a new car."

"No, but if you did—"

He put his book down. "Look, hon, I'm on to you. You leave that green LaSalle of mine alone. I know every hum in the motor and I love 'em all. We'll take this up again—say in five years—"

That was an eye-opener for Jane. She'd known how he felt about his LaSalle, but not how strongly. He'd craved one for years, bought it as soon as he could afford to. It was a kind of symbol to him of dreams come true. But she hadn't realized that it partook of the nature of a blood brother, that no other LaSalle could ever mean the same, that he'd part from it only over its dead body.

Jane could sympathize with that feeling. She thought it was sweet. When he develops a similar clinging attachment to his old clothes, she thinks he's overdoing it. The battle of the suede jacket ended in a draw. He refused to have it cleaned. He refused to hang it on a hanger. One day Jane picked it gingerly off its hook. "This time you're not going to talk me out of it. The darn thing's so stiff it could stand alone. And look at that hump in the collar."

He snatched it to safety. "A guy doesn't even get into a suede jacket till it's hung long enough on a hook to fit the hook and collect some dirt. This one's just about ripe."

It's still dirty, and it still hangs on a hook. But out at the Golf Club where Jane takes it less personally.

By the same token, he likes her in casual clothes. With her hair down. Not long ago they gave a party at Ciro's. All gussied up, as he calls it, Jane presented herself for inspection—hair on top of her head, pink and black party dress, straight out of Vogue or Harper's Bazaar. He couldn't say she didn't look nice, for she did. But the spark was missing and its absence made her a little self-conscious all evening.

TELL me honestly, Ronnie, don't you like this hair-do?" she asked on the way home.

"It's very smart, honey, and very beautiful. But—" she could see him picking his way among words— "Well—photogenically, I don't think it would be so hot for you."

But when in short skirt and sweater she stands teeing off, face flushed, hair loose, he's sometimes moved to his prettiest compliment. Shielding his eyes, he pretends to be dazzled. "I can't stand it. Punk'nhead." (Punk'nhead's because of her round noggin). "You should have taken two ugly-pills this morning."

She thinks, when more understanding men are made, they'll be named Ronnie Reagan. Before marriage she was used to handling her own problems. "Snarling plenty of them up," she adds. Now she lays them like a trusting infant in Ronnie's lap.

He can tell by her face when a storm's brewing. Even before she explodes: "Listen to this—" As she talks, he steers her to the nursery, where he knows she'll let her troubles go hang for the moment. Then it's dinner time. Then when they're settled for the evening, he'll say, "Now let's iron this thing out."

"In five minutes," says Jane, "it's under control. Sometimes he'll laugh it off. Sometimes he'll take care of it himself. Or if he thinks it's up to me, he'll show me how to do it without getting my gall bladder upset. I don't want to make him sound like The Passing of the Third Floor Back. He's got his seamy side. We'll go into that later. But I've never known his values to be anything but right. He sees and thinks straight.

For instance, the day Jane had a date to lunch with Joy Hodges. Joy phoned to the restaurant that she couldn't make it. A director who wanted Jane for a part she was eager to play sat down at her table. They discussed pros and cons through most of the afternoon.

Next day the papers had it. "Jane Wyman was seen lunching with so-and-so. Wonder if the Reagans are breaking up?"

She showed it to Ronnie. "What do you think of that?"

"I think it's funny." She kissed him. "What's that for?"

"I think you're lovely."

It was Ronnie who solved his mother's design for living after his father died. Ronnie remembered a boy in whom she'd been especially interested—a boy with infantile paralysis who needed special care and whose people had no money. The doctors couldn't promise that he'd ever walk again. Ronnie suggested that she might like to have the boy share her home. She leaped at the idea which proved a happy one all 'round. Within a few months the boy will be up and walking.

Ronnie's own design for living includes eight hours of sleep . . . for himself and others.

He's perfected the technique of a second-story man to avoid disturbing Jane when he's got to be up first. Hours later she'll wake to find a note on her table. "Light of my life, where did you hide my suspenders?" This doesn't mean that she hid his suspenders. But he leaves her a note every morning and he has to write something.

I reminded Jane that we had his seamy side to go into.

"He has few domestic quirks but he does ask that I refrain from cleaning his desk, which is also mine. 'Look, Janey, I've got a terrific sense of possession,' he says. 'This half is mine . . . here where the dust begins. You clean up your half.'

"And another thing. He calls the baby Nutsie. It drives me wild; some day I'm going to brain him."

RONNIE contends that Maureen is for formal affairs, Nutsie's more sociable. Still, he endeavors to please and says, "Hello, Nu—Maureen." The baby doesn't seem to mind what he calls her. Let her hear his loud cluc' at the door, and she turns herself inside out to get at him. "She likes me," he observes smugly. He's developed a repertory of noises, each more idiotic than the other, because the sillier they sound, the more rapturously does his daughter gurgle. What she likes best is to jounce on his knee while he sings, "This is the way the ladies ride, trim, trim, trim." From the way she ogles him, you'd think he was her favorite movie star. What he likes best is to stick bows on her hair. Technically speaking, she has no hair—just a strand of blonde fluff. The bow rides like a butterfly on a bobbypin, and Ronnie's job is to slip the fluff through the pin.

One balmy evening they took the baby with them to the hill on which their house will be built. The lot had been theirs for some time and they'd visited it often. But this was an occasion. The foundation had just been laid. They stepped inside the square, pretending they were stepping into the house. A breeze stirred, a cricket chirped, a star came out. Jane felt that nothing could spoil the perfection of the moment.

Ronnie grinned and pointed to space, "Look, Nutsie, that's your room up there."

MILLION DOLLAR COWBOY

(Continued from page 35)

out back?" the man eagerly questioned.

It didn't flop—exactly. The official verdict was that he had a good quality for recording but needed experience badly.

Back to Oklahoma he trekked, and for nine months he sang into the microphones of Tulsa's Station KVOO free of charge. And it was more than experience. Because Art Satherly, on a scouting trip for the present-day Columbia Records, heard him.

New York again. But this time New York with a difference. The records he made for his new bosses included "That Silver-Haired Daddy Of Mine," a song he'd written with his pal Jimmy Long. Its sales zoomed. Sears Roebuck saw the figures and sent for him. His cowboy laments became the hit of the National Barn Dance program.

It was like trying to live in the middle of a Texas twister. That was why he decided on a quick hop down Oklahoma way, with a stop-over in Springfield to visit pal Jimmy. But when he figured that Jimmy Long's house would be a spot for breath-catching, Gene made one of the few miscalculations of his career. There was a girl at Jimmy's.

A GIRL with dark hair, softly curling around a provocative face. A girl with a smile bright as range-land sunshine. Her name was Ina Mae Spivey, Gene learned during that first enchanted afternoon while he had to fight to keep from staring at her.

She was Jimmy Long's niece. But he and Jimmy never had written a song that could describe her. No, sir! There was something about the way Ina talked —light and quick and gay—that made his heart race, even while he was too dazed to know quite what she was saying.

That evening in his old friend's front parlor was a crazy combination, like fever and chills. Shy with women always, used to lonely trails and open cattle range and long night vigils over a telegrapher's keyboard, Gene watched the dark head bent above the piano every time he felt sure she was busy with the music she was playing.

But when she looked up suddenly and caught him at it, he felt like crawling inside his guitar to hide. She was so pretty, so dainty and sort of flowerlike, that—hey! Was she laughing at him, back of those demurely dancing eyes? Did he look as gawky as he felt?

They talked some. Ina told him about her coming from Oklahoma, too, and staying at Uncle Jimmy's while she studied at the teachers' college in Springfield. Gene listened. But it was just words. He'd seen a dream walking, and he was in love with her! His first love. And, even that soon, he knew he wanted it to be his last.

He stayed in Springfield longer than he'd expected. The jaunt to Oklahoma turned out to be a mere flying visit. He returned as fast as his work in Chicago would let him. And this time Ina met him at the train instead of Jimmy. When he loped down the steps and saw her there on the platform, sunshine lighting her lifted face, everything stopped inside him.

"Hello!" she called. Just one simple word. But it opened a door for Gene. He could glimpse Heaven through it. For one wild instant he thought he was going to fling his arms around her, right then and there in front of the crowd!

He didn't. She was so light and frail a hug might have broken her. Anyhow, what reason was there to believe she wanted him to? Maybe she was just being nice to Uncle's partner. Maybe—a thousand maybes.

They went to a student dance at her college. If he could have spun her around until she was dizzy while they were dancing, maybe he'd have found courage to start talking. But he wasn't very good on a dance floor. He was all feet, and the feet wouldn't do what he wanted. Gosh, she'd hate him after this!

Yet she didn't. Her smile was just as kindly on the walk home, through Springfield's dark, quiet streets. Once he almost reached out to find her small hand. But maybe she wouldn't like that!

It took a lot of visits to Springfield before he could work up his courage. But when it happened, it happened fast as throwing a steer for branding. The familiar parlor. The lamplight soft and warm. And, suddenly, his arms around her. . . .

Gene didn't stop to think. He didn't dare to think, and he didn't have to. All the words had been there inside him, dammed up for a long time. It had taken only one little gesture, one unexpected turn of her head, to start them rushing onward in a torrent.

"Ina—gosh—I mean, if you aren't figurin' on marryin' somebody else—I reckon I'm no special shakes, b-but you're so sweet—"

THEY were married in St. Louis, some nine months after they met. Not a fancy wedding. It didn't have to be, because neither of them was the fancy kind.

It was while Ina still was getting used to that new ring on her finger that Hollywood found Gene. The Legion of Decency had started its famous raid on sex productions. Producers scrambling around for clean material, remembered Westerns, long in eclipse because of their lack of novelty. The rage for Autry recordings of range-land ballads looked like one answer.

That Texas twister had become a full-grown cyclone, by now.

Gene (with Ina always there beside him, to help him keep steady in the big wind) was getting himself on a solid footing, however. With top honors flashing past him like telegraph poles past a train window, he clung fast to the simple, wholesome, American things he and the dark-eyed girl from Oklahoma had believed in when they first found each other.

Came five successive years when picture exhibitors hailed him the greatest money-maker among Western stars; 12,000 fan letters a week; the 1940 poll, which ranked him fourth in popularity among all picture players (topped only by Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable). Came a triumphant tour of England, Scotland, Ireland; an invitation to guest-star the World's Championship Rodeo at New York's mammoth Madison Square Garden; news he had doubled the business even of that colossal show; and a bid to return as its star for a second year.

It's the biggest event in a cowboy's year, that Roundup in the Big Town. Better than two hundred of the West's ace range hands—yes, and plenty of its prettiest cowgirls, too—converge on the main stem in high-heeled boots and fancy show shirts and Sunday-go-to-meetin' Stetsons.

The tanbark is trampled by bucking broncs. Wild steers chase many a thrown rider in nip-and-tuck sprints for life. Lights blaze. Flags wave. Lovely girls ride on the Rodeo's longhorns.

Lariats loop, ponies wheel and gallop, music pounds the rafters. The crisp accent of an official event-announcer crackles constantly from overhead. A champion from Cheyenne bucks out of his corral on saddled lightning. A Calgary buckaroo ropes his calf and throws it, while breathless watchers tick off seconds on a big clock above the bright arena. Thousands of dollars prize money mean the boys ride with their necks for sale.

And then—in a new, cathedral hush—appears Gene Autry!

Into the blinding light of the arena, one typical night last October, he danced his famous picture horse Champion. At the end of his number, Champion bowed low before the star's own box. Gene lifted in his saddle, arm lofted in salute —a smiling salute to the motherly, pleasant-faced lady who was his guest for the evening. And Mrs. Will Rogers smiled back.

Beside her, in that darkness which always seems thickest just beyond a spotlight's circle, maybe a ghost smiled, too. And maybe a chuckle, more real than applause, reached Gene Autry's ear:

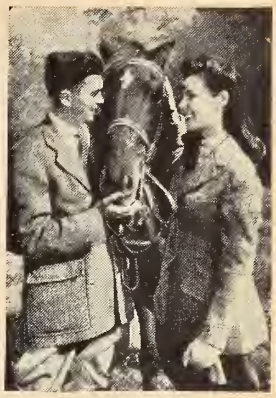
"Young feller, looks mighty like you did it! You did what I said you could!"

* * *

Time was when Gene Autry wrote "Gene Autry, America's biggest flop" on his dressing room door and decided to turn baseball pro. (The door, incidentally, is now enshrined under a glass case in the theater lobby!) Not only is he the absolute antithesis of "flop" in America but a favorite the world round! The British Isles go mad about him from Princesses Margaret Rose and Elizabeth down to the masses who plucked more hairs from Champ's tail than any two-footed glamour boy can total in buttons and pocket hankies! Only 34 years old, he keeps Ina Mae and himself in comparative ease on $15,000 per picture, and $15,000 yearly from records; $1,000 a week from radio; $25,000 for his magic signature on shirts, balloons, dolls; $30,000 from the N. Y. Rodeo. Last fall their gorgeous 3-year-old house burned to the ground destroying all the cherished mementos of their climb to the top together. Heartbroken, they've retired to their week-end cottage, "Melody Ranch," until a new home can be substituted. So desirable is his patronage he has to watch his every step for fear of offending someone. Didn't dare attend the World Series because he couldn't sit in one team's bleachers to the exclusion of the other! Always colorful, he flew to the Rodeo, accommodated Champ in the same plane by taking out the seats and making a temporary airlines stable! Modestly justifies his existence, thus: "Maybe it isn't great art. But I've always remembered something Buffalo Bill once wrote. It's just this—that he who has brought the romance of America to Young America has not lived in vain." This, Gene Autry has indisputedly done!

NEW YORK-TEXAS ROMANCE

Eugenia Loughlin's engagement to S. Gail Borden Tennant of Houston (pictured together at right) has stirred far-reaching interest. This beautiful Pond's Bride-to-Be will be married this winter, after her fiancé completes his officer's training at Fort Riley.



HER STAR-SAPPHIRE

Engagement Ring. The platinum and baguette diamond setting was designed by her fiancé. "I guess Borden and I made over a hundred sketches for it," she says.

Exquisite EUGENIA J. LOUGHLIN

She's ENGAGED! She's Lovely!

She uses Pond's!

See how her SOFT-SMOOTH Glamour Care will help your skin

1. Eugenia SLATHERS Pond's Cold Cream thick over her lovely face and throat. Pats it on briskly with quick little upward pats. This softens dirt and old make-up. Then she tissues off the cream. "I adore the cool, clean feel Pond's gives my face," she says.

2. Eugenia RINSES with lots more Pond's. Tissues off the cream again.
This second time helps clean off every little smitch of soil, leave her fine-textured skin flower-soft.

You'll love Eugenia's SOFT-SMOOTH Glamour Care with Pond's Cold Cream.
Use it every night—and for daytime clean-ups.
See your skin look softer, smoother, prettier.
You'll know then why so many more women and girls use Pond's than any other face cream at any price.
Buy a jar today—at any beauty counter. Five popular-priced sizes. The most economical—the lovely big jars.

Another POND'S Bride-to-Be!

Lovely-to-look-at Eugenia Loughlin met her fiancé at a party in Houston when she was visiting there. Four days later they considered themselves engaged! Eugenia has a true SOFT-SMOOTH Pond's complexion—fresh, sweet, pink and white as apple blossoms! "I'm absolutely devoted to Pond's Cold Cream," she says. "It keeps my skin feeling so soft and clean."

It's no accident so many lovely engaged girls use Pond's!

Pond's Girls Belong to Cupid

Send coupon for 5 POND'S Beauty Aids

1. Pond's SOFT-SMOOTH Glomour Cold Creom
2. Vonishing Creom
3. New Dry Skin Cream
4. New Dreamflower Foce Powder (6 shodes)
5. Pond's "Lips" (5 shodes)

POND'S, Dept. 9MS-CB. Clinton, Conn. Send me samples of 5 Pond's Beauty Aids listed at left used by lovely engaged girls and society beauties like Mrs. Geraldine Spreckels and Mrs. Ernest du Pont, Jr. Enclosed is 10¢ to cover your distribution expenses, including postage and packing.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

(Offer good in U. S. only)

Swing to Popularity!

For Daintiness Use Odorono Cream

• Whether the music is sweet or swing, Arthur Murray's sophisticated dancers must always be "sweet" in a close-up! So it's real news for you that these charming girls who dance miles a day choose Odorono Cream to guard against "fatal" underarm odor and dampness.

Non-irritating, non-greasy, non-gritty, Odorono Cream ends perspiration annoyance—for 1 to 3 days! Swing to daintiness the Arthur Murray way . . . with Odorono! 10¢, 39¢, 59¢ sizes (plus tax).

THE ODORONO CO., INC., NEW YORK, N. Y.

1 FULL OZ. JAR—
ONLY 39¢ (Plus Tax)

Moya Teague keeps that bandbox freshness lesson after lesson!

ENDS PERSPIRATION ANNOYANCE FOR 1 TO 3 DAYS

GIVES YOU MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

•

ALSO LIQUID ODORONO—REGULAR AND INSTANT

LANA TURNER

(Continued from page 28)

There is a sort of lady Jekyll-Hyde side to this Turner flair for spotlighting, however. One side of Lana demands that she capture all eyes wherever she is; another comes along in a few minutes saying, "Cover up!"

When the "sweater girl" publicity first swamped her, Lana posed willingly in woolen draped attitudes. But she quickly rebelled. Now any sexy appellation makes her see red—and, for that matter, so does red itself.

No one but Lana Turner was responsible for the scarlet session she indulged in—flaming coats, hats, slippers, stationery, roadsters and on ad nauseam. But when the color tag started to stick, Lana dropped it in panic. Red is one tint that's out like a pop fly now. Lana has one major extravagance next to clothes. She loves jewelry—costume stuff and the real McCoy. She wears a beautifully jeweled diamond ball ring, exquisite clips and gemmed doodads. She never fails to have one in just the right place when she appears in public. But in a few minutes she gets uneasy and slips it inside her purse.

THE same paradoxical battle between show-off and shyness follows through almost every phase of her life. "I don't know what I expect, going around the way I do," she told me. "But I'm terrified when people stare at me."

At Hollywood's plush picture showcases, Ciro's, Mocambo and such, Lana is known as Little Miss Sparkling Personality—for a while. She loves to dance, weaves a sinuous rumba and of course decorates any night-blooming garden like a flaming hibiscus—for a while. People table-hop to her spot, with gay quips and chatter; she loves that—for a few minutes. Then suddenly it's discovered that Lana and boy friend are gone. She's started feeling the candle power of all eyes and has ducked out in inward terror.

One place Lana can indulge her natural decorative inclinations without a relapse is at home. She thinks she dolls up primarily to please herself anyway. Around the house she goes in for flouncy, luxurious negligees. She sleeps in satin nightgowns, keeps a chest full of exotic perfumes. A favorite indoor sport is to come home after a new coiffure and "louse it up" herself for hours before a mirror or change this and that about her make-up. The results are sometimes good, sometimes horrible. But being twenty and a natural beauty, Lana can get by with practically anything and still be stunning. Currently she is bobbing around with a high pompadour of her own conniving, at least two inches loftier than any other in town. Oddly enough, she looks swell. Lana keeps her locks touched up to a corn-silk blonde; she's a dark redhead minus the bottle.

Much has been made of Lana's high-style clothes. Actually, she has exceptional taste for a girl of her years and background. In public there is generally something to catch the eye—a bizarre pin, a spot of extravagant color, flashing shoes or a tricky hat to rival Roz Russell's. But the clothes Lana herself gloats over and hoards to multiple absurdity, oddly enough, are on the conservative side. They're tailored suits and expensive shoes. She has a lot of suits and shoes.

Lana's judgment about her wardrobe doesn't always match her taste, however. On her first trip to New York, she failed to take an evening gown. On her trip to Hawaii she lugged along a fur coat!

Lana's new house, on Saltair Avenue in Brentwood (which makes her a neighbor to Gary Cooper, Fred MacMurray, Tyrone Power and Cesar Romero), is her major interest right now. It's her first and only. It's an English-style place with an acre and a half of ground, fruit trees, flowers, garden patch and everything. That part leaves Lana comparatively cold. She's not cut out for gardening, or for that matter, much of any physical exercise. The inside is what intrigues her. She's busy at the moment fixing up the living room in what she calls "low, squashy furniture"—blond, fruitwood pieces, and ankle-tickling carpets with a lime-green motif and coral drapes. She's doing it herself with some help from a decorator.

This is no indication that Lana is in the least domestic, although she says she now likes to lie around the house more than to go out. Her major hobby at the moment is collecting records, concentrating on Tschaikovsky and Debussy. And she has practically given up detective magazines for popular fiction and biographies. She belongs to the Book-of-the-Month Club. She has also taken up painting in a big way, as big a way as Lana can take up anything. And she has one oil effort, a landscape which she swears is "darned good."

THIS came about in typical Turner fashion. She was hiking on vacation in Estes Park, Colorado, recently when she came upon an artist busy daubing canvas. Lana kibitzed for a while and then said, "Let me try that."

"Fine," said the painter.

"But," said Lana, "I don't know how." The artist said he'd show her. Together they worked out the masterpiece, a mountain view. Says Lana frankly "I'll probably forget about it soon. I'm just a dilettante at heart."

Lana isn't even a dilettante, however, at the more mundane aspects of housekeeping. She has trouble frying an egg, and as for pottering around the kitchen, she'd as soon be in jail. She can't stand dish-washing, although anything to do with clothes, her clothes, like pressing or taking a tuck here and there, is perfectly okay.

Only one major hate besides telphones, which she despises, approaches Lana's disdain for household drudgery. That's education, formal education. If she likes anything, she'll indulge it for fun. But lessons—!

Lana was a mere high school sopho-

You don't have to be a Sadie Hawkins to get your man these days—what with our super-duper Co-Ed fashion chart on the market! Clip the coupon on page 97!

more when Fame yanked her away from a strawberry malt at the Top Hat Malt Shop across from Hollywood High. She was playing hookey at the time. She was also flunking mathematics and a couple of other subjects no normal girl ever likes anyway. Languages were a breeze for her, and history was fun because it was romantic. She was a swell speller and could dash off a composition with the greatest ease. But she confesses, "Two and two still make three to me."

Probably the greatest cross she has had to bear since becoming a celluloid darling were the hours of torture put in at the studio high school at M-G-M. When most of the rest of M-G-M's happy family of stars were strolling, strutting or tossing gossip around the lot, Lana had to dig into such revolting topics as chemistry and civics. She doesn't know yet how she ever made it through. Maybe it was because of the taunts of one Mickey Rooney, who had squeezed out six months ahead of her and condescendingly called her "Baby Glamour" right to her flaming face. Mickey mixed this up with "What's two and two, Tootsie?" when older stars were around. Lana was mortified, especially since Hollywood's sophisticated beaus, movie and local society, were whirling her around

Here's a success-tip—All Men Enjoy Chewing Swell-tasting WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

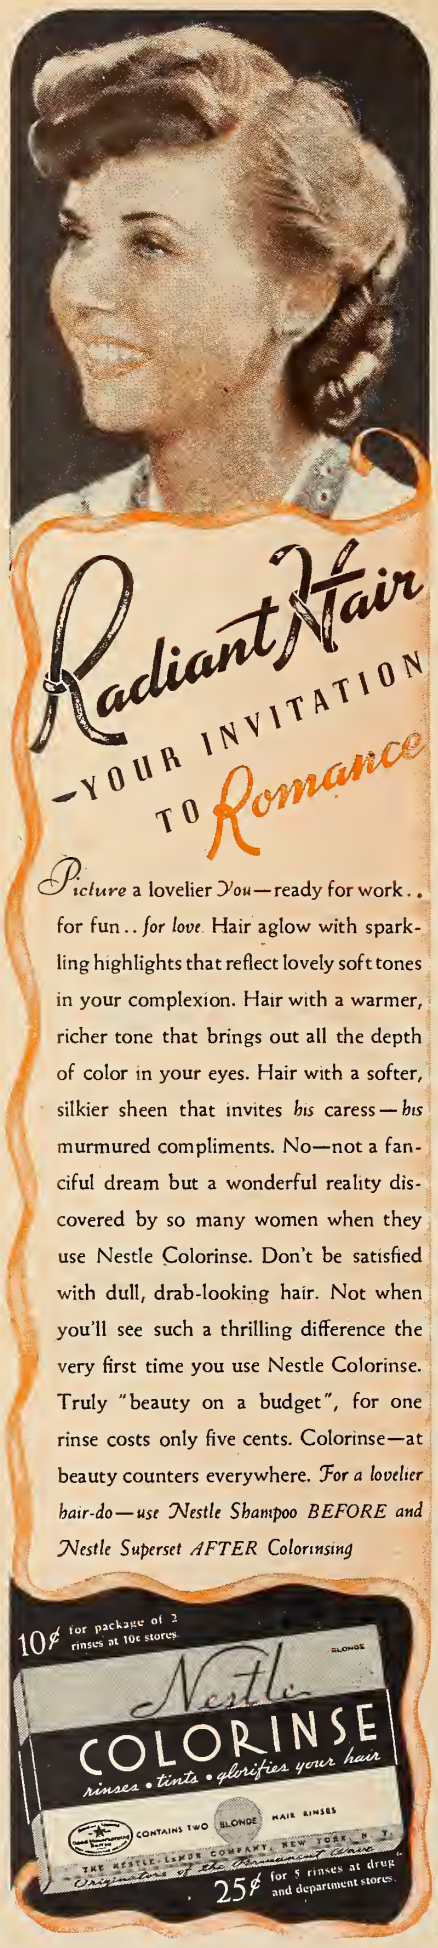
The vigorous, full, fresh flavor of Wrigley's Spearmint Gum is an all-time winner with American "he-men." They like the quick, snappy way it freshens up your taste and helps sweeten your breath.

The Flavor Lasts

BESIDES — the chewing of firm, springy Wrigley's Spearmint is good for you . . . helps keep your teeth clean and bright for a knock-out smile, aids digestion, and helps relieve tension, too.

KEEP AT THE TOP of his list by having plenty of swell-tasting Wrigley's Spearmint Gum always handy.

W-62



Radiant Hair
—YOUR INVITATION TO Romance
Picture a lovelier You—ready for work.. for fun.. for love. Hair aglow with sparkling highlights that reflect lovely soft tones in your complexion. Hair with a warmer, richer tone that brings out all the depth of color in your eyes. Hair with a softer, silkier sheen that invites his caress—his murmured compliments. No—not a fanciful dream but a wonderful reality discovered by so many women when they use Nestle Colorinse. Don't be satisfied with dull, drab-looking hair. Not when you'll see such a thrilling difference the very first time you use Nestle Colorinse. Truly "beauty on a budget", for one rinse costs only five cents. Colorinse—at beauty counters everywhere. For a lovelier hair-do—use Nestle Shampoo BEFORE and Nestle Superset AFTER Colorinsing 10¢ for package of 2 rinses at 10c stores.
Nestle
COLORINSE
rinses • tints • glorifies your hair
BLONDE
CONTAINS TWO
HAIR RINSES
THE NESTLE-LEMON COMPANY, NEW YORK, N. Y.
Originators of the Permanent Wave
25¢ for 5 rinses at drug and department stores.

of nights while Mickey was strictly in the wet-eared younger set socially.

Lana is boosted as a Hollywood High School product, but actually she was exposed to that flaming youth factory less than three months, and she played truant a lot of that time. San Francisco Junior High is her major academic alma mater and the only scholastic place where she distinguished herself. She was a rah-rah-leader two times there and wore a gorgeous pep-'em-up costume.

The funny part of this sad school report card is that Lana Turner is one of the best "studies" at M-G-M. "I had no memory at all in school," she muses, "but, boy, can I learn lines now." What she does is take the script home, curl up in some "squashy" seat or on her luxurious bed. Any one of her six dogs, ranging in size from Pekes to Danes, can wander in, her love birds can coo and chatter or the house can sway in an earthquake. Lana is set to cram. When she starts to read the same lines twice, she quits, hops into bed and drifts off. When she wakes up, it's all there in order, clear as a bell. "My subconscious," Lana explains. "I simply sleep on it."

SHE hasn't any trouble that way—with insomnia—in fact, you can rub her hands (if you get the chance), and she'll start dozing away right on the set. She does have nerves, though, not the turn-and-toss or the butterfly-stomach type, but the pain-in-the-neck, tight-shoulder variety. A massage usually snaps her out of it. Otherwise she's as healthy as a mongrel pup. The only scar on her shapely body is a neat appendectomy incision, and dentists get only tooth polishing fees from the Turner check book.

Lana's cast-iron constitution is no tribute to scientific diet. Health menus leave her cold as a stuffed cucumber. "Vegetables—ugh!" she shudders. Lana still nurses a school-girl hang-over craving for jumbo malts and soda fountain fare, hamburgers, shoestring potatoes and chile, when she's out and around. At home she's a sucker for fried chicken, candied sweet potatoes and solid fare like that. She's a great meat eater; Ciro's always puts a steak on the grill when she enters the door.

In spite of the rich, heavy fodder, Lana has no troubles with poundage, sticking comfortably close to 112. She loses weight when she works—she dropped eight pounds during "Honky Tonk"—also, she has developed the bad habit of going from breakfast to breakfast without food. Due to some constitutional quirk, she can work all day and go out at night without any dinner and still keep her good humor. She thinks maybe Tony Martin has taught her that, as it's also a habit of his.

Tony also tried to teach her golf, but that was a mistake. Lana sees no crying need for useless physical activity. She'll go through the motions of tennis or swimming, but she can take them or leave them. People are always talking her into some sort of outdoor sport, but it generally comes to grief after a brief enthusiasm. The golf lessons only ruined her usually good temper and made her legs ache. And when she got talked into a deep-sea fishing trip recently by her hairdresser, Lana hauled in a barracuda, which promptly bit her. She was disgusted. "What's the fun fishing," she complained with logic, "if the darned things bite you?"

In Hawaii she loved surf riding. All she had to do was lie down on the board and let the Kanaka boy steer in.

Probably no star in Hollywood has fewer friends than Lana Turner. She has no real close ones in town. "I have a hundred acquaintances but few friends," Lana states simply, forgetting Judy Garland, her best girl friend. For one thing, she is neither social nor sociable. She is uncomfortable in crowds because she thinks she's being appraised. She's scared to death of small rooms and babbling people. She never entertains. "I'd be an awful hostess," she told me. "I wouldn't know what to do next with a lot of people."

On top of this, like all really beautiful and through-and-through feminine women, she doesn't care too much for other women. She likes men, but she's one of those one-man-at-a-time girls. Her long romances don't necessarily mean anything serious, though, as Lana proved when she jilted her first fiancé, Greg Bautzer, Los Angeles lawyer, for Artie Shaw. She had gone with no one else but glamour-boy Bautzer for months.

She hardly knew Artie, even though they made "Dancing Co-ed" together. A date, a ride in the moonlight—and a plane to Las Vegas came next. Lana was hardly a week over eighteen. The marriage lasted officially four months, actually less.

Few people assayed the Tony Martin romance for just what it was. They forget that Lana's romance with the curly-haired crooner was almost coincident with her burning interest in her career and her batting down of natural instincts for fancy frolics and good times. Lana met Tony first in San Francisco. He was there for the ASCAP Convention; she was there for the wedding of an old friend, Hazel Meadows, whose mother used to employ Lana's mother in her beauty shop. Both Tony and Lana stayed at the St. Francis Hotel. They knew about each other, and it wasn't long before they met to talk Hollywood.

TONY MARTIN is a serious young man wrapped up in his career. It took him away from Alice Faye, and it comes first in his life. Theirs was a playtime romance, only. Tony infected Lana with the first real zeal she'd ever known about getting somewhere and really being somebody on the screen. Before that Lana could take the work part of Hollywood or leave it. She had no more real ambition about becoming an actress than a catfish. What she liked about it were the good times and the glamour.

The fact that she was exclusively Tony's girl at one point doesn't prove anything, nor would it prove much if she had married him. A shrewd observer who knows Lana better than Lana suspects, told me this: "Wait and see. Lana will have many marriages in her life. But I doubt if any of them will change her one whit."

This ties in pretty well with what Mistress Turner told me one day recently when I saw her. It was the day she'd won her final freedom from Artie Shaw. "Well," I said, "today's the day. Are you going to get married now?"

"NO!" replied Lana, "Definitely NO!"

"You wouldn't cross me up," I said, cautiously.

"I might cross you up," was her frank reply. "But not myself. I might break plenty of promises to somebody else. But this time I've promised myself. And that's different!"

There is probably only one person in the world who counts in big figures to Lana Turner—her mother, Mildred. She is young and still pretty. She's no hovering movie mother, but she has a lot in common with Lana and is still her best friend. Lana's father, Virgil Turner, was

(Continued on page 74)

"Lovely skin makes hearts beat faster"

MERLE OBERON

ALEXANDER KORDA STAR

"I never neglect my daily Lux Soap ACTIVE-LATHER FACIAL"

1 "Here's all you do to take a Lux Soap facial," says this famous screen star. "First pat Lux Soap's lather lightly in."

2 "Then rinse with warm water —follow with a dash of cool —and pat your face gently with a soft towel to dry."

3 "Now touch your skin. See how softly smooth it feels— how fresh it looks! This facial's a wonderful beauty care. Try it!"

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap – It's PURE! It has ACTIVE lather! It's MILD!

(Continued from page 72)

killed in San Francisco when she was a carrot-topped moppet of ten. From then on it was her mother and Julia Jean Mildred Frances Turner (just call her Lana) versus the World—and it was quite a scrap the whole route. Mildred battled frail health and a frayed purse at the same time. Lana collected her education on the installment plan, in Catholic convents and shifting spells in public schools. She thinks the repeated terror of facing hostile new schoolrooms has something to do with her lone-wolfness and allergy to academic atmosphere.

Mrs. Turner handles Lana's money affairs (Lana would spend every cent on something), runs the two-servant house, which has always been set up as separate living quarters (Lana has her own entrance) and does her best to keep Lana prompt, efficient and responsible in her career affairs. She usually accompanies Lana on her trips and vacations and sees to it that Hollywood business isn't forgotten. Mrs. Turner slipped up on Lana's recent vacation. With Lana she drove away after "Honky Tonk" was finished. They went on a California tour, Del Monte, San Francisco, the Sierras, willy-nilly.

Lana left with strict instructions to call Hollywood every day and report. But she—eh—forgot. Mrs. Turner didn't know. After eight days Lana got around to telephoning her agents. She knew things would be in a stew about preparations for "Johnny Eager," and they were, all right. Lana was crazy to do the part, too, because it's super-dramatic, about a girl who's almost pathologically in love.

But Lana has a one-track personality that way and a psychology of superlatives. A vacation meant a vacation and it was unavoidable if the studio got upset. She's that way all through. She's up or she's down. Busy or absolutely idle. She rains tears easily and laughs just as quick. Violins always make her drippy-eyed. Slapstick wows her. She loves to kibitz lousy movies, and yet the other night at the opening of John Murray Anderson's Silver Screen and the spectacle of all Hollywood's broken down old-timers straining to make their age-tattered acts click, she felt so depressed that she had to leave the place, sniffling.

Right now Lana is sure there will never, never be another part like Sheila Regan in "Ziegfeld Girl." Returns haven't come in from "Honky Tonk" yet, and "Johnny Eager" is ready for release. Still, she's sure she'll never be that good again, quite sure. That's Lana, also. "I'll never have a chance like 'Ziegfeld' again," she told me. "They come once in a lifetime. Why, it had everything, glamour, drama, everything!"

So has Lana Turner. She may not know it, but there'll be lots more parts like that for her. At twenty she is what she is and she is safe. It is not so much a tribute to Lana Turner as to the times.

A man at her studio, who has had much to do with guiding her career, put it like this:

"In the old hey-hey Hollywood days, Lana Turner might well have been another Clara Bow. Like Clara did, she typifies the youth of her age. Any girl that young, in any time who has nothing and suddenly gets everything she's dreamed about, has to have a period of adjustment. But nowadays it has to be quick. In modern Hollywood you either snap out of it fast and get down to work or you're out of the picture. Lana had enough sense to realize this—that's all."

Lana Turner is still very much Lana Turner, human, normal, acting her age. Like I said, she is typically young and thoroughly female. Youth always has a right to grow up, and, besides a lady can always change her mind, can't she?

H. M. PULHAM, ESQ.

STORY

(Continued from page 52)

he not to remember? In his safe, sane, slightly stuffy study, long after Kay and their small daughter had gone to bed, Harry pondered.

* * *

He'd been born—correctly. He'd prepared at St. Swithin's—correctly. He had met Kay (pug-nosed, forthright Cornelia Motford, she was then) at a holiday dancing school party—most correctly.

He had gone to Harvard, in the natural course of events. And after Harvard, one long-ago Spring, he had joined up for that other war. To Plattsburg, first. Then overseas, with the A.E.F.

Was that what Bo-Jo meant by the story of a man's life?

Maybe. It was the kind of thing with which one could fill up dotted lines after a list of questions, at least. Yet somehow the story, as he looked back on it, seemed to have started much later than that. (The sound of Marvin's voice, this afternoon, asking him to come to her hotel for cocktails! The one brief glimpse he'd had of her, waiting, before he turned and fled unseen! Marvin Myles, here in Boston!)

She belonged so definitely, so completely, in New York. It was in New York he had met her. He was home from the war, and his old classmate, Bill King had gotten him a job with Bullard's Advertising Agency.

"The old order's doomed, Harry." So certain of himself, Bill King! "This is the new band wagon, Harry. Hop aboard it, brother, hop aboard it now!"

Marvin was there, sharing an office with them. A girl such as young Harry Pulham never had seen before. Lipstick and silk stockings and a manner frank as a man's. Career girls were news in those days.

It hadn't been like the romance from any well-bred novel he had read in Boston. She hadn't even liked him at first. But for him, from the moment Bill first spoke her name, she had been fascinating.

She was gorgeous to look at. And she was a symbol of all the post-war world he was panting to keep step with. 1920 seemed like some breath-snatching, noisy, glittery gown specially designed to fit her.

The first time he got past that smart, hard shell was one morning in—of all places—the Bronx. Their boss had sent them out on a quick demonstration tour to check reactions on Coza Soap Flakes. Over the suds to his elbows, Harry looked up at Marvin suddenly. And something in her eyes was changed.

"If I'm a dub at advertising," he grinned to cover his sudden confusion, "I always can hire out as a laundress."

That wonderful Spring after they had discovered they were in love! Speakeasies and rides through the Park in an old Victoria and intimate evenings in her tiny flat—all crammed between long, tense, vibrating hours while their high-pressure office spun around their heads!

SALUTE
to lovely Eyes!

There's always a salute for lovely, fascinating eyes.

In love and romance, in social or business life, compliments belong to the girl with attractive, sparkling eyes — the girl who knows how to look her best.

Don't take chances on a dull, drab appearance. Spark your whole personality with eyes that radiate life and beauty. It's so easy when you use WINX.

WINX brings out the natural charm of your eyes—gives you a new fascinating loveliness. Try WINX today and see for yourself what a marvelous difference it makes.

WINX Mascara (either solid or creamy form) makes lashes appear darker, longer, more luxuriant. WINX Eyebrow Pencil adds form and grace to your eyebrows. To complete the picture of a "lovelier you" accentuate the color and depth of your eyes with a subtle touch of WINX Eye Shadow.

Insist on WINX for finer quality, natural-looking eye make-up. WINX is water-resistant, and so easy to use. In popular harmonizing shades. Get WINX today. At drug and department stores or in handy purse sizes for 10¢.

Winx
FOR LOVELY EYES

His trips back to Boston seemed all the more stiff and wooden by contrast. He knew his parents were waiting for him to come home, settle down in his father's business and marry Kay Motford or someone equally suitable. His whole education had pointed toward exactly that. But the war had broken in. The war—and Marvin.

"We'll have a penthouse!" she dreamed excitedly, in his arms. "A French maid! Clothes from Paris! Someday, Harry . . . someday soon . . ."

Why hadn't they gotten married right then? Both of them had meant to, certainly—so dizzily in love that every hour apart was wasted.

But somehow, Marvin seemed afraid. Afraid of his Boston tradition, of his life spent in a house where there were butlers, of—exactly what was it she had been afraid of? Harry never had comprehended.

So fall had stolen in to find them still making plans; still living in a future which should have been the present. First snow fell. And one day there had come that long-distance call from his sister Mary. Their father was dying. Harry was needed, at once.

"A man in the house . . ." That thankful sigh was practically the elder Pulham's last breath. "A man to carry on . . ." It was expected. And a gentleman never failed those who needed him in what was expected.

THE gloomy Boston house, too quiet now its master had left it. His mother and Mary, leaning on him for everything. The business to be settled. The country place at Westwood to be appraised. Every day duties clutched at his sleeve to keep him from New York.

In the end, he compromised. He invited Bill and Marvin up for a week-end. A week-end of biting cold; of glittering, icy whiteness.

Almost from the moment Marvin stepped across his family's threshold, he could sense a restlessness in her. That bright, warm mouth seemed too red in the stately drawing room. That quick, light walk was alien to a house where thick carpets muffled the tap of heels.

Harry had arranged a picnic at Westwood for Sunday. Kay Motford came along with Joe Bingham. She was engaged to Joe that winter.

Everyone in the crowd sledding on the hill back of the old-fashioned mansion loved it. Everyone but Marvin. She didn't belong in an old St. Swithin's sweater. She belonged in New York, in smart black and fine-spun silk. Brushing her off in the big, bare front hall, Harry understood that vaguely. (But he loved her so much! She would change!)

She didn't change. When he followed her back to the city a week later, it was to ask her to marry him immediately and end the saw-toothed pangs of their long separation. She was in his arms, then, close to him. She was eager to surrender, her eyes shining, her lips waiting. Until he mentioned his plan for finding their own house in Boston.

He scarcely knew the girl who jerked away from him.

"You've given up your job here? You're crawling back to that family shell? You're—oh, Harry! No, Harry!"

Marvin stood staring up into his ardent face. Boston? That stiff, cold world which had closed in on her like a coffin? And give up her new job as Bullard's head of women's copy to become a club woman and housewife? Her protests poured over him, hurt and then angry.

"I have a life of my own, Harry! I can't give it up—won't give it up! You have no right to ask it. If you don't See Marjorie Woodworth in "Dudes Are Pretty People"

Winter or summer, what is
MARJORIE WOODWORTH'S
FAVORITE COLA?
ROYAL CROWN
RC
COLA
LOVELY MARJORIE WOODWORTH, star on the HAL ROACH lot, took Royal Crown's famous cola taste-test. "I drank well-known colas from unlabeled cups," says Marjorie, "and then voted for the one I liked best—Royal Crown Cola. Why don't you try its sparkling, tangy flavor tomorrow?" Winter or summer, when it's time for a quick-up, reach for a frosty bottle of Royal Crown Cola.
"my number One taste-test choice is Royal Crown Cola"
Marjorie Woodworth
TAKE ME HOME
6 BOTTLES
ROYAL CROWN COLA
Best by Taste-Test
TAKE TIME OUT FOR A "QUICK UP" WITH ROYAL CROWN
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
COLA
Best by Taste-Test!
COPYRIGHT 1941, NEHI CORP.

Can You Trust Tampons?
— AND WHEN

A NAME YOU CAN TRUST... Fibs are the Kotex Tampon and merit your confidence! And with Fibs you can change to shorts, play suit or even a swim suit with nobody the wiser! Worn internally, Fibs provide invisible sanitary protection . . . no pins, pads or belts . . . no chafing, no disposal problem. And only Fibs are quilted for greater comfort and safety. Easy to use, too!

FULL DOZEN ONLY 20¢. Not 8—not 10—but 12 Fibs for only 20¢ . . . you save the difference. That's because with Fibs you pay for no mechanical gadget to aid insertion, for none is needed. Next time buy Fibs, the tampon you can trust. You'll save money, too!

FIBS*— the Kotex* Tampon

NOT 8—NOT 10—BUT 12 FOR 20¢

★TradeMarks Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

want me right here in New York—"

Harry had a life of his own, too. A life long ago set in its pattern of obligations. If she called after him as he plunged dazedly down the stairs from her flat, he never heard her. He boarded the first train back to New England. Within a year, he married Kay.

Why not? They were fond of each other, they thought the same way about things, Joe Bingham was out of the picture. And anything was better than remembering. Harry wasn't going to remember, any more.

So here he sat, remembering! But this wasn't what Bo-Jo wanted for that class biography. This was the life Harry Pulham hadn't lived.

The facts (and facts were supposed to matter) were very different. Two children. Son, George, now attending St. Swithin's. Daughter, Gladys, born 1929. Present employment, Pres. of Pulham, Inc. Clubs are . . .

For the first time in years, Harry was late for breakfast next morning. He wanted to tell Kay why, but the words stuck in his throat. When he tried to make her see how things came to pieces in one's hands, how one grew frightened looking back if years didn't add up, and one's life was already half over, she barely listened. She laughed at him tolerantly, when he begged her to pack a bag and climb into their car and go away with him alone somewhere for a little while.

"Harry, you shouldn't take highballs after dinner. You tossed and turned all night, dear." That was how well his wife had understood.

All morning Harry sat at his desk and studied investment reports which made no sense. It was near noon that he had his secretary call the Hotel Hadley. Marvin was stopping there. If he could see her!

"Of course." The magic voice again! "Come any time."

She was waiting when, just at lunch time, he rang her bell. A Marvin lovely as a Summer noon, poised and pure and chic. A Marvin like everything that ambitious girl in New York had dreamed of becoming. Yet there were tears in her eyes as she drew him inside her room.

"Hello, Marvin." He said it awkwardly.

"Hello, Harry." Simple words. But somewhere behind them—

Yes, it had lasted; whatever they had shared once and had thrown away. The little things came rushing back. The way she smiled. The way his hair had never quite lain smooth. The Bronx kitchen and the Park by moonlight and the poems she'd read him and old songs.

But it was like looking back across an unbridged chasm. Even champagne couldn't recapture the feel of it, although the memory was something precious and real deep in their hearts.

She showed him a picture of the man she had married (because he reminded her of Harry). Harry showed her snapshots of George and Gladys. Those bits of paper, changing hands, were stone walls between them.

Harry left soon after lunch; lunch eaten down in the hotel dining room, where music filled the silences. He walked into a mid-afternoon world so strange it wasn't Boston at all. What streets he followed blindly, he couldn't have told. Then Kay's voice was in his ears.

"Harry! Harry, wait for me!"

He turned at her summons. Their car was drawn up to the curb, a packed bag on its rear seat. She was clinging to his arm and smiling up at him unsteadily. She'd been trying to find him. His office hadn't known where to suggest. He hadn't been at his clubs.

So Kay had driven aimlessly, searching the crowd. It was as important as that to find him; to tell him she'd understood what he was talking about at breakfast and wanted to go away with him.

Harry looked at her again as he climbed behind the driver's wheel. For twenty years she had taken him for granted. Now, something in his restlessness had warned her. She was looking up at him in a new way, wide-eyed. He was important to her, and they both knew it.

"Is—is everything all right, Harry?" she whispered.

The picture had changed. Everything was fine, suddenly! Fine from here on!

H. M. PULHAM, ESQ.
PRODUCTION

(Continued from page 53)

up a cigar and light it—all in 720 beats (six minutes). Bob missed on the first try—was two beats out of time unfastening the third button of his overcoat! The two casting problems to be solved were (1) finding 300 young men of military age to be German and American soldiers for the battle scenes, and (2) picking an actor according to the maneuverability of his Adam's apple. Youngsters of high school age were hired to tote the movie guns, and make-up men plastered mud on the kids' faces to hide their youth. Veteran actor Syd Saylor won the part of the preacher whose throat wiggling distracts Bob Young in the wedding scene.

Ruth Hussey got time off from the picture to reign as Queen of the Royal American Horse Show in Kansas City. Autographed a street cleaner's broom while she was there and received word later that the inscribed straw sweeper-upper has been given a place of honor in the city hall.

Ruth is one of Hollywood's foremost beauty-plus-brains stars. She's set a goal for her budget and is living in a tiny house on a modest scale until she gets her quota of cash socked away. Knows income tax frontwards and backwards and saved Hedy a nice chunk of currency by reminding her that gowns worn in publicity stills could be listed under necessary business.

On the first day of production, Hedy kept disappearing from the set every fifteen minutes, worry stamped all over her pretty phizz. One bold soul followed her, discovered her phoning home to check on the disappearance of her pet kitten, Spunky. The little animal was discovered two days later, snuggled happily on his furry, full tummy at the bottom of the household garbage pail.

Between scenes, Fay Holden designed an easy-to-make nightie to send to the kiddies in England. She sews two straight pieces of flannel together, attaches long sleeves and cuts a hole large enough to allow the gown to slip quickly over a child's head. A single button is sewed at the neck, and the whole garment is finished in one hour. All the women in the picture worked on 'em, and Fay bought extra material for Bob Young and Edward Arnold to take home to their wives.

Fay's husband, David Clive, plays the part of her butler in the picture, so to make up for it, she insists on serving his dinner herself every night after work.

Charles Coburn appeared on the golf course set, strolled around a while, waggled a golf club awkwardly over a couple of balls. Protestingly he let himself be lured into a game with a couple of his fellow Thespians, then proceeded to show them some championship form. Opponents paid off their bets in green cash and red faces.

Mutiny in the make-up department: One of the scenes requires Leif Erickson to bare one arm and show Bob Young a couple of teeth marks. The make-up man said he didn't mind doing his regular job, but he'd be darned if he was going to take a bite out of anyone, even for art's sake. Leif had to do it himself.

Bob Young's stand-in, Bert Davis, finally got a chance to play in the same scene with his boss. Plays the part of an elevator operator and stands right next to Bob in his one scene. Davis has been working on a book during his spare time. It'll be about the inner workings of a big studio.

For the snow scenes, the prop department ground out a snow hill over 35 feet high, with 60 tons of shaved ice. Snow-starved cast and crew practiced belly flops between takes.

Sara Haden is the envy of all the young children of her acquaintance. Sara's most loyal fan is head of a local ice cream factory, and he's promised to supply her with the frozen stuff for the rest of her life.

Director Vidor wallowed in mud and memories the day he shot the battle scenes. It was the same location spot he'd used during filming of "The Big Parade" with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree.

Vidor had every part of Boston photographed and spent weeks there himself talking to typical Boston characters. The only prop that stumped them was finding white eggs large enough to fit snugly into the old-fashioned oversized egg cups. Finally had to use brown ones dipped in white paint.

Sound men had to stop recording in the middle of a tense scene to hunt for a friction noise. They found Mademoiselle Lamarr in a ski suit topped by a thick white sweater, rubbing her gorgeous back this way and that across the corner of a tall Grandfather clock. "It itched until I could hardly stand it," she apologized.

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

An example of what takes place in the Hollywood schoolrooms can be gained from this brief composition by Peter Swerling, son of Jo Swerling the writer. He was told to write a story about a poor boy, and Peter wrote: "There was a poor boy. His father was poor. His mother was poor. They had a poor nurse and a very poor butler." This Peter is quite a character. One night before dinner Frank Capra, Robert Riskin, Jean Arthur, Frank Ross and Norman Krasna were gathered in the Swerling living room. Somehow the talk centered on what books one would take with him if he were stranded on a desert island. The best answer was supplied by Peter, who had been asked the question only as a matter of courtesy. Peter said, "I'd only want one: a book telling me how I could get off the island."

Sidney Skolsky

ARE YOU SURE OF YOUR PRESENT PERSPIRATION-CHECK? TEST IT! PUT IT UNDER THIS ARM.
PUT FRESH #2, THE NEW PERSPIRATION-CHECK, UNDER THIS ARM. SEE WHICH STOPS PERSPIRATION BETTER.

Gown by courtesy of Milgrim, New York

Use FRESH #2 and stay fresher!

PUT FRESH #2 under one arm—put your present non-perspirant under the other. And then . . .

1. See which one checks perspiration better. We think FRESH #2 will.
2. See which one prevents perspiration odor better. We are confident you'll find FRESH #2 will give you a feeling of complete under-arm security.
3. See how gentle FRESH #2 is—how pleasant to use. This easy-spreading vanishing cream is not greasy—not gritty—and not sticky.
4. See how convenient FRESH #2 is to apply. You can use it immediately before dressing—no waiting for it to dry.
5. And revel in the knowledge, as you use FRESH #2, that it will not rot even the most delicate fabric. Laboratory tests prove this.

FRESH #2 comes in three sizes—50¢ for extra-large jar; 25¢ for generous medium jar; and 10¢ for handy travel size.

Make your own test at our expense. Once you make this under-arm test, we're sure you'll never be satisfied with any other perspiration check. Just print your name and address on postcard and mail to FRESH, Dept. MS-2, Louisville, Ky. We'll send you a trial-size jar of FRESH #2, postpaid.

Recommended Good Housekeeping Bureau

Companion of FRESH #2 is FRESH #1. FRESH #1 deodorizes, but does not stop perspiration. In a tube instead of a jar. Popular with men, too.

Morio Montez, lovely Dutch-Sponish newcomer to the films entertoins in the living room of her suite ot one of New York's luxurious hotels.

Cut this moist spice cake in squares. It's delicious!

BY HELEN HOLMES

It's a South American Custom!

Serve coffee with delicious snacks in the late afternoon for gracious informal entertaining.

• New York has had many South American visitors of late but none more gay and sparkling than Maria Montez, Universal Studio's new discovery. She was here for just a few days before starting on a personal appearance tour that was to take her through our Southern cities and, of course, was immediately caught up in a whirl of radio appearances, interviews and fittings with noted coutouriers. But she managed to take the time to invite a few of the New York columnists and friends of former visits to drop over to her suite at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel for, of all things, afternoon coffee!

It was late on a rather gloomy winter afternoon, and candles were lit on the beautifully arranged table standing near the fireplace in the living room of the suite. Graceful Louis XV furniture, upholstered in soft shades of rose and ivory damask, long drapes in the same colors at the enormous windows and great bowls of roses formed a lovely background for the party. The interesting writers and celebrities who attended laughed and talked together while they enjoyed Maria's delicious food.

Maria speaks with a fascinating accent, and that afternoon she carried on an animated conversation partly in Spanish and partly in her own version of English, while gracefully pouring coffee for everyone. Unobtrusive waiters passed serving plates of piping hot, savory canapes and, afterwards, thin slices of a delicious coffee cake, rich with spice and nuts.

This coffee party was such a novelty, at least for the real New Yorkers who attended, and so much enjoyed by everyone, that those of you who need new ideas for entertaining may like to copy. Simplified recipes for the canapes and coffee cakes are printed here. Perhaps Maria will be credited with starting a vogue, if you all serve these delicious foods with steaming hot cups of coffee at your parties during these winter months.

SAVORY SHRIMP CANAPES

Cut canned or fresh shrimp in small pieces. Mix with a small quantity of medium thick white sauce made from any standard recipe. Season with salt, pepper, onion, a dash of tabasco sauce and a few drops of lemon juice. Spread on strips of toast or crackers and sprinkle with grated cheese. Just before serving, place under a low broiler flame until brown.

SPICED BRAZIL NUT COFFEE RING

(This is a simplified version of the coffee ring served at Maria's party.)

1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
⅔ cup milk
5 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup chopped Brazil nuts

Sift first 4 dry ingredients into a bowl. Cut in the shortening with a pastry blender or two knives. Add the beaten egg mixed with the milk to make a soft, loose dough. Turn into a greased layer cake pan. Mix the ¼ cup of sugar, the cinnamon and the Brazil nuts together. Sprinkle over the top of the dough. Sprinkle with about 1 tablespoon of additional butter, melted if desired. Bake in a hot oven (400° F) for about 25 minutes. Cut in wedges and serve warm.

BRAZIL NUT SPICE CAKE

½ cup shortening
1 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅔ cup milk
½ cup ground Brazil nuts

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add beaten eggs and mix well. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and spices together and add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Add Brazil nuts. Pour into greased cake pan 9″ x 9″ x 2″. Bake 40 to 45 minutes in moderate oven (350° F.) Generously frost with brown sugar 7-minute icing.

"See that woman?—I'd swear she buys a different laundry soap every week."

"Know how she buys?—She comes in and asks me, 'Which one's having a sale today?' So I tell her and out she goes, pleased as Punch, with a bagful of bargains. . . . And next week she's back again —buying somebody else's soap."

What's a bargain...in soap?

"Some day she'll try Fels-Naptha Soap and she'll be done with all that. Instead of saving pennies here, she'll save dollars at home —you wait and see."

GIRLS! DON'T GIVE UP
IF YOU'VE GOT A POOR COMPLEXION

Here's grand way that has helped improve complexions of thousands of women

• If you're blue and discouraged because of your complexion; if you think you're doomed to go through life with an unsightly looking skin—this may be the most important message you've ever read.

Thousands of women who felt just as you do have been thrilled beyond words to see the noticeable improvement Noxzema has made in their complexions.

Why it does so much

One important reason for Noxzema's benefits is this: Noxzema is not just a cosmetic cream. It's a soothing, medicated cream that not only quickly helps soften and smooth rough, dry skin —but also aids in healing externally-caused skin blemishes! And it has a mildly astringent action, too.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER. For a limited time you can get a generous 25¢ jar of Noxzema for only 19¢ at any drug or cosmetic counter. Give Noxzema a chance to help your complexion. Get a jar today and use it as a night cream and protective powder base. See what it does for your skin!

MY SON MICK

(Continued from page 30)

White satin wedgies, for instance. "What on earth for?"

"Oh, I thought I'd take you to Earl Carroll's in your white satin wedgies. If you haven't got 'em, how can I take you in 'em?"

His taste is good. "Except," says Mom, "he sometimes forgets I'm not as young as I was." One day he arrived toting a large box. (He always takes her presents along, can't wait to have them sent). Proudly he unpacked it and brought to light a snappy reefer, yellow, high-pocketed.

"You'll look slick in this, Mom. Got it in the college department. It'll fit you okay. Had a girl just your size try it on."

Her heart sank. It was meant for a kid. It made her look bilious. "It's grand, Mick," she said. But Mickey's no dope. "You don't like that garment. What would you rather have?"

"A purse," she said gratefully.

SHE wears a topaz ring which he won on a two-buck chance. The papers had him giving it to a girl. The girl's his mother. He really staggered her on the occasion of his twenty-first birthday with a silver fox cape, picked by himself, saved up for out of his allowance. She'd insisted she was too small for furs.

"That's why I got baby foxes," he beamed.

The place they finally bought is in the valley. Mick was torn between it and one in Bel-Air. Mom liked them both. What clinched it for him was the matter of livestock. "They wouldn't let you keep chickens and ducks in Bel-Air. And only a couple of house-dogs maybe. I want 'em runnin' all over the place." They have ten dogs, countless fowl and groves of walnut trees. The 1941 census-taker, looking the place over, wrote down: "Mickey Rooney, farmer." The farmer got a kick out of that. But Cato, the houseman—called Skates by Mick—discourages intimacy between the stock and their owner. Mick, all business, went out to watch him slay a turkey one day. The turkey pecked fondly at his hand and got a reprieve for life.

He likes nine hours of sleep, ten when he can get them, and sleeps like a cherub under seven down comforters. Mom, allergic to the weight of quilts, buys them for herself but they wind up on top of Mick. When Mom goes in to wake him, one pillow may be on the floor and the other snuggled between mattress and footboard. He's never slept on a pillow in his life, but he likes to go to bed with two and push them around.

On a normal working day he gets up at eight. She has to call him at ten of, so he can flop over and sleep for ten minutes. Her son has given her much to marvel at, not the least of these wonders being how he can sleep for ten minutes and what good it does him. He hops out at eight, whistling, and he whistles straight through his shower, except when he's drinking the orange juice left on a bench outside the stall by Lena, the cook. When he's through bathing, there's no water left in the tank.

In bathrobe and slippers, he runs out to feed the rabbits before sitting down to his own unbelievable breakfast. Mom, who breakfasts with him, tries to make her coffee and toast reach while he sails through eggs and nine strips of bacon, hot biscuits and gravy, fried potatoes and a quart of milk. He's got to have fried potatoes with every meal. She keeps them on hand in the icebox, cooked in their jackets. He's fussy about his eggs, too. The whites have to be basted till they're firm, and the yolks must be runny. If they're not, he says: "Mom, will you cook me up an egg?"

"You spoil him," her friends protest.

"I don't either," she replies placidly. "He's got a right to an egg the way he wants it."

"My mom," grins Mickey.

Sometimes he'll pour vinegar sauce over the eggs. Mom makes it with garlic, which he's crazy about. "Careful, Mick," she warns. "Whom are you working with today?"

"Not Garbo," says Mick.

His regulation clothes are slacks, sweater, sports coat or lumber jacket. Brown's his favorite color except for ties and socks, in both of which he craves plenty of bounce. He doesn't go in for fancy duds and pays for his clothes what the average college boy pays, because those are the kind of clothes he enjoys wearing. He will, however, go as high as two bucks for a tie snazzy enough to tempt him. He owns one topcoat, two and a half years old, and bought his second Tux for his last birthday party.

Mom sees him off in the dark blue Lincoln Zephyr, presented to him by Henry Ford. She doesn't say, "Be careful," since he always is, having no patience with crazy coots who take chances in cars. His pride lies not in speed but in extra gadgets. The minute the Pep Boys show something new in their window, it's on Mick's car.

From an upper balcony Mom watches him till he's out of sight over the hills to M-G-M. He gets there at nine, and phones at nine-fifteen. "Hello, Mom. Watcha doin'? How're the dogs?" Four calls a day is average. Incidentally, the country's No. 1 box office star has no star dressing room. Its plush swank oppresses him. "Give it to a dame," he said when they offered him one, and stayed in featured players' row. You may have noticed, too, that on Andy Hardy pictures, his name follows Lewis Stone's. Individual theatre managers may feature Rooney, but the billing puts him second, by request of Mick. He'd feel like a fool, with his name topping Stone's.

AT HALF past five he's phoning again. "Only one more shot. Be home by six-fifteen. What's for dinner?"

No one can cook like Mom. It's a gag among his friends. Replete with food at some place whose food is famous, Mick pushes the plate back. "Can't compare with Mom's chili con carne." Now his friends say it for him.

If it's steak for dinner, Mom takes over from Lena, broiling it rare with chopped rosemary, parsley and garlic sprinkled on top. He squirts lemon over that, bathes it in butter and himself in bliss. Anything highly spiced is his dish. At the studio he collects strange recipes for spaghetti and enchiladas and bestows them on Mom. In mute appeal he'll bring her a mess of peppers, tomatoes and green beans from the vegetable garden. That means he wants chowchow. "I'll chop," he offers magnanimously.

After dinner he heads for the piano. Home from golf, he heads for the piano. Back from a trip, he heads for the piano —the new baby grand that was Mom's birthday gift. There's a couch along the wall beside it, where she has to sit. She's spent hours sitting obediently while Mick pecks out tunes. "How's that sound, Mom?"

"Swell, honey."

Or he'll phone Sid Miller. "Come on over, I got an idea." He's been known to get an idea at two in the morning and stay with it, strumming the same ten notes with maddening persistence, till it comes out right. Mom shuts her bedroom door, stuffs cotton in her ears and goes to sleep.

Sometimes the gang gathers—Sid Miller, the Jewish boy of Boys Town (Abie's Irish Rose, Mrs. Pankey calls them) whom Mick grew up with and who writes lyrics to his tunes—Dick Paxton, his stand-in for four years, who lives with them—Dick Quine, another schoolfriend (you'll know him better after "Babes on Broadway")—Georgie Stoll, music arranger at M-G-M. They make recordings on the new machine, another birthday gift, bang the xylophones, talk bands, golf, politics, anything but movies. When Mickey's through at the studio, he's through. He doesn't bring it home with him. A mystery Mom will never fathom is when he learns his lines. In his sleep, she guesses, for he's always letter-perfect, yet she's never seen him with a script in his hand.

WHEN they're hungry, they go to the kitchen and cook up something. Mick's at home on the range. He can turn out as tasty a mixture of spaghetti and meat balls as the next one—slightly overseasoned, maybe, but who's fussy. Like all good cooks, he's got to have the kitchen to himself, and when he's elected, the gang stays out till he yells, "Come and get it." Mom never knows how many beds will be full of assorted boys in the morning. Sid's the chief stayerover, and Mick sometimes spends the night with him when they get going good and can't stop. "I don't know," he muses. "I sleep good when I'm over at Sid's, and he sleeps good here."

He thinks he's tidy about his belongings. By male standards, he is. On a trip he takes one suitcase. "Keep yourself portable," is his slogan. "If you need a shirt, buy it."

"Who packed your grip, honey?" asked Mom on his recent return from one of the good-will appearances he's in constant demand for.

"I did." His chest swelled. "I knew you'd be proud of me."

Her eyes went from the welter in the suitcase to his face. "I certainly am," she said.

Most Sunday mornings finds five 'round the late breakfast table—Mom and Fred Pankey, her husband, Mick, Joe Yule and his wife. Much nonsense has been rumored about Mick's father. For their own good reasons, his parents separated fifteen years ago. They both remarried, happily. There was never any bitterness between them. Mick didn't see as much of his father as he might have, since the latter's vaudeville activities kept him moving. Since he's been under contract to M-G-M and living in Hollywood, the families have established a normal, pleasant relationship. They visit back and forth. Mick and his dad, both football fans, outyell each other at games. All five sat at the same table at Mick's birthday party.

Much nonsense has also been written about Mickey and girls. Sure he likes them. What normal twenty-one-year-old doesn't? But nothing sickens him more than stories dreamed up by purple-minded newshawks about how he flopped off the train into some girl's arms, and MISS BONNER MOORE, Registered Nurse, took part in medically supervised tests of Vicks ABC Plan. Records show almost unbelievable results!

NURSE TELLS... MOTHERS LISTEN... FEWER COLDS! SHORTER COLDS!

"A great deal of needless suffering would be saved," says Nurse Bonner Moore, "if every mother knew about the results of these great clinical tests..." For 154 days, 2,650 school-age children took part in tests of Vicks ABC Plan—under strict medical supervision... Results were amazing... Those children who followed the Plan had fewer colds... shorter colds... less than half as much sickness from colds. Vicks ABC Plan may do less for your family—or it may do even more... IT'S WORTH TRYING... All you need do is: Ⓐ Observe a few simple health rules. Ⓑ Use Vicks Va-tro-nol at the right time. Ⓒ Use Vicks VapoRub at the right time.

When to Use These 2 Clinic-Tested Medications

AT FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE

—or sign of nasal irritation—put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril and feel this special medication go to work. It is designed to aid your natural defenses against colds and help prevent many colds from developing... IF YOU SHOULD HAVE A HEAD COLD, Va-tro-nol does three important things to relieve distress. (1) Shrinks swollen membranes. (2) Soothes irritation. (3) Helps clear out nasal passages. Makes breathing easier! Follow directions in folder.

IF A COLD SHOULD STRIKE

—slip by precautions—relieve misery the IMPROVED Vicks way. This 3 minute treatment makes reliable Vicks VapoRub give EVEN BETTER RESULTS THAN EVER BEFORE! . . . PENETRATES to upper bronchial tubes with soothing medicinal vapors . . . STIMULATES chest and back surfaces like a warming poultice . . . WORKS FOR HOURS to ease coughing and congestion in upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. Rub VapoRub for 3 minutes on BACK, throat and chest—spread a thick layer on chest and cover up. Try it!

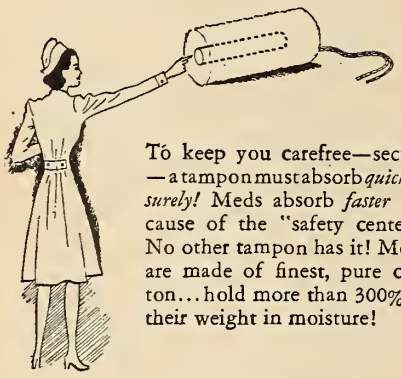
You'll Find Complete Details of Vicks ABC Plan in Your Package of Vicks

Do you know the truth about

Internal Protection?

There's one thing you probably know about tampons—and that's the wonderful freedom of internal sanitary protection. But are you really up to date about the latest improvements in tampons? Do you know why Meds—the Modess tampons—protect in a way no other tampons do?

Protection... how much do you really get?



To keep you carefree—secure—a tampon must absorb quickly, surely! Meds absorb faster because of the "safety center." No other tampon has it! Meds are made of finest, pure cotton... hold more than 300% of their weight in moisture!

Does it fit correctly?

Insert a Meds properly and you hardly know you're wearing it! For Meds are scientifically shaped to fit—designed by a famous gynecologist, a woman's doctor. Dance, work, have all the fun you please! No bulges! No pins! No odor! Easier to use, too—each Meds has a one-time-use applicator that ends old difficulties. And so convenient! You can even carry Meds in your purse.

What about price?

Meds cost less than any other tampons in individual applicators. No more than leading napkins. Try Meds! Compare! You'll be glad you did!

BOX OF 10—25¢ • BOX OF 50—98¢

Meds

The Modess Tampons

nothing is further than marriage from his mind. "I've got plenty of time. I'm just twenty-one. Life begins for Mickey Rooney."

Mom vows that if she were a girl, she wouldn't go out with him. "I wouldn't, and be left while he's up with some orchestra or talking to nine other fellows who know more about golf than I do." Mick says he doesn't. "Anyway, not till I see she's got some other guy to dance with while I might be busy for a minute."

There's no complaint from the girls. He dates several—Ava Gardiner, Mildred and Gloria Lloyd, Sheila Ryan, Linda Darnell, the Beaumont twins—Jerry and Ann. Like any kid, he enjoys going out with a girl who'll do him proud, who knows how to dress, who'll grace a dance floor. He doesn't drink, nor do the girls he squires. He doesn't smoke cigarettes, and that pipe you sometimes see between his teeth is stuffed with a special blend of molasses and licorice.

Above all, he hates daubs of make-up. "She doesn't have to use much powder, because her skin's nice." That's one of the highest compliments he can pay a girl. When he takes his best girl out—yes, that's his Mom—he supervises her make-up. No rouge, no mascara, no powder base. Just lipstick and the powder puff once over lightly. He wields the puff himself.

Once in a while he'll have a girl at the house for dinner and fusses like a biddy, driving Mom, Skates and Lena crazy over the table appointments, the flowers, the service. As host, he sits at the head of the table. Wherever Mom sits, she's got to be served first. She doesn't like it. She thinks it's ungracious. (Where she came from, she tells him, the guest was always served first.) Mick remains adamant. His Mom is served first—

An evening out, formal, means busywork for Mom. She phones the girl or her mother to find out the color of her dress. She orders the flowers. She used to rack her head for something novel, but no more. Mick would study the suggestion and come up with, "She'd better have orchids. Something for her hair, too. An orchid maybe, huh, Mom?"

She lays out his underwear and socks, sees that his shoes are burnished, puts studs in his shirt and suspenders on his pants, sticks a handkerchief in his pocket and, through the buttonhole of his jacket, a maroon boutonniere to match the maroon tie. He has a weakness for hair oil and toilet water. Regiments of toilet water march over his own dresser, but he goes to Mom's bedroom and takes hers. A final hair-smooth. Then he slips on the sapphire she gave him for his nineteenth birthday. That always comes last. It's a kind of period to his dressing.

"How do I look, Mom?"

"Handsome." He sticks his neck out. The tie may be perfect, but she has to twitch it. Then he's off. But not quite.

"Mom, can I borrow a neckerchief?" He's always afraid the girl won't have one to tie round her hair. Generally they don't come back.

If he finds he'll be out after twelve, he phones her. No matter what time he gets in, he'll head for the kitchen. If he's not hungry, he stirs himself up a small malted—two glasses of milk and a couple of raw eggs. Otherwise, the refrigerator's the limit. And mothers, he leaves the kitchen clean—even by Mom's standards.

If she's awake, he goes in to say goodnight. If not, he says it anyway, against the door. Then he crawls under his seven comforters, pushes the pillows around and snoozes off.

Asked how success has affected him, Mom tells this story. He was cast once in a picture called "Rendezvous" with Bill Powell and Roz Russell. Those were the days when he worked in twenty pictures a year. "Good part?" asked Mom.

"Nope."

"Any lines?"

"Nope."

"What do you do?"

"I just row a boat, but I'm tryin' to row it good."

The years passed, and he went to the head of the class. "You've reached the top, Mick," they told him that day. "You're No. 1, you're the cake."

It was a big moment, naturally. He thought it over, then looked up. "There's lots of tops I haven't reached," he said soberly, "and never will. I figure if you give it all you've got, that's the most a guy can do."

In other words, he'll go on rowing it good. Consequently he'll come out on top!

YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for you—that up-to-the-second chart of your favorite "westerns" you've been begging for! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they got their start and studio addresses of over sixty of those rough-riding heroes, leering villains and wide-eyed heroines of your pet "horse operas"! Made up in a most attractive form, it will make your album proud as anything. Just send five cents in coin or stamps with the coupon below and your new revised chart is as good as lassoed!

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclosing five cents in stamps or coin for which kindly send me your chart of the Western Stars.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Please print name and address plainly

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 15)

total costume cost for Claudette's wardrobe was $305, as compared with the usual cost of $13,000 . . . One wily prop man, faced with the job of writing "I Beg Your Pardon" 200 times on the schoolroom blackboard, persuaded newcomer Douglas Croft to do it by explaining that it'd look more authentic if written by someone with a youthful handwriting.

THE SHANGHAI GESTURE AB-2*

If you're old enough to remember the original stage play on which this film was based, we don't have to remind you how wicked and how delightfully sophisticated and exotic it seemed, with Florence Reed spouting un-Confucian cynicisms like nobody's business in that infernal rasping voice of hers. Miss Reed was known in the play by the humorously distinguished name of Mother Goddam; in the picture this fabulous character (played by Ona Munson) after extensive conversational and professional alterations, rejoices in the sissy appellation of Mother Gin Sling. Artistically speaking, of course, these changes hardly matter, but they naturally have the effect of somewhat reducing the qualities of spiciness and dramatic punch.

On the other hand, the film appreciably gains over the play by the addition of such personalities as Walter Huston in the role of Sir Guy Charteris, the big shot from the Bund, Gene Tierney as Victoria, his trampish daughter, and Victor Mature as a chiseling no-good Levantine known as Dr. Omar. You know, of course, that this high-minded Sir Guy, who is so anxious to chase the Gin Sling influence out of Shanghai, is really a reformed rakehell who was married to little Ginny years ago, when she was young and impressionable. It makes a fine climax when Mother Gin Sling exposes the old boy's past at a state dinner, but her triumph backfires when she considers poor Victoria, whom she and the mischievous Mature have turned into a moral wreck. For Victoria, as she discovers too late, is her own daughter. —UA.

P. S.

26 different racial types were needed for the gambling scenes, but Central Casting was stymied on some of them. Finally let Producer Arnold Pressburger advertise in local newspapers for the rarer types . . . This is Gene Tierney's first picture in modern dress . . . Hubby Oleg Cassini designed every one of her outfits . . . Mother Goddam's name and profession went through the Hays office

SAYS LANA TURNER

(HONEY SKIN TYPE)

"I found a Glamour Secret"

AS TOLD TO LOUELLA PARSONS, famous Movieland Commentator

"To get anywhere in Hollywood, you must dramatize your type. Well, not until I tried Woodbury Color Controlled Powder did I find my 'Skin Twin'. The new Rachel shade works miracles for me!"

It's true, Lana! Hollywood directors have classified all beauty into 5 skin types. Now Woodbury's Color Control process makes the dream of an ideal powder shade for each type come true!

You've never seen such exactness, such evenness of color!

Get your shade of new, finer, longer-clinging Woodbury Color Controlled Powder today. Only 50¢, $1.00. (Introductory sizes 25¢, 10¢.) In every fragrant box a chart shows you your type, your shade.

Find new glamour, new romance!

New Beauty Bonus! Now in the $1.00 box, you get Woodbury Powder, Rouge and Lipstick, a complete Matched Make-up all for $1.00!

WOODBURY
Color Controlled powder

FREE . . 6 NEW GLAMOUR SHADES & CHART

Paste this on penny postcard. We'll send you, fast, all 6 shades of Woodbury Color Controlled Powder. And a helpful little color chart so you can find your type. Address, John H. Woodbury, Inc., 8123 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada: John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ont.)

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

EXPERTS AGREE
"SOAPING" DULLS HAIR
HALO GLORIFIES IT!

Now Rid Your Hair of Dull Soap-Film with Modern Halo Shampoo!

Ask beauty experts! They'll tell you that old-fashioned soapy shampoos leave a dull soap-film on your hair, rob it of beauty.

That's why women by the thousand are switching to ultra-modern Halo Shampoo!

You see, Halo contains no soap . . . therefore can leave no soap-film!

Halo shampoos your hair with a new-type ingredient, leaves it aglow with all its natural color and luster.

What's more, Halo will remove dandruff from your scalp — first time you use it!

And Halo makes a billowy lather in hardest water . . . washes hair so clean there's no need for any lemon or vinegar after-rinse!

Today—switch to modern Halo Shampoo, in generous 10¢ or larger sizes!

A Product of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co.

REVEALS THE BEAUTY HIDING IN YOUR HAIR

FREE ENLARGEMENT Just to get acquainted with new customers, we will beautifully enlarge one snapshot print or negative, photo or picture to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose this ad with 10c for handling and return mailing. Information on hand tinting in natural colors sent immediately. Your original returned with your free enlargement. Send it today.

Geppert Studios, Dept. 283, Des Moines, Iowa

BEAUTIFUL 7-JEWEL ELGIN WATCH. LINK OR LEATHER BRACELET

One year TO PAY IN FULL

Choice of ELGIN WALTHAM ILLINOIS Movement

Smart Jeweled Accurate

LATEST styled ring. Ygold 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with 14K 50 point, Simulated Diamond and six brilliants
SEND NO MONEY WITH ORDER

YOURS

YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin, Waltham or Illinois wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $3.89 anytime within a year (total only $7.39. Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.

H. KENDALL JEWELERS
Topeka, Kansas Dept. MM-242

wringer, came out Mother Gin Sling, owner of an ultra gambling den in Shanghai . . . Ona always wears a wig on the screen. Says she's like an ostrich, gains self-confidence when her own head is hidden . . . Director Joseph Von Sternberg called all his feminine players "Baby" with the exception of Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, whom he called "Mme. Baby" . . . Von Sternberg had a huge blackboard erected on the set. Anyone wishing to speak to him wrote his name on the board and waited respectfully to one side 'til his turn came . . . Von knows every angle of set lighting, is famous for the portrait-like effect of his close-ups . . . One shot of a dinner table is a perfect example of off-set lighting. It took Von Sternberg hours to set it up just so, won't be on the screen for more than two seconds . . . Two pivotal characters were written into the script: Dr. Omar, a Levantine mystic, replaces Prince Oshima, the Japanese diplomat. Dixie Pomeroy, a chorus girl from Brooklyn stranded in Shanghai, offers contrast to Poppy . . . Interior Decorator Howard Bristol contends that the furnishings of Mother Gin Sling's dining room show a sensible use of the Chinese influence now coming into modern furnishings . . . Keye Luke, who used to be Warner Oland's Number One son in the original Charlie Chan series, painted every one of the 750 life-sized Chinese characters on the 3,000 square feet of mirrored walls . . . Ona Munson's five elaborate hairdos were created by Hazel Rogers, noted Hollywood hairdresser, who once worked in a Chinese hairdressing salon . . . Between scenes, Phyllis Brooks in a nude beige negligee, played gin rummy with Victor Mature and wrote answers to telegrams sent her by heart-interest William Saroyan.

BALL OF FIRE—AB-2*

Barbara Stanwyck apparently is the fireball referred to in the title. Miss Stanwyck plays a kind of strip-tease entertainer (we see her remove her wrist watch as the big feature of a night-club floor show, while the crowd leers) who is billed under the interesting name of Sugarpuss, and incidentally is mixed up in a perfectly innocent way, more or less, with a gang of killers who operate under the firm name of "Murder, Inc." Gary Cooper, it seems, is this absent-minded, woman-shy professor who is out on the town gathering modern slang terms (or what the authors were able to pass off on Samuel Goldwyn, the producer, as modern slang terms) for an encyclopaedia. He's making this collection in collaboration with seven other equally absent-minded but not so woman-shy professors.

Gary is fascinated by Sugarpuss' slang, as he never heard anything like it before, so he invites her to join his discussion group in the East Eighties, and when Sugarpuss has to lam out "on account of and because," as she smartly puts it, the cops want her as a material witness, she calmly moves into the old house with the whole faculty. Well, it's a scream the way all those old goats try to sneak into her room the first night, all except Gary, who apparently never took physiology in school. Smitten by a holier urge, he proposes, buys her a $40 diamond ring, while Sugarpuss contemptuously humors him in this fatuous fancy.

Sugarpuss and her boy friend, who is known as Joe Lilac, plan to get married in order to disqualify her as a witness, and finally Joe hits on the scheme of bringing her over on an alleged wedding party composed of the innocuous-looking professors. Gary thinks it's to be his wedding, of course, and as a matter of fact, somewhere along the route, Sugarpuss decides that Lilas has bloomed for the last time around her dooryard. The action from then on goes almost as haywire as the dialogue has been from the beginning. We can't give you a sample of the action, but here's one of Cooper's speeches after he has just been kissed or "yummed" by Sugarpuss: "Miss Sugarpuss, before you go—would you—would you—yum me just once more?" We're glad to say the picture redeems itself after that by ending in a broken-up wedding and a fist fight.—RKO.

P. S.

Rustling their bustles through the kicks of La Conga, the seven elderly actors portraying professors danced for three days . . . Physical culture expert Terry Hunt was on hand to give them special muscle exercises . . . Only casualty was suffered by Richard Haydn, 35. He limped out of formation with a sprained ankle . . . The seventy-year-olds bounced through the routines like veteran jitterbugs . . . Director Hawks parked near Gary Cooper during one of Gary's naps and recorded the Cooper snores for use in the film . . . Gary's pal and stand-in for the past 16 years, Slim Talbot, left his job to take advantage of an offer to boss a ranch in Oregon . . . Only seven scripts were available to studio personnel. Sam Goldwyn wanted to guard the comedy lines from professional gag writers . . . Cooper sings two songs, "Guadeamus Igitur" and "Genevieve" . . . Slang experts Lester V. Verrey and "Muggsy" Meyers were called in to hype the script with terms from their "American Thesaurus of Slang." . . . Howard Hawks was given the complete set of a "motel" used in the picture, when Sam Goldwyn heard him admiring it . . . He'll use it for a tack room and guest houses at his Bel Air ranch . . . Gene Krupa does a miniature drum number with a match box and a couple of matches. Calls it the "Match Boogie" . . . Goldwyn purchased "Hi-ho, Hi-ho, It's Off To Work We Go" to serve as background music for scenes featuring the "professors" who resemble Disney's Seven Dwarfs . . . Kathleen Howard came away from Barbara Stanwyck's accidental punch with a fractured jaw . . . Only other accident was Gary Cooper's ill-timed step into a hornet's nest during a week-end hunting trip . . . Acting as technical expert, Gary substituted for a hired, crack rifle shot by shooting all the bulbs out of a chandelier himself . . . Prop man Irving Sindler, who has had his name displayed prominently in every Goldwyn picture for the past fifteen years, makes no exception and plants his monicker on a book in this one.

FASHION

(Continued from page 58)

FASHION MERCHANDISE SHOWN ON PAGE 58

Skate or Swim

New Jantzen ski sweater, warm, dazzling and popular with skiers, skaters and gals who sit by the fire.

Wonderful wintry white in a corduroy skating dress. Under $10. Black velveteen skating skirt. Under $7. Black vest edged with red felt. Under $4. Red shirt, as good with suits as skating skirts. Under $4. Red wool gloves with white palms and fingers. $1.25. Gaily figured suspenders, $1.00. James McCreery, New York.

Two sleek and slim swim suits by Jantzen—a satiny coin dot design and striking floral pattern. Just the answer for all you perfect-figure winter-vacationers.

Sarong glamour in aqua blue and white. New crochet-effect bathing cap that insures dry locks, $1.25. Red, white and blue rope figured beach bag—it's big enough to hold everything! $1. Red and white striped beach shoes, $2.95. All from U. S. Rubber Co.

FASHION MERCHANDISE SHOWN ON PAGE 59

Printed rayon crepe with long bodice and full skirt, $8.95. J. Taylor, Kansas City; C. A. Stevens, Chicago.

Two-piece twill dress (it comes in luscious colors), $8.95. J. L. Hudson, Detroit; Kaufmann's, Pittsburgh.

Black rayon crepe shirtwaist dress with white jacket, gold buttons, $8.95. Jordan Marsh, Boston; J. L. Hudson, Detroit.

For store nearest you, write Elizabeth Willguss, Fashion Editor.

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

The children of Hollywood live in an atmosphere of motion pictures, and to them that is the real world. They judge everything by what they see in the movies and hear about the movies and the studios. Jo Swerling, one of the better scenario writers, took his wife and son, Peter, age nine, to the football game between USC and Stanford. Swerling said to his wife, "I think Stanford's going to win. I'd like to get a little bet down." Mrs. Swerling said, "I'm telling you the Trojans can't be beaten. Don't be foolish." Jo Swerling answered, "I'm going to bet. I know Stanford will win." It was then that Peter turned to his father and asked innocently, "Daddy, did you write this game?"

Sidney Skolsky

★ Joan Blondell, starring in Republic's "Lady for a Night," with Ray Middleton. It's easy to have lovable soft hands, with Jergens Lotion.

"Men ARE that way— they love Soft HANDS" says Joan Blondell

(Lovely Hollywood Star)

YOU DANCED ALL EVENING WITH THAT ANNE LINN.
DO YOU BLAME ME, EVE? ANNE LINN HAS NICE SOFT HANDS.
NEXT DAY
OH—ANNE LINN WORKS HARD, EVE, BUT SHE USES JERGENS LOTION AND JERGENS FURNISHES SKIN-SOFTENING MOISTURE FOR YOUR HANDS.
OKAY! I'LL USE JERGENS LOTION, TOO. THEY SAY IT'S QUICK AND EASY.

Thrilling Hands for You—easy with this almost-professional Hand Care

Why ever have unromantic, rough, chapped hands? Regular care with Jergens Lotion helps prevent them. Many doctors help harsh, coarse skin to heavenly smoothness with a certain 2 ingredients—both in this famous Jergens Lotion. No sticky feeling! Jergens is by far the favorite Lotion!

JERGENS LOTION

FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

FREE! . . . PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE

Mail This Coupon NOW

(Paste on a penny postcard, if you wish)

The Andrew Jergens Company, Box 3734, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada: Perth, Ont.)

I want to have those soft hands Joan Blondell advises. Please send purse-size bottle of Jergens Lotion—free.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____ State _____

DAYS I REMEMBER IN 1941

(Continued from page 39)

Ever since we were married, I've been crazy to show it to her, but we couldn't get away. Even this time we weren't sure till the last minute that we'd be able to make it. But they finished the Mexican scenes a day early and gave me a few days leeway at the other end. So we dashed out for some camping equipment and hopped a plane from Mexico City to Mazatlan. They drove us out to the water front where we found this old fellow who owned a fishing smack with a broken-down gas engine. "Sure she can make it?" I asked him.

"Senor," he said, "she cough and she choke and she maybe lay down to sleep for little while, but she make."

She made. Next day the builder came over from Mazatlan, and we picked a spot for the shack—couple of rooms against rain, a porch toward the sunset and a little storehouse for fishing tackle. "This will be your fishing island?" the builder asked, very serious and polite. Fishing, loafing and inviting-the-soul island. Shangri-la, for short.

So long, island. We'll be back. What's a thousand miles between you and Hollywood? Just five flying hours.

Brentwood, February 17th.

Sometimes I've wondered why I bother trying to learn French. Now I know.

Meeting Annabella got me started. Seemed silly to be in love with a girl and not know her language. I reached the point where I could use words of one syllable and even get the tense right if you didn't mind hanging around till I doped it out. This led to occasional awkwardness. The general idea seems to be that if you're married to a Frenchwoman, you ought to be able to rattle it off. Words would be poured at me, and I'd come up with a feeble oui, oui.

I don't encourage Annabella to talk French to me. It's more important for her to perfect her English. But every once in a while I'd spout my piece. She used to look puzzled. "Ty, your teacher is French?—You have no grand-grand-grandmother from Spain? Then I will never understand how it comes you speak French with a Spanish accent."

That went on for a while, then one day she started to giggle.

"Now what's the matter? Still my Spanish accent?"

"Much worse. You talk now like a little boy of the streets. It's as if I should talk English with the accent of those Dead End Kids.

But I stuck it out, being careful not to air my Dead End accent in public. One day there were people in the room, and I wanted to tell her something private. So I said it in French. Comes in handy that way. "Darling," she said, "I don't know where you get your accents or where you leave them. But hold this one tight. It's pure Parisian."

Haven't been so puffed up since the gold star I got from my kindergarten teacher.

Hollywood, March 8th.

Had a painless interview with a fan mag writer.

Brentwood, April 5th.

Been thinking it was time little Anni owned her own horse. No human being has ever been crazier about anything than that child about horses. I realize that takes in a lot of ground, but let it stand. She owns every book about a horse that was ever written. She carves saddles and shoes out of cardboard for her toy horses and spends hours in her room turning old boxes into stables. She rides bareback, Western and probably upside down. I have no doubt she could take a horse apart and put it together again. Where she gets it nobody knows. Annabella thinks a horse is something you've got to be polite to so it won't bite you.

Anni's birthday was coming, so I asked Jimmy if he had something in his stables for her. We agreed on a white mare, really a beauty. I told Annabella, but not the youngster. We thought it would be fun to surprise her.

Today was the day. The René Clairs came to lunch, and Anni opened her presents at the table. I'd arranged with Jimmy to get the horse over at two and cooked up a signal with the maid to announce their arrival. The Clairs were in on it. I'd catch René squinting at his watch, I kept eyeing the door, Annabella eyed me, Bronya tapped her foot. A fine foursome of adults!

We were just about through eating when the signal came. I told Anni there was another present out front and we all trooped out. There sat Jimmy on the mare, and the mare prancing. Anni looked delighted and puzzled—delighted that the premises should be blessed with a visit from a horse, puzzled as to the whereabouts of the present. She must have thought Jimmy had it concealed on his person. Never seemed to enter her head it could be the horse. When I told her, she went white. I've never seen such a look as came over her face—like light breaking and flooding the place. Didn't say a word, just went over and touched the horse. By that time Jimmy was off and wanted her to get on. After hugging the breath out of me, she ran back, climbed up and sat there whispering to it. "My horse," she kept saying over and over again, "my dear little horse." Which made us laugh, considering their relative sizes, and broke a certain emotional strain. The kid's reaction must have affected us. She's such a quiet little kid, so controlled about her feelings as a rule—

She dubbed the mare Moonlight, washed her, curried her, spoon-fed her and put her to bed. When Annabella went up to tuck her in, she said: "Now I know how you feel about me. As I feel about Moonlight—"

Brentwood, April 8th.

One of those things happened today that, even after it's happened, you don't believe.

I'd gone down to that secondhand bookshop on Main Street where I've already dug up a couple of finds and was rummaging around in the theatre section. An old binding caught my eye—it was so obviously the original binding—and I pulled the book out, a little brown volume whose backbone read "Impressions of America," Vol. I. I asked the bookseller about the other half of the pair and while he was hunting it up, opened Vol. I to find the publication date. 1836 it said at the bottom of the title page, under the publisher's name. My eye traveled upward and stopped and popped. There was my own name staring up at me from the middle of the title page. "By Tyrone Power." From the whoop I let out the dealer must have thought I'd gone nuts. I suddenly realized it was the book my father had told me about—the one his grandfather wrote when he got back to England after his tour of the States in the early 1830's. The dealer's a sympathetic soul. He turned the place upside down till he found Volume II.

I've been spending the evening with great-grandfather Power. Queer, to read his impressions of Philadelphia, for instance, and compare them with my own. So many landmarks are still unchanged. He seems to have been a nice old guy. Old guy! He may have been younger than I am now when he wrote this. I'll have to find out. Wish I'd known him. Almost feel that I do. He liked this country. I think he'd be pleased to know that an offshoot of his was a citizen. Good night, sir. Glad to have you with us. Hope to keep you a long time.

New York, July 28th.

Went backstage to see the Lunts after the show. Asked Jack Wilson to come along with us to 21. Never thought of asking Lynn and Alfred, knowing them well enough to know they don't go out. Jack said, "Ask them anyway, all they can say is no." To our surprise and pleasure, they said yes.

We went on ahead to get a table. Clare Boothe and Noel Coward were at the next table, deep in war talk. Her "Europe in Spring" had just come out. Bob Sherwood, in from Washington, appeared after the Lunts got there, so we pushed our tables together and sat till dawn. I could have sat forever. I've never experienced such intense and varying emotions in a single evening—pity, horror, pride, humility, rage. I left drained but uplifted by their quiet conviction—a conviction never stressed, hardly expressed, yet implicit in all they said—that the human spirit would fight through this darkness and come out on top.

Long Shore Country Club, Westport, Conn., August 11th

Up early this morning for a final run-through of the play. Then Annabella went downtown to have her hair done, and I came back here to the bungalow. Wish there were some masculine equivalent for having one's hair done. Wish it were eight tonight. Wish it were twelve.

Funny. For five years I've dreamed of doing "Liliom" and for two years of doing it with Annabella. Tonight the dream's coming true, and here I sit in a lather, wondering what the devil I'm doing here. Nobody asked me to come. I could be home in the garden, nice and peaceful, laying bricks for the path. But no, I had to do "Liliom." It's six years since I played for an audience. Wonder if I'll remember my lines. Wonder if my legs'll hold up. Wonder how Annabella's feeling now. I know. Jittery. I won't see her again till we get to the theater. We both wanted to be alone, don't ask me why. Nothing to do when you're alone but listen to your pulse thump. Look, Power, at worst they won't stand you against a wall. They'll just say you stink.

Later

Went out to eat at six-thirty. Met some of the others and sat with them. Ordered chicken broth, sliced chicken and salad, which sounded light enough to slip down a constricted gullet. It wasn't. Reached the theater at seven-thirty. Annabella had been there for hours. She hadn't eaten, so I sent out for a sandwich. Found it behind her make-up box after the show. Wires and flowers started coming. Made you realize people you hadn't thought were thinking about you were thinking about you. (Untangle that one). Gave you a nice warm feeling but keyed you up higher.

Our dressing rooms adjoined, so we talked back and forth between the wall and even went over a couple of short scenes. Don't know what good we thought that would do us. Out in the wings we held hands, must have looked like a couple of contenders in a shaking contest. Curtain cue. I kissed her and walked on. I was dying. They applauded the entrance which took me aback some more. My voice sounded the way jelly looks, but after a while I got it to go my way. The rest was a dream. I didn't wake up till after the final curtain, then we fell on each other's necks. The crowd was swell. Our friends were swell. The prettiest sight of all was Elsa Maxwell when she came back with Clifton Webb, her eyes red from crying. What more could a couple of actors ask?

Brentwood, September 9th.

Took Princess to the mutt show this morning. Figured she ought to rate somewhere in the half-cocker, half-Labrador retriever class. Anyway, a dog who goes round eating salad and oranges and picking persimmons off trees is entitled to her day. Anni spent hours dolling her up, a little impeded by the fact that no sooner was the dog's coat brushed than she'd roll over, stick up her paws and ogle. Invitation to a belly-scratch. She took the blue ribbon for best clown in the show, and loped back looking smug. "She thinks she got it for being beautiful," Anni whispered. "Don't tell her she got it for just being crazy."

Brentwood, September 24th.

Too stimulated to sleep. Read the script of "This Above All." The most adult script that's ever come my way. Thought I wanted to go to New York after "Son of Fury." Now I wish we could start this tomorrow.

Hollywood, October 3rd.

Beat the pants off Johnny Carradine at gin rummy.

Brentwood, December 4th.

I like the institution of maid's day out. I like my wife with a dab of flour on her nose. I like the way she cooks.

Tonight we had soup, roast, fresh green peas, browned potatoes, salad and a pastry. Anni shelled the peas and whipped the eggs for the pastry. They say the French can't brew good coffee. Exception. Annabella brews nectar. We ate in the patio. Anni carried the dishes back, Annabella washed, I dried. The lady looked charming in flowered apron and rubber gloves, the gentleman looked foolish in gingham tied under the armpits.

We'd planned to cut "Johnny Apollo" after dinner. I'm having all my films reduced to fit the sixteen millimeter projector Annabella gave me last Christmas. But just before we sat down, the bookshop sent "Blithe Spirit" over. So Johnny had to wait on Noel Coward. I read aloud, Annabella knitted, with time out for hysterics. Reading the play was like drinking champagne, so we took a sedative in the form of a couple of games of gin rummy. I won nine cents. A thoroughly satisfying evening.

December 31st.

The end of a year. May tomorrow start a better one for Annabella's France and the world and everybody in it.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

The first moving picture was invented by William Friese-Green of Bath at the cost of 150 pounds. The audience, suspecting a trick of some sort, poked their fingers through the movie screen to see who, or what, was behind it. When the inventor exhibited his moving picture to the Photographic Society, it was received coolly.

• • •

Hollywood has produced a deluge of Mr. and Mrs. comedies as a means of getting around the Hays office. Intimacies that spice the film would immediately be red-penciled by censors if hero and heroine were not properly married.

• • •

The old-fashioned peep shows (forerunners of the moving picture) tantalized the public with such spicy titles as "The Pretty Stenographer or Caught in the Act" and "How Bridget Served the Salad Undressed."

• • •

"The Great Train Robbery" cost 100 pounds . . . brought producers 20,000 pounds?

THEIR GOOD TASTE IS HOLLYWOOD'S GOOD LUCK
Academy Award winner Hal Mohr, cameraman, and Ace Director Tim Whelan, of "Twin Beds," an Edward Small Production, are tops in Hollywood because of the good taste and quality of their work.
Good taste and quality —that's Pepsi-Cola every time! That's why all Hollywood, from stars to extras, prefers Pepsi-Cola. They like, too, its grand flavor and big generous size. Enjoy 12 full ounces today . . . for a nickel.
BETTER TASTE...
PEPSI-COLA
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
...BIGGER DRINK
Purity... in the big, big bottle
—that's Pepsi-Cola!
★ Pepsi-Cola is made only by Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N. Y. Bottled locally by Authorized Bottlers from coast to coast. ★

In Laxatives, too, there's a

HAPPY MEDIUM!

EX-LAX is
—not too strong!
—not too mild!
—it's just right!

WHAT kind of laxative do you take? One that's so strong it weakens and upsets you? Or one that's so mild it fails to give you real relief?

Then, switch to Ex-Lax—the Happy Medium laxative! Ex-Lax is as effective as any laxative you'd want to take. But it's gentle, too! No shock. No strain. No weakening after-effects. Just an easy, comfortable movement that brings blessed relief.

Like all effective medicines, Ex-Lax should be taken only according to the directions on the label. It tastes like fine chocolate—and it's good for every member of the family... Only 10c or 25c at any drug store.

When you have a Cold—

If the doctor prescribes a laxative when you have a cold—take Ex-Lax! It's thoroughly effective, yet so gentle it won't weaken or upset you.

EX-LAX
The Chocolated Laxative

ACID INDIGESTION The makers of Ex-Lax invite you to try JESTS—the wonderful new antacid tablets that taste like mints! Give fast, longer relief from distress due to excess stomach acid. Contain no bicarbonate of soda.

10c A ROLL—3 for 25c

LAW STUDY AT HOME

Win greater respect and success. Learn more, earn more. We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Degree of LL. B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 48-page "Law Training for Leadership" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 2318-L Chicago
A Correspondence Institution

THEY GOT ME COVERED

(Continued from page 41)

started a long discussion. My mother wanted me to go to Yale; my father wanted me to go to grammar school. All the schools in Cleveland drew straws for me and Fairmont lost and there I went. I was a brilliant student. After four years there, my forehead was voted the most likely to recede.

Butcher Boy to Boxer

After graduating from high school most kids go out and make a living—my father told me as he pointed to a door. But young Lester had an answer for that. I cried out in my youthful lisp, "Papa, I don't want to work and become famous. I don't want my life dramatized by Don Ameche."

The next day I went to work for my brother Fred in his butcher shop. I just had one bad habit while I was working. I liked to put my fingers in the cash register and feel dollar bills. One day my brother caught me carrying the feeling too far. Not that he suspected that I was slipping coins in my pocket from the cash register, but when we closed up that night he made me walk home from the store on my hands.

My dancing success with the local amateur theatricals and minstrel shows went to my head. No more would I be a lowly laborer in a butcher shop. I took my press notices in my hand and showed them and my act to the local booker for the Orpheum Vaudeville Circuit. He immediately get me a job in the Chandler automobile factory.

It was shortly after I started work at the Chandler plant that I found out my foreman was a tenor singer, and with two other workers we formed the Chandler Motor Co. Quartet, familiarly known as the "Crank Case Carusos." We were different. We were the only quartet in the country that leaned to the left in "Apple Blossom Time." One of us carried the melody while the rest of us tried to destroy it. I don't know how good we were, but General Motors offered us five thousand a week to go on the Ford Sunday Evening Hour.

By this time I was getting stronger and huskier and someone said to me, "Why don't you take up boxing and become a fighter?" It sounded like a very sensible suggestion, so I said to myself, "Why doesn't he shut up?" The Cleveland Plain Dealer was holding its annual Golden Gloves Tournament around this time and in one of my sillier moments I entered under the Nom de Ring of "Packey East." I didn't exactly have the build for a fighter. My shoulders sloped so much I had to glue my coats on. I would have made a pretty good fighter and might have gone on to become champion except for one thing. I had to fight men. I was very popular because I had a peculiar weaving, bobbing style the crowd loved to watch. I used to weave and bob around the ring for ten minutes after the other guy had won and gone home.

25c a Corn

When my prize fighting career folded up I was left with twenty-five cents and a knowledge of how to do the waltz. So I got a job as dancing instructor. Most of the people who came in for lessons had rumba ambitions and minuet bodies. But I had to live, so I taught them how to dance for a dollar-and-a-half an hour. That amounted to about twenty-five cents per corn.

My vaudeville career started when I entered an amateur night. I stood in the wing shaking all over. The manager said: "Okay, Hope—you are on." I walked out and faced the audience and opened my mouth wide. That was a mistake. It was the first time I ever swallowed a tomato without chewing it.

I gave up dancing and became a comedian. I really didn't intend to become a comedian, but that's the way it was after the seat of my pants wore through. I remember my first appearance as a comedian. I had them rolling in the aisles. Then the usher came and took away the dice.

From vaudeville it was only a short step to musical comedies, but I tripped anyway and fell right into a show called "Ballyhoo of 1932." I was shaking so hard they had to get an electrician with palsy to keep the spotlight on me.

Then Max Gordon and Jerome Kern looked my way and smiled. There was a little musical gathering called "Roberta." It was in this show that I met Fred MacMurray and George Murphy.

After "Roberta" closed I got the urge to travel out West—out West where men are men and women wear slacks, too. It was just a coincidence that Hollywood and the picture business were in that direction.

I thought there would be a job waiting for me out in California, but I was wrong. The first place I applied for work they told me the grapes weren't ready for picking yet.

One movie company heard that I didn't have to shave more than twice a week so they wanted me to replace their child star. They had to get rid of the kid because in his last picture the audience could hear his arteries hardening.

Then I heard that a certain studio wanted a cowboy star. I applied for the job, but Gene Autry was already there and I couldn't compete with him. He was three guitar lessons ahead of me.

But I kept on my toes. Nights I slept in a refrigerator in case I got a part in a Sonja Henie picture.

"Thanks For the Memory"

Back in New York I couldn't get over my lack of success in Hollywood. I said to myself: "Haven't I got looks?—Haven't I got brains?— Haven't I got talent?" The answer was so obvious I was glad to get back to Broadway.

I went into a few more musical comedies, namely: "Say When," with Harry Richman, the "Ziegfeld Follies," with Fanny Brice and "Red Hot and Blue," with Ethel Merman and Jimmy Durante. While I was playing in "Red Hot and Blue," a new phase of show business entered my life. I was asked to go on the radio.

Several chances followed such as the Bromo-Seltzer Hour, Atlantic Oil Program, The Woodbury Soap Hour. It was while I was on the Woodbury Soap with Shep Fields and Frank Parker that Paramount realized I was very stubborn and that I was going to stay in show business, regardless of my talents. So they decided to give me a chance in a picture called "The Big Broadcast of 1938." I was to play opposite Shirley Ross . . . and she requested that I play as far opposite her as I possibly could manage it.

"Thanks for the Memory" really started me off, and at last I was climbing the ladder of success. I had stood in front of that ladder so long I was beginning to feel like a paper hanger's assistant. My roles grew bigger and bigger . . . and then finally in one picture you could see me.

I still remember the first dressing room Paramount assigned to me. It was so small the mice had to commute from Glendale. It was easy for me to remember that first dressing room . . . I'm still in it. It's the ambition of every actor to get a star on his dressing room door. I'm still trying to get the door.

The Pepsodent Company made me a proposition, but I decided to play hard to get. While they talked it over, they asked me to leave the room. An hour went by and then they came out and asked me to leave the building.

The Pepsodent Show, or How It Started

So for seven years I was unemployed listening to Amos and Andy. Then I heard that Amos and Andy were leaving, so one day just by chance I strolled into the Pepsodent office on my knees. Then we started to talk business.

I began looking for a cast for my radio program before the ink was hardly dry on my contract. How did I meet Skinnay Ennis? Well, he was a neighbor of mine, and every few days he came over to borrow a cup of blood. He's a nice guy, and besides he makes the rest of the cast look healthy.

One day when I was walking down the street, the ground gave way under me and I fell into a pit. When I opened my eyes two vultures were seated on my chest. One of them said, "Gee Brenda, if we'd had better bait we might have caught a man." That's how I met Brenda and Cobina. They were really debutantes. They had come out the year before, but public opinion forced them back in.

The search went on for more talent. In New York I was in the Rainbow Room one night when I saw a big, black mustache sitting in the orchestra tooting a trombone. Behind this beautiful foliage I discovered Professor Colonna.

Tuesday night! This is the evening of the Pepsodent program and everyone who is anyone in Hollywood is getting dressed—preparing to go to a movie. I start the program by telling a few jokes. Then Skinnay Ennis sings, and while he's singing the undertakers send in bids. Then Brenda and Cobina and Jerry Colonna do their spots. The producer stands in a little glass control room. When he moves his hand in a circle that means we are going too slow. When he puts his hand to his throat that means we haven't much time left. When he puts his hand to his nose—that means just what you think.

Up the Ladder, or What Happened to the Third Rung

After looking over my past performances very carefully, they decided to cast me in a mystery picture. After all, the purpose of a mystery picture is to confuse the people . . . and if my acting couldn't do that, nothing could. We scared the public pretty successfully in the "Cat and Canary," so Paramount cast me in another mystery picture called "The Ghost Breakers." I guess I'm good at mystery pictures. Over at Paramount they still look at me and shudder.

The first of The Road Series was "Road To Singapore," then "Road to Zanzibar." If I make one more road the Government will hang a red lantern on my nose.

In the picture "Nothing But the Truth" I'm a partner in a very up-to-date investment firm. The firm is really ahead of the times. It has a stock market ticker that prints its reports on thin aspirins.

In "Louisiana Purchase" I appeared in Technicolor. When I saw the tests I was shocked. I thought I had a peaches and cream complexion. Instead it looked like avocados and iodine. Zorina, the beautiful dancer, is in the picture and we had a lot of fun working together.

From Soup to Aw—Nuts

The high light of the movie industry every year is the Academy Award Dinner, at which time a committee, composed of none of my relatives, presents various acting awards.

The awards—called "Oscars" because the guy who first thought of them was named Sam—are little golden statuettes. They look like frozen Quiz Kids.

For the past three years they have appointed me to be master of ceremonies and tell my jokes at the dinner. While other actors are getting awards, I stand there like Pagliacci with a laugh on my face and a burning sensation in my heart. . . . I guess I shouldn't eat so fast.

Well, my friends—and anyone who has read this far must be my friend—I hope you have enjoyed this scant resume of my life and career.

I'll never consider anything I do in show business as work, as long as you laugh. But, boy! . . . when you stop laughing—then it will be work!

HOW TO TELL TWINS APART or Pepsodent to the Rescue

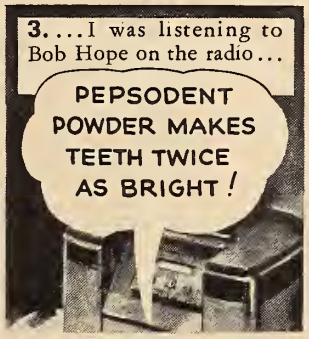
1. Twins are confusing enough. But when one of them deliberately tries to fool a fellow . . . well . . . I was all at sea . . .

2. I'd have popped the question to Joan weeks ago if I'd been sure she wasn't that mischievous twin of hers who never let me be quite sure. Then, one night...



4. So Joan and I decided to turn the tables on her twin sister. Joan switched to Pepsodent Powder. Her twin kept right on using her old brand.

5. It worked like a charm! One quick glance told me Joan's teeth were far brighter! They both use Pepsodent now, but...I can tell Joan every time... she's the one with my solitaire on her finger!

PEPSODENT TOOTH POWDER CAN MAKE TEETH TWICE AS BRIGHT AS THE AVERAGE OF ALL OTHER LEADING BRANDS.

6. Independent laboratory tests proved this fact. No other tooth powder can give Pepsodent's high lustre, because only Pepsodent contains Composite Metaphosphate, the remarkable patented polishing ingredient.

Double your chances by making your teeth Twice as Bright. Get Pepsodent Tooth Powder today.

FIRST LOVE

(Continued from page 33)

Jean was nineteen, son of an actor, himself a foundry worker who thought his father's profession sissy. Josette was twenty-two, a midinette, doubling at night as a café singer. He thought she was the loveliest thing he'd ever looked at—a brown-eyed madonna-face framed in pale gold hair. He'd known plenty of pretty girls, kissed them and left them. Surely as he stood there, he knew this was a girl he'd never want to leave. Her voice, like her face, had a haunting quality—with overtones that promised the answer to a man's dreams. Josette, he decided, before the evening ended, was his heart's desire, his hope of happiness, the woman he wanted to make his wife.

She'd let him take her home. They'd kissed on the doorstep. His ecstasy was shot through by a pang of foreboding. In two weeks he'd have to leave for three years of military service. Up to then he hadn't minded. How the three years loomed like a prison wall, parting him from his love.

She promised to wait. They spent every evening of his last two weeks together. The night before he left, he slipped a little ring on her finger.

"For always," he said.

"For always," she repeated after him.

At first her letters came regularly, then they didn't. He'd write three to her one, begging to know what was wrong. Nothing, she'd say in the answer that finally arrived. She wrote with difficulty, she loved him still. The tone of her letters was always tender. He couldn't be sure whether, lover-like, he was torturing himself by imagining a reserve that didn't exist.

Returning to Paris on his first furlough, he found her gone from the place where she'd lived. At the café they gave him an envelope, which held a little ring and a slip of paper. "I have married, Jean. In three years I would have been twenty-five, and you in love with another girl, perhaps. Forgive me."

He got over it, but his old haunts lost their attraction. Military service ended, he heeded his father's pleas and turned to the stage.

ANN SOTHERN

Ann was in seventh heaven. She had a part in a show—a real honest-to-goodness show, headed for Broadway.

It had all started in her home town, Minneapolis. She'd won two scholarships at the Conservatory. So when this company was organized, they'd asked her to play the ingenue. Of course it would have to be tried out on the road, but, of course, it would be a hit on the road—and then, Broadway! Of course they wouldn't be paid till they hit New York, but they were all pulling together for a great big beautiful ideal, and later there'd be lots of beautiful cash. Best of all, they had a Broadway star for the lead and Ann, at seventeen, would play opposite him.

The lead, once a minor luminary, was pretty well tarnished. But his hair was still curly, his eyes still liquid, his manner world-weary, and Ann was enchanted with him. The night he called her dear, she lay hugging her pillow for hours. The night he asked her to dinner, she thought she'd swoon.

"You have talent, child." Her hand trembled under his on the tablecloth. "Some day—who knows?—we may be doing big things together—you and I—"

She knew now what people meant when they talked about walking on air. How she got back to her room she doesn't know. She just found herself there, sort of floating. There was one fly in the ointment. People didn't seem to be crazy about the show. Rumors were abroad that they'd never get to New York. Well, what of it? He'd go back, he'd send for her, they'd play together—then maybe—some day— She was having dinner with him again tomorrow.

It was matinee day. She had to pass his dressing room to get to hers. The door was ajar. A woman was in his arms!

Five minutes later came a knock at her own door. "Are you there, dear?"

Lifting her head from her arms, she choked back the sobs. "My wife's arrived unexpectedly, so we'll have to cancel our date for tonight."

His wife! There ought to be a law, she decided bitterly. Why didn't they make men wear wedding rings, too?

Two days later they closed. Ann went home, firmly resolved to enter a convent. But a week later a terribly good-looking boy came to visit next door.

MADELEINE CARROLL

"Newspaper man for an interview, Miss Carroll."

Madeleine's mouth popped open. "Not with me!"

She was playing a maid, her first role, with a company touring the provinces. This was a mistake or somebody's idea of a bad joke. The press didn't know she existed.

Over the doorman's shoulder peered the dark head of a lean young man. "Yes, with you. D'you mind—?" He came in and sat down. "I want to interview you for three reasons. Because you're beautiful. Because you're going to be a success, and I can brag I discovered you. And because I think I'm in love with you."

She fell in love with him, too. They couldn't marry—yet. She was eighteen, he twenty-three. He hadn't much of a job, she wanted a career. But they made great plans. London was the goal of both. She'd be a hit on the stage, he'd be a drama critic of consequence and begin his reviews, "My wife captured the town last night!"

She got to London first. "I have a small part in a big production," she wrote. "Oh, Dick, can't you come?"

He popped up two days later. "Dick!" she squealed, hugging him.

"What liberties you take with a London journalist, ma'am."

"What do you mean, London journalist?"

"Got myself a job this morning."

So it all came true—or almost. Madeleine made a hit in her small part and went on to bigger ones. Dick gave her notices. So did the other reviewers. Bigger and better flowers stacked her dressing room.

He thought her career was parting them. It wasn't. She'd marry him tomorrow with his dear thin face and his crazy ways, but he had that silly masculine notion—she earned more than he did.

The end came in a little restaurant just before her new play opened. "I got a better job today, Mad. More money. Will you chuck it and marry me?"

"Chuck the stage?" She couldn't believe her ears. "Chuck the stage—"

She couldn't believe it was the end either, when he said good-by to her at the door. They'd batted the same old arguments back and forth—he wouldn't be Mr. Madeleine Carroll—she couldn't give up what she'd fought so hard to get. At last he said, "Face it, Mad. If right now you knew it was either me or the theatre, which would you take?"

Put that way, she knew. If she couldn't have both—"The theater," she said, wretched but firm.

On the morning after her opening, she read Dick's notice: "Madeleine Carroll captured the town last night."

ROBERT CUMMINGS

Bob knocked at the farmhouse door. It was opened by a vision so breath-taking that he all but forgot what he'd come for.

"Oh, I wonder, could I have some water. For the car, you know. For the radiator. We're all out of water in the radiator. Forgot to fill 'er up." He babbled feebly, eyes on her face.

The farmer's daughter smiled. "Is that your car down the road? I'll send someone right out."

Bob's father, a physician, had taken him on a trip through southwest Missouri. As Bob wandered back to the car, southwest Missouri had turned into Eden, and he shut out. By a farmhouse door. Was he, though? The door was opening again, and the girl coming out. With a bucket of water. "Don't carry that heavy thing," he shouted. "You'll kill yourself." From a distance, Dr. Cummings regarded him with mild wonder. He seemed to have a lot to say to a girl he'd just met.

Overhead a plane zoomed. The plane, the girl, the heavenly day, his own emotions all fused together in Bob's consciousness. Words tumbled out. "Look, before we get down there where my father is, could I come to see you?"

"Why—you don't live around here, do you?"

"No—in Joplin. But," came a burst of inspiration, "I could hire a plane."

He did, too, his father remaining in blissful ignorance. For six months, as often as he could gather the money together, he flew down to see Alice. The pilot, a friend and a push-over for love's young dream, allowed him a special rate.

Bob told her he wanted to be an actor. She didn't take it big. Feverishly he sketched the delight enjoyed by an actor's wife. A little hazy himself, he failed to impress her. It was all wonderful till the subject of the stage cropped up. Then she'd fall silent—

One day she said: "Bob, will you do me a favor?"

"Anything."

"Be a farmer."

He bolted upright. "Why, that's crazy. I couldn't be a farmer. I'm not trained for it Anyway, I hate cows."

"Well, I couldn't be an actor's wife. I'm not trained for it. Anyway, I hate hams. And I think you'd better not come here any more!" She burst into tears.

That was the beginning of the end. They parted friends. It was also the beginning of Bob's love for planes. He never takes off in his own nowadays without a smiling salute to the memory of Alice.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

It was 1934. It was Olivia's first day in Hollywood. A friend took her to the Miramar. Suddenly Livvie gasped: "Look!" Lew Ayres and Ginger Rogers were coming in. Livvie almost fainted on the spot.

In Saratoga, where they'd lived, she and Joan had been movie fans, and Livvie had developed three crushes—on Ronald Colman, Gary Cooper, Lew Ayres—and the greatest of these was Ayres. Oh, he was wonderful! That gayety on the surface and the sort of brooding sadness you could feel underneath. Imagine actually seeing him! In a trance she watched him dine and dance and talk and move around just like anyone else.

Time passed. Lew and Ginger separated. Livvie was asked to her first cocktail party. About to refuse, since she didn't drink, she heard her host say Lew Ayres would be there. "Thanks, I'd love to come," carolled Livvie. Much good it did her. So shy she could only steal glances at him when he wasn't looking, she finally downed her first cocktail for courage, then placed herself in his path. "I'm so glad to meet you, Mr. Ayres. You're one of my screen heroes."

He looked down at the kid. Where was her nurse? "Very sweet of you, excuse me, my friends are leaving, so nice to have met you."

She saw him next at a friend's home, where some people gathered to hear a lecturer recently returned from Russia. Lew was passionately interested. It was he, she noted with pride, who asked all the intelligent questions. She'd show him she had brains, too. The only question she could think of drew howls of laughter. From everyone but Lew. He didn't even notice. He didn't even know she was there. His eyes and ears were all for the Russian. Crushed, Livvie went right home.

More time passed. Livvie still carried the torch. She had an extra ticket for an opera party she was giving. One of the party was a friend of Lew's. Did he think Lew would like to come? Lew would be charmed. He looked so gorgeous in top hat, white tie and tails that she could hardly bear to take her eyes off him. He thanked her, he'd had a lovely time, but he didn't ask for her phone number.

Livvie grew up. Lew became a tiny sore spot that she scarcely knew was there. Then the phone rang one night. Lew wanted to take her to dinner. Lew of all people! She flew. At dinner everything was wonderful till they hit a subject on which he held very firm views. She disagreed. They argued each other into a temper. He deposited her on her doorstep and never called again—

Till last summer when she was convalescing at Cape Cod after an operation. He phoned from New York. "I've always wanted to see the Cape, Livvie. Can't we see it together?" Laughing, she realized that now for the first time she could meet him on his own footing. The sore spot was gone.

They see each other often. He no longer gets cross when she disagrees with him. Her heart doesn't flutter when he phones. Sometime it's nice not to be in love, Livvie thinks. Friendship's more comfortable.

ROBERT YOUNG

To Bob, life was real, life was earnest. Its problems weighed on his soul, and he scorned people who took it lightly. That kid in his high school class, for instance—that Betty with the blue eyes and the snub nose—forever laughing, as if she had some secret joke with the world. He couldn't stand her.

One day they both went on a beach picnic with the gang. Bob was told off to help Betty roast wienies. "That giggler," he gloomed, but his feet hurried. Kneeling in the sand, she tossed back her hair and smiled up at him.

She went to college after graduation, he to work. They saw each other for a while, but new interests crept in and little by little their ways drew apart. Bob spent all his evening at the Pasadena Community Playhouse. He met a girl there. Betty heard he was engaged. She met a boy at college whom she liked.

Sitting at home one night, Bob answered the phone. It was Betty. After all this time! "Can you come over, Bob? There's something I'd like to talk to you about."

She told him of the boy at college, how she felt about him, how she didn't want to worry her mother over her own uncertainty.

Her eyes were the same warm blue. Looking into them, Bob's head spun. "Dope!" he addressed himself. "It's been Betty all along." Aloud, "If you're not sure, then you're not in love."

A month later they were dancing together. "Will you marry me, Betty?"

She, "D'you think I'm in love?"

"Do you want to ask the other fellow?" She shook her head.

So Bob married his first love.

YOU CAN'T HELP INHALING—BUT YOU CAN HELP YOUR THROAT!

ALL smokers sometimes inhale. And when you do, there's increased chance of irritation. But now . . . look at the findings of eminent doctors —who compared the five leading cigarettes:

IRRITATION FROM THE SMOKE OF THE FOUR OTHER CIGARETTES AVERAGED MORE THAN THREE TIMES THAT OF THE STRIKINGLY CONTRASTED PHILIP MORRIS —AND, WHAT'S MORE, SUCH IRRITATION LASTED MORE THAN FIVE TIMES AS LONG!

Even when you inhale, you can have this proved protection added to smoking pleasure . . . if you smoke PHILIP MORRIS. No wonder they're "stealing the show!"

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

FINER PLEASURE PLUS REAL PROTECTION—AMERICA'S FINEST CIGARETTE

Safe New Way in Feminine Hygiene Gives Continuous Action for Hours

● It is every wife's right to know certain facts. Her greatest happiness, her physical and mental well-being may be at stake. She cannot go by what others tell; she must know. Otherwise in feminine hygiene, she may resort to over-strong solutions of acids, which can burn, scar and desensitize delicate tissue.

Today thousands of informed women have turned to Zonitors—the safe, new way in feminine hygiene. These dainty, snow-white suppositories kill germs instantly at contact. Deodorize—not by temporarily masking—but by destroying odors. Spread greaseless, protective coating to cleanse antiseptically and give continuous medication for hours.

Yet! Zonitors are safe for delicate tissues. Powerful — yet non-poisonous, non-caustic. Even help promote gentle healing. No apparatus; nothing to mix. At all druggists.

FREE: Mail this coupon for revealing booklet of intimate facts, sent postpaid in plain envelope. Zonite Products Corporation, Dept. 5207B, 370 Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY..... STATE.....

Zonitors

IF YOU HAVE GRAY HAIR and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my
FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist for over 40 years, I am proud of my Color Imparter. As you use it, the Gray Hair slowly becomes Darker; each application deepens the color. EASY and CLEAN to use; it can't leave stains. I want to convince you by sending my Free Trial Bottle, and booklet All About Your Hair. CAUTION: Use only as directed on label. No skin test needed.

ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3. LOWELL, MASS.

Earn $25 a week

AS A TRAINED
PRACTICAL NURSE!

Practical nurses are always needed! Learn at home in your spare time as thousands of men and women —18 to 60 years of age—have done through CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING. Easy-to-understand lessons, endorsed by physicians. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Nurse Cromer, of Iowa, now runs her own nursing home. Others prefer to earn $2.50 to $5.00 a day in private practice.

YOU CAN EARN WHILE YOU LEARN

Mrs. B. C., of Texas, earned $474.25 while taking course. Mrs. S. E. P. started on her first case after her 7th lesson; in 14 months she earned $1900! You, too, can earn good money, make new friends. High school not necessary. Easy payments. Equipment included. 43rd year. Send coupon now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 282, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____ Age_____

City_____ State_____

YOUNG MAN WITH A HORN

(Continued from page 51)

says Glenn, "but I still don't believe a word of it. Gosh, just three years ago I was broke.

HE was born broke as a matter of fact thirty-two years ago in Iowa. His dad was a farmer with three kids to support on an infinitesimal income. At seven, Glenn was doing odd jobs for the local butcher after school—in exchange, the family thought, for cold cash. It developed, however, that the poor butcher was having a fairly lean winter himself and in lieu of a salary, he paid Glenn off with an ancient trombone. His mother, whose musical knowledge ran to hymns, was not at all pleased; his father was incensed; but Glenn, who still believes that money's not everything, thought the deal magnificent. Especially when for further services rendered the butcher threw in a few music lessons. "That old sliphorn had one foot in trombone heaven," Glenn'll tell you, "but boy how I loved it. Slept with it right beside me every night, and when I went to school I hid it. God knows who would have stolen the thing." There were other jobs and eventually other trombones. "But there never was a horn like Oscar. Every other note a clinker, but what a honey of a personality." The Miller face is cold sober, but the eyebrows are misbehaving again. "That was my first love. When I was nineteen I met my second."

You don't hear much about Mrs. Miller, but you should. She's cute and tiny and all the boys in the band take turns having crushes on her. Glenn spied her at the University of Colorado, where for two years he had one eye on the books and one on extra-curricular barrelhouse at the Denver night spots. Music finally won, and he hitch-hiked to Chicago to join Ben Pollack's spectacular crew, which included B. Goodman as clarinetist.

Later, Glenn went on to New York where he did some work with the Bros. Dorsey and wrote arrangements for Ray Noble. It was at this point that he wrote his stupendous "Moonlight Serenade," now his theme-song. While Ray was breaking records at the New York Paramount, Glenn began to feel all set. He sent a wire to Dorothy Burger in Colorado—with whom he'd been hot heavying via the mails—"Marry me day after tomorrow." She trained to New York, and between shows they dashed out and got married. That was only ten years ago.

CONFIDENTIALLY, they're a love match like crazy. Romeo and Juliet and Wally and the Duke just aren't in it. Flowers on anniversaries and everything! She goes wherever he plays. Draws the line only at 600 mile road-trips for one night stands. Otherwise, you'll see her at a big round table a bit to the left of the bandstand, giving him the glad eye when he's in the groove; the dead pan when he's off. She plays no instrument, but knows music thoroughly from Bach to Bing. What's more, she has a sense of humor.

"Which came in handy back there a piece," grins Glenn. His first band, you may not have heard, was a floppola. The original unit was a wild mob with plenty of talent, but not a scruple among them. There was the night, for instance, that Glenn had wangled a college prom engagement. It was a terrific opportunity. On the big night, half the boys showed up drunk, the rest were "reefered" to the teeth. The date had to be cancelled, and Glenn's good name was mud with 500 heartbroken youngsters. "But it really wasn't those chaps' fault," Glenn alibis for them. "Those were the days when every kid musician thought you had to be high or "muggled" before you could really give, and boy—those marijuana jam sessions! I'll take Times Square on New Year's Eve. They've been some reefer addicts who made the big time for a while, but they're all just flashes in the pan. Take the Chesterfield smokers now—there are the lads who count." He's half-kidding, but it's a standing joke with Miller and Co. that they all smoked 'em long before Chesterfield was their sponsor.

THE current crew is three years old, and you never saw such a mutual admiration society. The Modernaires think the sax section is the world's hottest. Tex Beneke thinks Ray Eberle is too good to be true, and, of course, the whole gang is insane over Marion Hutton. She's the blonde honey with the figure and the voice who mows the lads down at every college prom—which is disgraceful under the circumstances. Marion's blissfully married to Jack Philbin, and the mama of a gorgeous fat baby boy, who sings—no less—at eight months.

The band is convinced that "the boss" is one with the immortals. They're crazy about him as a musician and as a man, and in three years not one of them has let him down an inch. No hamming at rehearsals—with the result that they can take a new song cold and in fifteen minutes sock it into the mike and onto the hit parade; no grandstand playing, and consequently Glenn can't spotlight each of them enough; no misbehaving during working hours—so that if Glenn sees one of them taking a drink during intermission he can relax. The guy isn't going to get plastered. It's really a very swell set-up.

Comes Christmas every year, and the warm feeling everyone has for everyone else sort of flares up and they all outdo themselves giving presents. The first year, things were a bit unpretentious on account of no dough, but in 1939—just three months after Glenn and the boys first hit pay dirt—the gang chipped in and gave the maestro a Buick convertible. One year they gave him a very fancy movie outfit that set them back $3,000. Last year they were racking their brains for something super-colossal. Marion was to pump Mrs. Miller very subtly on the subject. There was considerable espionage whenever Glenn mentioned going shopping. Then one day after a rehearsal he said: "Say kids —let's skip Christmas this year." "Hah? —no Christmas—no Santa Claus—no stuff?" "I've got a better idea. Let's get Trigger and Mr. Hill out of hock." "Saa-ay! That'd be great."

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new, up-to-date list of Hollywood stars with their correct studio addresses. It is a convenient size to handle or keep in a scrap-book. To receive a list, all you have to do is write to us and ask for it, enclosing a large, self-addressed and stamped envelope. Don't forget that last item, as no request can be complied with otherwise. Please send request to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, New York.

Trigger and Mr. Hill are the two members of the gang who got drafted. They were, respectively, bass and band boy. Mr. Hill's a kind of a character. He's a Mexican and his real name is Raoul Hidalgo. This would elude Glenn whenever he needed him in a hurry, so he pinned Mr Hill on him for no good reason, and it stuck. His official capacity was instrument-minder. But his real profession was looking out for Glenn. If he had a cold, nose drops and cough medicine appeared like magic. If he'd had a sleepless night on a train, Mr. Hill found time for him to nap the next day. When Uncle Sam caught up with him, Glenn was absolutely bereft.

He and Trigger are in camp in California, and they'd gotten Christmas furlough. Neither, ironically, had the funds to get home, so they'd planned to grab a turkey sandwich together on the great day. Instead they planed East in time for a gargantuan dinner at Glenn's house, and were subsequently wined and dined in New York for a solid week by the boys. When they stratolinered back again, two fat checks were stuffed into two khaki pockets. O. K. Santa, now you tell one.

GLENN'S kind of an angel, but he still maintains a human touch or two. He forgets things, for instance. Leaves lights on all night and never has a handkerchief with him. This last he invariably blames on his beloved fans—they love to steal them—even if he hasn't budged from the house all day. He also swears when angry—not often, but loud. He takes his terrier, "Pops," hunting in several feet of mud, then lets him track it all over his elegant chateau-style house in Tenafly, New Jersey. Furthermore, his poor wife is a golf widow. Glenn haunts the links and goes around in the 80's. He has very strong likes and dislikes, and shouts them from the housetop. He loves California and bought himself an orange ranch out there which he's christened "Tuxedo Junction," and where he plans to retire and write serious music in sixty or seventy years. Is crazy over movies—could live at them. Likes Gable, Crosby and Johnny Payne and thinks "Goddard ain't bad." Next to Thanksgiving, his favorite day is March 15th. For some obscure reason he adores filling out his income tax form. His ideal band would be a composite of Duke Ellington's, Jimmie Lunceford's and Count Basie's—with a dash of Miller. Favorite song is the Duke's recording of "I've Got It Bad and That Ain't Good." He can't stand "I Don't Want to Set the World on Fire," or "Daddy." Hates tweeds, because they're scratchy. Doesn't like liquor or dessert. His worst habit is saying he wants one line of action followed, then when all the wheels are in motion to carry this out he takes a change of heart.

Then, too, there are those Saturday afternoon dances at the Pennsylvania's Café Rouge. Admission is twenty-five cents, and everyone and his brother is there. The proceeds—often as much as $1,000 a week—go to the USO. Anyone can come, and he needn't be gotten up like Lucius Beebe, but Glenn does insist on coats and ties—or did. Then he saw these two youngsters step up to the door. They had on immaculate shirts, but no ties and funny old windbreakers. Glenn's agent, a very swell chap called George Evans, could hardly stand it, but orders were orders. "Sorry boys. You can't come in." "What's the trouble here." Glenn had leaped off the bandstand, leaving the boys to shift for themselves (that's one of their tricks) and was glaring at George. "No ties or coats." Glenn herded the two chaps upstairs, whence they emerged ten minutes later resplendent in beige foulard ties (G.'s weakness) and coats he'd worn in "Sun Valley Serenade." "That team should be syndicated," says Glenn. "They've been back every week since, and each time they tear up to the orchestra with hordes of cronies yelling—'Hey, Glenn, tell these mugs we did so wear your coats and ties.'" God knows where they get the money, but at the last telling, Bill had acquired 57 Miller records; Butch had 65.

Fans is what Glenn has nothing but, as you've probably guessed. He's got 'em in schools, offices, prisons, army camps—in Omaha and Weehawken and Kalamazoo. They're all sizes and shapes, and he adores everyone of 'em. Yeah—even that screwball sailor in San Diego with the very close crew-cut who had Glenn autograph his head. Even the pixilated gal who wouldn't go home from the Yale Prom till Glenn had kissed her goodnight. Even the fellow who wrote begging for $24.00 bus fare so he could come from Chicago to one of the USO dances. He's nuts about them all, but especially the small fry. They respond the quickest to a sweet new tune. They don't clap politely if they think a number's lousy. They don't get drunk and try to sing into the mike. They call him Glenn, and he brags that he knows at least two thousand of them by their first names. They write him fan letters and call themselves "millerbugs." They go without lunches to buy his records. "I love the hell out of those kids," he says.

Stick around, jive guy. It's all terribly mutual.

The End.

If you've enjoyed this story, we think you'll also enjoy the biographies of songsters Marion Hutton and Ray Eberle in Good News, page 100, column 3.

DON'T PUT A COLD UNDER YOUR PILLOW!
I'VE LEARNED...USE STRONG, SOFT KLEENEX AS HANKIES DURING COLDS, USE EACH TISSUE ONLY ONCE, THEN DESTROY... GERMS AND ALL!
(from a letter by L. A. S., Baltimore, Md.)
"TELL ME ANOTHER" AND WIN $5.00 says KLEENEX*
WE PAY $5.00 FOR EVERY "TRUE CONFESSION" WE PUBLISH ON KLEENEX* DISPOSABLE TISSUES. MAIL YOURS TO KLEENEX, 919 N. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
KLEENEX TISSUES
SMART GIRL!
WHO WANTS TO FUMBLE AROUND TRYING TO PULL A TISSUE FROM AN ORDINARY BOX? WITH KLEENEX IT'S PULL A TISSUE AND UP POPS ANOTHER!
(from a letter by E. M., Stroud, Okla.)
I SAVED MY FACE
BY USING KLEENEX TO REMOVE CREAM AND MAKE-UP. IT'S SOFT VELVETY SMOOTHNESS IS A PLEASURE ON MY DELICATE SKIN!
(from a letter by M. S. D., Kokomo, Ind.)
(★Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED

Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed. 47c 3 for $1.00

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C. O. D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.

STANDARD ART STUDIOS
113 S. Jefferson St., Dept. 1332-B, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

ALMOST LIKE A MIRACLE

—is what women of society, stage, screen, office, and home say about FaSet, the new tissue form. You too will be enchanted with the firm beauty it will give to your face and neck. FaSet lifts, helps strengthen muscle tissues, remove double chin and heavy face lines. Soft, porous, washable, delightfully comfortable to wear during sleep or leisure hours. Adjustable, on and off in a moment.

Not sold by stores—Obtainable only direct. Send check or M. O. or pay postman $1.25 plus small postage. (Plain pkg.)
FaSET* CO., DEPT. S. ROCKVILLE CENTRE, L. I., N. Y.

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 30 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

LOCATION BLUES

(Continued from page 48)

cola and figures in fist fights. Veronica Lake hops to March Field and gets married. Gary Cooper gets shot at for a deer making a woodsy epic. Virginia Bruce motors to the mountains, weds her director, and retires. Ann Sheridan visits the navy in San Diego and gets mobbed. Stars leave their lots to make a movie and get divorced, get religion, or, like Lucille Ball on "Valley of the Sun," get red ants—get almost anything.

OF course, Stirling Hayden didn't necessarily get salt-water in his handsome veins chasing from key to cay around the Caribbean shooting "Bahama Passage." The Gloucester glamor boy had enough of that to begin with. But he did get disgusted in a location publicity mix-up with Madeleine Carroll, which would never have happened if they'd kept Hayden safely home in Hollywood. Here's what happened:

Touchy Stirling stood "Bahama Passage" location stories about himself and Madeleine strolling hand in hand o'er coral reefs, splashing like pagans in the cobalt surf and bathing together in wind-swept tropic rains. But when a "scoop" flashed around the world "losing" the blond lovers overnight in a fictitious coral cave they had never explored where a phony tide trapped them as Paramount launched a framed frantic search—when that happened (and Stirling was snoozing safely in his boat bunk all the while) he decided movie fame just wasn't worth the riffle.

Not even a new $17,000 sloop and a check big enough to sail it on could keep Hayden in Hollywood after that. So Paramount up and lost the biggest star-to-be they ever had!

But Warner Brothers almost lost a whole picture via the same location hoodoo. "Navy Blues" wasn't called Navy Blues for nothing. Not after this episode which backfired from the very best intentions at the Naval Training Station in San Diego:

On that location, after Ann Sheridan, Martha Raye, Jack Oakie and company had been around the fleet for a while, they thought it would be nice to do something to entertain our boys in blue. So a show was staged at the base and everything went along swimmingly for 500 smiling sailors until another member of the cast, Bill Orr, was called on.

Bill is the clever chap whose impersonations in "Meet the People" scored a big hit in Hollywood. One take-off that wows everyone is Bill's impersonation of President Roosevelt. The crowd yelled for this when he got up, but Bill declined; he didn't think it appropriate. However, the coaxings grew so loud he finally launched into his burlesqued idea of the Head Man's mannerisms. It was funny, as usual, to everyone but a certain naval captain who took active offense. He thought any Hollywood actor lampooning the navy's commander-in-chief at a U. S. Naval base was off base—and said so. Furthermore, he set about kicking the whole company off the premises. Only some frantic and influential wire-pullings in official quarters saved "Navy Blues" from oblivion.

It's not only studios who get jinxed on locations, of course. Stars get it, too. Robert Taylor, remember, was en route to London for his "A Yank at Oxford" junket when all that damaging beautiful Bob and hair-on-the-chest publicity broke about his handsome head. Just the other day, too, William Holden and Brenda Marshall had their honeymoon loused up effectively by those same location blues.

Brenda's location call for "Captain of the Clouds" pulled her away from Bill's loving arms the day after their marriage in Las Vegas. The day Brenda got back from the Canadian wilds, Bill was ordered to Nevada with "The Remarkable Andrew." Brenda arrived home from Canada with an infected throat. The day Bill got back to Hollywood they shot him to the hospital with appendicitis. Then Brenda's two-year-old daughter, Ginger, took down with the measles. A gag? No, that's the way it happened—and you'll never convince Brenda or Bill that old location goblin wasn't in there pitching.

In spite of this obvious out of town eight-ball, a lot of Hollywood stars would rather go on location than spend a week of Sundays drinking champagne.

Big outdoor, hairy-chested males like Gary Cooper, Clark Gable and Joel McCrea, particularly, are happy as children on a picnic, as long as the location is near good hunting and fishing. Wally Beery gets so enamoured with the great outdoors he's exposed to making pictures, that today he owns scattered cabins, ranches and hideouts all over the West.

Wally's latest location real estate is a log cabin in the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming. It's right on Jackson Lake, choked with gamey Mackinaw trout. Wally lived there happily all last summer, making "Wyoming" as a sideline in between snagging fish. When the picture was over, he was so broken up about leaving that he bought the place and arranged for a landing field. Now he flies up and plays location all by himself whether he's really on one or not!

MOST normal stars, however, cordially despise locations—and for obvious reasons. Hollywood is the most comfortable place in the world. Locations are the most uncomfortable. They still kid Dorothy Lamour about her first location. She arrived at the God-awful desolation spot and unpacked—of all things—an evening dress! Where she went for "The Jungle Princess" had emphasis on the jungle and no princess to speak of. The only males at all bedazzleable by fine feathers were some lumberjacks at a camp a few miles away.

One good reason why stars are prone to go berserk making movies out in the sticks is that they leave their secure niches of Hollywood eminence and become—for the duration—Barnum-like curiosities, to the local yokels.

One of the most extended Hollywood locations ever to descend on the out country was imposed on Missouri Ozarkians when Henry Fonda and Tyrone Power made "Jesse James" in Noel, Missouri. A lot of times they actually had to call the county sheriff to yank Ty through the mob of drop-jawed natives who pressed around his cabin in order to get him to work of mornings. It wasn't the same admiration, either, which makes stars purr happily and beam on Hollywood autograph worshippers lined outside premiere palaces. It was just plain rank curiosity. They might just as well have been monkeys in a cage. As Henry Fonda was to find out later.

Hank was assailed one morning by a pop-eyed native who hopped the running board of his auto en route to the set. "Sure is an honor to have you folks here," began the Jasper. "Yep, a great thing for this country—famous people like you. Mind giving me your autograph to hand down to my grandchildren?" Hank was touched and obliged. Whereupon the billy squinted at it, frowned and said, "Can't make it out, stranger—which one of them Hollywood monkeys are you, anyway?"

Carole Lombard ran into the same curiosity complex as near home as Napa, California, where they make all those wines. Carole and Charles Laughton were on location there for "They Knew What They Wanted." Napa hasn't any Hotel Splendides lying around, so Mrs. Gable decided she'd be best off in a private residence. She unpacked her trunk in a very nice one and noted that the hospitable people had a maid on hand each morning to tidy up her room. But every morning the maid was a different, nervous, eager-eyed girl. Not until the picture was finished did one of them break down and explain the supervaried service. Napa belles had put the bee on the householder and divied up the privilege of maiding Carol in turns. By the time she returned to Hollywood, her innermost secrets were glamorous public property of the Napa younger set!

The hotel problem is no joke to a Hollywood star accustomed to a pampered existence in high-walled and carefully guarded Beverly Hills retreats. Most of the time, ye olde inns on remote location sites are of the Nineteenth Century plumbing type—when there are hotels. Always, too, they are packed with a motley picture crew bent on raising the roof far into the night. The problem of getting enough shut-eye to rise at five A. M. bright-eyed and captivating for the camera is something to be reckoned with.

Dennis Morgan solved that dilemma—he thought—recently on the wandering location of "Captains of the Clouds." Dennis didn't want to be a bum sport about things, but he's a chap who must have his eight hours in the hay to keep that famous smile beaming. So he hired two rooms in the local inn—one to hold forth in and another to duck out to when the Sandman called.

One night, when the usual crew of kibitzers gathered for a bull and bottle session, Dennis made merry for a limited time and then craftily took a powder to the hide-out when he was sure his guests were too busy with fun to miss him. He had just slipped under the covers when a loud bell rang in the hall. It turned out to be some hotel service signal, but Dennis thought it might be fire. He dashed out in the hall—and his door blew shut—and locked. As Dennis sleeps only in the top half of his pajamas, he was—er—caught. He had to creep like an Indian, in that undignified state, terrified, through the halls to the original room, where, they say, his entrance was a sensation—even if the roisterers were all strictly stag.

Episodes like this, some better, some worse, have built up definite location allergies which haunt a good many top stars to this day. Spencer Tracy is as he-mannish as they come in Hollywood but all through "Northwest Passage" the telephone rang nightly in the manager's office of Mr. Eddie Mannix of M-G-M. It was Spencer, off on location in Idaho, pleading to be taken off the picture. Of course, "Passage" was one of the best things he has ever done, and it wasn't the icy water he had to wallow in or the hardships that threw him. It was just the phobia Spence has built up about locations.

He does have hard luck with them—no doubt about that. M-G-M's ill-fated "Yearling" was Spencer's last location mess. M-G-M set up a vast movie company deep in the Florida swamps, dragged the reluctant Mr. Tracy a few thousand miles away from home—and then everything began happening.

First, the wind howled so loud microphones couldn't record; then Florida, getting even at a California troupe, staged some "unusual" weather. Seasons got mixed up. Skies that were supposed to be blue with fleecy clouds turned tattletale gray; foliage refused to adjust itself to color charts; even the deer, raccoons, alligators and what not that figured in the story high-tailed out of there. Swarms of bugs and mosquitoes buzzed around like Stukas—and all in all—Spencer Tracy and "The Yearling" location did a lot of maddening nothing for weeks, until the studio order arrived; "Come home and skip it." When Spencer arrived in Hollywood he was fit to be tied considering the months wasted and the gap in his screen career big enough to drive a tank through.

Next to Spencer Tracy, no Hollywood star can throw fits over location assignments more than Claudette Colbert—and with good enough reason. Claudette's first expedition, to Hawaii years ago with Cecil DeMille's "Four Frightened People," was double-jinxed from beginning to end. The bags were packed and the boat had steam up when Claudette found herself with appendix. Everybody trooped back while the troulbesome business was snipped out. Exactly one week later, Claudette got up, far too soon, and sailed. She was in the hospital off

How Marlene Dietrich Makes Love Scenes REAL!

PLAY your love scenes in the parlor or on a sound stage, the situation is the same. If love is an illusion (as they say) and every lover an actor, then make your acting good! Screen Guide shows this month how Marlene Dietrich makes a love scene seem sincere; what it is that makes a man think his woman means it. Here's really something to know!

Other Scoops in February Screen Guide

Money or Love—Which Do Hollywood Stars Really Want? Some have sacrificed careers and wealth for lasting love; others have ruined great romances in struggling for fame and fortune. Read these truly human facts!

Paulette Goddard Proclaims, "I'm No Home Girl"—and why!

Cary Grant—Hollywood's Wavering Bachelor! Will he wed?

Why Margaret Sullavan Stopped Hating Hollywood! Few revelations about a star have been as understanding as this!

Glamour Girls Don't Live Right! Phyllis Brooks shows why.

Color Photos: Ann Rutherford, Cary Grant, Betty Grable!

PLUS intimate gossip, authentic fashions, real beauty tips!

THIS MONTH! The editors of Screen Guide introduce a companion publication, STARDOM! You've never seen a movie magazine like this—completely new, thoroughly exciting! Reserve a copy at your newsstand today!

SCREEN GUIDE
February, 1942
Ten Cents
See What the Screen Stars Really Want—Money or Love!
How Marlene Dietrich Makes Her Love Scenes Seem Real!
Color Photos: Betty Grable, Cary Grant, Ann Rutherford!

SCREEN GUIDE FEBRUARY ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

JEAN PARKER, Republic Star appearing in "Pittsburgh Kid," uses GLOVER'S.

Let the stars be your guide! If you've been using scented hair preparations without success, switch to the MEDICINAL treatment used by millions! Try GLOVER'S, with massage, for Dandruff, Itchy Scalp and excessive Falling Hair! You'll actually feel the exhilarating effect instantly! At all Drug Stores.

Send for generous complete FREE treatment of GLOVER'S MANGE MEDICINE and the New GLO-VER Beauty Soap SHAMPOO, in hermetically sealed bottles, by COUPON only! Booklet, Scientific Care of Scalp and Hair, included FREE!

MAIL COUPON TODAY! FREE! TWO bottles FREE—one complete application GLOVER'S MANGE MEDICINE and extra sample of GLO-VER SHAMPOO!

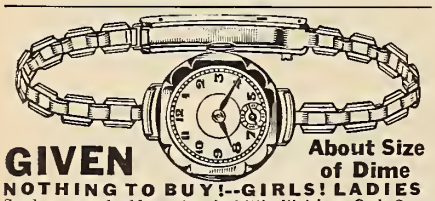
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

GLOVER'S

GLOVER'S, 460 Fourth Ave., Dept. 852, New York
Send FREE samples, Glover's Mange Medicine and new Shampoo. I enclose 3¢ to cover postage.

Name_____

Address_____



GIVEN About Size of Dime

NOTHING TO BUY!--GIRLS! LADIES

Send name and address. Lovely Little Watch or Cash Commission. Send no money. EITHER Watch, Cash or other valuable premiums GIVEN. Simply Give Away Free Big Colored Pictures with our well known White CLOVERINE Brand SALVE used for chaps, mild burns, cuts. Salve easily sold to friends at 25c a box (with favorite picture FREE) and remitting per catalog. Act Now! Nothing to buy. 46th year. Write today for order of Salve and Pictures sent postage paid.

WILSON CHEM. CO., Inc., Dept. 10-1, Tyrone, Pa.

FALSE TEETH Low as $6.85

90 DAYS TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. Free impression material, directions. Booklet of New Styles and Information. Write today to

FREE

SEND NO MONEY

PARKER DENTAL LAB.,
127 N. DEARBORN ST., DEPT. 27A, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Try ASTHMADOR

Try Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR the next time an asthmatic attack leaves you gasping for breath. ASTHMADOR'S aromatic fumes aid in reducing the severity of the attack—help you breathe more easily. And it's economical, dependably uniform, produced under sanitary conditions in our modern laboratory—its quality insured through rigid scientific control. Try ASTHMADOR in any of three forms, powder, cigarette or pipe mixture. At all drug stores—or write today for a free sample to R. SCHIFFMANN CO. Los Angeles, Calif., Dept. L-62.

and on throughout, dangerously ill most of the time, and on top of it all "Four Frightened People" was hardly worth the effort.

Since that early lesson Miss Claudette Colbert gets the hots and colds when you say "location." Every one has brought her nothing but misery. The Sun Valley fiasco of "They Met in Paris" broke up a long and profitable friendship with her ace director, Wesley Ruggles. And on "Drums Along the Mohawk" Claudette got burnt plenty—and that's no mere figure of speech.

It all came about because of a super de luxe, fur-lined tent cabin—which is probably the only reason Claudette ever let Darryl Zanuck talk her into that location trip in the first place. The site was way up in Utah, 11,000 feet high and 40 miles from the nearest gas station. To allay these terrors, Claudette had dangled before her eyes the cutest little location nest you ever saw.

ALL the rest of the "Drums" company dwelt in tiny tent-cabins, drab, bleak and drafty. Claudette's was gaily striped and de luxe. It had a shower and complete plumbing. It boasted a luxurious collapsible tub and a gorgeous oil stove with all the latest gadgets. It had cozy pictures, insulation, indirect lighting, and practically everything but a butler's pantry and a chromium bar.

Needless to state, while everyone else including actors and stars was living in shivery, unheated canvas and rolling up in rough blankets at night, Claudette's decadent location luxury caused more than one pang of envy. She won no popularity contest in her little striped heaven. When things started going wrong there were few tears shed. And they did go wrong.

First the bathtub lived up to its name and collapsed, full of water, flooding her cabin. Then, one icy morning the oil stove, left on all night, gave up and exploded, soaking Miss Claudette and all her dainties with grimy soot, which she had to clean up in blackface herself as all the company were already off shooting. By the time she got back to Hollywood she swore never again—and this time she means it. Colbert will write no contracts with a location clause.

But while locations have driven Claudette into a bitter shell, there have been times that they vice-versaed things. Jean Arthur, for instance, has long held an unchallenged reputation for disliking most everything. Miss Arthur is an All-American -Against on practically all subjects, including newspapermen, photographers, admirers, crowds, football games, night clubs, movie premieres, restaurants, and so on ad infinitum.

But when this negative lady departed for the biggest location Hollywood has seen in recent years, "Arizona," she blossomed like a rose as a tender-hearted Florence Nightingale of the animal world.

The desert, where Columbia erected a complete frontier town and sat around in 130-degree heat all summer, is credited with miraculous powers. But none so potent as transforming Jean's reputedly citrus heart into a lush watermelon.

One night a watchman stationed to guard a herd of nanny goats picketed among the greasewood, noticed a flash light bobbing in and out among his charges, accompanied by grateful whinnies. The goats had been collected for "Arizona" atmosphere by combing Mexican 'dobe establishments for miles around, and the watchman's first thought, as he ran shouting toward the funny business, was that the astute paisanos were reclaiming their private dairies in time for the morning milk. However, when he clashed flash lights with the marauder, he gasped and swallowed hard. The raider was the company's star, Miss Arthur, on a private little emancipation mission and wrought up about it, too.

"The poor things," stormed Jean, "standing around all day in the hot sun and getting tied up like this at night! How do you think they'll ever get any exercise?" Snip, snip, snip. "It's inhuman!" The goats agreed noisily, toddling off into the night.

Enough persuasion was finally put on Jean to let a few goats remain for the night. But the next day when attendants forked in their daily ration of cactus pads, they found Jean already there with trucks from Tucson loaded with 60 bales of hay, fresh for vitamins A, C, B, and Q. The goats sniffed it politely and kept on eating the cactus.

Such ingratitude, however, did not daunt Jean Arthur. On the contrary, her crusade had just begun.

"Arizona's" script called for crowds of barnyard supers, and each one found a sturdy champion in Jean. Ducks soon waddled with extra vigor and chickens grew fat and sassy on vita-fresh feed which Jean Arthur supplied. Flea-bitten ponies, rattle-boned cows and grunting swine each had their own separate Arthur-financed means and clinical care. One month alone the feed and veterinary bill ran to $750.

In addition, Jean made her dressing room a haven for heat prostrated pigs, ducks and dogs and so on. She adopted a frowsy Mexican burro and dolled him up resplendently with a red bow over his lean neck. When his day in the limelight was done, Jean traipsed through the streets of near-by Mexican villages to find him a home.

She learned with dismay that the Tucson dog pound had 60 derelict dogs drifting drearily towards a chloroform finis and quickly made a deal with the poundmaster which resulted in the first public appearance Jean Arthur has made in years. She actually ringmastered a dog before 2500 people to find them happy homes. This news, flashed back to Hollywood, made Arthur's frustrated press agents tear their hair and weep like babies.

THE gentle regeneration of Jean Arthur is one of the happiest denouements of a Hollywood location and a pleasure to report—but even it had its tragic side for Jean.

At the end of the picture, the Pioneer Society of Arizona staged a fancy full dress banquet and presented Jean with an honorary plaque. The Governor wound himself up with oratory about everybody in general and Jean in particular. Then he reached for the trophy and before the distinguished crowd assembled, said—

"And now, on behalf of the State of Arizona, may I present this plaque to a lovely lady and a great actress—Miss Gene Autry!"

A thing like that could only happen far away from Hollywood. But away from Hollywood, on location—it would!

REAL LIFE COLOR PORTRAITS!

Watch for them in our March issue. They'll be a luscious monthly feature of MODERN SCREEN. Perfect for framing or brightening up your album!

CO-ED

(Continued from page 66)

dependent on the male. Don't hesitate to offer to teach him the conga. He'll love it. Don't discuss other dates you've had; it annoys him. And don't be surprised if he begins to haunt your house. This one, once hooked, has a life-time guarantee!

What to do if your theme-song is "He's gotta be a Josher"

He's generally not too strong on looks but is a terrific ladies' man nonetheless, is frequently a cheerleader and invariably comic relief in all the plays, always has some new get-rich-quick scheme.

You'd do well to brush up the old repartee, but don't kill yourself looking glamorous for this boy, as being a good egg is more important to him. Go out for a couple of sports, the school paper and the dramatic club, for he's partial to the all-round good gal. Is impressed if you rate well with the female of the species. Remember—his sense of humor is his sole vanity, so use that as your bait. Some Wednesday ask him if he heard Bob Hope the night before. He'll say yes. You say, "stealing your stuff again." He'll grin, glow, think—"mmhm, a gal with a brain." He shines in a mob, so invite him to your next party. Get him to come a bit early to help you get organized. Let him choose the records and ask him to be kind of a floor committee of one and see that everyone has fun. During the evening, give him beautiful winks to let him know you appreciate him, and later rave over his efforts.

Don't be such a card yourself in an effort to amuse him that you turn the thing into a Burns and Allen combination. Don't ever utter a catty or unkind word in his presence. This type is essentially a boy scout and loathes meanness. Never pass him in the hall without a "hi, there."

Or maybe you're after A man with a Soul!

He's frequently on the lean and hungry side, has longish hair and big soft eyes, gets A's and is a lone wolf.

You've got to be a cross between Einstein and Miss America to please this lad. His standards are of Empire State building stature. Read Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Shelley, listen to Information, Please, and brush up on your operas. He's usually a madman on the subject of the aforementioned. Pique his interest by arguing a point with him in English class, dragging the debate out after the bell rings if possible. All very good-humoredly, of course, and don't pull this one on a day you're looking anything less than deevine. He's much happier in a small group, so have him over to Sunday night supper with one or two other couples. While the soulless ones listen to Jack Benny, flatter the very daylights out of dream prince by asking him if he'd please read one of your poems and tell you honestly what he thinks. Or ask him to read something to you, as you think he has such a wonderful voice and has he ever thought of the stage?

Don't ever let this perfectionist catch you with crooked stocking seams, a too-long slip or chipping nail polish. (Let our fashion chart show you how to be incredibly smooth.) Never "yes" him if you don't mean it. He's too smart for that stuff. Don't let him kiss you the first time he tries. Nothing disillusions him faster. And don't forget—he'd rather he flattered about his looks than his brains.

"HOLLYWOOD EXTRA"
THEATRICAL COLD CREAM
The Stars' Cleansing Cream that Fits Extra Girls' Budgets
...Now millions of smart women everywhere agree..."it's foolish to pay more."
"Hollywood Extra"
THEATRICAL (CLEANSING)
COLD CREAM
HIGH QUALITY - SENSIBLY PRICED
"Ask Any Girl On The Lot"
THE RABIN COMPANY DISTRIBUTORS LOS ANGELES
BIG ½ LB. TIN
Sensibly Priced at 25¢
AT ALL 5-10-25¢ STORES

BILL MADSEN, United Artists Studio's Make-up Expert says, "Film players must use lots of cleansing cream for frequent make-up changes, and it's got to be of finest quality. 'Hollywood Extra' Theatrical Cold Cream is a real quality product, popular on the lot with all players."

THE RABIN COMPANY, LOS ANGELES

Maybe for your dough he doesn't have to be a ball of fire, just so's he's

A Very Swell Guy

He's generally average-looking, goes out for all sports but rarely makes a team, couldn't bluff his way through an exam, humbly worships the class glamour girl.

You can discard any notions you've cherished about hooking him via the my pal method. Unbelievably, this chap goes for a siren every time. He's susceptible to lovely hair and smooth skin, not to mention having a wicked eye for figures. But here's the thing. All similarity to you and Hedy Lamarr must end with your looks. Nothing paralyzes him like sophisticated conversation. Solution: Look simply four-star every minute (our fashion chart is your ticket for invaluable hints), then go on the eye for him. Next time he speaks in Assembly—he's always making sports' announcements or something—stop him in the hall and tell him he did an awfully swell job and you always envy people who can give talks without getting tongue-tied. He'll feel he was positively eloquent, and take a protective interest in poor speechless you.

Don't wait for him to make the first move. He's terrified of women till he's sure they like him. Don't forget a touch of perfume behind your ears before your dates with him. He's a complete fall-guy for every little feminine ruse.

If you won't settle for anything less than Gary Cooper or Boyer, then Nothing will do but a super-man!

He personifies all that's wonderful in the male; is absolutely a stunner, couldn't be smarter, is a beautiful athlete.

You needn't be too much of a queen to take his eye. The real big-shot doesn't have to impress anybody, so if he happens to like a girl who's figure isn't too good or who wears a pair of horn-rims—but with an air—he'll date her seven nights a week if he likes. He can't resist a sense of humor, likes his gal to play a decent game of tennis or golf, drive a car and be a capable, intelligent person—not just a stooge. He's heard every line that was ever concocted, so this time just play it straight. Resist the temptation to ask him to your next party; that one's been overworked on him. But talk to him very casually next French class about something you're both interested in—it may be dogs or Glenn Miller or the Rose Bowl Game. Something as innocent as "They tell me you're a Glenn Miller addict too—what do you think of his 'Piano Concerto,'" may be all it takes.

Don't discuss achievements, it embarrasses him. Don't expect instant results as he never rushes a girl. But don't give up. He's worth the effort.

DRESS FOR HIM?

Then send for our chart on how to dress for all occasions and for all boys! Doesn't matter what your type is. The chart has your number!

Enclose 5c in coin or stamps and address: Co-Ed Chart No. 1, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York City.

Name .....

Street .....

City..... State.....

BLONDES from 2 to 42

AT2 gentle and safe for children.

AT12 keeps hair light and golden.

AT22 helps keep hair from darkening.

AT42 brightens faded blonde hair.

New 11 Minute HOME SHAMPOO

Specially made for blondes. Helps keep light hair from darkening—brightens faded blonde hair. Not a liquid, it is a fragrant powder that quickly makes a rich cleansing lather. Instantly removes the dingy, dust-laden film that makes blonde hair dark, old-looking.

Called Blondex, it gives hair attractive luster and highlights — keeps that just-shampooed look for a whole week. Safe, fine for children's hair, Blondex is the largest selling blonde shampoo in the world. Get it today at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

ASTROLOGY

1942 Reading Now 25c

You may now secure the new 2,000 word 1942 Forecast and Reading for only 25c. This reading gives you Astrological inclinations MONTH BY MONTH for the year 1942 and an extensive character delineation, all based upon an interpretation of your Zodiac Sun Sign. It was prepared by a brilliant writer of Astrological literature and is published by Yogi Alpha, noted American philosopher. It indicates favorable and unfavorable days throughout 1942. It discusses home life, business affairs, marriage happiness, love and romance, health, friends, vocation, temperament, etc. Send only 25c (coin or stamps) and month, day, year of birth for this reading. Money refunded if not satisfied.

YOGI ALPHA, Box 1411, Dept. A1, San Diego, Cal.

If a friend wishes a reading send 50c for 2 readings.

Asthma Mucus Loosened First Day

For Thousands of Sufferers

Choking, gasping, wheezing spasms of Bronchial Asthma ruin sleep and energy. Ingredients in the prescription Mendaco quickly circulate through the blood and commonly help loosen the thick strangling mucus the first day, thus aiding nature in palliating the terrible recurring choking spasms, and in promoting freer breathing and restful sleep. Mendaco is not a smoke, dope, or injection. Just pleasant, tasteless, palliating tablets that have helped thousands of sufferers. Printed guarantee with each package—money back unless completely satisfactory. Ask your druggist for Mendaco today. Only 60c.

EXPECTING A BABY?

● Ask your doctor about breast feeding, especially during early weeks of infancy. Take his advice on supplementary feeding, particularly about cleanliness. Regular medical care and advice on nutrition can speed development and improve baby's health.

HYGEIA
NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE
SAFER...because easier to clean

See Your Doctor Regularly

CHARM IS HAND MADE

(Continued from page 62)

offenders briskly. If they are very dry, discolored and scaly, use a firm-bristled nail brush or one of those new little rubber brushes. Dry them well, and then massage the richest lotion or cream into the joint. Take care of your arms, too. These appendages are entitled to lotion, cream and massage just as much as hands and face are, but they are most frequently forgotten because they go around hiding in long sleeves. Be sure you don't make that mistake!

Having hands you love to touch isn't the only important thing. Bette Davis, Rita Hayworth and Linda Darnell are just a few of the many stars who express emotion by their hands. Their hands must be beautiful and photogenic—what the cinema world calls camera-proof—but their behavior is every bit as important.

WE don't like to use the phrase "educated hands," and yet there are a few lessons for our palms and fingers to learn in order that they will live up to that dazzling new nail polish. Exercise is a most valuable thing. If you've ever watched a group of hula dancers, you have noticed that all their charm can't be attributed to gardenia leis and grass skirts. Over and above the sensuousness of the exotic dance, there is charm in the innate gracefulness of the motion of their hands.

If you are a pianist or a typist, your hands get plenty of valuable limbering activity. Here is a parallel exercise for making fingers graceful and nimble. Cup the hand as if to hold a ball, then rest it on a table in this position so that a chicken might perch on the hand's arched back. Lift each finger high and tap the table ten or twenty times. It is fun to exercise both hands at once in this manner and pretend they are conversing in code. Excellent also for suppling the hands is to place the palms together as in prayer, the fingers pointing up. Then move wrists apart slowly, pressing fingertips together, at the same time spreading fingers apart fanwise. Unless you are the girl who does the weekly washing, it will help your hands to wring an old towel for dear life. Following all these exercises, practice relaxation of wrists and hands by dropping your hands at your sides and shaking them vigorously as though to rid them of cobwebs. There is nothing so unattractive as tense, gripping fingers and stubborn hands; and relaxation makes for gracefulness and poise—that desirable light touch, as it were.

This exercise will improve poor circulation, too. That is the cause, you know, of forever cold or persistently hot hands, although the latter is frequently the result of nervousness. So like everything else, hand beauty is dependent upon general good health and common sense rules of diet and rest.

All of the above will give hands coordination, grace and added poise in gestures as well as in repose. It will give you the kind of hands you are proud to display. If the arm of a chair looks like a good background for your hand, rest it there, naturally and lightly. Folded hands are usually becoming, but don't always hold them in your lap like a school girl. Fold them to one side depending on your posture or just link the tip ends and relax them on the arm of a chair. This thinking about what to do with hands and where to put them is not affectation, but simply the intelligent way of preventing those self-conscious moments when for lack of a better place for two hands, you might be caught wringing them or stroking your hair or possibly keeping them tightly tucked away in your arms. These proposed habits refer just to "idle" moments, for at the bridge table or your knitting or your work, the display takes care of itself.

To carry this business of being your own hand-stylist a step further, practice action in front of a mirror and see what is alluring and what is not. See how much you can accomplish with direction, motion and position. Here are some examples of things you will notice: 1. It is twice as graceful to have your right hand on a different level from your left when you are seated. 2. When you are reaching for something, it is better to lead with your wrist than with your fingers. It looks not only graceful but also more polite. 3. Undoubtedly the second finger is just as efficient as the third, but there is a world of difference in the grace with which you can grasp things if you always take hold with the object between the thumb and third finger. 4. Keep your fingers quietly together in almost all gestures. You have all seen girls whose spread-eagle manner of holding or carrying things made them seem awkward and silly.

Literature has it that the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, but our private conviction is that it is the hand which gets the daily care it deserves—the hand that wields beauty and charm—which rules your world.

LOVELY nails surrounded by neglected cuticle look as unattractive as a picture in a splintered frame. But it isn't necessary to put up with ugly, ragged tissue. All you need to do is to dip a cotton-tipped orange stick in a good cuticle remover—such as Cutex, Dura-Gloss or Trimal—and work it around the bases of your nails. Dead tissue will soften and can be easily whisked away—without the bother of cutting or snipping. Your cuticle will look beautifully neat and will do justice to smooth, lacquered nails.

Hair styles may go up and down, but fashion in hands is always the same—smooth, feminine, well-groomed. Chamberlain's Lotion provides a modern way of keeping yours up-to-the-minute in loveliness. You need to use only a few drops to realize its soothing, softening benefits. What's more it dries quickly and isn't sticky. Why not try Chamberlain's these wintry days to prevent wind-blown hands?

MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

BEAUTY AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

(Continued from page 65)

nails are indications of some disturbance during formation. So if you want sound, healthy nails, be sure that you get enough rest, sleep and exercise every day and that you eat the food that is good for you—particularly, fresh fruits and vegetables and milk, an excellent source of calcium. Also drink at least eight glasses of water daily.

This everyday business of doing things—dipping hands in water, touching drying surfaces, etc.—robs nails of their natural lubricants, so treat them to supplementary oils. When manicuring, use oily preparations and also take advantage of the special nail conditioners that help to restore nails to health and resiliency. Before retiring, apply creams and oils around the cuticles and leave them on overnight. Then, several times a week, soak your nails in hot oil for about 10 minutes. You'll help the penetration of oils and keep bedcovers from straining if you wear cotton gloves overnight.

WHEN a nail does split or crack, don't give it up for lost and file it off. It takes about four months for an average nail to grow from moon to tip, and it will take weeks for the crippled one to regain its former good looks. Instead, patch it up with Scotch tape and file it smooth. Then, cover it over with polish and it will look as good as new.

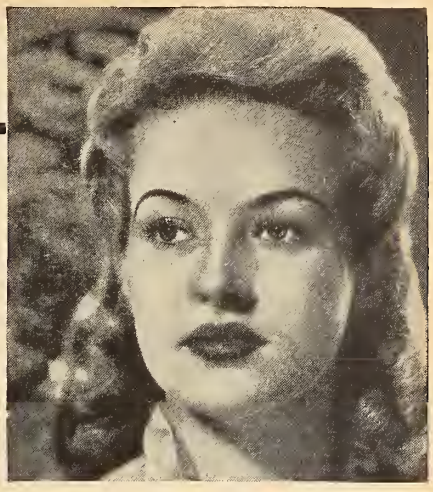
But you can save the wear and tear on fingernails if you keep them only for ornamentation. Protect them from needless injuries and always wear gloves when doing heavy work. The nails, you know, are made in layers, and a sharp blow on your finger near the nail-building cells may result in an air bubble or white spot that not only detracts from their beauty but weakens them. It's probably unnecessary to warn you about using your nails as household tools, but we have seen grown girls tackle barehanded such jobs as removing thumb tacks, opening boxes, etc.

Half the fun of having strong, healthy, well-shaped nails is in showing them off with bright polish that points up their loveliness. Whether you go for the softer, more conservative shades or prefer the deep exciting ones, key your polish to your complexion and to the fashion shades that you wear. If your skin is ivory, cream or tan, your fingertips will look their best in the orange-red shades of polish. If your skin has a faint pink or blue undertone, choose a tone with a blue-red cast. The clear red and rosy lacquers harmonize beautifully with either coloring. Our chart on page 61 will guide you in selecting polish tones to harmonize with fashion colors.

Winning hands, in beauty, are never a matter of chance. They belong every time to the girl who plays safe and keeps them soft and protected and who pays attention to ten points—her fingertips.

"An ounce of prevention" is an old proverb, but it has entered the hand lotion arena with brand new vigor. Toushay is the name of a new hand lotion which will help protect your hands from the harsh effects of everyday work. Before putting your hands in water, before dusting or other rigorous household jobs, smooth on this fragrant creamy lotion. Its thin silken film will help prevent chapping and roughness and keep hands soft. You can use Toushay also as a soothing all-over body rub.

Betty Grable, starring in the forthcoming 20th Century-Fox Technicolor picture, "Song of the Islands," with make-up by Westmore. She says: "I use Westmore Foundation Cream, and it's really wonderful!"



It's Easy to Look "STAR-LOVELY" with WESTMORE FOUNDATION CREAM

Large economy size, 50¢
Smaller sizes at variety stores

- Created by the famous Westmores, Hollywood's Make-up Masters.
- Used by leading stars for real life as well as "reel life."
- Gives your face a smooth, even, glowing tone . . . covers little blemishes, tired shadows . . . and it's non-drying!
- In six skin-tinted shades, with Face Powder to blend. Also, vital-tone lipstick, rouge (cream and cake), skin-freshener, cleansing cream, dry skin cream, eye-shadow and mascara.

House of WESTMORE Inc. HOLLYWOOD

Marvel
WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women
$3.50
At Drug Counters Throughout the World
FREE BOOKLET - The Marvel Co., 432 East St., New Haven, Conn.

Movie Fans, Attention!

NEW AUTOGRAPHED PORTRAITS
OF YOUR FAVORITES
Biographies of 200 Stars and Complete Charts
ALL IN ONE MAGAZINE!

Here's the biggest dime's worth of Hollywood Lore on the newsstands today. For only 10c you can now have an album of beautifully printed AUTOGRAPHED portraits of your favorite movie stars, both old and new. In addition there are thrilling detailed biographies of over 200 most popular stars, and charts giving inside information and little known facts on many others. It's a whale of a lot for only a dime—get your copy today.

1942 Winter Issue
SCREEN ALBUM
NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE
10c
(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10¢ to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.)

Here's your chance to try MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP at our expense! Use this wonder beautifier as complete make-up or powder base. Gives a velvety smooth complexion, exquisitely free from shine. Goes on easily, hides blemishes and stays on for hours! 50¢, 25¢ and 10¢

MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP is used by more women than any other brand!

Mail coupon & 3c stamp today!

PEACH ☐
RACHELLE ☐
BRUNETTE ☐
SUNTAN ☐

MINER'S • 12 E. 12th St., Dept. MS2, New York, N. Y.
I enclose 3¢ stamp to cover mailing cost. Send me generous sample of Miner's Liquid Make-up FREE!
Name
Address

NEW!
MINER'S Foundation Cream with LANOLIN
A tinted cream make-up base. Softens, glamorizes and protects the skin . . . .
39¢ & 10¢

BEAUTY CULTURE

LEARN AT HOME

Earn good pay in a fascinating profession. Learn to beautify yourself; beautify others. Independence, travel, luxury are at the command of good operators. Le Cloir French Method HOME STUDY course is easy, interesting —covers every phase with crystal-clear illustrations and text. You can't make mistakes! Low cost, easy terms. Start a newer, better life by sending for free "FACTS" booklet today.

Mme. LE CLAIR BEAUTY SCHOOL
176-J WEST WISCONSIN AVE. MILWAUKEE, WIS.

See WOODSTOCK TYPEWRITER

ENLARGEMENTS
DE LUXE NATURAL TONE

2 for only 29c each, 4 for 99c. Just send this ad with photo. Send no money but pay plus postage on delivery.
FREE 8x9" Studio Folder with each Oil Colored Enlargement. Dept. S20, New York Art Service —5800 Mosholu Ave., New York.

DON'T TWIST BABY'S BONES

The X-Ray shows how outgrown shoes injure baby feet. Better buy the correct but inexpensive WEE WALKERS and get a larger size often. Ask your baby doctor. Sold in the Infants' Department of these low-profit stores.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
R. L. Greene Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. F. & W. Grand
McCrory Stores Schulte-United
G. R. Kinney Company

FREE: Baby foot measuring scale in pamphlet on fitting. Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes
FOR wee WALKERS

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 57)

Good News About Good Grooming

With all Judy Garland's mom's girls too big for mothering, Mrs. Gilmore is crazy in love with the notion of taking MODERN SCREEN'S teen-agers under her wing. Keeps her in the groove—keeps her hair grey worrying about you kids.

It's her first mass-mother job, and she was worried sick by all the fan mail. We suggested charts. You know—those wonderful things that answer all your questions better even than a personal letter. Quick as a short-order cook, Mrs. G. whipped you up a chart that has everything!

It's the first of a series. There'll be others. This first one tells you what clothes to wear on all occasions—also how to wear 'em. You'll love the personal touch! Suggests different styles for every type girl—fat, thin, short, tall, flirtatious, and especially you quiet girls.

Give yourself a break. There's a coupon on page 97 just waiting to be clipped!

Galahad In Glamourtown

Jack Hopkins, the millionaire Ohioan who wires Linda Darnell a dozen orchids daily, and who planed all the way to New York to be near her when she last went East, is not the suave, dashing, man-of-the-world his deeds would lead you to believe. Actually, Hopkins (who's madly in love with Linda) is only 18 years old! Heir to an automobile fortune, he is more interested in Movietown glamour than in spark plugs and axles.

But let it not be said that one so young cannot be gallant. We have starlet Patti McCarthy's word for that. And Patti knows. Before he fell for Linda, it was she who held this Jack's heart.

Patti tells of the time Jack telephoned her from Cleveland. Their conversation ran something like this:

J. "How're you?"
P. "Fine. How're you?"
J. "Swell. Whatcha doing?"
P. "Eatin' chocolate cake."
J. "Like chocolate cake?"
P. "Uhuh."
J. "Well, good-by."
P. "Goo'by."

"I forgot all about the call," says Patti. "But the next morning a messenger boy rang my doorbell. He was carrying a tremendous triple-tiered chocolate layer cake. Jack had telegraphed a Los Angeles bake shop and had them deliver it to me!"

Such handsome gestures notwithstanding, it is our prediction that nothing will come of Hopkins' romance with Linda. She doesn't love him—and she doesn't even like orchids!

Beauty Bits:

Claudette Colbert mixes a little salt with her cold cream and applies it after she's thoroughly cleansed her face at night. She leaves it on for about ten minutes and says the purifying combination of salt and cream simply does wonders for her complexion! . . . Elyse Knox, Hal Roach starlet who used to be one of America's most famous photographic models, makes her eyes seem larger by using foundation and powder around them a shade or two darker than on the rest of her face . . . Whenever Annabella feels a little tired or punchy, she orders a special diet for lunch. Something about the combination picks her up and gives her new energy. Here 'tis: One boiled egg, two ripe olives, one little dish of noodles, one cup of black tea without sugar, but with a dash of lemon. Maybe it'll work for you and give you added zest!

Grace Notes On Marion Hutton

Calls for Dr. Kildare would be as nothing compared to ditto for Doctor Hutton, had Marion completed her original plans. The 22-year-old angel-puss, who looks as though she'd swoon at the sight of blood, was pre-medding at Cass Institute just three years ago. One vacation she trekked East to see what gave with city slicker sister, Betty Hutton—who jitterbugs for a very comfortable living. The bright lights were tempting, and when Marion heard that Glenn Miller was looking for a singer, she forgot the old Louis Pasteur stuff and went over to see him. One Song à la Hutton, and Glenn was sold. . . . The blonde and blue-eyed one has two extravagances, her wardrobe and her baby (to acquire whom she took six months maternity leave last year). Baby is eight months old and owns more animals than Bronx Zoo—all very large and very woolly. Husband Jack Philbin says just one more animal and the entire family will have to move out. As for clothes, she simply cannot resist them and is considered one of New York's best-dressed gals. . . . Her two prides are her dimples and her infinitesimal waist. Broods intermittently about getting so thin she'll lose the former and getting so fat she'll lose the latter. Stays just right via horseback riding and softball. Has a divine disposition and is worshipped by the entire band. No dopes, these Miller lads!

Grace Notes On Ray Eberle

For our dough, there will never be another Crosby, but mentionable in the same breath is Glenn Miller's vocalist, Ray Eberle. He has a lot of Bing's casual air and is not only darned easy to listen to but lovely to look at. Blue eyes, dark hair and a Smile! . . . At 22, his records are making a fortune for the Bluebird people, and Hollywood's been sweet-talking to the tune of a figure movie contract. His head seems to be nonturnable, however, for his bandmates report that he still gets excited when he's asked for his autograph and is stunned daily when he gets his fabulous fan mail. Considers himself Lucky Guy No. 1 to have landed with Glenn minus any professional experience. His dad was once in the opera, and the eight Eberle kids grew up loving to sing. Bob, the oldest, got a job with Jimmy Dorsey, while Ray stayed home in Hoosic Falls, N. Y., bartending in the local hotel which his father managed. On one of his visits to Bob in New York, he discovered that Glenn Miller was in the market for another Bob Eberle. Ray hot-footed it over to be auditioned, and he's still rubbing his eyes. . . . He's just about 5' 10" and weighs 170. Says singing keeps him thin in spite of a colossal appetite, but for good measure he exercises religiously. Golf, tennis, swimming —you name it, he likes it. Approves of women in general but doesn't feel quite ready to get specific about it. Is crazy about the country, picnics and dogs. Doesn't drink, but is rarely without a Chesterfield. Small wonder he satisfies!

Quiz, Kids?

Wanna be the life of the party? Wanna toss a quiz game and be the only smartie who knows the answers? Sure you do! So nuzzle up to this item, gather in your victims and start firing!

First, ask your quizees to name the five Hollywood movies that earned the most cold cash for the year 1940-41. The odds are that not one in a hundred will guess that the top money-maker was Abbott and Costello's

GRAY HAIR KILLS ROMANCE

You know that gray hair spells the end of romance . . . yet you are afraid to color your hair! You are afraid of dangerous dyes, afraid that it is too difficult, afraid that the dye will destroy your hair's natural lustre—afraid, most of all, that everyone will know your hair is "dyed".

These fears are so needless! Today at your drug or department store, you can buy Mary T. Goldman Gray Hair Coloring Preparation. It transforms gray, bleached, or faded hair to the desired shade—so gradually that your closest friends won't guess. Pronounced harmless by medical authorities. It's so economical, so easy—if you can comb your hair, you can't go wrong!

Buy a bottle today on a money-back guarantee. Or, if you'd rather try it first, write for free sample to Mary T. Goldman Co., 8469 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

If Back Aches Flush Kidneys

Do you feel older than you are or suffer from Getting Up Nights, Backache, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Dizziness, Swollen Ankles, Rheumatic Pains, Burning, scanty or frequent passages? If so, remember that your Kidneys are vital to your health and that these symptoms may be due to non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles—in such cases CYSTEX (a physician's prescription) usually gives prompt and joyous relief by helping the Kidneys flush out poisonous excess acids and wastes. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose in trying Cystex. An iron-clad guarantee wrapped around each package assures a refund of your money on return of empty package unless fully satisfied. Don't take chances on any Kidney medicine that is not guaranteed. Don't delay. Get Cystex. (Siss-tex) from your druggist today. Only 35c. The guarantee protects you.

Cystex
Helps flush kidneys

CONSTIPATION

NEEDS ATTENTION IN YOUNG AND OLD

Even "temporary" constipation is nothing to trifle with. Why delay when STUARTS LAXATIVE COMPOUND helps bring such quick, welcome, gentle yet effective relief? Stuart's is wonderful for all ages—effective for adults, yet gentle enough for children. Dosage can be reduced as it helps "regularize." To feel bright, keep bowels right. For effective yet gentle results try STUARTS LAXATIVE COMPOUND right away as directed on the labeling. At all drug stores 25c and 60c under maker's money-back guarantee.

DRAFTING

DRAFTSMEN NEEDED in all manufacturing and building lines—$30 to $50 a week and UP. Learn quickly at home in spare time. Selective Employment Service. FREE Bulletin. No obligation.
American School
Dept. DD-214, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

FREE CHART STUFFED-UP NOSE

If thick, gummy mucus plugs your nose—causes morning hawking, coughing—loosen and liquefy it with HALL'S TWO-METHOD TREATMENT—soothes and cools. Ask your Druggist. Satisfaction or money back! Send postcard for FREE Health Chart TODAY!
F. J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 32, TOLEDO, OHIO

FALSE TEETH by MAIL

From WORLD'S LARGEST DENTAL PLATE MAKERS

$7.95 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL—Send No Money! Made for you from your own mouth impression! Money Back Guarantee of Satisfaction! FREE impression material, directions, catalog.
U.S. Dental Co., 1555 Milwaukee Av., Dept. 2-104, Chicago

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

"Buck Privates"! Number two, and still going strong in its second year, was "Gone With The Wind." And bringing up the rear were "Men of Boys Town" (Tracy, Rooney); "Caught In The Draft" (Hope, Lamour), and "Northwest Mounted Police" (Cooper, Carroll, Goddard). You won't have to give away any encyclopaedias with that one!

Next have them name the five femme stars who drew the largest audiences of the year. If they rattle off 1. Bette Davis, 2. Dorothy Lamour, 3. Judy Garland, 4. Alice Faye and 5. Ginger Rogers, in that order, they'll hit 'em on the nose!

And finally, call for the five male stars who sold the greatest amount of tickets for 1940-41. The answer? 1. Mickey Rooney (the biggest box office draw in the history of flickers), 2. Spencer Tracy, 3. Gene Autry, 4. Clark Gable, 5. Bob Hope.

The above is not the opinion of snooty movie critics or snootier Oscar awarders. It's the result of a poll taken among more than 4,000 U. S. picture exhibitors. And you can believe them. They're the boys who stack up the chips—and they're the boys who know!

Didja Know

That Paulette Goddard is plotting to become a mother—via the adoption route . . . That Carole Landis' first husband, Irving Wheeler, is employed as a stand-in on her current opus, "Gentleman At Heart" . . . That the Andrews Sisters call their five cocker spaniels Yvonne, Ytwo, Ythree, Yfour and Yfive . . . That Jane Withers is keeping a Ginger Rogers scrapbook—for George Montgomery . . . That Jackie Coogan is living in Herbert Hoover's former mansion in Monterey—and that his wife will have her baby there?

That Bing Crosby's pet name for himself is "Fat" . . . And that he doesn't like anyone else using it . . . That a dinner guest at Lupe Velez', expecting a hot Mexican meal, is in for a letdown. Lupe serves Hungarian food . . . That Lyle Talbot was christened Lyle Hollywood . . . That British-born Roddy McDowall will be the next alien to make his vows to Uncle Sam . . . That Mary Beth Hughes, who has trouble with her weight, will hove a fully equipped gymnasium built in her new home . . . That bang-bang Westerns are the only movies that never lose a dime for producers . . . That Lewis Stone is molding the Hollywood station wagon set into the First Evacuation Regiment of the California State Guard . . . That Betty Grable's salary has jumped a $1,000 weekly to $2,500 per . . . That Jill Esmond, the first Mrs. Laurence Olivier, and son, five-year-old Simon Tarquin Olivier, are new Hollywood residents . . . That Ginger Rogers will make a picture for ex-boy friend Howard Hughes—and collect $175,000 for the sprint?

That Marjorie Weaver, divorced from Lieutenant Kenneth Schacht, wired him greetings on the recent anniversary of their wedding . . . That M-G-M hired five midgets to act as stand-ins for five children in "I Married An Angel" because midgets don't have to break up the day by going to school . . .

Why, Mick!

A friend of ours was over at Mickey Rooney's, waiting for Mick to dress and chatting with his ma, Mrs. Pankey. She was in a bad mood because of servant trouble.

"It's that new maid," she complained. "Here only two days, and already half my perfume is gone. My lovely 'L'Heure Bleu,' too. I hate to call her down, but I'm afraid I'll have to."

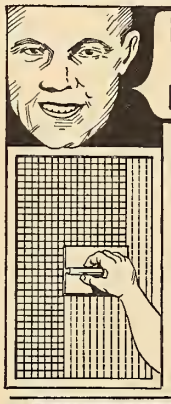
Our friend nodded sympathetically at her. "Maybe it evaporated," he offered, feebly.

Beautiful NAILS AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

DON'T ENVY long, tapering smart nails—have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half-moons. Helps check nail-biting habit. Will not harm nor soften natural nails. Protects fragile nails while they grow strong again Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15B, 5251 W. Harrison St., Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails



I've quit that slow, messy way of Painting Screens

—thanks to JIFFY, I now paint screens better, easier and in half the usual time. My JIFFY Screen Painter, paints ALL the surface of the wire without clogging.

JIFFY SCREEN PAINTER

Saves time, and labor, keeps screen looking new, longer. Each stroke paints path 5" wide. Just the tool for periodic dusting between paintings. Handy tool for home owners, building managers and janitors. Reasonably priced. Only 15c at hardware, paint and chain stores. Buy one today.
A. B. CARLSON & COMPANY
Dept. 52 Aurora, Ill.

NEWEST STYLES

GLASSES $2.95 & UP COMPLETE by MAIL!

16 DAYS' TRIAL! SEND NO MONEY!

Good Looking! We GUARANTEE SATISFACTION or Your MONEY BACK. We also repair Broken Glasses. FREE Write today for our catalog and information
U.S. Eye-Glasses Co. 1557 Milwaukee Av. Dept. 2-104. Chicago

GUARANTEED JEWELRY

Solid sterling silver Birthstone Ring; or lovely 13 set sparkling Dinner Ring; or an All-Occasion Ring with simulated Ruby and 8 brilliant marcasites; FOR selling 4 boxes of Rosebud Salve at 25c each. Send No Money. Order 4 salve.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO, BOX 23, WOODSBORO, MARYLAND.

Want a Government Job?

START $1260 TO $2100 YEAR

MEN—WOMEN Prepare Now for 1942 Examinations. 32 Page Book FREE Mail Coupon Today, SURE.

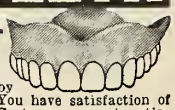
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. F256, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush without charge, (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs; (2) Tell me how to qualify for one.
COUPON
Name .....
Address .....

FOR BETTER TISSUES
USE... SITROUX Cleansing TISSUES
PRONOUNCED SIT-TRUE
softer • stronger more absorbent
AT 5 & 10¢ — DRUG & DEPT. STORES

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

5 x 7 PHOTO ENLARGEMENT FREE
ANY SUBJECT OR GROUP
Send any clear snapshot, photo, bust, full length, groups, scenes, baby, mother, dad, sweetheart, etc. We will enlarge to 5x7 on salon quality photographic paper FREE. Just send print or negative. We will also include information about hand coloring by expert artists who specialize in reproducing life-like likenesses and FREE FRAME. Your original returned with your FREE enlargement. Send now and kindly enclose 10c for return mailing. (Only 2 to a customer.)

IDEAL PORTRAIT COMPANY
P. O. Box 748 G. B., Church St. Annex, New York

FALSE TEETH
LOW AS $7.95
90 DAYS' TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM


We make FALSE TEETH for you by mail from your own impressions. You have satisfaction of MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Customers report satisfaction but you be your own judge.
SEND NO MONEY WRITE TODAY for FREE Booklet and Material.
CLEVELAND DENTAL SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. 97-B2, East St. Louis, Illinois

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST
Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.
Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test". Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Give Druggist's name and address. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547, Northwestern Station, Dept. 2809, Detroit, Mich.
SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE
©1935 LAKE LAB.

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

The pair thereupon lapsed into a gloomy silence which remained unbroken until Mickey appeared at the head of the stairs several minutes later.

"Hiya, Mom! Hiya Pal!" he greeted, bouncing down the steps. "What's cookin'!" As he hit the last step, Mrs. P. issued a low moan. For Mickey, the Manly, her pride and joy, was enveloped from head to heel in a cloud of "L'Heure Bleu"!

"The new maid!" gasped Mrs. Pankey. "Mickey! I forgot he loved the stuff."

Wanted: Modern Screen Reporters!

Hey you, fans! Would you like to earn a dollar? Would you like to be MODERN SCREEN reporters? Would you like to see your first story in print and have your name and your town credited? It's easy! Here's all you have to do:

If you know any lively anecdote or tidbit about a star which we here in Hollywood have never heard, send it to us. F'r instance, if you were in Cape Cod when Olivia de Havilland and Lew Ayres were doing the district, tell us something about them—how they spent their time, whom they visited, how they looked, what you thought of them. If you dated Veronica Lake before she was a movie star or know Pat O'Brien's family in Milwaukee, that's Good News to us. If you met Bette Davis when she flew to her husband's bedside in Minneapolis, or Ronald Reagan when he returned to his birthplace, Dixon, Ill., or Lana Turner when she night-clubbed in Chicago with ex-spouse Artie Shaw, or any other star who visited your city at one time, send us some little story you think will interest MODERN SCREEN readers.

Every letter will be read immediately. So let us hear from you NOW. If your item's accepted, a dollar bill will be sent to you post haste! Just address Sylvia Kahn, c/o MODERN SCREEN, 9136 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Cal., and perhaps you can make your writing debut in this magazine!

Hedy Hints To Loveliness

According to Hedy Lamarr, beauty is yours for the asking. She gives you a money-back guarantee on these nine rules:

The luscious Lamarr always: (1) avoids looking in a mirror except when absolutely necessary. Says it helps to avert a studied look that's death to beauty. (2) Uses plenty of warm water and mild soap before retiring, followed by generous cleansing with cream or mineral oil. (3) Splashes cold water on her face and neck in the morning and follows it with softening lotion. (4) Matches the tones of her skin for her face powder (Wears only lipstick during the day). (5) Forgets her comb and substitutes 100 brush strokes twice daily. (6) Washes her own hair herself once a week and dries it in the sun. (7) Spends quite a bit of time every day cleaning her hands and fingernails. (8) Does the same for neck and arms and uses lemon to bleach her elbows. (9) Gets in an hour of outdoor exercise every day.

Hedy thinks a woman's eyes are her most important feature. She herself never wears mascara, preferring to moisten her lashes with just enough vaseline to give her clear grey eyes a dewy look. She loves to see red fingernails on others, but lets her own nails go tintless. Every now and then she'll talk about dieting, but that's as far as it goes. No one knows how much weight her 5' 7" frame carries around—she won't tell, though she'll admit she's gained 15 pounds during the last year.

For "H. M. Pulham, Esq." she was made up to look like a woman of 40, and she has very definite views on the subject. She believes any woman just out of her 30's should wear her hair swept up at the sides and in front, with the grey hair, if any, showing. She says it softens the features, and gives an interesting look to the face. "Rouge is important, too," advises Hedy, "Pale cheeks are interesting in a girl of 20, but they suggest haggardness in a woman older than that."

Hedy is conscious of her beauty in only one way—she's studied and experimented until she knows what's best for her type in make-up, coiffure and clothes. She spends five minutes in the morning, getting her hair brushed and her lipstick applied. Then she forgets how she looks. Says Hedy, "Beauty is something that shows out of the eyes—it's in the tilt of the head, the curve of the lips. If the combination of your features happens to be good to look at, that's just an extra bonus for your friends. But it isn't essential to loveliness."

Street Scene

Things are seldom what they seem, and the course of true love never runs smooth. As we go to press, two of Hollywood's most in-love lovers are Gene Tierney and Count Oleg Cassini. But you'd never guess it from this incident.

Gene and her husband were driving in the direction of their home in Beverly Hills. The sun was beaming and the air was soft. Deftly Oleg steered his open roadster through the dappled streets. At his side sat his wife, humming quietly and scanning a letter. This, mused Oleg, was indeed peace on earth.

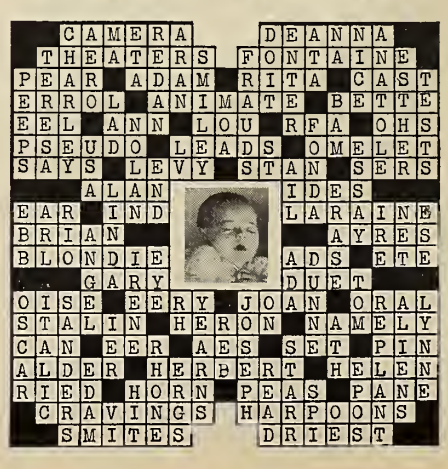
Suddenly, he felt Gene tense. Turning toward her he saw that her eyes were blazing. A question rose to his lips, but before he could mouth it, Gene spoke. "You!" she hissed. "You never told me!" And without warning she bopped Oleg on the head!

Oleg was stunned. Drawing his car to the curb, he demanded an explanation. And Gene let him have it—fast. Her letter was from a girl friend in New York. The girl had met Oleg years back, had dated him and liked him. She wanted to congratulate Gene on her fortunate marriage.

"What's wrong with that?" Oleg asked. Gene went white. But he had never told her he knew the girl! Surely, she argued, that meant he had something to conceal!

It took the Count fully five minutes to convince his bride that the only reason he hadn't mentioned the girl was because she meant nothing to him. Finally Gene was satisfied. Tossing back her head, she roared at her own jealousy. Oleg joined in and the pair continued on toward home, their happy laughter ringing like children's through the calm of peaceful Hollywood Hills.

Solution to Puzzle on page 14



GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Disa and Data

Hollywood finds it hard to believe the report that Maurice Chevalier, now in Paris, is preaching collaboration with Hitler . . . Reversing the old procedure, Patricia Morison's father will follow in her footsteps. Papa Morison will make his acting debut at the Pasadena Playhouse, one-time training ground for Bob Preston and Vic Mature . . . After producing 26 Charlie Chan movies in 10 years, Twentieth Century-Fox will discontinue the series. Death of the foreign market is the reason . . . Anne Shirley will put sugary roles behind her and play an ex-strip-tease dancer in "Mayor of 44th Street" . . . Around the "Roxie Hart" set, they're calling George Montgomery the "man with the most beautiful ears" . . . Fussy-eater Claudette Colbert is one of the few stars who won't lunch in the studio commissary. Just like a day laborer, Claudette brings her meal from home in a pail and munches in solitude . . . 235-pound Laird Cregar is being mentioned for the role of Jean Valjean in "Les Miserables"—the part formerly played by Fredric March!

Because her recent pictures have called for such elaborate make-up, Ona Munson refers to herself as "the female Lon Chaney" . . . Oleg Cassini, employed at the same studio as his bride, has a sign over his office door reading: "Miss Gene Tierney not allowed during working hours." . . . Stirling Hayden will be a pretty brave guy if he returns to Hollywood. The Movietown male population is threatening to chop him up into little pieces. Said Stirling on a "We, the People" broadcast: "Working for the movies isn't a man's job. You're not accomplishing much. You bring entertainment to lots of folks, sure, but I still say that's not a man's job!"

Keep 'Em Shining

On the "Louisiana Purchase" set Vera Zorina was sitting in her special chair, surrounded by a huddle of five men who were slowly being hypnotized by her beautiful, gleaming hair. "Gee," whispered one of 'em to me, "How I'd like to run through that in my bare feet." Later Zorina told me her hair had grown four inches in five months. As a result of constant brushing.

Good News About Billy Halop

He'll take spiked lemonade . . . violent ties . . . girls who look like Georgianna Young. "Yes . . . and I'll take it on the chin and give it back as good as I get it," says Billy Halop, dean of the Dead End kids. On the screen he's equal to anything from petty larceny to plain and fancy knifing. Off screen he's equal to Beethoven's Fifth. "I've always been nuts about the stuff," says Billy in reference to music. "Been practicing either drums, trombone, guitar or piano since I was ten. And when I'm 35," he's been known to say, "I'm going to retire with my instruments and run a law-abiding ranch like a law-abiding citizen." Meanwhile they're still telling how Billy and the gang had directors chewing aspirin by the carton while they let hell loose before the cameras. Ignoring the script, they whispered, whined and whinnied whatever came into their dishevelled heads, flipping it off with, "You told us 'Be natural,' didn't you? So we're being natural . . . like when we were back in Brooklyn, see? Just like you said." Their unbridled naturalness was mostly along the lines of traditional guerrilla warfare . . . sniping with pea-shooters and slingshots from behind studio camouflage. To which young Halop blandly remarks, "Sure, I let loose on the set and have fun. That's why I'm able to go in and give it all I've got. Fooling around keeps me from getting tight inside. But underneath that dirty smirk, you have a mighty Hamlet, crazy like anything about acting." Says he, "It's got so that I need rehearsals just like some guys need black coffee . . . to pep 'em up . . . keep 'em hep. Right now I'm busting to play juvenile lead in 'Big Show.'" Three years ago he was paving his private heaven with dreams of suave, sinister stuff . . . "like Muni." Before that he used to say, "I wish they'd let me wash behind the ears and play a Boy Scout or something. Just for a change. Nothing permanent, you understand. But I guess I kissed the goody-boys good-by when I waved s'long to New York and the network. I used to be Bobby Benson, you know. The hard-riding Western kid of H-Bar-O." How he ever got drafted into those young killer roles nobody knows exactly. Most people think he was picked off the sidewalk in front of the gas house . . . but t'ain't true. Matter of fact, his father is a well-to-do Long Island lawyer and his home life was normal as anything. "The first time I saw myself screened I was plain scared to death. You know how you get soaked to the skin and your stomach starts jumping? And darned if it isn't still that way." How Bill scores himself as an actor, he doesn't tell, but he does say, "I just finished a screen play that ought to knock 'em for loops. And baby, when I sell it . . . you'll know about it!" Back when Halop was first told that the kids would be dead-ending it in Hollywood, you'd think he'd have gone out and splurged his next week's coke money . . . or bought a new purple tie . . . or orchids for his gal. But did he? "Heck no," says Billy. "The way I felt was . . . what did Hollywood have that New York didn't have?" The answer: Georgianna Young. "She was the first girl I ever kissed . . . and I'm still kissing her. Of course, Judy Garland was plenty of a menace. And professionally, Bette Davis is a blond dynamo. But still . . . when it comes to a desert island . . . or a ride on top of a Fifth Avenue bus . . . Young's my woman!"

Hopalong Cassidy

With Hopalong Cassidy skipping and jumping into his 43rd picture, no movie fan can rate a passing grade in the Kollege of Hollywood Knowledge unless he can talk a good line about this popular series. Ready for your first lesson? Let's go!

Bill Boyd, star of the "Cassidys," answers requests for over 1,000 portraits each month . . . He's been Hopalong for so many years, he knows the character well enough to help write the screen plays . . . When he's not playing the cowboy hero, Bill sheds his Western regalia and dons the well-cut suits and carefully chosen accessories of the city slicker. It's his wife's idea. But she does allow him to retain his high-heeled boots for street wear . . . He thumbs down all suggestions that he sing in his films. He thinks music slows down the shootin'. Hear that, Gene Autry!

Each picture costs between $90,000 and $100,000. To give you an idea of what a drop in the movie-making bucket that is, a typical "A" picture—for example, "You'll Never Get Rich"—costs $1,000,000 to produce . . . If backgrounds for two pictures are going to be similar, they shoot both pictures at the same time! . . . Hopalong leading ladies take a two week "Western Heroine" training course before they step up to the camera. In that time they are taught to act like authentic daughters of the wide, open spaces . . . The original Hopalong Cassidy, created by Clarence E. Mulford, a Maine writer who has never been West, had a game leg from which he derived his name. Boyd hopped along for one picture, tired of it and returned to a normal gait.

Topper, Hopalong's horse, has the best

Beautify Your FORM Contour

Don't be embarrassed by a flat, undeveloped or sagging bust. Do as thousands of other women just like yourself are doing. They have learned how to bring out the loveliest contours of their figures, whatever their bust faults. Now you, too, can do the same . . . safely, easily and positively.

HIGHLY ENDORSED BY MANY DOCTORS

Your flat bustline can be miraculously beautified into full and alluring contours. Or, if you are the pendulous type, it can be rounded into high and youthful loveliness. All you have to do is follow the easy directions on exercise, massage, brassieres, diet, etc., given in the great medically-endorsed book, "The Complete Guide to Bust Culture." Adopt these simple, self-help measures at once and your bust will positively appear full, firm and shapely . . . the proud glamorous curves which make you more desirable than ever.

OUR OFFER SEND NO MONEY

You can now obtain this unique book by A. F. Niemoeller, A.B., M.A., B.S., at a remarkable price reduction. Formerly $3.50. Now only $1.98. Guaranteed harmless. Amazing lifetime results. SEND NO MONEY. Just pay postman $1.98 plus postage on arrival. Shipped in plain wrapper. Money back if not delighted. Enjoy life anew, attract men. Write name and address in margin NOW and mail to

HARVEST HOUSE, 70 Fifth Ave., Dept. B-397, New York

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FREE CLUB PIN & RING CATALOG

PINS 30¢ up—RINGS $1.50

Quality made . . . silver, gold plated, etc. Our new book shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs by Bastian craftsmen . . . oldest, largest makers. Write for your Free copy today!

BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 55, Rochester, N. Y.

EASY WAY . . . Tints Hair JET BLACK!

CAKE SHAMPOO ADDS LOVELY BLACK COLOR TO HAIR THAT IS STREAKED—DULL FADED—GRAYING BURNT—LIFELESS

This remarkable CAKE discovery, TINTZ Jet Black Shampoo, washes out dirt, loose dandruff, grease, grime and safely gives hair a real smooth, JET BLACK TINT that fairly glows with life and lustre. Don't put up with faded dull, burnt, off color hair a minute longer. TINTZ Jet Black Cake works gradual . . . each shampoo leaves your hair blacker, lovelier, softer, easier to manage. No dyed look. Won't hurt permanents. Full cake 50c (3 for $1). Tintz comes in Jet Black, light, medium and dark Brown, Titian, and Blonde. State shade wanted.

SEND NO MONEY Just pay postman plus postage on our positive assurance of satisfaction in 7 days or your money back. (We Pay Postage if remittance comes with order.) Don't wait—Write today to TINTZ CO., Dept. 3-B 207 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Canadian Office: Dept. 3-B, 22 College St., Toronto

WORLD FAMOUS • STANDARD MAKE TYPEWRITERS

10 DAY TRIAL
No Money Down!

UNDERWOOD! L. C. SMITH! REMINGTON! ROYAL! WOODSTOCK! Typewriters that cost $100.00—less than ½ mfrs. orig. selling price. Genuine, standard, full sized reconditioned office models—up-to-date improvements, standard keyboard, back spacer, ribbon reverse, 2 color ribbon, etc. Never before such rock bottom prices! Also portable bargains.

Less Than ½ Mfrs. Orig. Selling Price

NO MONEY DOWN — FULLY GUARANTEED
Send no money. See before you buy on ten day no obligation trial. Pay on easiest terms—as low as 70c a week. Money back guarantee. Completely reconditioned and beautifully refinished. FREE—Complete Van Sant Touch Typing Course free with typewriter. Special price slashing literature in colors sent on request. Send name and address at once. Get full description and 10 day trial plan. Limited supply. Send today.

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE
231 W. Monroe St., Dept. 261 Chicago, Ill.

"Nudge" Your Lazy Liver Tonight!

Follow Noted Ohio Doctor's Advice To Relieve CONSTIPATION!

If liver bile doesn't flow freely every day into your intestines—constipation with its headaches and that "half-alive" feeling often result. So stir up your liver bile secretion and see how much better you should feel! Just try Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients with constipation and sluggish bile.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only stimulate bile flow to help digest fatty foods but ALSO help elimination. Get a box TODAY! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

FALSE TEETH by MAIL
from WORLD'S LARGEST DENTAL PLATE MAKERS
$7.95 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL—Send No Money! Made for you from your own mouth impression! Money Back Guarantee of Satisfaction! FREE impression material, directions, catalog. U. S. Dental Co., 1555 Milwaukee Av., Dept. 2-104, Chicago

High School Course at Home
Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, Dpt. H-214, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

equine job in the business. He relaxes between scenes while his stand-in poses for lighting setups! . . . Only one thing makes Topper unhappy. He must submit to a daily dunking in a blueing rinse so he'll photograph whiter than he is!

Man of the Whirl

Don't flicker an eyelash when the word gets out that George Brent and Hedy Lamarr have become the town's newest roasting romantics. Remember we tipped you off.

George's love idyll with Annie Sheridan has been laid neatly in its grave, and George is not one to waste time. From an excellent source we learn he's trying to persuade a mutual woman friend to arrange a Lamarr introduction.

Since Hedy has always betrayed a weakness for older men, and since George's charm is notorious, you can prepare yourself for the news that the name of Lamarr will be tacked to the impressive list headed by Sheridan, Garbo, de Havilland and Davis.

Lupe the Loopy

Nothing is so warming on a chill winter evening as a chat with Lupe Velez. And when Larupping Lupe discusses men—brother, you can loosen your collar!

The night we talked with her, Lupe got on the subject of marriage. Quoth she:

"A wonderful business, yes, but not for yours truly. Why? Because I would need five husbands to make me happy! Boy, if I could have a harem! You know who goes in? For laughs I take Red Skelton. For dancing, Cesar Romero. For sports, Gene Tunney. For diplomacy—that is very important—I take Anthony Eden. And for moonlight and hot romance? Ahhh. Who could be sweeter than Charles Boyer!

"But maybe it is well I cannot marry five men. Four I pick have wives! Anyway, I know one fella who is special for me. He has a little of everything. His name—I don't tell you!"

Okay Lupe, we're not asking. We don't have to. If Erich Maria Remarque isn't the "fella," we'll eat that autographed copy of "Flotsam" you never let out of your sight!

From the Stars to You

You're passing up Hollywood's best bet if you're not wearing one of those cute new Star Skutcheons, put out by Anne Lehr's Hollywood Guild. The Skutcheons are attractive little buttons to be worn on your dress or in your hat and are made of material that has been part of a costume actually worn in a picture by some famous star.

Among the Filmtown favorites who have donated garments to be cut up for Skutcheons are Gene Autry, who turned in the "lucky" shirt he wore in his first picture, "Phantom Express;" Bette Davis, who gave a blue street frock from "The Great Lie;" Nelson Eddy, whose "Chocolate Soldier" dress uniform and personal dressing gown make stunning buttons; and Martha Scott whose "One Foot In Heaven" dress is particularly popular with fans.

Star Skutcheons sell for 25c each. And the nicest thing about owning them is that not only have you an intimate souvenir of the stars, but you are also contributing to a worthy cause. For the Hollywood Guild, one of the town's finest charitable organizations, will use all income from Star Skutcheon sales to buy milk for needy babies.

If you'd like a Skutcheon, mail your quarter to: Anne Lehr, Hollywood Guild, 1284 No. Crescent Heights Blvd., Hollywood, Cal. Or send ten cents for the Guild's catalogue.

Short Shots

Paul Muni will step down from his starry heights to play second lead to Glenn Ford's "Chopin" . . . Ida Lupino doesn't know whether to be peeved or pleased. At their graduation dinner a class of British fliers voted June Duprez the "Sweetheart of the RAF" and Ida—the "Mother of the RAF" . . . Gloria Swanson is putting the final touches to a radio gossip program . . . The town is proud of Pat O'Brien for adding a third adopted child, two-months-old Terence Keven, to his brood . . . Lana Turner and Burgess Meredith were a surprise twosome, cocktailing at New York's St. Moritz bar . . . Apryl Shauer is a new starlet on the Hal Roach lot . . . Has it been printed that John Carroll and Dennis Morgan roomed together in Chicago before either married? . . . Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden's mother are neighbors in a Santa Monica apartment house!

Signs of the Times: Paramount has changed Director Andre Bundsman's name to Andre Mann . . . In "Arsenic and Old Lace" you'll see a movie gag that got itself screened. In a graveyard scene Cary Grant and Priscilla Lane embrace beside a tombstone. The tombstone bears the name Archibald Leach. It was placed there to rib a guy whose real name is Archie Leach—Mr. Cary Grant . . . The new Deanna Durbin-Vaughn Paul house will have a Capehart built into its walls with three speaker outlets in the house and one by the pool . . . Doodles Weaver calls his baby "Noodles" . . . Believe it or not, sneezing Billy Gilbert does exquisite needlepoint work! . . . Breaking precedent, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has elected its first woman president—Bette Davis . . . Wallace Beery may soon be a blushing bridegroom. Wally's ex-wife, Mary Areta Gillman, is airing her second husband and her remarriage with Beery wouldn't surprise anyone . . . John Payne has a juke box in his home. Insert a nickel and you can hear recordings of Jane Withers playing the saxophone, Sonja Henie singing and Jack Oakie doing Hamlet straight . . .

Because she was a brave girl and made her first solo flight, Brian Aherne pinned a new lapel clip on Joan Fontaine's flying togs. It's fashioned of two gold and diamond wings . . . Hedy Lamarr and Reggie Gardiner still wear the companion rings Hedy brought from Vienna years ago. Hers is gold and his, silver.

Check and Double Check

If you hear it rumored that George Raft is a drinking man—that isn't true. If you hear it rumored that George Raft pays the biggest liquor bill in Ciro's—that is true. This is how it works:

George and best girl Betty Grable love night-clubbing. But they don't like to eat in the gay spots, and neither do they drink. When they step out it's because they want to dance and listen to music and watch the crowds go by.

In the old days, George and Betty used to spend evening after evening at Ciro's and come away with a check for the cover

NEW QUICK WAY—TO REMOVE CUTICLE, USE
TRIMAL

Recommended by Leading Beauty Shops

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at drug, department and 10-cent stores. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles, Cal.

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

charge only. But not any more. George is a funny guy: Small checks staring up at him make him feel like a thief! The idea that he, George Raft, could have the audacity to use Ciro's like a public park, drop a few peanuts and duck out, began to appall him!

The situation finally grew so embarrassing, George called Betty into conference. Together they worked out a scheme. Now when they visit Ciro's, George orders champagne for any friend or acquaintance he spots in the place, grabs the bill and marches out convinced he's a better man!

How to Keep Kissable

Do you have trouble applying lipstick so it'll stay? I watched Don Cash, Hollywood make-up expert, setting lipstick on Ruth Warrick for a scene in "The Corsican Brothers." First he brushed her lipstick on, then blotted that carefully. Next he applied a thin film of face powder to her lips and let it set a few minutes. Then he had her moisten her lips. Once more he blotted them, and they were ready for love scenes with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Make-up men are particularly careful about setting the lip goo, so take a tip and wait until it's really had a chance to color your lips before the final blotting.

Derr-ty Crack

Never say Derr to George Sanders. He shudders at the name. And who can blame him after what happened the other afternoon.

George was loafing contentedly on a set at 20th Century-Fox when a young publicity woman approached him, dragging in tow handsome Richard Derr, a studio white hope.

"I want you two to know each other," gushed the p. w. "We all think Richard is a young George Sanders!"

In the silence that followed, you could have heard three hearts drop. It was George who spoke first.

"You poor boy," he said frostily. And strolled away.

The Case of Deanna Durbin

If Deanna Durbin ends her studio battle and snuggles back into the Universal fold, Vaughn Paul ain't gonna like it. In Vaughn's opinion, Deanna has had her career as an actress. He thinks she ought to bounce the movies and concentrate on her career as a wife.

Deanna herself is inclined to agree with him. Never a gadabout, she is discovering that being a domestic pigeon is strictly her dish. She has gained weight, looks wonderful and has never been happier. She spends all her days planning the furnishings for her new home and all her nights being Mrs. Average Suburban Matron, reading, seeing a show or visiting her mother.

On Sundays, she and Vaughn usually visit their best friends, Anne Shirley and John Payne. The Paynes recently bought a cottage across the street from the Paul home site, and it is a Sunday ceremony for Deanna and Vaughn to drag Anne and John and their guests on a sight-seeing tour of their lot, completely ignoring the wails of dissenters who see no romance in a muddy excavation.

On Sunday evening, they sit around with the Paynes and Judy Garland and Dave Rose, listening to records. Sometimes Deanna brings a few of her own (she has over 4,000), and they have a good time, dancing a little, munching candy and talking the way married folk do. Incidentally, Deanna and Judy, never very friendly when their careers were all they had in common, have grown into close pals since they've married.

"Take a Tip" Dept.

Tough luck for that cute little star whose mother is making such a nuisance of herself at the studio. Mama, who was once content to be a simple homebody, can't take success in her stride. Ever since fame touched her child, she's been behaving as though she'd given the world another Messiah! The studio does its best to keep peace by meeting her most unreasonable demands. But her last one was just too much. Mama phoned the head office one sunny afternoon to tell them her daughter was going shopping at a downtown department store—and please would they send over a motorcycle escort!

We hope Mama reads this and recognizes herself. We'd like her to know that harassed studio heads take into consideration incidents like the above, as well as box office receipts, when dat ol' debbil option time rolls round.

Good News About Hattie McDaniel

"I just had a picture of what Mammy must have been. I had it deep in my heart." And that's how ample, mahogany-colored Hattie McDaniel copped the Oscar for her role in "Gone With. . . ." Straight from the heart is the way it's been from the time she wowed her grade school back in Denver. And the day she won the Temperance Union gold medal for her solemn recitation of "Convict Joe." Had the good ladies weeping in the aisles that time. Had whole towns weeping when she launched a one-woman vaudeville act with script, music and lyrics by McDaniel. Lord, what she could do with "Quittin' Ma Man." Had the sorrow of centuries in her voice. Yes, and there was that thin stretch when she was reduced to a maid's job in a Milwaukee nightspot. Warbled "Say-ent Loo-wee Woo-man" one night as a pinch-hitter . . . and stayed 2 years. That throaty, contralto of hers had them yipping like mad. "But two years in one place is a powerful long time," she tells you. Wandering out to Hollywood finally, she peddled her press book to all and sundry. "And if you think it's tough to say 'No work to-day,'" recounts a Warner Brothers' casting man, "you should have to say it to Hattie. She'd just stand there with that shining, moonface of hers, murmuring a quiet, 'Thank you.' And though you were telling God's truth, you'd feel like Public Heel No. 1." Hatty says, "Anyhow I could cook . . . and I did . . . until things started to break . . . and when it happened, brother, it was like a cloudburst." Asked her first reaction to success, she reminisces, "The truth is, I wasn't completely surprised. I'd made up my mind long before to hit the top . . . and I was willing to start at the bottom . . . as an extra . . . as anything . . . just so I could learn what made the flickers flicker." Adds, "The first time I saw myself screened I thought I was colossal . . . colossally terrible!" Apparently, film fans had a different reaction to that heart-warming monolith of a woman. "But what scene really launched your film career?" she's asked very often. "The time a guy named Jim punched his pal in the middle (according to script). I yelled, 'He hit him in the front and bulged him out the back. That Jim's all right'." And ever since, she's been ad-libbing so freely, she's practically co-authored her roles. "As for 'Gone With the Wind,' I just gave myself that part. I got the book, read it, lived it. When I was finally tested for the role, I just opened my heart and let the words flow. The Academy Award that followed was pretty won-

SPEAKING OF DEFENSE...
Rand DRESS SHIELDS
are my favorite protection
and of course
Rand BABY PANTS
AND CRIB SHEETS
are best for baby!
AT CHAIN & DEP'T. STORES • RAND RUBBER CO., B'KLYN, NEW YORK

Hair OFF Face Lips Chin Arms Legs

Happy! I had ugly hair . . . was unloved . . . discouraged. Tried many different products . . . even razors. Nothing was satisfactory. Then I developed a simple, painless, inexpensive method. It worked. I have helped thousands win beauty, love, happiness. My FREE book, "How to Overcome the Superfluous Hair Problem", explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer. No obligation. Write Mme. Annette Lanzette, P. O. Box 4040 Merchandise Mart, Dept. 90, Chicago.

NEW! 1942 MODEL POCKET RADIO! NO TUBES BATTERIES
BEAUTIFUL PLASTIC CABINETS
BAND-DIAL—MAGNOPHONE Fits your pocket or purse—Wt. 5 ozs., ABOUT CIGARETTE PACKAGE SIZE—FIXED POWER CRYSTAL! OWNERS REPORT 2-3 YEARS SERVICE—THOUSANDS SOLD! M. L. of Ill., says "RADIO WORKS FINE".
GUARANTEED TO WORK—ONE YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE
Sent complete ready to listen with instructions for use in homes, offices, hotels, in bed, etc. NO ELECTRIC "PLUG IN" REQUIRED —EASY PAYMENT PLAN AS FOLLOWS:—
SEND ONLY $1.00 (cash, M. O., check) and pay postman $1.99 plus postage on arrival, or send $2.99 for postpaid delivery! LIMITED NUMBER LEFT—GET YOUR NEW MIDGET NOW—for real enjoyment! Ideal gift for anyone—ORDER NOW!
MIDGET RADIO CO., DEPT. W-2, KEARNEY, NEBRASKA

ITCH STOPPED In A Jiffy
Relieve itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, scales, scabies, rashes and other skin troubles. Use cooling antiseptic D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Soothes irritation and stops itching quickly. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Ask your druggist today for D.D.D. Prescription.

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!
Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.
NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
1315 Michigan Ave., Dept. 2362, Chicago

CORNS GO FAST
OH! MY FEET!

Pain Sent Flying!
Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads instantly stop tormenting shoe friction; lift aching pressure; give you fast relief. Ease tight shoes; prevent corns. Separate Medications included to quickly remove corns. Cost but a few cents an application.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

YOUR FUTURE FOR 1942

The Complete Astrological Year-Book

YOUR YEAR AHEAD

What does the coming year hold for you in opportunity, success, love, marriage? How can you make the most of what comes your way, according to the findings of astrology? Read "Your Year Ahead" in YOUR FUTURE for 1942, a big 4000 word forecast for each sign of the Zodiac—the best solar forecast that astrology can give.

WHAT'S AHEAD FOR THE WORLD IN 1942?

Will it be more of 1941 and 1940? Or will it be something different? We'll tell you in advance that, according to astrology it will be different, all right. But how? Read

THE REBIRTH OF FREEDOM THROUGHOUT THE WORLD, by Grant Lewi

THE COMING AMERICAN REVOLUTION . . . . . by Catherine Springer

You'll find a lot to think about here even if you never considered astrology before. Things are going to happen in the world, and here they are according to the science of astrology. Rarely has there been a more exciting year to work on than 1942. Read about it in advance—now! Ask your magazine dealer for

YOUR FUTURE FOR 1942

Now on Sale Everywhere

25 Movie Stars Pictures 25c

COLORED 8x10

Beautiful pictures of popular stars. Just right for framing or scrapbooks. Send for your set now. Enclose 25c and 5c for postage and handling. Orders shipped same day received.

HALL OF FAME STUDIOS
1442 Larrabee Street Dept. 103 Chicago, Illinois

Why WEAR DIAMONDS

When diamond-dazzling Zircons from the mines of faraway Mystic Siam are so Effective and Inexpensive? Stand acid, cut glass, full of Fire, true backs, thrilling beauty, exquisite mountings. Examine before you buy. Catalogue FREE.

THE ZIRCON CO.
Dept. 49, Wheeling, W. Va.

FALSE TEETH AS LOW AS $7.95

Per Plate, DENTAL PLATES are made in our own laboratory from your personal impression. Our workmanship and material GUARANTEED or purchase price refunded. We take this risk on our 60-day trial offer. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY! MAIL POST CARD for FREE Material and Catalog of our LOW PRICES. DON'T PUT IT OFF—Write us TODAY!

BRIGHTON - THOMAS DENTAL LABORATORY,
Dept. 1004 6217 S. Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill.

FREE HOLLYWOOD ENLARGEMENT

Just to get acquainted we will make a beautiful PROFESSIONAL enlargement of any snapshot, photo, kodak picture, print or negative to 5 x 7 inch FREE. Please include color of eyes, hair, and clothing for prompt information on a natural, life-like color enlargement in a FREE FRAME to set on the table or dresser. Your original returned with your FREE PROFESSIONAL enlargement. Please send 10c for return mailing—Act Quick.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. 200
HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

derful, of course, but when they cast me in my first picture with Will Rogers, it seemed I'd got everything I wanted. I can still remember how I gulped down the tears . . . they kept coming faster than I could swallow them." Asked what role she's dying to play, Hattie answers without hesitation, "Just any good, juicy part I can sink my teeth into." Which reminds one that anybody who's lucky enough to dig their teeth into Hattie's roast chicken experiences an unforgettable pleasure. "About all you need is plenty of butter and garlic. A sprinkling of flour won't hurt, either. Then chuck it in the oven and go out and get hungry," advises Hattie. She's also an authoritative laundress. "Heaven knows I've done plenty of it. I'll never forget the time a publicity man caught me over my washing machine and snapped the shot. The maker of the washer saw it and offered a tidy bundle of coin to use it for advertising purposes. I was about to turn it down when he said he'd send me one of their big shiny de luxe models free if I'd say yes. What else could I say?" About glamour Hattie is terse . . . and firm. With a grin that stretches like an elastic band she says, "As for those grapefruit and buttermilk diets . . . I'll take roast chicken and dumplings."

SCOREBOARD

(Continued from page 16)

One Foot In Heaven (Warners)	3½★
One Night in Lisbon (Paramount)	3★
Out of the Fog (Warners)	3½★
Parson of Panamint (Paramount)	3★
Passage From Hong Kong (Warners)	2★
Pittsburgh Kid, The (Republic)	2½★
*Playmates (RKO)	3★
Pride and Prejudice (M-G-M)	3½★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal) C	2★
*Remember The Day (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Riders of the Purple Sage (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
*Rise and Shine (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Rookies on Parade (Republic) C	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Saint in Palm Springs, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Sea Hawk, The (Warners)	3½★
Secrets of the Lone Wolf (Columbia)	2½★
Sergeant York (Warners)	4★
Scattergood Pulls the Strings (RKO)	2½★
Shadow of the Thin Man (M-G-M)	2½★
*Shanghai Gesture, The (United Artists)	3½★
She Knew All the Answers (Columbia)	3★
Shepherd of the Hills (Paramount)	3½★
Shining Victory (Warners)	2½★
Sing Another Chorus (Universal)	2★
Skylark (Paramount)	3★
Smiling Ghost, The (Warners)	2½★
South of Tahiti (Universal)	2★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal) C	2½★
Spring Parade (Universal) C	3★
Stork Pays Off, The (Columbia)	2½★
Strange Alibi (Warners)	2½★
Sunset in Wyoming (Republic)	3½★
Sun Valley Serenade (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Suspicion (RKO)	3★
Swamp Water (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Sweetheart of the Campus (Columbia)	2★
Tanks a Million (United Artists)	3★
Texas (Columbia)	3½★
There's Magic in Music (Paramount)	2½★
They Dare Not Love (Columbia)	2★
They Died With Their Boots On (Warners)	3½★
They Drive by Night (Warners)	3★
They Met in Bombay (M-G-M)	3★
Three Girls About Town (Columbia)	2½★
This Woman is Mine (Universal)	2½★
Those Were the Days (Paramount) C	2½★
Tight Shoes (Universal)	3★
Tillie the Toiler (Columbia)	2★
Time Out For Rhythm (Columbia)	2½★
Tom Brown's School Days (RKO) C	3★
Tom, Dick and Harry (RKO)	4★
Too Many Blondes (Universal)	2★
Tugboat Annie Sails Again (Warners)	2½★
Two-Faced Woman (M-G-M)	3½★
Two in a Taxi (Columbia)	2½★
Underground (Warners)	3½★
Unexpected Uncle (RKO)	2½★
Unfinished Business (Universal)	3½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Washington Melodrama (M-G-M)	3★
Weekend for Three (RKO)	3★
Weekend in Havana (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Westerner, The (United Artists) C	3★
When Ladies Meet (M-G-M)	3★
Woman's Face, A (M-G-M)	3½★
You'll Never Get Rich (Columbia)	4★

FREE OFFER!

October and November issues, this department offered you readers 500 free autographed portraits. At the time, 500 sounded generous to us.

But 20,000 of you wrote in!

We were unprepared. So were the motion picture studios. But after a readily understandable delay, all 20,000 requests were honored!

AGAIN WE OFFER 500 FREE AUTOGRAPHED PORTRAITS.* This time, however, it's first come, first served. 500 is all we have. So hurry!

While we're talking, thanks for the intelligent support you've given this questionnaire. You've enabled us to give you the kind of story you like. And to devote all our stories to your favorite stars!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories or features did you enjoy most in our February issue? Write 1, 2, 3 at the right of the titles of your 1st, 2nd, 3rd choice.

My Son Mick (Rooney)	☐	First Love	☐
Million Dollar Cowboy (Autry)	☐	Non-Stop Honeymoon (Reagan)	☐
Location Blues	☐	Days I Remember in 1941 (Power)	☐
Young Man With a Horn (Miller)	☐	"H. M. Pulham, Esq."	☐
Lana Turner	☐	Good News (Gossip)	☐
They Got Me Covered (Bob Hope)	☐	Co-Ed	☐

Which one of the above stories did you like least? .....

What 3 stars would you like to read stories about in future issues? List them 1, 2, 3 in order of preference .....

.....

* Name the star whose autographed portrait you want .....

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, 149 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

The light ale preferred by millions of beer drinkers

MODERN AMERICA—like Early America—counts Ballantine Ale a treasure among drinks for 2 reasons . . .

(1) A lightness surprising in ale.

(2) A flavor found in no other brew . . . flavor which could come only from the finest of ale yeasts.

Call for Ballantine Ale today. Compare it with your favorite beer—for lightness—for flavor. And chances are it's Ballantine from now on! Look for the 3 RINGS standing for PURITY, BODY, FLAVOR—and call for Ballantine Ale. Costs no more than the better beers. Sold coast to coast.

BALLANTINE ALE

PURITY BODY FLAVOR

America's largest selling Ale

P. Ballantine & Sons, Newark, N. J.

Know the Thrill a Lovelier Skin can Brinq You . .

Go on the CAMAY "MILD-SOAP" DIET !

This thrilling idea is based on the advice of skin specialists —praised by lovely brides!

LIKE thousands of other brides whose lovely complexions surely qualify them as beauty experts, Mrs. Conner is devoted to the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet. You, too, can follow her way to greater loveliness!

No woman's skin can be truly beautiful if, unknowingly, she mars it through improper cleansing. Or if she uses a soap that isn't mild enough.

Mrs. Conner's skin is wonderful proof of what proper care can do. "I wouldn't think of neglecting my 'Mild-Soap' Diet routine," she says.

Tests prove Camay milder!

Skin specialists themselves advise a regular cleansing routine with a fine mild soap. And Camay is not only mild —it's actually milder than the 10 other famous beauty soaps tested. That's why we urge you to go on the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet without delay.

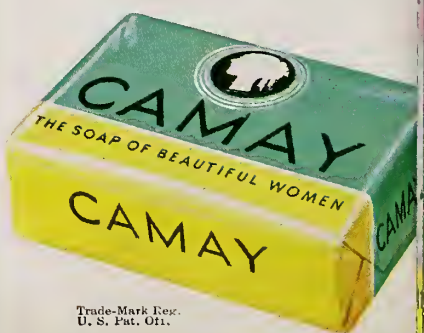
Put your complete trust in Camay. For 30 days use it faithfully night and morning. Your skin will feel fresher at once. And as the days go by you can reasonably expect to see your skin lovelier . . . more appealing.

This charming bride is Mrs. Charles H. Conner, Jr. of Charlotte, N. C., who says: "I don't believe in keeping secrets when it comes to my beauty care. Whenever people admire my complexion I tell them about the 'Mild-Soap' Diet and what a wonderful help it has been."

GO ON THE "MILD-SOAP" DIET TONIGHT!

Get three cakes of Camay today! Start the "Mild-Soap" Diet tonight. Work Camay's lather over your skin, paying special attention to nose, base of nostrils and chin. Rinse with warm water and follow with 30 seconds of cold splashings.

In the morning, one more quick session with Camay and your face is ready for make-up. Do this twice a day for 30 days. Don't neglect it even once. For it's the regular cleansing that reveals the full benefit of Camay's greater mildness.



Trade-Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

FOR 30 DAYS . . . LET NO OTHER SOAP TOUCH YOUR SKIN!

MODERN SCREEN

arch

0

ents

LIBRARY OF CONG
FEB 18
PERIODICAL DIVISION

SONJA HENIE

Earl Christy

NING IN
S ISSUE

FULL-PAGE, 4-COLOR PHOTOS OF BETTY GRABLE . . DENNIS MORGAN

The light ale preferred by millions of beer drinkers

THE lightness of Ballantine's Ale comes as a pleasant surprise to those who still think that ale's on the "heavy" side.

But it's the Ballantine flavor that has won beer drinkers so completely . . . a flavor so superb that it could come only from the very finest of ale yeasts.

Join the Ballantine regulars in a glass today—and chances are you'll decide that from now on you're an ale man yourself.

Look for the 3-RING trademark standing for PURITY, BODY, FLAVOR; and call for Ballantine's Ale. Costs no more than the better beers. Sold coast to coast.

BALLANTINE PURITY BODY FLAVOR ALE

America's largest selling Ale

P. Ballantine & Sons, Newark, N. J.

Smile, Plain Girl, Smile...

you can steal your own Show—if your Smile is Right!

Brighten your teeth and help give your smile a flashing sparkle—with Ipana and massage.

YOU THINK beauty is all-important? Well—look around you, plain girl! Just look at those who are wearing solitaires...getting bridal showers...being married!

Are they all beautiful? No, indeed! But they all know how to smile! Theirs are not timid smiles, self-conscious and shy—but big, warm, heart-winning smiles that say: "I'm glad to be alive!"

So smile, plain girl, smile! You can steal your own show if your smile is right. You can win what you want of life. For heads turn and hearts surrender to the girl with the winning smile.

"Pink Tooth Brush"— A warning Signal

If you want bright, sparkling teeth that you are proud to show, remember this: Gums must retain their healthy firmness.

So if there's ever the slightest tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush, make a date to see your dentist at once! His verdict may simply be that your gums are spongy, tender—robbed of exercise by today's creamy foods. And, like thousands of other modern dentists, he may suggest Ipana and massage.

Take his advice! For Ipana Tooth Paste not only cleans and brightens your teeth but, with massage, it is designed to help the health of your gums as well.

Just massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums every time you clean your teeth. That invigorating "tang" means circulation is quickening in the gum tissue—helping gums to new firmness. Get a tube of economical Ipana Tooth Paste at your druggist's today!

Product of Bristol-Myers

Start today with

IPANA and MASSAGE

FEB 12 1942

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

When the going got toughest, Abe Lincoln said, "With the fearful strain that is upon me night and day, if I did not laugh I should die."

★ ★ ★ ★

The screens of America provide entertainment for all. The movies started as a novelty, learned not to flicker and learned how to talk. They were developed by Americans and conquered the world with their merit.

AMERICA'S MOVIES
JOY AWAITS

★ ★ ★ ★

Go to your favorite theatre. There are many fine films from all movie companies. Sometimes they miss, sometimes they hit, but the average is high.

★ ★ ★ ★

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the leading producer of movies. There are more M-G-M stars than there are stars of all the other companies combined.

★ ★ ★ ★

You have seen the recent films, "H. M. Pulham, Esq." (Lamarr-Young-Hussey), "Woman of the Year" (Tracy-Hepburn) and "Johnny Eager" (Taylor-Turner). If you haven't, they are still playing some place.

★ ★ ★ ★

Each in its way is a masterpiece.

★ ★ ★ ★

Now we should like to recommend "We Were Dancing", which is based in part on the Noel Coward playlets called "Tonight at 8:30"—starring Norma Shearer, Melvyn Douglas.

★ ★

"Mrs. Miniver", based on the novel by Jan Struther, starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon.

★ ★

This screen play is by James Hilton, author of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" and R. C. Sherriff, author of "Journey's End." An exciting collaboration.

Uncle Sam, you can count on me.

—Leo

Advertisement for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures

©C1B 530916

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

Dream City 8
Idyll on Ice—Sonja Henie 26
Long Voyage Home—Stirling Hayden 28
What Would a Psychologist Say About You? 30
Delightful Delirium—Ray Milland 32
Ann Sheridan Marries George Brent! 36
Skippy's Toughest Role—Jackie Cooper 38
The Women Bob Has Loved—Bob Taylor 42
Swell Guy—Clark Gable 44
Both Feet in Heaven—Betty Grable 60
Heaven, Nevada 62

FEATURES

Party of the Month 34
"Woman of the Year" 40
Candidly Yours 56

BEAUTY

Hats Off to Hair-Do's 47
Beauty Goes to Your Head 48
Modern Screen's Hair Beauty Chart 50

FASHION

What Type Are You? 64
Hooray for Gabardine 65
Boots Boots Boots 66

DEPARTMENTS

Movie Reviews 6
Our Puzzle Page 12
Movie Scoreboard 14
Co-Ed 16
Portrait Gallery 19
Good News 52
Modern Hostess 74

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Associate Editor
SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor

Cover:
Sonja Henie

Vol. 24, No. 4, March, 1942. Copyright, 1942, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and South Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year, Canadian subscription $2.00 a year; foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the post office, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second class entries at Seattle, Wash., San Francisco, Calif., Dallas, Texas, Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
presents
THE PICTURE OF THE YEAR!
Spencer TRACY
Katharine HEPBURN
SPENCE PLAYS A HAIL FELLOW SPORTS WRITER NAMED SAM!
KATE PLAYS A HIGHBROW POLITICAL COLUMNIST NAMED TESS!
WOMAN OF THE YEAR
IT'S EITHER LOVE OR FIGHT 'TWIXT SAM AND TESS— AND THEY'RE GOOD AT BOTH!
A GEORGE STEVENS' Production

with FAY BAINTER · REGINALD OWEN · Directed by GEORGE STEVENS
Produced by JOSEPH L. MANKIEWICZ · Screen Play by Ring Lardner, Jr. and Michael Kanin

MOVIE REVIEWS

George Sonders ploys Sir Arthur Blake, sodistic nobleman, in TCF's "Son of Fury."

SON OF FURY

An epic, as such things go in Hollywood, usually contains a gloomy castle, a square-rigged schooner, a high-born lady, an exotic wench and Tyrone Power. "Son of Fury" contains them all in good measure. It's a tale of high adventure racing from London and the docks of Bristol to the South Seas and back to England again. It's swashbuckling romance done with sweep and all the resources Hollywood can command.

Benjamin Blake (Tyrone Power) is the ward of Sir Arthur Blake (George Sanders) who, out of fear that the boy may some day usurp the vast manorial estates of Breetholm, tries to break his spirit. But the boy rebels and at the first chance runs away. His escape carries him to the ship Tropic Star which is sailing for the Pacific. On board he befriends a seaman (John Carradine) and the two decide to jump ship for an island in the South Seas where they hope to make a fortune in pearls.

Benjamin Blake's (Tyrone Power) true love is Gene Tierney, the girl he found on a South Sea isle—the girl he couldn't forget.

Ben finds peace, love and his fortune on the South Sea isle, and years later he returns to England for revenge and to take his rightful place as master of Breetholm. But he is betrayed by the high-born English lady he thought he loved and falls once again into the hands of Sir Arthur. He is brought to trial, charged with attempting to kill his master, and only at the last minute is he cleared. He has his revenge, and as heir to Breetholm, he seemingly has all he might want. But the vision of the peace he knew in the South Seas and the girl (Gene Tierney) he left there haunt him and finally he sails back.

Producer Darryl F. Zanuck spent unstintingly on the production. The South Seas backgrounds are authentic, photographed on the spot; the ocean sequences weren't faked. The castle, the South Sea Island village, the docks of Bristol were all minutely reproduced in the sets. Where the script calls for high, mullioned windows—the windows are high and, by heaven, they're mullioned to the Queen's taste.

It's a costume picture, of course, since the time of the action is around 1790. It was a colorful period, a time of violent contrasts, when the slums of Bristol huddled between vast manorial estates and proud square-riggers in the harbor. Tyrone Power always cuts a fine figure in tight pants and a jerkin, and in "Son of Fury" he gets to wear a variety of costumes including a (Continued on page 9)

P. S.

Tyrone Power shivered and sniffled his way through the island scenes in a pareu, the male version of a sarong . . . 20th Century-Fox spent more than $2,000,000 on this one during the 113 days it was being filmed . . . The "castle" took up four sound stages, cost $50,000 to build . . . 14,000 simoleons checked off as the cost of the South Sea Island village. (You can build the real thing in Tahiti for one-seventh of that sum) . . The water front of Bristol, England, circa 1800, took $40,000 out of the budget . . . George Sanders refused to read the script ahead of time, asked that his part be handed to him a page at a time every day. Says he likes suspense. Wears trousers so tight, it took four men to hoist him onto his horse . . . Gene Tierney danced the Pao'a for ten days straight, woke up the 11th morning with a "charlie horse" and a severe case of the flu . . . The ceremonial number was staged by Auggie Goupil, whose Tahitian recordings are considered tops by platter-collectors . . . Frances Farmer was the final choice for the jinx role, Isabel. Both Maureen O'Hara and Cobina Wright, Jr., were announced for the part, but both fell seriously ill before they had a chance to start work . . . Farmer's boy friend in the picture, Marten Lamont, edited the magazine Arts and Architecture before turning actor a few months ago . . . Composer Alfred Newman used two leitmotifs in the musical score —a fast tempo for the English scenes, and a slower, dreamy melody for the South Sea Island sequences . . . Technical adviser Maj. G. O. T. Bagley had the same job for "Mutiny on the Bounty" . . . Director John Cromwell's wife returned to pictures in one of the "Son of Fury" roles.. She's Kay Johnson, who used to star for Cecil B. deMille before she gave up the cinema for marriage. Takes one movie job a year and spends the rest of the time with her children . . . It's no unintentional error. Script writers deliberately went off the historical beam and let Ty Power kiss Gene Tierney, instead of rubbing noses, the correct style of Polynesian love-making.

Ty and John Carradine played cards between "Son of Fury" takes. John's boot is in government service.

Frances Farmer gets another fat role as the high-born English lady who betrays Blake on his return to England.

Underneath the glitter, the bounce, the razzle-dazzle, Hollywood's a 1942-model streamlined Shangri-La!

DREAM CITY . . .

BY HUGH ROBERTS

● There was a time, exactly eight years ago, when several million Americans would have given all their earthly possessions to live in a place called Shangri-La—and when exactly 650,000 people did live in that place and didn't know it!

Eight years ago was the time a quiet English author named James Hilton wrote a book called "Lost Horizon." Into the ink of his pages he poured out the story of a mythical city, Shangri-La—a refuge from the murderous madness of the world, a haven for intellect, beauty, peace, moderation, a storehouse for the best of books, music, painting, learning, science.

One day, just after the book had become a best-seller and just before it became a movie with Ronald Colman, I met James Hilton, and I asked him a question. I asked him—

"Is there, on this earth, really such a place as Shangri-La?"

He shrugged. "I don't know. Maybe there is. But, as yet, I haven't found it. That's why, in my book, I placed Shangri-La in unexplored Tibet. It's too utopian to be known by man. It's a dream city. And, if I ever find one like it, I'll leave London. I'll move to it."

Well, apparently Mr. Hilton did find his dream city. Because he finally left London—at a period when London was happy and peaceful—and moved to his Shangri-La.

In brief, James Hilton is now a resident of Hollywood, along with 650,000 other persons who dwell within its 24 square miles.

Now, this may come as a surprise to you. I mean, referring to Hollywood as a Shangri-La. You may still think of it in terms of a lot of sensational nonsense, mostly untrue and largely concerning illiterates, swimming pools, scandals—but, believe me, that picture of Hollywood is as old-fashioned as a (Continued on page 94) pareu, which is a sort of male variant of the sarong.

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 7)

In his day Benjamin Blake covered a good deal of territory, and his fortunes rose and fell. The camera follows his adventures faithfully from change of scene to change of scene, from fight to fight. It's a cut from the same cloth as "Anthony Adverse" and "Mutiny on the Bounty," and those provided thrills enough for armchair adventurers in movie houses through the country. There's something satisfying in watching a square-rigger plow through towering seas, wind-swept and lashed with rain.

Especially if the theater is steam heated.—TCF.

KINGS ROW

The Typical American Town, like the Average Man, is a convenient myth. No town is typical except of itself, and the town of Kings Row, at the turn of the century, was no exception. It had more than its rightful share of eccentrics. Insanity, perversion, fanaticism run a bright scarlet thread through the stodgy cloth.

On the surface Kings Row is typical enough, a thriving little town, advertising itself: "A good town. A good clean town. A good town to live in and a good place to raise your children." Kings Row has its good houses and its shantytown across the tracks; the grass grows green in its fields, and its pretty little lanes wind through pleasant scenery. But there's rottenness and horror, and the sun never reaches some of the dark corners.

For the story attempts to rip away the curtain and lay bare the twisted minds and hidden tragedies of the people of Kings Row. There's ugliness and evil under the surface that the placid day-to-day life in this small town cannot hide.

It's a chronicle story following the careers of a half dozen or so of Kings Row citizens. There's Parris Mitchell who leaves Kings Row for a while to become a doctor and returns to find his best friend, Drake McHugh, crippled and half-dead and married to Randy Monaghan, the girl from across the tracks. There's Louise Gordon, Drake's early love, whose life is almost twisted into wreckage by the ugly accident that befalls Drake. There's Cassandra Tower, Parris Mitchell's frightened, ill-fated sweetheart.

The plots cross and criss-cross, and Kings Row leaves none of them untouched. It's not a very pleasant story, but it's the strong, red meat of drama.

It's a story of blasted hopes and suffering, but through it runs the theme of human courage. It's the story of the young doctor, Parris Mitchell, who finds that medicine ". . . is a game in which man pits his brain against the forces of destruction and disease. . ." The char-

(Continued on page 10)

"I'm in the Dog-House— the Boss has 'Fire' in his Eye!"

Ada: And you can't guess why you're in the dog-house, Jane? Well my pet, you're decorative to the eye, and you're a speed demon for work. But, Jane, you're guilty of one careless, unforgivable little fault!

Jane: Now don't "underarm odor" me—or friendship ceases. You know I'd rather skip breakfast than miss my morning bath!

Ada: Foolish girl—why trust your bath to last all day! Use speedy Mum under each arm—if you want to stay flower-fresh!

Jane: So that's why the perfect secretary is withering on the job. I am ashamed!

Jane: (later) Mum's marvelous for my speedy morning routine! 30 seconds and I'm through. And business day or gala evening, I'm free from worry—safe from offending. And the boss is smiling these days!

Mum takes just half a minute—keeps underarms fresh for hours!
Mum prevents underarm odor, without stopping perspiration.
Mum won't irritate skin—won't harm clothes. Get Mum today!

For Sanitary Napkins—A gentle, dependable deodorant is a "must" for this purpose. Try Mum this way, too.

MUM

Takes the Odor Out of Perspiration

PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

(Continued from page 9)

acters move through darkness and despair, but they reach the light. Even Drake McHugh, at the end of the picture, can say: "I am the master of my fate, I am the captain of my soul."

Warner's gambled in the production, for you'll find no big names in the cast. Robert Cummings and Ronald Reagan play Parris Mitchell and Drake McHugh; Ann Sheridan is Randy Monaghan. There are even a few new faces—Nancy Coleman and Kaaren Verne. They're backed up by old performers like Claude Rains, Charles Coburn, Judith Anderson and Maria Ouspenskaya. But Warner's is depending on the story to carry the picture.

"Kings Row" is off the beaten track of movie fare. It moves into a strange field, not very far perhaps, but far enough; you may not like it all, but the theme is moving and daring. There's life in "Kings Row," raw, red and angry.—W. B.

P. S.

Boner-spotters are going to waste 2 hours and 36 minutes watching "Kings Row." It's the most authentic picture ever made about the period of 1890-1904. . . . Dramatic license is responsible for the only error—the artist's collars worn by Bob Cummings. The fancy neckpieces actually didn't come into style until much later, but Director Sam Wood okayed them because they aided Bob in his characterization. . . . Actors and set workers had to be cautioned not to pick any of the 6,000 apples on the orchard set. The fruit was individually attached to the trees; every apple ruined for eating by the wire plugged through its core. . . . Annie Sheridan buckled down to business and burned the midnight oil studying her part—her most dramatic role to date. . . . To Be Read With Tongue-in-Cheek: "Ronald Reagan has always wanted to be a side show barker, and will spend his next two-week layoff doing just that at a county fair in Vermont." . . . Author Henry Bellamann made a special trip to Hollywood to confer with Composer Erich Wolfgang Korngold on the musical score for the picture. . . . The role of Cassandra, though small, was coveted by every actress in town. Bette Davis fought for it, Ida Lupino pleaded for it, Betty Field won it. . . . Mrs. P. N. Cheng, wife of an official of the Chungking Government, spent three months studying film technique. Watched every phase of the production of "King's Row" from the day it started until a rough cut of the film was run off just ten hours after the cameras caught the final scene. Mrs. Cheng will produce pictures herself as soon as she returns to China. . . . The sun shining on the artificial snow gave Ronald Reagan a severe case of snow-blindness. . . . Harry Davenport intrigued every set visitor with his weird-looking hair. His snow-white locks were bedaubed with cheek rouge so they'd photograph a softer shade. . . . Stage 7 was turned into a railroad yard with more than 1500 feet of track criss-crossed all over the place, a passenger station, freight depot, signal tower and old-fashioned crossing gate complete with flagman.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS

The Sullivan of "Sullivan's Travels" is a movie director who becomes fed up with making funny pictures. S. N. Behrman, you may recall, treated the same theme in "No Time For Comedy," but the similarity ends there. Preston Sturges, who wrote and directed "Sullivan's Travels," works with rowdy comedy, slapstick and a slight mixture of drama and sentiment. This is no drawing room comedy.

Sullivan's Odyssey in search of trouble as material for his epic of garbage pails, stark realism and human suffering with "just a little sex in it" makes for hilarious situations. Sullivan has a provoking way of ending up back in Hollywood, back at the gilt and gold swimming pool or back at the land yacht, filled with the publicity agent, chef, candid camera man and chauffeur, that the studio kindly provides for his travels. Sullivan gets to see the world—but it's all through the gold-flecked pupils of the Hollywood eye.

In the Sturges manner the film pokes some mild fun at Hollywood. The epic of misery Sullivan is intent on making is called "For Whom The Night Falls"; and as the producer says, "Go ahead and make it, at what you're getting, I can't afford to argue with you." The girl in the picture asks Sullivan: "Is Hitchcock as fat as they say he is?" Sullivan says:

FOR FIVE OUT OF SEVEN WOMEN . . .

New Loveliness in Three Minutes!

These days when beauty means so much, use Matched Makeup—color-coordinated Marvelous Powder, Rouge, Lipstick . . . by Richard Hudnut!

• Color harmony in makeup, cosmetic experts say, is the secret of natural beauty. Yet recent surveys show that the majority of women unknowingly use powder, lipstick and rouge never intended to go together.

To solve this problem, Richard Hudnut developed a new idea in cosmetics—Marvelous Matched Makeup. It consists of powder, lipstick, rouge in color-coordinated shades. A mere three minutes . . . and instant new beauty is yours!

A face powder, perfect for today's busy women!

Marvelous Face Powder is fine-textured—gives a delicate, natural finish. And it stays on smoothly up to five full hours, thanks to two special adhering ingredients . . . ingredients so pure they're often advised for sensitive skins.

Try Marvelous Face Powder . . . and for the added beauty of a matched makeup, try Marvelous Rouge and Lipstick, too. In true-to-type shades—one just right for you! At your favorite cosmetic counter. Large sizes 55¢ each.

USE THIS VALUABLE COUPON!

Richard Hudnut, Dept. M, 693 Fifth Ave., New York City MM-3-42

Please send me metal, purse Makeup Kit containing harmonizing powder, rouge and lipstick. I enclose 10¢ to help cover expense of handling and mailing.

*The color of my eyes is*_____ *hair*_____ *skin*_____

Name_____

Street_____ City_____

(Good only in U. S. A., except where legally prohibited.)

Hudnut MARVELOUS

Matching ROUGE, LIPSTICK AND THE POWDER THAT Stays on 5 Hours

"Fatter." And then again: "Do you think Orson Welles is crazy?" "In a very practical way," Sullivan answers. Among other things, "Sullivan's Travels" keeps you up to date on your Hollywood gossip.

Boiled down, "Sullivan's Travels" is a string of gags and situations in the best old-time Hollywood comedy manner. They're strung on the slim idea of Sullivan's attempts to find trouble; there's a glorified chase sequence and a mass dunking scene in Sullivan's Hollywood swimming pool. But it's all put together with a cunning and knowing hand. Preston Sturges knows what makes people laugh.

Towards the end, the picture falls into a serious, dramatic complication, but that's only because the story must be wound up in some way. And Sturges handles the drama to point up his comedy. Don't worry about Sullivan. Sullivan belongs in Hollywood and that's where he ends up.

Joel McCrea plays Sullivan and Veronica Lake, the Bombshell of yesteryear, plays a slightly less explosive role. Some old familiar faces from previous Sturges pictures are on hand again, and the supporting cast is full of old, tried comedy characters; you'll find Raymond Walburn, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Porter Hall and Eric Blore up to their old tricks.

There's a dedication at the end of the picture that's worth quoting. Says Sullivan: "To the memory of those who made us laugh—the motley mountebanks, the clowns, the buffoons in all times and in all nations, whose efforts lightened our burden a little in this cockeyed caravan—this picture is affectionately dedicated."

Go to it, Sturges!—Par.

P. S.

Super-siren Veronica Lake's stream of blond hair stays tucked under a cap, and her pear-shaped chassis remains hidden beneath men's clothes during most of the picture—Director Preston Sturges' way of casting against type. . . . Joel McCrea always finds a fight scene in his scripts. This time it's a rock-throwing brawl. . . . One of the most important characters in the picture hasn't a word of dialogue. Georges Renavent plays the part of the Old Bum entirely in pantomime . . . Running him a very close second for taciturnity is Harry Rosenthal, who has only one word of dialogue—"Amateurs"—muttered while watching McCrea and Miss Lake pitch a little woo in a box car. . . . Harry owns one of Hollywood's most popular music shops, is one of the fleetest-fingered pianists in the country, and does bit parts in every one of friend Sturges' films. . . . Others in the Sturges Stock Company—the people Preston uses in most of his pictures—are: Robert Warwick, William Demarest, Robert Greig, Franklin Pangborn, Eric Blore, Torben Meyer, Victor Potel, Esther Howard, Jimmy Conlin. . . . Veronica's parents

(Continued on page 13)

New Loveliness Awaits You! Go on the CAMAY "MILD-SOAP" DIET!

This lovely bride is Mrs. E. C. Thuston, Jr., of Birmingham, Ala. who says: "I'm so proud of my complexion since I changed to the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet!"*

This exciting idea is based on the advice of skin specialists — it has helped thousands of lovely brides!

NEW LOVELINESS may await you in the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet. For you may be blissfully unaware that you are cleansing your skin improperly. Or that you are using a beauty soap that isn't mild enough.

Everywhere you'll find charming brides like Mrs. Thuston who have trusted the care of their complexions to the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet. All are visible proof that this thrilling beauty treatment really works for loveliness!

Skin specialists themselves advise regular cleansing with a fine mild soap. And Camay is not only mild—it's actually milder than the ten famous beauty soaps tested. That's why we urge you to "Go on the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet!"

Be faithful! Use gentle Camay night and morning for 30 days. With the very first treatment you'll feel your skin glow with new freshness. Then, as the days go by, thrilling new loveliness may be yours!

GO ON THE "MILD-SOAP" DIET TONIGHT!

Work Camay's milder lather over your skin, paying special attention to the nose, the base of nostrils and chin. Rinse with warm water and follow with thirty seconds of cold splashings.

Then, while you sleep, the tiny pore openings are free to function for natural beauty. In the morning—one more quick session with this milder Camay and your skin is ready for make-up.

Which "FINGERTYPE" are you?

Glamour Type

A dramatic, colorful personality such as yours calls for vivid, exciting colors in costume and accessories. Best nail-polish shades are the deep, exotic Dr. Ellis' Burgundy, Congo Brown and Toreador!

Career Type?

Making your own way in the world ... yet ready for a good time? Then, yours are the rich, warm, medium shades of Dr. Ellis' Nail Polish ... appealing colors like Coffee, Heather and Red Cedar!

*S.S. and G. Type?

*Sweet, Simple and Girlish? You're the all-around American girl! Dr. Ellis' Skytone, Clover Buds and Cameo Pink are best suited to your demure appeal. Stick to the gay, light tones!

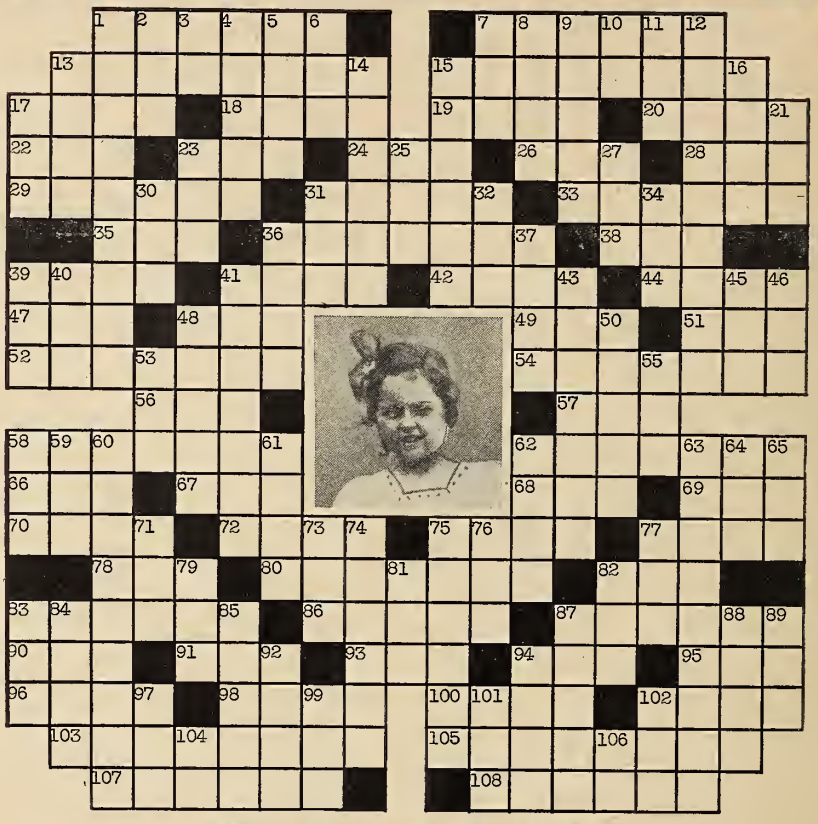
10¢ (PLUS TAX)

Dr. Ellis' Nail Polish comes in 18 smart new shades. Low in cost—yet supreme in quality! Choose YOUR Dr. Ellis "Fingertype Shade" at your nearest 5 & 10-cent store.

DR. ELLIS SALES CO., INC.
PITTSBURGH, PA. · TORONTO, ONT.

Dr. Ellis' NAIL POLISH

OUR PUZZLE PAGE



Puzzle Solution on Page 112

ACROSS

1. Actress in "Honky Tonk"
7. Heroine in "They Died With Their Boots On"
13. The star pictured
15. Femme in "Doctors Don't Tell"
17. "Man of - - - -"
18. Leading lady of "Sullivan's Travels"
19. In "Arsenic And Old Lace"
20. One of "The Men In Her Life"
22. Comic in "Keep 'Em Flying"
23. A Merry Mac in "Melody Lane"
24. What Sonja does in "Sun Valley Serenade"
26. Life in the abstract
28. "Kings - - -"
29. Vipers
31. Male lead in "Go West, Young Lady"
33. Character actor in "The Male Animal"
35. Other woman in "Bedtime Story"
36. Miss Jones in "Bahes On Broadway"
38. Foot-like part
39. Glamorous actress
41. Nelson Eddy's new leading lady
42. A great film personality
44. Princely Italian family
47. Emote
48. Actor in "Moon Over Her Shoulder"
49. Affirmative vote
51. Female sheep
52. Emotion
54. Male lead in "Ice-Capades Of 1941"
56. Consume
57. An eternity
58. Republic of the U. S. S. R.
62. Has title role in "A Date With The Falcon"
66. Brazilian money unit
67. She sings in "Panama Hattie"
68. Employ
69. "The Great - - -"
70. Sums up
72. Bite off by degrees
75. On the sheltered side
77. First name of 13 Across
78. What Asta is
80. M-G-M's great tap dancer
82. Knock lightly
83. In "Go West, Young Lady"
86. She's great in "Blues In The Night"
87. Our star's married name
90. Peer Gynt's mother
91. Confronted
93. Dolores - - - Rio
94. Director of "Kings Row"
95. Extinct ostrich
96. "Our Gang's" dog
98. Great lake
100. Give forth
102. Actor in "Four Jacks And A Jill"
103. She's in "Design For Scandal"
105. Villain in "Paris Calling"
107. Singing star of "The Chocolate Soldier"
108. Be indignant at

DOWN

1. Star of "Remember The Day"
2. "The Wolf Man"
3. Article
4. Whiles away time
5. Ingenue, Barbara - - - -
6. Large deer
7. Gilbert R - - -nd
8. "The - - - - Ranger"
9. Femme lead in "Frisco Lil"
10. Lynne Car - - r
11. Daughter of Cadmus
12. Feminine film players
13. Helen Broderick's actor-son
14. Wife of "Sergeant York"
15. Extremely hard substances
16. English school
17. Wing
21. Is indebted for
23. Aviator-actor: John - - - nt
25. Comedian in "Fifty Million Nickels"
27. Dine
30. Miss LeGallienne
31. Elastic, air-like fluid
32. Trap
34. "Wild - - - se Calling"
36. Star of "Birth Of The Blues"
37. Opposite 22 Across
39. "A Yank In The - - -"
40. Frost
41. Raving
43. A feature film
45. Our star has - - - children
46. Even: poet.
48. Mrs. William Powell
50. Solitary
53. Bronwen in "How Green Was My Valley"
55. Where Vivien Leigh was born: abbr.
58. Constellation
59. Made a hit in "Whistling In The Dark"
60. Our star's hubby in "Lady For A Night"
61. - - - - Gwynne
62. Petitioner
63. Kathryn Grayson's means of marriage
64. Inlet
65. Young Chinese actor
71. Film producer
73. Eddie - - - ert
74. Eradicated
75. Horn
76. With Powell in "Shadow Of The Thin Man"
77. Lower part of the face
79. Jewel
81. Goddess of mischief
82. Young man in "Niagara Falls"
83. Chart
84. River in Bohemia
85. Staggers
87. Lanes
88. Miss
89. C - - - re Dodd
92. The Andrews sisters form this
94. Location
97. Compass point
99. "Jamaica - - -"
101. Disfigure
102. Newspaper man in "Confirm Or Deny"
104. A Ritz brother
106. Exist

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 11)

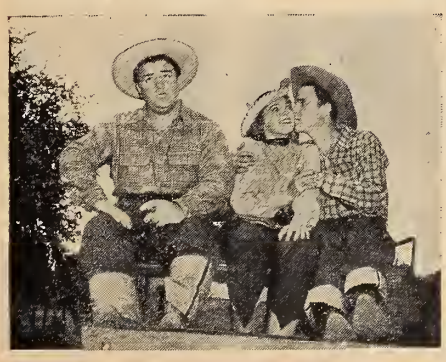
have dubbed her "Gertie Glamour"; studio pals call her "Ronnie.". . . The 100x40-foot swimming pool is a private one, rented by the studio. Fee of $500 a day goes to charity. . . . The swimming faces effect in the court room scene was accomplished by photographing through a 1000-watt electric light globe while it was being revolved slowly. . . . McCrea spent all his days off fishing at his favorite spot—a place in the High Sierras called Dinky Creek. . . . Veronica's favorite likeness of herself is a caricature done by Arthur Crouch, who uses pieces of cloth and bits of this'n'that to augment his paintings. Crouch, a friend of Vernica's artist-father, made it especially for her. Used heavy, vivid yellow yarn for her hair. . . . Chick Collins and Jimmie Dundee, veteran stunt men, get screen credit as actors for the first time in their lives. They're the rough-and-tumblers who stage a battle atop a fast-moving freight train. . . . For the scene requiring gallons of milk to be dumped on the ground, the studio manufactured its own. Whitewash. . . . The Academy Award Oscar standing on the desk of the producers' office is Sturges', won last year for "The Great McGinty.". . . Veronica's character in the picture has no name. From Reel One to Finis, she's known only as The Girl.

RIDE 'EM COWBOY

"Ride 'Em Cowboy," as you can tell easily enough from the title, gets Abbott and Costello on a horse. While a horse is a bit smaller than a battleship, the results are apt to be just as funny. And why not a horse? They've been practically everywhere else.

It doesn't really matter where they are; they have their own brand of fun, culled from 11 years of knockabout humor. They pull their routines as easily in the wild West as in a haunted house or a draftees' barracks.

There's a poker-playing sequence in this one (remember the dice-rolling scene in "Buck Privates"?), and Lou Costello becomes involved with a lasso and a wild horse. He also has some trouble with a high diving board and a buxom Indian maid called Moonbeam. It all makes sense; or at least the kind of sense that moon-faced Costello and hawk-nosed Abbott usually make.



Lou Costello, in his whirlwind series of pictures, has built a comic character for himself, and this picture plays his frailties and virtues to the utmost. He's still the same believing buffoon, getting into trouble for no reason at all except that trouble and Bud Abbott seem to pick on him. He still has those sudden flights of courage and alternate fear. If a fly-

(Continued on page 15)

Old-Fashioned Skin-Care

Once women had to use many creams and lotions to keep skin healthy and attractive.

Modern Skin-Care

Today all you need to help keep your skin fresh, young-looking, is one amazing cream!

Does Your one Face Cream do all these 4 Vital Things?

1. Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream thoroughly cleanses the skin, removing every trace of clinging dirt.

2. Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream relieves dryness and flaking—leaves the skin wonderfully soft.

3. Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream helps nature refine the pores—leaves the skin delightfully fresh. No astringents are needed.

4. Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream smooths the skin—prepares it beautifully for powder and for make-up.

WHAT DOES the face cream you use really do for your skin? Never mind what it claims to do for others—what does it do for you?

Why continue using a cream that does only a "half-way" job? Lady Esther Face Cream is scientifically designed to serve 4 vital needs of your skin. It's all you need—it asks no help of other creams or lotions. This one cream, by itself, helps keep your skin looking its youngest, smoothest and loveliest at all times!

Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream is different from any cream you've ever used. For it's based on an entirely new and different principle—simplified skin-care. Try it! See for yourself how much fresher, cleaner, smoother it leaves your skin after the very first application.

Send for Generous Tube

Mail coupon below for a generous tube of my face cream! See for yourself why more and more lovely women every day are turning to Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream!

Lady Esther 4-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

LADY ESTHER, (76)
7110 West 65th Street, Chicago, Ill.

Send me by return mail a generous tube of 4-Purpose Face Cream; also 9 new shades of powder. I enclose 10¢ for packing and mailing.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Toronto, Ont.)

SHE'S Kissable

SHE'S Irresistible

SHE USES IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME AND LIPSTICK

There's a tantalizing 'come-hither' note . . . a bright promise of gay adventure in the fairy-like enchantment of Irresistible Perfume. Create a magic mood by touching the golden fire of Irresistible to your hair, throat, wrist. Now in adorable Valentine Box.

Only 10¢ at all 5 & 10¢ stores

USE IRRESISTIBLE LIPSTICK

Brilliant new reds and ruby tones. The lipstick that's WHIP-TEXT to stay on longer . . . smoother . . . . . 10¢

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults. Asterisk shows that only Modern Screen rating is given on films not yet reviewed by newspapers as we go to press.

Picture	General Rating
All That Money Can Buy (RKO)	3½★
Among The Living (Paramount)	3★
Apache Kid (Republic)	3★
Arizona Bound (Monogram)	C 2½★
Babes on Broadway (M-G-M)	4★
Bad Man of Deadwood (Republic)	2½★
Bahama Passage (Paramount)	3½★
Boll of Fire (RKO)	3½★
Belle Starr (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Birth of the Blues (Paramount)	3★
Blonde from Singapore, The (Columbia)	2★
Blues In the Night (Warners)	3★
Borrowed Hero (Monogram)	2★
Bowery Blitzkrieg (Monogram)	2★
Bride Came C. O. D., The (Warners)	3½★
Burma Convoy (Universal)	2½★
Buy Me That Town (Poramount)	3★
Cadet Girl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Caught in the Droft (Paramount)	3★
Chorley's Aunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chan in Rio (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Confessions of Boston Blackie (Columbio)	2½★
Confirm or Deny (20th Century-Fox)	3★
County Fair (Republic)	2★
Cracked Nuts (Universal)	2½★
Dance Holl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Death Volley Outlaws (Republic)	2½★
Doctor's Don't Tell (Republic)	2★
Dumbo (RKO)	C 3½★
Ellery Queen and the Murder Ring (Columbia)	2½★
Father Takes a Wife (RKO)	2½★
Feminine Touch, The (M-G-M)	3★
Flying Cadets (Universal)	2★
Forbidden Trails (Monogram)	2★
Forgotten Village, The	3½★
Gay Falcon, The (RKO)	2½★
Go West, Young Lady (Columbia)	2★
Great Guns (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Gunman from Bodie, The (Monogram)	2★
Harman of Michigan (Columbia)	2★
Hellzapoppin' (Universal)	3½★
Henry Aldrich for President (Paramount)	C 3★
Here Comes Mr. Jordan (Columbia)	4★
H. M. Pulham, Esq. (M-G-M)	3★
Hold Back the Dawn (Paramount)	3½★
Honeymoon Deferred (Universal)	2½★
Honky Tonk (M-G-M)	3★
How Green Was My Valley (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Hulabaloo (M-G-M)	2★
Hurry, Charlie, Hurry (RKO)	2½★
Ice-Capades (Republic)	2½★
If I Had My Way (Universal)	C 3★
I'll Wait For You (M-G-M)	2½★
In The Navy (Universal)	3½★
Internotional Lady (United Artists)	3★
International Squadron (Warners)	3½★
I Take This Woman (M-G-M)	2★
Jesse James at Bay (Republic)	2½★
Johnny Eager (M-G-M)	3½★
Jungle Book, The (United Artists)	4★
Kathleen (M-G-M)	3★
Keep 'Em Flying (Universal)	3★
Kid From Kansas (Universal)	2★
Knockout (Worners)	2½★
Knute Rockne—All American (Warners)	C 3½★
Ladies in Retirement (Columbia)	3½★
Lady Be Good (M-G-M)	3★
Lady is Willing, The (Columbio)	2½★
Land of Liberty (M-G-M)	3★
Last of the Duanes (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Law of the Tropics (Warners)	2½★
Look Who's Laughing (RKO)	2½★
Louisiano Purchase (Paramount)	3½★
Lydia (United Artists)	3½★
Maltese Falcon, The (Warners)	3½★
Man ot Large (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Mon From Montana (Universol)	2½★
Man Who Came to Dinner, The (Poramount)	3½★
Manpower (Warners)	3★
Married Bachelor (M-G-M)	3★
Marry The Boss's Daughter (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Men in Her Life, The (Columbio)	3★
Mercy Island (Republic)	2½★
Million Dollor Boby (Warners)	3½★
Mob Town (Universal)	2★
Moon Over Burma (Paramount)	2½★
Moon Over Her Shoulder (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Moon Over Miami (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Moonlight in Hawoii (Universal)	2½★
My Life with Caroline (RKO)	3★
Novy Blues (Warners)	C 3★
Never Give A Sucker An Even Break (Universal)	3★
New York Town (Paramount)	2★
Night of January 16 (Paramount)	3★
Nine Lives Are Not Enough (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
No Honds on the Clock (Paromount)	2½★
Officer and the Lady, The (Columbia)	2½★
One Foot in Heaven (Worners)	3½★
Out of the Fog (Warners)	3½★
Parson of Panamint (Paramount)	3★
Pittsburgh Kid, The (Republic)	2½★
Playmates (RKO)	3★
Queen of the Mob (Paramount)	3★
Quiet Wedding (Universal)	3½★
Ragtime Cowboy Joe (Universal)	C 2★
Remember The Day (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Riders of the Purple Sage (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Rise and Shine (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Royal Mounted Patrol, The (Columbia)	2½★
Sailor's Lady (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Sailors on Leave (Republic)	2★
Saint in Palm Springs, The (RKO)	2½★
Saint's Double Trouble, The (RKO)	2½★
Secrets of the Lone Wolf (Columbia)	2½★
Sergeant York (Worners)	4★
Shadow of the Thin Man (M-G-M)	2½★
Shonghoi Gesture, The (United Artists)	3½★
Shepherd of the Hills (Poramount)	3½★
Sing Another Chorus (Universal)	2★
Sing for Your Supper (Columbia)	2★
Skylark (Paramount)	3★
Smiling Ghost, The (Warners)	2½★
Smilin' Through (M-G-M)	3★
South of Tohiti (Universal)	2★
Spirit of Culver, The (Universal)	C 2½★
Stork Pays Off, The (Columbia)	2½★
Sundown (United Artists)	2½★
Sunset in Wyoming (Republic)	3½★
Sun Valley Serenade (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Swamp Water (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Sweetheart of the Campus (Columbio)	2★
Tanks a Million (United Artists)	3★
Tarzan's Secret Treasure (M-G-M)	2½★
Texas (Columbia)	3½★
They Dare Not Love (Columbia)	2★
They Died With Their Boots On (Warners)	3½★
They Met in Bombay (M-G-M)	3★
Three Girls About Town (Colombio)	2½★
This Woman is Mine (Universol)	2½★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Tight Shoes (Universal)	3★
Tillie the Toiler (Columbia)	2★
Time Out For Rhythm (Columbio)	2½★
Tom, Dick and Harry RKO)	4★
Tonto Basin Outlaws (Monogram)	2★
Too Many Blondes (Universal)	2★
Two-Faced Womon (M-G-M)	3½★
Two in a Taxi (Columbia)	2½★
Underground (Warners)	3½★
Unholy Partners (M-G-M)	2½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Washington Melodrama (M-G-M)	3★
Weekend for Three (RKO)	3★
Weekend in Havana (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Westerner, The (United Artists)	C 3★
When Ladies Meet (M-G-M)	3★
Wolf Man, The (Universol)	2½★
Woman's Foce, A (M-G-M)	3½★
You Belong to Me (Columbia)	3★
You'll Never Get Rich (Columbia)	4★
You're In The Army Now (Warners)	2★

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

weight of a girl can go diving off the high board, well so can he—until he gets up there and looks down. And he still has his own brand of logic; when he finally does go off he doesn't come up again because no one told him to. Lou Costello can be very funny—and Bud Abbott is the man to make him.

Universal hasn't spared in the production or the supporting cast. The Andrews Sisters aren't in this one—but the Merry Macs are. Ella Fitzgerald fills a spot or two with song, including her old favorite, "A Tisket, A Tasket." There's plenty of singing on the sage in "Ride 'Em Cowboy."

The plot? It has to do with a writer of cowboy stories and cowboy songs (Dick Foran) who has never been west of the Hudson. For the love of a girl (Anne Gwynne) and to save his soul, he decides to stop being a phony and really learn to do all the things he writes about. There are complications and some heartbreak and a lot of misunderstanding all exploding finally in a big Wild West Rodeo where the hero redeems himself. Samuel S. Hinds, Johnny Mack Brown and Douglas Dumbrille are all involved in one way or another.

But as usual the plot is just an interlude between the Abbott and Costello gags and that's as it should be. A little singing, a little love interest, a little dancing never hurts. But the big news is that Abbott and Costello are wrestling with a horse.

The horse is the one with four legs.—Univ.

P. S.

Abbott and Costello's answer to the front office command to take riding lessons for this one: "We can be funnier without 'em.". . . When it came time to shoot the scene showing the boys riding bucking broncos, they were convinced they were doing another version of "Keep 'Em Flying." . . . Universal couldn't find an Indian with an Oxford accent, so Douglas Dumbrille was hired and sent to the beach to get a heavy tan. . . . A. and C. turned the tables on their Indian pals and made Redman Iron Eyes an honorary white man. Crowned him with a derby and presented him with a 12-inch cigar. . . . Top casting headache was finding enough musicians to play their instruments while riding horses in the rodeo parade. . . . 30 wild steers kept 20 experienced "wranglers" busy keeping them under control between takes. . . . Five different locations were used—places like the B-Bar-A Ranch near Newhall, Rancho Chihuahua in Solemint Canyon, and the Iverson Ranch. Players and crew stowed away 22 barrels of lemonade, 3,000 chickens and 7,000 sandwiches on these jaunts. . . . The Merry Macs are turned loose on "The Hut Sut Song" again, this time in a nightmare sequence. . . . Swing-singer Ella "I Want the Waiter With the Water" Fitzgerald faces the cameras for the first time, playing a cook on the dude ranch. . . . Bud and Lou used their identical two-bedroom trailers for the first time during location trips to Ravenna, where Universal had built a complete Indian village. . . . Samuel S. Hinds plays a dual role—portrays General Custer and an owner of an Arizona dude ranch. There's no chance of fans recognizing him in either part, though, because of the moustaches and make-up he wears for both characterizations.

(Continued on page 105)

"Baby" your face at bedtime to WAKE UP LOVELIER!

Doctors advise "baby-care" for your complexion

Each night give your face this gentle Ivory soap-and-water care advised by doctors for the World's Most Perfect Complexion—baby's own!

Bedtime beauty-care, now more than ever, means Ivory Soap. For the quick cream lather of New "Velvet-Suds" Ivory is gentler than ever to your skin. Actually, New Ivory is milder than 10 leading toilet soaps!

99 44/100 % PURE • IT FLOATS

IS YOUR SKIN DRY, sensitive? You should "baby" it with this gentle, New Ivory night-time routine: Cream lukewarm Ivory lather well into your skin with gentle fingertip massage. Warm rinses—pat dry. Since your skin lacks sufficient oil, apply lightly a little cold cream. Doctors advise gentle Ivory cleansing!

IS YOUR SKIN OILY? Then you'll want New Ivory's richer, creamier lather to remove excess oil. Every night: With a rough washcloth, lather up lukewarm Ivory velvet suds—¼-inch lather simply creams off your Ivory cake! Scrub upward and outward into every inch of your face. Rinse. Repeat. Warm rinse, then cold. Use this Ivory method 3 times daily for safe beauty-care!

"Baby-care" is Beauty-care . . . use

New Velvet-suds IVORY

TRADEMARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. • PROCTER & GAMBLE

Co-ed

BY JEAN KINKEAD

Nothing like a valentine to net you a grand slam in hearts! Be gay, sweet maid, and let who will be syrupy!

That Sentimental Saint is due for another birthday about now, and you're in the same old quandary over valentine-sending. To sign 'em or not to sign. . . . Do you dare send one to Him? . . . And what kind will it be, sweet or silly? I've drafted a few man-wise cronies into giving some really elegant advice. Cut yourself a hunk or two and—have a heart!

By all means, sign 'em. Faint heart never won blond Adonis. If you just can't put your name down in so many words, at least make yourself identifiable some way. Initials might do the trick, or a nickname, or a valentine that's so terrifically reminiscent of you he just couldn't miss. If he sits across from you in Chem. and invariably gets your paper to correct and has been struggling with your handwriting since September, probably no signature is necessary; the envelope will tell all.

Don't send one to some chap who doesn't know you're alive. He'll think you're crazy, and may spread the good word. But my advisory board says it's good tactics to send one to the lad who chats with you before French class daily and looks as if a speck of encouragement might get him to the "how-about-a-movie-this-Saturday" stage.

The consensus seems to be that silly valentines are far safer than the sticky variety. Of course, if you're in the throes of Something Huge, romantically speaking, let your conscience by your guide.

Do not send presents. We know a darling girl who terrified a shy swain out of her life forever via a big box of fudge all done up with hearts and things. If he wants to send you flowers or perfume, well all right—but your best bet is to give nothing in return but a great big smile.

This probably goes without saying, but never, never send those cruel, so-called comic valentines. You know the kind—caricatures of a very fat girl or a cross-eyed boy or dear teacher with colossal teeth and a mustache. They've made so many people horribly miserable that we can just skip the topic.

Slightly mercenary suggestion: A cute and lovely valentine for bachelor uncle Joe will make him feel very gay bladey and may even net you something splashy next birthday!

Superfine valentines for mom (plug) and dad are appreciated more than you know. Parents are complete nuts on this one subject. Oh and say! How about reminding your father of the Big Day a bit in advance so's he's not caught short. He'll adore you for it.

Looking over the situation now, how many valentines will you send—excluding the family and your dearest female buddies? Now's a very good time to take inventory of your masculine public. If you're blithely sending a half dozen wacky ones, you're on safe ground, but if you're dispatching a singleton—a big, drooly number, grim with amour and devoid of a sense of humor—lady, look out.

"Going steady" is usually a cowardly solution of the date problem. It's the age-old female yen for security cropping (Continued on page 110)

Thrilling New Way To More Glamorous Hair . . . SILKIER, SMOOTHER, EASIER TO MANAGE!

"Sweet Sophistication"... charming, new young hair-do. Before styling, the hair was washed with Special Drene. See how silky and smooth it looks, how beautifully it lies in place Amazing new improvement in Special Drene Shampoo . . . wonderful hair conditioner now in it for new allure!

● Do you wish your hair had that silky, smooth, well-groomed look so smart these days? That it would fall into place beautifully and neatly, when you comb it?

Then you simply must try the new, improved Special Drene Shampoo—with a wonderful hair conditioner now in it! For that hair conditioner just makes the most amazing difference—leaves hair far silkier, smoother, easier to manage, right after shampooing! You'll be thrilled!

Reveals up to 33% more lustre!

Yes! In addition to the extra beauty benefits of that amazing hair conditioner, Special Drene still reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or liquid soap shampoos! For Drene is not just a soap shampoo, so it never leaves any dulling film, as all soaps do! Hair washed with Special Drene sparkles with alluring highlights, glows with glorious, natural color.

Unsurpassed for removing dandruff!

Are you bothered about removal of ugly, scaly dandruff? You won't be when you shampoo with Drene! For Drene removes ugly dandruff the very first time you use it!

And besides, Drene does something no soap shampoo can do—not even those claiming to be special "dandruff removers"! Drene reveals extra highlights, extra color brilliance . . . up to 33% more lustre!

So to get these extra beauty benefits don't wait to try improved Special Drene! Get a bottle of this real beauty shampoo this very day at any toilet goods counter—or ask your beauty operator to use it!

Procter & Gamble, Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

LOOK FOR THIS PACKAGE!

All Special Drene now at your dealer's in the blue and yellow package is the new, improved Special Drene containing

HAIR CONDITIONER

and is for every type of hair... dry, oily or normal. Just look for Special Drene —in the blue and yellow package!

Avoid That Dulling Film Left By Soaps and Soap Shampoos!

Don't rob your hair of glamour by using soaps or liquid soap shampoos —which always leave a dulling film that dims the natural lustre and color brilliance! Use Drene—the beauty shampoo with the exclusive patented cleansing ingredient which cannot leave a clouding film! Instead, it reveals up to 33% more lustre!

IT'S THE LOW-DOWN STORY OF A HIGH CLASS GAL!

Ginger ROGERS as ROXIE HART

The gal who could do no wrong
(but, brother, she tried!)

ADOLPHE MENJOU • GEORGE MONTGOMERY

LYNNE OVERMAN • NIGEL BRUCE • PHIL SILVERS
SARA ALLGOOD • WILLIAM FRAWLEY • SPRING BYINGTON • TED NORTH • HELENE REYNOLDS

Directed by William Wellman

Produced and Written for the screen by Nunnally Johnson • Based upon the Play "Chicago" written by Maurine Watkins and produced by Sam H. Harris

A 20th Century-Fox Picture

GEORGE MONTGOMERY
on his way to stardom!

YOU'VE GOT A DATE WITH YOUR FAVORITE STAR ... AT YOUR FAVORITE THEATRE SOON!

Learn to say "I Love You" The South Sea Way!

BETTY GRABLE • VICTOR MATURE • JACK OAKIE

in

SONG OF THE ISLANDS

IN TECHNICOLOR

Stop! Look! Listen! It's Coming!

20th CENTURY FOX

Judy Garland

She was Frances Gumm once, and she could climb trees and write poetry and recite Shakespeare and turn cartwheels like anything! Then she became Judy Garland . . . with a smile like Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm. Adoring fans dubbed her the all-American vitamin kid. And certainly she was until she became Mrs. Dave Rose. Now, any resemblance to the former Judy is purely coincidental. She's so wrapped up in matrimony . . . in home and husband . . . you forget she was playing kid roles just the other day. And glamorous? Yep, even that, now her red hair is inked a shining ebony. But still she's the gal with wide brown eyes and all 10 fingers in various pies. There's that song she and Dave just had published and the tender volume of poetry under a pen name, and the national mag story she's just done, with Mickey Rooney as the fruity subject. Get her in a nostalgic mood, and she'll tell you, "I made my debut at two, singing 'Jingle Bells.' Poppa couldn't get me off the stage until I'd sung it four times." However, if there's any scene-snatching in M-G-M's "Babes on Broadway," it's strictly unintentional!

Cary Grant

They kept him in soupy, sad-eyed leads for five long years, while he kept telling them, "Look, Joe, I used to be Archibald Leach, tumbler in an acrobatic troupe. A guy with that name and vocation had to have a sense of humor. All I want is a chance to be funny." But one day when he got really mad, he said just what you think he said, and left them flat to free lance. Maybe it's those side-splitting faces he makes. Maybe it's a God-given sense of the ridiculous. Or just the fierce intensity with which he works. But he's come through from "Topper" to the current Warner's "Arsenic and Old Lace" with nary a dud. And not once has he stopped between pictures to refuel. Never needed to. About Grant, The Man, he's strictly of the "none-of-your-business" school. Even had the windows of his car smoked black when he jitneyed Babs Hutton about. Just the same, people did start saying it was a sure thing between him and the Countess . . . until the Landis popped up. And the news finally did dribble out about that terrific hunk of change he donated to the British Red Cross and U. S. O. . . . though he dismisses it lightly with a "Tsh! Tsh!"

Katharine Hepburn

Her voice would squeak and her skin blotch when she got nervous . . . which was always. Especially the day she confronted Edwin Knopf, stock company head! "That's what wants to be an actress," he sighed. "With that T-square body, yet!" But somehow she got the job . . . and others. Despite that golfer's stride . . . despite that panther temper . . . despite a severe and frightening independence and the kind of courage that scared a house-burglar away the time she yelled, "What the hell is coming off down there!" Her razor-edged tongue delivers blasphemy that would do Lippy Durocher proud . . . only it's not blasphemy when Kate Hepburn dishes it! She can dunk doughnuts and drive a rattle-trap and wear slacks under mink . . . but it's O.K. because she's got poise that's born of true abandon. And Lord! Can she drive a bargain! That new flicker of hers, for example. Single-handed, she sold the script of "Woman of the Year" (by two little-known authors) to M-G-M for $100,000. Snagged a role that fits her like a glove. And got Spencer Tracy besides . . . On screen, of course. Off-screen she's got Private Kanin tied up in bow-knots . . . and loving it!

CLARENCE BULL

Fred MacMurray

It was a love match from the very start—that Fred MacMurray-Lillian Lamont idyll! They met and swooned on sight during the Broadway production of "Roberta," in which he tooted a sax and she kicked in the chorus. Lil believes in boosting his ego, shopped all over town for weeks tracking down stills for a leather-bound volume of his picture career on his recent 33rd birthday! He loves to do card tricks at parties, and Lil's always the first one to gasp in admiration. She says, "When I think of Fred making love to girls like Dorothy Lamour, girls with curves of Madeleine Carroll and Hedy Lamarr, I try to be completely mental about it. It's just a profession. But sometimes I feel elemental and wish Fred didn't have to be subject to so much feminine charm." At his movies they hold hands to give him confidence. Fred's such a super cook, he taught his spouse the gentle art during maid's night out. He adores pot roast, sauerkraut and pork, but often has to dine on picayune fruit salads to check figure expansion. Isn't nervous or temperamental and is a charm to work with on the set of Columbia's "The Lady Is Willing"!

A. L. WHITEY SCHAFER

Michele Morgan

Most every budge Michele (pronounced Mish-ell) Morgan makes is diametrically opposed to publicity-wise Hollywood's rules and regulations! In a town where it's fashionable for a rising star to sport a broken accent, she babbles impeccably in English, embarks on a 100% Americanization campaign and refuses to speak or think in her native French! Further stumps agents on the trail of a suave sophisticated tidbit by candidly admitting she doesn't take to wines, naively weeps at tear-jerking flickers, plays a lousy game of ping pong. Eats two gigantic squares a day in an effort to add poundage to her 5'6", 105-lb. chassis! Born in the provinces, Feb. 29, 1920, she early in the game decided to be an actress, saved up her allowance and ran away to Paris at 15. Hot on her trail, her dad found her and yanked her back to the country. But he didn't have the heart to say no long and soon let her enter a Paris dramatic school from whence she became a raging success at the age of 17. She set sail for this country in 1940 and is rapidly reaping a new crop of laurels in America, currently in RKO's "Joan of Paris."

Robert Stack

There was a time when celluloid know-it-alls were humming, "Clap hands, here comes Bobby." But the song has ended 'cause Bobby has arrived. He's in . . . and it's all very solid, as you'll note from his current roles in Universal's "Wonder Boy" and U. A.'s "To Be or Not To Be." Stack himself has never questioned whether or not to be. Sports, music and the golden glitter of society reached out long fingers, but Bob was busy . . . up to his neck in the business of Hollywood, which isn't at all strange when you consider how deeply his family tree is rooted in the theater. He came to Hollywood smelling of the out-of-doors. A little green, maybe, but fresh as sea-spray. To American girlhood he was pure Harvard. Clean-cut and poised and very, very beautiful. But on the skeet range, he's the lad who broke world records in 1937. He's also a formidable polo player. Look closely, though, and you'll find a Phi Beta Kappa key dangling from his watch chain. And there are rumors of a $2,000,000 inheritance. All this, and bachelorhood, too. But quit shoving, girls, it looks as though he's going to maintain his status quo for quite some time!

YOU CAN'T FRAME ANDY WHEN A DAME'S AROUND!
"One side, son — let Handy Andy show you how to handle that gal!"
"By the etarnal, what's the matter with the men of 1942? In my prime, I'd have had her shoulders on the floor in two seconds.
"Jackson's the name...Andy Jackson. I guess you could call me 'The Remarkable Andrew.' There ain't many men could step across a hundred years to tame the wildest spitfire...and the purtiest...that ever needed rough handlin'.
"And she ain't the only one who needed rough handlin'. As if the boy hadn't enough trouble with his gal, crooked politicians and thievin' scalawags were tryin' to railroad him to jail.
"So I sent for a few of the boys. Mebbe you heard tell of them. General George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Chief Justice John Marshall, Jesse James for a little clean-up work, and a feller named Smith. They sure know a trick or two about handlin' a scrap...even in 1942 ...and what they didn't know—they invented!
"Jumpin' fish! I ain't had so much fun since the Battle of New Orleans!"

The most side-splitting, surprise-full adventure you'll see this year . . . a remarkable picture about a remarkable guy . . .

"THE REMARKABLE ANDREW"

with

BRIAN DONLEVY • WILLIAM HOLDEN • ELLEN DREW

MONTAGU LOVE • PORTER HALL

Directed by STUART HEISLER • Novel and Screen Play by Dalton Trumbo

A Paramount Picture

Coming! "REAP THE WILD WIND" Cecil B. DeMille's Greatest Triumph . . . in Technicolor.

ASK YOUR THEATRE MANAGER WHEN THIS BIG PARAMOUNT HIT IS COMING

Idyll on ice

"Nice gal, my wife," says Dan Topping, who would rather lose a right arm than Sonja!

"Hey, Den! Listen to this. 'The Henie-Topping break up will make headlines any edition now.' " The small blonde one is curled up on the couch with a dozen papers, two infinitesimal black dogs and a box of crackerjacks. "Did you hear that, Den? Oh, and Jimmie Fidler has me in a condition again. In June, this time. Little honey, are you listening?" Little honey, who is huge and not the honey type at all, cocks an eye at her over the sports page.

"Yeah, yeah, got every word. Stop eating. You'll get fat."

"I'm theeen. I'm skeeeny. I will too eat." But when Dan's gone back to his golf scores, Sonja quietly hides the box of crackerjacks under a sofa cushion so she can't get at it.

They're a priceless pair, the Toppings. Completely mad about each other in spite of her temper and his weird sense of humor; in spite of a rather disrupted homelife; and in spite of all the tall tales the columnists dream up.

Long before Sonja met Dan, she gave an interview on her ideas about marriage. "It's best," she said, "that when I marry I don't see too much of my husband. I get tired of people." Fine talk, Mrs. Topping! You of the long-distance calls at all hours of the night. "Den, I'm lonely." And the squeals of joy

One of hubby Dan Topping's bang-up gifts to Sonja was a huge cat's-eye ring shown at the World's Fair.

Sonja cuts glitter to a minimum. Wears bright nails but hates involved hair-do's and too much jewelry.

BY JEAN KINKEAD

when he invariably says, "Darling, my plane ticket's in my pocket. I was going to surprise you at dinner tomorrow night." You of the long face when his crazy letters don't come in the first mail every morning. You who've practically become a legend for not lingering hours with the rest of the gals in night club powder rooms simply because you're having so much fun with your Daniel.

And speaking of night clubs. One used to hear pathetic stories about how Sonja, the ruddy-cheeked ice queen, was making herself go night-spotting to please her playboy hubby. T'ain't so! Sonja adores night clubs. She wakes up in the morning counting the hours till ten P. M. She's crazy about people and glitter and music. Adores sambas, waltzes, "jump" pieces indiscriminately, and could give Arthur Murray a rumba for his money, she's that divine on the dance floor. When Dan wants to rest a couple of minutes, fortify himself with a swallow or two of Scotch and a few drags on his cigarette, she's after him. "I thought we came to dance—not to sit around all night looking off in space and drinking." She doesn't smoke, drinks champagne or Pepsi-cola, both in moderation and loathes sitting still. Dan threatens intermittently to hire a relief man—"a ringer to get in there and fight when the going gets tough." (Continued on page 68)

LONG VOYAGE HOME

He wasn't in love with Madeleine Carroll; he didn't want money, fame. Stirling was just a sailor, marooned in a strange port!

Stirling doesn't swear, won't tell spicy stories or listen to swing music.

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

• Get an eyeful of Stirling Hayden in "Bahama Passage," girls, and wave the rave good-by. You won't be seeing him again. Unless you stow away on a boat. If it's any comfort though, your loss is his gain. For the first time in a year and a half, he's happy.

He's the one in a million, the fellow in the story books who tossed the fleshpots overboard and saved his soul. There's something piously sentimental about that phrase that curls your toes. Yet people like you and me lose their souls every day. When they love one person and marry another. When truth beckons down one road, and self-interest turns them down another. When they devote the only life they'll ever know to one kind of work, when every fibre and instinct clamors toward something different.

To be true to himself, Hayden had to give up the movies. There was nothing noble about his decision, except insofar as you call honesty noble. He did what he wanted to do, and for two simple reasons—because he loathed Hollywood and all its works, and because he had an insatiable love for the sea and ships.

Then why did he sign a contract in the first place? One, he thought it might be his quickest way to a boat. Two, he didn't know Hollywood. You can imagine the terror of battling a lion or the heartbreak of losing someone you care about, but until you've been through it, you're just using words.

Having sailed the ocean blue with more pleasure than profit from the age of 14, at 23 he conceived the notion of launching a passenger service between Honolulu and Tahiti. (He had a girl in Tahiti. Some say it was serious, some not; he told me she was the only girl he'd ever given a hang about.) For boats you've got to have cash. He found a backer who made a down payment on a sweet two-master, once the property of Wilhelm II. Round Cape Hatteras they barely outrode such a storm as moved the backer to consign not only Wilhelm but all boats to perdition. Stirling reached New York broke, his dream glimmering off into limbo.

At this point Edward Griffith, the director, offered him a job. A mutual friend (Continued on page 83)

"Bahama Passage" with Mad Carroll put Hayden on tap. But he can still remember washing dishes in a night club for $4 a week.

For sleeping, Stirling (above with Madeleine Carroll) wears a bright Tahitian pareu, midway between a kerchief and a sheet.

WHAT WOULD A PSYCHOLOGIST SAY ABOUT YOU?

Here's a wonderful test! Find out whether you're an extrovert, introvert, ambivert, a cycloid or an ascendant or descendant personality . . . and which star on this page you resemble!

By
Lester F. Miles, Ph.D.
and
Adele Whitely Fletcher

Do you sometimes identify yourself with a particular screen star . . . with Lana Turner, say, because your friends tell you that you look like her?

Here's a better game. . . . Here's a game in which, by checking your behaviorisms, actions, likes and dislikes, you can discover the star you resemble in real life.

a

1. Would you rather see a sporting event than hear it on the radio?
2. Do you like to entertain guests in your own home—and do you do this often?
3. Are you ready to go anywhere and do anything on the spur of the moment?
4. Do you follow your hunches?
5. Are you more curious than the average person?
6. Would you rather make a quick decision and take a chance on making an error than take a couple of days to think things over?
7. Are you usually sensitive to the feelings and moods of other people so that you guide your own speech and actions accordingly?

b

1. Do you feel yourself capable of doing almost anything anyone else can do?
2. Do you do a lot of daydreaming?
3. Are you a good loser at games?
4. Do you resent being asked to explain your actions, where you went, what you did, etc.?
5. Do you find yourself doing things over and over because you feel they are not quite perfect enough?
6. Do you like being with people who are important—people generally known as "Big Shots"?
7. Are you always courteous and thoughtful of people who are employed to wait on your demands—such as waiters, doormen, clerks, etc.?

C

1. Could you call on your family—without apprehension—to give witness to your good nature?
2. Would you go out of your way to avoid an argument?
3. Do you like spending time on picnics, camping trips, dude ranches or long auto tours?
4. Is it easy for you to ask people's advice and help any time you feel you could use it?
5. Is it difficult for you to say "No" when asked to contribute to charities, welfare campaigns, street urchins—not to forget salesmen?
6. Do you usually give your friends and acquaintances "build-ups" whenever their names are brought into conversation?
7. Do you like being asked to stir up a party or crowd and get them into the spirit of fun?

All right! To discover which star you most closely resemble count the number of "Yes" answers under each of the three groups and put the totals here:

A _____ B _____ C _____

If you have four or more "Yes" answers under a letter use that letter as one of your key-letters. For example: A-6 B-2 C-4 would give you the key-letter AC. If you have less than 4 under all 3 letters your key-letter is X.

When you have determined upon your key-letter look on page 31 to learn which star is your type, to read her personality sketch, and to learn the psychological group in which you belong, and just why you're that-a-way!

EXTROVERTS

Extroverts rarely blush. They laugh readily. They're generous. They're fluent talkers. They're rapid in movement. They're careful of the feelings of others. And they like the spotlight.

INTROVERTS

Introverts are conscientious. They move and think slowly. They're moody. They're given to daydreams. They're also given to suspicions. They worry. They do not laugh readily. Their feelings are easily hurt. And they are self-conscious.

AMBIVERTS

Ambiverts sometimes act like introverts and they sometimes act like extroverts. It depends. It depends upon their associates and their surroundings. For they change, like chameleons, in order to adapt themselves to the moment.

CYCLOID PERSONALITIES

Those with a cycloid personality also change from introverted traits to extroverted troits. However, this change in cycloids is not induced by any outside influence; it is self-generated always, a matter of moods.

ASCENDANT PERSONALITIES

Ascendant personalities associate themselves with progress. They have respect ond admiration for people of importance and achievement. They enjoy being with people who are in the spotlight. All of this makes them good leaders.

DESCENDANT PERSONALITIES

Descendant personalities avoid the spotlight. They prefer to sit in a quiet corner. People of importance do not intrigue them. It doesn't matter to them whether they are with a modest man or woman or the President of the United States.

A. Betty Grable—Betty Grable has ideas and determination and ambition, but she isn't grim about these things. She insists you don't have to sit, head in hand, like Rodin's "Thinker" because you have an idea.

Betty made up her mind she was going into show business and be somebody in show business when she was a little girl. The never gave up.

It makes Betty nervous to sit around doing nothing.

She loves sport clothes and tailored things. She detests slinky gowns.

She'll read detective stories or biographies or novels.

She's very sensitive about the feelings of other people. And she has an amazing knowledge of the things about which other people are sensitive.

She has no urgent wish to give advice. It is only when she becomes furious about injustice that she gets in a temper and tells anyone off.

Betty is inclined to be the extroverted type even though some of the things she does are not true of a typical extrovert.

B. Pat Lane—Pat Lane probably comes closer to belonging to herself than any other girl in Hollywood.

She shies away from big parties and from anything that puts the spotlight on her personal life. There's no exhibitionism in her nature to prompt her to make a display. She cares nothing for jewels and gets excited about clothes only occasionally.

She has no small talk. She is indifferent to much that goes on. She isn't curious about people. She isn't a snob. She just stays by herself.

She has no temper. But she does have quiet determination. If she feels she is right she will fight—quietly. She has a strong sense of righteousness. Recently the studio wanted her to do "Dangerously They Live." She felt it wasn't right, said so nicely.

Pat exhibits more introverted than extroverted tendencies. However, she is not an intense introvert.

C. Judy Garland—Judy Garland, all her life, has been given to crushes. She is an ardent champion of those she likes and admires.

Almost always the men she has liked, romantically or otherwise, have been considerably older than she.

Her favorite books are about doctors, whether fiction or non-fiction.

Her crush on Dave Rose didn't wane—it grew and grew and grew. She married him in spite of opposition. And now the very people who said he was too old for her, that they were unsuited to each other, praise the marriage. However, their praise concerns Judy as little as their criticism did previously. Judy, upon occasion, can be quietly independent.

She has a strange quality of loyalty in anyone as young as she is.

She has a quick sense of humor and is funny without being malicious.

She knows a thing or two about human beings. More than once, before she was married, she disillusioned her mother about boys with good manners, boys who seemed very nice indeed. She is the ascendant type.

AB. Bette Davis—Bette is a born leader. She hates people who are afraid to fight for their rights. She also is too impulsive sometimes.

Fair-minded and sensible, she realizes other people have lives to live and livings to earn and she cooperates to the limit with co-workers.

If you want Bette to hit the ceiling, tax her with having a different opinion about something than she expressed previously.

"If you think and feel the same way about things year in, year out," she'll scream, "I feel sorry for you. You haven't grown a bit!"

Bette is a booster for those she admires. And she loves to help people.

She's a home girl. No decorator has been near her charming place.

Her devotion to her family is history. Her devotion to her mother surpasses any other love in her life; and she says it will always.

She isn't extravagant. She doesn't indulge in movie-star gestures. She has a New England conscience. She also has a New England loyalty.

Bette is an ambivert. She also has an ascendant personality.

AC. Hedy Lamarr—Hedy is very changeable. She is happy one minute and low the next. The least thing affects her. If someone she likes fails her, even in a trifle, she is plunged in gloom. But a funny letter or a compliment from an electrician on her set can restore her good spirits.

She has a memory like an elephant but she never remembers names.

She is domestic. She enjoys decorating her home. She economizes in help because she likes to do things herself. She has no personal maid.

She is intensely maternal. She has a way with babies.

She likes to drive. Driving gives her something to do. She can't bear to be idle. She has a good business head.

Comparatively speaking, she spends little on herself. She has an extravagant heart. She likes to give things to those she likes.

She hates large crowds. She loathes to be "on display."

She isn't quick-tempered but she has strong likes and dislikes and respects them. Hedy has a cycloid personality.

delightful delirium

That's life with pound-foolish, penny-wise Ray Milland! Take it from wife Mal, who lives with him and loves it!

Ray became a crackerjack marksman in the British Cavalry.

■ The way Mal Milland tells it, life with Ray is something out of the Oz books. It's loony but wonderful.

"You could call it a perennial honeymoon," she said between sips of oolong at Manor Milland, "but that's not it. You could call it a carnival, but that wouldn't be it either. You could call it a mirage, but that again isn't it."

Mrs. Milland, tall, blond and handsome, made one more try.

"Perhaps you could call it a delightful delirium," she ventured finally. "But whatever it is, I hope, with the aid of Providence, to be able to endure it for a century or two without complaint."

Would Mrs. Milland go into detail?

Certainly. And it would be a pleasure.

If it was a pleasure to Mal Milland, that went double for her caller, for reasons about to be unfolded:

Mal Milland, then Muriel Weber and a student at U. S. C., was munching some breakfast toast when her girl friend Janet burst into the room.

"Room for two more?" she wanted to know.

"Of course."

"Mal, this is Ray Milland—an actor."

"Won't you both sit down?"

The first tip-off on the handsome, sleek-haired, veddy British bucko came immediately after breakfast. He sidled up to her, smiled and demanded:

"Do you have a boy friend?"

"Why, no . . ." Mal said, a little tentatively.

"Good!" said the handsome one. "That being the case, we'll take in the cinema together tonight."

Mal Weber thanked him very much. He was kind to think of her. But she was terribly unworthy.

"Well, call me little Goldilocks!" Janet said, as Ray chauffeured her home..

"Goldilocks!" said Ray obligingly. And he cut loose with another of his inexhaustible anecdotes, the kind that made a pride-hurt lady forget and forgive.

Mal Weber didn't dust off Ray that easily.

That very night she picked up the telephone and heard the familiar, confident voice.

"I'm ready to throw in dinner," he was saying this time.

Mal thanked him again. He was kind—very kind.

One month later—meaning 31 calls later—she capitulated simply out of self-defense. She said he could take her to the movies. She said it with a twinkle in her voice, a twinkle which the persistent one blandly overlooked.

He arrived on time, beaming. He wasn't beaming when they left for the movies. (Continued on page 86)

In the boxing ring, Ray gustily proves no brown is lost puttering around the house!

Milland uses the iron-handed technique on Paulette Goddard in "The Lady Has Plans"!

It's rumored that the Millands are adopting another baby to keep li'l Daniel company.

The Milland's menage is unbutlered. Roy mows the lawn himself. Bors showy decor, chokes corners with native Welsh mementos.

BY JOHN FRANCHEY

PARTY OF THE MONTH

Hollywood's stars and a handful of great musicians combine to bring balm to the valiant defenders of Russia's "scorched earth."

At the Concert for Medical Aid to Russia, John Garfield (with wife) looked better for the 75c recently sent him by a fan. 25c for photog, 50c for haircut!

Claire Trevor was brought by husband Clark Andrews to the glitter-filled concert in Los Angeles. Claire is up to her neck in work on "The Adventures of Martin Eden."

Mrs. Douglas vied with Barbirolli for Melvyn's attention, and it looked like she won. Lots of tickets were bought by people who gave them to U. S. service men and students of music.

Orson Welles has gained 40 lbs! Now tips scale at 240. He and Dolores Del Rio will be married when her divorce decree becomes final, some time this month.

Judy Garlond ond Dave Rose looked for weeks for o house with o big enough ploy room to house his electric troins. Dave's proud of the depot Judy gove him.

Joan Fontoine ond husbond Brion Aherne ore old hands at fund-raising. Recently sold autogrophs at 10c each, totaled $1500 for British Wor Relief.

Behind Allan Jones ond his dimpled wife sat Louis B. Mayer, pres. of M-G-M. Burgess Meredith and Fronk Capra were at the Russian aid benefit, too.

Joel McCrea ond wite Fronces Dee come with the Taylors. When Joel storted forming, everyone laughed. Now he nets a 20% profit on his produce!

Ginger Rogers (with ex-husband Lew Ayres) is pleosed as Punch obout her 115 lbs! Says it took her six long yrs. to regain weight she lost ofter coming to H'wood.

BY FREDDA DUDLEY

ANN SHERIDAN MARRIES GEORGE BRENT!

The surprise tie-up of 1942 caught Hollywood with its prognosticating pants down.

Like a bombshell it was—the news that exploded across country one morning last month.

The Hollywood smart boys gasped loudest. Ann Sheridan and George Brent taking the vows? They couldn't believe it. Sure there had been a romance—a long one—a romance that seemed to be lit underneath by a strong, steady flame.

But pin down George. Corner Annie. Marriage? They chuckled in unison. Annie hadn't time. George liked his comfortable bachelor quarters. That tremendous sparkler on her finger? Sure George had given it to her. But it didn't mean a thing. They were good friends. A little more than that, no doubt. Whenever a candid camera picked Ann out of a corner of Ciro's or the Mocambo, there was George grinning companionably by her side. Their tastes and ideas were at opposite poles. They had a lot to talk about, wit clashing on wit—their table mates always laughing.

They'd never get along, said Hollywood. They'd never do it. But they did. At a quiet ceremony before Judge Richard P. Robbins of the County Court at Palm Beach, Florida. No advance publicity. They'd planned a week earlier to plane East, but the weather was bad. They took a train instead. Only a few close friends gathered at the home of George's sister, Mrs. Sam H. Harris, to watch the ceremony: William Cain, a lawyer, Constance Talmadge, Pat Watson, George's nephew.

Hollywood was wrong on one count. How about the other? Can these two high-voltage personalities blend? George's answer to that one is a confident grin. No doubt in his mind. But before we do any predicting, let's take a good look at the real question mark—Annie herself, and the kind of a challenge she represents to a husband.

During the filming of "Juke Girl," Ann worked all night long for 29 nights without intermission. She slept in the daytime, and her secretary, Gwenn Woodford, muffled the telephone and almost stopped traffic to insure quiet. What chance would a husband have in a set-up like that?

How well could the average man hold his temper in the face of two minor incidents that have recently tested the mettle of Ann's escorts? Ann and her friend were in a Drive-In one night when a carload of slightly tipsy gentlemen parked beside them. One of the men recognized Ann and spread the glad tidings by yelling to the world in general, "Hey, I want an oomph sandwich. I'll pay a buck for a sandwich made by Sheridan's own hands. Come on, Red, show us a little oomph!"

Or how would you like to have been with Ann the night she had a party (Continued on page 72)

The Brent-Sheridan nuptials caught Hollywood flat-footed! Despite a sparkler, they had denied marriage plans.

Ann's the girl one sub crew "would most like to be submerged with!"

Ann dropped everything an "Juke Girl" ta go over plans far her new Encina home with architect Stane.

Ronnie Reagan needled Annie an the "Juke Girl" set about the 165 cowboys wha want jobs an her tiny ranch!

Skippy's

Jack grew a mustache for Bun Granville for Christmas! Above, Bob Stack hears about their radio program.

Bonita cheers as Jackie's newly formed band runs over "Maliblues," composed by Cooper!

IT TOOK AN ACTOR'S TALENT, A TROUPER'S COURAGE, FOR JACKIE COOPER TO KEEP A SECRET FROM HIS MOM—THE SECRET THAT HER ILLNESS WAS FATAL!

toughest role . . .

By Kaaren Pieck

With his mother's death, Jackie Cooper finished his finest performance. And the hardest he'll ever be called on to play.

He was just 18 a year and a half ago when the blow struck. There was a scene at the hospital which the doctor, inured as doctors must be to such scenes, won't soon forget. "Your mother will seem to recover to some extent," he told the boy. "But in six months she'll begin to wane—I'm sorry," he added gently, cursing the lameness of words.

The lips in the rigid young face moved with an effort. "It's not your fault." He turned to the window and, when he turned back, had himself under control. "There's one thing you've got to promise me. She mustn't know. Whatever else happens, she mustn't know."

Some people feel that the young should be protected as long as possible from tragic knowledge. That the truth wasn't kept from Jack—to drop the diminutive, which has grown inept—is a commentary on his mother's training.

To Mrs. Bigelow her son was a person from childhood, a person who would have to live his life and meet its problems, independent of her. Her job was to train him to meet them well. She loved, without coddling or clinging to him, and suppressed her maternal terrors to foster his strength.

When he learned Western trick riding and clamored for her to watch, she'd dig her nails into her palms to keep from crying out as he took spill after spill. In a weak moment, she exacted from him a promise not to fly, then spent a sleepless night, reproaching herself for a ninny. Soon after, Jack was invited to San Francisco.

"Don't you want to fly?"

"But I thought—"

"Oh, that was just foolishness," she interrupted airily. "Why shouldn't you fly? Everybody else does," and found compensation in his whoop of joy.

She taught him early the meaning of responsibility. When, with "Skippy," the limelight hit him, she bent every effort to keep it from (Continued on page 89)

Susonno Foster, Jock Cooper ond Jockie Seorl gove their oll respectively in "Glomour Boy."

Jackie's mom, who looks on, left a trust fund that gives her son lifelong independence. Jackie has sold his Beverly Hills home.

Sam: "I'd like to talk to you . . . Tess . . ."
Tess: "Anything in particular?"

Tess: ". . . but I don't suppose you speak Slovenian, either."
Sam: "Nope . . . only broken English."

Sam: (mock politeness) "I don't like to intrude . . ."

Woman of the Year

BY JEAN FRANCIS WEBB AND KAY HARDY

STORY . . . Sam hadn't expected her to be beautiful. Clever, yes. Capable and dangerous and exciting, yes. But not beautiful.

They worked for the same great Metropolitan daily. But they'd never met until the morning the boss called them to reconcile the feud which had started between their columns (Sam Craig on sports, Tess Harding on world events), the morning after she suggested on "Information Please" that games be shelved for the duration of the war.

A woman saying a thing like that needed her ears pinned back, of course. So Sam had pinned them, in print. And Tess had answered. And he had answered the answer. And—here they were, both on the carpet!

"You'll kiss and make up?" the boss demanded.

Sam considered that one. "We-ll. I'll kiss, anyway."

Outside in the corridor, after the (Continued on page 76)

MED. SHOT—STAGE:
featuring Ellen and Sam. Sam's a trifle relaxed now and is listening intently.

Tess: (into phone) "Hold on a minute, Gerald . . ."

Tess: (into the phone, excitedly) "Ellen. Tess! The most wonderful thing just happened . . ."

Chairlady: ". . . our distinguished guest . . . Tess Harding."

FADE IN:
Tess's bedroom—next morning—close shot.

PRODUCTION . . . "I wanted to do this picture with Spencer," says Katie Hepburn, "because he's the most economical actor I've ever known. I'm the most uneconomical; I throw myself into every scene. The real beauty of Tracy's underplaying is that no matter what type of scene—comedy or drama—his work seems spontaneous.". . . A Story Is Born: The day Garson Kanin was packing his comb and toothbrush to leave for the army, Ring Lardner, Jr., wandered in to say "good-by." Ring mentioned a story he'd been turning over in his mind, asked Kanin what he thought of it. Gar thought the idea was swell and suggested Lardner get together with brother Michael Kanin and work it out on paper as a possible picture for Katharine Hepburn.

Two months later, a 90-page original about a sports editor who falls in love with a brilliant woman columnist was airmailed to Kate in Connecticut. Two (Continued on page 78)

the Women Bob has loved . . .

By Dugal O'Liam

Bob did "Comille" first in college, loter with Gorbo. Left school with film contract.

Toylor loves to trovel: by steomer, motor, oir! Babs finolly O.K.'d flying, gove him snozzy flying togs.

Luscious Lomorr with Toylor in "Lody of the Tropics."

TAYLOR KISSES AND TELLS ON HOLLYWOOD GLAMOUR GALS, ALL THE WAY FROM LANA TO LAMARR!

● "Are you kiddin'?" Mr. Robert Taylor dropped the "g", I didn't, and it rattled across the floor of the M-G-M commissary.

The answer was "Certainly not." The palpitant public wanted to know about the women in his life. Particularly about the way the Myrna Loys, Vivien Leighs, Greta Garbos, Hedy Lamarrs and Lana Turners kissed, et cetera. On the screen of course.

"Listen, I'm married," Mr. Taylor protested. "I want to keep on being married. Of course my wife trusts me and understands, but a statement on how half a dozen different females kiss . . . take it easy, pal."

The idea was that he treat the question as a technical one. His answer could be in the form of a clinical report. If anyone was qualified to make such a report, certainly he was. If he wanted to keep it impersonal, that was all right. Excellent, in fact.

"My friend," he said, in that Upper-Classman-From-the-Fraternity-House-Next-Door way he has, "you're asking me to be technical as a punch in the nose. (Continued on page 96)

"Hollywood wives need the wisdom of Solomon," soys Bobs, who storred with Bob in "This Is My Affoir."

The new "Johnny Eoger" with Lono Turner gives Bob o bed with built-in rodio, bor, running woter, phone.

"SWELL GUY"

One of Clark Gable's best friends is his purp Bob.

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

ONE day, around a dozen years ago, a Hollywood extra named Billy Gable needed a new shirt. He stopped in at Clark's Dollar Store on the Boulevard. He laid down a precious buck. He picked up the shirt, which he tucked under his arm—also the store's front name, which he tacked onto his own last tag.

The deal was a bargain—any way you look at it. Billy Gable became Glark Gable and Clark Gable became the greatest box office star the screen has ever known. He became the man who has stayed in the top ten for ten straight years. Who rose to a salary of $7000 a week. Who caused riots when he visited big cities. Who eventually married movieland's great glamour beauty, Carole Lombard, in a Hollywood king-and-queen match.

Clark Gable did all right. But at heart he remained pretty much Billy Gable, the ex-Ohio farm boy. He still preferred the dank, sweet smell of barns to the dead air of night clubs. He still would trade back slaps and mob huzzas for the jolt of a shotgun or the zing of a reel. He could take the jostles of fame, but personally he could leave them anytime for outdoor elbow room.

So when he could call his shots, he did leave them a little. He bought a ranch fifteen minutes from Hollywood. He took his bride there. For three years Clark and Carole have tried out the country life. They both like it. Now they're planning on stretching the distance. They're searching all over the West—Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico. They're hunting hard for a cattle ranch that's a thousand acres at least and when they find the ideal spot they'll move there, build a house and never come into town except to make a picture. Then at last Clark Gable will be happy. After all these years he'll be back on the farm.

He'll be Billy Gable again and darn glad of it!

At forty-one, Clark Gable is amazingly unchanged by this fantastic cycle in his life. Fame, fortune, three marriages and a decade of adulation have left him with simple tastes, habits and ambitions. Nor have they conjured up a demi-god of heroic proportions. Clark is good at some things, terrible in others. He has his strong points and his weak ones, too. He's no saint, but certainly no lost sinner. He's no great brain, but he isn't exactly dumb. He's a sucker for some things, but he packs around his pet peeves, too. He's canny, and he's crude, vain and humble, extravagant and sensible, energetic and lazy, brave and scared. In short, beneath his celluloid halo, Clark Gable is just an average guy in his private life.

No one knows this better than Clark himself.

And nothing points this more plainly than where he lives and how.

To reach Clark Gable at home, you drive from Hollywood out Highway 101 and turn left when a sign says "Encino." You travel up a road until you come to a thousand orange trees. The drive goes through these and what you find at the end is Clark Gable's only piece of property, excluding a North California duck hunting shack worth possibly $500.

The Gable ranch house rests on twenty-two acres in San Fernando Valley, mostly citrus and alfalfa. It cost Clark $50,000, and it's for sale now to apply on the bigger and better homestead. Clark bought it in March, 1939, from Raoul Walsh, the director. He immediately planted fifty new orange trees, put up a new barn, remodeled the house and stocked the ranches. This modest domain claims practically all Clark Gable's off-set time, except when he's hunting. Gable's private life is as simple as that.

His castle is a fifteen-year-old white frame ranch house of no particular architectural design. A veranda runs around most of its seven rooms, which do not include a guest room.

Clark's immediate household consists of himself, Carole, Fred, the ranch hand, Jessie, the cook, Florence, the maid, a flock of ring-neck pheasants, a few hundred chickens, two cows, eight horses, three dogs and one alley cat.

The Gable animal population has a varied and interesting history. It started with one cow, which became two when a ranch hand's wife had a baby and milk became important. Chickens came next and Clark's poultry pride reached its zenith when he groomed a certain flock for the Los Angeles County

Clark's in seventh heaven on hunting treks, in old togs. Carole despises beards. Soys, "They're not romantic, women don't like 'em!"

Nothing infuriates Carole quite os much as those divorce rumors! Soys there's nothing ta it; they're blissful!

There isn't a telephone or telegroph station within miles of the Goble ronch. Only communicotion with the outside world is via R.F.D.!

After their morriage in '39 he ond Carole honeymooned on his San Fernando ranch!

"SWELL GUY"

continued

Fair. Visions of blue ribbons at Pomona danced in the country squire's head. Then rudely, they vanished. On the eve of the big event, wife Carole discovered some poor people down the road who didn't have enough to eat. She had a batch of ranch chickens killed and sent over. They turned out to be Clark's pet contenders.

His canine crew consists of two dogs, "Bob," his pointer and hunting companion, and "Commissioner," a dachshund, named after Clark's friend, a Santa Monica fire commissioner.

There are eight horses on the Gable ranch today, including Clark's two saddle favorites, "Buck," a sorrel, "Comanche," a grey. Carole's is a Tennessee Walker. Clark has always been a great horse lover and constant rider although, except for his late and inglorious bangtail, Beverly Hills (who cost Clark a pretty penny and cured him of racing), none of them are prize-winners. A while back Clark invested in a wild, spirited steed, a bad actor. He thought it would be exciting to train and tame him. One day, with Clark in the saddle, the stallion dashed out of control, clattering across a road under repair. There he stumbled, tossing Gable smack in a puddle of newly ladled asphalt. Clark yanked himself up from the sticky stuff, looking like a tar baby, led the horse home and put him up for sale that day. He figured there was no use asking for a broken neck.

Probably the most annoying but beloved member of the Gable menage is a nameless cat. Clark and Carole ran on to the derelict puss one night before they were married. They'd been out on a date and heard the kitten mewing dismally from a barrel in an alley. They promptly adopted him as an advance member of the family. The cat repays by climbing nightly up the house and scratching on the screen of Clark's bedroom window. He doesn't do this until after midnight, so it's always a cause for nocturnal cursing as Clark rouses himself out of the hay and lets tabby inside.

Clark is a light sleeper by nature, anyway. If the cat doesn't wake him, the mocking birds do. These midnight yodelers perch in profusion among the ranch house trees and start their chorals about 4:30 in the morning. Time and again grumpy Gable has paced the floor at false dawn swearing vengeance via a shotgun on the mockers; of course, he never does the deed.

Midnight is the usual retiring hour at the Gables. But Clark's light snoozing habit makes him a confirmed bed reader. His room is usually stacked high with books and magazines. He prefers the adventure type with plenty of action. His most serious reading bent is for history, especially military history. He has studied every American war and its campaigns thoroughly. He's keenly interested in the present blitz and counter-blitz particularly from a tactics standpoint.

Clark's bedroom is designed for masculine comfort. His bed is leather upholstered, and the large chairs match it. The room is plain. Besides the book shelves and old boxing prints on the wall, there's nothing decorative about it—no trophies, no mementos strewn around. A large fireplace in (Continued on page 101)

Clark thinks simpering, starry-eyed women admirers are silly. Give him a steak any time!

Night club sprees such as this at Mocambo are rare. Rarer even is the formal gear worn here and also briefly in "Honky Tonk."

HATS OFF TO HAIR-DO'S

BY CAROL CARTER

Olivia de Havilland, stor of Worner's "The Male Animol"

Judy Garland, featured in M-G-M's "Babes on Broadway"

"My Gal Sal" is Carole Landis' latest film for 20th Century

Brenda Marshall is the girl in "Captains of the Clouds"

● Our title, "Hats Off to Hair-Do's," is purely a figure of speech—our salute to the season's lovely coiffures. Actually, hats are on to hair-do's, for never before have the two gotten along so amiably. Bonnet brims allow for side rolls, pomps and bangs, while hair styles, in return, follow borders, and the ever-popular rolled bob curls around the "little hats." Some of the little feathery and flowery chapeaux seem almost part of the coiffures, so subtly do they team up with curls and waves.

The debate over the long and short of new hair styles has been waxing hot in and out of Hollywood, and so far the most convincing argument is the increasing number of short feather cuts and three- to five-inch bobs worn by filmdom's beauties. Judy Garland is only one of the many who have gone in for a variation of the feather cut, while Carole Landis has effected a far more exotic version of the short-short bob. She individualizes the style by wearing a cluster of curls on one side as though they were bangs.

Meanwhile, Brenda Marshall and Olivia de Havilland wear their dark locks short in front, but cling to long back hair. Just one look at Brenda Marshall shows why schoolgirls still think eight inches isn't a bit too long for their hair. And the low bun and decorative gardenias add glamour to relieve the simplicity of Olivia de Havilland's formal coiffure.

If you haven't already done so, you'll love designing your own version of one of these smart new styles to suit your personality and the tilt of your nose. Experiment in front of the mirror to see how you look in crisp bangs, long ones, all-around rolls and both high and low pompadours—all making fashion and beauty news this spring. You might look to Margaret Sullavan, Bette Davis, Joan Fontaine, Margaret Hayes or Penny Singleton for inspiration, for each has adopted a becoming version of shorter hair. Not all of them have followed the three-inch dictum to the fraction, but rather have chosen the length best suited to their features.

When you have decided on a hair-do, have it shaped by a good hair stylist, and you'll find it easy to set and arrange for evening sophistication as well as smart for daytime grooming. With bob pins, tuck combs, brilliantine, hair lacquer, and as little time as it takes to dry, you can (Continued on page 109)

Beauty goes to your head . . .

Every film queen wears a crown of radiant hair. Here's how the stars keep their locks lustrous and entrancing!

Before shampooing, brush your locks vigorously.

After moistening them thoroughly, opply your fovorite shompoo.

Mossoge the lother well into your scolp ond press through lengths of hoir.

Rinse locks repeotedly in cleor woter to remove every vestige of soop.

Get a head start on beauty, girls, by taking care of your locks, for there is nothing more beguiling than hair that is fresh-washed and fragrant—when every strand is brushed to polished beauty. A becoming, up-to-date coiffure is important, too, in making features lovelier, but, remember it is only as flattering as your locks are radiant and healthy.

There's no magic formula for beautiful hair. It simply responds to good treatment. Give yours the stimulation, nourishment and gentle cleansing it needs, and it will thrive and flourish. Neglect it, and it soon languishes and fades, becoming generally dull and unattractive. Virginia Grey and other acclaimed beauties learned long ago how important locks are to beauty, so follow their example and give your hair daily attention.

That old-time advice to give tresses one-hundred strokes a day is just as timely as it ever was, so get in the habit of brushing yours nightly until your scalp feels warm and tingly and each little hair gleams and shines. This exercise not only gives lazy scalps a good workout and promotes hair growth, but it removes dulling dust and distributes natural oils over the lengths, bringing out hidden luster. If you don't already own a good brush with long, firm, flexible bristles, it's good economy to buy one, for if it is used regularly and correctly, you'll be repaid by soft, manageable tresses. Hold it at a 45-degree angle to your head and wield it in long upward and outward strokes, polishing each strand from root to tip.

Hair grows best, you know, in a scalp that is healthy, loose and invigorated so massage your head thoroughly several times a week. Begin at the base of your neck, and pressing with the pads of your fingers, work upward, kneading and moving your scalp as you go. This extra stimulation encourages the thousands of little hair cells that are busy manufacturing new hairs and also keeps oil glands functioning as they should. If your hair is either too dry or too oily, it's a sign these erratic ducts need normalizing, so discipline them with regular exercise. Also, if hair is dry, or needs revitalizing before a permanent wave, apply a special lubricant—pomade, tonic or special dry hair conditioner—to your

BY CAROL CARTER

Comb or brush tresses to full length. Then, set curls with wave lotion.

Press out moisture with a thick Turkish towel.

Virginia Grey keeps her casual hair-do always sunny and lovely. You'll see her in "Mr. and Mrs. North."

scalp every night, separating hair into sections and working the oils in at the roots with your fingertips. Before your regular shampoo, massage hot oil into your scalp with tufts of cotton or a special sponge, then cover your hair with a steaming towel to help the penetration of oils. When hair is to be washed the following day, apply oil and tie your head up in an attractive bandanna. You'll look nice in the interim. If, on the other hand, your hair is too oily, apply a drying tonic to your scalp every night with liberal doses of massage.

But don't forget that your health has much to do with the lustrous quality of your hair. The productive cells, as you know, are nourished by the bloodstream, so keep your system in good working order by getting plenty of fresh air and outdoor exercise, by sleeping at least eight to ten hours each night and by eating well-balanced meals daily. Be sure to eat those foods rich in valuable vitamin B_1, especially beneficial to hair—leafy green vegetables, milk, beef, liver, eggs, yeast, lima beans, green peas, whole-grained cereals, etc. In addition drink at least eight glasses of water each day.

Just a word about dandruff! Those harmless-looking flecks are not only beauty stealers; they can impair hair health, so if you're troubled by these annoying particles, get rid of them at once. Apply a special dandruff tonic to your scalp nightly, and whenever you wash your hair, use a special dandruff remover shampoo. It will penetrate clogged pores and dissolve dandruff leaving the scalp clean to function properly.

To hold top honors, hair needs to be always clean and fragrant—so never allow yours to become the least bit dull or dingy. Wash it thoroughly once a week—oftener if your hair is oily or if you live in a locality where there is much dirt or soot in the air. Begin by brushing briskly to remove all dust and dead tissue, then moisten your head and locks thoroughly with lukewarm water and apply your shampoo generously. There are many excellent kinds available for dry, normal or oily hair—in liquid or cake form. You may want to use a liquid soapless shampoo with special conditioner added as the model above is doing. It leaves hair sparkling clean and gleaming. (Continued on page 109)

MODERN SCREEN'S

IF YOUR FACE IS		WEAR YOUR HAIR THIS WAY	APPLY MAKE-UP THIS WAY
OVAL Lindo Dornell 20th Century-Fox		For daytime, brush hoir from temples ond sides into soft curls behind your eors to occent ovol contours. Both the short feather and the modified long bob ore becoming. For evening, brush front hair into soft bangs or o smooth pompodour roll ond curl the side sections into smooth reverse rolls.	Ploce rouge in center of cheek, blending it smoothly over cheekbone. Wear cleor lipstick, not-too-bright, ond moke up mouth full, following its noturol outline.
ROUND Lynn Bori 20th Century-Fox		For daytime, port hoir on side, dressing top with smoll soft curls or rolls to odd length to your foce or sweep hoir from temples into side pomps. Avoid heovy waves or curls below the ears. For evening, brush top ond side hoir into smooth curls ond rolls to odd height. Brush bock section up from neck in soft, smooth woves and accent with light ornoment. Avoid bulky coiffure ot neckline.	Weor rouge lightly on outer portion of cheek, blending it softly toword eor then down to jowline. Moke up mouth wide following noturol outline.
SQUARE Gene Tierney 20th Century-Fox		For daytime, concentrote oll fullness on upper holf of heod. Weor o low side port to moke forehead oppeor brooder. Weor hoir low behind eors in soft loose woves to soften the ongles of foce. For evening, sweep sides up in pompodour style. Brush hoir back of eors into loose woves or curls, or ornoment with pretty ribbon or borrette if you like.	Ploce rouge in center of cheek under eye ond blend softly olong cheekbone toword temple, then downword. Moke up mouth wide with upword tilt to corners.
HEART SHAPED Mory Mortin Poramount		For daytime, keep front locks soft, with bongs or woves dipping inword from temples. Weor sides smooth with fullness below eors to give chin width. For evening, brush hoir softly up from brow in reverse bongs or with top curls forming portiol bong on right side. Keep bock curls loose or adorn sides of hoir with flowers.	Apply rouge high on cheek, blending softly toword temple. Follow noturol outline of lips but curve top one slightly ot center.
LONG Dorothy Lomour Poromount		For daytime, brush hair soft ond fluffy ot sides, maintoining fullness below the eors to give foce odded width. Also weor fluffy bangs to shorten opporent length of foce. For evening, part hoir in center, hove two reverse rolls going from each eor to center part. Bock hoir moy be combed into one low roll below eors or moy be fluffed out.	Ploce rouge in center of cheeks, blending in toword nose. Accent natural outline of lips, moking lower lip slightly full ot corners.
DIAMOND SHAPED Claudette Colbert Paramount		For daytime, weor hoir soft ond full obove and below eors, but dressed snugly ot cheekline to give more oval contours. For evening, encircle heod in smooth reverse roll, with soft wove breoking into ringlets or bongs at the brow.	Rouge highest point of cheekbone, blending gently outward in all directions. Curve lips slightly, following noturol outlines, but ovoid moking them look too wide.

HAIR BEAUTY CHART

TO	DO THIS	USE THESE
Shampoo Hair Properly	Brush hair and massage scalp vigorously ta stimulate circulation. Then, moisten lacks thoroughly with lukewarm water and apply your favorite shampao. Massage well inta hair and scalp, then rinse and apply shampaa ance mare. After rinsing well, apply flattering vegetable rinse. Spray hair, when dry, with brilliantine.	Cleon hair brush Shampoa Cammercial rinse Brilliantine
Correct Dry Hair	Stimulate sluggish ail glonds by brushing hair nightly. Part locks inta sectians and massage aily tanic, pamade ar hair canditianer inta scalp. Before shampoaing, apply hat ail to scalp with cattan and leove on for half haur at least. Wash hair with special dry hair shampao. Use brilliontine ond pamade regulorly to make hair safter and more plioble.	Hair brush Oily tanic, pamade ar hair conditianer Special hair conditioning oil ar alive oil Shampoo far dry hair Catton Brilliontine
Correct Oily Hair	Part hair in sectians abaut ½ inch aport and apply drying, stimulating tanic ta scalp nightly. Then, mossage gently to invigarate circulation and brush hoir regularly each night. Shompaa yaur hair weekly or oftener with a special shampoa far aily hair.	Drying, stimulating tonic Hair brush Special shampaa far oily hair
Rout Dandruff	Part hoir in sections and massage dandruff-corrective tanic inta scalp nightly. Use special dandruff-remover shampao when washing hair. If hair is dry, give scalp hat ail treatment befare shampoaing. After drying, apply pomade ar aily tanic to scalp and brilliantine to hair stronds. Use creom wove set. If hair is aily, avaid extra lubricatian.	Carrective tonic Dandruff-remaver shampaa Hat canditianing oil ar alive ail Pamade ar aily tonic Brilliantine Cream wave set
Check Falling Hair	Keep scalp invigarated by nightly mossaging with stimuloting tanic or pomade and brush hair vigarausly daily. If hair has tendency taward dryness, protect it fram tao much sunlight and avaid aver-use af water. If hair is oily, use only drying, stimulating preparatians.	Stimulating tonic or pomade Hoir brush
Recondition Hair for Permanent Waving	Stimulote natural flaw af oil by vigoraus brushing and massaging and apply aily lubricant—pomade, aily tanic ar hair conditianer—several times a week. Keep lacks saft and elastic with pamade and brilliantine. Befare every shampaa, give hair a hat ail massage, and leave lubricant on avernight. After yaur permanent, cantinue the lubricating and stimulating treatment faithfully.	Hair brush Pamade Oily tanic Hoir conditianer Brilliantine Hot conditioning oil ar alive ail

GOOD NEWS

70,000 fans sardined into Los Angeles' Shrine auditorium when Bette Davis and Monte Blue entertained for the Shrine benefit.

At the Shriners' show, Cesar muffed a line and brought down the house. Ty Power and John Carradine kidded him for days after!

Merle Oberon and Norma Shearer grace the head table at the Los Angeles Community Chest luncheon in the huge Biltmore Bowl.

Jimmy Durante, Betty Hutton, No. 1 jitterbug, and Bob Hope were the screwy crew whose gags kept the Shriners panting for breath!

IF IT'S A WORTHY CAUSE, HOLLYWOOD COMES THROUGH WITH A BIG HEART, AN OPEN PURSE!

"Dear Diary:"

Fri., Jan. 2nd . . . Lunched with Dottie Lamour at the Vine Street Derby. What a looker that gal is! Wow! We were busy trading gossip when all of a sudden, between the sandwich and dessert, Dottie's voice went dead. I thought it was something she swallowed and waved for a waiter. But I needn't have bothered because Dottie grabbed my arm and nodded toward a table at the opposite side of the room. Greg Bautzer was seated there with another man and looking mighty, mighty gloomy. Dottie says their split is permanent. They don't even speak, which is a darn shame. It's a shame, too, that their social and business contacts bring them face to face so often. It makes the forgetting harder on both sides.

Attended my first blackout party this P. M. The Mocambo, having dubbed itself "Hollywood's Classiest Blackout Hangout," sponsored the affair. An amusing idea, but a little scary when you consider the implications. When I walked in, the club was totally dark, and it stayed that way for long stretches throughout the evening. Dancing with the lights out was swell (the orchestra played "Dancing In The Dark" at least a dozen times!), and I got a bang out of the trick party favor at my place—a jet black compact containing a tiny light that flashed on every time the lid was lifted.

Charlie Morison, the Mocambo boss, took me aside to whisper that he was afraid some perverse female would try to crash in a jazzy, bright-colored dress. No one did. Charlie reminded me of the time, six or seven years ago, when Carole Lombard hostess-ed a party at which every woman including herself was to wear white. Everyone obliged except Norma Shearer who arrived in the middle of the evening, togged in shining scarlet! And how Carole raged! That feud still isn't settled!

Tues., Jan. 6th . . . Spent the morning at Fox watching Ida Lupino give out for "Moontide." I've seen Ida in some awful rigs, but this one was the topper! A shabby out-at-the-elbows sweater and a skirt I'd swear was vintage 1904! Ida admits depressing outfits have a bad effect on her—make her feel low-down. So just before "Moontide" began, she went out and bought herself a luscious new wardrobe to help her shake her gloom after a day at the studio. Then came the war, and all her glamour clothes were tucked into a trunk. For the duration, she'll wear her Women's Ambulance Corps uniform, exclusively.

Snatched a quick drive-in lunch and then scrambled over to Betty Grable's where Ida Zeitlin's interview (see page 61) was already in progress. I wish I could have taken some of Betty's critics with me. They'd soon enough have gotten over the impression that Grable's a hot-cha, gum-chewing moll who lives in a nest of sleazy satin furbelows. Betty's home is a modest little cottage set behind a white picket fence, and the interior is chintzy and cheerful. Betty herself is a revelation. She wore a demure (that's the right word!) blue quilted hostess gown and very little make-up, and her manner and speech were exceedingly quiet. Her hair was fixed simply, and I noticed that not once in the three hours we were with her did she get up to look in the mirror. Which is more than I can say for a lot of glamour pusses I know! Her poise is remarkable, and the only time she lost it was when we commented on the large portrait of Betty her mother insists on keeping over her chair. Betty actually seemed embarrassed by this obvious demonstration of maternal pride!

Judy Garland opened the Community Chest luncheon with "The Star Spangled Banner." Anne Shirley and Roy Rogers, above.

Dennis Morgan, Marjorie Woodworth and Alan Marshall gave their bit to Hollywood's total $475,826 Community Chest donation.

Thurs., Jan. 8th . . . Jane Russell stopped by the office this morning on her way to a "Bundles for Bluejackets" blowout. Gosh, how I'd like to be in that babe's shoes! It's been months since she finished her chores as leading lady in "The Outlaw," yet she still collects her weekly pay check from boss Howard Hughes. And that's not all. Every time she makes a personal appearance at an important function, Hughes shells out his dough for the fancy clothes she's expected to wear. She's his star, and he wants her looking as smooth as any competition the other studios have to offer. To date, she's gathered in about 15 complete outfits.

Apparently this generosity isn't confined to producers. Later in the day I met Louise La Planche, one of the "Louisiana Purchase" showgirls who accompanied Bob Hope to San Francisco, where Bob put on a show a while back. Louise told me Bob paid the travelling expenses for all the girls and gave them spending money besides. To top the thing off, he presented each of them with a small piece of jewelry, in appreciation of their swell cooperation. Louise drew a ball-shaped watch.

Mon., Jan. 12th . . . I've always been a Charlie Laughton fan, but, my, oh, my, Laughton as I saw him this morning was sure a tough dose to swallow! It was on the "Tuttles of Tahiti" set, and he was dressed in a dirty, long-sleeved undershirt and an even dirtier sarong. Bare feet and grimy toes didn't add to his appeal, either! He says he and Elsa always walk around their house that way. Barefoot, I mean—not grimy-toed! Stayed to lunch with him in his dressing room, the only dressing room I know of that's furnished with a refrigerator. Elsa packs him off each morning with sandwiches and a bottle of milk because he doesn't like to eat in the studio commissary.

Wed., Jan. 14th . . . Tagged along with John Franchey when he went out to Beverly Hills to see Mrs. Ray Milland. She met us at the door wearing a white blouse trimmed with old-fashioned petticoat lace and a broomstick peasant skirt bound at the waist by a broad yellow belt. It's amazing how such a typically American girl has adapted herself to the Britishness that is Ray's. Her house is English farm style, copied after the home Ray bought for his mother in a London suburb, and Mrs. M. told us practically all her furniture and accessories were sent from England. In fact, the boat that brought the last shipment, just a few months ago, has since been sunk. The only thing really American in the house is the lumber used in the beams and doorways. Ray was wandering around Los Angeles one day when he came upon a ship being scuttled. The beautiful old wood took his fancy, and he bought it! Ray poked his head out of his shortwave radio room just long enough to say "hello" and "good-by." Mrs. M. says that since the war began, she can't drag him away from his receiving set.

Thurs., Jan. 15th . . . Had a most wonderful 55c dinner at Schwab's, the favorite corner drugstore of the stars. While I was there, Regis Toomey telephoned and, in his best lifted-pinky manner, asked that two seats be reserved at the counter for him and his wife. The boy who took his call listened gravely, and when he hung up, proceeded to set out a reserved sign, two little place cards and pair of bud vases. Regis and his wife swept in a few minutes later, handed their coats to the cashier and saunted to their counter stools with all the élan of Dietrich and Gabin at Ciro's.

Fri., Jan. 16th . . . This was a set-going day. Made the rounds at Warner's, stopping first at "Yankee Doodle Dandy" where Jimmy Cagney was going through a jig. Cagney showed me a half dozen new records he just bought. I did a double-take when I noticed they were all alike. But Jimmy says his record player goes on a tear once a week and smashes half his platters. In order to keep his favorite tunes on hand all the time, he has to buy them in half dozen lots.

Over on "In This Our Life," Bette Davis was delivering some heavy histrionics with Frank Craven. She fluffed a line on the word "daddy" and broke into a snappy chorus of "Oh, Daddy." Said hello to Walter Huston who was on the set visiting his director son, John. Met George Brent in the Green Room. He recalled that a year and a half ago, in a MODERN SCREEN interview, he had almost prophesied Pearl Harbor. I went back to the office to check on him, and sure enough, he was right. In our September, 1940 issue, he said: "Hawaii is in a bad geographical position in the event of extended warfare. Lately, many of the isles have become ammunition dumps, and, under the worst circumstances, this base could become another Belgium."

Tues., Jan. 20th . . . Dropped in on "Tortilla Flat" in time to see Director Victor Fleming put on a long face and Spencer Tracy put on his hat. Fleming had just finished setting a scene and had his cameras ready to grind. But Spence is a five o'clock man, and he bounces off the set on the hour.

Gabbed a bit with Allen Jenkins who plays Porty'gee Joe. The producers thought Allen was built too small for the role, but Tracy insisted on it. The producers finally yielded, but they're making him wear four sweaters, double-lift shoes, and other make-up camouflages which literally give him a build-up.

Sat., Jan. 24th . . . It won't be long now before Bob Cummings quits Hollywood. Talked to him on "The Saboteur" set and learned he has received his orders to stand by. He'll take over his duties as Captain in the Army Air Corps as soon as the Hitchcock film is completed. Meanwhile, he's doing air-raid warden duty, locally.

Had dinner at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby. Saw Dolores Del Rio (with Orson, of course) looking perfectly stunning in a black turban that entirely covered her hair. It was ornamented with a gold and diamond clip that must have set her back plenty. Phyllis Brooks was there with Reginald Gardiner and so were Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger and Veronica Lake and her husband. Don't know where the Lake gal was coming from, but she wandered in in ski clothes.

GOOD NEWS continued

Holly Noble of CBS sat down with us for a few moments and told an amusing story about Jimmy Stewart and the "Bill of Rights" broadcast. Seems that Jimmy, after exhausting himself giving a great performance, forgot that he was to introduce the President of the United States. He started to stagger away from the microphone and had to be pushed back!

Hollywood Shoulders Arms

At the first word that war had come to our country, Maria Montez offered to enlist as a U. S. Mata Hari. She speaks four languages; thinks she can do a bang-up espionage job . . . Designer Eddie Stevenson brought out an all-suede suit to take the place of tweed numbers no longer available from abroad . . . Shirley Temple wept because she hadn't heard from her brother, George, stationed in Hawaii . . . Brenda Marshall revealed she'd had no word from her father who owns a plantation in the Philippines where she was born . . . Many stars worried about the war clause in their contracts which states that in the event a national emergency forces studios to shut down, contracts may be washed up . . . Twentieth Century-Fox decided to eliminate Surrealist Artist Savador Dali's nightmare sequence from "Moontide" because it's "too scary for these times" . . . Joan Bennett joined the Women's Volunteers of the Air Raid Wardens and appeared on the street in a grey-blue uniform with white shirt, blue tie, overseas cap and Sam Browne belt . . . Local movie houses were ordered to remain open during blackouts.

Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul moved into their new home —the only one in Hollywood known to have a bombproof shelter . . . Studios laid plans for the production of educational films, designed to instruct the public in air raid precautions, blackouts, etc. . . . Allen Jenkins volunteered as air raid warden; drew the dog-watch—one to four in the morning. . . . The government revoked permits of all studios to possess machine guns and gathered them up along with trucks, rifles and other armament formerly employed in Movietown make-believe wars . . . Jackie Cooper flew in from Catalina Island, but was detained at Terminal Island an entire day before gaining permission to return to Hollywood . . . It was rumored that studio sound stages might be drafted to act as aircraft hangars . . . And that the Disney plant, built with the aid of government money, would be converted into a base hospital.

M-G-M dropped the title of their latest Eleanor Powell musical, "I'll Take Manila" feeling the pun would be unappreciated at this time . . . A government ruling grounding private planes affected Robert Cummings, Jean Parker, Wally Beery, Roger Pryor and Richard Arlen.

On the Brighter Side

Hollywood tried to be cheerful, too. Announced Rochester: "On Central Avenue (Los Angeles' colored section) we're gonna have a white-out!" . . . To Lionel Barrymore came a wire from Fiorello La Guardia, national civilian defense chief, reading: "Am appointing you and Lew Ayres in charge of all medical effort on the coast." . . . Milton Berle claimed he found a Hollywood cop questioning a Japanese beetle . . . Peter Lorre admitted he was listening to records and failed to hear blackout warnings. His Japanese houseboy had to tell him to douse the lights!

Victor's Record

They laughed when we sat down and wrote that Victor Mature was married before he ever hit Hollywood.

We first published the report, received from one of our agents, in the Feb. 1940 issue of MODERN SCREEN, and were rewarded for our sleuthing with a barrage of lifted eyebrows and complaints that we were spreading false rumors.

But now it's out. A few weeks ago, Frances Charles, a 23-year-old redhead, applied at the L. A. Marriage License Bureau, for permission to wed Corporal Roy Smith. Miss Charles listed her occupation as actress-writer and then revealed that her real name was Frances Evans Mature! In answer to queries, she admitted that she and the "gorgeous hunk" were united in Yuma in 1938 and, after a stormy life together, called it quits in Pasadena in 1940!

Gene Tierney, Martha Kemp (Mrs. Vic Mature) and Mrs. Les Stefen (wife of tennis champ) glitter at Westside Tennis Club party.

What startled the reporters at the Bureau, however, was not the revelation that Vic had been married previously. Even more surprising was the sight of the ex-Mrs. Mature. She looked so much like the present Mrs. Mature, the newshawks say it was uncanny!

The Last Word

And while we're probing Vic's past, has the story ever been told of his first meeting with Frank Ross, Jean Arthur's husband?

It occurred back in the days when Vic was a struggling student at the Pasadena Playhouse. One morning he received a call from his Hollywood agent, instructing him to report to Producer Ross at the Hal Roach Studios for an interview. Vic was tickled silly—till he remembered he didn't have enough dough in his pants to afford the 20 mile trip to the studio and would have to hitchhike all the way.

As luck would have it, it was a miserably hot day. Drivers were irritable and didn't stop when he thumbed them. Those few who did stop would take him only a short distance. His clothes began to wilt and his feet grew raw. But a job was waiting and he kept on going.

Vic will never forget that day. It took him five hours to make what is ordinarily less than an hour's trip. When he finally limped into Ross's office, he was exhausted, discouraged and ready to drop in a heap.

Added to his misery, was the sight of Ross, himself. Cool and relaxed behind a huge desk, the producer sat smoking a cigarette and basking in the breezes blown against his face by the wings of a giant electric fan. For a few moments Vic stood, embarrassedly, before him.

Ross spoke first. "You don't look much like a leading man to me," he said.

Vic choked. That was the last straw. He forgot he was tired. He forgot he needed a job.

"And you don't look much like a producer to me!" he snapped. And stomped out of the office.

Every movie fan knows the story doesn't end there. Stories like this never do. The following day, Ross revealed he was a man of either great forgiveness or great humor. He sent for Vic again and offered him a contract. Vic grabbed it and two weeks later was making sizzling movie love to that other Roach newcomer—Miss Carole Landis!

Didja Know

That the term "fan," to describe movie enthusiasts, is derived from the word "fanatic" . . . That Rosemary Lane may hop off any day for Iceland? She'll spend two weeks there, putting on shows for the soldiers . . . That Maureen O'Hara has had her pup, Fion, nose-printed because schnozzle markings are the only things that positively identify dogs . . . That Evelyn Keyes turned down $25,000 offered her by an 87-year-old uncle? He told her she could have the dough if she quit pictures and returned to Texas . . . That Jack Benny, the old stogie fiend, smoked his first cigar at the age of 36? . . . And that Gary Cooper smokes denicotinized cigarettes . . . That Tommy

On the way home from her Ciro date with Ed Stauffer (Europe's B. Goodman), Maria Montez met with near tragedy. Was badly bruised when she fell out the car door!

It's a rare occasion when Jon Hall succeeds in dragging bookish spouse Frances Langford away from her tomes for a p.m. at Mocambo! They've been wed twice "to make sure."

When Rita's working on a picture, she and spouse Ed Judson don't stir outside the house except on Sat. night, when they draw a free breath at Ciro's. Rita doesn't touch liquor.

One of Rog Pryor's last civilian jobs was the strictly pleasant one of directing Betty Grable on a Gulf Screen Guild Theater broadcast! He's volunteered for U. S. air dept.

Ginny Simms returned to the Kay Kyser Band fold 'cause she missed 'em too much! Kay's one of the wealthiest maestros in the land—averages over a million smackers annually!

More than 200 top names turned out in response to Edw. Arnold's call to attend a defense meeting at the Beverly Wilshire. Doing their bit were Clark and Carole Gable!

At Ciro's book party, Dottie Lamour, Randy Scott and other guests came laden with autographed books for army camp libraries. Admission prices went to the same fund!

Brightening up the defense meeting were Ann Miller and Linda Darnell. Ann's been divvying her time between Dick Paxton (Rooney's stand-in) and Blake Gardner!

Pat O'Brien and Geo. Burns took an active part in the meeting. Rumors are that Geo.'s going to be called into active navy duty. Has shipped his wife and kids to Wash.

Those who know, say Loretta Young wants to retire and raise a family. She's already turned down two pics to go to N. Y. with hubby Tom Lewis. Above, at Ciro's book party.

Jack Benny, Kay Francis and Alan Curtis hopped on the band wagon by attending the defense meeting. Kay's suitor Hugh Fenwick clippered to England a few months ago.

VIRGINIA MASTERSON—lovely young daughter of one of Chicago's old families

Another Pond's Bride-to-be

SPORTS LOVERS—"Gini" and her fiancé, Donald A. Wildauer. Whenever Don can get a few hours off from his defense job, they go skiing. Gini says: "After I've been out skiing or skating, I slather on Pond's Cold Cream, and my face looks nice and soft again." It's no accident so many lovely engaged girls use Pond's!

She's ENGAGED! She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

See what "Gini's" SOFT-SMOOTH Glamour Care will do for your skin

1. She SLATHERS Pond's satin-soft Cold Cream thick on her face and throat.

She says, "Then I pat like anything with quick little pats—up from my chin, over nose, cheeks, forehead, till my face feels all fresh and glowy. This helps soften and take off dirt and stale make-up. Then I tissue the cream off."

2. She "RINSES" with lots more Pond's Cold Cream. Tissues it off again.

"It's simply grand," she says, "the way my face feels—so baby-soft and so clean, every last little smitch of dirt wipes right off."

Do this yourself! You'll love how your skin feels—so sweet and clean! Use Pond's Cold Cream "Gini's" way every night—for daytime clean-ups, too. You'll know then why so many more women and girls use Pond's than any other face cream at any price. Buy a jar at any beauty counter. Five popular-priced sizes—the most economical, the lovely big jars.

GINI'S RING is as lovely as her almond-blossom complexion. It is a brilliant-cut diamond with 3 smaller diamonds each side, exquisitely set in platinum.

Pond's Girls Belong to Cupid

Send for 5 POND'S BEAUTY AIDS!

1. Pond's SOFT-SMOOTH Glamour Cold Cream
2. Vanishing Cream
3. New Dry Skin Cream
4. New Dreamflower Face Powder (6 shades)
5. Pond's "Lips" (5 shades)

POND'S, Dept. 9 MS-CC, Clinton, Conn.

Send me samples of 5 Pond's Beauty Aids listed at left used by lovely engaged girls and society beauties like Mrs. Geraldine Spreckels and Mrs. Ernest du Pont, Jr. Enclosed is 10¢ to cover your distribution expenses, including postage and packing.

*Name*_____

*Address*_____

(Offer good in U. S. only)

Groble hulo-ed so strenuously in "Song of the Islonds," she hod to weor o non-stretchable lining to keep her gowns in shope. That's Vic in the lei!

Both Feet in Heaven

The way suitor Roft tells it, the first and foremost rule in dating Betty is not to tolk. It's best to just sit bock ond drink in the Groble gorgeousness!

By Ida Zeitlin

That Grable gal's danced her way straight into fortune and George Raft's heart!

Betty's a contradiction. Playing hey-hey girls on the screen, she's herself on the quiet side. Tops in her field, she's got an inferiority complex about her dancing, thinks it's over-rated. Limelighted professionally, she hates being conspicuous any other way. Grable and Raft are two of the best glamorized names in the colony, yet they spend ten evenings at gin rummy to one at a night club. Never stage-struck and not overly ambitious, she became the toast of New York and the darling of Twentieth Century-Fox. And she almost lost out on her big break in "DuBarry" because the producer didn't know she could dance and she wouldn't tell him.

She didn't pick on dancing as a career. Neither did her mother. She and her sister were sent to dancing school in the interests of grace and poise. From the time she started lessons at five to the time she quit at 13, Mrs. Grable had to battle to get her to go, and she'd never practise. This, mother and daughter agree, is because she was lazy. How she could be lazy and manage what she did is another inconsistency we won't go into. They say she was lazy—still is—and they ought to know.

Once on the floor, conscience and talent got the better of laziness. She couldn't help putting her heart into the work and she couldn't help being a stand-out. Mrs. Grable and the girls spent three summers in California, where Betty studied with Belcher and Albertina Rasch. The year she was 12 they had their trunks packed, all ready to go back to St. Louis for the opening of school. Betty went down for her final dancing lesson. "I'm going over to Fox to try out for a musical," said one of the girls. "Why don't you take Betty?"

"We're all packed to go home, and besides she's too young." Then came an afterthought. "What say we go? Just to see what a studio looks like?" When the studio saw what Betty danced like, they offered her a specialty number and a contract. Mrs. Grable wired her husband for permission to stay, unpacked the trunks, added two years to Betty's age and settled down to what she didn't know at the time would be permanent residence.

A year at Fox, a year at United Artists, singing with bands, dancing in vaudeville and musicals, then a contract at Paramount. But nobody got excited over Grable. Nice kid, so what? It was partly her own fault. At 13 she stopped studying. People lost sight of the fact, if they'd ever known it, that she was a dream dancing. She was temperamentally incapable of saying, "Look, I'm a dancer, give me a dancing part." Once or twice her mother said it for her, but pushing isn't the best thing Mrs. Grable does either.

So Buddy De Sylva took her to New York for "DuBarry," and as opening night approached, she turned silent and mopey. The show wasn't giving her the chance she'd hoped for. (Continued on page 92)

HEAVEN-NEVADA

Las Vegas, America's topnotch Groom Town—where Movieland romances are welded and rushed off on a marital assembly line!

BY IRVING WALLACE

High on a hot desert—its scenery consisting largely of air-cooling systems, slot machines, busy clergymen and a busier Justice of the Peace, wedding chapels, roulette wheels —stands little Las Vegas, Nevada.

Eleven hours by train, six and a half by auto, one and a half by plane, it is only a short trip for romantic Hollywood couples like John Shelton and Kathryn Grayson, Dave Rose and Judy Garland, Bill Holden and Brenda Marshall. And in 1941, they and 15,000 other couples all made the hop.

Marriages may be performed at any hour of any day at any place (one couple was recently married before a roulette wheel in a gambling joint). Las Vegas' radio station's call letters are KENO—which adds up to the name of a popular gambling game. Las Vegas suffers no sales tax, because there is enough income from gambling, which is legalized. The gambling is terrific. Don Ameche recently flew in on a Friday night and lost $1,800. The next night he returned by air and won $2,400! There are all kinds of unique services tied up with Las Vegas. For example, Western Air has a special trip from Hollywood to Las Vegas which includes (1) a round trip flight, (2) honeymoon room at El Rancho Vegas, (3) three meals, (4) taxi to and from airport, (5) wedding cake. All for $27.75! Every street sports a wedding chapel wherein for about $12 the average person or the movie star may be married with license and preacher thrown in.

The first character I spoke to was District Judge George E. Marshall, a big, dark-haired, sunburned character with the movement and manner of a frontiersman. We sat on the edge of the dance floor in that beautiful oasis, El Rancho Vegas, and talked about the (Continued on page 98)

Gene Tierney and Count Oleg Cassini picked Las Vegas for their startling elapement last year. After the ceremany, pair sojourned at El Rancha Vegas, haneymoon hastel.

Las Vegas marriages are practically a Hollywoad traditian nawadays! Amang its praponents are Brenda Marshall and Bill Holden who sped there ta have the knat tied in 1941!

WHAT TYPE ARE YOU?

Former Powers lovely, Elyse Knox, now in Hal Roach's "Hayfoot."

Heads up and face this weary world with a bright new lid, but make it really yours! Take time to match your personality. And think twice before you say, "I'm not the type." Somewhere among these five, there's just the one for you. . . . Are you conservative? Do you like what's new but not bizarre? Look to the grey twisted wool turban with red jersey crown. The color combination will make you both seen and admired. . . . Do you go for the frankly different? Then poke your locks into a gay striped jersey stocking cap. You'll create a sensation and prove you're in the fashion know. . . . Have you a perfect profile? Take "Robin Hood," the sporting, emerald green brimmed straw, for yours. . . . Pert, petite and partial to dirndls? Top it off with a white felt Dutch cap, green 'n' red hearts and flowers. . . . A borrower at heart, are you? Buy yourself a beige gabardine cap, complete with visor, in little-boy fashion.

FOR FURTHER FASHION INFORMATION, SEE PAGE 91

HOORAY FOR GABARDINE

Along about this time of year you begin to get awfully fed up with what's in your closet and don't know just where to begin doing something about it. You want a little shove, a little push toward spring, but it's still cold and you have to consider your winter coat. Your black dress looks drab and your bright ones too harsh. You want to be light and giddy and tailored, too, all in one outfit. The answer, the perfect answer, is gabardine in a slim, sleek-fitting suit of luscious rose pink or flattering pale blue. It will slip under your coat with the greatest of ease and will take its place, later on, in the smartest Easter parade you could possibly name. What more can you ask?

Sparkling Evelyn Keyes, Columbia Starlet, in "The Adventures of Martin Eden"

NEW! Pond's Dreamflower Powder

Radiant new Dreamflower shades don't simply match your skin—but tinge it with alluring dream-girl color magic!

Tender new Dreamflower smoothness suffuses your face with an angelic, clinging "soft-focus" finish . . .

Dainty new Dreamflower box—all garlanded with miniature dream blossoms!

"Pond's new Dreamflower Powder is ideal! I haven't found a powder with more luxurious texture—or lovelier shades—at any price. And the box is adorable!"
WHITNEY BOURNE

2 BIG sizes! Unusual values

New Pond's "LIPS"
—stays on longer!

Shatter his heart with your stay-lush new Pond's "Lips"! 5 wicked Stagline shades. Try "Heart Throb"—its magenta hue is foshion's dorling!

Free*—All 6 new Dreamflower Powder shades

POND'S, Dept. 9MS-PC, Clinton, Conn.

I want to see how the new Dreamflower shades and smoothness make my skin look lovelier. Will you please send me FREE samples of all 6 Dreamflower shades?

*Name*_____
*Address*_____
*City*_____ *State*_____
(This offer good in U. S. only)

BOOTS BOOTS BOOTS . . .

by Elizabeth Willguss

PHOTOGRAPHED BY BOB BEERMAN

Come snow or slush or just driving rain, we bet you'll take to rubber boots this year! You won't be able to resist their smart newness, a far cry from the poor, tired old galoshes you've been dragging out year after year. High and handsome, they will make you want to swagger out into the wet and splash right through mud puddles. What will you have? Shiny black boots like those Lynn Merrick is busily zippering or the swashbuckling, ride-'em-cowboy style sported by starlet Evelyn Keyes? Maybe you'll prefer the sporty brown riding boot type or perhaps bright red ones with scalloped tops. Make your own choice, but make it boots. . . . This rainy-day business gets to be a lark and not a headache when you're dressed for it. You don't have to wear your last year's clothes and look dreary as the weather. Slip into one of these fitted raincoats, plain or umbrella-printed (note the wide dolman sleeves) and you're all set.

Lynn Merrick, Republic studios starlet, now in "Arizona Terrors."

Carole Lombard

Life in Hollywood's not the same since Carole went away. The twinkle's gone from Clark Gable's eye, and Jack Benny's jokes fall flat on his own ears! The whole nation mourns her as one of its greatest actresses and the first civilian casualty of World War II. Returning from a personal appearance for the sale of defense bonds, her death hinged on the fatal tossing of a coin. Her mother and publicity man Otto Winkler, hesitated to fly back to Hollywood from Indianapolis, but she insisted and won heads up. Just out of Las Vegas over the treacherous Potosi Mts., the plane was suddenly, mysteriously, forced down and exploded into the side of a peak, falling into a flaming mass to the bottom of a gully. Clark Gable rushed from the Glendale Airport, grief stricken and desperate. But neither his prayers nor the prayers of a nation could save lovable, happy-go-lucky Carole, who had given her life to her country!

Try Halo Shampoo, and Reveal Your Hair's True, Lustrous Color!

Too bad that old-fashioned soapy shampoos are making your hair dull, lifeless-looking! That's because they leave a lack-luster soap-film on it!

Just try one shampoo with Halo, and see the difference! Halo contains no soap ... therefore can leave no dull soap-film!

Halo makes a billowy lather in hardest water ... with a new-type ingredient that leaves hair naturally lustrous.

And Halo rids your scalp of dandruff the first time you use it ... leaves your hair so clean there's no need for even a lemon or vinegar after-rinse!

Switch to Halo Shampoo today, in generous 10c or larger sizes, at all toilet goods counters.

A Product of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co.

REVEALS THE BEAUTY HIDING IN YOUR HAIR

BEAUTIFUL EYES are an asset!

easy to apply

NO ONE WILL KNOW YOU'RE WEARING 'EM

EY-TEB individual LASHES

Frame your eyes softly, luxuriantly, give them irresistible depth with Ey-Teb lashes. Impossible to detect, not affected by make-up, water or tears. Will last weeks.

ORDER YOURS TODAY

Smartly packaged in kit with adhesive, remover and sufficient lashes for from 6 to 12 applications. Brown or black. also strip eyelashes: complete set $1.

only $1.00 AT DRUG AND DEPT. STORES

EY-TEB SALES CORP. 18 W. 20th Street, New York, N. Y. Dep't. N32

Please send me for enclosed ☐ cash, ☐ money order Ey-Teb individual eyelash kits @ $1. brown ☐ black ☐

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY.....

*EY-TEB MASCARA at "5-and-10's"

IDYLL ON ICE

(Continued from page 27)

Actually, he glowers when Sonja dances with anyone else.

His favorite name for her is "Skatey." For a while it was "Precious Instrument." That one was hung on her by an enthusiastic sports writer, and it tickled Dan in view of the fact that, off the ice, she's anything but. Can't work a cigarette lighter to save her soul and couldn't be more helpless in an emergency. The "air raid rehearsals," for instance, floor her. She thinks every ambulance siren is significant, and her daily walks are a succession of runs for cover. Another thing that completely shatters her is a cough or wheeze from one of her miniature French poodles.

canine capers . . .

She bought the pair of them this fall when she was down at their new beach house at Amagansett, L. I., and no sooner got them home when one of them developed a hack. "Oh my goodness, Den. Quick to the dog doctor." The coughless one was rushed off with his wife, just in case he'd acquired any germs, and they remained away two months. "Might as well have them housebroken while we're at it," said Dan. "A pipe dream," he'll tell you now. "Two months later they're sent home with special diets and permanent waves and everything but a college diploma, but they're not house-broken. Still aren't. They've cost us a fortune in rugs, and we're the bane of hotel peoples' lives from coast to coast. She, however, adores them, and that's that."

Ever since she got them, Sonja's been trying to light on two extra-special names for them. First they were Scarlett and Rhett; then that combination palled, and they had unpronounceable Norwegian names for a while. Now one is Skatey—which makes for all kinds of confusion, that being Sonja's nickname—and the other remains anonymous. The name-changing has completely demoralized them, and nothing can induce them to come when called.

"Skatey's dogs may be dopes, but she's really quite bright," Dan confides when she's not around. It's not his technique to "sweet talk" her in her presence—thinks that's "soupy." Both of them, by the way, make a point of not wearing their hearts on their sleeves. Their love is something kind of personal, and they want to keep it that way. "Damn bright, you might quote me as saying." It seems she's a whiz of an interior decorator. This summer she did their rambling white L. I. house; bamboo living room, wrought iron dining room, plastic bedroom—every one of the eight rooms is her creation!

She also did their scrumptious New York apartment, and it's beautiful. Soft blue-grey walls, marvelous modern furniture—strictly sans chromium—and mouth-watering pastels everywhere. It has dozens of windows and lots of flowers and plants to bring her beloved outdoors inside. She shows you around like a small child. "Here will be the buffet if it ever comes. And, oh, see my lucite chairs. The very last lucite not used for defense." Then she'll open the front door and show you the doormat. It's quite an average looking mat with a red Indian design. "This," she says reverently, "I got at Bloomingdale's." If you don't rave over it, she's crushed. She is wild about Bloomingdale's and everything that comes out of it. Shops there gleefully for hours, until someone recognizes her and attracts a crowd.

Now that's a silly thing about her. 16,000 fans watching her at Madison Square Garden thrill her to death, but 25 of them eyeing her as she invests in a pair of nylons panic her. She blushes like a 15-year-old. She'll sign autographs by the hour, but heaven deliver her from the fan who only stands and stares.

But to get back to Dan and his praise-singing. It develops she can also cook—"anything in the world from fancy canapés to steaks. Furthermore, and this is one of the best things about her, she knows when to forget glamour. You ought to see her at the beach. Sand in her hair, a little cotton play dress, no phoney fuss—adorable. Goes in the water without a cap, lets me bury her in the sand and never mentions the word lipstick. Nice gal, my wife."

In town, she's a fashion plate. She wears lots of brown by day, isn't too keen about black and at night is almost always in white. She has a gorgeous white fox wrap and dozens of white gowns and will take a single gardenia to a slew of orchids any day. Lately she's sporting quite a bit of red, white and blue. "Of course Sonja," her friends will tell you, "is more American than George Washington. She even got married on the Fourth of July. Why, when she became a citizen last September, you'd of thought she'd written the Declaration of Independence single-handed she was so pleased with herself." No one quite knows how she ever passed that final examination. She studied like a mad thing for weeks before and was marvelous on the important dates. Could rattle off 1492 and 1776 like nothing. Even had the presidents' names down cold. But what utterly killed her were the three branches of the government. When she remembered executive, she couldn't think of judicial—and legislative was rarely in the picture at all. On the day of the examination though, she had them on the tip of her tongue. Dan was away on the big day, but when he came home there was much downing of champagne and calling each other "damyankee." about town . . .

They love to celebrate things. Christmas Eve and wedding anniversaries they reserve for themselves, but other big events—a smashing victory for Dan's football Dodgers or a world premiere of Sonja's latest picture—call for their cronies. In Hollywood, that means Errol Flynn, Bruce Cabot, the Ty Powers, among others; in New York, there's Tom Deglin, publicity man at Madison Square Garden, Shipwreck Kelly and Mrs. Shipwreck (Brenda Frazier) and various socialites and sports people. To hear them tell it, there just is no pair in the world like Sonja and Dan. Dan can order a dinner like no one else on earth, and he always has some new boîte up his sleeve to whip them to afterwards. Sonja's contribution is the most incredible line of talk you ever listened to. The next day they all kill themselves trying to remember, but she gets off her pearls so fast, they're usually gone forever.

This, however, is typical. One night, she was describing a new tortoise shell compact she'd bought for Annabella Power. She couldn't remember the word "tortoise shell," but that didn't stop her. "It is made," she said, "from the skin of that very small animal—the friend of the rabbit." All harking back to Aesop's old fable, "The Tortoise and the Hare."

Her accent is practically gone now to everyone's horror. It used to be such fun. However, she still says "Den" for "Dan," and "svithot" for sweetheart and "sweeming" for swimming.

(Continued on next page)

The business of being able to laugh at each other is only part of what makes their marriage so swell. They have understanding and camaraderie, millions of big and little things in common like their love of sports, of the theater, the ocean, planes (they have one of their own), Glenn Miller and cottage cheese at two in the morning. They haven't the usual things to quarrel about. Money, for instance. They chip in on certain big items such as the new house. Sonja buys her own clothes. Dan pays the rent. They have it all worked out, and it's a closed book. Then, there aren't any in-law troubles. When Sonja's on tour, Mrs. Henie accompanies her. The rest of the time she lives out West and in no way complicates their lives. Dan's far-flung family is no problem at all.

Lest it all sound too nauseatingly idyllic, be it known that they tiff long and loud when the occasion calls for it. To dress or not to dress is one sore point. So are the dogs, slightly. And so's Sonja's habit of getting into a food rut and repeating one menu for weeks on end. "Den's a dope. I'm thinking of leaving him," is Sonja's stock announcement when irked. "Skatey's a goon girl. I may trade her in." That's Dan's line.

Yeah? You lie, Mr. and Mrs. T. See you on your golden wedding anniversary!

Take this way to a Man's Heart

Pamper His Taste For Delicious

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

WHETHER it's a twosome or a turnout, a man's choice is always for swell-tasting Wrigley's Spearmint Gum . . . That delicious, clean-as-a-whistle, spearmint flavor freshens up your mouth quick as a wink and helps sweeten your breath.

YOU seem to feel keener when you're chewing Wrigley's Spearmint, for the smooth even chewing helps spruce you up. What's more—it aids your digestion and helps keep your teeth clean for a bright, winning smile.

SO, just take this way to a man's heart —have plenty of Wrigley's Spearmint Gum handy to offer him.

THE FLAVOR LASTS

W-54

In Laxatives, too, there's a

HAPPY MEDIUM!

EX-LAX is
—not too strong!
—not too mild!
—it's just right!

WHAT kind of a laxative do you give your children? One that's so strong it weakens and upsets them? Or one that's so mild it fails to give them real relief?

Then switch to Ex-Lax—the Happy Medium laxative! Ex-Lax is as effective as any laxative you'd ever want to give your children. But it's kind and gentle, too! It won't upset them. It won't make them feel bad afterwards. What's more, Ex-Lax tastes good—just like fine chocolate!

Ex-Lax is as good for grown-ups as it is for children. Naturally, like any effective medicine, Ex-Lax should be taken only according to the directions on the label... Only 10c or 25c at any drug store.

IF YOU HAVE A COLD AND NEED A LAXATIVE—

It's particularly important when you're weakened by a cold not to take harsh, upsetting purgatives. Take Ex-Lax! It's thoroughly effective, yet not too strong!

EX-LAX
The Chocolated Laxative

Copyright, 1942, by Ex-Lax, Inc.

SOUR STOMACH Try JESTS, the new and different way to get fast, longer relief from distress due to excess stomach acid. Pleasant, mint-flavored tablets. Contain no bicarbonate of soda. Guaranteed by the makers of Ex-Lax.

10c A ROLL—3 for 25c

FOR YOUR CLUB!

RINGS $1.50 up
PINS 30¢ up

Knit your group closer together, enhance pride of membership. Bastian's big selection, low prices, traditional quality have led the field for 46 years. Write for new Free catalog today.

BASTIAN BROS. Dept. 56, Rochester, N. Y.

Candidly Yours

CONTINUED

Our snooping smootheroo, Bob Beerman, congratulates Rita Hayworth and Bob Hope on press photographers' awards for being the most "photogenerous" stars!

Margaret Hayes (Jeff Lynn's ex-crush) Ciro-ed with Adrian Samish, insurance broker. Jeff and brother share Arrowhead Springs hide-out; built it together.

Walter Kane, actors' agent, spreed at Ciro's with cute wife, Lynn Bari. Note that wopperoo of a diamond on her fourth finger, a belated engagement ring!

"Girls with Romance Complexions win out!"

LORETTA YOUNG

LUX SOAP HAS SUCH WONDERFUL CREAMY LATHER. I PAT IT LIGHTLY INTO MY SKIN—
RINSE WITH WARM WATER, THEN A DASH OF COOL
THEN I PAT MY FACE GENTLY TO DRY. THIS ACTIVE-LATHER FACIAL LEAVES SKIN FEELING BEAUTIFULLY SMOOTH AND SOFT!
LUX
TOILET SOAP

Get 3 cakes of Lux Toilet Soap and begin now a month's trial of this gentle care that helps protect million-dollar complexions, the care screen stars depend on! See for yourself what a wonderful aid it is in keeping your skin smoother, lovelier—more attractive!

Star of Columbia Pictures' "Bedtime Story"

"This ACTIVE-lather care is a wonderful beauty aid. Try it for 30 days."

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap

"Tain't Funny McGee!"

WHEN HUBBY BROUGHT HOME "ORDINARY TISSUES" INSTEAD OF KLEENEX, I MADE HIM MARCH RIGHT BACK. WHEN I SEND HIM FOR KLEENEX, I MEAN KLEENEX!

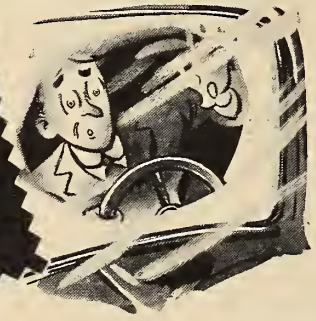
(from a letter by J. W., Coffeyville, Kans.)

NO WASTE!

OTHER BRANDS HAVEN'T THAT KLEENEX "PULL-OUT" BOX THAT SERVES UP JUST ONE DOUBLE TISSUE AT A TIME!

(from a letter by W. P. S., Chicago, Ill.)

GRIME DOES NOT PAY!



I ALWAYS KEEP KLEENEX IN MY CAR TO WIPE THE CHILDREN'S STICKY FINGERS, CLEAN THE WINDSHIELD, AND SHINE THE TRIM!

(from a letter by O. C. G., Springfield, Mass.)

"TELL ME ANOTHER" AND WIN $5.00 says KLEENEX*

WE PAY $5.00 FOR EVERY "TRUE CONFESSION" WE PUBLISH ON KLEENEX* DISPOSABLE TISSUES. MAIL YOURS TO KLEENEX, 919 N. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

(*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

ANN SHERIDAN MARRIES GEORGE BRENT

(Continued from page 37)

stopped at a highway inn to dance and a woman, noticing Ann's superlative rumba, called, "You think you're smart. You think you look like Ann Sheridan. I'll bet people tell her she looks like Ann Sheridan so she tries to act like her. Hey, where's George Brent, smarty?"

The behavior of these fans was unusual, of course, but episodes like that would work like bombs in the smoke stack of the average man's composure. He'd blow up and make matters worse.

Which brings us automatically to Sheridan, the gal, better known as "Loudy," pronounced to rhyme with moody, which she certainly is NOT.

Her favorite activities are sleeping, dancing, horseback riding and reading—in that order. She sleeps raw and collects perfume—the score stands around 400 bottles at present. She owns a new house that she is decorating without the help of a professional color-and-furniture schemer. She doesn't like ice cream or bitter chocolate candy. She is That Way about dime stores, shops them avidly and is seldom recognized because she is taller (5'6") than the screen reveals, and quite a bit more slender (120 lbs.).

She seldom loses her temper, never rearranges furniture, refuses to argue about politics or religion. She has trouble remembering names, calls everyone "Honey." First thing she notices about a man are hands, general neatness and eyes. She thinks Madison Lacey, Warner photographer, has the most beautiful male hands she has ever seen. George's are nice too.

The things that men, in general, like about her are pa-lenty; the things they don't like are few, so we can get them off the list pronto. First among the demerits is her habit of wearing her fingernails 'way out to here. She has grown sick of red polish, so nowadays she wears two coats of platinum lacquer over the portion of nail that extends beyond her fingertips and one coat of sealer over the entire nail. This gives a pink-and-pearl effect that would be pretty if one liked long nails, which most men don't.

Second demerit is her complete lack of coquetry. She has a handshake like a man's, and her manner of looking at a person is level and direct, without flirtatiousness. As one man, nameless here at his request, said, "I'd be embarrassed at paying her a flowery compliment—the kind you feel you have to pay most girls. When you see Annie looking like a million, you just barge up and opine, 'You look okay today, Red, how come?' Maybe the reason she doesn't use wiles is because she's always packed such a visual wallop that she can make blood pressures go geyser simply by walking past."

And now for the merits. Hold on to your hats, because this is going to be a fast trip and a merry one. One of the swellest things about General Phil Sheridan's grandniece is her sense of humor. To wit: while she was working on "Juke Girl," the nights were so bitterly cold that the wardrobe department outfitted the men in woollen longies. For Ann, they secured a pair of acrobat's tights—a pale pink wool, but just enough too long to congeal around Ann's ankles in folds.

When Ann returned to the set, decked out like a delirium tremen, she pulled up the legs of her slacks and remarked, "Look, everybody—sex takes a holiday."

Another splendid feature of the Loudy personality is the fact that she's a GOOD woman driver. She wheels her Cadillac over the Hollywood highways with the aplomb of a Brooklyn cab driver. Although she has been known to do a motorized Seabiscuit on occasion, she's a safe operator. She never chatters while driving, she never window-shops. Her stops and starts at boulevard markers or signals are masterpieces of smoothness, and you can say that again. She oozed into the studio one morning, only to be greeted by a pop-eyed gateman. "Hold everything, Miss Sheridan, you've got a stowaway," he told her, lifting a two-months-old kitten down from the car top. It was one of nine Ann has at her new ranch house out in San Fernando, and it had made the trip safely on a surface as slick as a salesman's speech.

"Must have had the help of a lot of centripetal force," observed Ann.

This coolness—sang froid, the French call it—is another of her estimable qualities.

Mexican is a language Ann brought from a childhood in Texas, but she is now learning proper Spanish and French. Her instructor insists that she speaks French with a Russian accent.

A book entitled "One Of Us Is A Murderer" so impressed her that she remembered it for five years, finally traced it down to the publisher so she could secure a copy to give a friend. Second best mystery she ever read was named "Last Act In Bermuda."

In addition to murder mysteries, Ann reads Life, Liberty and the pursuit of The New Yorker. Also the Reader's Digest. She reads fast—skims, really, but she remembers what she reads. She has a remarkable memory for poetry, too. Can still recite Coleridge's "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" and William Wordsworth's "Daffodils" that begins, "I wander'd lonely as a cloud." Don Blanding, however, gets her vote as her favorite poet, and her favorite book to date is "The American Dream."

She reads funnies. "Flash Gordon," "Prince Valiant" and "Blondie" are daily musts. "You tell me where you can find a man built like Flash Gordon," she grins. "Superman" gives her a pain because it is so impossible, and she disapproves of "Bringing Up Father" because it is based on defeatism. She thinks the Katzenjammer Kids should be given a Texas trimming. "I like kids a lot. I think they should be up and coming—brats, maybe—but brats in a sweet way," is the verdict of the school teacher that Texas missed.

Perhaps one of the reasons she gave up the three R racket is the fact (attention, men) that she doesn't like to talk. A Hollywood man-about-town, having seen Ann on the screen, went to plenty of trouble for plenty of weeks to wangle an introduction, then a date. Afterward he admitted that he had taken Ann out because he thought she'd be the life of the party. "All she did was sit in a big chair and listen to the men talk about their travels. She's the most flattering listener I've ever seen."

She doesn't like to talk on the telephone either. If someone calls Ann, she wants the person to state his business and hang up—just like that. Even she and George—completely flouting Hollywood tradition—never carried on protracted telephone fests.

Whereas other women spend their husband's money in beauty factories, getting permanent waves, Ann has to have her hair straightened. Too much natural curl. The color, too, has to be movieized. Normally, the Sheridan mane would be a good rich chestnut-auburn, but this color would photograph too dark, so the studio keeps Ann's hair sorrel.

Her greatest extravagance consists in buying unnecessary quantities of shoes. Occasionally she goes on an evening-gown spree and buys half a dozen fancy dresses, although she seldom wears formal attire in private life. She lives in nine pairs of slacks with matching accessories.

The only make-up she wears on the street consists of lipstick and a bit of eyebrow pencil. She never buys either of these—just hops into the make-up department and says, "Toss me a lipstick, Wally, and some eye goo—I'm out." The make-up department gives her what it thinks she should have.

"I guess I have quite a few masculine traits," Ann says of herself, musingly. "I never keep a diary—think it's a lot of rot. As a letter writer, I stink. I don't even write to my mother—I simply send long, newsy wires frequently. As for cooking—I'm like most men, I have a specialty. I can turn out larrupin' Mexican dishes, and I could live on tortillas, tacos and tostados. I like cold showers, ice water to brush my teeth, and extra-hard toothbrush. Oh, I'm rugged."

Which brings up Ann Sothern's comment about Annie. The Sheridan name came up for discussion at a party at George Murphy's one night. "I think Ann's one of the swellest girls I've ever known," La Sothern said. "She's such a straight-shooter, such a good guy. There's no nonsense about her. She's just the dish if you're out for laughs. Sometimes she's so regular, she reminds me of a man."

The very male mouths of Jimmy Cagney, Bob Montgomery, George Murphy and Cesar Romero dropped open like quadruplet caves. "She reminds you of a what?" they demanded.

"A man. A fine, honest, four-square man," insisted Sothern.

"That isn't the effect she has on us," they whooped as one voice.

ARE YOU SURE OF YOUR PRESENT PERSPIRATION-CHECK? TEST IT! PUT IT UNDER THIS ARM.
PUT FRESH #2, THE NEW PERSPIRATION-CHECK, UNDER THIS ARM. SEE WHICH STOPS PERSPIRATION BETTER.

Original gown by Nanty, Inc., New York

Use FRESH #2 and stay fresher!

PUT FRESH #2 under one arm—put your present non-perspirant under the other. And then . . .

1. See which one checks perspiration better. We think FRESH #2 will.
2. See which one prevents perspiration odor better. We are confident you'll find FRESH #2 will give you a feeling of complete under-arm security.
3. See how gentle FRESH #2 is—how pleasant to use. This easy-spreading vanishing cream is not greasy—not gritty—and not sticky.
4. See how convenient FRESH #2 is to apply. You can use it immediately before dressing—no waiting for it to dry.
5. And revel in the knowledge, as you use FRESH #2, that it will not rot even the most delicate fabric. Laboratory tests prove this.

FRESH #2 comes in three sizes—50¢ for extra-large jar; 25¢ for generous medium jar; and 10¢ for handy travel size.

Make your own test at our expense. Once you make this under-arm test, we're sure you'll never be satisfied with any other perspiration check. Just print your name and address on postcard and mail to FRESH, Dept. MS-3, Louisville, Ky. We'll send you a trial-size jar of FRESH #2, postpaid.

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Companion of FRESH #2 is FRESH #1. FRESH #1 deodorizes, but does not stop perspiration. In a tube instead of a jar. Popular with men, too.

Let's dine out with

By Helen Holmes

Robert reserves for himself the rite of carving the Epicurean roasts which are so popular with the Derby's star patrons

After hours spent at the studios and donated to programs for war charities, Hollywood's film notables enjoy the good food and gay atmosphere of the famous Brown Derby!

● We're going to take you on a tour of Hollywood's famous restaurants where the film notables meet—and eat! Stars and executives are as busy as busy can be, these days. For, in addition to their regular schedules at the studios, they've plunged full tilt into defense activities and are taking part in recreational programs for army camps and training centers besides contributing their talents to raising money for war relief. With such a tremendously increased pace of work, there is little time for parties and entertainments at home that were a part of Hollywood social life. But you'll still find them gathered around tables in their favorite restaurants enjoying much-needed relaxation and the sustenance of good food.

As the first of our series of restaurant stories, we are taking you to the Brown Derby which continues—through the years—high on the list of popular places where Hollywood luminaries dine and wine. And, although guests these days enter through a foyer draped in heavy black curtains—so that not a gleam of light gets through to the street—and the prevalence of uniforms gives a military atmosphere to the animated gatherings, the enjoyment of good food is still a star feature at the Derby.

Robert, the famous chef who has been at the Derby for so many years, enjoys catering to the stars' likes and dislikes and now more than ever is striving to have his dishes the most delicious served in Hollywood so that his famous patrons may be well rewarded for their hours of arduous extra-curricular activities.

W. C. Fields is his special favorite because Bill never forgets, no matter how busy he is, to come back to the kitchen to express his appreciation of the food he has enjoyed. Eating is a rite with Bill! He goes over the menu like a scientist searching for a new vitamin. He holds long consultations with the head waiter before deciding on just which dish he desires and—when presented with a tray of French pastries—sometimes takes 15 minutes to make his choice. His day-in, day-out favorites are the Derby's special "Chef's Salad" and a delicious Rice Pudding. Recipes for both of these appear in these pages, so be sure to try them!

When we talked with Robert he told us the favorite dishes of many of his well known patrons. As you might expect, Charles Boyer likes frog's legs, prepared in true French fashion. Marlene Dietrich adores Lobster Thermidor and her daughter Maria invariably orders Robert's Weiner Schnitzel.

However, you will be interested to know that Robert assured us that most of the stars for whom he caters, order just simple foods—just such foods as you and I would serve in our own homes. For instance, Joan Bennett's favorite combination is the famous Brown Derby Spaghetti, served with a green salad. Sister Connie likes scrambled eggs and thin bacon broiled very, very crisp. Dorothy Lamour likes a health-giving vegetable plate with icebox cake for dessert and Hedy Lamarr always orders salads.

Ida Lupino comes to the Derby just for their Barbecued Spare Ribs which she doesn't hesitate to pick up in her fingers. While Orson Welles is an eater in the grand tradition—never orders a steak of less than three pounds, has three orders of everything to go with it, vegetables, potatoes and even milk!

Hamburgers de Luxe are all-around favorites with those who drop in for a snack. Extra special, yet easy to prepare they are, too. This recipe and all the other recipes which we are printing this month, have been tested and changed ever so slightly so that the ingredients called for will be on your pantry shelves. Try them all, with Robert's compliments. Make your mealtimes as enjoyable for good food as those served in the Brown Derby. Then next month you'll surely want to join us as we take you to another of the cinema capital's famous eateries. There's good eating—yet no cover charge—in store for readers of MODERN SCREEN!

Brown Derby Recipes are given opposite and on pages 80 and 81.

the STARS

George Raft and Betty Groble ore o twosome often seen ot the Vine Street Brown Derby.

Phil Harris and Alice Faye olways ask for their own favorite dishes to be prepored for them.

BROWN DERBY ICE BOX CAKE

1 cup milk
½ cup granulated sugar
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cream, whipped
1 store sponge cake, or
2 dozen lady fingers
additional cream
¼ cup macaroon crumbs

Add sugar to milk and bring to a boil. Add a little of mixture to egg yolks. Then add egg yolk mixture slowly to milk. Cook in top of double boiler until mixture coats the spoon, stirring constantly. Strain. Add gelatin which has softened in cold water; stir, add vanilla. Cool until it begins to set, stirring frequently, then fold in the cream, whipped stiff. Line loaf pan with waxed paper. Cover bottom and sides with thin slices of sponge cake or split lady fingers. Pour in half of gelatin mixture, cover with more sponge cake or lady fingers. Add remaining gelatin mixture and top with cake. Chill in refrigerator several hours or overnight. Turn out onto platter, remove paper, spread with sweetened whipped cream, sprinkle with macaroon crumbs.

(Continued on page 80)

Next Stop—TAHITI!

HERE, DEAR READER, we give you an intimate close-up of The Outraged Husband . . . A rip-roaring, fire-breathing Male . . . sans shirt, sans temper—sans just about everything except a swell case of Righteous Indignation.

And what is the Ultimatum he delivers? Something like this, perhaps: 'This does it! I'm through looking like a ghost in a gray shroud. If I can't have a white shirt, I'll go where the only shirt a man has to wear is the one he gets with his birthday suit. Goodbye!' (with appropriate gestures)

And how does his Lady respond? Elementary, Mrs. Watson. She tiptoes to the telephone and in quavering tones tells her grocer, 'Please send me some of that Fels-Naptha Soap right away. Send a lot. And hurry!'

[ASIDE TO THE LADIES] This isn't all kidding. Better take a peek at Papa's shirts. He may not be as tame as you think. You never know.

Golden bar or Golden chips—

FELS-NAPTHA banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

Why Let Winter "Jinx" your Feminine Freshness

You may not know it, but winter is no time to neglect your Cashmere Bouquet Talcum pick-up. Now—more than ever—you need its fragrant, dainty protection.

DID you pack your Cashmere Bouquet Talcum Powder away with your summer frills, thinking: "I won't need it in winter!"

But you do need it now, more than ever! Even though it's cold and crisp outside, stuffy, heated rooms imperil your daintiness.

So play safe! Take one minute before you dress to sprinkle Cashmere Bouquet Talcum Powder over yourself. Delicate and fragrant as the breeze from a summer garden . . . this luxurious talcum leaves you fresh, dainty, delightfully feminine . . . your whole person sweetly adorned with "the fragrance men love."

In generous 10¢ and larger sizes at all drug and toilet goods counters.

Cashmere Bouquet

TALCUM POWDER

Another member of Cashmere Bouquet—the Royal Family of beauty preparations.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR—STORY

(Continued from page 40)

dressing-down was over, he managed to be going her way. He managed to ask her to go to a baseball game with him; just because no pretty girl should be as ignorant about important things as this one was. And Tess said yes.

That was the way it started.

orange blossoms . . .

He never could be alone with her. Her flat always was crowded with the international monkeys who flocked in after her newscasts. Her office was a tingling nerve center, where she worked at fever pitch to keep the world at her fingertips. Books and maps and documents and cables and telephones and a secretary named Gerald—those made a bad atmosphere for love to bloom in. Yet love went right on blooming.

He was crazy about her by the night she took off for Washington; right after a woman's rally to honor her famous aunt, Ellen Whitcomb, who'd been the youngest leader of the feminist movement.

Kissing her good-by at the airport, Sam knew quite suddenly that life from here on in wouldn't be very important if he couldn't have her. He even confessed as much to Ellen later, driving home.

"Sam—" Ellen grinned at him, "I'd say, marry the girl."

It was an eternity before Tess came back. It was three days. But they ended, finally. And there he was at Pinky's Place, in a booth with Tess, alone at last. They drank a fabulous number of Scotches and told each other a fabulous number of things about themselves.

Tess! Freckled and lovely Tess, who'd never seen a baseball game yet had visited every country in the world with her father during his duties as a government trouble shooter! Adorable Tess, who wrote the most important commentaries in the country yet could look so young and defenseless and heartbreaking across a little table!

"I like knowing more than most people about what goes on, Sam! I was in Madrid when all that started. I wrote about it. Then—"

They were floating on a rosy cloud by the time Sam took her home. She asked him in for a glass of milk, but it turned into kisses. Dangerous kisses. She was warm and human in his arms. No goddess at all. It was his doing that he bolted and ran before it was too late.

Next morning, he got to his office early. But when he went up to hers, to ask her to marry him, Gerald said she was down in the wire room. A Dr. Lubbeck she'd known in Yugoslavia had escaped from a concentration camp. She was checking every incoming bulletin for news.

Sam went down to the wire room, that noisy cubicle where teletypes yammered and copy boys rushed. It was the best Fate offered. So he asked her there, and she said she would, and the tickers clattered.

They were married by a Justice of the Peace in South Carolina. Her father arrived with exactly 12 minutes to spare. Aunt Ellen managed to appear between lectures. Gerald kept long distance ringing with reports on Lubbeck. But it was as legal as a church and organ music.

And they lived happily forever after. . . . If Sam had expected it to end like a fairy tale, he had counted without Tess. For her column was her first love, and her column kept right on. So many words a day no matter what happened!

They went back over Sam's protest to her old apartment. ("Because it's so established, dear, and everyone knows where to find me.") They went back to a wedding night shared suddenly by Dr. Lubbeck and an entourage of diplomats and bodyguards; for the doctor had arrived incognito and headed straight for Tess. She was a figure, not a wife.

But such an adorable figure that, for the first few months, Sam didn't quite realize what was missing from their marriage. Irritation boiled up because Gerald always was under foot or the private teletype in her study never was still. But Tess knew how to kiss away each scene, the moment it threatened to get out of hand. Tess knew—plenty.

Maybe the months could have stretched out into years, if it hadn't been for Chris. Chris, the little Greek orphan she brought home one day, because as prominent young chairwoman of the Relief Society, she really had to set an example by taking the first one herself.

From the first moment Sam saw him, his heart bled for the kid. Those eyes, big and dark and sad, held all the tragedy in the world. At six, Chris must have seen horrors no man should behold at 60. And the lad spoke not a word of English in Tess's swift, confusing home.

Sam wished with all his puzzled heart that he could get through to the boy. But he knew no Greek, and it was impossible to be a good companion by sign language. He still was pondering on ways and means, when their home was hit by another tornado.

"woman of the year" . . .

The National Association of Women's Organizations had named Tess Harding America's Outstanding Woman of the Year!

Headlines blazoned it. Radios boomed it. Telephones shrilled. Telegrams poured in by the barrel. Even Gerald took on a hunted look.

And the Great Evening arrived. The

DO YOU KNOW THAT

With the new "pin buttons" devised by Paramount designer Edith Head, you can change your dress buttons as often and as quickly as you change your mind? For example, the simple black dress worn by Ellen Drew in "The Remarkable Andrew" was used in four scenes with four very distinct effects. It was done by sets of buttons, antique silver, jewelled, white pearl and hand-carved wood, which were pinned, instead of sewed to the dress for quick change.

Wallace Beery, fresh from his job as elephant-keeper in a circus, appeared at the old Essanay Studios as a female impersonator? Convincing the studio of his abilities, he was cast in a series of comedies called "Sweedie, the Housemaid." Wallace Beery was Sweedie.

When Walter Abel showed up fresh and bright-eyed to do the drunk scene in "Skylark," the studio rewarded him with a menthol treatment? Blew the menthol dust right into his eyes so he'd look realistically bleary.

evening of the formal banquet at which the honor was to be officially bestowed. It was when he discovered at the very last moment that their maid had gone to watch the ceremonies, and Chris was to be left alone, that Sam rebelled.

"But Chris is six, Sam! And we'll be home before midnight!"

"A kid can do plenty of crying in four hours," Sam answered.

He refused to go to the banquet. She could tell them work had detained him, anything at all. But someone had to stay with Chris.

He saw her off, glittering in her fabulous new gown. And as her angry, beautiful figure vanished from sight, Sam made a jarring discovery. It turned in his heart like a knife blade. America's vibrant new Woman-of-the-Year wasn't a woman at all!

He left little Chris at the welfare center; his throat going tight as he watched the lonely youngster dash happily to greet his young friends, jabbering excitedly for the first time in weeks.

Then he got drunk. Good and drunk.

The swirling mists subsided two days later. He found himself at the language school of one Madame Sylvia. It seemed he'd called up Pinky to have sandwiches sent in. Wouldn't even stop to eat. Language, that was it! Get to be a famous foreign correspondent! Learn Russian, French, Spanish! Be important, be a big shot, never mind humanity!

Even Pinky, reminding him a championship was being fought for over at the Garden, couldn't snap him out of it.

It was Pinky, at last, who thrust under his nose the column his paper had run that morning under Sam Craig's by-line. It read like a Valentine. All about how Al Dunbar, that moth-eaten wreck, would win the big fight on account of the blessings of a good woman's love!

Sam read it through a second time in his taxi. Who had written that drivel? He raged down the aisle to his press seat just as the last preliminary finished. Who had done this to him? He scarcely heard the jibes and jeers of his compatriots. Who had signed his name to—?

Darned, though, if the opening punches didn't go Dunlap's way. The boys were beginning to lay off a little, when Tess slipped into the place beside him. Tess, all dewy-eyed and little-womanish, confessing that she had turned out the column! Mrs. Sam Craig, standing by in the dark hour of her missing husband's need! Tess, gone sentimental!

It seemed she had gone to Dunlap's training quarters for a story and met up with Mrs. Dunlap. Her mood had been chastened anyhow, for the first time in her glamorous life, because she had talked with Chris at the Refugee Office, and he'd wept at the notion of going home with her. Well, Mrs. Dunlap had been rooting for her man with such earnest simplicity that— Sam groaned. Tess was like a reformed drunk.

Midway of her ecstatic pictures of a bungalow somewhere in the country, of herself in frilly aprons doing the dishes and cooking his meals, he interrupted with a common sense reminded that leopards don't change their spots over night. And then he saw the pain, the real yearning, in her lifted eyes; and something melted inside him.

She'd been only Tess Harding so long? Now she wanted to be only Mrs. Sam Craig? But he knew his Tess! If he could help her combine the two, now— well, what would be wrong with Tess Harding Craig?

Nothing, Sam felt, as he folded her close to his heart.

"Awaken to New Glamour... try my Beauty Nightcap"

MARLENE DIETRICH, NOW STARRING IN "THE LADY IS WILLING", A COLUMBIA PICTURE

says Marlene Dietrich:

"I've found the one cream to help my skin--fragrant, silky-soft Woodbury Cold Cream. It's the 'makings' of my Beauty Nightcap, the ritual I follow nightly."

First, Marlene cleanses with Woodbury, whose special beauty oils help relieve the dryness that may lead to tiny lines. Then she removes this cream and dabs on fresh Woodbury for all night. She trusts her skin to Woodbury, for an exclusive ingredient is constantly acting to purify the cream right in the jar. Says Marlene:

"Do this nightly--for skin to make men look twice!"

WOODBURY COLD CREAM

Beauty Nightcap of the Stars

Try Marlene Dietrich's Nightcap. Today get Woodbury Cold Cream. Large jars are 50¢ to $1.25. Introductory sizes 10¢, 25¢.

For special skins—special creams. If your skin is normal, Woodbury Cold Cream is all you need. If oily, cleanse with Woodbury Cleansing Cream. If dry, use Woodbury Dry Skin Cream at night. For any skin use new Woodbury Foundation Cream for a powder base.

Have you ever used Internal Protection?

Tampons are no mystery these days. Every month more and more women discover the wonderful freedom of internal sanitary protection. But in choosing a tampon, make sure it's truly modern, scientifically correct. Only Meds—the new and improved Modess tampons—have the "safety center."

"Safety Center"? What's that?

The "safety center" is an exclusive Meds' feature that nearly doubles the area of absorption. This means Meds absorb faster—and so surely—you can forget needless fears. Meds are made of the finest, pure cotton—they hold more than 300% of their weight in moisture.

A woman's doctor did it?

Yes, a leading gynecologist—a woman's doctor—designed Meds. They are scientifically shaped to fit. As for comfort, you feel as free as any other day! Nothing to pin! Nothing to bulge or show! No odor worries! Easier to use, too—each Meds comes in a one-time-use applicator that ends old difficulties.

But don't these special features make Meds cost more?

Not at all! Meds cost less than any other tampons in individual applicators. No more than leading napkins. Try Meds and compare! You'll be glad you did.

BOX OF 10—25¢ • BOX OF 50—98¢

Meds

The Modess Tampons

WOMAN OF THE YEAR

PRODUCTION

(Continued from page 41)

hours after it arrived, Hepburn was on the phone, calling Lardner, calling Kanin, calling Producer Joe Mankiewicz at M-G-M. "I'll do it," Katie told them, "if I can get Tracy for the sports editor." She flew to Hollywood the very next day.

a bargain . . .

The studio had been looking for a story for Spencer. Here they had a shooting script, ready to go, with a tailor-made part for Tracy and Katharine Hepburn to co-star. The total price—personally agented by Hepburn, and a bargain for Metro at $211,000—included Kate's services, the story itself and the use of the young co-authors to polish the final script. . . . When Katharine was introduced to Tracy for the first time, she took a good, long look at him and remarked: "Don't you think I'm a little too tall for you, Spencer?" Tracy smiled, gave her look for look and answered, "Don't worry, Miss Hepburn, it won't take me long to cut you down to my size." Kate loved that. Her pet phobia is people who "yes" her. "Be honest and tell me the truth," she'll say, "even if I hate it." . . . Director George Stevens and Hepburn first met when he directed her in "Alice Adams." They fought for weeks about how she should play Alice. She finally admitted he was right and likes that picture better than any she's done—so far. . . . Stevens is a great believer in keeping the light touch in love scenes. Says a laugh keeps a love scene from going overboard. He thinks that young people are more natural and unaffected than ever before. They don't beat around the bush. Not that they're unromantic—they just come to the point more quickly, and screen love scenes do the same. . . . Spencer, Katharine and Stevens, who used to be a crack second baseman in prep school, took in several local baseball games to get themselves in the mood for the scenes in which Tracy brings Katie into the press box to watch a big league game—an action, incidentally, in direct violation of unwritten laws of sports reporting.

Newspapermen won't have any beefs coming about Tracy's portrayal of them. Ring Lardner, Jr., learned plenty about the Fourth Estaters from his dad, who was one of the greatest of them all. There's not a phony piece of dialogue or business in the entire script. . . . Hepburn is a young tornado on the set. Academy Award-winning photographer Joseph Ruttenberg lights her a special way that doesn't require her to stay still a minute. Says she changes expression so quickly, he's counted as many as 12 different "faces" in just a few feet of film. Every Hollywood camera-grinder who's ever worked with Katie will confirm that.

Mr. T. bobs his hair . . .

She's the first gal to have her dressing room in the male stars' building. Assigned to Bob Montgomery's quarters, she left everything as was, except for the famous barber chair Bob always kept there. That went out. Bob Taylor was her next-door neighbor; Clark Gable had the room directly underneath. . . . Tracy hasn't had a close haircut since he played in "Murder Man" with Myrna Loy in 1935. The studio barber thought he was being ribbed when Spence called to make the appointment. For years he's had standing orders from the front office never to give Mr. T. more than a trim. Spencer was delighted about the reprieve from long-hair parts, said he was lucky he wasn't cast as a drama critic or book reviewer.

Katharine had to learn to chatter in Greek, Italian, French, Spanish, Hindu and Russian for some of her scenes. She was well-equipped to handle her role as a militant spokesman for equal rights. Her mother, Mrs. Thomas Norval Hepburn, is an ardent crusader and once picketed the White House on behalf of woman suffrage. All the Hepburns are

YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for you—that up-ta-the-second chart af yaur favarite "Westerns" yau've been begging far! Imagine having at yaur fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, how they gat their start and studia addresses af aver 60 af thase raugh-riding heraes, leering villains and wide-eyed heraines af yaur pet "horse apries"! Made up in a mast attractive farm, it will make yaur album praud as anything. Just send five cents in cain or stamps with the caupan belaw and yaur new revised chart is as goad as lassaed!

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclasing five cents in stamps or coin far which kindly send me your chart af the Western Stars.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Please print name and address plainly

New England intellectuals.

For one scene Tracy had to report for work made up as a man who'd been up all night. No grease-paint was needed, though. His son Johnny had been rushed to the hospital for an emergency appendectomy the day before, and he'd spent the entire night watching anxiously at the boy's bedside.

Largest set constructed for the picture was a reproduction of a gymnasium where boxers train for fights. Half a sound stage was rigged up with two boxing rings, punching bags, with a dozen or more fighters racing around, shadow boxing, exercising on the rings and generally playing around with other gym paraphernalia.

During production, Fay Bainter presented Katharine with a beautiful bracelet, set with 15 semi-precious stones. Her way of saying "thanks" for the help she'd received from Kate exactly 15 pictures before, when she was summoned from her New York stage show to make her picture debut in "Quality Street." "It's little enough," Fay told Hepburn, "for all the hints and helps you gave me when I was trying to adapt myself to a new medium."

no stockings . . .

Hepburn never wears stockings. Used body make-up on her legs during the picture. . . . Sara Haden and her husband own a thriving auto court on one of the leading highways into Los Angeles. . . . Reginald Owen writes as well as he acts. Wrote the entire script for one of his pictures and was collaborator on "Stablemates," one of Metro's most successful pictures.

Fay Bainter used to hate everything about the theater but the acting part. Snapped out of it when she recalled the motto her mother used to repeat to her: "Happiness comes not in doing what you like, but in liking what you have to do." Keeps a copy of it on her desk so she won't miss seeing it every day.

Jimmy Stewart visited the set, talked to Katharine for the first time since they finished "Philadelphia Story." When he told them he had to leave at 5 o'clock, they tried every trick in the book to make him stay. "Listen," he told them, "saying I was late because I couldn't get away from Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy won't keep me from having to peel all those spuds!" Jimmy's in the army now!

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

Shirley Temple is movie-wise. One day while she was making "The Littlest Rebel," producer Buddy DeSylva had a good idea for an important scene near the close of the picture. "Shirley," said DeSylva, "goes to see Lincoln. She sits on Abe Lincoln's lap and asks him to pardon her father. Terrific, eh?" Shirley, who had been listening, said, "Of course the pardon has to be granted. We can't make a heavy out of Lincoln."

Sidney Skolsky

Charlie Chaplin's youngsters, Charlie, Jr., and Sidney, were having lunch with him at the Brown Derby one Saturday. I stopped at the booth, chatted with Chaplin for a while and was greatly amused when Charlie, Jr., said to his father, "Please take us to Warner's this afternoon. Joe E. Brown's new picture is there. He's our idea of a funny man." Chaplin, it seems, since being taken up by the smart grown-ups, has outgrown the kiddies.

Sidney Skolsky

LUCILLE BALL
IN RKO-RADIO'S
"VALLEY of the SUN"

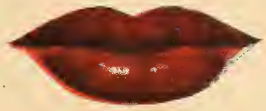
Complete your make-up in color harmony with Max Factor Hollywood Powder and Rouge.

BLONDE



BRUNETTE

BROWNETTE

REDHEAD

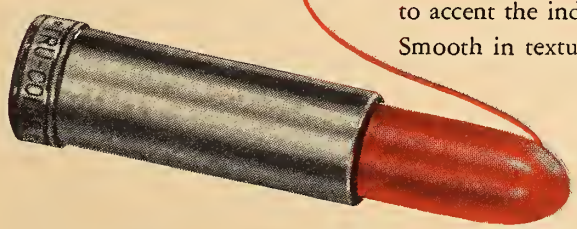
TRY
Tru-Color Lipstick

. . . the color stays on through every lipstick test!

A TRULY REMARKABLE LIPSTICK . . . created in original lifelike shades of red based on a new, patented* color principle discovered by Max Factor Hollywood.

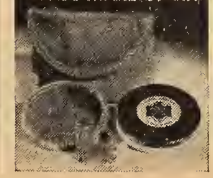
Lovely reds, glamorous reds, dramatic reds . . . exclusive with Tru-Color Lipstick . . . designed to accent the individual beauty of your type. Smooth in texture, non-drying . . . Tru-Color Lipstick helps keep your lips soft and lovely. One dollar.

*U.S. Patents No. 2157667; 2211465



Max Factor ★ Hollywood

PURSE MAKE-UP KIT



Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR MAKE-UP STUDIO, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Send Purse-Size Box of Powder, Rouge Sampler and miniature Tru-Color Lipstick in my color harmony shade. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and Illustrated Instruction Book, "The New Art of Make-Up"..... FREE. 24-3-70

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	BRDWNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐	BRUNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐	REDHEAD Light ☐ Dark ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐	If Hair is Gray, check type above and here ☐
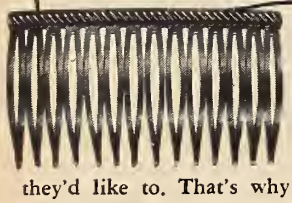
Sallow ☐	Black ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (Color)
Olive ☐	Light ☐
SKIN Dry ☐	Dark ☐
Oily ☐ Normal ☐	AGE



Hollywood stars can't stop to fix their hair whenever they'd like to. That's why so many of them depend on Grip-Tuth. Grip-Tuth looks like a comb—but isn't. It's a tiny hair-prop that slides into your hair in a jiffy—and stays there until you take it out! Try one to hold your wave. Try one to keep your hair high on the sides. Try one to anchor bows or flowers just where you want them! Two on a card (or one extra-length) for only 25¢. NOTE: if notion counter or beauty shop can't supply you, send 25¢ for card. State hair color.

GRIP-TUTH: Diadem, Inc., Leominster, Mass., Dept. 40

Nu-Hesive Surgical Dressings, by our affiliated company, are one of our contributions to National Defense

SPECIAL BROWN DERBY RECIPES

Tested by The Home Service Department of Modern Screen

BROWN DERBY CHEF'S SALAD

Tear hearts of lettuce into small pieces. Chop the center stalks and leaves from a large bunch of celery. Cut up a small bunch of watercress and part of a head of chicory. Rub a large salad bowl with garlic and place these salad ingredients in it. Add about 1 cup of diced cooked ham and 3 peeled tomatoes cut in wedge shaped pieces. Pour over all the following French dressing and toss with a salad fork and spoon until the ingredients are well coated with the dressing. Garnish with chopped hard boiled eggs and parsley. Serve immediately.

FRENCH DRESSING

3 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup olive oil
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon celery salt

Place all ingredients in a bowl and beat, until slightly thickened, with a rotary egg beater.

BROWN DERBY SPAGHETTI

Sauce:

2 chopped onions
3 tablespoons salad oil
½ lb. ground round steak
1 #2½ can tomatoes
2 fresh tomatoes, peeled
1 small can mushrooms, drained
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 small clove garlic
grated Parmesan cheese

Brown the onion in hot salad oil in a large skillet. Add the round steak and brown that also. Add the canned and the fresh tomatoes, and the mushrooms. Crush the garlic with the salt and pepper and add. Simmer all together for about 2 hours.

Spaghetti:

Bring a large kettle of salted water to a rapid boil. Add a package of spaghetti and boil for 15 or 20 minutes, or until tender. Turn into a large colander and rinse quickly with cold water. Heap onto a large platter, pour the sauce over it and sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese.

HAMBURGERS DE LUXE

1 lb. ground beef
1 egg, beaten
1 cup condensed chicken soup, strained
½ teaspoon English mustard
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon melted butter

Mix meat, egg and chicken broth. Add the seasonings and melted butter and blend thoroughly. Form into large cakes and brown quickly on both sides in hot fat. Serve between slices of hot buttered toast or buns with fried onion rings. This will make about 8 good sized hamburgers.

BROWN DERBY RICE PUDDING

1 quart rich milk (or part milk and cream)
1 small piece of stick cinnamon
4 tablespoons rice
½ cup raisins
1 egg
5 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
dash of grated cinnamon

Cook milk, cinnamon and rice in double boiler top over hot water for 30 minutes. Remove cinnamon and add raisins, cook for 10 minutes longer. Beat together the egg, sugar and vanilla. Add some of the hot mixture and blend together. Return all to the double boiler and cook and stir for 2 minutes longer. Pour out into a shallow Pyrex casserole and sprinkle with just a little grated cinnamon. Place under a broiler flame and brown lightly. Serve either warm or chilled with cream.

LOBSTER THERMIDOR MARLENE

1 pound lobster meat or 2 1-pound lobsters
6 tablespoons butter
½ pound mushrooms
5 tablespoons flour
2½ cups rich milk
1½ teaspoon salt
dash of paprika
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup sherry wine
¾ cup bread crumbs
⅓ cup melted butter
grated Parmesan cheese

Purchase quick-frozen lobster meat or 2 freshly boiled lobsters. If lobsters are whole, cut in half lengthwise and remove the meat. Cut lobster meat in small pieces. Sauté in the butter for about 2 minutes. Remove and add mushrooms which have been peeled and sliced. Sauté these for 5 minutes and remove. Add the flour to the butter in the pan and stir to a smooth paste. Add the milk and stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add the seasonings and the sherry wine. Mix in the lobster and the mushrooms carefully. Fill buttered individual ramikins or the lobster shells with this and sprinkle with bread crumbs to which the melted butter has been added. Sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over all and place under a broiler flame until a beautiful golden brown. Serve immediately. This makes 4 generous servings.

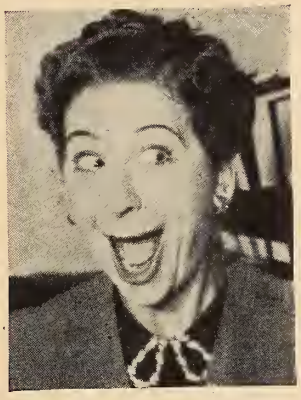
MACAROON PIE

1¼ cups stale macaroon crumbs
4 tablespoons butter (softened)
6 or 8 whole macaroons
1 envelope plain gelatin
¼ cup cold milk
1½ cups scalded milk
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons sherry
apricot preserves

Mix the macaroon crumbs with the butter and press this mixture into the bottom of an 8-inch pie plate. Stand the whole macaroons around the edge. Place in the refrigerator to chill. Soak the gelatin in the ¼ cup of milk. Scald the 1½ cups of milk, add the sugar, salt and the egg yolks which have been beaten together. Cook over boiling water in a double boiler until the mixture coats a spoon. Remove from range and add the gelatin. Add the sherry and cool until mixture just begins to thicken. Line the macaroon crust with the apricot preserves. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold into the custard. Pour this over the apricots and chill for several hours. Top with slightly sweetened whipped cream if desired.

WHAT RADIO STAR . . . .

once learned the hard way that a haymaker is no farming gadget?



fed eggs to the Prince of Wales; got started in East Side poolrooms?

dotes on cold asparagus and mustard; thinks George Burns is radio's funniest?

WHAT MAGAZINE . . . .

answers all these questions and a thousand others?

RADIO ALBUM

gives you full information on radio's favorite comedians, bandleaders, stars?

RADIO ALBUM

gives you a whole magazine full of fascinating candid photographs?

RADIO ALBUM

is just out, at magazine dealers everywhere?

RADIO ALBUM NOW ON SALE 10¢

(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10c to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.)

Beau-catcher Bow

Try this flatteringly youthful Coiffure . . . a divided Pompadour with wide Ribbon Bow fastened on top of head (with DeLong Bob Pins that just won't slip out). Back Hair in soft Curls to frame lower part of the Face.

All Bob Pins Are Not Alike

You don't have to be annoyed by loose, falling pins that do not keep their shape. Look your best with DeLong's . . . they have a strong, lasting grip . . . they won't slip out.

DeLong

BOB PINS
WON'T SLIP OUT

WHAT WOULD A PSYCHOLOGIST SAY ABOUT YOU?

(Continued from page 31)

ABC. Linda Darnell—

Linda is a realist. She tackles without fear problems that would defeat the majority of people. She is satisfied if she does her best she will succeed, to some extent anyway.

She is discriminating and understanding beyond her years.

She has a natural instinct for progress and improvement. She would know instinctively if a dress was not smart and in good taste, if a person was a pretender, if a book was worthless.

She has a great ability to analyze things. She sees beyond her nose. When she was brought to Hollywood, one of the final contestants in the "Gateway to Hollywood" contest, she asked the judges to eliminate her. She felt RKO, with whom she would be put under contract, wasn't good for training young talent.

She is thoughtful of others in her home and at the studio. But she likes to go off by herself week-ends. There is in her a deep desire for solitude.

She will not be hurried if she is making-up, dressing or dining.

She has had the courage to do what she believed right in spite of opposition.

She has a temper, but she is very able at controlling it.

She has a fertile imagination and great general curiosity.

Linda is a realist—a romanticist.

Linda is colorful and glamorous and charming. Linda is stable.

Linda is an ambivert of the first water. She also has a balanced temperament.

BC. Ginger Rogers—

Ginger is apt to do the thing least expected. Try to anticipate what she will do, and you will be constantly surprised and annoyed. She fits no pattern.

She is quiet, introspective and reticent. She has no knack for small talk. It doesn't bother her to sit in complete silence while everyone else is talking. If she has something worth saying she says it. If she's not versed on the subject of a conversation, she listens.

She walks away from anything that looks like an argument. She remains poised and calm when everyone else is tearing their hair out.

She listens to everyone's advice, then makes up her mind. And you get the feeling she knew what she was going to do all the time.

She is positively frugal. She hates to "go shopping" and usually saves shopping sprees for once-a-year in N. Y.

She's inclined to go a little froufrou in her personal wardrobe. There's something about her that recalls John Held, Jr., and College Humor. She loves dark bronze or gun metal hosiery—one thread. She loves opera pumps cut down to the sole on both sides. Her rare night club "binges" are separated by long periods of wearing slacks and sweaters, no make-up but lipstick, no nail polish, and getting freckled.

When Ginger isn't busy at the studios, she's usually in the throes of some hobby. When this happens, she practically has to be spoon-fed. She forgets everything, and somebody had better be around to remember it is mealtime—she won't.

She has an insatiable desire for perfection. In spite of an Academy award, she has never been completely satisfied with any performance.

Ginger exhibits mostly introverted tendencies. However, her penchant for doing the thing least expected of her is a sign of extroversion.

X. Alice Faye—

There are many people who insist Alice Faye is high hat. She often acts high hat. Because, shy and self-conscious always, she is uncomfortable with those she doesn't know. There was a time when she had to choose a chair in a restaurant that faced the wall, otherwise, distressed by even the casual glances of other diners, she was unable to eat.

Now she is afraid people will expect her to act like a movie star and that she will disappoint them. It would never occur to her to put on a movie star act. Affectation she detests. In fact she's the rebel type. She refuses absolutely to court those who are in a position to help her. She spends much of her leisure with her family. Helene Smith, her stand-in, is her best friend. And Zella, her maid, frequently wears new gloves or a new watch or a new something or other which is a gift from "Miss Alice." She looks for excuses to send flowers to those she likes.

She is likely to be late for appointments unless she is in production.

She loves jokes and gags and goes to great lengths for them.

She loves to dance.

She gets quiet if anyone hurts her.

She usually has a radio or phonograph playing. Enjoys symphonies, reading.

She is surprisingly athletic.

She hates to go to sleep, and to get up.

She's a strange combination of hard-boiled sophistication and naivete.

Alice can be categorized as a descendant personality. She also exhibits many more introverted than extroverted traits.

LONG VOYAGE HOME

(Continued from page 29)

had sent Griffith some photographs. If he took it, Hayden figured, maybe he'd last long enough to save money enough to make his own down payment. His personal expenses were practically nil. Clothes he didn't need, night clubs he abhorred. A modest sum to keep his mother comfortable, and the rest was velvet. He was binding himself for seven years, but Paramount wasn't, and they'd never keep him that long, don't make him laugh. But suppose, just for argument's sake, he clicked. Well then, he'd have money to buy a boat and sail it between pictures, and still have forty years of the sea ahead when he got out of hock. But that was all hooey. He was no actor. Come option time, and they'd throw him out on his ear.

So you know what happened. But not what went on behind the scenes, with Stirling chafing at the bit till he finally grabbed it and got the hell out.

initiation . . .

It wasn't so bad at first. As an unimportant contract player, he was left to go pretty much in his own way. He and his mother took a $50 house in the hills—and stayed there, incidentally, for the duration. They kept no help. Stirling liked his mother's cooking. He spent his spare time at the water front, his regulation costume a pair of dungarees, an open shirt, dilapidated canvas sneakers over bare feet.

Then came "Virginia," and the currying process started. He was told to lose weight. Six foot four and all muscle, he couldn't see the point. The first danger spark glinted. "It makes me nervous not to eat." That was okay, the screen was peculiar that way, it didn't show up nervousness, only weight.

What lay at the root of the whole thing was his inability to reconcile himself to pretense. Acting is making believe you're something you're not. He was convinced he'd never make an actor, but let that ride. At least on the screen he wasn't fooling anyone. What he couldn't stomach were the minor pretenses demanded of him—harmless enough, routine stuff to the initiated, but they irked him like a neck boil. He winced at the bare necessities of make-up and posing. "Man into monkey," he was heard muttering once.

Romance is part of the star build-up. Hayden, being normal, likes pretty girls but wants to pick his own. The first time they told him to take so-and-so out, he thought they were kidding.

"Why? I don't know her."

"We'll see that you're introduced."

"Suppose I don't like her."

"Look, we're not asking you to marry the girl. If you're seen with her at a couple of night spots, your name goes in the paper. That's all we want, your name in the paper."

"I'll buy you an ad," said Stirling and stalked out.

If they could make publicity capital of his sailing days, that was all right because it was true. But one day they took him down to San Pedro for stills and handed him a fish.

"What's that for?"

"You caught it."

"But I didn't catch it, you bought it."

"Listen, do you have to be literal, you could have caught it."

"When I do, I'll pose with it."

They thought that was straining at the gnat and swallowing the camel. Ac-

SOME DAYS I'M HAPPY!

. . . Some days I'm blue . . . like today, for instance.

Even this portable doesn't help. I've played stacks of old favorites, new swings and late boogie-woogies and still the glooms hang on!

So I ask you . . . what's a girl to do? Go out wearing a face full of frowns? Try to grin from ear to ear? Or call things off and stay home?

What I can't figure is how those pals of mine manage to keep going—no matter what day of the month it is.

What have others got that I haven't?

They must have something . . . and I'm the gal who's going to find out! How? . . . well, I'll hide my pride and ask 'em. Want to listen in?...

Jane called it comfort! The kind Kotex sanitary napkins give.

She explained that Kotex is different from pads that only "feel" soft at first touch. For Kotex is made in soft folds that are less bulky—more comfortable—made to stay soft while wearing!

And, oh, what a pal was Carrie! She put it this way . . . for confidence and poise there's nothing like the flat, pressed ends of Kotex. They don't show even when you go without a girdle!

Nancy simply said . . . Safety first! And thank heavens for Kotex with the moisture-resistant "safety shield" that gives extra protection!

So now I'm singing "So-long Blues!" Now I know why more women choose Kotex than all other brands put together! The best proof that Kotex stays soft!

BE CONFIDENT . . . COMFORTABLE . . . CAREFREE
—WITH KOTEX*

Don't forget

TIPS FOR 'TEENS! Send today for this handbook of Do's and Don't's . . . "As One Girl To Another." It answers a girl's intimate questions . . . tells all about "difficult days." Mail your name and address to P. O. Box 3434, Dept. MM-3, Chicago, Illinois, and get a copy postpaid and FREE!

(*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

CHAPPED HANDS HEAL FASTER...

ACCORDING TO ACTUAL TESTS WITH NOXZEMA SKIN CREAM

These unretouched photos (Case 34) show results of Noxzema Left shows chapped hands before treatment Right shows wonderful improvement after using Noxzema

With Noxzema, definite improvement is often seen overnight! That's because this famous medicated cream helps often dry, rough skin; aids in healing tiny skin "cuts."

SAVE ON STOCKINGS. Guard against snagging precious stockings. Help keep your hands and feet soft, smooth, with Noxzema!

Let Noxzema help you all these ways this winter

WINDBURN, CHAPPED LIPS. Noxzema brings quick, soothing relief to red, rough, painfully windburned skin and ugly chapped lips. Mary Richardson of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I use Noxzema on my face to help protect my skin against winter winds and to soothe it after exposure."

FROST BITE, CHILBLAINS, PAINFULLY CHAFED SKIN. Noxzema brings grand relief! Mrs. Harriette Eddy, of Minneapolis writes: "Every winter I suffered from Chilblains. After one application of Noxzema I felt a cool, soothing comfort I'd never known before!"

POOR COMPLEXION. Try medicated Noxzema for externally-caused blemishes; for skin reddened, roughened and "dried out" from winter winds. See for yourself how quickly this soothing cream helps improve your complexion!

SPECIAL OFFER. Here's your opportunity to find out how much Noxzema can do for you! For a limited time you can get the 25¢ jar at any drug or cosmetic counter—FOR ONLY 19¢! Get your jar today!

tually it was a straw in the wind which eventually blew up to be a hurricane.

He liked Madeline Carroll, she had intelligence, he could talk to her. But he wasn't in love with her, nor she with him, and he resented softly-planted implications to the contrary. They called him difficult. "And I'll go on being difficult," he retorted, "so long as you lie and play up things that aren't true."

He was accustomed to the plain dealing of seafarers, to men who accepted you at your worth and, if they were your friends today, were also your friends tomorrow. He was first bewildered, then suspicious, then scornful of his sudden social popularity after "Virginia." Not for a moment was he fooled or flattered when the Hollywood hostesses gave tongue. He knew if he'd flopped, he'd have been non-existent. They never got to first base with him. He doesn't drink, and he has no fund of small talk. "Why go round with a damn old cup of tea or a cocktail in your fingers and smirk, smirk, smirk!"

landlubber days . . .

He continued to hunger for the sea. At night he'd drive the twenty-five miles to San Pedro, hang around the docks, hobnob with the fisherfolk who talked his language while his eyes devoured sailboats. "God, what lines!" Somebody said, when a girl could get Hayden to look at her as he looked at a boat, she'd have him cinched.

He agreed to go with a friend one night to the home of some people who owned a yawl. There were four or five other guests. Stirling cornered the host, whose passion for boats was second only to his, and they spent the evening adoring blueprints and photos. The yawl-owner's wife sent him to the doghouse. Stirling's friend bawled him out. He dragged a hand across his be-mused eyes. "I didn't even know the others were there."

To consolidate his triumph in "Virginia," he was sent on a personal appearance tour. The publicity man assigned to the job didn't have a good time. Before each appearance he had to watch Hayden sweat, listen to his maledictions, practically shove him out on the stage. "I don't jig, I don't warble, I can't entertain them, why do I have to make an ass of myself?"

Cronies of his Gloucester days came to see him in Boston. He fell on their necks, huddled with them in the dressing room and could hardly be pried loose in time for his stint. "Wait, boys, I'll be right back." They waited. He was due at a ball that night to judge some contest and rebelled at climbing into tails. Not his, he wouldn't be found dead owning a pair. Taking pity on the monitor, his pals finally crammed him into the dress suit, and Judge Hayden picked the winner with finger-smudges trailing down his shirtfront.

By the time he got back, he was wondering how long he could take it. At the studio, it was full speed ahead for this phenomenon, whom the fans were whoop-de-dooing after one picture. "Bahama Passage" first, then maybe even Robert Jordan in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." To Hayden these plans were the bars of a cage, fast threatening to enclose him. He took to prowling the hills at night with his old collie. He talked to Bill Holden, his only confidant. Bill's another whom Hollywood hasn't absorbed.

He decided to wait till after "Bahama Passage." Down in Nassau, away from the impact of Hollywood, maybe he could think things out. As he might have foreseen, Hollywood went down to Nassau with him. The same publicity, the same supervision, the same sense that he didn't belong to himself. His wardrobe consisted of his only suit, a sweater and a couple of shirts. When a meeting was arranged between the company and the Duke of Windsor, he was told that his clothes were inadequate to the occasion. He shrugged. "What's wrong with a decent suit and a clean shirt?" Eventually they borrowed flannels and a white jacket from Tommy Goodwin, the golfer.

decisions . . .

He fought the battle out down there. For himself the choice was clear. But there was his mother. Being the tight-mouthed kind, who considers that his problems are his own to solve, he'd never told her just how he felt. She knew he was oppressed by certain aspects of the business, but not how deeply. He knew she'd taken comfort from their first prospect of financial security. At four one morning a late reveler caught sight of a yogi-like figure, pacing the cement roof of the Prince George Hotel. It was Hayden, barefooted, a pareu round his waist. "What you doing up there?"

"Thinking."

The day he got back to Hollywood, he talked to his mother. Frances Hayden is tall, patrician-looking, self-contained. Her son gets more than his looks from her. She makes no bones about admitting that she was staggered and dismayed by Stirling's first revelation of his state of mind. His proposal to quit, to throw over a heaven-sent future of freedom from money worries, came as a shock. But as he went on, drawing the picture of what this life he hated was doing to him, the balance shifted. In the end she said: "If it's going to ruin your spirit, not to mention your disposition, nothing is worth it. In the final analysis, you know that I'm for whatever makes you happy."

That was enough. He went to the studio and told them he was quitting.

"You can't do that—"

"I can do anything I like. This business is making me sick, and I'm getting out."

"You'll never be able to come back."

"I don't want to come back."

"There's another angle. 'Bahama Passage' isn't finished. You've a moral obligation to go through with it."

"Oh, I'll finish the picture all right. But when it's in the can, I'm through."

They didn't know just how seriously to take him. This was the kind of talk players gave out with when they wanted more money or better parts. He wanted neither. They decided a boat might turn the tide, so they went out and bought one for seventeen thousand bucks and gathered hopefully round to watch it work magic. Touched by the gesture in spite of himself, Hayden couldn't help grinning. This was child's play. He wanted the sea, not three miles of coastal waters, he wanted freedom

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

Even Shirley Temple has pulled a nifty or two. This happened after Shirley had visited President Roosevelt at the White House. When Shirley returned to Hollywood, I spoke to her about her meeting with the President. Merely to get the conversation going, I said; "President Roosevelt has a nice smile, hasn't he?" Shirley answered, "Yes," and then quickly said, "I wonder if he gets as tired of smiling as I do."

Sidney Skolsky

to be his own man. He sailed the boat a couple of times because it was a boat, and he couldn't keep his hands off the damn thing, then returned it with thanks.

I saw him during that period, before his plans had become public knowledge. He was quiet, pleasant, told his story without reference to his personal problems, but could no more suppress the undercurrent of his feeling for the life he had left than he could help breathing. It made me curious. "Feeling as you do, how could you bear to give it up?"

"I have plans. But I can't talk about them yet."

"Plans to go back?"

He nodded.

I called myself a fool for believing him. The same kind of talk from other players had never turned out to be anything but talk. So I felt a thrill of exultation when the thing happened. It was none of my business, and I should have saved my sympathy for Paramount, which has done me no harm.

But then Paramount showed plenty of sympathy for the nonconformist, once they faced the fact that he meant what he said. Hayden thought the best way to convince them would be to go. So, with "Bahama Passage" finished, he went. Would he come back for a conference? they wired. He came back, not for a conference, but to give them a full explanation of his viewpoint, which he felt he owed them if they wanted to hear it. The gist of it was: "I don't belong here. It's not my life. To stay here would be like draining the blood out of my veins, killing whatever's inside that makes a man himself."

Would he stay long enough to do "For Whom the Bell Tolls"? "No. There's no sense in it. I'd just be getting myself and you in deeper. More money out of your pocket, more snarls for me to break through. Now I can go with a clear conscience."

They offered to call it an unfinished, rather than a broken, contract and to give him a settlement on it, in return for the promise that if he ever came back, it would be to them. "I can't picture myself coming back," he said, "but I suppose you can't tell what the future may hold, and I don't mind making that promise." He turned the settlement and his savings over to his mother—enough to take care of her for the next several years.

Being over-height, he was rejected for duty in the naval service. After one voyage on a cargo boat with dynamite for Portugal, his application to join the Canadian Ambulance Service was accepted. At this writing, he's waiting for the order that will take his unit to Egypt.

That's all there is, girls. With "Bahama Passage," the sailor sails out of your lives. Don't shut him out of your hearts. Where he's going, your good wishes may help. They can't hurt anyway.

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

Samuel Goldwyn's boy, Sammy, Jr., is a character in his own right. Sam is very proud of Junior, and one night at a large party, Goldwyn, to show how smart his young son was, said, "Sammy, I'm going to give you a problem. Think carefully before you answer. If you had twelve pennies and you lost four pennies, how many pennies would you have left?" Sammy, Jr., thought carefully. Then he answered, "But why should I lose four pennies?"

Sidney Skolsky

"My husband's kisses were cold as ice"

HOW A WIFE OVERCAME THE "ONE NEGLECT" THAT THREATENED HER MARRIAGE

1. I never dreamed I would ever play the rôle of a neglected wife. We were so madly in love, at first—then, little by little, Jack's ardor waned until it seemed as though he actually disliked to be near me. I was utterly miserable.

2. I hid my unhappiness from everyone. Until one day at luncheon with Jane, my closest chum—I broke down and told her everything. She said, "Darling, don't be offended, but perhaps it's your fault. There's nothing that chills a husband's love more than carelessness about feminine hygiene.

3. "Early in my marriage," she said, "a woman doctor set me straight forever about this one neglect. I've followed her advice ever since and used Lysol disinfectant for intimate personal care. Because Lysol cleanses, deodorizes . . . and a single douche kills millions of germs, without harm to sensitive tissues."

4. I went immediately to the nearest drug store, bought a bottle of Lysol, and followed the simple feminine hygiene directions on the label. I've used it ever since, with 100% effective results. My marriage, I might add, has become a happy honeymoon once more!

Check this with your Doctor

Lysol is NON-CAUSTIC—gentle and efficient in proper dilution. Contains no free alkali. It is not carbolic acid. EFFECTIVE—a powerful germicide, active in presence of organic matter (such as mucus, serum, etc.). SPREADING—Lysol solutions spread and virtually search out germs in deep crevices. ECONOMICAL—small bottle makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. CLEANLY ODOR—disappears after use. LASTING—Lysol keeps full strength indefinitely, no matter how often it is uncorked.

Lysol Disinfectant

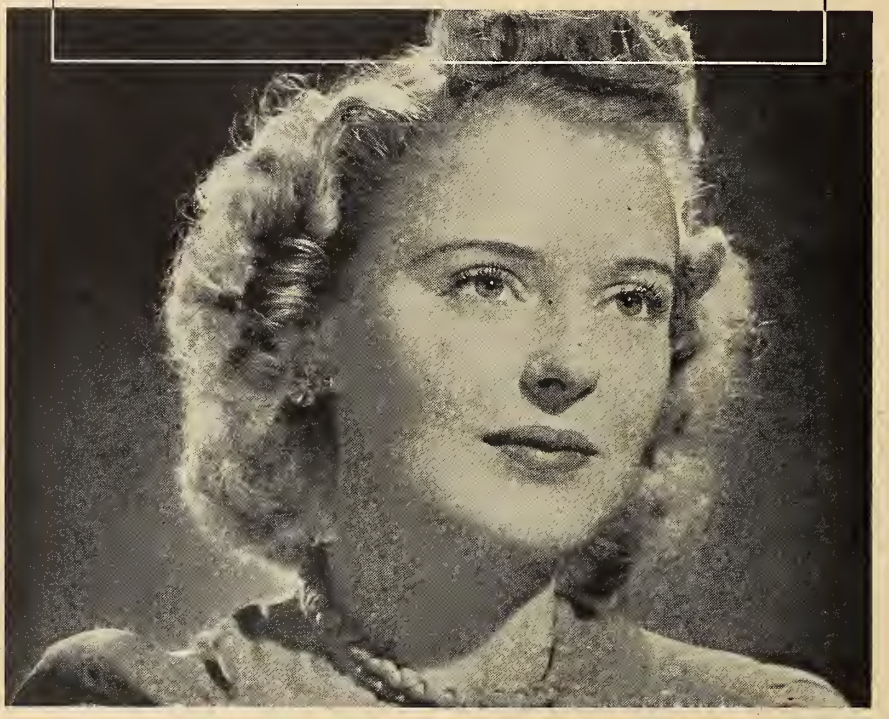
FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

Copr., 1941, by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

For FREE booklet (in plain wrapper) about Feminine Hygiene and other Lysol uses, send postcard to Lehn & Fink Products Corp., Dept. M. S. - 342, Bloomfield, N. J., U.S.A.

"What creams does she use?"

....women wonder when they see a skin like hers



"What does she do that I don't do? What creams does she use? How does she escape flaws that most of us have to struggle with—enlarged pore openings, oily shine, blackheads, or excessive dryness?"

These are the questions women always wish they could ask the fortunate possessor of a fair, lovely skin. Answers by the hundred would be simply: "I use two creams which are different—Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Creams."

PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA SKIN CREAM (FORMERLY TEXTURE CREAM)
Get the full benefit of this unique cream by using it as a night treatment. It softens and neutralizes accumulations often acid in nature in the external pore openings. And because it contains cholesterol it holds moisture in the skin and so helps to keep it supple and pliant, and to relieve excessive dryness.

A smooth, lasting foundation. Phillips' Skin Cream seems to have a special affinity for make-up. It prepares the skin by removing excess oiliness and softening rough dryness so that powder and rouge go on evenly, and last.

PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA CLEANSING CREAM
This special cream offers a method of cleansing that is different! It not only absorbs the surface dirt but penetrates the outer pore openings and floats away the accumulations which may lodge there. Profit by the experience of women who have tried them—put Phillips' Creams to work on your skin!

Skin Cream 10c, 30c and 60c • Cleansing Cream 10c, 30c, 60c and $1.00

DELIGHTFUL DELIRIUM

(Continued from page 33)

Her brother and her brother's chum went along with them.

It was two months before he graduated into taking Mal Weber to the movies alone, and another month before he got around to taking her to the Cocoanut Grove for dancing.

There was one drawback to dancing with Mal, he told her later. In high heels she was so tall that he couldn't look over her shoulders and lord it over the other men on the floor, all because he was dancing with Mal, and they weren't.

All this time, of course, Mal Weber was seeing other cavaliers besides Ray Milland, the dashing young British actor under contract to M-G-M.

Ray had nothing but scorn for his competitors, scorn and a feeling that they were taking an unfair advantage. Gentlemen of leisure for the most part, they let no grass grow under their feet.

"This place looks like Grand Hotel!" Ray used to tell Mal with unconcealed indignation, whenever he would sprint from the studio to the Weber home and find a posse of rivals on hand.

courtship days . . .

There were times, of course, when suitor Milland behaved dreadfully. Such as the time he arrived one evening to find her playing bridge with three nice young men. He hung around for two hours kibitzing like mad. And left in a huff. Which was all right with Mal—for a while. The next morning she received a poem in the mail. He was always sending her poems. They were more potent than orchids.

New Year's Eve, 1932, is a red-letter day in Mal's life. New Year's Day happens to be her birthday. But that isn't it.

The date is important because of something Ray did that night. They were over at the Cocoanut Grove, welcoming the New Year, welcoming it with champagne. It must have been two in the morning when Ray asked her if she didn't think it was hot and how would she like to take a small walk through the arcades of the Ambassador Hotel, in which the Cocoanut Grove, as you know, is located. These arcades are lined with shop windows—florists, tobacconists, etc.

She remembers wanting to stop and look at a gown displayed in one of the shop windows and how Ray wouldn't hear of it. He led her by the hand to another window, one belonging to a jewelry store.

With a wave of the hand he swept over the entire contents of the window, tiaras, bracelets, clips, rings, brooches, earrings, etc.

"One day I will buy all of these for you," he said.

Mal laughed, a tra-la-la-la-la sort of laugh.

"What are you laughing at?" Ray came back. "Here is a very nice young man offering to sacrifice his whole life for you and you laugh."

She kept on laughing—tra-la-la-la-la.

"Look here," Ray said. "Please pay attention. Let's be serious about this. I am asking you to marry me. Do let us keep this on a serious plane."

Mal looked at him a little amused.

"You are somewhat intoxicated, and furthermore I don't love you."

And with that she flounced out of the place.

Ray Milland, rebuffed for the first (but not the last) time went home and sat up for hours writing another sad poem.

He saw her the next day briefly. He arrived late in the afternoon, chatted with her brother, gave her a casual, "Oh, hello, there!" and left the room.

The courtship those next three months was strange and stormy. One of the two was always walking out, slamming a door or hanging up. Nonetheless, there were two more proposals, both futile.

There was a time when Ray put her out of his mind for good and started going steady—not with one girl but two.

For weeks there was no word from him. Finally he called and asked if she would go to a show with him. Mal remembers that invitation very well. She said yes. Ray never showed up. Absentmindedly he had gone to the circus with one, or both, of his two girl friends.

He didn't call the next day: he was too ashamed. Nor the next. Nor the one after that.

orange blossoms . . .

They met next quite unexpectedly at a buffet supper given by a mutual friend. Ray sneaked off, too ashamed to speak to her. Finally she walked over to where he was nursing a Martini. He didn't say anything. He just looked at her. She looked at him.

"It must have been that way for an interminable and awful minute," Mal says.

She was about to walk away when Ray spoke up.

"Look. Will you marry me?"

"Yes," Mal said.

"Are you sure you want to?" He seemed flabbergasted.

"The other night when you didn't come I felt awful. I said to myself that I wouldn't feel that way about someone I didn't love."

He didn't have enough money to buy her an engagement ring, so he bought her a diamond wrist watch. It cost $175, but a ring would have cost $500. At least the ring Ray had in mind.

They planned the honeymoon together. They would spend a couple of weeks stopping off at various West Coast watering places. And in good hotels, too, Ray told her. Then came the surprise.

"Darling," Ray announced, "I can't have my wife going on her honeymoon in the jalopy I'm now driving. We're getting a new car."

Ray got the new car, all right. It took a little fast talking with a finance company representative he knew fairly well. (You know how finance companies feel toward actors—especially unimportant young actors.)

On the eve of the wedding the groom-to-be (not until months later did Mal Milland ever find this out) made an interesting discovery. With everything shipshape for the wedding and the honeymoon—new car and all—he had overlooked a fairly important detail: the wedding ring. And his bank balance read $44.17!

Frantic for a moment, but only for a moment, he solved the impasse by hocking his valuable stud set, a present from his father, for $300 and acquiring a honey of a ring.

The wedding ceremony Mal Milland will never forget.

Ray arrived at the Riverside Mission while a rehearsal was going on, a stand-in serving in Ray's stead. Someone spotted Ray and asked him to go through the rehearsal once. He went through the ceremony, and then someone else piped up with "Let's go through it again."

Well, everything went smoothly until they got to the part where the minister asked him if he had the ring. Mechanically, Ray handed it to the parson. He was standing there thinking of the moment a few minutes hence when he would be doing the final take when all of a sudden he heard his sister-in-law sobbing. His wife nudged him. Then . . .

"This isn't a rehearsal. This is the real thing. You're supposed to kiss me."

Which explains how come Mal Weber married a man who wasn't even aware it was happening.

"I remember that my first wifely thought was to get to understand this husband of mine perfectly," Mal confides with an amused smile. "That was nine years ago, and the project is far from being completed. Come to think of it, I hope it never is."

one in a million . . .

You understand what the lady means when you get an action picture of Milland the practicing husband. He has no counterpart anywhere.

"Consider, please," Mal suggests, "how it happens that our house stands on this particular spot and not somewhere over in Pasadena or Encino or where have you. We are bivouacked here thanks to a cocker spaniel, Mister Pinkerton.

"Don't laugh," Mrs. M. said wryly, "because it's true—true like a corn on your toe."

It all happened because Mister Pinkerton went and got himself lost. It also happened because Ray was very much attached to Mister Pinkerton and put an ad in the paper explaining that Mr. P. was a.w.o.l. and if anyone wanted a reward, let him call such and such a telephone number.

That same night a lady telephoned and said she was entertaining the growling canine on her premises, and when was the owner planning to pick him up.

Her Fitch Shampoo and hairstyle by Charmode Beauty Salon, Palmer House, Chicago

I Bought His Love

"Not for love or money!" I heard him say. No—Joe would never take a girl with dandruff to the party, and I had the worst case of dandruff in town. Yet, the very next day, he actually begged me to go with him! My white-flecked hair was transformed into a silken glory overnight. Joe saw me as a new and radiantly lovely person, all because I purchased a bottle of Fitch Shampoo at my favorite toilet goods counter.

I discovered that Fitch's Shampoo removes dandruff with the very first application. Its rich lather rinses out completely, leaving my hair shining clean. Actually, it penetrates tiny hair openings, helping to keep my scalp in normal, trouble-free condition. At the beauty shop or at home, I now insist on my weekly Fitch shampoo to keep my hair lovely and free of dandruff, the way Joe likes it. When I bought Fitch Shampoo, I bought his love!

GOODBYE DANDRUFF!

Fitch's is the only shampoo whose money-back guarantee to remove dandruff is backed by one of the world's largest insurance firms. Use Fitch Shampoo regularly each week. It reconditions as it cleanses — economical, too!

Soap Shampoo

1. This photograph shows germs and dondruff scottered, but not removed, by ordinary soop shompaa.

Soap Shampoo

3. Microphato shaws hoir shompooed with ordinory soop ond rinsed twice. Note dondruff and curd deposit left by soop to mar noturol luster af hoir.

Fitch Shampoo

2. All germs, dondruff and other foreign motter completely destroyed ond removed by Fitch Shompoo.

Fitch Shampoo

4. Microphota after Fitch Shampoo and hoir rinsed twice. Note Fitch Shampaa removes all dondruff and undissolved deposit, and brings out the naturol luster of the hair.

Copr. 1942 F. W. Fitch Co.

FRANK BAIRD, internationally famous hairstylist of New York and Hollywood says, "Any product that will not remove dandruff in one application won't remove it at all. To remove dandruff in a single application, and for best results in hair styling, I insist on Fitch Shampoo."

Fitch's TRADE MARK DANDRUFF REMOVER SHAMPOO

Des Moines, Iowa • Bayonne, N. J. • Las Angeles, Calif.

New under-arm
Cream Deodorant
safely
Stops Perspiration

1. Does not harm dresses, or men's shirts. Does not irritate skin.
2. No waiting to dry. Can be used right after shaving.
3. Instantly checks perspiration for 1 to 3 days. Removes odor from perspiration, keeps armpits dry.
4. A pure white, greaseless, stainless vanishing cream.
5. Arrid has been awarded the Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering, for being harmless to fabrics.

Arrid is the largest selling deodorant ... try a jar today

ARRID

39¢ a jar

AT ALL STORES WHICH SELL TOILET GOODS

(Also in 10 cent and 59 cent jars)

Specially made for blondes. Helps keep light hair from darkening—brightens faded blonde hair. Not a liquid, it is a fragrant powder that quickly makes a rich cleansing lather. Instantly removes the dingy, dust-laden film that makes blonde hair dark, old-looking.

Called Blondex, it gives hair attractive lustre and highlights—keeps that just-shampooed look for a whole week. Safe, fine for children's hair, Blondex is the world's largest selling blonde shampoo. For extra lustre and radiance, top off shampoo with Blondex Golden Rinse. Can be used on all shades of blonde hair. Both cost little to use. Get Blondex Shampoo and Golden Rinse at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

"Immediately," Ray said, taking down the address.

The next thing Mal knew Ray was on the telephone, that it was really Mister Pinkerton and would she come over right away.

"But why?"

"I'll tell you later."

Within an hour of her arrival on the scene, the Briarcrest Valley section of Coldwater Canyon, Ray had bought a lot, once owned by Robert Taylor, from the woman who had found the dog.

The house, too, shows the Milland whimsey.

It is built from the mellowed wood of a scuttled ship. And Mrs. Milland has a gold key to the front door, presented to her on the day that ground was first broken, a key reading, "Come up and see me sometime."

incurable romantic . . .

Milland the spouse is an incurable romantic who calls his wife twice a day and always lets her know, as so few Hollywood husbands do, at what time, almost to the minute, she can expect him for dinner. He's always bringing home things he's heard Mal talk about at dinner table three weeks back, things at the mention of which he either winced, grumbled or looked sore.

That part of him is easy to figure out. Not all sides are.

For instance, Milland the wacky economist, the penny-wise pound-foolish citizen who sends Mal, willy-nilly, into hysterical laughter.

He yips about lights and is always leaving them on himself.

"We've got to economize, darling," he says. "This job of mine isn't going to last forever."

Mal tells him she's sorry.

The next day he will telephone her from a jewelry store to ask her if she doesn't want a topaz bracelet. When she says no he is apt to get indignant and say:

"I want my wife to enjoy the luxuries of life, and cost is no object."

Not so long ago he talked for ten minutes pleading with her for permission to bring her home an aquamarine ring. But the topper to that is the time he went to Magnin's and brought her home a half dozen Paris originals. Let her go buy one, and he is sure to hit the ceiling and notify her they're certainly going bankrupt.

problem husband . . .

As a man around the house, Mrs. Milland is quick to confess that he probably has betters by the dozen in the same block. She can get up to mix a drink and he will let her. On the other hand, if she says: "Ray, darling, will you mix the drinks?" he'll do it. You sort of have to remind him.

Making or accepting engagements used to frighten Mrs. Mal Milland until she hit upon the scheme of saying, "provided Ray is feeling all right." That works beautifully.

She will remind him as he is leaving for the studio that they're going to the Mr. and Mrs. Nonesuches for dinner and he'll say: "I'm looking forward to it, Mal. I like the Nonesuches."

All he has to do is step into the foyer that night, and she can guess his first seven words.

"Mal, darling, I've got an awful headache."

Mal telephones and explains. Long practice has made her good at it.

These "headaches" come in very handy. On Tuesdays and Fridays, nights which he devotes to a couple of local fight cards, he is certain to return home from the matches with a headache if he notices a line of cars out front. The cars mean that Mal and the girls are playing bridge. Ray holds his head, begs off and goes right upstairs to bed. Stays there too, he does.

Milland the fickle—ah, there's a Milland whose neck Mal probably has wanted to wring many a time. Wanted to—but never has!

He will come one night and give her a terrific spiel to the effect that the minute the picture is over they're leaving for New York and a long vacation. Mal will get all excited, will write to friends, get her winter wardrobe ready, etc. Then, a day or so before the picture is over, Ray will come home and tell her that anyone who goes to New York is a dope. Catalina or Palm Springs—that's the place for the Millands. But Mal takes it like a trouper.

father Milland . . .

Milland the father is one for the books. He was in Sun Valley when Daniel, now going on two, arrived prematurely. He telephoned the hospital, got the nurse on the wire and was startled by the sound of a child's voice.

"Your son has just been born," the nurse said. "Your wife's all right. The child—well, we can't tell."

He drove some 200 miles in an open car through a snowstorm to catch a plane at Boise, arrived in time to give his blood for a transfusion and stayed at the hospital until Daniel, five transfusions later, was out of danger. He brought the baby home himself, found the house filled with friends, Cesar Romero, Ann Sothern, Roger Pryor, etc., who made it a more than memorable homecoming.

A couple of months later George Murphy called up to say he wanted to present a perambulator to Daniel if Ray would come over and get it. Ray, with his scion in his arms, hustled right over, wheeled little Daniel back in the bassinet-on-wheels.

Milland the proud papa has a habit of getting superfluous. There was the time he came home one night, raced upstairs, found a welt of red across the baby's face and telephoned the doctor frantically. When the medicine man arrived, Ray's face was redder than little Daniel's. Mal's friends had planted a lipsticked kiss on Dan's cherubic face. Hence the welt of red. Some day Daniel will be bragging about the ladies who used to kiss him. Some of the notoriously glamerous bussers are Hedy Lamarr, Joan Crawford, Loretta Young, Barbara Stanwyck, etc.

This you-never-can-tell quality about Ray Mal wouldn't change for the Taj Mahal. It is perfectly true that she has answered a doorbell to find a man about to deliver a horse Ray has ordered (and the Millands not even owning a stable), but it is also true that at least once a week he suggests out of a clear blue sky, right after dinner, that they dress up and go do the town up big. It is true that he couldn't wait more than six months before taking the baby down to the studio barbershop to get a haircut (what hair?), but it is likewise true that he is constantly building something which he hopes will please her, even if he does leave his tools scattered all over the place. And so on.

"Remember that 'delightful delirium' I mentioned when this monologue began?" Mal inquired, as she sped the parting guest. "Well, I hope you get the general idea."

Well, vaguely.

SKIPPY'S TOUGHEST ROLE

(Continued from page 39)

hurting him, explaining to him as to an adult the obligations laid on him to his studio, his fans, his co-workers. Her teaching dropped on such fertile soil that it boomeranged now and then. It was he who nagged her about getting places on time. "Mother thinks, if you have to be at the studio by nine, you can make it by leaving the house at nine." Invited to a seven o'clock dinner, he's sure to be ringing the doorbell at five minutes of—on the principle that it's better to come early and embarrass the hostess than come late and spoil the food. At 15, he prevailed on Mrs. Bigelow and his publicity manager to let him meet the press unattended. "If you want, you can give me the pointers beforehand. But I'm getting much too big to be trailed by dames."

There was no question, then, as to whether Jack should be told of the nature of his mother's illness. It was assumed that he had the right to know and the strength to bear his heavy knowledge. That assumption was justified. "Never," said the doctor, "have I had finer co-operation from anyone, young or old, than I had from Jack during those 14 months. I watched him grow from boyhood to manhood, and I admired him as I have admired few people whom I've met in my work."

Aided and abetted by those around him—his mother's mother, her sisters, his uncle Norman Taurog, the doctor, the nurse—Jack began playing his part. They all worked together like a team, their watchword: everything as usual, where possible—knowing that any deviation from the norm would be most likely to awaken suspicion.

There was a problem involved in the fact that, as a movie actor, Jack was news; and Mrs. Bigelow followed the news in fan mags, newspaper columns and on the air. It was decided that their best course would be to give the press the truth and ask them to refrain from mentioning it. The pact was made and, with one inadvertent exception, scrupulously kept. As good fortune would have it, Mrs. Bigelow happened not to be listening in that night.

temporary respite . . .

She was well enough that year to spend a happy Christmas. She wrapped her own packages, as she'd always done, with Jack helping. "I stick my big thumb in," he jeered, "when she ties a bow and she calls it helping." She was well enough to plan with him a surprise party

HOLLYWOOD SMALL FRY

While the Frank McHughs were in Europe, their son Peter stayed with relatives in Hartford. There Peter played with a small boy whose father is a professor at Harvard. After several weeks of playing with Peter, the little boy went to his father, the professor, and said, "Why don't we have famous people come to visit us at our house?" "But famous people do come here," the professor said. "The President of Harvard has been here. Nicholas Murray Butler has been here. Even Professor Einstein was here." "I know," replied the boy, "but I mean really famous—like Jimmy Cagney."

Sidney Skolsky

Linda Darnell CHARMING STAR OF 20th CENTURY-FOX PRODUCTION "RISE AND SHINE" FINDS JOY IN THE COMPANIONSHIP OF HER PET CANARY "OSCAR"

Canaries

HOLLYWOOD'S NEWEST HOBBY SENSATION

. . . And in Hollywood

FRENCH'S BIRD SEED IS THE FAVORITE . . . 4 TO 1

Canaries for companionship . . . canaries for cheer . . . canaries for sunshine and song! Canaries in the home—in studio dressing rooms—on movie sets! Canaries! Canaries! Hollywood's newest and most fascinating pet hobby—one that you, too, can enjoy!

Another Hollywood choice is French's Bird Seed and Biscuit—the song-tested, proven recipe of eleven aids to song and health: Canary, Poppy, Rape, Sesame and Millet Seeds; Soy Bean Grits, Yeast, Wheat Germ (B_1), Corn Syrup, Cuttlebone and Charcoal. In every package of French's Bird Seed is a French's Bird Biscuit (in itself worth 10c). It gives the diet an extra lift and combines with French's Bird Seed to supply your Canary an 11-course balanced meal—all in one package!

LARGEST SELLING BIRD SEED IN THE U. S.

Send for Movie Stars' Canary Book

FREE

The same beautifully illustrated 76-page book that movie stars keep handy for expert advice on the care, treatment and breeding of canaries. It's yours—Free! Simply mail Coupon, with your name and address.

MAIL THIS FREE COUPON

The R. T. FRENCH CO.
2462 Mustard St., Rochester, N. Y.
Send me Movie Stars' Canary Book—Free!

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

(Paste on penny postcard and mail)

Special notice
ABOUT COLDS

Now there's an improved, better Vicks way for you to relieve the miseries of colds such as coughing, muscular soreness or tightness. This treatment takes only 3 minutes—and actually makes good old Vicks VapoRub even more effective!

Acts 2 ways at once to bring relief . . . PENETRATES to irritated upper bronchial tubes with soothing medicinal vapors . . . STIMULATES chest and back surfaces like a warming poultice . . . AND WORKS FOR HOURS to ease misery of the cold.

BETTER RESULTS THAN EVER BEFORE

To get this improved Vicks treatment —with all its relief-giving benefits— massage VapoRub for 3 minutes on BACK, as well as on throat and chest, then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with a warm cloth. Try it!

For Better Results
VICKS VAPORUB
The Improved Way

NEW! 1942 MODEL POCKET RADIO! NO TUBES BATTERIES
BEAUTIFUL PLASTIC CABINETS
BAND-DIAL—MAGNOPHONE Fits your pocket or purse—Wt. 5 ozs., ABOUT CIGARETTE PACKAGE SIZE—FIXED POWER CRYSTAL! OWNERS REPORT 2-3 YEARS SERVICE—THOUSANDS SOLD! W. C. of Wisc., says "WORKS SWELL"!
GUARANTEED TO WORK—ONE YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE
Sent complete ready to listen with instructions for use in homes, offices, hotels, in bed, etc. NO ELECTRIC "PLUG IN" REQUIRED —EASY PAYMENT PLAN AS FOLLOWS:—
SEND ONLY $1.00 (cash, M. O., check) and pay postman $1.99 plus postage on arrival, or send $2.99 for postpaid delivery! LIMITED PRODUCTION!—GET YOUR NEW MIDGET NOW—for real enjoyment! Ideal gift for anyone—ORDER NOW!
MIDGET RADIO CO., DEPT. W-3, KEARNEY, NEBRASKA

new rouge . . . and SO different!

Go modern with the completely different HAMPDEN'S rouge. This wonderful color cream is so easy to use • blends off to nothing • gives a soft, warm color, even in tone like 'nature's blush.' It's the rouge plus!

ROUGE-STICK hampden

25c also 50c & 10c sizes
Over 5 million sold

for Bonita's 18th birthday in February and to smile down from the gallery above the living room when the kids trooped in, and Jack whisked a blindfold from his girl friend's eyes.

As time went on and she took to bed, the game grew harder, but he adjusted himself to its demands. So long as she was free from pain, they kept the sick-room gay. There was no tiptoeing about, no hushing of voices, no exaggerated demonstrations of affection, no mother-darling-I-love-you stuff, however great his yearning may have been. It was more likely to be, "Hi, Mabel, what you been up to?" as he breezed in, heart thumping with anxiety, face cleared of any expression of concern.

Then there'd be a powwow, with Mabel as eager interlocutor and Jack describing the details of his day, having stored up gags, anecdotes and general clowning material for just this purpose. "Zoot?" he'd say, which in jive language means, "Get it?" Or, "Now, mom, this is solid"—meaning this is the goods, the absolute low-down. She picked it up from him. "I've had a swell day. That's solid, kid."

Since she couldn't go out for it, he brought life and color to her. Buddy Pepper and Junior Coghlan, his pals, would come pounding in, taking their cue from Jack, acting as they'd always acted with Mabel, cavorting, making her laugh. Once, when the nurse had braided her hair and tied the pigtails with ribbons, they stood in the doorway, rapt with admiration, telling her she looked like a chicken, telling her all the girls wore their hair that way, that it was the latest style.

Bun and her mother would bring their knitting, so Mabel could see how Jack's sweater was progressing and help decide the crucial question as to whether it should be crew neck or V. Jack had a projection machine installed in her room, so she could see movies. He got his band together, made recordings and played them to her. "Any good or does it stink? Solid now, Mom."

He spent most of his allowance on her, tumbling bright packages over her bed. She had to open them herself—perfumes, scented soaps, silk pillows, negligees, bedjackets, blanket covers with pillow slips to match. "Jackie, you shouldn't—"

"A mere bagatelle, my good woman—"

While he was making "Syncopation," he brought her a daily offering of carnations, purchases from a crippled vendor at the studio gate. "Gee, Mom, you're no expense to me. They only cost 35c. And the little guy needs the business."

He kidded her into letting him take over this or that business responsibility, which her failing strength could no longer cope with. "I'm 18 now, Mom. Time I learned how to be man of the family." He was forever presenting plans for the future, knowing there would be no future for them together. "Look, Mom, I got an idea—" was his theme song.

looking ahead . . .

"Look, Mom, I got an idea. How's about a ranch where we could keep horses? You'll be riding in two or three months, what do you say? Maybe if we could get one near enough town, huh? Else it might be lonely—. Gee, Mom. I'd like a ranch, wouldn't you? With lots of room to spread out and the kids up for week-ends?" After which elaborate build-up, he'd be found in the hall, crying his heart out.

But there was no hysteria and very little breaking down. Each was strong for the other and each was sustained by deep religious faith. No matter how Mabel was feeling, she'd pretend to feel better when Jack barged in. And if, after the long months in bed, she would now and then grow despondent, it was Jack who soothed her with explanations, having cooked up some plausible story with the doctor beforehand.

Only once, and briefly, did he turn rebellious—after his mother had fought her first battle with pain. "She never hurt anyone," he sobbed. "She was always good. All the tough times we had together—how hard she worked—and now when I can buy her stuff, all I can buy her is stuff to be sick in—"

He wasn't cooped up with her. For one thing, Mabel wouldn't have it. For another, its psychological effect on her would have been damaging. Often, when he was in no mood for going out, he'd go anyway, heeding the doctor's orders: "So far as you can, live your life as you've always lived it." But his life was governed during the last six months, by the fact that she was endlessly cooped up.

the Cooper courage . . .

He abandoned the jam sessions which had been his delight. He gave up his fishing trips. He refused business engagements which would keep him away overnight. He wouldn't ride because the trails took him too far from telephones. When he was out, either at the studio or elsewhere, he'd phone every couple of hours. When he came in, he'd head for her room before hanging his hat up, and paid his first morning visit in pajamas and tousled hair. They had a standing date, which even she couldn't talk him out of, on maid's night out. Every Thursday, he had dinner with her and the nurse on a card table in her room.

She liked to be carried from bed to the couch at the window and, when Jack was there, no matter how many willing pairs of arms offered, it was to him she turned. For months he slept with an ear open, so that if she were restless, he'd be there to move her. Once she said drowsily: "Funny. You're carrying me just the way I carried you when you were a baby. Such a big thing," she jibed, "to've grown from something so little."

People unaware of his mother's illness wanted to know what was the matter with Jack. He'd always been so reliable, now he broke dates. He'd always been so cooperative, now he refused to appear at benefits. He didn't tell them it was because his mother had had a bad night, or because he wouldn't go where he couldn't be reached by phone. He shrank from mentioning his trouble to comparative strangers. Anyway, the more people who knew it, the more likely it was to leak out and somehow reach her. So he kept his mouth shut and let criticism fall where it would.

He got his grit from her. Until two days before the end, she fought a valiant, if losing battle. Her son found solace in the certainty that, through his efforts and those of the others who loved her, she didn't know she was losing it. Never by word or sign did she admit any outcome but recovery to her illness, and her rare moments of depression came only because recovery took so long.

When she said at last, "I can't stand the pain any longer," the doctor knew that the end was in sight. It came one Thursday morning, just after midnight. She seemed tired, but no worse than usual, so the doctor advised the family to leave. Jack stayed with the nurse. His mother dozed for a while, then woke and called his name. "Talk to me," she whispered, as he sat down beside her and took her hand. So, as he'd been doing for months, he dug up material for her diversion. And since she was most readily diverted by his own doings, he told her about a sketch he thought of writing, talked steadily but watched for the first signs of fatigue which he'd grown expert in recognizing.

She kept her eyes fixed on his. "Zoot?" the nurse heard him say and detected in his voice an undercurrent of anxiety. She went over to the bed. "Cute," Mabel was saying to Jack. "Cute," she repeated, smiling. Reassured, Jack grinned back. But the nurse went to the phone outside and softly summoned doctor and family.

Half an hour later, his mother died in Jack's arms. Someone moved toward him with words of comfort. "I'm all right," he said quietly. "Thank God, her pain's over."

A simple requiem mass was held at the Church of the Good Shepherd. Buddy and Junior, the friends who'd stood shoulder to shoulder with him through his ordeal, were among the pallbearers. Bun walked down the aisle with him, but he walked back alone. His head was up, yet he looked as if he were straining against a weight.

A few days later the three boys packed their camping equipment and went off to the woods. Jack said: "I'll be back in time to keep my date to ride down Santa Claus Lane." His trouper's creed —that professional obligations were made to be kept—had been suspended only to meet a closer obligation.

He's given up the big house where he lived with his mother and taken small bachelor quarters where he'll live alone. He goes about his business, doesn't flaunt his heart on his sleeve. For Jack, Mabel isn't gone. So long as he lives, she'll live beside him. In the heritage of character and integrity she gave him. In her love and pride and trust.

It's a heritage Skippy will always keep faith with all of his life. That's solid.

FASHION MERCHANDISE SHOWN ON PAGE 64

WHAT TYPE ARE YOU? PAGE 64

Grey and red turban. $2.95. Lord & Taylor, New York.

Striped jersey stocking cap. $2.50. Marshall Field, Chicago.

"Robin Hood" brimmed sport hat. Lord & Taylor, New York.

White felt Dutch cap. $1.95. Lindner Co., Cleveland.

Little boy cap of gabardine. $1.95. James McCreery, New York.

All hats from Madcaps, Inc.

HOORAY FOR GABARDINE PAGE 65

Pink or blue gabardine suit with pleated skirt, under $10 in Marshall Field basement store, Chicago.

BOOTS, BOOTS, BOOTS. PAGE 66

All boots and rainwear from U. S. Rubber Co. Don't be too disappointed if you don't see these exact styles at your local store, for rubber is on the priority list and the favorites will be quickly sold. Boots range from $3 to $5.

"Your Man, too, loves Soft Hands," says RITA HAYWORTH*
(Lovely Hollywood Star)
DOES HE THINK I CAN DO HOUSEWORK AND HAVE HANDS LIKE A MOVIE STAR!
WELL, YOU CAN HAVE LOVELY SOFT HANDS, LINDA, BY USING JERGENS LOTION. JERGENS FURNISHES SOFTENING MOISTURE OUR HAND SKIN NEEDS.
SO LINDA USED JERGENS LOTION FAITHFULLY, AND SOON
RITA HAYWORTH HAS GLAMOROUS HANDS, HASN'T SHE, MACK?
YOUR OWN HANDS ARE PRETTY SWEET, DEAR.
NOW SHOWING RITA

* Rita Hayworth and Charles Boyer, starring in 20th Century-Fox' "Tales of Manhattan". It's easy to have alluring hands—with Jergens Lotion!

Have Alluring Hands with a few seconds' care a day

You give your hands almost professional loveliness-care when you use Jergens Lotion. Remember—2 of Jergens' ingredients are those used by many doctors to help harsh, common-looking skin to fresh-flower smoothness. Regular use helps prevent horrid roughness and chapping. No sticky feeling! Start now to have adorable hands, with this favorite Jergens Lotion.

JERGENS LOTION

FOR SOFT, ADORABLE HANDS

Mail This Coupon Now

FREE! PURSE-SIZE BOTTLE

(Paste on a penny postcard, if you wish)

The Andrew Jergens Company, 3735 Alfred Street Cincinnati, Ohio (In Canada: Perth, Ont.)

I want to have those soft hands Rita Hayworth suggests. Please send purse-size bottle of Jergens Lotion—free.

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

BOTH FEET IN HEAVEN

(Continued from page 61)

Having kept away from rehearsals like a wise mother, Mrs. Grable didn't know just what went on, but past performances gave her a fair idea. "Does Buddy De Sylva know you can dance?"

"Yes—I guess so."

"Did you ever tell him?"

"He never asked."

"Why don't you talk to him, Betty?"

"I can't."

Knowing that was that, Mrs. Grable betook herself to the theatre, with no campaign planned beyond the idea that something ought to be done. Louis Shurr, the agent, happened to sit down beside her. "What's wrong with Betty? Seems kind of listless."

"She thinks she's not doing enough."

"What does she want to do?"

"More dancing."

Shurr spoke to De Sylva, De Sylva spoke to Bob Alton, the dancing director. They tried Betty out on a couple of more elaborate routines, with electrifying results. Her part was extended, new scenes worked out, new costumes ordered, new dances arranged. They got Chuck Walters, who'd danced with Zorina, as her partner. They rehearsed while they road-showed, and lazy Betty worked herself into such a dazed bundle of aches and sore spots and nerves that she didn't even hear the applause on opening night as she whirled in hoopskirts over chairs and brought the house down.

shop talk . . .

That was the big moment of her dancing career. Paradoxically, it was also the moment that gave birth to her doubts. As a dancer in the line she'd always been sure of herself—so sure that she once walked out on Buzz Berkeley when he snapped at her for some minor breach of discipline. Now if somebody says boo, Betty says, yes sir. It's easier, she explains, to be sure of yourself in the line than in the limelight.

Her most embarrassing moment came at a vaudeville audition when her halter strap broke. She didn't miss a step—just grabbed, held and went on kicking—but a look of hurt astonishment crossed her face, as if the mouth she'd fed had bitten her. Of all the tributes paid her professional skill, she got the biggest lift from Fred Astaire's. Hermes Pan told her that Fred would like to do a film with her.

For the screen she enjoys doing dances new to her, like the hula in "Song of the Islands," which she'd never tried before. She doesn't like to tap dance, thinks all the tap dancing in the world should be left to wonder-workers like Astaire, Eleanor Powell and Ann Miller whom she could watch forever. For the dance floor, her preferences are the rumba, the tango and any American ballroom dance, and she thinks the rumba's prettier danced close together, American style, than when partners stand apart and wriggle. Jitterbugging's okay by her, but except professionally, she hates the conga, considers it too exhibitionistic for the ballroom. For the stage, she says, you don't mind dancing it up, but in a café, it would make her feel foolish.

When she and George, two-stepping smootheroos, began going out together, people were inclined to stop their own dancing and watch. Which made them uncomfortable, since they're both self-conscious and wince at any suggestion of showing off. Now they won't get up unless the floor is well-filled. Mrs. Grable, looking forward to seeing them dance together, was a disappointed woman the first time they took her to a night club. The crowd was so small that they stuck in their chairs all evening.

For smooth perfection, give Betty Artie Shaw, Glenn Miller and Tommy Dorsey to dance to, Davy Rose and Kostelanetz with their sweet violins to listen to. And in a class by himself for the rumba, Xavier Cugat. She gets all the popular records, and her favorite is "Clair de Lune." Since they discovered each other, she's danced with no one but George.

A foursome of experts on the feminine figure—Paul Hesse, photographer; Dr. Mary Halton, gynecologist; Billy Rose, producer; and Irene, fashion designer—picked Betty's as the most beautiful figure in Hollywood. Measurements: height, 5′ 4″; weight, 112; bust, 34½; waist, 24; hips, 36; thighs, 20; ankle 7½; head, 22½; neck, 13½; wrist, 6; glove, 6; shoe, 4C. Compare them with your own, girls.

confidentially speaking . . .

She's heard it rumored that dancing overdevelops the leg muscles, but since hers didn't overdevelop, she never bothered her head about how to prevent it. She recalls hearing one of her teachers say that the only sure preventive was proper teaching. Anyway, she thinks all this talk about her legs is pretty silly, and he who avoids the subject is her friend. What she likes best about them herself is that they look stockinged even when they're not. She hates to wear stockings. She hates to wear hats. And she'd had gloves on just twice in her life.

She keeps her figure by eating what she pleases and takes care of her skin mostly with soap and water, scrubbing it morning and evening and using cream to remove studio make-up. Her street and evening make-up are identical—powder, light lipstick and, because her brows and lashes are fair, mascara and eyebrow pencil. The only variation is a slightly deeper shade of lipstick at night, if her dress is vivid—which it rarely is.

For formals she sticks mostly to black or white—for daytime wear, tailored suits in gray and beige. Beige is her favorite color for suits, yellow for summer dresses. She loathes green and loves red, but not to wear. Her bedroom is red and white, and she writes with red ink. All her clothes are built for simplicity of line, and she'll run a mile from ruffles. By the same token, she was crazy about her uniform in "A Yank in the RAF."

At the beauty parlor she's practically her own hairdresser, feeling she can control the natural wave in her hair better than strangers who overwave it and give it kinks. She does the whole front herself, pulling it back tight and sticking it down, and never goes near the drier but takes her wet head home and combs it out herself later. She hates trick hair-do's, and the studio has never yet forced one on her. Off the screen she wears it in a low pompadour, parted in the center, sides hanging loose. She'd go crazy, she says, if she couldn't run a comb through it every hour or so without having to stick a lot of pins back in.

Owning the real stuff, she doesn't go in for costume jewelry, nor does she care for shining like a Christmas tree. She likes rings and bracelets, prefers heavy gold to platinum, and her favorite ring is the star sapphire George gave her. She can't stand heavy stuff around her neck, uses only a small string of pearls or a tiny cross or heart on a thin gold chain. Her pet daytime ornament is a good-looking initialled clip, and she avoids lapel gadgets. "I like to see them on other people," she explains, "but I feel so busy when I wear them myself."

Her sales resistance is almost 100 per cent, and she's irked by salesgirls who swoon with ecstasy. She knows exactly what she wants, can't be talked into something just as good, and when she spots what she wants, buys it without shilly-shallying. Once, having set her heart on a blond cocker spaniel, she drove up and down Ventura Boulevard for three days till she found one, steeling herself against the charms of blacks and browns—and it wasn't easy—because she knew she'd still be hankering after a blond and she couldn't have two. When, once in a blue moon, she buys against her better judgment, she wears the thing once and discards it.

Without dramatic training, her screen work thus far has presented no problems. For these reasons, she thinks she's been directed by men who were kind and patient. She pays little attention to reviews, good, bad or indifferent. She tries to be natural. A quick learner, she doesn't memorize her lines till the day of shooting. That way she keeps them from going stale on her, and the girl in the picture sounds like herself.

On working days the alarm is set for 5:15. Mrs. Grable gets up at the same time to fix her tray. Betty protested at first, till her mother said: "Look at it my way, honey. I wouldn't feel right about staying in bed while you go to work. If you can get up that early, the least I can do is give you your breakfast and see you off." After which, Betty felt free to admit that she liked it, too. Herself, she's not the domestic type. She doesn't fuss around the house. Put to it, she might go so far as to brew herself a cup of coffee, though she'd be more likely to snatch it at the nearest drive-in.

fan fare . . .

She's not one for girlish intimacies, and her only close friend is Paula Stone. Most of her fan mail comes from boys in the army, navy and air corps. She's never received a romantic proposal from a romantic stranger. "That only happens in the movies," she comments dryly. "In real life, they never write: 'Fly with me.' They write: 'If you'll send me $5,000 I'll be glad to marry you.' "

Her most constant and sensible fan is Matt Heilrich, a young Philadelphia newspaper man. He's followed her career from the days when she danced in the line, studies her performances, tells her what he likes and doesn't about them, sees her when she goes East and approves of George. "A couple of times," says Betty, "he didn't approve of the men I went out with."

There haven't been many men in Betty's life. Dates were never all-important to her. "I'd rather not go out at all," she'd tell her mother, "than with just anybody." There was a drummer in Ted Fiorito's band when she was 16. She went with him till she met Jackie Coogan. After her divorce, there was a man in New York, but that was never serious. Then there was George. Period.

He took her to the six-day bike races when she was 15. Mrs. Grable gave her consent on condition that her sister Marjorie, seven years older, went along. That was fine with George. A friend of his made it a foursome. As per instructions, the adults got the child home by 12 before proceeding themselves to a night club. Betty was thrilled, not because she had anything like a crush on George, but he was a big star, and she was a kid. She was, in fact, thrilled speechless. She didn't know what to say or how to act and gratefully left the talking to her sister.

What Betty thinks of George is obvious. What Mrs. Grable thinks of George is that the world doesn't hold his equal for kindness. Hollywood hopes that circumstances will permit him and Betty to marry. Before meeting him, Betty'd always gone with kids. Through marriage and divorce, she didn't have too easy a time. His even disposition has a calming influence on her nerves. He's the kind of man on whose strength you can lean, knowing it won't fail you.

Their tastes are similar. They enjoy baseball, football, the fights, the races. They won't go to big parties. Neither drinks. When Betty sang with bands, she was sickened by seeing lovely young girls carried out tight. As occasion arose, she tried wine and beer, found their taste and after-effects unpleasant and called the whole thing off. George's strongest beverage is a chocolate ice cream soda. He's been known to send night club waiters out for one. They differ only on the entertainment value of movies. Betty likes them. George doesn't, but goes now and then to please her.

romantic Raft . . .

He calls her only to make dates, doesn't believe in wasting time and energy on aimless telephone talks. When she's working, he picks her up at the studio or meets her at the Brown Derby for dinner. He insists that her family—mother, sister, brother-in-law, nephew—dine with them on maid's night out. It used to embarrass Mrs. Grable, but George seemed so hurt by refusal that she agreed, in her own words, to make him happy by imposing on him. Last Thanksgiving he included Mr. Grable, knowing that Betty's parents, though divorced, were friends. "I don't like to see him left out on Thanksgiving when everyone else is having a good time."

Betty calls him a stick-in-the-mud, says he watches over her like an old hen. Bedtime is nine when she works, so he takes her home after dinner. If it's foggy, they stop to phone Mrs. Grable that they're all right and taking it easy. Their favorite shopping center is the drugstore at Hollywood and Vine, and they're likely to arrive laden with soap and bubble bath, fan mags, half a dozen shower caps and other foolishness. Then it's gin rummy till eight-thirty. For high stakes. Betty owes George $700 on paper. When she loses, she gets mad. "You held all the cards, jerk." When she wins, she gets mad. "You let me win on purpose, jerk."

His fabulous generosity has grown to be a Hollywood legend. Generosity's a lovable attribute, but it's not because he gives her things that Betty loves him. Most of what he gives her she could afford to buy for herself. It's the warmth of his giving, its undemanding quality that moves her, reflecting as it does a more important generosity of spirit. Take, and he's happy. Thank him, and he's miserable. "That's okay," he says. "How're you betting on the fights?"

If he squirms as a giver, he's impossible as a taker. Betty'd bring him something, and he'd be too embarrassed to unwrap it. Now she unwraps it herself. He finds it on the table. "What's that?"

"Oh, something you might like."

But he'd probably part from a finger sooner than the cat's-eye ring she stuck on it for his birthday. For Christmas she gave him cuff links to match.

Of his gifts to her, she loves Clinker best. He's a member of that most absurd and delectable tribe of dogs—the French poodle. Someone brought him to the studio—six weeks old, coal black, with the paws of a baby bear. Betty went mad about him. Someone told George. Next day, a Western Union messenger in tow, the pooch appeared on her doorstep, sporting a tag "Clinker Grable."

His most extravagant gift was a mink coat for her birthday. Ordinarily, wild horses couldn't drag from him, either in advance or retrospect, any reference to the trifles he bestows. But he asked Mrs. Grable's permission to present the coat. She was opposed at first. They weren't even engaged—through no fault of their own, to be sure—but this was too much. He pleaded his cause. He told her for once in words how he felt about Betty, he told her what it would mean to him to be allowed to give her this thing.

He wore Betty's mother down. "She's my girl," Mrs. Grable said at last, not knowing whether to laugh or cry, "and I think she's wonderful. But you treat her as if she were some kind of goddess."

"That's what she is to me," said George.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

Theda Bara's first name was arrived at by juggling the letters of the word "death," the significance being that the voluptuous siren was a deadly threat to helpless wife and children once the man of the family fell beneath her enchantment?

Adds good taste to any scene
Lon Chaney, Jr., Evelyn Ankers and Brod Crawford between scenes of Universal's "North of the Klondike."
PEPSI-COLA is the rage in Hollywood for three big reasons . . . taste, size and quality. Between scenes on every lot, the stars enjoy its finer flavor . . . they welcome those extra sips . . . and they know that every drop is quality at its best. Swap a nickel today for a frosty Pepsi-Cola. 12 full ounces of long, long sips.
Purity . . . in the big, big bottle —that's Pepsi-Cola!
BETTER TASTE...
PEPSI-COLA
...BIGGER DRINK

★ Pepsi-Cola is made only by Pepsi-Cola Company, Long Island City, N. Y. Bottled locally by Authorized Bottlers from coast to coast. ★

DREAM CITY

(Continued from page 8)

tin-type, and it should have disappeared with "East Lynne."

Today, Hollywood stands as the cultural center of the entire civilized world.

Nowhere, on the face of the globe, certainly not in Paris or Moscow or London or Tokyo or even New York, are there so many good minds, so many beautiful faces, so many high-standard institutions of worship, learning, invention or entertainment as in California.

Understand this: Hollywood has to be terrific. In the first place, one-fifth of the population of the United States goes to the movies each day, and so, with such widespread influence, every phase of motion pictures must be handled by experts. In the second place, when all these experts, the best of every field of endeavor, gather in one small village, it seems logical that the standard of living should be intelligent rather than vapid.

forgetful fad . . .

But back to that first point. The influence of the cinema. Some years ago, when Gloria Swanson was a ranking star, the Norma Shearer of her heyday, she rushed into her studio one afternoon to pose for a series of important stills. In her hurry, she forgot one of her expensive earrings, and now, at the last minute, there wasn't time to send for it.

Gloria Swanson was worried. But her publicity boss wasn't. He said, "Forget the other earring, dear. Just wear the one you have. We'll announce that as the latest fashion trend!"

It was all a gag. Gloria Swanson posed with the one earring. And, believe it or not, one month later females throughout the United States, plus women in Greenland, Chile, Indo-China, were all sporting one lonesome earring!

I repeat, this anecdote is only to show you the widespread influence of an industry that now turns out 600 feature pictures a year, which is 75 per cent of the world's total production. The main point is that any site containing such power must have citizens with more on the ball than the talent to play practical jokes and the horses, wear ermines and Malibu sun-tans and indulge in gossip. Such a place must have culture—and genius. It must be, at its core, solid, serious, earnest and progressive.

Today, motion pictures, representing the fourth largest industry in America, are a bulwark in the international battle for freedom and democracy. Today, Hollywood has become aware of its two-fold duty—to entertain, to enlighten, Thus, within the walls of its studios, in its Beverly Hills homes, its San Fernando Valley ranches, its rolling estates on the Pacific Palisades, Hollywood has brought great men and women to amuse a saddened world and to remind Americans that there are still things to cherish like freedom of assembly, of religion, of speech and of press.

To prove to you that Hollywood has become the hub of world culture and talent—and not the lazy insanity fair publicists would have you believe—let's take a candid look at Hollywood's inhabitants and their activities.

Consider the important business of clothing the human being. Once, the world center in apparel was Paris. In Paris such giants as Schiaparelli, Molyneux, Chanel and Lucien Lelong supplied the world with new and original attire. When Sam Goldwyn, in Hollywood, wanted a first-rate designer, he sent to France for Chanel. And she, on her first day in Hollywood, complained of American pins, that they did not feel right in her hands. And Goldwyn, the obliging, sent all the way to Paris for French manufactured pins that would feel right!

Today, Hollywood need send for no one. Today, Hollywood dictates fashions. It possesses designers better than Europe has ever known, and glamour girls more gorgeous than any continental mannequins. Hollywood designers and their models have made femininity throughout America the best-dressed on earth. Remember, for example, that women everywhere once lacked comfortable sport clothes—until Hollywood invented slacks, and Dietrich made them smart!

But the designers—the most, the best, the genius of the crop! At Paramount, tiny, dark-haired Edith Head, ex-schoolmarm who came to the celluloid village in 1923. Edith's head is a smart one, full of learning from California University, Stanford and two art schools. She remembers that Madeleine Carroll's clothes must contain blue, Claudette Colbert's attire must be severely tailored, and Paulette Goddard's things must be youngish and boyish. At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Gilbert Adrian, Janet Gaynor's brilliant hubby. He was discovered for Broadway by Irving Berlin and brought to Hollywood by Mrs. Rudolph Valentino. He designed clothes for that celluloid fashion show, "The Women." And over at Warners, Milo Anderson, only 28 years old, with ten years of designing for the glamour girls behind him though he can't sew a stitch. It was Milo who introduced the wimple, that zany piece of headgear, in "Robin Hood," and who placed the first pair of short slacks or culottes on Bette Davis in "The Petrified Forest."

But fashion is only one of the hundred items in which Hollywood activity dominates the world scene. Certainly, the movie town has outstripped both New York and London in literature and the gathering of literary talent. Living in or near Hollywood today are Theodore Dreiser, great author and greater humanist, Upton Sinclair, the crusader, Aldous Huxley, myopic intellectual, Dorothy Parker, with her barbed-wire wit. And toiling in Hollywood, grinding out words for talkies to relax or stimulate human minds, such a galaxy as Donald Ogden Stewart, Dalton Trumbo, Jim Tully, Gene Fowler, Ben Hecht, J. P. McEvoy, Clifford Odets, Robert Sherwood, Vicki Baum, Anita Loos, Bella and Sam Spewack, Rachel Fields, Louis Bromfield, Eric Remarque and—but, do you want me to write an encyclopedia?

Naturally, a town with such mentalities, such idea-machines, such wits must be the most stimulating and exciting community in existence.

And the artists! the painters! the cartoonists! John Dekker, in his red robe, touching up a canvas while his best friends, John Barrymore and Roland Young, relax on the sofa behind him and bright-crack. John Dekker, with his oil paintings of Charlie McCarthy as "The Laughing Cavalier" and W. C. Fields as "Queen Victoria"!

And the other great brush-wielders in Hollywood—Henry Clive, the former magician who now does famous magazine covers, Hilair Hiler, who did the murals on the San Francisco library walls, George Biddle, Henry McFee and even Man Ray, who toiled with the legendary Picasso in what was once gay Paree.

The influence of these artists even infected the movie colony. Intelligent stars invested in works of art. Thomas Mitchell bought a Rembrandt. Edward G. Robinson a Gauguin and a Van Gogh. And so on. Other stars took to oil painting and sketching as hobbies. At one exhibit, Reggie Gardiner displayed his oil of Hedy Lamarr, and Ginger Rogers submitted a sketch of Madame Ouspenskaya, and Lionel Barrymore was represented with a beautiful landscape.

But Hollywood artistry runs the gamut—from George MacManus, who whips out Jiggs and Maggie for the Sunday comics, to John Hix, whose "Strange As It Seems" spins such pictorial oddities as the fact that Hollywood still possesses a blue law forbidding the pitching of a tent in the middle of Hollywood Boulevard!

Then there's music. The masterpiece, "Fantasia," was but the first product of Hollywood's unpublicized culture. Just ten minutes, by streetcar, from the center of Hollywood is that theatrical colossus of the world—Hollywood Bowl, a natural amphitheater sponsored some two decades ago by a group of music-minded Californians whose number included Charles Chaplin and Edna May Oliver.

Lily Pons, singing on a "Symphonies Under The Stars" program before 32,000 Hollywoodites, may project her voice 600 feet from the stage she is standing on to the farthest seat in the Bowl; may, in fact, be heard clearly throughout its 66 acres without the aid of a microphone!

Just as great singers like Galli-Curci, Maria Jeritza, Geraldine Farrar, Paul Robeson have come to dwell in Hollywood, and great composers like Jerome Kern, Ira Gershwin, Sidney Romberg, Irving Berlin and Carrie Jacobs Bond, have come to create in Hollywood—so, too, the world's leading conductors, a Stokowski, a Kostelanetz, have led orchestras from the shell of Hollywood Bowl and voices belonging to Grace Moore, Lawrence Tibbett and Gladys Swarthout have wafted from its stage.

generous stars . . .

The movie colony itself—those personalities you never realized could be interested in anything cultural—have supplied generous support. Jeanette MacDonald has contributed to the upkeep of the Bowl. Basil Rathbone and Brian Aherne have headed committees to entertain visiting artists. Melvyn Douglas and Edward Arnold have joined the Board of Trustees.

Thus, the million and a half dollar Bowl has become the magnet to attract the living musical greats to Hollywood—furnishing, also, to the general population, in a democratic way, entertainment for as low as 55c that the Metropolitan Opera of New York could never dream of supplying.

But now it would take a volume to continue displaying the unpublicized items that make Hollywood a paradise.

There are other things, too, that haven't been ballyhooed, that prove the village is different from what columnists and candid cameramen would have you believe. There are the schools. Now every American city has schools, but somehow, there are those who actually think Hollywood is empty of educational halls and that young actors and actresses grow up to be brattish morons. Yet, within its 24 square miles, Hollywood has 18 grade schools, three junior high schools and three senior high schools holding some 21,000 students. Also, for those working daytime, there's an evening high catering to 3,400 students.

That, however, is only the beginning. Los Angeles City College, a short drive from Paramount Studios, free of charge to residents, has 6,200 students on its gorgeous green campus, where many collegiate movies are shot. Across the street is Chapman College, under the auspices of the Christian Church. Toward downtown Los Angeles is the University of Southern California—and toward the Pacific Ocean, set up on a hill, the tuition-free University of California at Los Angeles, which harbored Brenda Marshall, Vaughn Paul and others.

And, too, there's another phase of Hollywood, scattered over its 130 miles of paved streets, that's never been much talked about. I refer to the 69 churches, of all imaginable denominations, and some of these churches with memberships running into the thousands. Any Sunday morning, at the Church of the Good Shepherd, you can see Spencer Tracy entering quietly and sitting down in the last row, because he doesn't want to draw attention to himself. You can see movie celebrities serving as ushers.

Hollywood has a heart, too. Not the kind that blaringly helps others for the publicity payoffs involved. But the 17 service clubs you rarely hear about, investing time, money, energy to aid others. And the Motion Picture Relief Fund, putting on its series of radio programs with all the biggest like Jim Cagney, Orson Welles, Robert Taylor—actors working during playtime to raise money for a home to be built in the Valley, a huge comfortable home for the aged and needy of their profession, a refuge to give them shelter, food, sports, hobbies.

Maybe you hear only of the Hollywood that spends $15,000 on a single evening's premiere or gambles at Del Mar or lives amid servants in mausoleum-styled residences—but hear, also, of the Women's Club of Hollywood, whose nine hundred members sponsor debates and lectures by the best minds so that the city of influence and affluence may think straight; hear of the Hollywood Athletic Club and its two thousand members, where stars like Jeffrey Lynn keep in physical condition, and where groups like the Author's League listen to Irvin Cobb.

And, if you still want to know more about "wild" Hollywood, take yourself down to Dave Chasen's place on Beverly Boulevard one night. Four years ago Dave Chasen, who used to be a stooge for comedian Joe Cook, opened his restaurant, which featured chili and barbecued ribs at 65 cents and delicious steaks at $3.00. The other night I visited Chasen's. The place was jammed—Dolores Del Rio, Oscar Levant, Alfred Vanderbilt, Jack Holt, everyone. What did I find? A steamroom off the restaurant, where Errol Flynn and others enter for a rubdown before eating. An open icebox where stars may select their own choice meats.

Yet, you persist and persist, Hollywood, with all its beautiful women, handsome men, varieties of genius, must be erratic and shady and topsy-turvy—and, well, er, scandalous. Sister, you ain't been brought up right! The facts are plain. Hollywood is a nine o'clock town, too busy, then too tired to indulge in any gossip fodder half as bad as that which goes on in the average American city.

Strip Hollywood of its blarney, unveil its trumped-up naughtiness—and you find a community that must be up and out of bed, pretty of face and alert of mind, by seven-thirty in the morning! In fact, when Orson Welles was slaving on "Citizen Kane," he had to be up at four-thirty in the morning to get on his make-up! And, after work, after late dinner, there's time maybe for a dance, a conversation gathering, a legit play, a lecture, a concert—and straight home to sleep!

There's so much to do every morning. Bette Davis must rehearse herself and then smear herself with make-up for her newest picture. F. Thomas Thompson, of the RKO miniature department, must build a Taj Mahal five feet square in size. Ray Moore, of Twentieth Century-Fox, must find scenery resembling China or Coney Island in California. Natalie Bucknall, of M-G-M's research department, must learn the amount of silver in a Roman coin and what kind of breeches George Washington wore.

Hollywood at work!

And, at night, no time for scandal, for orgies, for fictitious daffiness. A lecture by Thomas Mann at the Philharmonic. A reception for Eleanor Roosevelt. A benefit at Ciro's by the English actors for battling England. A concert by Fritz Kreisler.

Hollywood at play!

But, though this Shangri-La on the Pacific is packed with common sense, sanity, intelligence, its inhabitants still speak a familiar language. Colossal! Gigantic! Stupendous! Tremendous! That will never change. It's this spirit, this buoyancy, this super-super that infects everyone from the highest to the lowest.

Yesterday, I went out to the corner to buy some groceries.

"How's business?" I asked the shopkeeper.

"Terrific! Magnificent!" he exclaimed. "But," he concluded with a sigh, "I'm pretty sure it'll get better."

When people talk like that—why, Mr. Hilton's absolutely right—it must be Shangri-La!

YOU CAN'T HELP INHALING—BUT

YOU CAN HELP YOUR THROAT!

All smokers inhale some. But PHILIP MORRIS smokers don't worry about throat irritation—even when they inhale. Here's the difference—reported by doctors who compared the five leading cigarettes:

IN STRIKING CONTRAST TO PHILIP MORRIS, IRRITANT EFFECTS OF THE FOUR OTHER LEADING BRANDS AVERAGED MORE THAN THREE TIMES AS HIGH—AND LASTED MORE THAN FIVE TIMES AS LONG!

Finest tobaccos, of course. But that alone is not enough!

CALL FOR PHILIP MORRIS

SO MUCH HAPPIER THE WOMAN WHO KNOWS!

Continuous Action For Hours
With Safe New Way in Feminine Hygiene

● The young wife who is sure of certain facts can feel happily secure. In feminine hygiene her physical and mental health, her very happiness itself depend on accurate information. Over-strong solutions of acids which endanger her health are a thing of the past.

Today thousands of informed women have turned to Zonitors—the safe new way in feminine hygiene. These dainty snow-white suppositories kill germs, bacteria instantly at contact. Deodorize—not by temporary masking—but by destroying odors. Spread a greaseless protective coating to cleanse antiseptically and give continuous medication for hours.

Yet! Zonitors are safe for delicate tissues. Powerful against germs—yet non-poisonous, non-caustic. No apparatus; nothing to mix. Come 12 in a package, each sealed in individual glass bottles. Get Zonitors at your druggist today.

FREE: Mail this coupon for revealing booklet of intimate facts, sent postpaid in plain envelope. Zonite Products Corporation, Dept. 5307-B. 370 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CITY..... STATE.....

Zonitors

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!
Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.
NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
1315 Michigan Ave., Dept. 2363, Chicago

NO DULL DRAB HAIR

When You Use This Amazing

4 Purpose Rinse

In one, simple, quick operation, LOVALON will do all of these 4 important things for your hair.

1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Helps keep hair neatly in place.

LOVALON does not dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, in 12 different shades. Try LOVALON.

At stores which sell toilet goods

25¢ for 5 rinses
10¢ for 2 rinses

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

THE WOMEN BOB HAS LOVED

(Continued from page 43)

Did anybody ask Max Schmeling to give him a technical description of Joe Louis' sock on the beard?"

Let's get one thing settled right now. There was nothing of the wisecracker in Taylor's attitude. The man is a surprise package, make no mistake about it. You won't find a more natural personality anywhere in any business. If it is possible for a male endowed with his physical charm to be utterly unaware of it, Bob Taylor is.

This may be old hat in movie magazine copy, but it's amazingly true. You will hunt up and down this spinning planet until you can lace your shoes with your whiskers and never find an individual who has so completely lived down the obvious handicap of good looks as he has.

So it was that he spoke, not superciliously, but with an earnestness that somewhat baffled the interviewer, of the women in his screen life. Had an awarding committee asked him to help select the most cooperative female star in movies, said committee would have been in a fine dither. To Taylor, they're all cooperative, which probably is true, too. It would be hard for a woman not to cooperate with him. It's difficult for sneering and suspicious males not to.

A man who has made love, professionally or otherwise, to Hedy Lamarr, Greta Garbo, etc., not to mention his choice as the tops of them all as an actress and siren, Mrs. Robert Taylor, nee Barbara Stanwyck, must, by the very plethora of delight, have trouble deciding which was the most enchanting, the most cooperative, the most inspiring. He did.

"Let's talk about Barbara first," he suggested. "That ought to take care of a lot of things. I'd been going with Barbara for six months when I made my first picture with her. It was called 'His Brother's Wife,' and was I scared? Why? Well, suppose I acted natural in the love scene? She might say to herself, 'So he's been acting all the time, has he? Fine thing!'

"And if I overdid it a bit, she might say 'Oh, ho, so he's got a change of pace? He's been underplaying his romantic scenes. And he wants me to think he's in love with me? I wonder if that Georgian prince still wants to take me to the Troc tonight?' You get an idea of what I thought I was up against. You see, I didn't know Barbara then as I know her now or I wouldn't have been so worried."

Viennese Venus . . .

About Hedy Lamarr? It would be difficult to imagine a romantic world of males or females indifferent to anyone's reactions to the Viennese Venus. He filled his lungs like a water polo player who's in arrears on his insurance premiums. Then he exploded in a guffaw.

"You don't ask any easy ones, do you?" He went for another cigarette. "I wouldn't know whether that girl is naturally smart or naturally natural. I played with her in 'Lady Of The Tropics,' when she was absolutely new to pictures. I spent most of my time trying to keep from laughing at her infectious laugh. She spent all her leisure minutes talking to people who amused her and when she laughs, everyone has to laugh.

"Many women spend a lot of time combing their hair . . . but not Hedy. She likes to toss her head and shake her loose raven locks about her face. There's something elemental about her beauty that comes out . . . and does it come out . . . when her hair is unkempt and she has kicked off her shoes and is sitting on a prop trunk wiggling her toes. She seems to know that she has an elemental force, but maybe she doesn't."

In the midst of this Taylor remembered a coincidence. He thought it worth repeating.

"In the picture 'Lady Of The Tropics' I married Hedy," he said. "She was all dressed up in a white costume. I'm not stealing anybody's line when I say she was breathlessly beautiful. Some bride. As I said, I married her, and then I took her in my arms.

"Well, the very next day after that marriage to a woman in the most elegant, virgin white costume you ever laid an eye on, what happens? I eloped with Barbara, was married in a little, out-of-the-way spot, and Barbara wore a very severe suit and practically no artificial glamour at all. And in the picture wedding, I was nervous as a cat in a dog pound, but when I really got married, I was calm as an oyster. You figure that one out."

Nobody wanted to figure that one out. It looked too tough. There was the personality of Myrna Loy to get on with. Myrna had been one of his first leading women, one of the first to whom he poured out his Thespian soul. How about Myrna, the perfect movie wife?

"Well, for one thing, I always knew what time it was when Myrna arrived on the set," he said. "It was ten minutes after nine. She never got there any earlier, and she never got there any later. You sort of want to depend on Myrna. She gives you that feeling. For all her upturned nose and freckles, she has a stability about her that registers with her fellow players as well as the public. You feel that if you fluff anything with Myrna, she'll take care of it somehow or other." He was reminded that this wasn't necessarily glamour, this technical business of ad libbing through fluffs.

dog days . . .

"You get an idea of the sort of gal she is by this," he said. "When we made 'Lucky Night' together, she brought a miniature dog house onto the set. A little thing, about two inches square, with a long, looped chain on it. Whenever anybody went up in his lines or spilled a scene, she promptly looped it around his or her neck, and it stayed there until someone else blew up. It was Norman Taurog's idea for her to bring it on, but when Taurog pied up the script on a scene, he got it around his neck, too. As a matter of fact, he wore it more than anyone on the show."

He spoke of Vivien Leigh. Bob was the first American player to make a picture with the ball of fire who became Scarlett O'Hara. She had the secondary feminine lead in his "Yank at Oxford," which he made in England. Did he see stardom for her when they made that picture together?

"You don't have to be a talent scout to pick 'em like Vivien Leigh," he said. "It would have taken a blind man with two busted ear drums and a pair of adult cataracts to miss her. Even then, he could have done all right in Braille. I won't try to describe my reaction to her. I'm not that well equipped with the mother tongue. She's electric. When you say that, you've said everything.

"When I played with her, she was in love with Laurence Olivier, but desperately. He was in the studio with her and every minute away from work, they were together. Either she went to his set or he came to ours. Yet she played her love scenes with an amazing conviction."

"What about your social relations with Vivien on that trip to England?" the reporter interrupted. "What's she like personally?"

"Just what you'd expect of a woman with her fire and vitality," he said. "She was wonderful to me and so was Olivier. I was at his country place one night, and a bit of a rain came up. He invited me to stay over, but I didn't."

It will be recalled that he played with Garbo in "Camille," one of the finest pictures she ever made and one that stamped him an actor of merit. You asked him what it was like to make the sort of love Armand makes to the Lady of the Camillias.

"Whew!" He mopped his brow lugubriously. "This doesn't get any easier as it goes along, does it?"

"Garbo is probably one of the most misunderstood women anywhere. I met her for the first time when I walked on to the set to make 'Camille.' She said 'How-do-you-do?' Then she went to work. She wasn't rude or condescending or even upstage. She's naturally shy, and I'll battle anyone . . . if he isn't TOO big . . . who says anything else.

"As a matter of fact, Garbo loves a laugh as much as anyone I ever knew. She has a funny laugh. Just explodes all of a sudden, and then, before anyone else can readjust his features, she's all business again. Five minutes later she may have snooped around and found another laugh, exploded with it and clammed up again. She actually goes around looking for laughs, gets them out of her system and then goes back to her business routine, in a split second.

Bob's an ardent fisherman.

"There's something about Garbo's silence and her concentration that gets you, way down inside. The woman is one of the most powerful personalities in the world. She wears a sort of flat, colorless make-up that gives her a suggestion of something out of this world, and that's just what she is. There's a radiation from her when you're playing an intense scene that makes you play up to it, whether you have the stuff in you or not. She simply makes you find it and give."

He was asked if the taciturn Swede mixed with the other players on the set.

"No, she doesn't," he said, readily, "unless she sees a laugh coming. She'll always wait around for that. But usually she goes to her dressing room as soon as a take is completed and stays there until time for her next scene. But that isn't to say she upstages her fellow players. She asks for no favors. Why, on location she eats box lunches along with everyone else."

Taylor had just finished "Johnny Eager" with Lana Turner, and his experiences with her were fresh in his mind.

"The first thing, and the last, I can say about her is that she's one sweet kid," he said. "That isn't all I can say. She's much more intelligent than the world seems to suspect. I'm talking about her playing now. She's learning, and she knows it, and she makes a job of her acting. I don't believe the kid has ever yet been satisfied with a line she spoke or a scene she made. She'll make retakes all night long if need be, and she'll go at the 15th one just as eagerly as the first.

"There's one thing that surprised me, and that is that she always knew her lines. She studies them harder than any player I know. She doesn't come on the set to learn them. She knows them when she shows up. In addition, she has a naturally exciting way of talking that gets you. You see, she's a lot softer and more tender than she looks on the screen."

He had to have another cigarette. He

Identical Usack Twins Prove

PEPSODENT POWDER

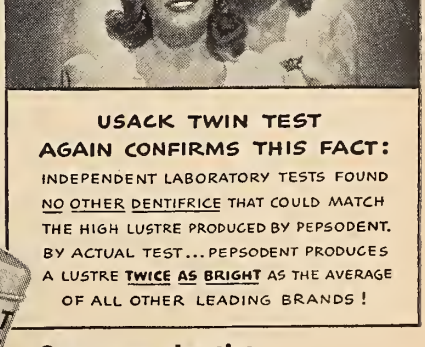
makes teeth

TWICE AS BRIGHT

"It's fun being twins! So many unexpected things happen... like our recent test with tooth powders. Lorayne decided she'd use a well-known leading brand. I chose Pepsodent. What happened was simply amazing!"

"It was like wearing name plates! Pepsodent made my teeth so much brighter that people said they could easily tell us apart by our teeth! I never dreamed there was that much difference in tooth powders!"

"We Double-Dare you to tell us apart... we're both using Pepsodent now!"



USACK TWIN TEST AGAIN CONFIRMS THIS FACT:

INDEPENDENT LABORATORY TESTS FOUND NO OTHER DENTIFRICE THAT COULD MATCH THE HIGH LUSTRE PRODUCED BY PEPSODENT. BY ACTUAL TEST... PEPSODENT PRODUCES A LUSTRE TWICE AS BRIGHT AS THE AVERAGE OF ALL OTHER LEADING BRANDS!

For the safety of your smile... use Pepsodent twice a day...

See your dentist twice a year

TURN the tables on "regular" pain! Make the pain give in, while you carry on in active comfort. It's easy to do, as Midol has proved to millions of women!

Midol is offered for this one purpose—to relieve the needless functional pain of menstruation. Use it confidently; Midol contains no opiates. One ingredient is widely prescribed for headache and muscular suffering. Another exclusive ingredient increases relief by reducing spasmodic pain peculiar to the time. Among thousands of women recently interviewed, more reported using Midol for functional periodic pain than all other preparations combined, and 96% of these Midol users said they found it effective.

If you have no organic disorder calling for special medical or surgical treatment, Midol should give you comfort. Try it! All drugstores—large size, only 40¢; small size, 20¢.

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

MIDOL

Relieves Functional Periodic Pain

FREE ENLARGEMENT

Just to get acquainted with new customers, we will beautifully enlarge one snapshot print or negative, photo or picture to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose this ad with 10c for handling and return mailing. Information on hand tinting in natural colors sent immediately. Your original returned with your free enlargement. Send it today.

Geppert Studios, Dept.363, Des Moines, Iowa

HE—"That lady has a mustache!"
SHE—"How embarrassing!"
HE—"Why doesn't she shave?"
SHE—"I know a better way to overcome that problem—listen—I'll tell you a secret—I once had the problem of ugly, superfluous hair on face and limbs. I was discouraged—unloved. Tried many different products but nothing was really satisfactory. Then I developed a simple, painless, inexpensive method—It worked, and brought me happiness."

I have helped thousands seeking a beautiful skin free of that ugly, noticeable, unwanted hair. My FREE book, "How to Overcome the Superfluous Hair Problem," explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer—no obligation. Write Mme. ANNETTE LANZETTE, P. O. Box 4040, Merchandise Mart, Dept. 154, Chicago, Ill.

took out his wallet, opened it and peered rapturously at a photograph therein, then returned, confidently, to the business at hand. It was a photograph of a prominent young actress named Stanwyck.

"I've heard a lot of people say Lana's another Jean Harlow," he went on, "but I wouldn't say that. Lana is a distinct personality. There was only one Harlow. Whenever she made a scene or read a line, Jean gave it everything. She fairly crackled. She was dynamite in every sense of the word. You get the idea that if Lana fluffs a line, she is liable to cry, whereas Jean was more likely to punch herself on the jaw and turn right back into the thing, harder than ever."

He looked at his watch. "If we don't hurry," he said, "we won't have time to talk about Barbara Stanwyck any more."

"Let's hear about Lana on the set," the reporter coaxed. "What's she like between scenes?"

"She's like a kid with a new doll," he said. "She got her first star dressing room for 'Johnny Eager.' You'd have thought it was something out of 'Citizen Kane.' She filled it with warm cushions and flowers . . . and plenty of chocolate candy."

He thought that one over a moment, then amended it.

"There is nothing Lana likes better than an honest tip on playing a scene," he said. "She listens to everything that's told her, she has a darned orderly mind. I mean that she's selective. She can sift the wheat from the chaff as well as anyone in the business. That's a natural asset you're either born with or get through years of experience. She was born with it, and it is making her a great star."

Someone wanted to know if the sweater ban would affect the curvaceous Miss Turner adversely.

"Affect her? Listen, that kid could play a love scene in a pair of overalls!"

He ought to know!

HEAVEN, NEVADA

(Continued from page 62)

serious business of converting two highly nervous romantics into husband and wife.

Judge Marshall didn't pull any punches.

"I have never married off a drunken movie star," he began. "And only because no movie actor or actress has ever come to me in a drunken state. Movie stars, coming here for a wedding, are sober, sensible and the finest people you've ever seen."

Judge Marshall's memory was vivid when it came to exciting moments.

"I'll never forget," he said, "four o'clock one morning, when I was sound asleep after a hard day, the phone rang. 'Get dressed and marry Lana Turner and Artie Shaw.' I practically sleepwalked to the city hall. There they were. You'd know that Lana Turner was a movie actress—so attractive! Calm, too. Maybe because she'd been up here a short time before. Sure, she came up with that Bautzer fellow, to act as bridesmaid at the wedding of Billy Wilkerson, the fellow who discovered her. Lana was calm through the ceremony, but not Shaw. Especially afterward, he wasn't. The two had eloped in such a rush he was almost dead broke."

memories . . .

Judge Marshall recalled with a grin the day he married Mary Martin to Richard Halliday. He didn't know who Mary Martin was because he rarely went to movies. Fifteen minutes after he pronounced Mary Martin Mrs. Halliday, a reporter called from New York.

"Marshall!" screamed the reporter. "Did you just wed Mary Martin?"

"I don't know," drawled the Judge. "Who is she?"

There was no answer from the other end. Marshall repeated his words. Still no answer. The reporter had fainted.

The Judge remembered marrying Richard Carlson. And Maxie Rosenbloom to "an awfully nice girl." Maxie came in with his hat on, never took it off and ate all the ba[illegible] in the fruit bowl.

"Then," said Judge Marshall, "there was Martha Raye, when she came up recently to wed Neal Lang. Martha brought Ann Sheridan for her best lady. Martha also brought her mother. Oh, a marvelous mother—talented, a mimic, the entire show. As for Martha herself, she was very sincere, wanted no hullabaloo, dressed plain. Also, when liquor was offered her, she refused. She didn't want to drink before the ceremony."

Judge Marshall mentioned marrying Carole Landis, before she was a big star, to Willis Hunt.

"Carole Landis was really attractive," admitted the Judge, "but plainly dressed in a wrinkled print dress. She was quiet and well-mannered, and I really liked her. I felt very sad when I heard she was being divorced."

Judge Marshall insisted that gamblers, bartenders and salesmen were all more liberal with money than Hollywood stars. The biggest sum he ever got for a ceremony was from Gregory LaCava, the producer-director, who wanted his marriage kept a secret and paid Judge Marshall $50, of which, after fees were deducted, the Judge netted $32.

"There's your fabulous sums for you," drawled the Judge. "Why, once when I was out of town, my substitute was called to visit a ranch and wed Diana Lewis and Bill Powell. It took two hours of his time and Powell gave him $20. Meantime, he missed five marriages in town that would have netted him at least $25. So, he actually lost money knotting Bill Powell."

Leaving Judge Marshall, I went to the city hall itself to find the man who succeeded him. I found young, handsome, blunt-featured Judge B. Mahlon Brown in his cool basement room of the city hall. He had been on the job only eight months, and from rumors I'd picked up I heard he was set to make $20,000 for 1941 just marrying out-of-towners.

I asked Judge Brown about his most exciting marriage.

"I received a phone call at 1:15 in the morning," explained Judge Brown. "I was told that a couple from Hollywood—David D. Rose, 31, and Frances Garland, 19, were being issued a license and would I rush down and marry them. What impressed me most was their sincerity and their obvious devotion. I could see it was a solid match. Judy was extremely nervous. And she was upset because she had no corsage. I pointed to the flowers in my office vase, and Judy made herself a hasty amateur corsage. The ceremony took 4½ minutes."

"After the ceremony I turned to her and said from the bottom of my heart:

" 'May I congratulate you, Mrs. Rose.'
"And she shrieked, 'Mrs. Rose? Why—that's right!' "

Cassini-Tierney nuptials . . .

"Then there was the time Count Cassini and Gene Tierney flew in alone," said Judge Brown. "My wife acted as one witness. And Bob Woodruff, who brought them from the plane, acted as the other. Gene acted cultured so that you knew she came from a good family. Count Cassini was more than ordinarily uncommunicative.

"You probably didn't know that Gene's father wrote a steaming letter to me, asking if there was any possible way the marriage could be annulled."

The young Judge recalled other high-ups he'd cemented. There was Greta Nissen. She rushed in at night with Stuart D. Eckert and begged to be married before the clock struck midnight, because she wanted to be a wife on this particular day and not the next. And Will Rogers, Jr., who came to marry and was so excited he forgot to pay Judge Brown and later remembered and mailed the fee from a hotel. And the famous Grace Hayes, of the Grace Hayes Lodge, who chartered two planes, brought 12 relatives and friends for a hurried ceremony.

Brown still chuckles about one actress who objected to repeating the line "until death do us part" in the ceremony, and when Judge Brown read the line, well, instead of repeating it, she changed it to, "as long as our love shall last!"

Leaving Judge Brown, I drove across Highway 91 until I reached a pleasant looking corner bungalow of the Reverend Albert C. Melton who handles by far the greatest share of film personality marriages.

I inquired of Reverend Melton about one of his more exciting front-page ceremonies, the Grayson-Shelton elopement last year.

"It was at night," revealed the clergyman. "Earlier a couple came down from Los Angeles. They were both very drunk. They wanted to be married, and I turned them down. Then another couple appeared. They wanted me to wed them in a near-by bar of a saloon, and I refused. Finally, Miss Grayson, a good-looking young lady, and Mr. Shelton, a very handsome young man, came in. Such a pleasant contrast, the two of them, to the couples that had appeared earlier. The ceremony took less than five minutes."

Reverend Melton thought the most enjoyable ceremony he ever performed was the one, four years ago Decoration Day, that united Bob Burns with his attractive wife.

According to the Reverend, Bob wanted an unpublicized ceremony. But a Hollywood reporter tipped off the Las Vegas AP man, and when Burns got off the plane, the press was waiting with pencils ready.

forgot the ring . . .

"I'll never forget the event," admitted Reverend Melton. "When we got to the part where Bob Burns was to put the ring on his bride's finger, he dug into all his pockets, looked red and frantic, then gulped, 'Dawgone, I forgot the ring!' And he had forgotten it. As soon as I pronounced the pair man and wife, Burns kissed her and exclaimed: 'Now, honey, you won't have to laugh at my jokes!' "

Reverend Melton said that most marriages he performed were informal. The one line that flustered most Thespians

1.
STARTLED WHEN SOLDIER-SON DEMONSTRATES MANUAL OF ARMS UPSETTING ASH STAND ON RUG
2.
Haenigsen
BUT RECOVERS AS BISSELL SWEEPER CLEANS UP DIRT THOROUGHLY. NO VACUUM CLEANING NECESSARY 3.
DELIGHTED THAT BISSELL'S HI-LO BRUSH CONTROL ADJUSTS ITSELF INSTANTLY TO NAP-LENGTH OF ANY RUG
4.
EXPLAINS: "BISSELL'S 'STA-UP' HANDLE STANDS ALONE"—AS SHE HURRIES TO LOOK AT SPECIAL TREAT IN OVEN
5.
CONVINCED AGAIN THAT EASY-EMPTYING "BISSELL" IS WONDERFUL—SO CONVENIENT FOR ALL CLEAN-UPS, DOING JOB BEAUTIFULLY 6.
See the Bissell Leaders in the $5 to $7 range—others even lower
THE "VANITY" $6.45
VANITY
BISSELL SWEEPERS
SWEEP QUICKLY—EMPTY EASILY
BISSELL CARPET SWEEPER CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

FOR VICTORY BUY A UNITED STATES DEFENSE BOND

Lovable
THERE'S MORE
TO BEAUTY
THAN
A PRETTY FACE
Beautiful Marie Wilsan, Hallywood screen star..no wonder most girls prefer Lavable—the less-than-a-dallar brassiere with millian-dallar appeal! Be lavable—write Dept. M far free style baak.
LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO.
358 Fifth Ave., New Yark
In Canada: Canadian Lady Carset Ca., Ltd., Mantreal

BEAUTIFUL 7-JEWEL
ELGIN WATCH
YOURS

LINK OR LEATHER BRACELET

Choice of ELGIN or WALTHAM Movement

One Year TO PAY IN FULL

LATEST styled ring. 1/20 14K Rolled Gold Plate shank. Genuine Sterling Silver top, set with 1/4K 50 point, Simulated Diamond and six brilliants

YOUR CHOICE of Jeweled Elgin or Waltham wrist watch. New styled size 0 case. Reconstructed movement. Accuracy guaranteed. Given with every Simulated Diamond ring when ordered and paid for on our purchase privilege plan. Payments: $3.50 down, within 20 days after arrival, at your post office. Balance of $4.89 anytime within a year (total only $8.39, plus 10% Federal Defense Tax.) Remember, the cost of watch is included in price of the ring. Extra surprise free gift enclosed for promptness. Send NO money with order. Just rush name, address, ring size. It comes by return mail in special gift box, postpaid.

SEND NO MONEY WITH ORDER

L. KENDALL JEWELERS
Topeka, Kansas Dept. MM-342

Smooth AS A
PUSSY WILLOW
See how HAMPDEN'S powder base 'smooths out' your skin, makes it soft, youthful! It subtly 'tints' your complexion, helps hide blemishes, gives you that lovely 'portrait finish.'
POWDER-BASE
hampden
50c also 25c & 10c sizes
Over 18 million sold

was, "With this ring I thee wed." In fact, Reverend Melton told of one actress who, in repeating it, said, "With this wing I thee fled!"

The good Reverend required no set fee. If the couple could pay $5.00, then fine and dandy. Most stars paid a good bit more.

After bidding Reverend Melton adieu, I decided to visit one of the typical wedding chapels wherein runaway couples were often wed. I went into The Hitching Post and chatted with the proprietor, Halley Stewart, an energetic and enterprising young gentleman.

He explained his fee, $12. This entitled the couple to a license, a minister, a comfortable living room setting. For just $1.50 more, Mr. Stewart would have the ceremony recorded for history on a special machine. Outdoors was a Wishing Well. After the ceremony most couples deposited sums ranging from a dime to a half dollar and made their optimistic and heartfelt wishes.

wishing well fund . . .

"This Well collects from three to five dollars a week," admitted Stewart. "We save the money, and when poor kids show up from California, and they haven't too much, we help them out of our Wishing Well fund.

"One day the doorbell rang," said Stewart, "and when I opened it there was Robert Preston stealing a kiss from Catherine Craig. Robert Preston was nervous as hell. Jumpy. My wife and I put him at his ease. He turned out to be one swell person, sweet and sincere. The wedding ring used in the ceremony was 80 years old and had been handed down to Catherine Craig. Since that ceremony I heard from them once. Preston wrote me a note on his 'first anniversary'—that is, the end of their first week married!"

I learned the inside story of how Stan Laurel decided to remarry his ex-wife, Virginia Ruth. One night in Hollywood, he was home alone eating tripe and onions. Stan hadn't had the dish since he split with Virginia, and he felt lonely. He went to a phone and called her.

"I'm eating tripe and onions, honey. How would you like to have some of it with me?"

"I'd love to!"

Over the onions he breathed the magic word—Las Vegas. She breathed—Yes. They jumped into his car and drove through the dark and straight across the border.

Asked Laurel, timidly, "Can you cash a check?"

Replied Stewart, "For how much?"

"For just enough to get married on!"

And thus, citizens, the true-to-fact story of the marrying men of Las Vegas.

FREE OFFER!

Once again we're offering FREE AUTOGRAPHED PORTRAITS* to the first 500 readers who answer the questionnaire below and mail it in to us. REMEMBER! We have only 500 PORTRAITS. So hurry and send in your questionnaire properly filled out!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories or features did you enjoy most in our March issue? Write 1, 2, 3 at the right of the titles of your 1st, 2nd and 3rd choice.

Long Voyage Home (Hayden) ☐
"Woman of the Year" ☐
Skippy's Toughest Role (Cooper) ☐
Delightful Delirium (Milland) ☐
Swell Guy (Gable) ☐
Both Feet in Heaven (Grable) ☐
Heaven, Nevada ☐
Dream City ☐
Women Bob Has Loved (Taylor) ☐
Idyll on Ice (Henie) ☐
Wanted: One Ideal Husband (Sheridan) ☐
What Would a Psychologist Say about You? ☐
Good News (Gossip) ☐
Co-Ed ☐

Which one of the above stories did you like LEAST? .....

What 3 stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them 1, 2, 3 in order of preference .....

.....

My name is .....

My address .....

I am ..... years of age.

*I want an autographed portrait of .....

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, 149 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

SWELL GUY

(Continued from page 46)

the corner is balanced by a big and unpopular desk. The desk is Clark's business office, but he hates business matters. The very worst correspondent in all Hollywood, writing letters is torture to Clark. Not long ago a secretary, going through his dressing room, found a stack of unopened personal mail postmarked 1937. The only letter Clark is certain of scribbling at the desk is the letter he writes Carole each year on their anniversary.

This worries him so that he gets up early in the morning and attacks it laboriously, sweating out an anniversary billet doux with a tortured pen. Clark is an early riser anyway, rolling out of the hay most mornings at six, a hangover from his early farm training and his many hunting junkets. Clark likes a big country breakfast when he's ranching, almost none when he's acting. He seldom loads up for lunch, but for dinner he wants man fodder—steaks, potatoes, roasts and lots of 'em. Usually there's game in the big icebox. Nothing tempts Clark more than cold fowl, chicken, duck, turkey. But he isn't fussy about what the daily menu offers. In fact, he asks not to be told. Carole plans all meals at the ranch, and when the Gables are on safari she does all the cooking. Clark brags about it, so you can bet it must be good.

Dinner is at eight at the Gables. Clark likes a drink or two before dinner—always Scotch and soda. He hates nothing worse than cocktails, unless it's people who drop in to visit without phoning.

For that reason, the Gables spend most evenings by themselves, unless some dinner party or planned evening is on with their few close friends, such as the Walter Langs—she was "Fieldsie," Carole's former secretary and chum—the Fred MacMurrays, the "Tuffy" Goffs, Clark's hunting pals, Jack Conway and Harry Fleischman, or Carole's immediate family, the Peters clan. In any case, there's never any question about dressing or not. Clark won't—that's all. The last time he wore soup and fish was for the "Gone With the Wind" opening in Atlanta. And when they had to have a dinner jacket shot of him for "Honky-Tonk," the set was camphorated until even Lana Turner complained.

hates dancing . . .

Carole and Clark pass most after-dinner hours playing games, reading or driving out to movies they've missed. Clark hates dancing; he's an awkward dancer still. So there's little night-spotting. Clark still likes movies, his most recent favorite being "Here Comes Mr. Jordan." Backgammon is the Gable table sport, but sometimes they sit up all night playing showdown poker. One night recently they wasted electricity until four A. M. with Clark heavy winner by twenty-five cents. Gable isn't a serious gambler, doesn't play the horses any more. But when he did (as everyone in Hollywood did when Santa Anita first opened) he was phenomenally lucky, hitting them regularly on the nose. The only time he shows up now is at the famous racetrack's annual Handicap.

The Encino ranch living room is after-dinner headquarters. Like the bedrooms, it features a large fireplace. The divans and chairs are huge, low and soft. The Gable pets have the run of the house as well as the ranch. Of evenings they always arrive inside and plant themselves happily at Clark's feet while he smokes a cigar. Gable smokes everything—cigarettes during the day, a cigar after dinner and pipes later on.

A famous ranch pastime for these long winter evenings is movie projection. Carole gave Clark a complete 16-mm. set-up last Christmas, complete with sound and everything except pretty usherettes. He collects clips of his own films, reels taken on hunting trips and favorite scenes from newsreels. They're all reduced for home showing. When he isn't playing movie theatre, a major attraction for Gable is to "go over" his hunting and fishing equipment. This is a solitary job; in fact, Gable's gun cabinet is a sacred place. No one touches his fancy shooting irons—not even Carole. The den has been transformed into his gun room.

Clark started collecting guns the minute he had any part of his check to spend on foolishness. The most extensive shooting item in the Gable collection is a $1200 gun. It's one of his two great weaknesses in the spending department. In almost every other personal want he's thrifty and sparing. In fact, since the day he arrived in Hollywood he has been saving. Just the other day, a local bank

War Rips Lid Off Movie Manners —and Morals!

SEE FOR YOURSELF in amazing pictures what happened to American movies in World War I—and what has happened to England's movies in World War II. Will it happen here, now? Screen Guide offers a basis for deciding in a searching photo-story. It shows trouble spots in new films, past break-downs of morality in times of stress. Be sure to see it!

Other Scoops in March Screen Guide

Mickey Rooney's First Real Love! Meet the girl who made Mickey forget he wasn't ready to marry—"yet!"

Why They Call Gary Cooper "Cute"! Maybe you've never figured him out; this story shows how you can!

The Truth Behind Stars' "Strikes"! See what the highest-paid workers in the world want when they "strike."

How Hollywood Won Over Katharine Hepburn. The "rebel" has reformed. Learn how they persuaded her to do it!

Color Photos: Dorothy Lamour, Linda Darnell, Joan Leslie, Mickey Rooney—every one wonderful enough to frame!

THAT'S NOT ALL! Screen Guide is becoming Hollywood's final authority on fashions, through its great features by Yolondo. Beauty hints are offered by Edith Hompton. Also lots of gossip and reviews!

SCREEN GUIDE
March, 1942
Ten Cents
How War Rips the Lid Off Movie Manners and Morals
Inside Story of Mickey Rooney's First Real Love

SCREEN GUIDE MARCH ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

There's good reason why PAZO ointment has been used by so many millions of sufferers from simple Piles. First, PAZO ointment soothes inflamed areas—relieves pain and itching. Second, PAZO ointment lubricates hardened, dried parts—helps prevent cracking and soreness. Third, PAZO ointment tends to reduce swelling and check bleeding. Fourth, it's easy to use. PAZO ointment's perforated Pile Pipe makes application simple, thorough. Your doctor can tell you about PAZO ointment. Get PAZO ointment from your druggist, today.

Grove Laboratories, Inc.
Dept. 202-MM-6, St. Louis, Mo.

FREE Offer Limited. MAIL TODAY! (Good only in U. S. A.)

Gentlemen: I want PAZO, FREE! (Mailed in a plain wrapper)

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

Nervous, Weak Ankles Swollen

Excess acids, poisons and wastes in your blood are removed chiefly by your kidneys. Getting up Nights, Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes, and feeling worn out, often are caused by non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Usually in such cases, the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess acids and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee wrapped around each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of the full cost unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose under this positive money back guarantee so get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c.

ANY COLOR
LIGHT BROWN to BLACK

Gives a natural, youthful appearance. Easy to use in the clean privacy of your home; not greasy; will not rub off nor interfere with curling. For 30 years millions have used it with complete satisfaction. $1.35 for sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE

BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. M 3-42
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.

Name.....
Street.....
City ..... State.....
GIVE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

manager uncovered a savings pass book of Billy-Clark Gable's. It showed a dollar-a-week deposit, whether Clark was working or not—and quite often he was not.

The only collection that matches his sporting arsenal is his expensive custom-made fishing tackle. Lake Mead, the inland sea backed up by the Colorado River behind Boulder Dam, is a currently favored spot. Like all fishermen, Clark can invent tall tales, but when pressed will admit that trout, as a rule, have him well baffled.

dead-eye Carole . . .

This side of Gable's life—the most important in his off-studio hours (so important that his contract calls for three months off for trips) has been wisely shared from the nuptial start by Carole. No wife ever struggled to adapt herself to a husband's play interests more than the strictly urban Miss Lombard, used to silks, satins and fancy city living. They'd been married hardly a month before she was traveling grimly out daily to a skeet range. In typical Lombard thoroughness, she not only mastered shotgun shooting, but occasionally outshot Clark. Carole still spends an hour every leisure day on the front lawn of their ranch whipping a trout line all over the place. Expert casting takes even longer than good shooting.

"Mrs. G" (as Clark calls her) has palled with "Pappy" (as she calls Clark) on so many hunting trips that when illness kept her from Clark's last pheasant hunting junket the other week in Arizona, those old (and silly) divorce rumors popped up again.

The major mark against Carole is that when she goes hunting she takes along so much comfort duffle the car can hardly clear the bumps. The last time they set out, Clark had a mammoth moving van backed up to the ranch door. Draped across the top was a banner, "Mrs. Gable's Hunting Wagon."

Clark has recently done the best he can about this feminine foible by purchasing what is currently his pride and joy. It's officially a hunting wagon, but the Gables call it "the Jeep." The Jeep has a four-wheel drive, separate axles and practically everything the army's blitz buggies have except cannon and flame throwers. It can amble over sand and fields, ford streams and almost climb pine trees. It's hefty enough to stand the strain of all Mrs. G's outing gear.

The hunting wagon neatly combines the two major masculine loves of Clark Gable's life—sports and automobiles. It is hard to say which he woos more ardently. Both are his major money extravagances. Both give him more of a kick than anything yet invented by man.

Clark has had a mechanical mind since he was a kid. He developed it in the oil fields and a dozen other jobs before he saw a camera. He has probably owned more deep breathing motors than any other star in Hollywood. Certainly he has puttered, fussed and remodelled cars more, driven them farther and traded them oftener than anyone else in town.

His latest personal heap is just about the best looking automobile in the screen colony, although it's far from the most expensive. Clark took a Cadillac coupe, just like Carole's, had the top cut down four inches, the body streamlined here and there and all the "Hollywood" chromium trim removed. He had the hard top covered with canvas and a Gable innovation added here and there. The resulting gray job is sleek, sporty and safe. Clark loves the country look of a soft-top car, but he balks at the risk to life and limb. He's a speedy driver, and if he turns over he wants a chance. The entire Cadillac operation cost $500.

When the rebuilt new car was finally delivered, Clark was in bed with the flu. The day was cold and rainy, and there ensued a vigorous wrestling match for a few minutes between Clark and Carole to keep him in bed. Pneumonia or not, he hiked out to the garage to pet and purr over his new car, like a kid with a Christmas toy.

cross-country on $100 . . .

Clark has constantly scoffed at having a chauffeur. He likes to drive too much himself. When he and Carole wound up a pheasant-hunting trip in South Dakota recently, they couldn't find a convenient plane or train to take home. Clark walked into a small town agency and bought a Ford. He sold it when he reached Hollywood, losing $100, less than plane or train tickets.

When Clark isn't behind the wheel he loves to tinker with cars. One Saturday not long ago, his station wagon was wheezing badly as he left the studio. He left, saying he was going home and fix it. He fixed it. He worked all weekend. Monday a garage had to call and haul it away and fix Clark's fixing. He's been more successful, however, with his farm tractor. The first day the tractor arrived Clark hopped in the seat and happily set about cultivating his orange grove. The tractor promptly ran away and mowed down five trees. Bloody but unbowed, Gable peered into every part of its mechanism and mastered it. Now it's his mechanical pet, and he'd rather clank it across his alfalfa field than win an Academy award.

Outside of farm chores and sporting trips, Gable takes practically no exercise. When he got a little puffy around the gills a while back he tried mild morning calisthenics, but soon gave them up. He doesn't golf much and seldom treads a tennis court these days.

Yet his weight remains fairly constant, around 190, and his health is sound. The only thing that troubles him is a "shoulder point," a kind of a nerve and bone condition of the shoulder, common to football players. Clark got his shooting. That's what he entered Johns Hopkins Hospital for last time he was East.

But he still reads without glasses, eats and drinks anything he pleases, owns all his own temple-graying black hair and shows no signs of falling apart under the strain of being the nation's number-one heart throb.

The only concession Clark makes to this romantic status is his personal appearance. For an outdoor man, Clark Cable is inordinately neat, clean and well groomed. He sprouts daily a beard as black as the shades of Hell and as wicked to shave. But no one in Hollywood has ever seen him with a stubble unless it was for a spike-faced role. Clark shaves every morning, trims his moustache and totes along an electric razor which he's likely to plug in any convenient socket. He's a twice-a-day showerer and fussy about white nail rims, although he seldom gets a manicure in the M-G-M barber shop where his thick locks are trimmed heavy-sided, long movie style of necessity. He can't stand scented lotions or perfumes. The myth of an ear-pinning-back job is just that, Clark has never had any beautifying facial operation.

UP-TO DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new, up-to-dote list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is o convenient size to handle or keep in a scropbook. To receive o list, oll you hove to do is write to us and osk for it, enclosing o large, self-oddressed ond stomped envelope. Don't forget that last item, os no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, N. Y.

The only jewelry he ever wears besides cuff links and studs are a plain gold ruby mounted ring, a birthday present from Carole two years ago, a gold cigarette case, Christmas loot also from Carole, and a wrist watch he bought himself years ago. With clothes he's more extravagant. Clark both likes and knows good clothes and he has plenty of them.

That's not to say he's a dude. Something cured Clark of fancy feathers a good many years ago. It was in his Broadway days and he'd just clicked modestly in a small part. Clark invested his roll in a morning coat, striped trousers, spats and topper. With a gardenia in his lapel and twirling a stick, he strolled down the avenue like a real actor. The next day the show folded, he was broke, out of a job and desperate—with all his fine rags to mock him. Gable has few superstitions, but that has steered him since from elegant get-ups.

Clark's wardrobe bears down heavily on brown handspun tweeds, shetlands and other sports clothes. He owns about 25 tailored business outfits, very few hats, but scores of custom made English boots and shoes, size 11-C. Naturally enough, he has a vast closet jammed with riding clothes and outing gear. Carole never dares tag along to buy anything even as small as a tie (he likes red ones). Adolphe Menjou's tailor, Eddie Schmidt, makes most of the Gable suits. Clark tried another bushelman, but discovered he was out to gyp him. The tailor had picked the wrong movie star. Clark will spend plenty for what he wants, but he's a close buyer and resents being fast-talked out of a dime.

Gable, the business man . . .

Automobile dealers discovered long ago that to keep the Gable account they had to talk turkey on trade-ins. Clark is cagey about his money because he has a goal. The goal is to gain a lifetime income of $1000 a month. That will keep up all the living standard he'll ever acquire. But he wants his security gilt-edged.

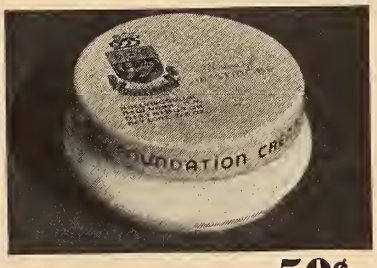
The ranch is the only property investment he has ever made. The rest of his salary (he keeps 20 per cent of his check, and the government takes 80) goes into annuities and bonds and stocks as sound as such can be. Actually, Clark has been in the big money only about five years. He is not poor, but he is not rich, like William Powell or Wallace Beery or any veteran star who got up there where it counted, before income taxes came along!

Clark's M-G-M contract has five more years to run. The present agreement calls for three pictures a year, no more. It's most unique in that the options are Clark's, not M-G-M's. He can stop any time he wants. But whenever he's queried now on this point, Gable just grins and says, "As long as they like me, I can stand it!" (He once said he'd quit in 1940.) The best guess is that Gable will quit when and only when he figures he has a lifetime supply of pocket money.

Clark usually carries $50 in his pants

Betty Grable, starring in the forthcoming 20th Century-Fox Technicolor picture, "Song of the Islands," with make-up by Westmore. She says: "I use Westmore Foundation Cream, and it's really wonderful!"

It's Easy to Look
"STAR-LOVELY"
with WESTMORE
FOUNDATION CREAM



Large economy size, 50¢
Smaller sizes at variety stores

- Created by the famous Westmores, Hollywood's Make-up Masters.
- Used by leading stars for real life as well as "reel life."
- Gives your face a smooth, even, glowing tone . . . covers little blemishes, tired shadows . . . and it's non-drying!
- In six skin-tinted shades, with Face Powder to blend. Also, vital-tone lipstick, rouge (cream and cake), skin-freshener, cleansing cream, dry skin cream, eye-shadow and mascara.

House of WESTMORE Inc. HOLLYWOOD

COME OUT
OF THE SHADOW OF
"DINGY" CLOTHES!

Let good old reliable RIT make clothes sparkle

● Men usually notice the color of a dress—and if you appear in a new color, they'll think it's a new dress! So treat the men-in-your-life to some sparkling new shades for last year's frocks. They'll never know the difference, or they'll think you're a smart one if you tell them!

● BUT be sure you get RIT, the only dye containing "Neomerpin"—makes colors sink in evenly and beautifully. No boiling. Perfect results every time.

● Rit brings new color to brassieres, panties, stockings, nighties, etc. Also curtains, drapes, spreads and even towels.

28 Colors.
Use White Rit to take color OUT!

NEVER SAY DYE . . . SAY RIT TINTS & DYES

That's what almost every woman says who uses Barrington, the exquisite new hand cream that does so much for your hands . . . comforts and softens them when red and rough . . . guards against chapping . . . and adds loveliness day by day. Buy the generous size 44c, 25c or 10c jar — at leading 5 and 10c stores, independent variety, drug and department stores. Or write North American Dye Corporation, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Barrington Hand Cream

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

FALSE TEETH

LOW AS $7.95

90 DAYS' TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you by mail from your own impressions. You have satisfaction of MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Customers report satisfaction but you be your own judge.

SEND NO MONEY WRITE TODAY for FREE Booklet and Material.
CLEVELAND DENTAL SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. 97-C2, East St. Louis, Illinois

RHODES' SHAMPOO
DYES HAIR

Entirely different. SHAMPOO and COLOR GRAY HAIR AT SAME TIME. Leaves Scalp CLEAN. No experience required. Beautiful-even-LASTING shades. Leaves hair soft, smooth, glossy. Permits Permanent wave—CAUTION: Use only as directed on label.
Write for FREE ILLUSTRATED BOOKLETS—
RHODES CO., 3 Canal St., LOWELL, MASS.

MORE PRACTICAL NURSES NEEDED

As registered nurses go into military service, more trained practical nurses will be needed at home!
During the last war there were not enough practical nurses to meet the nation's demands; those who were available received high wages for their services. Today, CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING is training hundreds of men and women, IN THEIR OWN HOMES, for this necessary, well-paid, patriotic service. 43rd year. High school not necessary. Many earn while learning—Mrs. J. M. P. earned $15 a week after completing the 12th lesson; Mrs. B. G. made $130 in 3 months! Free book tells of other successes. Send coupon today.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 233, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.
Name_____ Age_____
City_____ State_____

pocket, by the way, secured by a gold clip. It's likely to last him a couple of weeks. He doesn't overtip or toss change around lavishly. But in the big things, Gable is generous. He is always a sure bet for any worthwhile charity—with a check, that is. He hates benefits and it's almost impossible to persuade him to go unless it's especially worthy.

Besides Carole (who naturally is wealthy in her own right), Clark supports only his father, now aged 76. Gable, pere, dwells in a Hollywood bungalow. Just the other day Clark presented him with a new Chevrolet coupe. Papa Gable has seen his famous son act just three times and then briefly. He isn't too interested. He thinks Clark is just lucky in a rather foolish life's work. The last visit was on "Honky-Tonk." Jack Conway said, "Well, you've got quite a boy here," meaning Clark. "He's all right," observed the old man. "He's never been spoiled, anyway."

a natural . . .

That, as his dad knows, is the most amazing thing about the metamorphosis of Billy Gable. He's stayed himself underneath through as choice a selection of superficialities as a man's man ever faced.

That is evident in every direction. But maybe it can be pointed by an episode which took place at the very zenith of Clark Gable's movie glory—at the Atlanta premiere of "Gone With the Wind."

As Clark sat on the platform, surrounded by 300,000 frog-eyed worshipers on Atlanta's streets, a message came to him. "Your Uncle Charley is out in the crowd," it said, "and he'd like to see you." Clark grinned. His Uncle Charley owns a movie theatre somewhere in rural Florida. He won't play Clark's pictures. He says very frankly they're too expensive and nuts to them.

A message went out over the loud speaker. "Clark Gable," the announcer said, "would like to see his Uncle Charley at the reception after the show. Will he please come?"

Uncle Charley came. M-G-M photographers poised their cameras to record the family meeting. Then they lowered their lenses and shook their heads. One approached Clark and whispered, "Look at Uncle Charley's ears!"

"What's the matter with 'em?" asked Clark.

"Well—" began the photographer "—er—the shot might look funny." Like his nephew, Uncle C. had indeed a generous helping of ears. Like Clark's they spread to the wind like spinnakers.

Clark caught on. He leaned back and roared. "Don't worry about that! There's nothing wrong with the Gable ears. Boy—they've sure done all right for me!"

Which nobody can deny.

MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

New 1942 Winter Issue

SCREEN ALBUM

presents

Biographies of 200 Most Popular MOVIESTARS

●

New Autographed PORTRAITS

●

Complete Information CHARTS

All in ONE Magazine

Here's the biggest dime's worth of Hollywood Lore on the newsstands today. For only 10c you can now have an album of beautifully printed AUTOGRAPHED portraits of your favorite movie stars, both old and new. In addition there are thrilling detailed biographies of over 200 most popular stars, and charts giving inside information and little known facts on many others. It's a whale of a lot for only a dime—get your copy today.

1942—WINTER ISSUE

SCREEN ALBUM

Now On Sale Everywhere 10¢

(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10c to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Ave, New York, N. Y.)

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★
★ For Victory ★
★ BUY ★
★ DEFENSE BONDS ★ ★ AND STAMPS ★
★ Your Dollars Will Help! ★
★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 15)

WE WERE DANCING

Then there's the one about the penniless Princess and the bankrupt Baron. Back in 1936 Noel Coward whipped up several one-acters, threw them together and presented them as a night's entertainment. One of the pieces was "We Were Dancing," and M-G-M picked it up and fashioned a picture from the brittle, little sketch.

It's the kind of story where the heroine is called Vicki and the hero Nicki. It's about the International Set on horse, on foot and on tick most of the time. Vicki and Nicki, the International Kids, make a good thing out of being house guests from South Carolina to Joplin, Mo.

That is, they make a good thing out of it until they get married. A single Princess or a bachelor Baron commands a fairly good price; married—they're just extra people. The house-guest market drops sharply, and Vicki and Nicki find themselves selling glamour to the newly rich in the Middle West in return for room and board.

The plot is concerned with Vicki's attempts to get Nicki to work. They argue. They are divorced. Vicki returns to her rich American suitor. Nicki, thereupon, actually goes to work. They meet again. They dance again. They kiss again. They get married again. End of picture.

But the plot isn't important in a picture of this type. It's the tinsel and glitter; the wit of a well-turned phrase, the sheen of a well-groomed head of hair. You won't find anything of "We Were Dancing" in the news columns of this morning's paper, but maybe that's a virtue. It's a fairy tale of the never-never land a long, long time ago.

Hollywood always has had a soft spot in its heart for the International Kids. They've stolen jewels in old Vienna, they've recreated old Russia in old Paris, they've bucked the gaming tables at Monte Carlo and watched the surf at Biarritz. They've tried to reform and sometimes they did; and some of them were just charming fakes.

But always charming. They're old friends out Hollywood way, tried and true. It's poetic justice that in "We Were Dancing" Vicki and Nicki should find success and happiness just outside of Beverly Hills. That's where they always belonged.

Norma Shearer and Melvyn Douglas play the International Kids. Lee Bowman and Gail Patrick are the other angles in the romantic quadrangle. Denis Hoey, Sig Ruman and Alan Mowbray play variants of run-down nobility. There are plenty of lovely lush gowns in the picture, stunning sets with fascinating modern decor and a startling hair style or two.

GIRLS! WOMEN! Who are NERVOUS on certain particular days—

Do functional periodic disturbances make you nervous, irritable, cranky, blue, restless, hard to live with, so tired, weak and wornout—at such times?

Then why let yourself "go" like this? Try taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once—the best known medicine you can buy today that's made especially for women.

Thousands Benefited!

Pinkham's Compound is famous for helping relieve weak, tired, nervous feelings and pain of irregular periods—due to this cause. Taken regularly—this scientifically prepared medicine helps build up resistance against such symptoms.

For over 60 years Lydia Pinkham's Compound has helped thousands upon thousands of girls and women to go smiling thru such "difficult days." You, too, should soon begin to feel much better and enjoy gratifying benefits from the regular use of Lydia Pinkham's Compound. It's well worth trying! Follow label directions.

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

So they're back again, shined up and dressed their best, drinking champagne and being witty and gallant on their last dollar, or maybe it's their host's last dollar. Okay, Vicki! Okay, Nicki! Be seeing you at the Glotzes. On with the dance.—M-G-M.

P. S.

Norma Shearer and Melvyn Douglas danced eight hours a day for five days straight before their waltzing scenes got an official okay. . . . Melvyn Douglas was gifted with a new portable dressing room during production. Main features are knotty pine walls, brown upholstered furniture. . . . Lee Bowman spent his spare moments between takes writing a play. Outlined the plot to William Saroyan one night, and Saroyan liked it so well, he told Lee he'd like to turn actor and play one of the parts. . . . Gail Patrick had to discard the dozen gardenias sent to her daily by an admirer, 'cause the posies give her hay fever. . . . Ten-second interview with Miss Shearer: "There is one stratum of society that has been neglected in definition. It's country-club, horsey, wealthy, neither very old nor very young. It's all bound up in its own interests, and if anyone should ask me briefly what 'We Were Dancing' is about, I'd say—'House-party Society.'" . . . Norma showed up for work one day with her nose skinned from bridge to tip. Her swimming pool, she discovered, is too shallow for a ten-foot dive. . . . Mickey Rooney's Ava Gardiner turned down a featured role in another picture to do a small bit in this. Said Ava: "This way I'll get the chance to watch Miss Shearer's technique. I know there's a lot to be learned from her.". . . The clothes in the picture were designed by Adrian, his last chore at Metro. . . . Norma wears 24 gowns, predicts black and white will be the most popular shades of 1942. . . . Melvyn Douglas's stand-in spent every moment of his free time campaigning for votes. He's been studying politics under Melvyn's tutelage for the past five years and is running for the office of Commissioner of Public Works in Santa Monica.

WOMAN OF THE YEAR

This is the picture that Katharine Hepburn, they say, personally sold to M-G-M for $111,000; $100,000 for the authors, $10,000 for agent fees, and $1,000 for incidentals, telephone calls and aspirin for the producers. For their money M-G-M got a picture which allows Miss Hepburn to be wise, modern and fliply profound; and gets co-star Spencer Tracy out of his everlasting costumes and funny faces.

"Woman of the Year" is the story of Tess Harding, a political international columnist, and her attempts to juggle sports-writing husband Sam Craig (Spencer Tracy) and the world situation with her left hand. In one of her columns Tess suggests offhandly that baseball ought to be abolished for the duration. Sports writer Sam Craig promptly calls her the "Calamity Jane of the International Set."

And so they get married.

Just as promptly, the marriage is fouled by Serbian leaders, international refugees and assorted Balkan complications who flock to Tess; and broken down ex-prize fighters who just as naturally gravitate to Sam. Life with Katharine, as you might suspect, is somewhat complicated. For one thing, she can't scramble eggs; what's more she expects her husband to do it. As a matter of fact, the only domestic virtue she finally confesses to is the desire to have a son.

(Continued on page 106)

NU-GLOSS

THE HAIR RINSE of the MASTER HAIRDRESSER

FIRST AWARD OF MERIT N. Y. WORLD'S FAIR 1940

Used in 40,000 BEAUTY SALONS

Now YOU Can Use It At Home!

For the glamour that attracts romance, give your hair new beauty, sheen, lustre and loveliness. Bring out the dancing highlights with a NU-GLOSS HAIR RINSE (tints as it rinses). Not a permanent dye, not a bleach--leaves hair soft, silky, easy to set.

12 FLATTERING SHADES AT ALL 10c STORES

Ask for a NU-GLOSS Rinse at Your Beauty Salon.

3 RINSES 10c TRY ONE TODAY!

Mail to: NU-GLOSS Co., 80 Madison Ave., N.Y.C.

for FREE SAMPLE in Color Checked below:

☐ Platinum ☐ Golden Blonde ☐ Blue-Black
☐ Light Blonde ☐ Golden Brown ☐ Henna
☐ Honey Blonde ☐ Walnut Brown ☐ Lemon
☐ Ash Blonde ☐ Dark Brown ☐ Blue

NAME.....

Address..... City..... State.....

Asthma Agony Curbed First Day

For Thousands of Sufferers

Choking, gasping, wheezing Bronchial Asthma attacks poison your system, ruin your health and put a load on your heart. Thousands quickly and easily palliate recurring choking, gasping Bronchial Asthma symptoms with a doctor's prescription called Mendaco, now distributed thru drug stores, to help nature remove thick strangling excess mucus and promote welcome restful sleep. Mendaco is not a smoke, dope or injection. Just pleasant tasteless tablets. Printed guarantee with each package—money back unless it satisfies you. Ask your druggist for Mendaco today for only 60c.

Free HOLLYWOOD ENLARGEMENT OF YOUR FAVORITE PHOTO

Just to get acquainted, we will make you FREE a beautiful PROFESSIONAL enlargement of any snapshot, photo, kodak picture, print or negative to 5 x 7 inch. Please include color of eyes, hair, and clothing for prompt information on a natural, lifelike color enlargement in a FREE FRAME to set on the table or dresser. Your original returned with your FREE PROFESSIONAL enlargement. Please send 10c for return mailing—Act Quick.

HOLLYWOOD FILM STUDIOS
7021 Santa Monica Blvd., Dept. 222 Hollywood, Calif.

DON'T TWIST BABY'S BONES

The X-Ray shows how outgrown shoes injure baby feet. Better buy the correct but inexpensive WEE WALKERS and get a larger size often. Ask your baby doctor. Sold in the Infants' Department of these low-profit stores.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
R. L. Greene Co., Inc. I. Silver & Bros.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. F. & W. Grand
McCrory Stores Schulte-United
G. R. Kinney Company

WEE WALKER Shoes FOR wee WALKERS

FREE: Baby foot measuring scale in pamphlet on fitting. Moran ShoeCo., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 105)

Sam is mentally sizing up baseball bats and wondering whether he ought to call the kid Butch or Mike when Tess introduces the "son"—a young Greek refugee boy named Chris. They quarrel about Chris, for Tess gives up nothing; she is still caught up in the whirl of world events, revolutionary predictions and the solution of the international monetary situation. The boy is secondary, a fifth wheel, one of Tess' gestures—tossed off and forgotten.

Tess goes her high-handed way, straight to the award of being voted America's Outstanding Woman Of The Year. The award comes complete with banquet, speeches, presentations and compliments. But Sam doesn't go along with her. He stays home with the young Greek boy and that same night takes the boy back to the Greek Child Home where, at least, he will get attention and companionship.

Back home, Tess is in triumph, being photographed and applauded. She decides to have her picture taken with Chris and discovers then that Sam has left—and that Chris, too, is gone. She returns to the applause and the photographs—The Woman Of The Year.

How it comes out is the picture's secret, and you'll enjoy the Hollywood photo-finish. But the problem it poses is a pertinent one today, and despite the usual foreword (any similarity . . . is coincidental) it's slightly impertinent, too. You'll draw your own parallels.

At any rate it's good to have Katharine Hepburn back on the screen, mannerisms and all; she has a sharp incisive style and the role was tailor-made for her. And of course it's good to have Spencer Tracy playing that slightly tired, sympathetic character again. Spencer Tracy should never make faces.—M-G-M.

ROXIE HART

In the garish and innocent days of 1927 a single murder was enough to catch the interest of the nation. That was the heyday of the tabloids when every trial was a circus, and the accused, if acquitted, was assured of 50 or so full weeks of vaudeville bookings. Fortunes were made on the basis of a single well-aimed shot or well-placed knife. A proper dose of poison might even do the trick.

"Roxie Hart" sets out to capture the flavor of those high-spirited times, and naturally enough the locale is Chicago. Roxie Hart (Ginger Rogers) is involved in the murder of Fred Casely, a seedy, down-at-the-heels theatrical agent. Being Roxie Hart (and Ginger Rogers, to boot) she's lovely, appealing and has as pretty a set of legs as Chicago has seen since Mrs. O'Leary's cow made them start all over again.

Jake Callahan (Lynne Overman), a cynical reporter, pleads with Roxie to confess; it will make her famous, he says, and anyway they'll never convict her. She is promised a vaudeville tour, her name in lights, fame—if only she'll confess. Of course she's innocent of the crime, but says Roxie: "Naturally I want to do everything, everything I can for my career."

And so she confesses.

Then the picture really goes 1927. Roxie's legs are featured on the front pages of every paper; sob sisters write her story from inner, outer and upward angles. Walter Howard (George Montgomery), a sentimental reporter in love with Roxie, wants to prove her innocence, but Roxie isn't having any. Innocent, she'll fall back into obscurity. Roxie Hart, the glamorous murderess, is famous.

She fights to stay on the front page. She claws off the competition of a couple of other lady murderers. When Two-Gun Gertie Baxter comes along and threatens to take the play away from her, Roxie promptly announces that she's going to have a baby. The baby and Roxie's legs win back all her straying fans. No one is going to take the front page away from Roxie Hart. Not while she has something to say about it.

The trial is a gala event. They sell souvenirs on the courthouse steps; an official "Life And Loves of Roxie Hart" is published. The trial is broadcast play by play. Roxie acts her part to the hilt. The jury, filled with sob-sister stories and watching Roxie's silk clad leg delicately swing as she sits on the witness stand, acquits her with honor.

Little Roxie makes good in the big town.

That's the substance of "Roxie Hart," but the picture is tricked out as a story within a story, and it would spoil the fun to tell the beginning and the end. It's a variant on the trick Preston Sturges used in "The Great McGinty," and it goes all the way back to O. Henry and the surprise ending. It's still good.

But mainly the picture is concerned with 1927. It was a lively era, if you remember; and, despite all its sins, a remarkably innocent one. Ah! for the days when a girl might make her fortune with a judicious murder or two. Ah! for the days before a house painter in Europe made the tommy-gun seem like a harmless child's toy.—RKO.

P. S.

Ginger Rogers lets her knees weave through a slightly modified version of the Charleston in the dancing scenes; the real thing looked too corny . . . Ginger's all-out battle with Helene Reynolds cost $48,800 to film, not counting the money spent by the gals personally for iodine, liniment, etc. . . . It was just a preliminary battle for Ginger. Later on she spent two entire days scrapping with Lynne Overman, and completely ruined his watch when she butted him in the vest region with her head during the brawl . . . During one of the court room scenes, Adolphe Menjou is supposed to pick up Ginger, who has fainted, and hold her in his arms while he makes an impassioned plea to the jury. After the fourth rehearsal, Adolphe was staggering a bit under his glamorous, but, by then, weighty burden. George Montgomery politely, nay eagerly, stepped up, offered his services as a substitute and happily held his girl friend until the scene was ready to be shot . . . He and Ginger agreed to concentrate on their work and had only one date a week—every Saturday night . . . On their days off, they went shopping for furniture; Ginger helping George find the right pieces for his den, George helping Ginger round up Early California chairs for her Oregon ranch dining room . . . Menjou had his tailor supervise the bags and wrinkles of his hobo costumes . . . He knew what he was doing, in the milking scenes. Once got a job as farm hand doing just that on Vincent Astor's estate when he was first out of college and looking for work . . . Director "Wild Bill" Wellman's good-luck charm is an actor—Ronnie Rondell. Ronnie's had a job in every one of Wellman's pictures since "The Cat's Pyjamas" in 1925 . . . Ginger got expert boxing instruction from Montgomery who used to be an interscholastic fisticuffs champion when he was a student at the University of Montana.

JOAN OF PARIS

"Joan of Paris" is a tender melodrama of Paris under the Nazi terror. This isn't the Paris of bright lights and fashionable ladies. It's the Paris of back alleys and dingy cafés where men hide and run and a single misstep means death.

The Joan of the picture is a naive, simple-hearted, little French barmaid who becomes involved in the escape of RAF fliers downed over France. She's a tender chit who's been kicked around badly and asks of life only that it supply her occasionally with a bright, new dress to wear.

The story opens when five RAF fliers, headed by Free Frenchman Paul Lavallier (Paul Henreid) are downed over occupied France. Their only hope of escape is to get to Paris and there contact the British Intelligence, which might be able to get them across the Channel and back to England.

They make their way to Paris and hide out in the church of Father Antoine (Thomas Mitchell), but Paul who has led them to safety exposes himself to the suspicion of the Gestapo and dares not join them. He ducks into a little café and there he meets Joan (Michele Morgan). He hides out in her room that night, and Joan, who has never known anyone like him, is won over by his kindness. She falls in love with Paul, not knowing who he is.

The picture winds through Paul's attempts to escape the Gestapo and to contact the British Intelligence. Slowly, Joan is drawn into the web of intrigue. Besides Father Antoine, she is the only one Paul can trust.

The film moves swiftly to its climax. Paul manages to reach the British Intelligence with the help of Father Antoine and Joan. The escape is planned, but Paul is doomed to remain since he will not lead the Gestapo to his hidden friends, but neither can he elude the shadow following close on his heels.

There's a taut sequence when Paul, in a final, despairing effort, flees across Paris, the always-present footsteps echoing close behind him. Finally, in a Turkish bath, he loses the Gestapo agent. But by then it is too late to join his friends.

However, he's counted without Joan; she's arranged that they wait just a little longer for Paul. Though the Gestapo has fallen on her trail and is aware of her every move, she out-tricks them to send Paul to England and safety. But the price of his safety is her life; she dies before a Nazi firing squad.

"Joan of Paris" serves to introduce the French movie star Michele Morgan to American audiences. It's a sweet and tender role she's asked to play in the picture; and she's backed by a strong story, a tight melodrama of present-day Paris.

"Joan of Paris" isn't propaganda. Unless it's propaganda to show Paris grey, dreary and afraid from dawn to dark. Unless it's propaganda to see Nazi boots and Nazi flags on the cobblestoned streets. Unless it's propaganda to show the little people of France living in fear of the sound of a motor truck in the street or a knock on the door which might mean prison and death.—RKO.

P. S.

Jacques Theiry and Georges Kessels are a pair of important, though tough-to-pronounce names. They co-authored the original story on which "Joan of Paris" is based . . . Prop men scratched their heads more than once over scenes in French garret, church, castle, prison and sewer . . . Michele Morgan's delicious accent is what happened after a year's intensive study of English. Michele is best known in this country for "Port of Shadows." Says the part of Joan, the little Parisian girl who gives her life for her lover, is hand-tailored for her . . . Paul Henreid is still news to American fans though a familiar figure on the European stage and screen. Came to Hollywood via the British-made "Night Train" and a Broadway stint in "Flight to the West" . . . Thomas Mitchell, the guy who always turns in a polished performance, is not only a stage and screen actor but a veteran writer, director and producer . . . May Robson, though 77, has never once missed a season's work since her debut in 1883 . . . Laird Cregar, Hollywood's biggest actor, tips the scale at 300 lbs., is 6 ft. 3. His portrayal of Oscar Wilde on the Los Angeles stage set studio execs to thinking . . . and acting . . . The most important non-speaking role ever to be written into a film is that of the Gestapo agent played by the super pantomimist, Alex Granach . . . The one set rule of David Hempstead, producer, is to defy all rules of picture-making.

(Continued on page 108)

MEN SEE YOUR EYES
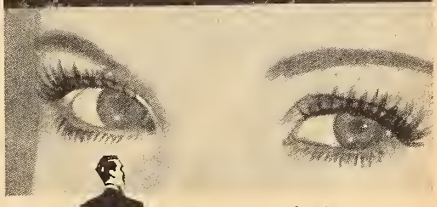
FIRST



NEW CUSHION GUARD

Romantic Eyes in 60 seconds

The new Cushion-Guard Kurlash performs magic in a jiffy! It curls lashes upwards in a "beauty sweep" resulting in lovelier-looking lashes and brighter-shining eyes! Kurlash devotees will want this 4-way improved model. As to those who have never used Kurlash before—now is the time to start.

Send 10c to Jane Heath, Dept. F3 Kurlash Co., Inc., Rochester, N. Y. for trial tube of Kurlene, eye lash cream and free eye-beauty make-up chart. Give color of your eyes, hair, and skin.

KURLASH
The Only Complete Eye-Beauty Line
THE KURLASH COMPANY, INC.
Rochester, N. Y. • New York City • Toronto, Canada

I'VE LOST HIS LOVE!

Surface Pimples Can Ruin Affection

Truer words were never spoken—a poor, externally caused, blotchy complexion can often affect the feeling of your loved one—hurt you in business too! Why not try medicated Poslam Ointment and Poslam Soap, as thousands upon thousands have. Just follow the simple directions enclosed in every package—the cost is low at druggists everywhere. 18 Million Packages Sold!

FREE: Ointment sample, write post card to Poslam, Dpt. M.3, 254 W. 54th St., N.Y.C.

POSLAM SOAP & OINTMENT

I WANT YOU
WORK FOR "UNCLE SAM"
Start $1260 to $2100 a year
MEN — WOMEN. Prepare NOW for 1942 Examinations. Many appointments being made. Write immediately for free 32-page Civil Service book, with list of positions and full particulars telling how to qualify.
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. G256 Rochester, N. Y.

PERFUME FOR A SWEETHEART
Blue Waltz

An exquisitely youthful fragrance that's sweet as Love's first kiss... BLUE WALTZ weaves the magic of the garden's loveliest blossoms into a fragile, haunting perfume that invites romance. A touch on your hair, your throat, your wrists and you're Cupid's darling!

10¢ AT ALL 5 & 10¢ STORES

A darling new Sweetheart Box with Blue Waltz perfume . . . 10¢

Smooth, clear and shine-free...that's the way "the boys" like a girl's complexion to look... the way yours can look if, under your make-up, you always use tinted Miner's Foundation Cream with Lanolin.

The Lanolin helps soften your skin and protect it from temperature extremes... as it holds your make-up faithfully, glamorously for hours. Try it today! 39¢ & 10¢.

MINER'S Foundation Cream with LANOLIN

PEACH ☐
RACHELLE ☐
BRUNETTE ☐
SUNTAN ☐

FREE Generous Sample
Send coupon and 3c stamp

MINER'S • 12 E. 12th St., Dept. CM3, New York, N. Y.
I enclose 3¢ stamp to cover mailing cost. Send me generous sample of Miner's Foundation Cream!
Name
Address

FALSE TEETH by MAIL
from WORLD'S LARGEST DENTAL PLATE MAKERS
$7.95 to $35
60 DAYS' TRIAL—Send No Money! Made for you from your own mouth impression! Money Back Guarantee of Satisfaction! FREE impression material, directions, catalog. U. S. Dental Co., 1555 Milwaukee Av., Dept. 3-104, Chicago

DRAFTING
MORE DRAFTSMEN NEEDED in all manufacturing and building lines—$30 to $50 a week and UP. Learn quickly at home in spare time. Selective Employment Service. Write NOW for FREE Bulletin. No obligation.
AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. DD314, Drexel & 58th, Chicago

MAKE BIG MONEY BE THE LUCKY HEART AGENT
SELL COLORED PEOPLE
Work sparetime or fulltime. Be your own boss. No experience needed. Our one minute hair straightener and skin bleach (also 300 other products) sells fast, repeats faster. We show you everything. For Free Samples write Lucky Heart Co., Dept. MM-119-Q, Memphis, Tenn.

HOLLYWOOD'S MAN OF MYSTERY!
Most revealing story ever written about George Sanders. In April
MODERN SCREEN.

STOP CORN MISERY!
Noted Doctor's Relief Does It Fast!
Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads instantly stop tormenting shoe friction; lift aching pressure; send pain flying. Ease tight shoes; prevent corns. Separate Medications included for quickly removing corns. Cost but a few cents an application.
Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 107)

This time he did it by risking a combination of two little-known names in one big picture. Hempstead used to be a professor of English literature, sold his first story to Hollywood in 1930, was signed soon after as producer's assistant, came into the limelight with his production of "Kitty Foyle."

The Adventures of MARTIN EDEN

There's more than a slight amount of gore in this yarn and enough plot for two movies . . . one about a writer who makes good and the other about a seaman who devotes his life to freeing his pal from the charge of mutiny on a ship aptly dubbed the "Hell Wagon." The doings revolve around Glenn Ford, hero, who proves himself more than equal to the tasks at hand.—Col.

YOUNG AMERICA

Button Willow Valley is painfully aware of Jane Withers' presence from the moment she arrives. It looks at first as though she's too headstrong a filly to bother breaking in. But Robert Cornell and the rural 4-H club exert a wholesome influence, and in the end Jane proves she was worth the effort.—TCF.

MR. BUG GOES TO TOWN

In the fight for life carried on by the small community of insects who live just 45 ft. from Broadway, Hoppity, a James Stewart sort of bug, figures as the hero. This serious feature-length cartoon also has a heroine and a heavy. In fact, it's got all the essential elements of the standard movie and a little more, since it deals with fundamentals rather than fripperies.—Par.

THE MAN WHO RETURNED TO LIFE

A newspaper story, announcing the hanging of one Paul Guilfoyle, takes John Howard back eight years to a former and less happy life. Seems Paul had once plotted to kill John and is now being held for murder, though his attempt fell through. At the risk of damaging his own life, John returns to save Paul's and is well rewarded in the end—Col.

VALLEY OF THE SUN

With hell-bent Apaches on one hand and dastardly white men on the other, it's amazing that James Craig finds time for romance . . . and, the way things turn out, it's pretty lucky for Lucille Ball that he does. The action of this super-Western whiz-bangs through a series of thrills that almost result in a large-scale massacre . . . almost, but not quite, thanks to Army Scout Craig.—RKO.

SING YOUR WORRIES AWAY

A great deal of trouble might have been avoided if Bert Lahr and his pretty cousin had not inherited 3,000,000 smackers unexpectedly. Unscrupulous June Havoc and others are on hand to complicate things, but in the end they get their dough, and you get your laughs. There's a generous helping of music, too, to add to the general gayety.—RKO.

HATS OFF TO HAIR-DO'S

(Continued from page 47)

convert a coiffure like Judy Garland's into the sleek type Carole Landis wears. And the Landis coiffure itself is easily transformed from evening glamour to the career girl's smart daytime hairdress, for without front curls its style is casual though trim. Before dressing this style for evening, set your top hair in pin curls so that it will comb out to tumble into a suggestion of a bang. Then try sweeping your side hair up from the temples in a hint of a wave while you set the ends in curls to match the top. Brush your back hair up and across the back of your head—from left to right and up—the ends set in a diagonal row of curls across your crown. Highlight your locks with brilliantine, and then spray back hair with lacquer.

This sculptured effect is just one of the many examples of the 1942 emphasis on back hair, a trend which will please the men, we know. Only last week, one of them, with an air of speaking for his entire sex, asked us "Why don't you tell girls about the backs of their heads?" Far be it from us to disregard the masculine opinion on beauty, so we're passing this on to you. If you are not sure that every little strand behind is doing its well-groomed bit to be alluring, why not make a late New Year's resolution to use a hand mirror every day. And this habit will suggest brushing and using brilliantine, lacquer, pins and all those other little devices which make your back locks live up to those that frame your face.

styled to type . . .

Whether your hair is very, very long or very, very short, dress it to flatter the shape of your face. An oval face is the ideal, so if you are blessed with such contours, do nothing to hide them. Wear your hair simply and off the face so as to show its perfect outline.

If you have a long slender face, it will look more oval if you part your hair in the center and wear it loose and fluffy at the sides to create width. Topknot curls and a high pomp should be avoided for they only add height. If your face is square like Priscilla Lane's, soften it by loose waves, with fullness at the jawline to detract from apparent width.

Or if your face is round, build your hair full and soft, and keep the curls above the ears. Try to achieve a heart-shaped effect, but avoid severe styles. If yours is a diamond-shaped face with prominent cheek bones, keep waves and curls above and below your ears and dress your hair close to your cheek line. Carole Lombard follows this rule, and you might try copying her hair-do's.

If you have a heart-shaped face with broad forehead and narrow chin, you can give your face better proportion by keeping your hair smooth on top and bringing it in slightly at the temples. Begin waving it at the ears and wear curls low to give width to your jaw. Long hair, in any case, is more flattering for a face of this shape. On the other hand, if your forehead is narrow and your jaw broad, keep all rolls and other hair emphasis above the ears, softening the angle of your jaw by waves and curls along the sides of your face.

Large waves and loose curls give needed softness to a large face with well-defined features, while a fluffy coiffure with small waves and curls will flatter delicate features and a small face.

Now, for the fun of those frivolous touches—big bows, colorful ribbons, jewelled or unjewelled clips, decorative combs, etc. All of these add their own sweet or smooth touch to an attractive coiffure. And there is a hair ornament to suit your every mood—bows when you want to be a schoolgirl, and highly styled combs when you feel the grand lady. With spring on its way, wearing gardenias in the Hawaiian manner and forget-me-nots in the when-mother-was-a-girl manner will make you look and feel as glamorous for evening as do your new spring gowns!

Have you been longing for a permanent wave that would look lovely and natural —even at first? Then, why not try a Frederics Tru-Curl Wave next time you need a "permanent." It's done with the best of materials that contain no beauty-stealing metallic salts, and it leaves the hair soft, lustrous and easily adaptable to all the new hair arrangements. The Tru-Curl way is the comfortable way, too, for there is no stretching of hair, no disagreeable chemical odors, and the time required is considerably shortened. If you choose the shop that gives a Frederics Tru-Curl Permanent, you'll be delighted with a longer-lasting, lovelier wave.

Dull hair—dull beauty, no matter how pretty the girl! If you want your hair to have that special sheen and radiance that makes it stand out in a crowd, try Nu-Gloss Hair Rinse to bring out those hidden, lively lights. It comes in 12 natural shades, so you can't fail to find the one to enhance your own natural hair color.

BEAUTY GOES TO YOUR HEAD

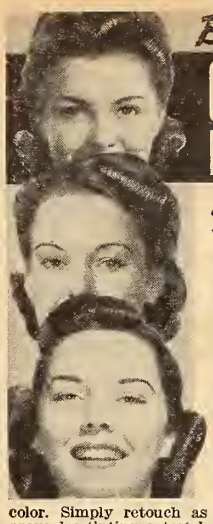
(Continued from page 49)

If you use cake soap, be careful to apply only the lather to your tresses, for soap rubbed on directly is difficult to remove and may leave a dull coat on the strands. Whatever kind you choose, massage the shampoo well into your scalp and press it again and again through the lengths to make hair uniformly clean and bright. Then rinse your hair thoroughly and apply your shampoo once more.

Last, rinse your hair repeatedly in successive clear waters until every trace of soap has been removed. Finish off with a good commercial rinse to bring out those engaging little lights that will make your topknot stand out among so many luster-lacking ones. Whether you are a blonde, brunette, redhead or are prematurely gray, you'll find the rinse for just your hair shade. Of course, it can be washed out whenever you like but we think you'll like the bright, alive shimmer it gives your locks.

So hair will be soft and easily manageable, dry it carefully. Press out the extra moisture with a thick Turkish towel, then brush or comb it out to its length. Unless you prefer to dry your locks free blown—now, while your hair is moist, is the ideal time to set it. It's an easy job—what with all the in-

(Continued on page 110)



Brush Away GRAY HAIR

. . and look 10 YEARS YOUNGER

● Now at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 30 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today. 60c at all drug stores—on a money-back guarantee, or—

Send for FREE TEST BOTTLE

The Kenton Pharmacal Co.
791 Brownatone Bldg., Covington, Kentucky
Without obligation, please send me, free and postpaid, Test Bottle of BROWNATONE and interesting illustrated booklet. Check shade wanted.
☐ Blonde to Medium Brown ☐ Dark Brown to Black
Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State .....
Print Your Name and Address

YOU MAY ALWAYS BE CONSTIPATED UNLESS—

You correct faulty living habits—unless liver bile flows freely every day into your intestines to help digest fatty foods and guard against constipation. SO USE COMMON SENSE! Drink more water, eat more fruit and vegetables. And if assistance is needed, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They not only assure gentle yet thorough bowel movements but ALSO stir up liver bile secretion to help digest fatty foods.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! Used successfully for over 20 years by Dr. F. M. Edwards in treating patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile, today Olive Tablets are justly FIRST choice of thousands of grateful users. Test their goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. All druggists.

FREE CHART

STUFFED-UP NOSE

If thick, gummy mucus plugs your nose—causes morning hawking, coughing—loosen and liquefy it with HALL'S TWO-METHOD TREATMENT—soothes and cools. Ask your Druggist. Satisfaction or money back!
Send postcard for FREE Health Chart TODAY!
F. J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 33, TOLEDO, OHIO

SPEAKING OF DEFENSE . . .
Rand DRESS SHIELDS
are my favorite protection
and of course
Rand BABY PANTS
AND CRIB SHEETS
are best for baby!
AT CHAIN & DEP'T. STORES • RAND RUBBER CO., B'KLYN, NEW YORK

SITROUX
Triple-Tested
CLEANSING TISSUES

SOFTER Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

STRONGER As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made from pure cellulose.

MORE ABSORBENT Drinks in moisture. Ideal for beauty care and a thousand and one uses everywhere.

AT 5 & 10¢—DRUG & DEPT. STORES

A NEW Puzzle Success
POCKET CROSSWORD PUZZLES

Like puzzles? Then try this new digest-sized puzzle magazine that fits handily into pocket or handbag. Easy to take with you wherever you go, yet has large, easy-to-work diagrams. Contains 100 pages of the highest quality puzzles of varying degrees of difficulty, with many interesting features and novelty puzzles to add spice and variety.

You can get a lot of pleasure and relaxation from this bright, handy new puzzle magazine—ask your dealer for a copy today.

NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE

ONLY 10 CENTS

(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10c to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.)

Remember Pearl Harbor!
YOU CAN HELP WIN VICTORY
by buying DEFENSE BONDS AND STAMPS
Buy ALL you can!

genious little curlers, hair pins, bob pins, combs, curlers and the like so easily available to aid and abet you. Make use of wave set preparations, too, for they resist the tension of moistened hair and will keep curls molded the way you want them to be. When hair is dry and well-brushed, spray on a little brilliantine to add luster and softness to those curls of yours.

If you weren't blessed by nature with natural curls—or even if you have a suggestion of a wave—you'll save time in coaxing hair to stay in place if you invest in a really good permanent wave. Don't fall for bargain offers, but go to a reliable shop which employs skilled operators and uses the highest quality of materials. Be sure that a test curl is made before the waving is done, so that the operator will know just what treatment and length of permanenting your kind of hair requires. The cost may be a little higher than at cut-rate shops, but you'll get your money's worth in a longer lasting, lovelier wave.

Breeze-blown, flying hair may look very attractive for a brief moment or so, but whenever you go motoring, play tennis or other outdoor games, keep wandering strands in check with a light, imperceptible net. Nets—either hair or silk—are easy to find in all natural hair shades.

"Don't let beauty go to your head," our oldsters used to remind us. But they weren't talking about hair. They were warning us against letting our natural good looks make us complacent. Take care of your locks, girls, for sunny, well-cared-for hair has universal appeal and wins admiring attention.

If, in spite of a smart coiffure, your hair has not been looking its Sunday best because of that old bugaboo, dandruff, you can rid yourself of this unhappy situation by using Fitch's Dandruff Remover Shampoo frequently. It is well known for its thorough cleansing qualities that help restore the scalp to a normal, healthy condition. Try Fitch's Dandruff Remover Shampoo and be pleased with the renewed elasticity of your hair and its increased loveliness.

If you have been longing for the thrill of a Hollywood glamour complexion with a lovely velvety texture, try Miner's Patti-Pac Make-Up. It stays on hours and hours without need for retouching. Simply dampen a sponge, puff or piece of absorbent cotton, rub it on the cake and apply; then smooth over with a powder puff. Incidentally, if you have a few skin irregularities, Miner's Patti-Pac Make-Up covers them over beautifully and creates the desired illusion of a perfectly flawless, smooth-textured skin.

COED

(Continued from page 16)

up a bit precociously. True enough, it starts with you and Bill suddenly discovering you're mad for each other. It's Tristan and Isolde and Scarlett and Rhett all over again, only more so. Then gradually it becomes a rut. But you—you little dope—adore the regular Saturday night routine, the freedom from anxiety when a dance is on the horizon. You love thinking you're in love. But do snap out of it before a) Bill leaves you for a smoothie with a fabulous stagline; b) the rest of the local males refer to you as Mrs. Bill and c) you've alienated all shechums.

First, let's assume you're mutually agreeable. The next time you're out together, say something like, "We've had such fun together, Bill, let's call things off while it's still fun." Ask him to be an angel and air it about that you've amiably split up.

If, however, Bill remains smitten while you've grown blasé, your problem is a bit ticklish. The thing to remember above all is not to hurt his pride. Taper him off gradually. Be a bit cooler about your good-night kiss. In little ways let him feel a change. When he asks you about it, say you've noticed it in him, too.

There's one last variation on the going steady business. Supposing you've gone around together for months and months, and instead of palling on each other, each day finds you more swoony. Take the case of Judy Garland and Dave Rose. J. naturally raised a fuss when her mother suggested she was pretty young to tie herself down. They talked the whole thing over gal-to-gal and decided there were just two possibilities. Either this was one of those rare cases of adolescent love being real love, or it was just a passing infatuation. If the first were true, Judy agreed that Dave deserved a very superior wife and that anything she could do to insure just that would be worth the effort. She decided that while she and Dave knew volumes about music, she wasn't too bright about sports or philosophy or art. Maybe some of the other chaps who called her up could enlighten her. Dave, meanwhile, would go places without her and acquire new interests and more knowledge, too. They'd both be developing poise and the ability to get along with a number of people. They'd be enriching themselves, so that if they decided to marry they'd have a great deal more to bring to each other. Well, you know how their romance turned out—and they're blissfully happy with about 2,000,000 interests between them. If it hadn't wound up at the altar, you can see with half an eye what a smart move gettin' back into circulation would have been.

A few more anti-going-steady reasons:

1) Your poor beau is constantly broke from takin' you out so often that he never has the price of a really big splurge.

2) Men are a fickle crew at best, so why take a chance on getting yourself permanently benched when his whim shifts from blonds to brunettes?

3) If you don't play the field a bit you'll never know whether you passed by someone just a touch more soulmatey, but you'll always vaguely suspect you did.

Are you still with us, all you one-valentine-senders? Maybe it's too late to do anything about your set-up this year, but next year, bet you'll be sending a raft of them and hauling 'em in, too!

DRESS FOR HIM?

Then send for our chart on how to dress for all occasions and for all boys! Doesn't matter what your type is. The chart has your number!
Enclose 5c in coin or stamps and address: Co-Ed Chart No. 1, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York City.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 55)

his people even if they head him into trouble. An admirable trait, we'll admit. BUT, we don't want to be around the day studio boss Darryl Zanuck catches him practicing some of his Parisian mischief!

There's that wine business, for example. Twentieth Century-Fox, like all studios, bans alcoholic beverages from its commissaries. But Jean, true to his blood, can't enjoy a meal unless he can float it on a glass of sauterne or sherry. Told by a waitress he couldn't order the stuff, Jean tried several times to smuggle in his own bottles. That ruse, unfortunately, was discovered, and he was forced to evolve another which is in operation at this moment.

Jean . . . has to have his wine.

Always with him, packed on his hip, is a five ounce medicine vial. Around about the middle of each lunch hour he blandly complains of headache, high blood pressure or toothache. While his companions utter their sympathy, he whips out his vial and treats himself to a healthy swig. All his aches and pains miraculously disappear, and the great Gabin is left—a culprit—but a happy one!

Good News About Dead End Kids

Just to prove it's a free country and anything can happen, the demoniacal Dead End Kids have launched a new project . . . raising white geraniums. And anybody who wants to make something of it will please step outside while Billy Halop polishes 'em off, because, in spite of the tender new project, the mugs have lost none of their precious guttersniping characteristics. Ask Humphrey Bogart or James Cagney. Better still, ask the director who said he'd rather be a nice, dignified teacher in a reform school. Ask Ann Sheridan, who used to sneak on the set behind a bodyguard, about their intramural mayhem. But don't ask how they got that way, 'cause nobody knows, exactly. Billy Halop comes from an amazingly respectable family, considering. So do the rest, though to see them is to be reminded of the pungent sights and sounds of Chicago's Loop or New York's Lower East Side. Their intimate ambitions are so normal, it's a complete anti-climax. Huntz Hall is one of 16 children . . . the one with the very crooked nose and a love for crap games. About his desire to be a producer, he says, "Get me 100 girls. Get me 40 elephants. Get me some trumpets. Build me a couple of dozen sets! That's all there is to being a producer." The latest news to date is that he's collaborating on a screen comedy that'll have you on your ear. And in it, of course, is a good, round part for Huntz who's always been crazy to wash his face and do a comedy part. Then there's Gabriel Dell, son of a well-known doctor, who once had ideas of following in paternal footsteps, until he wrote his own stage version of "Hamlet" and fell in love with it. Currently he's in love with a light heavyweight fighter named "Big Boy Buff." Owns a piece of him, as a matter of fact. Bernard Punsley is serious as anything about bacteriology . . . will probably go into medical research eventually. And Billy, right now, is dreaming up plans for his newly formed orchestra which specializes in New Orleans Swing. According to his own raves, "It's hep . . . beautiful to hear . . . sweet as h—!" So is Gilbert and Sullivan, they all agree. In fact, they used to depend pretty much on "Pirates of Penzance" to get them into the proper mood when they were doing "Sea Raiders." In their current opus, Universal's "Tough As They Come," Billy is pressed into service as a lover, probably because his is the most presentable profile of the lot. Jibe him about it, and he'll tell you, "The best fighters know how to go into a clinch . . . and I'm a darned good fighter." One of the nicest stories about the "mob" is the canned banquet they sent to the "London Dead End Kids." It all came about when Hall said, "We oughta do somethin' for those guys" . . . said guys being a group of young fellows who had been working together to perform some rather daring feats of civilian defense. If the package ever arrived, 12 hungry kids feasted on such delicacies as nuts, plum pudding, canned butter, baked ham and roast chicken. If not, it's still a pretty nice story.

War Paint in Wartime

Hollywood's honeys are feeling the influence of America's all-out-for-defense program in more ways than one . . . Hedy Lamarr is now pinning up her curls with toothpicks and working on a system to tint the little wooden hair-affixers a bright gold for evening wear . . . Claudette Colbert has filed her nails down to her fingertips so she can knit, wrap bundles and file records of war relief work . . . Veronica Lake, sinking all her clothes-money into defense bonds, made herself a new hat by attaching the charms from her pet bracelet to a square-shaped cap of cinnamon brown felt she bought last year.

New Life For Old Furs

Got an old fur coat that's beginning to wear around the edges? Why not do like Marlene Dietrich and other of our Movietown cuties? Ever since Marlene came into town last year with a fur-lined ulster slung over her continental shoulders, the glamour gals have taken up the style and had their own flat fur pieces encased in cloth. They say it makes you feel warm and SO luxurious.

Stormy Weather

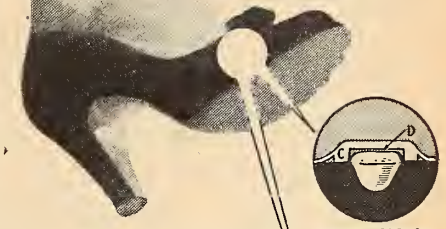
Speaking of Marlene, we saw her walking around the Universal lot during the last "heavy dew," wearing a super-exotic wet-weather outfit. Over her tailored suit, she wore an all-encompassing ankle-length flowing white rubber cape with attached hood lined in black. High white rubber boots protected the Dietrich gams. It takes a certain dash to wear these exaggerated styles, though. An outfit like this would make most women look like Dopey of the Seven Dwarfs!

From Soup to Suits

For Adrian fans, let it be known that the great fashion maestro is hard at work organizing a brand new salon. He's taken over the building formerly occupied by the

(Continued on page 112)

WALK AWAY YOUR CORNS



Felt pad (C) helps relieve pain by removing pressure. Medication (D) acts on corn.

WHEN corns hurt do this one thing: apply Blue-Jay. While you walk in comfort Blue-Jay gently loosens the corn so that in a few days it may be easily removed. (Stubborn cases may require more than one application.)

Blue-Jay costs very little—only a few cents to treat each corn—at all drug and toilet goods counters.

In a few days corn is gently loosened so it may be easily removed.

BAUER & BLACK BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

Now She Shops "Cash And Carry"

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FALSE TEETH AS LOW AS $7.95

Per Plate, DENTAL PLATES are made in our own laboratory from your personal impression. Our workmanship and material GUARANTEED or purchase price refunded. We take this risk on our 60-day trial offer. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY! MAIL POST CARD for FREE Material and Catalog of our LOW PRICES. DON'T PUT IT OFF—Write us TODAY!

BRIGHTON - THOMAS DENTAL LABORATORY, Dept. 1046 6217 S. Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED 47¢

Size 8x10 inches. Original returned safely. Send No Money. Just mail photo, snapshot or negative—receive promptly handsome Enlargement. Pay postman only 47¢ plus postage. Standard Art Studios, Dept. 1332-C, 113 S. Jefferson, Chicago

3 for $1.00

THEY SAID "WHAT A LOVELY WAVE!"

Smart, becoming, natural-looking! SET IT YOURSELF with Dr. Ellis' Wave Set—world's largest selling lotion! Greaseless, quick drying, easy to use. At your favorite 5 & 10 or drugstore.

10¢ PLUS TAX

Dr. Ellis' WAVE SET

I HATE GRAY HAIR!

Of Course you do! You know tell-tale gray hair kills romance, that it can cause a hundred little heartbreaks, and yet for years you have hesitated to do anything about it! Has fear held you back—fear of dangerous dyes, fear that it is too difficult, that people will know your hair has been dyed?

These fears are so needless! Today you can buy at your drug or department store a hair coloring preparation called Mary T. Goldman's. Pronounced positively harmless by competent medical authorities (no skin test needed), and sold on a money-back guarantee, Mary T. Goldman's Hair Coloring Preparation will color your gray, bleached or faded hair to the desired shade so beautifully and so gradually your closest friends won't guess. It's inexpensive and easy to use—if you can comb your hair, you can't go wrong! Millions have used it with beautiful results for the last fifty years, proving its merit and safety.

So help yourself to happiness — today! Get a bottle of your shade of Mary T. Goldman's—insist on the original. Beware of substitutes—others have tried to imitate our product for years. For free sample, clip and mail coupon.

Mary T. Goldman Co., 8471 Goldman Bldg. St. Paul, Minn. Send free test kit. Color checked.
☐ Black ☐ Dark Brown ☐ Light Brown
☐ Medium Brown ☐ Blonde ☐ Auburn

Name.....

Address.....

City..... State.....

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

STOP Scratching

Relieve Itch Fast

Relieve itching of eczema, pimples, rashes, athlete's foot and other skin troubles. Use cooling antiseptic D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Stops itching quickly. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Ask your druggist for D. D. D. Prescription.

FALSE TEETH Low as $6.85

90 DAYS TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. Free impression material, directions. Booklet of New Styles and Information. Write today to PARKER DENTAL LAB.,
127 N. DEARBORN ST., DEPT. 27B, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FREE SEND NO MONEY

WATCH FOR two more full-page 4-COLOR PORTRAITS in the April issue of MODERN SCREEN!

See it WOODSTOCK TYPEWRITER

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Victor Hugo Restaurant, and is busy checking his nearly completed first collection. Prices will run into the upper brackets, and his dresses will be modeled in the swankier stores of the nation.

Turnabout

Too bad we can't mention names, but there's a beauteous babe in town that has the other gals wondering where she finds such bosom-revealing formal gowns. Truth is, she shops for dresses with extremely low cut backs—and then wears them port side aft!

Orson's Jewelry

Orson Welles got lots of whoo-hoo's when he breezed into the Columbia Broadcasting Studios the other day wearing a small silver bull's head in his lapel. It was the first time anyone had seen him wearing jewelry of any kind, and the boys wanted to know how come. Orson, glib as usual, explained his adornment.

He'd spent weeks in the land of Manana, preparing a film about a fighting bull, and when he left, some of his newly-made Mexican friends got together and presented him with the lapel decoration, plus a solid silver tie clip in the shade of an espada.

If You're Dieting . . .

Frances Scully, pretty, petite commentator of NBC's "Speaking of Glamour," personally vouches for the effectiveness of this weight-losing trick: Drink one glass of grapefruit juice after every meal, then take a brisk, 20 minute walk.

Hearts, Frills and Flowers

Lists of favorites are always popping up. Come Christmas, and someone names the Best Dressed Women of the Year. Come Easter, the Best Hatted Men of the Nation get their pictures in all the papers. And so it goes.

This being the hearts and flowers season, we scurried all over town, gathered opinions of top Hollywood stylists. Here's the result—stories behind the dresses they've designed and liked best since last Valentine's Day.

There's something super-romantic about being married to a man who designs your clothes. The creations he dreams up mean much more to you than just a covering for your chassis. So it is with Gene Tierney and Oleg Cassini.

One Cassini-designed gown in particular stands out in Gene's mind—a formal you'll see in "Shanghai Gesture." From the top of its high neckline to the lower edge of its bodice, the gown is midnight black ninon. From the waist down, layer upon layer of sunlight pink ninon flares out, making a perfect background for a tree-like pattern of heavy black lace. Says Oleg, "The idea for the dress began shaping in my mind on the way home from a New Year's Eve party with Gene. It was nearly complete, but there was something else it needed. What it was eluded me, until I got home and saw the design the wild branches of the trees made against the sky." Gene loves the gown so much, she leaves newer things hanging in the closet in favor of what she calls her "tree dress."

There are a lot of women in this town who have had clothes designed for them by Orry-Kelly, whether they know it or not! Seems Warner Bros.' top-flight stylist loves to go night-clubbing, and while he sits at his pet table near the dance floor, he mentally designs costumes for most of the women who twirl by! Like Annie Sheridan, f'r instance. He watched her swing her hips through the motions of a wicked rumba the other night, "and by the time she'd gone around the dance floor twice, I'd thought of at least ten new outfits I'd like to see her wear."

As a matter of fact, it's the coat he designed for Ann in "The Man Who Came To Dinner" that gets the No. 1 spot on his "Favorite Design Since Last Valentine's Day" list. Kelly loves to use black with brown, so he worked out a black, heavy wool coat, slim-skirted and lavishly trimmed with sable. But don't go trying this on your own sewing machine. It cost $1,200!

We bumped into Damon Giffard, another of Warner Bros.' designers, in a dark, incense-filled shop in Old Chinatown. He was just reaching into his wallet for $1.50, the price of an exotic black and gold satin collar he had discovered collecting dust on a table of assorted junk. Mumbling something about designing a dress around it, he invited us out to the studio to take a look at his new creation in a couple of days.

Sure enough—next time we stopped by his office, he was fitting a new Oriental-inspired gown on Brenda Marshall. The dirty old collar, now cleaned and shining, topped a beautifully cut, heavy silk crepe dinner gown of eye-arresting Chinese red.

The personal pride of RKO's Stevenson's work during the last year is a suit he designed for Joan Fontaine in "Suspicion." A dressy suit of toasty beige American wool, it has a long fitted coat with side closing and slim skirt. On one wide lapel nestles a brace of sables that closes the coat at the shoulder and hangs down the back.

On the set Joan told us how much she liked the suit, and how it actually helped to put her in the proper mood. "Eddie used beige as the color to give a note of lightness and gaiety," she explained. "In this scene, I'm supposed to be making my first entrance into my home after returning from my wedding trip. He trimmed the suit with sable to let the audience know I'm playing a woman wealthy enough to afford the very best."

When Evelyn Keyes makes her first entrance in "The Adventures of Martin Eden," take a good look at her gown. A shining black and sapphire-blue dinner dress, it was fashioned from the last cut of imported French silk to reach this country. Columbia's designer, Monica, sentimentally names it her choice number off her drawing board in the last 12 months, because it marks her break with Paris fabrics.

Solution to Puzzle on Page 12

No Raye-ce Prejudice

As though there didn't happen to be enough competition in this business! On her recent p. a. tour, Martha Raye landed in Chicago and found herself doing personals on one side of the street while her latest movie "Hellzapoppin" was unreeling on the other!

Martha . . . gets no tomatoes.

This obviously presented an interesting situation, and when Martha returned we asked her which Raye had won out—the shadow or the shape.

"You're a dope," she told us sweetly. "Look at it this way. Which Hitler would you rather toss a tomato at—Adolf in the flesh or Adolf in a photograph? Naturally you'd go where you could see him getting the vegetables in his pan! Yup, the ticket buyers preferred Raye in person. They were nice, though. They squeezed their tomatoes and threw the juice!"

This last whimsy, we happen to know, is far from fact. Wherever Martha went, the audiences cheered. And what's more, her appearances broke attendance records from coast to coast.

One Foot in Heaven

By the time you read this, Mickey Rooney will probably be married. Andy Hardy Takes A Bride. Well, the news was not unexpected, and now that Mickey has found the right girl, everyone is quite pleased. (Everyone, that is, except M-G-M, who, having suffered through the recent marriages of Judy Garland and Kathryn Grayson, are keeping a frantic eye on 14-year-old Virginia Weidler!)

She's a real beauty, this Ava Gardiner whom Mickey has chosen for his one and only. Tall, dark and Southern to her fingertips, she's exactly the kind of girl his studio might have hoped Mickey would wed—five years hence. She's 19 years old, a native of South Carolina, and pounded a typewriter in Rockridge, N. C., before she tried her hand at modeling, which profession eventually led her to Hollywood.

Six months ago, everyone, including Mickey, thought he was engaged to Dancer Dolly Thon. But when Dolly issued a statement to the press to the effect that she had no intention of marrying Mr. Rooney, Mick decided the time had come to forget her. Which he did, effectively and quickly. He met Ava and fell deeply in love for the first time in his life.

On this last point, there is no doubt. Those who saw them at Peter Fairchild's Mocambo party, the other evening, are still awed at the new love-struck Mick. Not once throughout the evening did he get up to dance or even head for the bandstand as he always has in the past. And when the party broke up and Fairchild's guests departed, Mickey and Ava were so absorbed in each other, they didn't even know they had been deserted!

Further proof of Mickey's devotion is the way in which he allows nothing to divert him from his appreciation of Ava's company. So that he can savor every moment with her, he usually invites one of his chums to accompany them on dates—and then makes the poor chum(p) sit up front, acting as chauffeur while he and Ava sit in the rear holding hands!

And is Mick proud of his sweetheart? Get this! Ava is 5' 7"—several inches taller than Mickey—but he likes her to wear high-heeled shoes so she'll be seen by everyone!

Button, Button

If you want to make a hit with Joan Fontaine, give her jewelry—in miniature. Right now, Joan is concentrating on collecting military insignia. Every time an officer of the Army, Navy or the Marines appears, Joan is johnny-on-the-spot, coaxing him to part with all those cunning little gadgets he wears pinned to his breast pocket. Even the toughest top sergeants can't resist the oh-so-feminine pleas of elfin Joanie. Most of them take leave of her looking like they'd just exited from a stiff court martial!

Color for Confidence

You can't tell an actress anything new about the strange, subtle power of color! Every one of 'em has a favorite shade—one that gives her that I-can-lick-the-world feeling. Jeanette MacDonald's pet is green. She will never march into a business conference without a touch of the shining color somewhere on her. For extra formal matters, contract-signing and such, she dons a sheer green wool sports frock cut in classic lines that is stopped just this side of severity by a peek-a-boo petticoat of cerise taffeta.

Anita Louise discovered at a very tender age that blue not only made her look prettier, but brought her out of her shell of shyness. Now when she attends a crowded affair, she usually wears a blue wool cashmere dress suit with hat to match. She switches blouses, but her particular favorite is a crispy grey taffeta, perfectly plain except for a perky black bow tied neatly at the throat.

Dots for Hedy

There's much buzzing around the Metro commissary when Hedy Lamarr strolls in wearing her pet polka dot slack suit. She's had it for years, and the cattier females spend their free time between the entree and dessert trying to figure out just how old it is. It isn't feminine fancy that makes Hedy hang on to it, though. She wears it because the head electrician once told her it makes a perfect focal point for lighting her position at rehearsals.

Hedy's no fool. The combination of a perfect subject wearing a perfect costume so delights the boys, they give her the best possible light-and-shadow job. Which is why Hedy always stands out from her fellow players like a candle in a dark well!

There's Glamour in Noodles

Here's one for the books! Barbara Britton, one of Paramount's young hopefuls, has an accessory tip that really should be shifted to the cooking page! She dumps a box of

(Continued on page 114)

Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

DON'T ENVY long, tapering, smart nails—have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half moons. Helps check nail biting habit. Will not harm nor soften natural nails. Protect fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15C, 5251 W. Harrison St., Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

NEWEST STYLES

GLASSES $2.95 & UP COMPLETE by MAIL!
16 DAYS' TRIAL! SEND NO MONEY!
Good Looking! We GUARANTEE SATISFACTION or Your MONEY BACK. We also repair Broken Glasses. FREE
Write today for our catalog and information
U.S. Eye-Glasses Co. 1557 Milwaukee Av. Dept. 3-104, Chicago

TYPEWRITER 1/3 PRICE

STANDARD OFFICE MODELS
About 1/3 MFRS. ORIG. PRICE
Easiest Terms as Low as 70¢ a Week
All models completely reconditioned.
FULL 2-YEAR GUARANTEE
No Money Down—10 Day Trial
Send for FREE price smashing literature in colors. Shows all models. See our literature before you buy. SEND TODAY.
FREE COURSE IN TYPING INCLUDED.
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCH. 10¢ A DAY
Dept. 361 231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

High School Course at Home
Many Finish in 2 Years
Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.
American School, Dept. H-314, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)
Use DERMOIL

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST
Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.
Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test". Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Give Druggist's name and address. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547, Northwestern Station, Dept. 2909, Detroit, Mich.
SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE
©1935 LAKE LAB.

alphabet macaroni into a pan of boiling water and lets the noodles flounder in the boiling aqua for ten minutes. When they're soft, she drains and rinses them in cold water. Then she picks out the letters of her name and lays them on a piece of absorbent paper to dry. As the final step she gives the letters a thorough shellacking with bright red nail polish and then pastes 'em on a narrow black velvet ribbon. The completed job, she says, can be worn as a bracelet or tied snugly around the throat.

Strike Up the Band

Gag around town is that Lana Turner ought to become a booking agent and send the Turner Trio out on tour. After all, what musical combination could compete with the fabulous threesome Lana could assemble with a twist of her wrist?

Lana . . . the eye-appeal.

We can see them now—The Turner Trio playing Main Street, Anytown. On the trombone—current beau, Tommy Dorsey! On the clarinet—ex-mate, Artie Shaw! On the saxophone—ex-love, Tony Martin! Sensational!

And if Agent Turner wants to toss in a little dance specialty, the wags suggest, there's Roger Pryor, ready to fill the bill. Pryor is taking nightly lessons in the rumba and samba at Arthur Murray's. And getting mighty good, too.

All that's missing from the act, they say, is eye-appeal—and Lana's no slouch at providing that herself!

Exposé

For shame! How could one of our better-known glamour girls have played such a filthy trick on the cameraman assigned to her current picture!

Seems the gal is proud of her generous bosom, and justly so. She's really lovely to look at. But, unfortunately, subtlety is a word she never learned. She insists on wearing costumes cut way below the Hays office line, and heaven help the man who tries to tell her she can't. She claims she knows what she's selling and argues that you wouldn't take beef away from a butcher, would you!

On the occasion of which we speak, she appeared on the set in a loose-fitting open-at-the-throat blouse, open far, far below her throat. The cameraman, left stone cold by her charms, asked her to button up.

"This is a family picture, dearie," he told her coldly. "Please remember you're a lady."

Our heroine was unimpressed. "I stay as I am," she snapped. "And you can't do a thing about it!"

The cameraman groaned. "Oh, I can't, can't I!" he said. "Well just wait and see!"

And striding toward her he made a dive for an upper button. "I'm going to fasten this," he hissed. "And you leave it alone!"

Did the young lady attempt to settle the argument amicably? Did she say let's try it your way and my way, too? She did not! Instead she ran screaming from the set directly to a producer's office, and there demanded the cameraman be fired because—"he tried to pinch me!"

P.S. The cameraman was not fired. He was transferred to another picture. And the glamour girl was returned to her set, with the sharp warning that she'd either obey orders or find herself free to indulge her immodesty—without a contract!

Man in Waiting

Don't laugh off that report that Phil Harris rejected an offer of $17,000 to make a brief personal appearance tour because he didn't want to be away from home. It's true, every word of it!

Phil's a married man, you know, and his wife, Alice Faye, is gonna have a baby. But that's only part of the reason Phil's hugging his house and fireside. The big reason is that he's scared stiff Alice will get into trouble the minute he lets her out of his sight.

Like the day he went down to the broadcasting station before Alice was awake. On his return home he found her bedroom in smoke, Alice bordering on hysterics, and her maid trying desperately to calm her!

When normalcy was restored, Alice revealed she had left her bed to start a log fire. The flames had sucked out and caught the fuzzy white negligee she was wearing. Luckily, her maid had rushed in and ripped the robe from her before she was seriously hurt. But that was enough for Phil.

"$17,000 is a lot of chips," he sighs. "But I couldn't get another Alice for a million, million times that amount. I appreciate the offer—but I think I'll stick close to the home base."

The Critic's Choice

A man is no hero to his valet—and, brother, a movie star is no hero to the ladies and gents of the press who have to work with him!

The Hollywood Women's Press Club, composed of the best-known femme names in Movietown journalism, recently held an election to determine the most cooperative and least cooperative players in the industry. The "most cooperatives" will not surprise anyone. The awards went to Bette

Bette . . . "most cooperative."

Davis for the women and Bob Hope for the men. In appreciation of their year-round graciousness, the Club presented Bette with a lapel pin in the form of a golden apple and Bob with a script marker topped by a similar apple. The gifts, executed in solid gold, were designed by Maurice, the cleverest jeweler in Hollywood, and presented to Bette and Bob at a special luncheon held in their honor.

The least cooperatives were another story. Proving that all is not goodness that glitters, the Club handed their scallions to none other than Miss Ginger Rogers and her old-time pal, Fred Astaire!

Ginger and Fred were given no awards and were not asked to attend the luncheon.

When advised that she had edged out Marlene Dietrich and Jean Arthur, Ginger remarked briefly: "All I can say is that I seem to be listed among some nice people!"

Quipped Astaire: "They should have had more respect for my age." Fred is 41.

Disa and Data

Jean Gabin never heard of the fancy "French" dishes featured on the 20th Century-Fox commissary menu! He calls them French double-talk and has the waitress explain their ingredients . . . Remember beautiful, blonde Elissa Landi? She ditched movies to concentrate on writing and has five novels under her belt, already . . . Cowboy star Buck Jones pays his bills with checks bearing an engraved picture of himself astride a horse . . . When Mickey Rooney and Ava Gardner became engaged, Judy Garland and Dave Rose were the first people they told. In appreciation of the compliment, Judy gave Ava her own hope chest and some lovely bits of lingerie to start her trousseau . . . Bruce Cabot created a sensation when he strolled into a New York night club wearing black suede evening shoes trimmed with his initials in silver on the front!

Rita . . . too low-cut!

Oh, that Rita Hayworth! The Hays Office, after okaying Oleg Cassini's sketch for an evening gown to be worn by Rita in "Tales of Manhattan," censored the outfit when they saw it finished and on the star! . . . If Jean Gabin does a scene in "Moon Tide" nude from the waist up, you can lay your thanks (or blame) at Marlene Dietrich's feet. Marlene heckled the writer to inject at least one semi-nekkid sequence so Jean could show the world the muscles he developed pedaling his bike around Beverly Hills . . . Johnny Boyle has the distinction of being the only dance director in Hollywood who hobbles around on crutches. He chipped an ankle bone showing Jimmy and Jean Cagney how to pick 'em up and put 'em down for "Yankee Doodle Dandy" (the story of George M. Cohan) . . . Director Roland Lee has a problem. He wants to do a flicker about Ulysses S. Grant, but he's afraid the gals won't go for a hero with a full-blown beard—even if that man Flynn's behind it!

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

MARY HAD A LITTLE (INFERIORITY COMPLEX)

It followed her EVERYWHERE she went.
Boys looked PAST her — not AT her.
GIRLS liked her — because she was NO competition!
She was dainty and sweet.
Her nose was ALWAYS carefully powdered,
And she used just the RIGHT shade of lipstick,
But the KINDEST thing you could say
About her EYES was that they were — well,
Just a — WASHOUT!
One day Mary read a MAYBELLINE advertisement,
Just as you are doing, and
LOOK at Mary NOW!

MORAL: Many a girl has beaten her rival by an EYELASH!

Mary's lashes now appear long, dark, and lovely—with a few simple brush-strokes of harmless MAYBELLINE MASCARA (solid or cream form — both are tear-proof and non-smarting).

Mary's eyebrows now have expression and character, thanks to the smooth-marking MAYBELLINE EYEBROW PENCIL.

For a subtle touch of added charm, Mary blends a bit of creamy MAYBELLINE EYE SHADOW on her lids—her eyes appear sparkling and colorful!

Maybelline

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

WORLD'S LARGEST-SELLING EYE BEAUTY AIDS

Chesterfield salutes with Millions of Fans
THE GOLDEN JUBILEE of America's most popular sport
BASKETBALL

Every time It's Chesterfield

. . . for Milder Better Taste for Cooler Smoking

Over 90,000,000 is Basketball's yearly attendance...tops for any American sport...and this year marks the celebration of its Golden Jubilee. The game was founded by Dr. James Naismith and had its modest start in 1891 in Springfield, Mass.
Such popularity must be deserved

That's what millions of Chesterfield smokers get every time they light up...and that's why these millions are saying Chesterfield gives me more pleasure than any other cigarette I ever smoked.

Make your next pack Chesterfield and you too will enjoy everything you want in a cigarette...made to your taste with the Right Combination of the world's best cigarette tobaccos.

Every time... They Satisfy

Copyright 1942, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

MODERN SCREEN

MAR 26 1942

hril
0 ents

MAUREEN O'HARA

ANNABELLA and TYRONE POWER
– LINDA DARNELL
IN FULL COLOR PORTRAITS

Scoop!
ACTUAL DIARIES
OF THE STARS

The light ale preferred by millions of beer drinkers

MODERN AMERICA—like Early America—counts Ballantine Ale a treasure among drinks for 2 reasons . . .

(1) A lightness surprising in ale.

(2) A flavor found in no other brew . . . flavor which could come only from the finest of ale yeasts.

Call for Ballantine Ale today. Compare it with your favorite beer—for lightness—for flavor. And chances are it's Ballantine from now on! Look for the 3 RINGS standing for PURITY, BODY, FLAVOR—and call for Ballantine Ale. Costs no more than the better beers. Sold coast to coast.

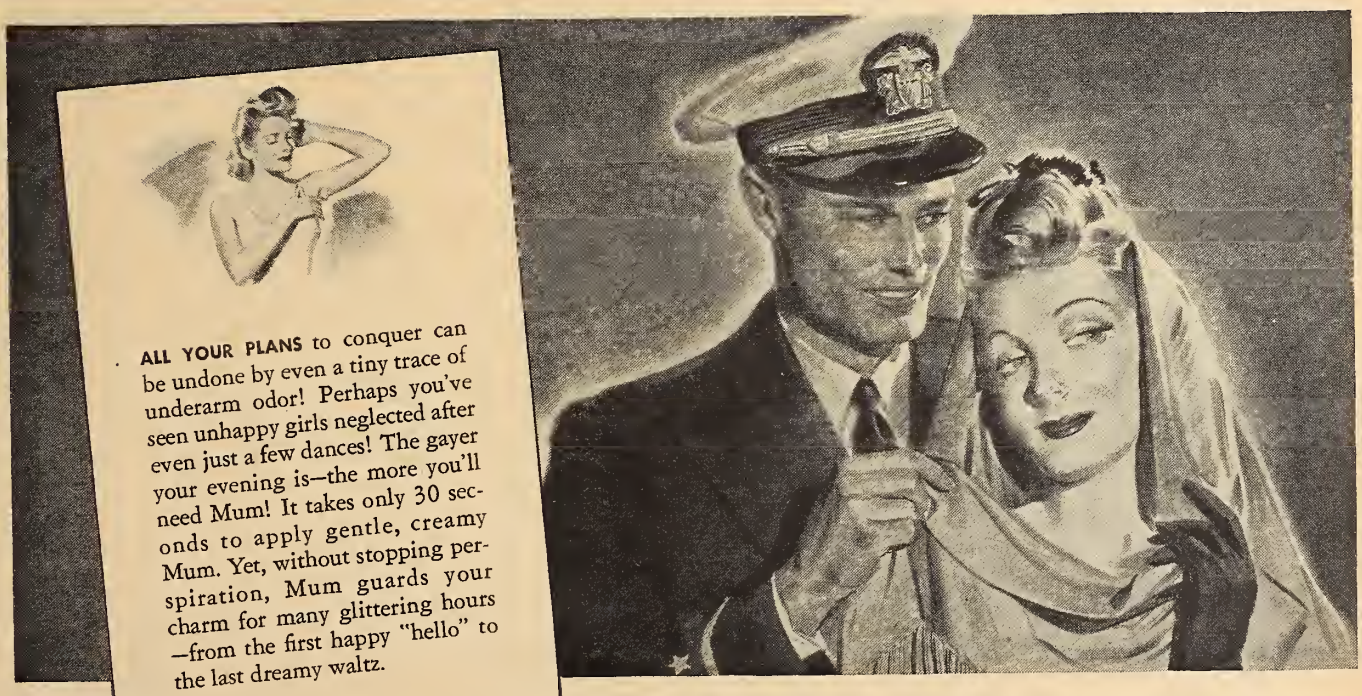
BALLANTINE PURITY BODY FLAVOR ALE

America's largest selling Ale

P. Ballantine & Sons, Newark, N. J.

A Hint to the Girl with a Man in her Life!

HE PHONED—"It's a date with bells on, Beautiful!" To set yourself off on the right foot, you freshen up with a shower or bath—you feel gay as confetti—as bubbling as champagne! But don't expect your bath unaided to keep you dainty all evening long. Bathing only removes past perspiration. To prevent risk of future odor, to stay popular, thousands of girls rely on Mum.



ALL YOUR PLANS to conquer can be undone by even a tiny trace of underarm odor! Perhaps you've seen unhappy girls neglected after even just a few dances! The gayer your evening is—the more you'll need Mum! It takes only 30 seconds to apply gentle, creamy Mum. Yet, without stopping perspiration, Mum guards your charm for many glittering hours —from the first happy "hello" to the last dreamy waltz.

Product of Bristol-Myers

Girls who use Mum say it's grand because:

MUM SAVES YOUR TIME! 30 seconds, and you're through . . . yet Mum protects your after-bath freshness all day or all evening.

MUM SAVES YOUR CLOTHES! It has the American Institute of Laundering Seal as being harmless to fine fabrics. And gentle Mum won't irritate your skin.

MUM SAVES CHARM! Mum works, not by stopping perspiration, but by preventing odor. Try it—you'll like Mum. Get a jar of Mum from your druggist today.

• • •

For Sanitary Napkins—Mum is such a safe, gentle deodorant. Mum's dependability is a safeguard against embarrassment.

MUM TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

©C1B 535424

The METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

What does March come in like?...Okay, students, go to the head of the class.

★ ★ ★ ★

Leo, you know, has enlisted for the duration. He's in the Army, the Navy, Civilian Defense and ready to serve wherever wanted by his Uncle.

Have you seen "Joe Smith, American"? Recommended, incidentally, by our generous First Lady.

★ ★ ★ ★

We don't speak much about shorts in this column, but it's hard to keep quiet about "Main Street On The March", made with government cooperation.

★ ★ ★ ★

The exhibitors of America, as well, are all out for our war effort. Their screens will inform, uplift and divert. Three essentials in a crisis.

★ ★ ★ ★

Among the diversions that Dr. Leo has brewed in his own laboratory is the newest rattle of that famous Hardy family skeleton.

★ ★ ★ ★

Despite the natural presence of that exciting, energetic, connubial dynamo —Mickey Rooney—nothing personal is intended by the title—

★ ★ ★ ★

"The Courtship of Andy Hardy".

★ ★ ★ ★

It's undoubtedly impossible to refer to a beautiful young lady as a dark horse—

★ ★ ★ ★

But watch Donna Reed in this hardiest of the Hardys.

★ ★ ★ ★

Space doesn't permit much about "Mrs. Miniver", (Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon); "I Married An Angel", (Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy); "Ship Ahoy", (Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton, Bert Lahr, Tommy Dorsey's orchestra); and "Rio Rita", (Abbott and Costello).

★ ★ ★ ★

There's so much to say about the merits of Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer Pictures. We really ought to have two columns. Still—

★ ★ ★ ★

Yours for conservation.

—Leo

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

Good-Bye, Carole—Lombard 26
Double Exposure—Bob Stack 28
The Strange Case of George Sanders 32
"Dear Diary" 36
Cossack Cowboy—George Montgomery 40
The Lady Is a Trump—Bette Davis 42
Nelson Eddy Talks His Head Off 52

FEATURES

Candidly Yours 30
It's A Date 44
"In This Our Life" 60

BEAUTY

"All Clear" For Your Skin 48
Best Face Forward 50
Modern Screen's Complexion Chart 51

FASHION

So It's Spring Again 62
Feet To the Fore 96

DEPARTMENTS

Movie Reviews 6
Movie Scoreboard 12
Our Puzzle Page 14
Co-Ed 16
Portrait Gallery 19
Color Portrait of Ty Power and Annabella 35
Color Portrait of Linda Darnell 39
Good News 54
Modern Hostess 72

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Associate Editor
SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor

Cover:
Maureen O'Hara appearing in 20th Century-Fox's "To the Shores of Tripoli"

Vol. 24, No. 5, April, 1942. Copyright, 1942, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New York. Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office of publication at Washington and Sauth Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single copy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscription price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscription $2.00 a year; foreign subscription $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the postoffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act of March 3, 1879. Additional second-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Dallas, Texas; Savannah, Ga., and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictional matter are fictitious. If the name of any living person is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark No. 301773.

DURA-GLOSS *nail polish contains Chrystallyne

Your fingers will be as lovely as jewels; and this polish "stays on" amazingly

You'll love Dura-Gloss, for it is no ordinary nail polish. Perhaps you've wondered why you hear so much about it, why so many have adopted it. Well, Dura-Gloss is made with a special ingredient—CHRYSTALLYNE*! Perfected through laboratory research, Chrystallyne is a magnificent resin that (1) imparts exceptional powers of adhesion, and (2) jewel-like sparkle and brilliance to Dura-Gloss. This wonderful substance is the reason Dura-Gloss resists ugly "peeling," and "fraying," so stubbornly day after day. Why it radiates sparkling gloss, luster, life! Dura-Gloss will make your nails a king's ransom in jewels . . . good enough to be kissed . . . brilliant, beautiful, lovely—at all cosmetic counters.

*Chrystallyne is a special resin-ingredient developed by chemistry-experts who were dissatisfied with existing nail polishes. Before being blended into the superb Dura-Gloss formula, it looks like glittering diamonds.

10c PLUS TAX

3 New Colors for Spring

Blackberry
Mulberry
Wineberry

It's DURA-GLOSS for the most beautiful fingernails in the world

LORR LABORATORIES
Paterson, New Jersey
Founded by E. T. Reynolds

© 1942, LORR LABORATORIES

MOVIE REVIEWS

MAGNIFICENT AMBERSONS

A foreigner viewing the movies of the last twenty years might conclude that American history was compressed into the four years of the Civil War. Before that, according to the Hollywood gospel, there was nothing and after that only the gangsters of Chicago and the bright lights of Broadway. Yet American history is full of periods that were colorful, dramatic and meaningful.

"Magnificent Ambersons" begins in 1885 and ends in 1913; a curious time—no wars, no gangsters and very few bright lights. But the face of America was changing then; the land was in the grip of a revolution as deadly and dangerous as the Civil War. The automobile came to America in those years; it turned the quiet, flat plains of the Midwest into a roaring inferno of factories and huge sprawling cities. A new generation marched in on the shoulders of the automobile, raw-faced and brash; and the old order changed, killed as brutally and surely by the gasping exhaust of the early automobiles as by cannon fire or bullets.

The Ambersons were of the old order. In their gracious and dignified midland town everybody knew everybody else's horse and carriage, a street car would wait for a lady to fix her bonnet, and manners were fixed and formal; women wore silk and velvet, men wore stovepipe hats. The Amberson mansion, pride of the town, stood splendid and magnificent—a peak and a pinnacle beyond comparison. The Ambersons were reigning rulers of their time and place.

Against this background is played the story of the ill-

Agnes Moorehead as Fanny Amberson with Tim Holt as George Amberson Minafer.

Joseph Cotten, Dolores Costello and Ray Collins on one of Orson Welles' "Amberson" sets, total of which milked RKO of $170,000.

fated lovers, Isabella Amberson (Dolores Costello) and Eugene Morgan (Joseph Cotten). Isabella marries Wilbur Minafer (Don Dillaway). Eugene leaves the city; he returns eighteen years later, a widower, with his daughter Lucy. But Wilbur Minafer is still alive and, Isabella, too, has a child, a son, George (Tim Holt). On George she has lavished all the love and affection in her generous nature; and George, spoiled and aware of his position, has inherited all the evils of the Amberson tradition. When Wilbur Minafer dies it is George who stands between Isabella and Eugene, refusing to allow their marriage for fear it might undermine the position of the Ambersons, with the gossip-mongers and tale bearers of the city. And Isabella, whose life has been bound up in her son, dares not hurt him; this time it is Isabella who leaves the city. With George she travels to Europe, to fashionable watering-places, the finest resorts; and returns home only to die. Even on her death-bed, George refuses to allow Eugene to see her. But during this time, subtly and implacably, the position of the Ambersons has been undermined, their fortune dribbling away. The town has grown up around them; their mansion stands in the midst of factories and slums. After Isabella's death only a hollow shell is left. At the first gentle push it collapses, burying George in the wreckage. And only then, in this moment of tragic and bitter triumph, is Eugene able to consummate his love for Isabella through the love of his daughter Lucy and the repentent George.

The hand of Orson Welles is (Continued on page 8)

P.S.

125 cars, vintage of 1900, were rounded up and put into first-class running condition by studio mechanics . . . Joe Cotten used a Sears 1905 model, as pictured in the Sears-Roebuck catalog for that year . . . Orson rented a downtown ice-house for the snow scenes. Showed up for work in one of those fur-lined flying suits used by aviators for high-altitude experiments . . . Camera wizard Stanley Cortez solved every photographic poser put to him. In one scene, the camera takes the place of the actor. To get the effect, Cortez strapped a camera to his chest and walked slowly in and out of rooms, up the stairs. When the film was developed, they discovered the vibration of his movements had blurred the images. He took his shoes off and went through the entire routine once more. This time it worked . . . In another scene, the camera makes a complete 360-degree turn around a ball-room. Starting at the punch-bowl, the lenses move slowly around, catching about fifty different people as they enter, chat with friends, dance. By the time the punch-bowl comes into view again, several important story points have been made . . . toughest scene for the actors was the sleigh accident involving Tim Holt and Anne Baxter. Going at top speed through the snow (actually pulverized ice) a prop runner gives way, overturning the sleigh and spilling the kids down a steep hill. No doubles could be used because the end of the shot is a close-up of their faces as they roll right into the camera, which remained focused on them from the moment the sleigh overturned . . . Dolores Costello makes a screen comeback as Mrs. Anderson. Welles thought she'd be excellent for the part, hunted all over town for her and persuaded her to make tests . . . Anne Baxter is the niece of architect Frank Lloyd Wright.

Tim Holt ond Roy Collins ot eose neor o worning sign: "Do Not Bomb—Orson Welles Shooting!" P.S. No bombs fell!

Fence-jumper Anne Boxter in Torkington's "Ambersons", odopted, produced, narroted, comero-fied by Orson who now weighs 240 stripped!

(Continued from page 7)

apparent throughout the picture, in its narrative style, in its fluid use of the camera, in an attention to detail that makes the detail as important as the narrative; a hundred little touches will stick in your memory. Welles doesn't act in the picture, but his is the voice of the Narrator who sets the scene and tells part of the story. Dolores Costello returns to the screen as the gentle and beautiful Isabella; Joseph Cotten does a beautiful job as Eugene; Tim Holt completely handles the difficult and important role of George; Richard Bennet, Ray Collins, Anne Baxter and Agnes Moorehead round out an outstanding cast.

Spun out of America's past, the "Magnificent Ambersons" is bold in theme and background. The machines turn and clank in our Midwestern cities, doing deadlier work now than the production of automobiles. Here is the story of the beginning, before the factories triumphed; told in terms of people, tragedy, success and heartbreak. This was the time of Eugene Morgan, pioneer automobile manufacturer, and of the Ambersons, arrogant, magnificent—and futile.—RKO.

THE LADY HAS PLANS

Lisbon has become the scene for comedies of international intrigue where anything might happen and usually does. In "The Lady Has Plans" the newspaper lads are at it again, making fun, frolic and drama for the movies. Paulette Goddard and Ray Milland bounce through the lush days and dangerous

Lisbon nights, tossing off gags right and left. Happily, most of the gags come off; it's a gay comedy decked out with all the trimmings.

The plot involves a mix-up in spies. Paulette Goddard, going to Lisbon as legman for reporter Ray Milland is mistaken for the emissary of a spy ring which has the plans of an aerial bomb for sale. The plans, charmingly enough, are supposed to be engraved on Paulette's glamorous back in invisible ink. The British agent (Roland Young) and the Nazi agent (Albert Dekker) pop in and out of Paulette's sumptuous suite coyly hinting that she disrobe, and they'll talk business.

Paulette, not in on the secret, naturally mistakes just what kind of business they're talking about. So a good deal of the picture is concerned with her determination to keep her clothes on and the attempts of the two agents to get her to take them off. They don't succeed, of course; but they come about as close as the Hays office allows. There's a tense moment or two at the end when Paulette is finally cornered by the Nazis in a desolate hotel swamped with Nazi "tourists." It takes Ray Milliland's best efforts and an effective plot twist to get her out.

Paulette Goddard wears her clothes beautifully and handles her lines competently in that odd and brassy voice of hers. Ray Milland has a knack for comedy, and there's one short flash in a drunk scene where he outmuggs the best muggers the screen has to offer. The rest of the cast plays up to their level. Sidney Lanfield directed the picture with pace and dash and a knowing eye for the timing of a gag. It's all served up in a decorative platter.

Admitted, it's a little disturbing just now to find such serious matters as murder, spies and the diplomatic service handled for laughs and comedy; admitted, too, that it's more than a little startling to see a British agent as featherbrained and futile as Roland Young. But "The Lady Has Plans" has an innocuous and innocent air about it; in reality it's no more than a drawing room Western and about as profound.

At any rate it's a novel note to find a Nazi with a sense of humor: "What's cooking at the Wilhelmstrasse?" asks Ray Milland, and the glowering Baron Von Kemp knocks off a nifty. "Wiener-

(Continued on page 10)

TO 5 OUT OF 7 WOMEN . . .

New Loveliness in Three Minutes!

Beauty boosts morale! Let Marvelous Matched Makeup by Richard Hudnut help you look your loveliest!

• These days, make a special effort to be beautiful! Avoid the tragic mistake so many women unknowingly make—the lack of color harmony in powder, rouge and lipstick. Such makeup makes you look harsh, unattractive—instead of winning!

Richard Hudnut has solved this problem for you by creating Marvelous Matched Makeup. Not merely rouge and lipstick . . . but face powder too . . . all three color-coordinated in the laboratory, matched in their basic tones. Just three minutes to apply and instant new beauty is yours!

A face powder, perfect for today's busy women!

You'll appreciate the way Marvelous Face Powder clings—actually up to 5 full hours! Sheer, filmy-textured—it contains two special adhering ingredients. These ingredients are so pure they're often advised for sensitive skins.

Try Marvelous Face Powder . . . and for the added beauty of a matched makeup, try Marvelous Rouge and Lipstick too. In true-to-type shades—one just right for you! At your favorite cosmetic counter. Large sizes 55¢ each.

USE THIS VALUABLE COUPON!

Richard Hudnut, Dept. M, 693 Fifth Ave., New York City MM-4-42

Please send me metal, purse Makeup Kit containing harmonizing powder, rouge and lipstick. I enclose 10¢ to help cover expense of handling and mailing.

*The color of my eyes is*_____ *hair*_____ *skin*_____

Name_____

Street_____ City_____

(Good only in U. S. A., except where legally prohibited.)

Hudnut MARVELOUS

Matching ROUGE, LIPSTICK AND THE POWDER THAT Stays on 5 Hours

THERE IS A STORY ABOUT A TOWN CALLED KINGS ROW

All knew it but none talked about it — except in whispers.

You'll live strange experiences you never dreamed could come into your life as the screen captures each ecstatic moment and every secret longing of these shadowed characters. Here is screen greatness, truly!

ANN SHERIDAN
as tempting 'RANDY'

ROBERT CUMMINGS
as handsome 'PARRIS'

RONALD REAGAN
as irresistible 'DRAKE'

BETTY FIELD
as stormy 'CASSIE'

KINGS ROW

WHERE EVERY HEART CONCEALED A SECRET SIN

Directed by SAM WOOD
of 'Mr. Chips' and 'Kitty' Foyle' fame!

WARNER BROS. NEW SUCCESS, with CHARLES COBURN
Claude Rains · Judith Anderson · Nancy Coleman

The Screen Play is superbly adapted by Casey Robinson from the Novel by Henry Bellamann • Music by Erich Wolfgang Korngold

Now at the Astor Theatre in New York duplicating the success of 'Sergeant York', the Warner Bros. picture that preceded it there. AT YOUR THEATRE SOON. Check the manager for exact date.

HITTING THE HIGH NOTES IN A BIG PICTURE

THE big news of THIS month is that GENE AUTRY has FINISHED another PICTURE, and soon it will be your PLEASURE to see it. "COWBOY SERENADE" is the title, and your OLD pal, SMILEY BURNETTE, is RIGHT beside GENE during all THE thrilling adventures of this EXCITING tale. For the more tender MOMENTS, charming FAY McKENZIE steps up to gladden GENE'S heart and yours. FAY was SUCH a sensation in the last GENE AUTRY film, "DOWN MEXICO WAY," that thousands of fans CLAMORED to see HER again in THIS one. And SO "COWBOY SERENADE" COMES to YOU with all THE exciting DRAMA and the LOVELY music AND stirring ROMANCE of former GENE AUTRY triumphs. Among the HIT tunes that you will hear are "COWBOY SERENADE," the TITLE tune, as well as "SWEETHEARTS Or Strangers" and OTHERS, all played and sung in THE inimitable GENE AUTRY STYLE. You'll say that "COWBOY SERENADE" is GENE'S best PICTURE yet. It's schnitzel," he says. That proves it's all in fun and just a fairy tale. No Nazi who wants to keep his head kids about the Wilhelmstrasse. Look what happened to all those Generals.—Par.

A REPUBLIC PICTURE

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 8)

P. S.

Toughest production chore was filming the dramatic telephone booth scene. Big Boys Ray Milland and Albert Dekker (both over six feet tall) were to crowd into the same booth with Paulette Goddard. After three unsuccessful tries, Director Sidney Lanfield put in a call for script-writer Harry Tugend, told him: "You thought of it, now you direct it!" . . . Lanfield got his start in the entertainment business as piano player with the Dixieland Jazz Band at New York's famed Reisenweber's . . . Paramount officials huddled to figure out how much of Margaret Hayes' back could be exposed without incurring Hays Office wrath. Final decision: The 12th vertebra is the extreme limit of modesty . . . Margaret spent her spare time during production making technicolor tests of herself made up as Maria of "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Hopes to snag the part that way . . . Albert Dekker, always a screen toughie, is a homebody at heart. Is now rigging up electrified chicken coops to keep his Buff Orpingtons warm and cozy during chilly California nights . . . One scene shows Portuguese police and American Embassy members racing down a Lisbon road. For more space, the sound stage doors were left open. A sailor from "The Fleet's In" (being shot on the adjoining stage) wandered into camera focus just as they were finishing what was otherwise a perfect take. "Shoot it over," commanded the producer. "That's all we need to promote another international incident!" . . . the low-slung, right-hand-drive convertible used in so many of the scenes is the MG Club Roadster Bob Montgomery brought back with him from England a few years ago . . . Paulette Goddard went three days without glamour, garbed in an oversize grey sweatshirt, baggy shorts, pair of old gym shoes and a dirty towel wrapped around her head . . . Lanfield had to leave the set for a few hours the afternoon Milland's fake suicide scene was shot. When he saw the rushes that night, he buried his face in his hands and wept—with laughter. Dangling in mid-air with a rope tied around his neck, face pale and tongue sticking out, was not Ray Milland, but Jack Benny! The correct version was run off a few minutes later.

SYNCOPATION

Music and movies have always been together like corned beef and cabbage. In the old silent days every movie house had at least a piano player who blasted out music suitable to the scene; some places even had a piano, a violin and a sounding board. The big movie palaces supported orchestras. The first sound picture, "The Jazz Singer," was a musical, and ever since, music has been the thumping lifeblood of the movies. Tin Pan Alley never had a better press agent than Hollywood.

But curiously enough, despite this thorough familiarity, Hollywood had been blind to the dramatic story of American music and American music makers; they were too close to the forest to see the trees. Having found the theme, they've lost no time in making pictures. There was "Birth Of The Blues" only a little while ago; and now comes "Syncopation," more ambitious, larger in scope, trying to tell the whole story of Jazz.

"Syncopation" begins deep in a Congo jungle where the negro natives danced to the wild rhythms of their jungle drums. It follows the thread of that rhythm in the hold of a slave ship to New Orleans, to America, into the cotton fields of the South, into the small, rude churches where the tender and reverent spirituals were sung, throbbing, alive and vibrant.

The plot follows two lines. It traces the story of Reggie Tearbone, negro of New Orleans, whose horn blasted its way from Basin Street to Chicago and into the speakeasies of New York. And it tells the story of Johnny Schumacher, Chicago slum kid, whose jazz finally evolved into present day swing. The combining link of both stories is Kit Latimer, born in New Orleans, whose family migrates to Chicago. She meets Johnny there, and their tempestuous marriage and separation is the thread of the plot.

Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper handle the lead roles. Robert Benchley acts the part of a one man chorus, bridging the time lapses, setting the scenes. Adolph Menjou, George Bancroft and Frank Jenks figure prominently in the story. Todd Duncan and Jessie Grayson handle the important negro characters.

"Syncopation" is a full canvas, weaving upward from New Orleans through Memphis and Chicago to New York; beginning in 1907 into the World War and through the era of Prohibition into the present day. Star of the picture, of course, is the music itself; blues, rags, stomps, swing follow each other in turn.

You'll hear "Basin Street Blues," "Jazz Me Blues," "Sugar Foot Stomp," "Tiger Rag" and a host of other numbers which have become classics in the swing world. It's one long jazz spree, and the climax, naturally takes place in a Fifty-Second Street night club where an all-star band of favorites join together in a jam session.

No dancing in the aisles, please.—RKO.

MOVIE REVIEWS (Continued)

P. S.

Jackie Cooper must have had his fill of music during production . . . During the day on the set, Cooper on the drums used to beat it out between takes in fast jive sessions with men like Red Roundtree, Rex Stewart and Bob Haggart . . . At night, Jackie packed his skins over to the Palladium for a little bit of bouncing with his favorite outfit—T. Dorsey and band . . . Bonita Granville practiced long hours for the boogie-woogie piano playing the script called for. She already knew how to play, but her repertoire was limited to polite classics . . . Director William Dieterle, the man who always wears white gloves while working, named this his favorite picture, liked it better than anything he's ever directed. And this includes "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "Life of Emile Zola" and "All That Money Can Buy" . . . Todd Duncan, who plays "Rex Tearbone, King of Cornetists," was once professor of music at Howard University, in the South. He's the colored actor who sang the role of Porgy in "Porgy and Bess" . . . Frank Jenks used to be a trombonist; had his own orchestra and played in theaters throughout the country before turning actor . . . George Bancroft and Adolphe Menjou, pals since they were both under contract to Paramount years ago, spent all their time between calls hashing over old times. Bancroft calls Menjou Papa and likes to kid him about his sartorial elegance . . . Bob Benchley never says anything for the first few moments he appears on the screen. The sight of him causes audiences to laugh so heartily, they wouldn't hear him anyway . . . Ted North makes more money selling hair restorer than he does from his thespic chores. His formula, a deep, dark, secret, has caused new growth to sprout on some of Hollywood's erstwhile barest noggins . . . Mona Barrie worked an entire day without telling her fellow actors she'd sprained her ankle and sustained assorted cuts and bruises in a terrific fall before coming to work. Dieterle noticed her limping, insisted she stay home next day . . . 10 original numbers and oldies like "Sugar Foot Stomp" and "Jazz Me Blues" figure prominently in the musical pattern.

HOUSE OF SPIES

Conrad Veidt, that tall, immaculate, Gloomy Gus actor, always has had the double-edged ability to be both villainous and charming. In "Salute To Courage" this problem of his dual personality is handled neatly by making him twins. Conrad Veidt, number one, is Baron Hugo von Detner, villainous Nazi, head of a ring of saboteurs. Conrad Veidt, number two, is Otto Becker, gentle, charming and cultured and twin brother to the Nazi.

Their lives intertwine when the Baron forces Otto to allow him to use his innocent bookstore as the front for the Baron's ring of saboteurs. A stream of fatal incidents flows from this quiet center; train wrecks, airplane crashes, explosions, accidents. Otto can stand no more; no matter at what cost he is determined to stop his brother. They meet in the peaceful book-lined store. They quarrel, and Otto, in a righteous rage, accidentally kills his brother. Standing over him, he sees his way. Working

(Continued on page 13)

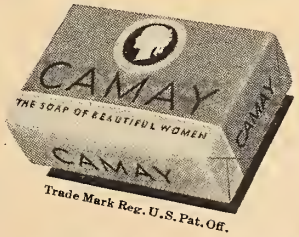
Be Lovelier! So very Soon! Go on the CAMAY "MILD-SOAP" DIET!

This lovely bride, Mrs. Alfred L. Powell of New York, N. Y., says: "I'm so devoted to the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet! I tell all my friends about this wonderful aid to loveliness."

Start this exciting course in beauty care! It's based on the advice of skin specialists—praised by lovely brides!

WHISPERED praises in the moonlight—"Your skin is so lovely to look at, so delightful to touch"... Every woman should hear these compliments. Do you?

If not, then the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet offers you a promise of new loveliness. For, unknowingly, you may be clouding the real beauty of your skin through improper cleansing. Or, like so many women failing to use a beauty soap as mild as it should be.



Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Thousands of brides have found the key to loveliness in the Camay "Mild-Soap" Diet. One such bride is Mrs. Powell who says: "My skin has reacted so beautifully to the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet I'd never try any other beauty treatment."

Skin specialists advise regular cleansing with a fine mild soap. And Camay is milder than the 10 other famous beauty soaps tested. That's why we say "Go on the Camay 'Mild-Soap' Diet . . . TONIGHT!"

GO ON THE "MILD-SOAP" DIET TONIGHT!

Work Camay's milder lather over your skin, paying special attention to the nose, the base of nostrils and chin. Rinse with warm water and follow with thirty seconds of cold splashings.

Then, while you sleep, the tiny pore openings are free to function for natural beauty. In the morning—one more quick session with this milder Camay and your skin is ready for make-up.

SHE'S A Dream
SHE'S Irresistible
SHE USES IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME AND LIPSTICK
An exquisite perfume for your new Spring Bonnet . . . a challenge to Spring and a young man's fancy. A touch of IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME makes you divinely exciting, glamorous, irresistible and assures you of his devotion. Now in an adorable Easter Box.
Only 10¢ at all 5 & 10¢ Stores
IRRESISTIBLE
USE IRRESISTIBLE LIPSTICK
Brilliant new reds and ruby tones. The lipstick that's WHIP-TEXT to stay on longer . . . smoother . . . . . 10¢

MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults.

Picture	General Rating
A Yank on the Burma Road (M-G-M)	2½★
All That Maney Can Buy (RKO)	3½★
All Through the Night (Warners)	3½★
Amang The Living (Paramount)	3★
Apache Kid (Republic)	3★
Arizana Bound (Monogram)	C 2½★
Babes on Broadway (M-G-M)	4★
Bad Man of Deadwood (Republic)	2½★
Bahama Passage (Paramount)	3½★
Ball af Fire (RKO)	3½★
Belle Starr (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Birth of the Blues (Paramount)	3★
Blonde from Singapore, The (Columbia)	2★
Blues In the Night (Warners)	3★
Bady Disappears, The (Warners)	2★
Bombay Clipper (Universal)	2½★
Borrowed Hera (Monagram)	2★
Bowery Blitzkrieg (Monogram)	2★
Bride Came C. O. D., The (Warners)	3½★
Burma Convoy (Universal)	2½★
Buy Me That Town (Paramaunt)	3★
Cadet Girl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Call Out the Marines (RKO)	2★
Caught in the Draft (Paramaunt)	3★
Charley's Aunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chan in Rio (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Callege Sweetheart (Monagram)	2★
Canfessians of Boston Blackie (Calumbia)	2½★
Confirm ar Deny (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Corsican Brothers, The (United Artists)	3★
Cracked Nuts (Universal)	2½★
Death Valley Outlaws (Republic)	2½★
Devil Pays Off, The (Republic)	2½★
Doctar's Don't Tell (Republic)	2★
Dumba (RKO)	C 3½★
Ellery Queen and the Murder Ring (Calumbia)	2½★
Father Takes a Wife (RKO)	2½★
Feminine Tauch, The (M-G-M)	3★
Flying Cadets (Universal)	2★
Farbidden Trails (Monagram)	2★
Forgotten Village, The	3½★
Gay Falcon, The (RKO)	2½★
Go West Young Lady (Columbia)	2★
Great Guns (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Gunman from Badie, The (Monagram)	2★
Harmon of Michigan (Columbia)	2★
Hellzapappin' (Universal)	3½★
Henry Aldrich for President (Paramount)	C 3★
Here Comes Mr. Jardan (Calumbia)	4★
H. M. Pullham, Esq. (M-G-M)	3★
Hald Back the Dawn (Paramount)	3½★
Honky Tonk (M-G-M)	3★
How Green Was My Valley (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Hurricane Smith (Republic)	2★
Hurry, Charlie, Hurry (RKO)	2½★
I Wake Up Screaming (20th Century-Fax)	3★
Ice-Capades (Republic)	2½★
Internatianal Lady (United Artists)	3★
Internatianal Squadran (Warners)	3½★
Jesse James at Bay (Republic)	2½★
Joan of Paris (RKO)	3½★
Johnny Eager (M-G-M)	3½★
Jungle Book, The (United Artists)	4★
Kathleen (M-G-M)	3★
Keep 'Em Flying (Universal)	3★
Kid From Kansas (Universal)	2★
Ladies in Retirement (Columbia)	4★
Lady Be Gaad (M-G-M)	3★
Lady is Willing, The (Columbia)	2½★
Last of the Duanes (20th Century-Fax)	C 2½★
Law of the Tropics (Warners)	2½★
Look Wha's Laughing (RKO)	2½★
Louisiana Purchase (Paramount)	3½★
Lydia (United Artists)	3½★
Mad Doctor, The (Universal)	2★
Maltese Falcan, The (Warners)	3½★
Man at Large (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Man Fram Mantana (Universal)	2½★
Man Who Came ta Dinner, The (Paramount)	4★
Manpawer (Warners)	3★
Married Bachelor (M-G-M)	3★
Marry The Bass's Daughter (20th Century-Fax)	2★
Masked Rider, The (Universal)	2½★
Men in Her Life, The (Columbia)	3★
Mercy Island (Republic)	2½★
Mab Town (Universal)	2★
Maan Over Her Shoulder (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Moan Over Miami (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Moonlight in Hawaii (Universal)	2½★
Mr. & Mrs. North (M-G-M)	3★
My Life with Caroline (RKO)	3★
Navy Blues (Warners)	C 3★
Never Give A Sucker An Even Break (Universal)	3★
New York Town (Paramount)	2★
Night of January 16 (Paramount)	3★
Nine Lives Are Not Enough (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
No Hands on the Clock (Paramount)	2½★
Officer and the Lady, The (Columbia)	2½★
One Faat in Heaven (Warners)	3½★
Pacific Blackout (Paramaunt)	2★
Paris Calling (Universal)	3★
Parson af Panamint (Paramaunt)	3★
Pittsburgh Kid, The (Republic)	2½★
Playmates (RKO)	3★
Public Enemies (Republic)	2★
Quiet Wedding (Universal)	3½★
Red River Valley (Republic)	2½★
Remember The Day (20th Century-Fax)	3½★
Riders of the Badland (Columbia)	2★
Riders of the Purple Sage (20th Century-Fax)	2½★
Rise and Shine (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Royal Mounted Patrol, The (Columbia)	2½★
Saddle Mauntain Roundup (Monogram)	2★
Sailors an Leave (Republic)	2★
Secrets af the Lone Wolf (Columbia)	2½★
Sergeant York (Warners)	4★
Shadow of the Thin Man (M-G-M)	2½★
Shanghai Gesture, The (United Artists)	3½★
Shepherd af the Hills (Paramount)	3½★
Sing Another Chorus (Universal)	2★
Sing for Your Supper (Columbia)	2★
Skylark (Paramaunt)	3★
Smiling Ghast, The (Warners)	2½★
Smilin' Through (M-G-M)	3★
Son of Fury (20th Century-Fox)	3★
South of Tahiti (Universal)	2★
Stork Pays Off, The (Calumbia)	2½★
Sullivan's Travels (Paramount)	4★
Sundawn (United Artists)	2½★
Sunset in Wyoming (Republic)	3½★
Sun Valley Serenade (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Suspicion (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Swamp Water (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Tanks a Million (United Artists)	2★
Tarzan's Secret Treasure (M-G-M)	2½★
Texas (Calumbia)	3½★
They Died With Their Boots On (Warners)	3½★
Three Girls Abaut Town (Columbia)	2½★
This Waman is Mine (Universal)	2½★
Those Were the Days (Paramount)	C 2½★
Three Cockeyed Sailors (United Artists)	2★
Tillie the Tailer (Columbia)	2★
Time Out For Rhythm (Calumbia)	2½★
Tom, Dick and Harry (RKO)	4★
Tonta Basin Outlaws (Monogram)	2★
Taa Many Blandes (Universal)	2★
Treat 'Em Rough (Universal)	2½★
Two-Faced Woman (M-G-M)	3½★
Unholy Partners (M-G-M)	2½★
Victory (Paramount)	3★
Washingtan Melodrama (M-G-M)	3★
Weekend for Three (RKO)	3★
Weekend in Havana (20th Century-Fox)	3★
When Ladies Meet (M-G-M)	3★
Walf Man, The (Universal)	2½★
Woman of the Year, The (M-G-M)	4★
Woman's Face, A (M-G-M)	3½★
You Belong to Me (Columbia)	3★
You'll Never Get Rich (Columbia)	4★
You're in The Army Now (Warners)	2★

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 11)

swiftly, he changes clothes with the Baron, shaves off his own identifying beard and walks out of the store acting the part of Baron Hugo von Detner.

It is dangerous work, living a life strange to him. Cautiously he picks up the strings of the Baron's tangled affairs. He meets Kaaren (Ann Ayars) at the Baron's apartment, and bewildered, not knowing whether she is supposed to be his wife or sweetheart, he discovers that she is a cog in the Baron's organization, sick at heart, wanting to get out.

Otto's purpose, of course, in taking up the Baron's role was to expose the whole set-up to the authorities. But he finds himself in love with Kaaren, and at the final moment he saves her. But he cannot save himself. Acting on his information, the spies are rounded up and deported, and Otto with them, knowing that as soon as he reaches Germany he will be discovered. Yet Otto, this gentle peace-loving man, finds satisfaction in what he has done; and an odd consolation in his doomed love for Kaaren, whom he will never see again.—M-G-M.

ASIDES . . .

Of course, this picture was in production before the war broke. But it poses a strong problem and a pretty serious one for Hollywood these days. So far there's been no rush of war pictures; but almost all the studios have rushed to register titles about Pearl Harbor. It will be a sorry spectacle if Hollywood turns out quick and cheap melodrama about the war; jerry-built pictures will pander to hate and intolerance, and cheapen and vulgarize all the ideals and resolves for which the war is being fought. There's no room for pictures like that.

The successful morale-builders haven't been quickie melodramas which trade on the country's deep interest in the war. Best of the lot have been factual and honest treatments like "Target For Tonight" or the American-made "I Wanted Wings." Now, of all times, Hollywood must be honest with itself and with the country; and the devil take quick profits.

(Continued on page 15)

How many of these 6 skin troubles do you have?

Let my 4-Purpose Face Cream help give you a smooth, fresh, "baby skin"!

ONE OF THE first things people notice about you is—your skin! And you can't conceal a skin that's rough and flaky, that has blackheads, big pores.

Wouldn't you like to be proud of your skin — proud of its soft, young smoothness, of its radiant freshness? Wouldn't you like to have the kind of lovely skin that men admire, and women envy?

You can—but not by covering up blemishes! Not by hiding blackheads and big pores. You must remove the cause of skin troubles. And the cause of many skin troubles is an accumulation of dirt, stale make-up, dead skin cells . . . lodged in the tiny mouths of the pores.

Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream is scientifically designed to clean out the mouths of the pores, remove the rancid accumulations, ease away the dry, dead skin-flakes. But that isn't all! My cream takes care of four vital needs of your skin.

Every time you apply it, here's what it does: (1) It thoroughly, but gently, cleanses your skin. (2) It softens your skin, relieves dryness. (3) It helps nature refine the pores. (4) It smooths your skin, leaves a non-sticky base for your powder.

Send for Generous Tube

Mail coupon for a generous tube of my face cream! See for yourself why more and more lovely women every day are turning to Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream!

Lady Esther 4-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

LADY ESTHER, (77)
7110 West 65th Street, Chicago, Ill.

Send me by return mail a generous tube of 4-Purpose Face Cream; also 9 new shades of powder. I enclose 10¢ for packing and mailing.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Toronto, Ont.)

What's your biggest query about

Tampons?

It's smart to ask questions about a new idea like internal sanitary protection. For whether you already enjoy the wonderful freedom of tampons, or haven't even tried them yet—there are always new improvements, modern advantages you should know about. Are these the sort of questions you would ask?

"I don't want to worry... can I be sure?"

Yes—if your tampons absorb quickly, surely. Meds — the Modess tampons—absorb faster because of the "safety center." A modern feature no other tampons have! Meds hold more than 300% of their weight in moisture.

"Do they really fit?"

A leading woman's doctor, designed Meds. They're scientifically shaped to fit. That's why Meds are so comfortable. Insert Meds properly and you can forget the time of month. No bulges, belts, or odors! And Meds are easier to use, too. Each Meds comes in a one-time-use applicator that ends old difficulties.

"Will I have to pay more?"

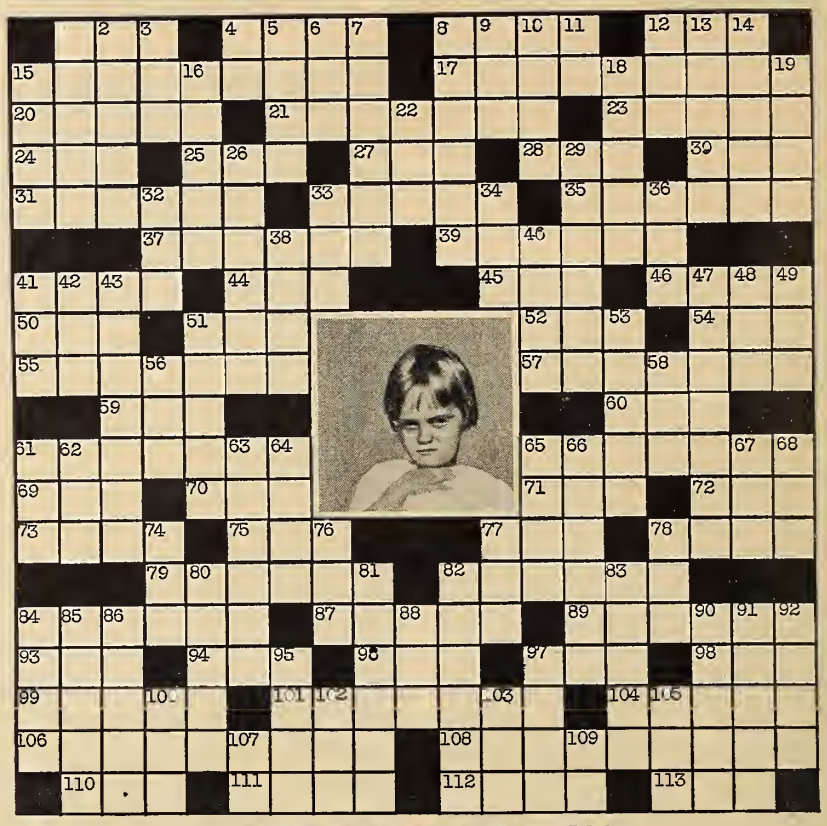
Not on your life! Meds cost less than any other tampons in individual applicators. In fact, no more than leading sanitary napkins. Try Meds and compare!

BOX OF 10—25¢ • BOX OF 50—98¢

Meds

The Modess Tampon

OUR PUZZLE PAGE



Puzzle Solution on page 104

ACROSS

1. Opposite Jean Gahin in "Moontide"
4. Medico in "Doctors Don't Tell"
8. She's Pathe's "Miss 1950"
12. V - - - Zorina
15. With Cary in "Arsenic And Old Lace"
17. Newsreel applause-getter
20. Cary Grant's given name
21. "The Falcon" of the screen
23. Jane's "You're In The Army Now" hero
24. The new Mrs. George Brent
25. Wife of Gene Autry
27. - - - nis Day
28. Ce - - - Romero
30. D - - - Andrews
31. Starred in "Sunny"
33. Feminine name
35. Dennis Morgan's former name
37. U. S. and Britain
39. John Garfield's benefactor
41. Other woman in "H. M. Pulham, Esq."
44. What Russell is to James Gleason
45. One of the Seven Dwarfs
46. First male Academy Award winner
50. Mickey Rooney's bride
51. "The Wolf Man"
52. Exclamations of wonder
54. Yale
55. "Kathleen's" friend
57. Produces "Reap The Wild Wind"
59. Comedian Pendleton
60. Deanna's mother
61. Edward Horton's middle name
65. Pop-eyed, mustached comic
69. - - - i Damita
70. Nora in "The Thin Man"
71. "Clear - - - Wires"
72. Part of an atom
73. Comedy: "The - - - - Animal"
75. What Tom Harmon became
77. Three: prefix
78. The mood "Suspicion" created
79. Cocks
82. Male lead of "We Were Dancing"
84. Fem. lead in "Texas"
87. Before
89. Antiseptic lotion
93. G - - - Patrick
94. Masculine name
96. Aged
97. Shade tree
98. Free
99. Show happiness
101. Chaplin's wife
104. Fill with joy
106. Fonda's wife in 73-Across
108. Joan's "Lady For A Night" hubby
110. Movie working grounds
111. Femme in "Mr. and Mrs. North"
112. Comfort
113. - - - dy Barrie

DOWN

1. Actress in "This Time For Keeps"
2. She's featured in "Johnny Eager"
3. American Society of Cinematographers: ahhr.
4. Twice: prefix
5. Mrs. Charles Laughton
6. Wing
7. In "I Wake Up Screaming"
8. Femme in "Captains of the Clouds"
9. Constance M - - - e
10. Singer in "Sailors On Leave"
11. She's hack in "Father Takes A Wife": init.
12. News gal in "An Ohliging Young Lady"
13. Hero of "Las Vegas Nights"
14. Actress in "The Lady Is Willing"
15. Plot
16. - - - - - Wills
18. Frequent co-star of 106-Across
19. Russian ruler
22. Director: Roy - - - Ruth
26. M-G-M's popular baritone
29. Principal in "Confirm or Deny"
32. Happy
33. Paul - - - reid's in "Joan of Paris"
34. "Rise - - - Shine"
36. Fish eggs
38. Hollywood stunt girl
40. Prod
41. Producer of "Hay Foot"
42. Femme in "Forced Landing"
43. 20th Century-Fox starlet
47. 106-Across famed GWTW role
48. Reagan's home state: abbr.
49. "The Great - - -"
51. Sheridan in "They Died With Their Boots On"
53. Film producer
56. Swiss river
58. Two-word answer in wedding ceremonies
61. Kind of tree
62. By way of
63. A Roland Young role
64. Novice
65. "Alfalfa" Sweitzer
66. First name of 106-Across
67. Correlative of "neither"
68. Some
74. C - - - l Cunningham
76. Madam Gin Sling in "Shanghai Gesture"
77. A Merry Mac
78. Finis
80. Sprite in Shakespeare's "Tempest"
81. Sham
82. Feminine title of address
83. Republic will produce "- - - - Boy"
84. Money
85. Beans
86. How Frank Buck hrings 'em back
88. Fritz F - - -
90. Angry
91. Chemical element
92. Paradise
95. Gelatinous seaweed substance
97. Advantage
100. Illuminated
102. Unit
103. Inlet
105. Star of "Dr. Kildare's Victory"
107. Life Guard: ahhr.
109. This precedes 106-Across

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 13)

And if they can't treat the theme with integrity, let them keep away from it entirely.

There's plenty Hollywood can do in its own field of entertainment. "Dumbo," I think, will build more morale than a hundred flashy pictures using Japanese spies. At the height of the bombing of London, the people lined up in the shattered streets to see "Gone With The Wind." It's good pictures that build morale, no matter what the theme.

P. S.

Three of the best dressed dummies in Hollywood are in this one—wood and wire mannequins created especially for the dress salon scenes. The designers went wild with their creations for the models, because they weren't meant to be worn . . . Conrad Veidt's fan club has started a movement to "Keep Veidt Alive On the Screen" . . . Meanie Martin Kosleck is a very well-known artist. Among his works are portraits of Marlene Dietrich and Bette Davis . . . Ann Ayars, whose real name is Ann Pellicciotti, has a beautiful singing voice. She's given several concerts and has her eye on the Metropolitan Opera . . . Veidt thinks the walk is the most important part of a characterization. He's made a thorough study of it and says beware of a man who walks down the street quickly, then slows down or stops when he reaches the middle of a block. He's probably crooked; if, however, he walks with medium slow and steady gait, he can be trusted . . . Much grey was used in Ann's costumes; the shade is perfect for black-and-white photography . . . Director Jules Dassin got a bad case of jitters the first day of production. This is his first full-length picture, assigned to him as a reward for his excellent handling of one of Metro's most successful shorts—"The Telltale Heart" . . . Veidt had to be instructed in the proper method of handling the $250,000 stamp collection . . . For scenes in which he's supposed to be talking to himself (he plays a dual role), he used an "extra" player of his own height as an eye-level . . . Instead of playing one part all the way through, he switched from one character to another which is twice as difficult. Eight daily make-up changes were necessary . . . Veidt, known as "Connie" to his pals, had only one qualm about playing two parts—"I was afraid I might upstage myself!"

JUKE GIRL

Florida, it might surprise you to know, is not evenly divided between Miami and Palm Beach; there happen to be quite a few thousand acres that don't provide a playground for prancing northern tourists. You probably drank the juice of a Florida orange this morning; and at dinner time you might be cutting up a Florida tomato for your salad.

"Juke Girl" by-passes the flashy coastal resort centers and tells the story of Cat Tail, in the heart of the farming country. Swept into town with thousands of itinerant produce pickers are Ronald Reagan, Richard Whorf and Ann Sheridan. Dick and Ronnie are footloose, following wherever the freights take them; Ann is a juke girl, a hostess in those night clubs for the poor where the juke box is

(Continued on page 99)

She WENT OUT FOR A WALK... AND CAME HOME WITH A BABY!
When she adopted a dimpled darling she had to find a dizzy daddy to take for a roaring ride!
Marlene DIETRICH · Fred MacMURRAY
IN MITCHELL LEISEN'S
THE LADY IS WILLING
Introducing The Screen's Most Blessed Event...
BABY COREY
The Wonder Baby
with
ALINE MacMAHON · STANLEY RIDGES
ARLINE JUDGE · ROGER CLARK
Screen play by James Edward Grant and Albert McCleery
Directed by MITCHELL LEISEN
A Charles K. Feldman Group Production
A COLUMBIA PICTURE

Co-ed

BY JEAN KINKEAD

Nothing less glamorous than the femme futile unless it's a long-faced defense widow. Here's how not to be one!

★★★

Now Hair Can Be Far More Alluring
SILKIER, SMOOTHER, EASIER TO MANAGE!

Worldly but bewitching . . . this smoothly-rolled, distinguished hair-do. Hair shampooed with improved Special Drene, now featured by leading beauty salons, because it leaves hair so silky, smooth!

Amazing hair conditioner now in improved Special Drene Shampoo brings new glamour to hair!

● Have you discovered yet how much more glamorous even the simplest hair-do looks—after a shampoo with improved Special Drene? That amazing hair conditioner now in Special Drene makes the most terrific difference! It leaves the hair far silkier, smoother . . . easier to comb into smooth, sleek neatness . . . easier to arrange!

No wonder improved Special Drene, with hair conditioner in it, is sweeping the country . . . thrilling girls everywhere!

Reveals up to 33% more lustre!

Yes! In addition to the extra beauty benefits of that amazing hair conditioner, Special Drene still reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or liquid soap shampoos! For Drene is not just a soap shampoo, so it never leaves any dulling film, as all soaps do! Hair washed with Special Drene sparkles with alluring highlights, glows with glorious, natural color.

Unsurpassed for removing dandruff!

Are you bothered about removal of ugly, scaly dandruff? You won't be when you shampoo with Drene! For Drene removes ugly dandruff the very first time you use it!

And besides, Drene does something no soap shampoo can do—not even those claiming to be special "dandruff removers"! Drene reveals extra highlights, extra color brilliance . . . up to 33% more lustre!

So to get these extra beauty benefits, don't wait to try improved Special Drene! Get a bottle of this real beauty shampoo this very day at any toilet goods counter—or ask your beauty operator to use it!

All Special Drene now at dealers' in the blue and yellow package is improved and is for every type of hair . . . no matter whether dry, oily, normal! Don't wait to try new, improved Special Drene — or ask your beauty operator to use it.

Special Drene with Hair Conditioner Added

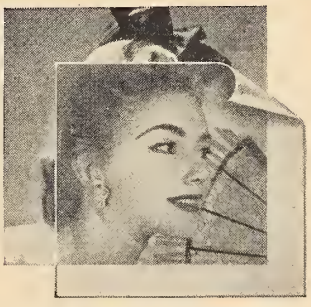
Procter & Gamble, Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Avoid That Dulling Film Left By Soaps and Soap Shampoos!



Don't rob your hair of glamour by using soaps or liquid soap shampoos —which always leave a dulling film that dims the natural lustre and color brilliance! Use Drene—the beauty shampoo with the exclusive patented cleansing ingredient which cannot leave a clouding film! Instead, it reveals up to 33% more lustre!

BETTY GRABLE
VICTOR MATURE
JACK OAKIE
in

SONG of the ISLANDS

in TECHNICOLOR!

with
Thomas Mitchell · George Barbier
Billy Gilbert · Hilo Hattie
Harry Owens and his Royal Hawaiians

Directed by WALTER LANG
Produced by WILLIAM LeBARON
Original Screen Ploy by Joseph Schrank, Robert Pirosh, Robert Ellis and Helen Logan · Lyrics and Music by Mack Gordon and Horry Owens

SONGS
by Gordon and Owens
"SING ME A SONG OF THE ISLANDS"
"DOWN ON AMI, AMI ONI, ONI ISLE"
"O'BRIEN HAS GONE HAWAIIAN"
"WHAT'S BUZZIN' COUSIN"
"BLUE SHADOWS AND WHITE GARDENIAS"
"MALUNA, MALOLO MAWAENA"

20th CENTURY FOX

Coming soon!

WATCH FOR IT!

HENRY FONDA · GENE TIERNEY
Keep 'Em Laughing with Their Loving
in
Rings on her Fingers
with LAIRD CREGAR

Buy U. S. Defense Bonds or Stamps every day!

BY KAY JONES

Priscilla Lane

When Priscilla Lane started as Fred Waring's gum-chewing songster-comedienne, she needed Sis Rosemary to make her click. Now on her own, it looks like the blue-eyed baby of the Mullican clan (that's the five Lane lassies' real moniker) has turned out to be the fight-ingest. After battling for good contract terms, Pat and her studio finally passed around the peace pipe, and the reels are already rolling out on Universal's "Saboteur," with the littlest Lane listening to director's orders from high 'n' mighty Hitchcock. A rootin', tootin' Cary Grant fan, she balked when she met Cary for the first time in "Arsenic and Old Lace" and was told to give him a sure, swift kick. Under the sun she whacks a nice tennis ball, claims it's just one way of keeping her 102 pounds inside her teensy 18-inch waistline. To date, her favorite indoor sport is dodging all questions that start with " . . . now about this man John Barry. . . ."

John Payne

Funny thing, what a guy will do to eat! Take the case history of one John Payne. Of the Roanoke, Virginia, Paynes, suh! They used to call him Tiger around New York's West Side gyms . . . until the Armenian Assassin brought his career as a wrestler to an abrupt ending. Then he turned to the more genteel profession of bouncer in a real nice night club. From there he sprinted from pool-room manager to chauffeur to short-order cook—all the while enrolled in the Columbia School of Journalism. One day he started to write assorted two-bit stories. Weird and wonderful tales, they were. He's papering his study right now with editors' rejection slips . . . but loves his new book like crazy. Calls it "The Sun Shines Bright." Certainly it's been shining bright for John, with such handsome parts as 20th Century-Fox's "To the Shores of Tripoli" being thrown smack at him. Hoards pennies and says he would like all kinds of children, 10, anyway!

FRANK POWOLNY

Ida Lupino

It all dates back to "The Light That Failed." Her knife-edged portrayal of the spirited little gutter-snipe caught on . . . lifted her out of syrupy roles, and it's been bigger and better neurotics for Miss Lupino ever since! In "Ladies in Retirement" she managed a cozy little job of strangulation that'd make Lady Macbeth look silly. Now, everyone's standing around on one foot, waiting to see what she's up to in 20th Century-Fox's "Moontide." You'd never guess she was imported from England originally to do a dewy-eyed "Alice in Wonderland." But you might very well guess that 300 years of acting is her heritage. She says, "I used to be frivolous, overpainted . . . simply awful!" But one day she met that nice Louis Hayward and he said to her, "Go wash your face." She did, and now she's Mrs. Hayward. Walks around the house sans shoes, collects guns and blanches when reminded of that old epithet, "Hollywood's Dizziest Dame."

CLARENCE S. BULL

William Lundigan

It was his voice that did it, of course. There he was, fresh out of Syracuse U. with no God-given gift but his velvety voice. He started announcing, and in no time his voice had floated out to Hollywood and an offer had floated back. But there was one professional crisis before he left. He was interviewing an animal trainer when a chummy chimpanzee and a pally python walked right up and started making love to him. How the show went on he'll never know! Out in Hollywood, he was the Anonymous One who had 'em swooning under his diction in trailers, shorts and other miscellany. But one day Warners sent out a call for THE voice and the face behind it, and found that one was as good as the other: The body wasn't bad either. Ditto for the acting ability, as you'll discover in M-G-M's "The Bugle Sounds." Lundigan, at home, is mad for deep-sea fishing and muscle work, stopping short of complete virility by his dislike of poker!

Joan Fontaine

When I.Q. tests proved Joan Fontaine a genius, everyone was a little startled! That is, everyone but Joan who was three and didn't much care. Genius or no, fun is fun, and you can pass her a helping! She and that magnificent hunk of husband are seen everywhere, all shined and pressed. They love good music and good theater and planing from coast to coast! Closest to Joan's heart is her career . . . that career which brought her into focus as the clear-eyed, exquisitely simple heroine of "Rebecca." "Suspicion" brought her the New York critics' vote of outstanding actress (with sister Livvie right up there beside her). And there'll be no counting the laurels she'll gather from 20th Century Fox's "This Above All." All of which proves her talent is far less fragile than her beauty. About Joan, the wife, there is no available data except that she and Brian share about 3,000,000 mutual interests, which ought to hold 'em for a while!

William Holden

It's been some time now that Bill Holden's been running around in a size 10 Cinderella's slipper . . . and it looks like the clock isn't ever going to strike 12! There he was . . . William Beedle, a sophomore at Pasadena Junior College, fertilizer salesman in the summer. And then, suddenly, bewilderingly, he was touched by Mamoulian magic . . . hoisted into the limelight via "Golden Boy." Used to live like a recluse during those first days in Hollywood. Even now you stand a better chance of bumping into the Holdens on a skating rink than at the hot spots. More probably you'll find them at home exchanging career notes . . . discussing his shiny performance in Paramount's "Out of the Frying Pan." Or up to his neck in dreams about their ranch in the valley some day . . . and their stable and horses and land. Bill's whittled his allowance down to $35 a week, Brenda Marshall to $25, so that "some day" might be tomorrow, or at latest, the day after!

Paulette's Back...
IS THE OBJECTIVE AT THE FRONT!
"ALL THE BOYS AT THE FRONT WANT HER BACK!"
"THE PRETTIEST MILITARY OBJECTIVE I EVER SAW!"
"PARDON MY PRYING... BUT SPYING'S SPYING!"
...AND RAY HAS A PLAN UP HIS SLEEVE, TOO!
"THE LADY HAS PLANS"
...and they're on her back!
Coming! "REAP THE WILD WIND" in Technicolor Cecil B. DeMille's greatest production
A Paramount Picture Starring
Ray Milland · Paulette Goddard
with
Roland Young · Albert Dekker · Margaret Hayes · Cecil Kellaway · Edward Norris
Directed by SIDNEY LANFIELD · Screen Play by Harry Tugend

ASK YOUR THEATRE MANAGER WHEN THIS BIG PARAMOUNT HIT IS COMING

BY DAPHNE CARRUTHERS

GOOD-BYE, CAROLE

We won't be seeing her any more, but in a man's heart and home, in aching memories, in changed lives, she still throbs with shining loveliness!

Silent and crushed, Gable arrived in Las Vegas to make funeral arrangements. It's rumored that he'll enlist in the army.

Of her, Pres. Raosevelt said, "She is and always will be a star—one we shall never forget nar cease ta be grateful ta."

On Jan. 13th she arose at the crack at dawn ta pase far publicity pics ta baast savings stamps sales in Salt Lake City.

"I have seen flames around the plane and there seems to be nobody left alive."

Out of far West vastnesses eight thousand feet above the Nevada-California line, came a witness's horrified sentence, blasting out incredible news. For on that plane were fifteen soldiers. And Carole Lombard. Flickering across the whole world went an incredulous, heartaching cry, "Carole Lombard isn't dead!"

It just wasn't possible. Death and Carole didn't make sense. A big white-faced man battered at the people who tried to stop him from smashing his way through to the impenetrable mountain to prove it couldn't be so. Clark Gable, a face and a name known to every person in the country, was an aghast, incredulous husband. "She can't be dead—" But in the list of names that ticked out of teletypes everywhere came one line, "Mrs. Clark Gable, Hollywood, California."

The President of the United States sent a wire. The Civil Aeronautics Board reported everybody dead. Did a gamin spirit, extricating itself from the wreck, tossing back its gay gold hair, laugh suddenly at all this and stretch out its hands to us?

Carole Lombard can't be dead. . . .

She was Hollywood. At the smartest parties, there was a blonde-haired girl, magnificently dressed, swaggering, assured. She'd battered her way from bit parts and slumps, from failures and delays to a place near the top, and she was loving it. Hollywood rampant—a white dining table (Continued on page 74)

DOUBLE EXPOSURE

"A simply super somebody," as told by Ann.

TAKES TWO TO TELL ON A GUY LIKE STACK!

HERE'S LOWDOWN FROM A GAL WHO KNOWS—

PLUS A STRICTLY PERSONAL POINT OF VIEW!

BY FREDDA DUDLEY

• "What do I like about Bob Stack?" Ann Rutherford repeated as if she had been asked what she liked about a million dollars in cash. "Why, I like everything about him—but completely. I mean he's such a man's man and a girl's man and an all-around great guy.

"To begin with, he's a super at handling situations. The way I met him in the first place—well, you might call it unorthodox. I had met Bob Shaw and Linda Darnell one night and liked them so much that the next time I was giving a clam bake, I decided to invite them. Linda was out of town, but I telephoned Bob STACK anyway—thinking I was getting Shaw. I mean I wasn't dropped on my head as a baby, and all the other members of my family are bright, but I get confused at times. So, I called the studio and asked for Bob Stack's number, which they supplied. Then I blithely dialed this number and asked to speak to 'Bob!' When he answered, I said, 'This is Ann Rutherford.' There was a sort of a silence on the other end of the wire, and I thought, 'Well, what gives?' Finally, (Continued on page 88)

•

Bobby and Ann both adore the Venice Fun House; picked it for extra-special celebrating her new role in "This Time For Keeps."

Stock likes variety—in beer and cokes and his women—successively dotes Lana Turner, Sheila Ryan, Anne Gwynne, de Havilland, and Rutherford. Lana claims he's No. 1 romance in her life, has wires and letters to substantiate!

Besides cashing in on hits like "Eagle Squadron," he's chalking up a substantial bank account manufacturing hot water heaters for the army!

When houseboy Pocifico first came to the Stock household, li'l' Bobby wos too young to pronounce his complicated nome, dubbed him Pocific Coast!

Pipe-smoking Bob litters the place with pictures, especially cherishes a Turner snap and Durbin portrait inscribed, "To Bob:—my friend and my 'First Love.'"

"The guy's a jerk," as insisted by Robert Stack!

• Mr. Robert Stack rubbed his hands and grinned when he was asked what he disliked about himself. This, he said, was the first time he had ever been offered the opportunity to confound any critic who thought Stack didn't know where his engine was missing.

"I could write a book bigger than 'Gone With The Wind' about the things I dislike about myself," he announced eagerly. "First, I don't like my looks. Every time I glance into a mirror, I think 'Who's that jerk?' Any guy who has curly hair will realize what it meant to me to be given an Air Corps hair cut for 'Eagle Squadron' and 'To Be Or Not To Be.' Imagine how it feels to come out of the shower, with a civilian hair cut, looking like an Astrakhan jacket. Imagine how it feels to come in after a hard boat race and have some well-meaning grandmotherly soul tell you that you look like a cherub. God! It happened to me—no kidding.

"And what wouldn't I give to have deep lines in my forehead and a little more poundage on my frame so that I'd appear (Continued on page 89)

Broke world's skeet-shooting record in '36 ond has o librory full of duck-hunting tomes. Also piled up cups for polo and speed-booting!

Honeymooners Mickey and Ava Rooney left Del Monte, Cal., for his next pic with sirenish Lamarr. Note Ava's $2500 sparkler.

Greg Bautzer, ex-amour of D. Lamour, toasted Georgianna Gabor (Eve's kid sister) at razmatazz opening of the Players, Director Preston Sturges' new night club.

Ever think Ed G. Robinson connoisseured and collected fine art and pipes? His latest bit of villainy is "Larceny, Inc." Above with Producer Hollingworth's missus.

CANDIDLY YOURS

On the sly shots of Hollywood's He's and She's caught by our fly-by-night cameraman!

Jitter 'n' jive Jackie Cooper rooms with T. Dorsey drummer, struts in and out of "Syncopation" with Bun Granville.

The Buddy Adlers (Anita Louise) wonder whose career counts most. He'd like her to cook-sew while he M-G-M-writes.

Chums Kay Kyser and Ginny Simms. He's been Darnell-ing it since Linda's discriminating ma date-rated him O.K.

George Raft came East recently without one-and-only-gal Grable, did the town strictly stag. Betty and her mother still treasure those lavish furs he gave 'em!

PHOTOS BY BOB BEERMAN

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

The strange case of GEORGE SANDERS

ECCENTRIC, UNPREDICTABLE, PARADOXICAL—HE'S A RIDDLE TO HOLLYWOOD AND THE WORLD'S DROLLEST JOKE TO HIMSELF!

"Son of Fury" villain Sanders was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, fled the Revolution to England. Is 6'3" tall and weighs a solid 215 lbs!

RIGHT after "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," George Sanders' first major screen villainy, a famous screen beauty stopped him on a studio lot.

"I thought you were wonderful," she praised. George eyed her coldly.

"Naturally," he said, and strode on, unsmiling.

That episode is quoted not to show that George Sanders is rude, though he can be, nor conceited, though he can be, nor unsociable, though he usually is. It's just to point out that he is and always has been a queer duck. The greatest of that species, in fact, that the movies have ever known. As such, he is the most fascinating picture puzzle in Hollywood today.

Everything in George Sanders' nature is an irritating contradiction. He pays no attention to Hollywood, but Hollywood is wild about him. He's certainly no Adonis, yet women swoon at his image. He glories in evil parts, still his popularity races daily. He looks lazy, but works fast and sure. He is British, but scorns British poses. His aura is mysteriously glamorous, while his life is modest, prosaic and rather dull.

All this amuses no one more than George Sanders, who regards his life and labors with a sardonic leer, anyway. The Sanders sense of humor runs caustically close to sarcasm and expresses itself mainly in ribald songs.

In his threadbare London days, George earned his cakes and coffee in smoky cafes and chop houses, thumping a piano and chanting risqué ditties, even more earthy than the Dwight Fiske variety. He can still tag the keyboard and sing the songs, many of which he composes himself. They all have shockingly funny titles and are delivered in a thick English accent. Sanders at the piano is famous among his few friends. They say it's his way of laughing at his amazing self.

To eavesdrop on these caustic concerts you must go to Lucey's, around the corner from RKO studios. Lucey's is not only George's favorite Does a neat bit of sleuthing in "The Falcon Takes Over" with Lynn Bari and Jimmy Gleason!

That German accent George spouts to Walter Pidgeon in "Man Hunt" is acquired from an in-law.

The strange case of GEORGE SANDERS

CONTINUED

restaurant, but the only one he'll enter in Hollywood. It has two big attractions for Sanders—a private room and a piano. When he finishes his eight hours (he's firm on that point; not an hour longer will he work), George likes to herd together an audience from the set—anyone will do—camera crew, assistant director, pretty extra girls. Together they troupe over to Lucey's, and George sardonically rips off his blue-blazer ballads inspired by his favorite and only drink—gin and bitters. It seems to soothe his soul.

The famous "pink gin" of the Royal Navy and his Oxford accent are about George's only links with movieland's Old-School-Tie gang. In most other ways he's a renegade and not chummy with the tight little isle of elegant Britons in far away Hollywood.

George was friendly with Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, and Brian Aherne is more than a nodding acquaintance. But the "Dear Old Ronnie" set, the Laughtons, the Cedric Hardwickes, the Ronald Colmans, Alan Mowbrays and so forth, who continually wave the Union Jack around to awe the native Hollywooders, doesn't count him a cricket pal. In all Hollywood British benefits since the war began, George has appeared at only one, the big Allied gala staged two years ago at the Coconut Grove. With Reginald Gardiner, David Niven, Ronald Colman, Douglas Fairbanks and a chorus of British beaux he cavorted and sang, "Darling, I Am Growing Older," with charm and grace. But the countless soirees, teas, (Continued on page 82)

In "Foreign Correspondent," Sanders played a likable role. With Bob Benchley and Joel McCrea.

Vied for Ingrid Bergman in "Rage in Heaven," but in real life heartily dislikes beautiful women!

Enjoyed playing around with guns as the British army officer in "Sundown." Above, with Bruce Cabot.

TY and ANNABELLA

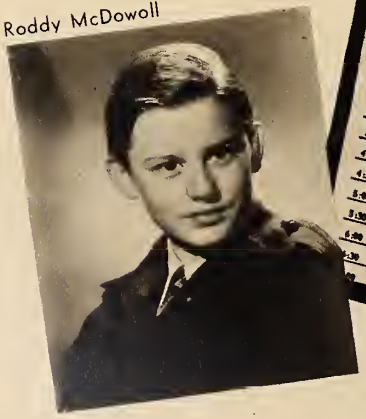
"Dear Diary..."

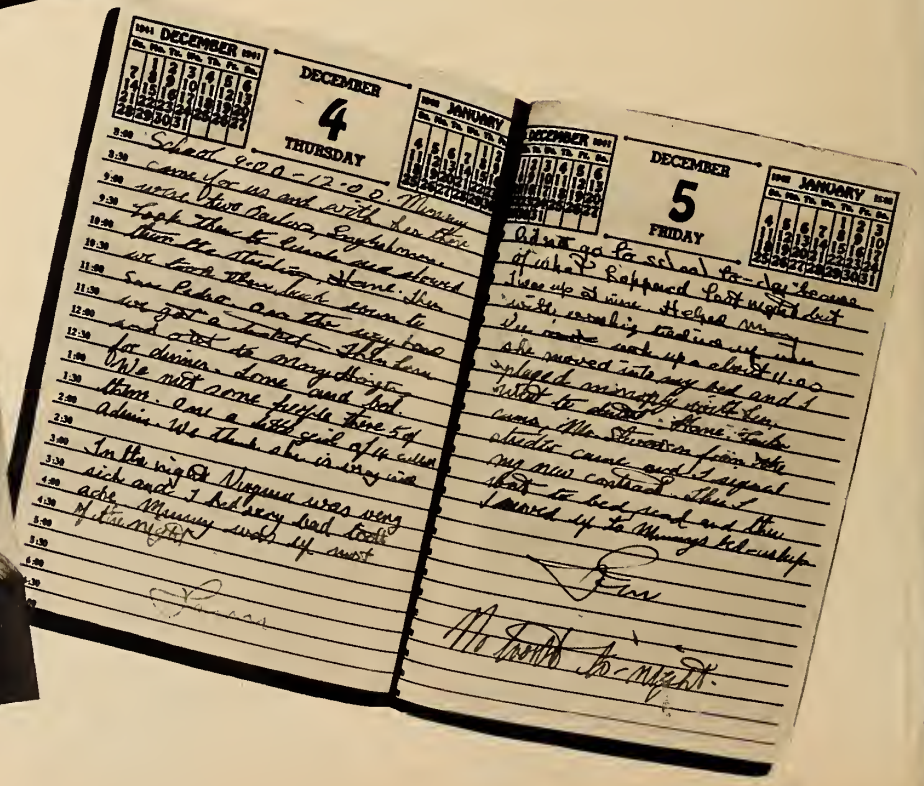
Sept. 24, 1941

Tony asked me to go to the "Navy In The R.A.F." premiere tomorrow night. I said Yes — of course! I wonder if this could be the beginning of something? I'm a little afraid it won't be. Singing idol — dimples, tall, dark and handsome — uh-uh — too fast! Watch out Landis! The big, bad wolf may catch up with you.

Corole Landis

Roddy McDowall





BY DOROTHY SPENSLEY

SECRET LOVES AND HATES, DREAMS, INTRIGUES—STRAIGHT FROM THE PAGES OF HOLLYWOOD'S PRIVATE DIARIES!

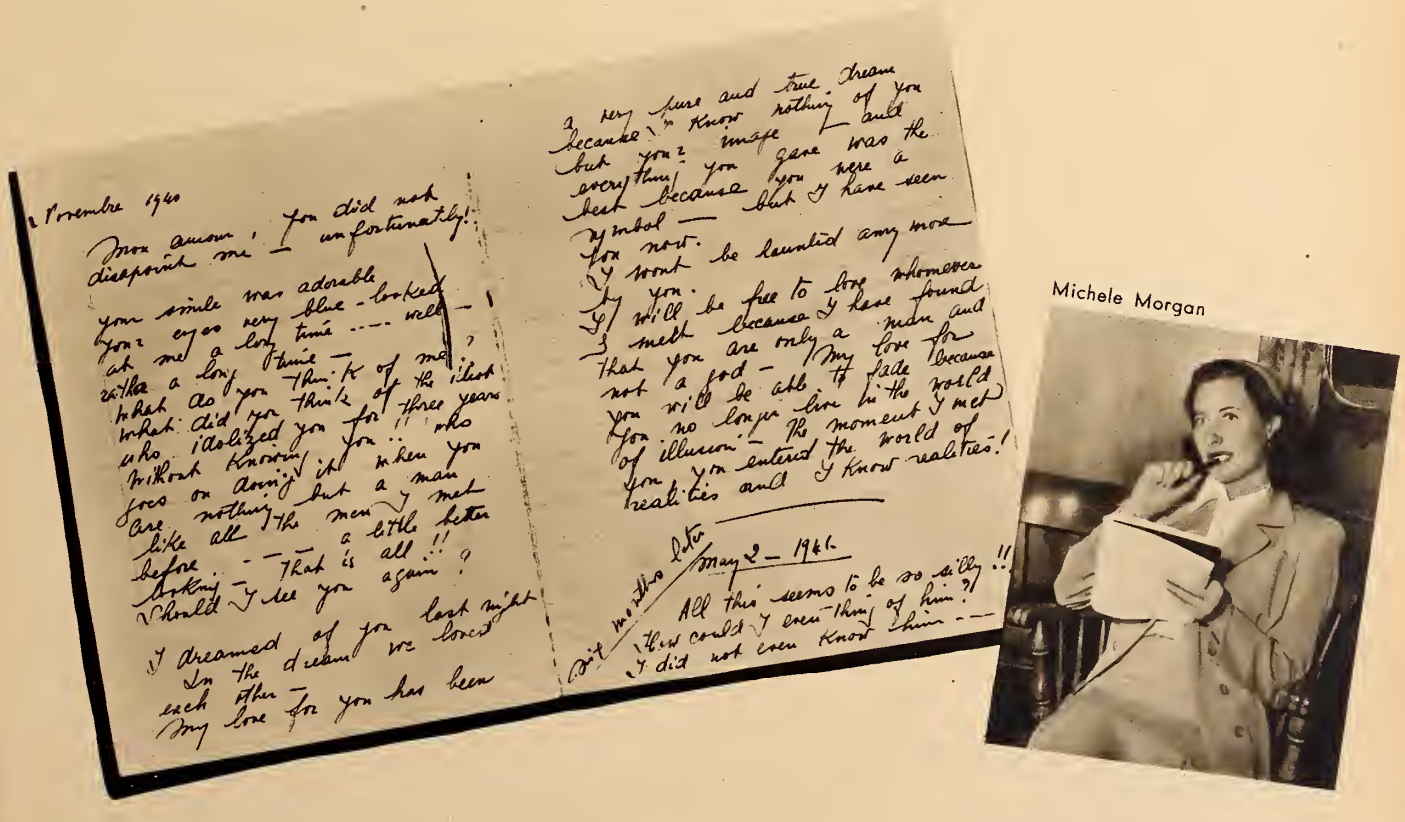
Hollywood diaries, like all diaries, are mental fingerprints. They are gay, chatty, vivid. They are stuffy, repetitious, magnifying silly detail. They spotlight Love, Romance, Infatuation, Friendship, Career, Most Embarrassing Moments and the world their writers live in. They are kept, mostly, by aspiring youngsters, pursuing fame; occasionally by fabulously-fortuned oldsters who have a heart for such things.

Hollywood diaries are more likely to be tended by women, although a few rugged fellows keep what they shamefacedly call "Commonplace Books" (they're still diaries). Most recordings are in cheap school copybooks (Michele Morgan's was); on engagement calendar pads. The hand-tooled, gilt-edged, gold-locked affairs are to be seen in Hollywood—yes, indeed, but only on fashionable booksellers' shelves.

Like all diaries, they reveal one thing: that open confession is good for the sole reason that it makes awfully interesting reading . . .

Carole Landis . . .

Sept. 23, 1941—Back to the big bad city (New York). You come alive in this town. Does things to you. Shopping this morning. Found an un-Landis hat and two that were simply made for me. Bought 'em. Lunch with Zimmy at one of his favorite spots —the Crillon, French cooking—ahh!—and then a dizzy ride up the Avenue. Always a thrill. Out to the Stork that night, and who should come up to our table but Tony Martin. There is a man! Didn't dare tell him that I owned all his Deccas from "Intermezzo" to "I'll Never Smile Again" to "Last Time I Saw Paris" to "Indian Summer," and I have a standing order with the Music Shop to supply me with



Michele Morgan

"Dear Diary..."

Continued

Lon Chaney, Jr.

Wish Dad had kept a diary. Remember that he suffered agonies while making some of those pictures. Like to know how he felt about it himself. Funny they called him the man with a thousand faces. Am only remember one the one with a smile. If he could take it like that guess I can too. Hope so anyway.

Bette Davis

his very latest platters the moment they come out!

Sept. 24, 1941—Tony asked me to go to the "Yank in the R.A.F." premiere tomorrow night. I said "Yes . . . of course!" I wonder if this could be the beginning of something? I'm a little afraid it won't be. Singing idol—dimples—tall, dark and handsome—uh-uh . . . too pat. Watch out, Landis! The big bad wolf may catch up with you.

Sept. 25, 1941—Take it all back! He's a darling. Sort of modest and simple and sweet. Kind of overwhelmed at all the fuss that goes on over him. Women can be so exquisitely silly about a matinee idol, and that includes yrs. trly., so help me. Did the night spots after the show—"Yank" very exciting. Tyrone wonderful. Starlight Roof for supper, and Tony humming "You Stepped Out of a Dream" as we danced. Very effective! We're going out dancing tomorrow night, too. And the next night—!!

Michele Morgan . . .

She admits (now) that it (Continued on page 64)

LINDA DARNELL
MISSALE

By KAAREN PIECK

COSSACK COWBOY

HE KNOWS MORE ABOUT FARMS THAN HE DOES

ABOUT FEMMES—BUT HE'S LEARNING FAST!

George disagreed when Papa thought he should don a coat for the camera. Mamotchka just smiled.

That long photo atop the piano is of George and his 7 brothers. Portrait is of friend Watsan Webb.

● George Montgomery looks like an American cowboy. So you're startled to hear him break into rapid Russian when he talks to his parents. The explanation is simple. He is an American cowboy, but Russian comes easier than English to his father and mother, who in 1912 left their home near Sebastopol to settle in Montana with eleven children of their own and a couple they'd adopted. Mamotchka, as the children still call their mother, didn't bother with adoption formalities. In the little town of which her husband was mayor, an orphan with no closer claims automatically held a claim on her. There was always enough to feed another mouth. Over a period of years they took in five.

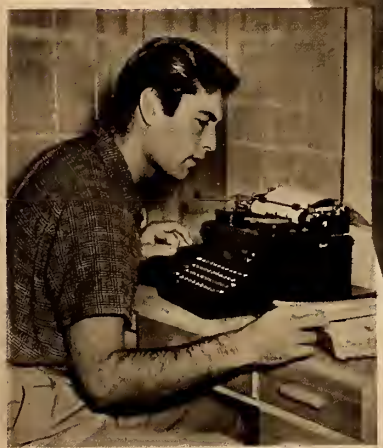
Of their own living brood of thirteen—two died in infancy—George and Maurice, his elder by two years, were born in Montana. His full name is George Montgomery Lyetz, the middle name after a treasured family friend—the Montgomery Ward catalogue.

He's six feet two, a tawny-topped young man with friendly blue eyes, slightly Slavic cheekbones and the level-headedness of his stock, which sprang from the soil. He says what he thinks, knows what he wants, takes his career with a grain of salt and squirms when people tell him he reminds them of Gable or Gary Cooper. "Look, do me a favor, (Continued on page 79)

In T.C.F's "Roxie Hart" he's Ginger Rogers' newsman.

George wishes he needed an alarm clack to wake him. Can't sleep after 7 a.m.

He wields a mean charcoal. That's his own version of Linda Darnell.



He warries abaut his spelling, feels lost withaut a dictianary.

He used ta be "just a cawbay." Naw he's tap heart-throbber and soldier-boy in "Ten Gentlemen From West Point" far T.C.F

The Lady is a Trump

She's restless as a robin, loves men who give her diamond bracelets. But Bette swears quiet, thrifty "Farny's" just what the doctor ordered!

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

With Worners' Director John Huston and his fomous fother, Walter.

Farny's pop gove her Peckett 3 yeors ogo. She's hod Tibby for 10 yeors!

Bette will be touring U.S. Army comps soon, doing her bit for oll-out victory.

Livvy de Hovillond ond Bette on set of "In This Our Life."

● Bette's the only major actress in Hollywood who, on every birthday, adds a frank year to her age. The impulse to suppress vital statistics isn't confined to actresses. Nine out of ten women do it. Bette's the exception.

She's been bawled out more than once for what her advisers call gratuitous candor and rejects their advice for two reasons. The records are open to all who care to consult them. She'd feel like a fool to say she was twenty-eight and be faced with the proof that she was thirty-three. She also feels that the years are for, not against, you—that you gain sense with experience and interest with both. She says maybe the time will come in her forties, when she'll wish she had dropped a year here and there. Those who know her best doubt it.

Asked to name her governing quality, a friend said: "She's straight, like one of her own New England trees. It's not that she climbs on any high moral horse. But a lie discomforts her, just as cats discomfort some people. They feel easier when the cat departs. Bette feels easier when she tells the truth."

By the same token, she refuses to lend herself to any but authentic publicity, thinks it's silly to pose with golf clubs over your shoulder when you don't play golf. Whom do you think you're fooling? The fans? She'd rather not. And why go out of the way to make an ass of yourself, when life is so rich in bonafide opportunities?

To get most stars on the phone is a major production. Bette answers her own, because it's at her elbow, and she'd rather face the occasional awkwardness of an unwelcome caller than keep dragging the maid out of the kitchen to announce that so-and-so wants to talk to her. One of her more unreasonable phobias is being told by people that they left a message with her secretary. To this she retorts that she has no secretary. "It's a childish reaction," she confesses, "but I cling to it. Maybe because I'm so tired of calling up and getting other people's secretaries."

Disliking to lie, she also dislikes being lied to—freezes up on saleswomen who say it looks beautiful when it's manifestly hideous and prefers unpleasant truths to her face than by indirection. Sometimes the truth makes her mad—when she knows it's the truth but hasn't got 'round to admitting it, and somebody beats her to the punch. Her fury spent, she'll apologize for the error of her ways. She never stays mad, doesn't sulk, can dig up only one grudge that she's held for years, and subdues her temper by reminding herself that temper doesn't pay.

To Bette, for instance, a fireless room is a dead room. She can imagine living without chairs, carpets, curtains —not without an open fire. So when she went away with Farny for New Year's Eve and discovered that the promised fireplace in their living room hadn't materialized, she sounded, she's ashamed to say, like an old hen. Till she realized that an old hen sounds ugly, and that her squawks weren't building a fireplace.

She's also ashamed of how mad she gets if things aren't kept impeccably clean. "I'm a devil," she says, "about fingermarks on silver." What bothers her more than the fingermarks is the sense of work sloppily done. It's a kind of cheating, no form of which can she tolerate. As when something's (Continued on page 82)

Leoding mon George Brent's slont on how it should be done.

The Hollywood Women's Press Club voted Bette "most cooperotive" gol stor.

Betty ond Farny hove left the Big Time to spend o few months at "Butter Nut," their New Hompshire retreot.

It's a date!

Played Cupid, we did, and cooked up a date between Glenn Ford and Jinx Falkenburg! Here's an exclusive candid camera record of what went on behind scenes!

Jinx was afraid Glenn was going to be just another Hollywood fresh guy! But he turned out a complete natural, and they're the best of chums now. Drove to Caliente to the races in his hopped-up Cadillac club coupe.

Luxury-loving Jinx warbles and thinks in her bubble bath for hours. Retires by 1 A.M., is awakened at 7:30 by a noisy brother. Shrewd, vivacious, scrupulous, she was christened Eugenia in 1919, in Spain.

Glenn takes his showers icy, with intermittent scorching sprays. Can't stand toilet water, substitutes his special $2-a-cake English soap. Averages 3 dates a week, generally with the Bill Holdens or non-pro chums.

Unorthodoxically made up and combed her hair before dressing, then had to start from scratch again! Adores slips and owns about 20 costing up to $10 per. Is currently emoting in Columbia's "Sweetheart of the Fleet."

Above average height (5' 7"), Jinx can indulge her huge appetite, breakfasts on fruit, cereal, ham and eggs, hot cakes, toast and milk. Never wears high heels, avoids short men. Relaxes with feet up and witch hazel pads on eyes.

Following his shower, Glenn shaves once a day. Lives in an 8-room home with his mom. Is ashamed of his studio-ordained long locks (for "The Adventures of Martin Eden"), hibernates to out-of-the-way places!

A rapid dresser, he takes half an hour from shave to door. Hates dolling up and has never once worn a set of tails bought 2 years ago. Doesn't give a hoot for dancing (neither does Jinx), but can do a wicked waltz if put to it!

CONTINUED . . .

Jinx's maid, Reyes, speaks no English, parleys with family in Spanish. Jinx's hair is washed every 3 days at studio, peroxided at hairline to give sun-bleached effect. Religiously brushes it 15 mins. evenings, 10 mins. in the A.M.

Unwittingly dressed to Glenn's taste—in sweater 'n' skirt! Keeps sweaters flower-fresh by sewing sachet bags in shoulder. That screen's plastered with mag covers (61) and ads for which she modeled in N. Y.

Glenn's his own valet service, personally attending to laundry and cleaning. Owns 4 suits, 4 extra sports coats, 6 extra slacks. Doesn't have a hat, thinks scarves are arty. Shares Jinx's affinity for long-distance phone calls!

An avid scanner of the Daily Racing Form, Glenn enjoys the ponies moderately, usually sits out several races eating in the clubhouse. He and Jinx are cautious bettors, so he took only $25 for the two of 'em!

Jinx averages 3 dinner dates a week, plays hard at tennis and swimming week-ends. Hates corsages, but dotes on jewelry, especially pin given her by an ex-suitor, with rubies and her name engraved in gold!

Punctual as a clock, she never keeps a man waiting. Loves stage shows, movies and music. Substitutes hand lotion for face powder to give sheen to her cheeks. Broke into Winchell's column last winter with her stockingless legs!

From his 150 complete record albums (classical, T. Dorsey and Kostelanetz) Glenn picks a record for Jinx. A pipe collector, he owns 100 "broken-ins," but relishes a nickel corncob on the Q.T. Puffs imported tobacco.

A victim of the willies, Glenn sits and clock-watches till it's time to go. He doesn't want to appear eager and call for Jinx too early. That imported English sports coat's his all-time favorite, set him back 75 bucks, reeks of tobacco!

"ALL CLEAR" FOR YOUR SKIN

Leave cleansing cream on several minutes, then remove with tissue, using an upword, outward motion.

Keep your complexion cleor ond stimuloted by frequent use of mild soap, woter ond o complexion brush.

Apply rich lubricating cream before going to bed, mossoging your skin gently with fingertips.

Tone up your complexion with skin freshener after cleansing and before applying your make-up base.

Jone Wymon's lovely complexion is importont to her romontic beauty. You'll see her in "Lorceny, Inc."

By Carol Carter

● "All Clear" for your skin means "All Clear" for happiness and good times, too, because a flawless complexion is the very beginning of beauty and glamour—even more important than perfect features.

We can thank our lucky stars for this because there is always much we can do to make our complexions lovelier, although we usually have to be content with the fundamental facial structure that nature gave us. Skin, you know, is constantly renewing itself, and when it receives careful daily treatment, it becomes more radiant, softer, more caressable.

But that epidermis isn't for beauty's sake alone. It is also your first line of defense against all kinds of attacks. It acts as a buffer when anything hits you, it insulates your body against heat and cold and is a regulator of body temperature. It stands guard against germs and lessens the intensity of sunlight. For these services—as well as for increased loveliness—it deserves grade A attention.

To give your complexion the best of care, you need to understand its requirements. A normal skin, of course, is the ideal—fine pored, smooth, clear and blooming with healthy color. To have and hold a skin like this, remember these three simple essentials—everyday cleanliness, stimulation and protection. Clean your face at least twice a day and always before retiring with cleansing cream and tissue and follow up with a stimulating skin freshener. Or, if you prefer, scrub it with lukewarm water, mild soap and a soft complexion brush. Then keep your face soft, smooth and protected by applying protective bases before making up and by smoothing on a rich lubricating cream before retiring at night.

A too-dry skin is the worry of most girls and women in this hurried, confusing world of ours. Rigorous weather, strain and the fast pace we live by, all tend to rob skins of their natural lubricants, which keep it firm and young. So if yours is of this type, give it plenty of extra lubrication.

After cleansing with soap and water or cold cream, be sure to follow up with a rich emollient or special dry skin cream. If it is bedtime, massage it well into the skin, leaving it on overnight. This lubricant not only softens skin and supplies it with the oils it lacks, but with massage, helps to stimulate circulation and tone up slack facial muscles. Be sure to use only the pads of your fingers and hands when massaging, smoothing the cream in with a gentle upward and outward motion. If you are going out, let the lubricant remain on your face only a few minutes, then remove it with cleansing tissue saturated with skin freshener—and apply a cream or creamy lotion foundation before your make-up.

All this will make your skin bloom—but glamour demands that you do still more. Check up on your eating and living habits, too. Be sure that you eat three nourishing meals a day that contain plenty of fruits, vegetables and particularly foods that contain fats and oils—and that you drink plenty of water to keep your body in good working order. Fatigue and nervousness are also frequently the causes of a dry, flaky skin, so find time for at least eight hours of sleep each night. It's better to curtail social life a bit than deliberately to invite unattractive skin. Exercise will do wonders in relaxing taut nerves, as well as stimulating circulation. So if you don't have facilities for bowling, badminton or swimming, at least take yourself for a long invigorating walk several times a week.

If you have an oily skin, the symptoms are all too familiar to you—your face forever shines, and powder just won't stay put. This condition, you know, is caused by overactive oil glands which secrete more oil than your skin needs for softness and smoothness. Your defense is to regulate unruly glands by stimulation—and to keep your face free of excess oil by scrupulous cleanliness. Follow the cleansing routine prescribed for a normal skin, only adhere to it more rigidly, scrubbing your face with soap and water or cleansing it with a liquefying type of cleanser three or four times a day. After rinsing thoroughly with clear cold water, apply a good astringent or skin freshener. This has a toning effect on the skin, and also tends to return pores to their normal size. Scrubbing your face briskly several times a day provides beneficial stimulation, too. Before making up, apply liquid, cake or vanishing type of foundation so that your powder will go on smoothly and evenly.

A too-oily skin, like any other condition that varies from the normal, has some underlying cause, so again health and diet need particular scrutiny. If you find that you are unbalancing your diet by indulging in rich foods, pastries, sweets and fried foods, cut these from your three meals a day in favor of more fruits and vegetables. And be sure that you drink more water than you ever have before. You probably are beginning to think as much is claimed for eight glasses per day as the old medicine men claimed for their magic remedies, but believe us, plenty of water is essential to a well-regulated body; hence to a healthy, beautiful skin.

If you should have acne, which often accompanies oily skin, the important thing is to believe that you can cure it. Don't just scrub your face, slap on a lotion, sleep 10 hours, refuse a couple of pastries, and then give up in a week, saying, "It's no use. I've tried everything." This condition just can't be cleared up in seven days, although that is time enough for a start, so have the courage of your complexion and do strive for (Continued on page 79)

BEST FACE FORWARD

BY CAROL CARTER

● Few people can resist the appeal of a crisp, lovely gift package—for its exquisite exterior makes the contents seem all the more desirable. Knowing this, why don't we—smart girls that we are—apply this idea to our faces? We may have perfect features and lots of animation, but unless the packaging—our complexions—is at its glamorous best, these attributes may never receive the attention and appreciation they deserve. So let's put our best faces forward!

A clear, flawless complexion depends, you know, on everyday attention, so give yours the faithful care advised in "'All Clear' for Your Skin" beginning on page 48. But remember, also, that even the healthiest of complexions shows weariness at the end of a long day—just when dates and good times generally begin. So it behooves all of us to have a trick or two up our sleeves for pepping up a tired face and making it as fresh as dawn. If there's time for a change of clothes and a shower, there is time for a quick facial pick-up.

Here's how you go about it. Begin by tucking your locks away in a kerchief or light net, then slip into your housecoat so you'll feel comfortable and relaxed. Next slather on cleansing cream in smooth upward motions, being sure to cover both face and neck. You want your neck to look as satiny soft and smooth as your complexion. Leave the cream on while you take a refreshing bath or shower—so it can do its best work in cleansing and softening—and remove it immediately afterwards with soft cleansing tissue. Then tone up your skin with cool skin freshener. However, if you are a soap and water addict, you can achieve substantially the same cleansing, invigorating effect by scrubbing your face briskly with mild soap, lukewarm water and a soft complexion brush.

After cleansing, you have several courses open to you. Your choice depends on the time you have to prepare for that important engagement. If you have only 15 minutes, treat your complexion to one of those easy-to-use facial (Continued on page 70)

Columbio's Rito Hoyworth, soon to co-stor agoin with Fred Astaire.

It's a smart girl who knows a few quick tricks for pepping up a tired complexion and giving it fresh radiance for unexpected engagements.

Modern Screen's Complexion Chart

FOLLOW THESE RULES FOR A RADIANT, LOVELY SKIN

IF YOUR SKIN IS	CARE FOR IT THIS WAY	WITH THESE AIDS
NORMAL	Before retiring, cleanse face thoroughly with soap and water and camplexian brush—ar cream and cleansing tissue. Apply emallient or overnight cream. In making up, cleanse face af old casmetics with cream and tissue, remaving excess cream with freshener. Then apply faundatian—cream, cake, vonishing or liquid—alsa pawder, rouge and lipstick.	Saop, camplexian brush, cleansing creom, cleansing tissue, avernight ar emollient cream, skin freshener. Make-up faundatian — either cream, cake, liquid or vanishing.
SENSITIVE OR DRY	Before retiring, cleonse face with cold creom and tissue. Then stimulate skin with soap and water scrubbing. Apply emallient cream ar special dry skin creom immediotely afterward. In making up, cleonse face thoraughly, then use cream or creamy type faundatian, cream rouge and a light, fluffy type powder.	Cald cream, cleansing tissue, soap, emallient cream, cream type faundatian, cream rauge very light fluffy pawder.
OVER OILY	Before retiring—alsa frequently during day—scrub face with saap, water and camplexian brush ar cleanse with liquefying cream ond tissue. Fallaw with bracing astringent or taning latian. In making up, use vanishing, liquid or cake type base and dry rouge.	Saap, camplexian brush, liquefying cream, cleansing tissue, astringent ar toning lotian, liquid, vanishing or cake type foundatian and dry rouge.
BLEMISHED	Cleanliness is of prime impartance in clearing blemished skin. Frequently scrub face gently with bland saap, camplexian brush and lukewarm water—but da not irritate it. Special skin cleansers and beauty grains are very effective. At night, apply pare cream, healing latian ar medicated cream ta erupted areas. Special masks may be used ta cantract pores and remove blackheads. Gently remove blackheads with special comedone extractar and cleansing tissue. Tauch alcahol ta these areas.	Soap, camplexian brush, special skin cleonsers ar beauty grains, pore cream, healing lotion ar medicoted cream, special mask, camedone extractar, cleansing tissue, alcahol.
CHAPPED	Cleanse skin with heavy cleansing cream. Gently remave excess cream with saft cleansing tissue. Wash face with saap and water, being careful not ta irritate it. Then apply rich, lubricating cream. Befare going autdoors, apply pratective cream ar latian. Apply rich night cream ar tissue cream before retiring.	Heavy cleansing cream, soft cleansing tissue, rich, lubricating cream, saap, pratective cream or latian, night or tissue cream.
MATURE	Before retiring, smaath rich cleansing cream over face and neck ta remave dust, stale make-up ond grime. Wipe aff with tissues. Then pat clean skin with cotton pads saturated in skin freshener ar toning lotion. Then smaath on extra-rich emallient skin cream and pat briskly with fingers. Cleanse skin several times daily with rich cleansing cream. In making up, always apply creom type faundatian first.	Rich cleansing cream, cleansing tissues, cattan pads, skin freshener ar taning latian, extra rich emollient cream, cream type faundatian.

Nelson Eddy Talks His Head Off

TEN RED-LETTER DAYS HE'LL NEVER FORGET — EXCLUSIVELY SCOOPED BY MODERN SCREEN!

Nelson and wife, Ann Franklin, celebrated their 3rd wedding anniversary in Jan.

Modeled a head of Jeanette MacDonald between scenes of "I Married An Angel."

MEMO FROM ALBERT DELACORTE

Dear Ida:

Haven't read a revealing Eddy story in years. See if he'll talk about the high moments in his life—days so exciting or significant he'd like to live them over—or maybe, by the same token, wouldn't. We want to know the kind of guy he is—never mind what he eats for breakfast. Tell us how he reacts to life, its thrills and its pokes in the jaw.

Al

3533 WEST EIGHTY-FIFTH STREET • • INGLEWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Dear Al:

Too excited to write much. Something must have happened to Nelson's "censor." He talked more than I could listen. But I got most of it. If I say so myself, it's the best Eddy story ever written. Print it fast before he changes his mind.

Ida

HE HITS HIS FIRST NOTE

It happened one June night in Philadelphia. He didn't look like much. The doctor whacked him a couple of times.

"What do you think?" asked the nurse anxiously.

"Oh, I guess maybe we'll be able to shove him into shape."

From the bed came a faint voice. "Does he look like his father?"

"Here, here, young woman, you're supposed to be asleep. Anyway, how do I know if he looks like his father? He's got no beard."

Rose a thin, high, nerve-piercing wail of protest, which only to a mother's misguided ears could have sounded like music. Mrs. Eddy smiled blissfully and

BY IDA ZEITLIN

Is terrifically wound up in his career. Can relax only by hard physical labor!

Does most of his practising at home, playing his own piano and organ accompaniments.

fell asleep, while her lusty son yelled his lungs out.

"Hm," sniffed the nurse, bundling him up. "One thing you're not going to be, my lad, is a singer."

The life he's led, Nelson has no squawks. It's agreeable with him, if he's born again. Only next time he wants to amount to something and be a tycoon.

NEVER SAY DIE

He liked being night cashier of the Philadelphia Press, because he could pinch-hit for the watchman and run all the elevators. It was only a stepping-stone, though. He got drunk on the smell of a newspaper office. His single dream centered around a future day when, asked about his occupation, he could answer with heart-swelling pride: "Reporter."

That night the city editor, in mellow mood, came in to get some money on a voucher. He felt good. He felt so good that he had to do something for somebody, and the night cashier was handy. "Son, what do you want most in the world?"

"To be a reporter."

"Okay. From tomorrow morning you're a reporter."

He floated home on clouds of glory and floated back on same the following morning, having donned his other (best) suit to honor his calling, and supplied himself with a black leather notebook.

Beaming, he presented himself to the city editor.

"What do you want?"

"I came for my new job." (Continued on page 104)

Sheridan-Brent marriage leaves a trail of broken hearts!

Japs and British agree, vote Deanna tops!

GOOD NEWS

Artie Shaw two-times Lana Turner!

Garbo zodiac reveals actor romance coming!

Bruce Cabot, debutantes' darling, has a daughter age 14!

Soon as he joined the six-zero income gang, Kay Kyser went in for de luxe slumming, sat necktie-less at the Players opening. Above, with Janie Wyman, who movie-kissed Eddie Robinson so roundly she dislodged his front tooth.

Orson Welles kept radio and production schedules going while waiting for Dolores Del Rio's divorce decree to bounce in and out of court. Rita Hayworth (above) guest-starred for him.

Private Jack Coogan, 26, O.K.'d father-to-be stories while wife Flower Parry, 19, denied them. But it's definite now. Pepsodent warbler Frances Langford's teaching him hot swing lullabies.

Newly slimmed Pat Morison boasted Hollywood's longest hair —blonded it to avoid confusion with Roz Russell's dark tresses, recently chopped it for "Malaya." Above, with Hugh Fenwick.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Costello keep close watch on contract obligations. Lou must show 3½ pounds for every inch of his 5' 4" (224 pounds). Bigwigs worried when he shrank to 200.

HOLLYWOOD DIARY

Mon., Feb. 2nd: Shopping in Beverly Hills and ran into Maureen O'Hara buying baby things. Uh, uh, I was wrong. She was selecting a gift for a colored baby born in McComb, Miss., (where she was married) who'd been christened Victory Pearl Harbor Moore!

I loved her wedding ring—a wide gold band that once belonged to Will's great grandmother—but she wouldn't slip it off for closer inspection. Claims that would bring bad luck! She swears it'll stay put even if Mr. Zanuck casts her as a dewy-lipped school maiden. Her arguments are all set against the day he does. She says lots of unmarried girls own marriage bands. Before she flew to Las Vegas, Judy Garland wore one for years. And before she acquired one of her own, Cobina Wright, Jr., wore one on each hand—souvenirs of her mother's two marriages!

Thurs., Feb. 5th: Lunched in Warners' Green Room with Bette Davis and Cynthia Miller. Cynthia's interview was nearly ruined by air raid sirens, shrieking like mad. We ripped out of that Green Room faster than the B-19! Studio wardens directed us to a shelter. When we were all huddled in what we prayed was a bombproof cellar, we learned it was just a drill, and not the real thing. That was a relief, but the twenty minutes we spent thumb-twiddling seemed like hours!

Back in the Green Room, Bette told us she's leaving for New Hampshire tomorrow morning. She had six inches sliced off her hair a couple of days ago, because she doesn't want to be bothered with curlers during her two months at Butter Nut. Two minutes after she stepped off the barber's chair, the studio called to say she was needed for retakes on "In This Our Life"! She had to spend hours getting her head pasted up so her hair-do would match earlier scenes!

Almost tripped over Carole Landis, this evening at Harry Rosenthal's Music Shop. She was coming out of a soundproof booth, loaded with rumba records. How that girl's changed! Haven't seen her in a night spot for months. Since she moved into that house in Santa Monica (the old Norma Shearer-Irving Thalberg place), Carole hardly dates any more. The boys still come around, but she gives them the heave-ho. Thinks maybe the beach air makes her drowsy 'cause all she wants to do at night is listen to records and sleep.

Tues., Feb. 10th: Sat in on the Ann Rutherford-Fredda Dudley confab over at Metro. Ann was a knockout in a black and white shepherd's check suit. And her lapel pin! A two-inch long zircon set in gold swirls! The Fred MacMurrays gave it to her last Xmas. Glad the interview didn't last longer than it did. That gal has so much pep, vim and vigor, she was exhausting me! As it was, she was called away to see a private screening of Dottie Lamour's "Aloma of the South Seas." She's being considered for a sarong role in "Pearls of Paradise." And only yesterday she was Polly Benedict!

Malted-milked with Linda Darnell and Ann Miller at Schwab's. These two are such bosom buddies, they were even wearing identical white teddy bear coats. The kids belong to the Red Cross unit organized by Elaine Barrymore. They love the work, but they're hurt because girls in the unit aren't friendly. It doesn't occur to them that people may be too shy to talk to movie stars.

GOOD NEWS Continued

Loretta Young, Ronald Colman, Deanna Durbin with announcer Don Wilson go all-out for Victory on the air. The Navy closed Ronald's pier-end Steak House, said it was in a "danger zone"!

Michele Morgan tells the world she's going 100% American —refuses to talk, think or even dream in her native French. Her perfect English speech amazes linguists, challenges Boyer's accent.

Fri., Feb. 13th: Bob Sterling looked mighty frail next to Dick Williams' 225 lbs., this noon hour during their interview for a story in the May issue. Bob's just out of the hospital. Tonsillectomy. He was awfully proud of his brand new navy blue suit. Said it gave him a mental if not a physical lift. He really loves clothes, that boy. He still felt pooped after the interview, but he went home to change his outfit and toss off a game of golf with his best friend, who's a pro.

Leaving the commissary, I noticed a steady stream of stars—Lamarr, Tracy, Taylor, etc.—pouring past a corner table like worshippers past a shrine. Turned out to be Red Skelton, everybody's pal!

Spent the afternoon set-touring at Warners. Gabbed with Annie Sheridan who's a giddy bride if ever I saw one! She was buried in plans for the extra wing she's having built on to her new home for George. And after all these years, she's trimmed her Dragon Lady fingernails! George likes 'em short and polished pale.

On to the "Yankee Doodle Dandy" set, and smack into a gathering of the Cagney clan. Jimmy and Jean who are in the picture, and brother Bill who's associate producer, were entertaining their mother and another brother. At three o'clock on the nose, Jimmy walked out of shooting range. Teatime had come. Jimmy's got to have his every afternoon, and he likes the entire cast and crew to join him. When he sets down his empty cup, production resumes. Not before.

Sat., Feb. 14th: Opened a letter from Bobbie Andrews of Clermont, Indiana. ". . . In Indianapolis," she wrote, "just before that fatal day, Carole Lombard became almost related to the thousands who saw her sell bonds and heard her leading songs. At the news, an expression of great sorrow came over the state of Indiana. . . . Like millions of Americans, all we can say is: 'She died doing her duty and we're proud of her.' " Hollywood's proud of her, too, Miss Bobbie. Carole will never be forgotten here or in any corner of the earth where her name is known.

Mon., Feb. 16th: Ouch, just got the scare of my life! Here I am, sitting peacefully on the "I Married An Angel" set, waiting for Ida Zeitlin to wind up her Nelson Eddy interview, when all of a sudden I look up and see Eddie Horton—dressed in a purple toga! Eddie in civvies is startling enough. But Eddie garbed like a Roman senator! I hope it never happens to me again!

Back in the office. According to Ida, Nelson was the easiest person to interview since Ray Milland. He talks easily, wastes no time and, for an artist, is almost business-like in his efficiency.

Dinner at Preston Sturges' Players restaurant. John Carroll happened in and joined us. Poor Johnny! Always beefing. This time it was "Rio Rita." He hated making the picture; thinks he's horrible in it. That's what he says of every picture, yet he keeps getting more and more popular. He has a glorious voice and, naturally, the studio wants him to sing. But he thinks that's unreasonable! He'd rather get his molars into red-blooded action roles where he can jump on villains and yell all over the place!

Thurs., Feb. 19th: RKO-d all morning. Found Kay Kyser screaming on the "Favorite Spy" set. A make-up man, intending to pour hair stickum on Kay's hair, emptied a half bottle of shellac on him instead! Jimmy Craig strolled over for a visit. He has a problem. Whenever he goes riding on the Beverly Hills bridle path, he's followed by a young co-ed on horseback. If he goes fast, she goes fast. If he slows up, she slows up. She never tries to overtake him, but she never lets him out of her sight, either! Jimmy's worried about neighborhood gossips! (Continued on page 58)

Another Pond's Bride-to-be

MARION LYNN, exquisite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude E. Lynn of the prominent Chicago family. Her engagement to Bertram L. Menne, Jr., of Louisville, Kentucky, was announced New Year's Day, 1941.

HER RING is a beautiful brilliant-cut blue-white solitaire, set fairly high, and on each side a single round diamond set a little lower. The band is platinum.

She's ENGAGED! She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

See how Marion Lynn's soft-smooth Glamour Care will help your skin. Marion says: "I think Pond's Cold Cream is splendid for skin that's thin and sensitive like mine. It's so light, so soft and soothing itself—and softens and cleans my skin beautifully.

"I always use it twice each time—like this:

"1. I SLATHER Pond's Cold Cream thick over my face and throat and pat all over with brisk little pats. This helps to soften and take off dirt and make-up. Then I tissue it all off.

"2. I RINSE with a second creaming of lots more Pond's. Then tissue it off. This twice-over leaves my skin shining clean—every little smitch of soil comes right off."

Use Pond's Cold Cream—Marion's way—every night—and for daytime cleanups. See how it helps your skin have that lovely fresh-as-a-flower look. You'll see, too, why so many more women and girls use Pond's than any other face cream at any price. Buy a jar of Pond's Cold Cream today—at any beauty counter. Five popular-priced sizes. The most economical—the lovely big jars.

PRECIOUS LEAVE—Marion and Bert a few hours before he was called back to the officers' training school at Quantico, Virginia. She teased him about that close-cropped Navy haircut—but he had only adoring looks for her soft-smooth Pond's complexion.

Pond's Girls Belong to Cupid

Hurry today to your favorite beauty counter for Pond's soft-smooth Cold Cream—the glamour face cream used by so many lovely engaged girls and by leading society beauties like Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt and Mrs. Vanderhilt Phelps. And Pond's makes for you four other famous beauty aids:

Pond's Vanishing Cream
Pond's lovely new Dry Skin Cream
Pond's new Dreamflower Face Powder (6 shades)
Pond's "LIPS" that stay on longer! (5 shades)

It's no accident so many lovely engaged girls use Pond's Cold Cream!

The Richard Hallidays (Mary Martin) rejoined the gang at Ciro's as soon as baby daughter Mary Heller was old enough to chew her toes. Both gals' hearts belong to daddy Dick.

Newlyweds Mischa and Joyce Auer tuned up life at the Stork Club cocktail party for Dottie Lamour. They're trying their best to forget critics' woeful words following Mischa's stage debut.

(Continued from page 56)

Sat., Feb. 21st: Shot the afternoon at Westmore's, getting a "once-over, not too lightly." Louise Lockridge, the Westmore astrologist, stopped by my booth to say she'd read Anne Shirley's fortune with Egyptian tara cards around Xmas time. She promised Anne 1942 would be her greatest career year because she'd come out from under a dark cloud that's been enveloping her. Well, I don't know that Johnny Payne would relish being called a dark cloud. Anne seems to be through with her marriage, though.

Dancing at the Hollywood-Roosevelt's Blossom Room. Randy Scott and Dotty Lamour at the next table, looking Made For Each Other.

Tues., Feb. 24th: Saw my favorite Hollywoodian . . . Alfred Hitchcock. He's directing Bob Cummings and Pat Lane in "The Saboteur," at Universal. Pat had a pot-bellied gold Buddha pinned to her lapel. She calls it "Alf" because it reminds her of Hitchcock! Hitch brought in a little cotton triangle, the other morning, to keep "Alf" warm.

Passed Diana Barrymore on the lot. She's every inch a member of the Royal Family. Deep-voiced like her Aunt Ethel, loaded with theatrical mannerisms and supposed to be terribly, terribly talented. Understand she was thrown out of fifteen schools in the U. S. and Europe! In New York, she lives with her mother, Michael Strange, the poetess. In Hollywood, she's living with a French companion. She turned down her dad's invite to share his home because it's too far from the studio.

DIDJA KNOW

That Bob Cummings once stooged for Milton Berle under the tag of Blade Conway? . . . That Bruce Cabot has a 14-year-old daughter by his first marriage? Her name is Jennifer . . . That Loretta Young won't be shuttling back and forth between New York and Hollywood anymore? Her husband, Tom Lewis, has been awarded a better-than-ever job in a local advertising agency and will remain here permanently . . . That Mary Lou Cook, one of the Merry Macs, has received word her brother, a Marine, was killed at Wake Island? . . . That Ida Lupino was born during an air-raid on London in 1918? . . . That the town of Mikado, in Michigan, will change its name to Abbott-and-Costelloville if they can get permission from A. and C.?

That as soon as Lana Turner left New York, Artie Shaw took Phyllis Brooks cocktailing at the St. Moritz bar? . . . That all that chatter about a Tommy Dorsey-Lana Turner marriage is a bit premature? Dorsey's wife hasn't finished divorcing him yet . . . That the same holds true for Jean Gabin and any of his dates? There's a Mrs. Gabin in Paris . . . That Laurence Olivier and Leslie Howard sneaked across the Atlantic to Canada, recently, to appear in some scenes for "The Invaders"? . . . That the door knocker on the Deanna Durbin-Vaughn Paul home is engraved "E. (for Edna) and V. Paul"? . . . That Hedy Lamarr has never been happier? She finally got her mother out of Europe and will bring her here to Hollywood as soon as the authorities permit!

SMILIN' THROUGH

What to do! What to do! When she first got to be a famous movie star, Martha Scott was pricked to the quick by rumors that she had gone high-hat. She knew, and her friends knew, that the rumors were unjust. They started when Martha passed several acquaintances on the street without so much as a "how-de-do," and continued because the little Scott is so nearsighted, she could march through a brick wall and not know it till she reached the other side!

Rather than permit the snob legend to grow, Martha, some time ago, adopted a policy of good will toward all. She trained herself to wear a pretty smile in public and soon became known as one of the friendliest girls in town. That's why it's surprising the following incident did not occur sooner.

Martha was in the Brown Derby, last week, waiting for her husband, Carlton Aslop, to join her at lunch. While she waited, she set her usual grin and glanced about. As her eyes made their second circuit of the room, they were caught by a huge, immobile glob, standing several feet away and staring straight at her.

"Good afternoon," said Martha sweetly. "How are you?"

The glob made no answer, but Martha continued to smile and nod in its direction. She was still being her most cordial self when she noticed her husband at her side.

"Honey," he whispered. "Cut it out! Everyone's laughing at you! That's not a man you're saying hello to! It's a big block of ice—with lobsters on it!"

HOUSEWARNING!

John Shelton still doesn't know it, but his wife, Kathryn Grayson, almost left him last week!

Kathryn happened to pluck her telephone out of its cradle the other morning and hear John's voice on a downstairs extension.

"No," John was saying, "Don't call (Continued on page 91)

"See how this Polish protected my nails for 7 days!" Mrs. Jut Kent

MRS. JUT KENT is one of the busy younger set who has lately fallen in love with Cutex . . ."My nails stayed practically perfect for a whole week! I finally changed the polish only because the moons grew out!" Try Cutex Black Red, Gingerbread, Lollipop, Butterscotch, Sugar Plum, Sheer Natural! See if you don't agree that the way its beauty lasts is truly amazing! Only 10¢ (plus tax) in the U.S.!

Northam Warren, New York

Wear CUTEX

APPLY 2 COATS FOR THAT PROFESSIONAL LOOK AND LONGER WEAR

IN THIS OUR LIFE

BY JEAN FRANCIS WEBB AND KAY HARDY

William: "Well, I reckon the check won't be lasting you long."
Stanley: "Oh, there's always more where that came from."

Stanley: "Why don't you admit the truth, Craig? You'll never be over me. Even now you can't help kissing me, can you?"

Peter: "We've got to stop this tormenting each other—both of us."

STORY . . . There wasn't enough to life so that a girl could afford to waste any of it! That was Stanley Timberlake's (Bette Davis) philosophy. Only a few short years, and so much to crowd in them! So much to snatch from Fate!

Since she could remember, she'd been able to twist rich Uncle William (Charles Coburn) 'round her little finger. From babyhood, Stanley had coaxed and bullied men. But she hadn't quite realized, until the eve of her wedding to Craig Fleming (George Brent), that what she really wanted was her sister Roy's (Olivia de Havilland) husband, Peter (Dennis Morgan).

She took him, of course. Only fools and weaklings balked at taking everything they could from life. Roy's cool kisses were the kind her own hot mouth could burn away. Roy's sweetness paled before the throbbing excitement Stanley knew how to arouse in a man. Young Dr. Kingsmill (Dennis Morgan) hadn't a chance, once she decided she had to have him!

They found a small apartment in Baltimore, after that night when they ran out on Craig and Roy and the rest of her unsuspecting family.

A furnished apartment. No personality at all. She was cooped up in it day after day, while Peter puttered at the hospital. His miserable hack job was all he'd been able to find after their elopement.

It was dull, deadly dull. Peter was still Peter, of course; but once she'd grown used to the knowledge of her power over him, that wasn't enough. Stanley was restless. She wanted to be amused.

The day he discovered she'd cashed Uncle William's wedding-gift check for Craig and herself, to buy a marvelous new phonograph, was the first time they quarreled. But Peter couldn't hold out for long against her pouts and wistful arguments.

"Darling! Don't begrudge me a little music to pass the time!"

Word came from home that Roy's divorce had been granted. Stanley and Peter were married next evening, by a Justice of the Peace. They went to a roadhouse called The Shanty to celebrate. Peter hated roadhouses, but Stanley adored them. There was light and noise and color. There was laughter. There was something doing.

Their second battle—much sharper than the first—arose over the girl who sat at the next table and picked them up. Her name was Betty Wilmot (Lee Patrick), and Stanley hailed her as a sister. But Peter detested her. He wanted to go home, only a little after (Continued on page 86)

Stanley: "Well, don't look so serious. I didn't steal the money. . . . Remember Uncle William's check?"
Peter: "Stanley, you didn't cash it?"

Betty (surprised): "Married? I'd never have guessed it. You look too happy."
Peter: "We are. Happy and married."

Roy: "Killed himself! But he wouldn't. Why on earth—"
Craig: "Roy, darling."

Roy: "How's Parry taking it, Minerva—being in prison?"
Minerva: "Reckon he don't care."

Stanley: "Why did it happen? Oh, why did it have to happen to me?"
Roy: "Don't talk about it, Stanley. Try not to think."

So it's Spring again!

By Elizabeth Willguss

The berries reolly appeor good enough to eat!

BUT this one is different. Never before did we gals have to wonder what would be left for us to wear. But now that the first zipper and elastic panic is over and done with, let's find out what we will have and how we will look.

It's in the cards for you to look like spring, but more so. Prettier than ever before, cross our heart. Not pretty-pretty with fancy frills, but fresh, sparkling, healthy pretty.

You want to be just perfection, but there's no extra cash to squander on nonsense. Bright novelty, a thousand times yes. Any accessory that livens a dress or a conversation is all on the credit side. Like the new berry buttons: blackberries, strawberries, right on through the berry family. In luscious colors, they bring a touch of whimsy to suit or dress. There are vegetables and fruits, too, if you want to sprout a garden. Even flowers, like lilacs and rosebuds. The button people stop at nothing. Think of all the lovely, colorful paperweights you've ever seen—no, not the ones which swirl snowflakes when you turn them upside down—but the stationary kind. They, too, are copied into thick, crystal buttons.

B. G. E. originols

Rosemory de Camp wears daggers, doesn't look them.

Phyllis Brooks, siren of U. A.'s "Shanghai Gesture."

If we could stop oh-ing and ah-ing long enough, we might get down to jungle business, meaning the costume jewelry inspired by Alexander Korda's production of "The Jungle Book," starring Sabu. We thought we had seen all the mask heads and all the animal pins in the world, but we were wrong. Pins, earrings, necklaces and bracelets resemble beasts of the jungle and elephant tusks and tiger teeth. The sword pin shown on Rosemary de Camp, starring in the picture, has an ivory tusk top and a caravan of little gold elephants charging down the blade. It looks so expensive it is hard to believe you and I can have one without breaking a bank. The black enamel tom-tom beater pin is good conversation. just like the Susu girl head. Best of all, though, are the elephants. Trunks-up elephants have always been symbols of good luck. These are so decorative we think you, too, will want a collection, starting now. Here's to "The Jungle Book" for inspiring such exciting new jewelry!

How many times have you heard about the magic of white on a dark dress? How it makes the teeth to glisten and the eyes to shine? Still true. Blonde Phyllis Brooks prefers the button-on variety of spic and span smartness.

If you've had a knack for knotting a scarf since way back, you're in the groove, you don't have to learn. Otherwise, take a cue from Shirley Ross (don't call the cops, that's only her husband's mailbox she's pilfering). She wears her spun-rayon challis scarf way back on her pompadour. Sometimes she goes gaucho, sashing her scarf. Now and then she ties one on, true kerchief fashion. Wonderful accessories, these printed challis scarfs, and so inexpensive you can decide on a dozen different color combinations without any qualms.

You've seen what plastics can do for buttons, and now you know that your beloved costume jewelry won't do a fadeout. What about color, though? Well, we've heard this and that about chemicals needed for national defense, but enough will be left in the dye vats to keep us from going around in sackcloth colors. Beige we will wear, yes, gray also. They both complement patent leather. And what a revival for patent; not only black, but cherry. There will be blues for suits from palest pale to deep navy. But five will get you ten that the military red, white and blue combinations of last year will be missing from the Easter parade. Everyone is too busy being patriot to have to spell it out in color. Go overboard for clear pastels. They're in. Your prints will be no namby-pamby stuff, but big and bold. Floppy, brown-eyed susans on gold, or gargantuan white butterflies on raspberry shantung, with blouse prints flowing over into matching hats and bags.

It's Shirley Ross in Republic's "Sailors On Leave."

Encouraging news, all of it. So give to Uncle all the rubber and dyes and metal he needs and know that even so, you won't have to look like something from a slag pile.

(Continued from page 38)

was Infatuation. Her final entry proves it. Here's the plot: for three years, in Paris, the youngster nourished a crush on an American film idol. Imported to Hollywood as an actress by RKO (see her in "Joan of Paris"—but good!), she met her idol at a cocktail party. Her heart "beated so," she confesses, that she didn't dare raise her glass to her lips. 'Fraid she'd spill the champagne! It's all over now—poof! like that. (For the factualists, this material is translated right from Michele's French):

Nov. 19, 1940—My love, you did not disappoint me—unfortunately. Your smile was adorable—your eyes very blue, looked at me a long time . . . well, rather a long time. What do you think of me? What do you think of the idiot who idolized you for three years without knowing you?—who goes on doing it when you are nothing but a man like all the men I met before—a little better looking, that is all.

Should I see you again? I dreamed of you last night . . . in the dream we loved each other. My love for you has been a very pure and true dream because I knew nothing of you but your image,

Put him in the mood

with Swell-tasting

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

Cheer him and charm him with this delicious, refreshing treat — wholesome Wrigley's Spearmint. That clean, tangy flavor is a real smile-getter . . . the way it freshens up your taste.

And the smooth, pleasant chewing of Wrigley's Spearmint seems to give you new pep as it helps relax too-tense nerves. Besides, it helps sweeten your breath and keep your teeth clean for a winning smile.

Make a hit with the men in your life. Always keep plenty of Wrigley's Spearmint Gum handy to offer them. W-78 and everything you gave was the best because you were a symbol—but I have seen you now. I won't be haunted any more by you. I will be free to love whomever I meet because I have found that you are only a man and not a god . . . my love for you will be able to fade because you no longer live in the world of illusion. The moment I met you, you entered the world of realities and I know realities.

The Flavor Lasts

May 2, 1941 (six months later)—All this seems to be silly. How could I even think of him? I did not even know him!

Olivia de Havilland . . .

No one ever completely tabbed the de Havilland-Stewart meanderings. Let's chalk it up to Friendship, and then see how Livvy analyzes it.

Oct. 10, 1939—Dinner with Joan at the Cock 'n' Bull Cafe on the Strip. Yorkshire pudding, very good, and a gorgeous baked apple. Jimmie Stewart was there. Moved his plate around and sat at another side of his table, the better to see us, m'dear. Joan and I got to giggling. It was awful!

Nov. 7, 1939—One of the writers had a "what he thinks and a what she thinks" idea for a magazine article, and he asked J. Stewart to do it. I am told that J. S. said he would "if Olivia de Havilland did the woman's half." So we meet. Heavens! I didn't know he was so tall! I walked into Publicity with my eyes fixed at half-mast, my right hand outstretched in normal position for a normal handshake, and all I see are legs—two endlessly long legs. My gaze travelled up—up—up—and at last I came to the Stewart face. He seems to be the sort of man who could be an awfully good friend. Positively nothing more. We do hit it off awfully well.

Jan. 10, 1940—On the New York merry-go-round and having a lot of fun with J. S. All the columnists and editors here are agog over our "secret marriage." Silly, isn't it? We haven't said a thing. If they go off the deep end with marriage predictions, it's not our fault. The "Gone—" premiere was tremendous. Never knew what it could mean to be a part of a really great film.

June 16, 1940—Been taking a self-inventory. X and XX have proposed. I don't think X loves me. I know I don't love him. But he says he is willing to marry me because of my charm, wit, ad infinitum, and take a chance on falling in love with me later. Funny slant. XX . . . NO!!

I have decided ideas on matrimony. Take J.S., for instance. Not that marriage was thought of by either of us, but I have a deep-down feeling that if we had tried it, it never would have worked. We are too much alike, for one thing. Our ambitions, for example. Precisely alike. We both want theatrical fame. We both play the same kind of parts in the same sort of dramas; and get the same amount of money a week for doing it. We both live in small houses. We both drive the same make of car!!! This is a laugh, of course. Marriage would be deadly! It would be like being married to one's twin—psychological twin. Opposites make the best mates. At least that's what I think as of this date.

Eleanor Powell . . .

And then there are Career Women . . . Eleanor Powell, for example, who creates all her own routines, like Fred Astaire. Did you know that? We didn't.

June 13, 1941—To Earl Carroll's with Merrill. Saw a wonderful floor show routine—man with a little dog. Gave me an idea. Stimulating . . . I can't get to sleep now. Why not do a dancing dog number? I wish I could see sunset as a sunset, instead of seeing it as the germ of a dance idea, with girls marching out of it! I can't even relax and see a night club floor show, listen to the tea kettle humming on the stove, without thinking "wonder if I could use that for a routine?"

Last night I dreamed I had frozen. Would never dance again. Must take an extra Vitamin today, or something. Can't have those old dreams cropping up to haunt me. Haven't dreamed like this for months. A dancing dog . . . how could I train it? How could I find the right dog? I can see him walking between my feet as I tap out the rhythm . . . but that "Lady Be Good" music is so tricky. Could I do it? How long would it take to train the dog? I've got those other routines to work out, too. Might try a French poodle. Understand they're smart. Cute, too, and sassy-looking. Add to the glamour—

Oh, dear Lord, to be a character dancer! Then I wouldn't have to worry about Glamour. Ellie, you've got to get some sleep. Good-night.

June Havoc . . .

Continuing the anguish of Career Women—June Havoc, Gypsy Rose Lee's li'l' sis and a Broadway product:

Sept. 10, 1940—Well, Junie, it looks like a Red Letter Day in your life, and no fooling. For posterity's sake, let's write it down: Up to two weeks ago Junie is playing Chrystal, the subsidized mouse in "The Women." Chrystal is the one who gets the husband away from the heroine, and her biggest scene comes when she takes a foam bath right out in front of the customers. Funny thing about bathtubs and Junie. The scene should have made her, for she does her best emoting in her own bathtub (always goes there for a good cry), but—no. They said the Havoc didn't have enough sex. And Junie the Gyp's own sister. So Junie is out.

Then comes a try-out, this morning, for "Pal Joey," the George Abbott musical, music by Rodgers and Hart, swell book by John O'Hara, and Junie is told to sing five songs in ten minutes and to "sing 'em straight." What chance for the old personality stuff? Junie thinks she is a floppo there, too. Lower than a double chin, she drags herself to Walgreen's basement (the Walgreen Green Room for Out-of-Work and Discouraged Actors) and orders herself a slug of milk, sipping it slowly while she works up a good cry. Then she dashes for home and la bain (French), turning on the bath water, jumping out of her clothes and into the tub, letting the streaming tears mingle with the steaming suds.

The 'phone rings. "To heck with it," weeps Havoc, the tears falling into her bath water. It keeps on ringing. Her "little people" start fussing. Grumpy the dog barks. Pousse-Cafe the cat meows

BE A MODERN SCREEN REPORTER!

Have you ever had any personal contact with any of the stars? Write us about it, and for every amusing story that we publish we'll send you ONE DOLLAR! AND you'll see your own name IN PRINT below your story! For complete details of the contest, turn to page 90.

Your Hands ARE ALWAYS OUT IN FRONT!

At the office, at home, in your daily social life your hands tell an important story of your personal pride. Don't allow them to become harsh and rough.

Chamberlain's Lotion — clear, golden, quick drying — will help you to keep your skin soft, smooth, lovely. Use it often, on hands, arms, legs to help soothe and smooth chapping and windburn.

Buy it at all Toilet Goods Counters

Chamberlain's LOTION

★ ROSEMARY LANE ★

Hollywood star, now appearing on Broadway in the George Abbott musical success "Best Foot Forward"

Canaries

A HOLLYWOOD HOBBY YOU SHOULD ENJOY!

The stars of Hollywood have taken canaries into their hearts and their homes. Wherever the great of filmdom gather, you are likely to hear some golden-voiced canary lifting spirits afresh with the enchantment of his song.

And you, too, should know the joy one of these perky little pets can bring. A canary takes but little care—and keeps hearts buoyant amid the worries of these trying times.

Send for beautifully illustrated 76-page book on Canaries. It's the book the movie stars use—and it's FREE! Just mail your name and address, on a penny postcard, to THE R. T. FRENCH COMPANY, 2473 Mustard St., Rochester, New York.

In Hollywood
FRENCH'S BIRD SEED
is the Favorite . . . 4 to 1

Keep your canary happy, healthy and singing. FRENCH'S air-washed Bird Seed (with its diet-balancing Bird Biscuit included FREE) supplies 11 proved aids to song and health. Today—and every day—feed your canary FRENCH'S . . . the largest selling bird seed in the U. S.

because Grumpy barks, Lizzie-Love the goat and Caca the rooster make a clatter. Only Muscovi the duck maintains a dignified silence. Junie scrambles out of the tub. She tries to keep the weeps out of her voice: "Hel-lo."

"Is Miss Havoc there?" comes a john's voice. "This is Miss Havoc." "Oh, June, this is George Abbott. Just wanted to tell you that we think you're great for the 'Pal Joey' part." Fan me with a feather! The Havoc's strictly in!

Alexis Smith . . .

More Career Girl, and Warner Brothers' pride and joy, Alexis Smith:

Week of January 5, 1942—Everything happened at once this week. Got the role of Florence in "Constant Nymph," opposite Charles Boyer, with Joan Fontaine, too, and the papers broke a sort of "preliminary engagement" story on Craig and me. Nothing definite, but a sort of claim-filing thing. Nice break. I don't see how they found space with all the war news.

Dad is more excited than I am about the "Nymph." Gets to buzzing around, shouting in his enthusiasm, and then tells me not to get excited! You should see my friends' faces—especially the women—when I announce that I am to play Charles Boyer's wife. They simply go crazy! "May I touch you?" they ask.

Everything's been hanging fire for two months. Took tests of five different scenes. Goulding's wonderful. He shows you just how it should be done, and does it so skillfully that you wish he were you, instead of the director, and could play the scene. Sounds complicated, doesn't it? But you know what I mean. It was all news to me—and a pleasant shock!—that I had Florence. Alex Evelov first told me when I went into his publicity office. Don't they ever tell me anything around the studio?

"How do you feel about 'Constant Nymph'?" he asked. Well, how did I feel? I'd been eating, sleeping, waking, walking, dancing it for months. How does one feel? "Don't you know?" he continued. "You've got it." Jeepers, Smith is Florence. How do I feel? You try and tell. I defy you to be coherent.

About Craig—It's good to have our positions clarified. Both of us are new to this Hollywood routine. We could have listened to studio "suggestions" (sometimes they look more like ultimatums) and hitched our personal lives to prominent stars. That's been done so much. And we both hate it. Going places with the "right people" to be "seen." I don't think any career ever really profited by it. I don't mind doing anything—anything that's within reason—to further my career, but my private life is my own. I balk at messing that up. That's the way Craig feels, too. This way it's a "strawberry milk shake, very thick, for two," and real fun.

You're a very lucky girl, Margaret Alexis Fitzsimmons Smith. I suppose you know it?

Veronica Lake . . .

If it's Love you avid diary-readers are after, there's Veronica Lake:

April 25, 1940—Corsage mystery solved. The young man who 'phoned Mother yesterday and begged us to lunch with him at Metro today is the man. He bounced the paper clip onto my head from the Cutting Room bridge the day I wore his gardenias. Only I didn't know they were his. I gave him a frigid glare. His name is John Detlie, art director at M-G-M. He marvels at my stoicism. Been rushing to the commissary every noon hoping to meet a friend who knew both of us. This since the beginning of "Forty Little Mothers." Very annoyed when I kept my nose in a book and never even looked at him. Nor at Taylor or Gable! Confessed that he took to haunting our apartment building, cruising up and down our street, thinking that he might see me. Persistent. Mother is a darling; such completely modern ideas. Doesn't see why I shouldn't see him more often. Mr. Cantor thought I did a scene well today. Maybe the name Constance Keane will mean something some day.

Oct. 1, 1940—Said "yes" to John. He's been asking me every day for six months. Practically erosion—he's worn my resistance down. No difficulty with Mother and Dad; particularly Mother. Reminded her she sponsored our meeting. Very stern about it. She laughed. I think she thoroughly approves. And so does Dad, although he says he can't picture his "Scotch-and-Soda" battling the responsibilities of marriage. I can.

John and I had a long talk. "No children" for a while. Not until we see how this crazy world readjusts itself. How can one be sure of giving babies the security and peace and beauty they deserve?—at least the way things are now. Woman, you are getting morbid! I suppose every girl gets dithery on the eve of her marriage. Why should I be an exception? I think we shall make a quiet trip to Santa Ana on the third and be married, keeping it a secret; using my own name and no mention of Veronica Lake. Perhaps I should wait. New careers are so chancy. But I can't. I knew that when Mr. Hornblow told me I would be going to San Antonio for "I Wanted Wings." I couldn't leave John. Perhaps, God willing, I will have career and John. I hope so. I love him very much. I think it's because he likes to whip away his blues on the roller-coaster at Venice! So do I.

Lucille Ball . . .

And then there is Lucille Ball, now very happily Mrs. Desi Arnaz. Hers is a line-a-day account, except for the final entry, and no wonder.

Sept. 26, 1940—Wire from Desi, says he misses me. Maybe I can see him when I go East in December.

Oct. 1, 1940—Wire from Desi, will arrive tomorrow.

Oct. 2, 1940—Desi here. Looks a little thin. Mother is having us for dinner tonight, and then we are all going to Ciro's to celebrate his arrival.

(Continued on page 68)

DO YOU KNOW THAT

"That Chinese tenement" is the name John Barrymore gives to the joint he used to call home. He auctioned off this five-acre section of California for a flat $448,000, including its two houses and three swimming pools. In one of these glorified water holes Jawn kept and fed, for two years, a school of rainbow trout. Off on the side he built a bowling green, a skeet range, a bird reservation and 2 garden houses. The place had a lavish wine cellar and quarters for 12 servants. The Great Profile imported a sun-and-moon dial from England for a tidy $15,000, and an elegant chandelier from an Austrian archduke for $8500. The Barrymore bar was one which John had shipped in from Alaska "for sentimental reasons."

—Look Magazine

"Want to be Attractive? Then make Daintiness SURE"
LUX TOILET SOAP
IDA LUPINO
LUX TOILET SOAP
9 out of 10 Screen Stars use Lux Toilet Soap

THIS lovely young screen star gives you a tip women everywhere are following:

"A daily Lux Soap beauty bath," she says, "makes you sure of skin that's sweet!"

You'll love the way ACTIVE lather gently caresses the skin, then swiftly carries away every trace of dust and dirt. You'll love the delicate fragrance this smooth white soap leaves on your skin. Try it and see!

"Start right!" Every time you put on fresh make-up, try this modern way to make it "stay-put." Start with MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP, the perfectly blended powder-and-powder-base in one. It's non-greasy . . . goes on smoothly . . . hides complexion lines and blemishes . . . banishes nose shine.

Dazzle the stag-line, too! Use it on back, shoulders and arms for evening wear.

Takes less than a minute to apply, yet keeps your skin fresh, radiant and velvety smooth. Stays on for hours, eliminating frequent re-powdering.

Use MINER'S LIQUID MAKE-UP as a powder base or complete make-up . . . and thrill to the greater loveliness this "new way to all-day face glamour" gives you, in one of its 5 flattering shades.

More women use MINER'S than any other LIQUID MAKE-UP! Buy it!..Try it!..You'll love it!

MINER'S Liquid MAKE-UP

50¢, 25¢ and 10¢ everywhere

FREE Generous Sample

© Send Coupon and 3¢ Stamp

MINER'S, 12 E. 12th St., Dept. MS4, New York, N.Y. I enclose 3c stamp to cover mailing cost. Send me generous sample of Miner's Liquid Make-Up FREE!

Name_____

Address_____

Peach ☐ Rachelle ☐ Brunette ☐ Suntan ☐ Hawaiian ☐

(Continued from page 66)

Oct. 15, 1940—Desi left tonight for rehearsals in New York. May see him when I go East next month.

Oct. 30, 1940—Hallowe'en. Went to party and found when I got home that Desi had been calling me all evening from New York.

Nov. 22, 1940—Leave next week for Milwaukee Sentinel Feminine Fair. Eddie Stevenson made me a lovely dress all white and glitter, almost like a bride. Then on to New York and a radio show.

Nov. 27, 1940—Show a great success and lots of fun, met lots of people and hope I can come back here again. Off to New York in the morning.

Nov. 29, 1940—Spent yesterday and most of today with interviews and having pictures taken. Desi met me at the plane. He looks wonderful. He is a terrific success in his personal appearances. He comes over to the hotel between performances to see me. Went to Twenty-One with him last night after show. He looks wonderful, or did I say that before.

Nov. 30, 1940—Found I had a surprise breakfast date with Desi at the Byram Beagle Club. It turned out to be the most important day of my life. We dashed over to Greenwich, Conn., and were married by Justice of the Peace John J. O'Brien. They waived the 5-day law for us, and Milt Bender and Deke Magaziner stood by with smelling salts while he said the fatal words. I can't think that it is anything but the Most Wonderful Day in My Life. We decided so suddenly that we couldn't even give coherent answers to reporters when they asked where we were to honeymoon. "Havana," we both blurted, then Desi said, "by boat," and I mumbled, "by 'plane," and then we laughed like mad. It's marvelous to be mad like this—and married! One of the reporters asked if it was "love at first sight?" "No," I told him, "it took me all of five minutes to fall in love with him!" I hope it takes me five hundred years to fall out of love with him. Fingers crossed!

Bruce Bennett . . .

The male diarists, bless their hearts, are virile in their recordings. Here's an account by Bruce Bennett (né Herman Brix of Olymvics fame):

Aug. 6, 1928— Talked myself out of the championship today. Can't say I'm sorry because we saved the title for America, but I sure could kick myself, just the same. Johnny Kuck got the shotput title at 52′ ¾″, which is pretty good putting. My record was 51′ 8¾″ in the preliminaries, but old Johnny certainly put the stuff into it when he got into action.

Funny thing about the kid. He's from the tall wheat country in Kansas. Regular country kid. The crowds, bands, excitement of an Olympic meet in a faraway city like Amsterdam, in Europe, threw him off-base. He got hollow inside and scared. So I said to him, "Stretch out on the grass, Johnny, and imagine you're back in Kansas . . . waving wheat, hot sun, birds calling to each other. You're right back in Kansas, see, and all this stuff isn't going to throw you." I sat with him, giving him the old pep-eroo talk. Yeah, I did. Talked myself right out of the title, because Johnny gets up like young Johnny Appleseed himself and puts that shotput where it has never been before.

Sure, I placed—second. Emil Herschfelt, the German entry, was third with 51′ 6″. He looked awfully good in the preliminaries. Had me scared. Well, the big thing is that we kept the shotput title in America. The government's representative with the team, Lieut.-Gen. Douglas MacArthur, is plenty pleased. Party tonight after the winnings. Great town, this Amsterdam. Great people, the Dutch.

John Garfield . . .

And John Garfield sounds off this way:

Oct. 29, 1939–Went to a performance of the Chinese Theatre on this trip to Frisco. But never again will I take any dames. Robby and Gladys went along, and I just get interested in the pantomime of one of the characters—it's really marvelous the way they put the shows on; no scenery, just a bare stage with a little guy who sits in a chair on the stage and sing-songs a description of what is supposed to be the stage setting —anyway, I just get into the groove and think, "Here's something good," and Robby says she wants some coffee. Coffee! In a tea house. Geeze! So I get the coffee for the two dames and start getting back the feel of this drama, and it has a lot of kick to it, and the dames want to go. They've had enough. I know it's no use. They've got one of those junk curio shops on the brain, and the Chinese Theatre is the nuts to them, so we go. Next time, I promise myself, no dames!

Roddy McDowall . . .

A small English lad looks at Hollywood, Miss Davis and the world. Excerpts from the honest-to-goodness diary of Master Roddy McDowall, the Huw of "How Green Was My Valley" and a great admirer (need we say?) of Bette Davis:

Dec. 7, 1941—Went to 10:00 mass. Got flowers. Home. Breakfast. Mable came. Apparently the Japanese bombed the Philippines and Hawaiian Islands. I think there is going to be fireworks somewhere. Messed around. Built my bar. At two o'clock this afternoon Japan declared war on America and ten minutes later on England. Neither America nor England has declared war yet. Then we went and saw Errol Flynn in "For Richer, For Richer," a broadcast and met him. He is very kind. (George took us.) He is very kind. Lay down. Listened to the radio. . . . On Dec. 4 Roddy goes out to dinner and meets intrigue: Out to Mary Height's for dinner. We met some people there—5 of them. One a little girl of 14 called Adina. We think she is very nice. In the night Virginia was very sick, and I had a very bad tooth ache. Mummy was up most of the night. . . . A flashback to Oct. 4 when Roddy attends the Ice

I SAW IT HAPPEN

When Martha Raye was in mid-act during a personal appearince in Milwaukee, she stepped gracefully toward the baby grand to nonchalantly snatch her bonnet when—kerplunk! she slipped and plopped, right on the stage. For several seconds, she sat stunned, speechless, motionless, facing a deadly-silent audience with every eye glued to her. Suddenly she began to laugh. She howled and howled, until the audience, taking its cue from her, laughed and howled, too. Martha picked herself up, brushed herself off and went on with the show. From then on all Milwaukee really loved her.

Viola Pivorski,
Milwaukee, Wis.

Follies and sees a star: At 7:15 we left the house and went to the Pan-Pacific Auditorium to see the Ice Follies of 1942. We had rink seats. The skating was marvelous. The whole show was marvelous. Shirley Temple was there. Home. Bed. Finis . . . Momentous entry on Dec. 6: About 1:00 or 1:30 Bette Davis' maid phoned me up and said that if I phoned up on the 15th Dec. she would see about lunch with her. Nice, huh? . . . And on Dec. 12—wheeee!: . . . we went to the Shrine Auditorium. Just as we got out the car Bette Davis was there and she was very, very, very, very, very nice to me . . .

Lon Chaney, Jr. . . .

The talented son of a great actor-father, Lon Chaney, indulges in jottings:

Friday, Dec. 19, 1941—Up at 3:30 again. (That's a.m.) Wonder if the Fourth Interceptor Command knows what it's done to me? Possibility of blackouts puts studios on 8 to 5 daily schedule. No more night work. Oh, no? Takes Jack Pierce four hours to put the Frankenstein Monster make-up on me. So up at 3:30, report to Jack at 4. Result: daily one-man mental blackout. Oh, well. Can turn back these pages about ten years and find that one Chaney, Jr., was boiler-maker by day and pumped gas at night. This beats that. To set at 8. Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lionel Atwill already rehearsing. What chance has a mere Monster got with talent like that? Everything as usual until late morning. Feel a fiery burning in my forehead. Jack uses sponge rubber make-up to build up forehead and frontal bones over the eyes. When it's on, it's really on. No chance to check and see what's cooking up there. Feels like it's me that's cooking, all right. Really painful during afternoon. But the director says he'll finish with me early. 4 o'clock is "early," he says. That makes a 12-hour day on my clock. Back to make-up department. Jack removes make-up with acetone, which doesn't help either. Finds lovely mass of blisters all over forehead. Rushes me to Dr. Woods, skin specialist. What good is that, I wonder? Doesn't seem to be any skin left. Anyway, Doctor says I am allergic to sponge rubber. Hurried consultations with studio doctors. Decide to insert layer of oil silk between skin and rubber make-up. Hope it works. Wish Dad had kept a diary. Remember that he suffered agonies while making some of those pictures, and we never heard about it at home. Like to know how he felt about it himself. Funny that they called him the man with a thousand faces. Can only remember one —the one with the smile. If he could take it like that, guess I can, too. Hope so, anyway.

Bette Davis . . .

Even Queen Bette succumbs to the diary fad. Calls her's her Little Black Book. Friends like to speculate on its "secrets." Nothing secretive, really; most revealing. Shows her to be a slavish perfectionist. This is to be seen in all her dramatic work, of course. In private life the sight of dry leaves sprawling over the greensward, drives her to distraction. Thus the entry: tell gardener to keep leaves off grounds—watch the pool. He had to skim the swimming pool that time.

A standard family story is of La Davis, aged two, refusing to go "bye-bye" because her best batiste dress had a wrinkle in it. She didn't budge until the garment was changed. At seven years she was taken to see a circus. "Before the elephants performed, a rug was laid for

ARE YOU SURE OF YOUR PRESENT PERSPIRATION-CHECK? TEST IT! PUT IT UNDER THIS ARM.
PUT FRESH #2, THE NEW PERSPIRATION-CHECK, UNDER THIS ARM. SEE WHICH STOPS PERSPIRATION BETTER.

Gown by Milgrim, New York

Use FRESH #2 and stay fresher!

PUT FRESH #2 under one arm—put your present non-perspirant under the other. And then . . .

1. See which one checks perspiration better. We think FRESH #2 will.
2. See which one prevents perspiration odor better. We are confident you'll find FRESH #2 will give you a feeling of complete under-arm security.
3. See how gentle FRESH #2 is—how pleasant to use. This easy-spreading vanishing cream is not greasy—not gritty—and not sticky.
4. See how convenient FRESH #2 is to apply. You can use it immediately before dressing—no waiting for it to dry.
5. And revel in the knowledge, as you use FRESH #2, that it will not rot even the most delicate fabric. Laboratory tests prove this.

FRESH #2 comes in three sizes—50¢ for extra-large jar; 25¢ for generous medium jar; and 10¢ for handy travel size.

Make your own test. Once you make this under-arm test, we're sure you'll never be satisfied with any other perspiration-check. If you don't agree that FRESH #2 is the best under-arm cream you've ever used, the test will cost you nothing because your dealer will be glad to refund your purchase price upon request. FRESH, Louisville, Ky.

REPLACEMENT OR REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Companion of FRESH #2 is FRESH #1. FRESH #1 deodorizes, but does not stop perspiration. In a tube instead of a jar. Popular with men, too.

Betty Grable, starring in the forthcoming 20th Century-Fox Technicolor picture, "Song of the Islands," with make-up by Westmore. She says: "I use Westmore Foundation Cream, and it's really wonderful!"

It's Easy to Look "STAR-LOVELY" with WESTMORE FOUNDATION CREAM

- Created by the famous Westmores, Hollywood's Make-up Masters.
- Used by leading stars for real life as well as "reel life."
- Gives your face a smooth, even, glowing tone... covers little blemishes, tired shadows... and it's non-drying!
- In six skin-tinted shades, with Face Powder to blend. Also, vital-tone lipstick, rouge (cream and cake), skin-freshener, cleansing cream, dry skin cream, eye-shadow and mascara.

Large economy size, 50¢
Smaller sizes at variety stores

House of WESTMORE Inc. HOLLYWOOD

them to dance on," she tells. "The rug was crooked, and the rest of the show was ruined for me!"

A frequent entry is "cash checks." She usually forgets to cash her pin money checks—$25.00 a week allowed by her business manager. Chances are the checks will be found lovingly curled about a bottle of nail enamel or entwined with a hand-tucked nightie. Davis cares little for money; more for what it can buy. Example: Hunky brace. of carnelians on Rodeo Drive or Call Hollywood Bookstore for "Insanity Fair." Means she wants to buy a ducky bracelet she saw, and that a house guest from Washington, D. C., has recommended a book to her.

Note the injunction to send picture to Jennie Gray, 56 Audubon St., Augusta, Me. Scrupulous sincerity. That marks Diarist B. Davis.

Barbara Stanwyck . . .

Here's Barbara Stanwyck with a Most Embarrassing:

Feb. 3, 1929—My first Hollywood party. What a flop! I was so excited to be invited—a swell shindig tossed by my agent. I steamed up in my grandest clothes—short beaded chiffon dress with ostrich feathers on the shoulder, and satin pumps with enormous rhinestone buckles. I arrived. And found all the guests wearing everything from sports scarves to tennis shorts. It certainly was an initiation to informal Hollywood. I'll never forget it. Never again will I get dressed up like that.

Jinx Falkenburg . . .

And a heart-throb from Columbia's Jinx Falkenburg:

March 28, 1939— Dr. Wynn here this morning. Said I may leave the hospital in ten weeks! And then he's not sure whether it will be on my own two feet or in a wheelchair. And this trip to Hawaii was to be a pleasure trip. Ye gods! "Multiple contusions" is the diagnosis (I'm black from head to foot—bruises), and something bafflingly wrong with my spine. The family mustn't know; not yet, anyway. Time enough when the worst is over.

I wrote a long letter to mother this morning telling her all about the lovely party on Vincent Astor's yacht "Nourmahal" that I didn't attend. Fancy an invitation like that and then falling 38 feet through what I thought was solid concrete and wasn't, just to wave goodnight to some supper guests. And not being able to go to the party. Maybe not being able, ever, to go to any more parties and to dance, swim—play tennis. I don't dare let myself think!

Dickie called from the mainland last night. Such a silly sweet thing to do. I hardly know him. One dinner date, that's all, the night I sailed off on this first trip to Honolulu. I wouldn't tell him about my injury at first. I've kept it out of the papers so that the family would not be worried. Mother'd fly right over, I know. But when he asked "What are you doing out there?" I sniffed like a baby. And told him everything. He promised not to tell Mother and Dad, and then called me back a half an hour later and talked for almost an hour. Said he'd called Mother in the meantime and told her I was fine.

Outside the sunlight is hot and sweet, and a little nurse, firm-fleshed and brown as a berry, brought me a lei of ginger flowers. I want to go out and swim in that blue, blue water—and play tennis!

BEST FACE FORWARD

(Continued from page 50)

pick up masks or packs that pep up tired skin so quickly. Spread the preparation on evenly, according to directions, and lie down and relax long enough for it to dry. When you remove it, you'll be amazed how radiant and smooth your face will be. If your face is inclined to be dry, smooth on a little tissue cream and let it remain a minute or two. Then, remove it with cleansing tissue saturated with skin freshener.

If you have a half hour or more to coddle your complexion, treat it to a facial massage. In addition to softening skin, it will help to tone up and firm lazy facial muscles. Immediately after cleansing, apply your richest lubricating cream in gentle molding movements. Use the pads of your fingers, tapping gently but firmly, always working upward for beauty. You can use also gentle smoothing movements if you like, but be careful never to rub or stretch delicate skin.

Begin at the base of your neck and work upward to your ears. Then, from the base of your neck, smooth or tap to a point beneath your chin. Next, pat under your chin (using the backs of your hands this time for convenience). Again, with the pads of your fingers, work from your chin outward along the jawline to your ears. Then, from the chin upward around your mouth to your nostrils, smoothing out parenthesis lines that may have formed. Begin beneath your nose and following the under curve of your cheekbone, pat toward your ears. Then, using your lubricating cream or a special eye cream, tap first above, then below your eyes, working from the inner corners outward. Last, smooth out forehead lines by pressing and lifting fingers, beginning between brows and working upward and outward. Finish off by rotating a few times across your brow.

Any type of facial is more effective if you couple it with complete relaxation—so leave this rich soothing cream on your face while you lie down in a darkened room until it's time to don your festive clothes. If your eyes are tired from the strain of the day, place little pads moistened with skin freshener or eye lotion over them while you rest. It will add immeasurably to their comfort and sparkle. Set your alarm clock, so that you can drift off to sleep if you like.

rise and shine . . .

When you are ready to rise and shine for the evening of fun, remove all excess cream with cotton or cleansing tissue, moistened with skin freshener. Your face will be velvety smooth and radiantly alive with fresh youthful color—a fitting background for subtle make-up. Next, blend in your foundation to match your skin tone skilfully. Even if your skin is inclined to be dry, your complexion will remain dewy fresh and soft if you use a rich lotion or a thick creamy type foundation. Apply a dab first to your nose, chin, forehead and cheeks, then blend it smoothly over your skin. Don't forget your neck and the back of your ears, if you want to be all the same complexion color scheme. If your skin is oily, it will take on a most natural finish with either a liquid, cake or vanishing type of base. A normal skin wears any kind of base successfully. Next comes rouge, lipstick, eye make-up and those other adornments that, like Cinderella's godmother, transform you from a hard-working girl into an ultra-glamorous evening beauty.

These quick, easy-to-do facials we've just described are not only good skin pepper-uppers for special occasions, but they are ace complexion beautifiers at any time. These busy weeks when we spend so much time at our jobs—whether at the office or shop, at home or doing volunteer work—we are constantly under nerve strain, and as a consequence complexions lose tone, giving facial muscles a chance to become loose and flaccid. So instead of waiting until unattractive lines begin to appear, keep your complexion invigorated by a simple facial weekly.

If your skin is oily or at all dull and sallow—give it extra toning with a special circulation cream or mask, applying it just after cleansing. Smooth it on evenly and leave it on only as long as the directions suggest. If your face is at all inclined toward dryness, apply a rich lubricating cream immediately afterwards. However, if your skin is delicate or thin or has any broken capillaries, avoid a highly stimulating facial of this type.

Skins that are marred by surface blemishes, such as blackheads, will benefit by a stimulating mask or cream that combines cleansing qualities as well. These cleansers, sometimes called pore masks or creams—penetrate clogged pores and help remove minute imperfections of dirt and dead tissue. Since they also help to contract enlarged pores, they are excellent for oily as well as muddy complexions. Always apply these and leave them on according to directions. And remember, their effectiveness depends on applying them to skin that is scrupulously clean at the start.

Using fresh, clean puffs in applying powder and the like is important in maintaining skin health and beauty. Since they're so inexpensive, why not keep a supply handy so you'll never be tempted to use one that's less than immaculately clean.

Putting your best face forward, girls, doesn't mean neglecting your skin on Tuesday and Wednesday and give it all-out attention on Friday, Saturday and those other date-nights. Give it faithful everyday protection and stimulation—and it will respond quickly to quick facial pick-ups and make-up magic those times when it's important to look your most glamorous.

Is your complexion too dry? Then, better give it extra lubrication if you want it to remain youthful and lineless. Why not make it a point to apply House of Westmore Dry Skin Cream after thoroughly cleansing your face. It's fluffy rich with oils and soothing and will help keep your skin smooth and velvety. Leave it on overnight and see how soft and lovely your complexion will be next morning.

Kleenex tissues have so many tricky uses, you never know where the family supply is apt to be. So why don't you smart girls, who need cleansing tissues for complexion care, play safe and hide an extra box of Kleenex for your own use in your dressing table drawer. Then keep another box on the kitchen or bathroom shelf for the rest of the family to dip into whenever they need one.

If you are looking for an Easter gift for a friend or a treat for yourself, you will stop searching when you catch a whiff of Irresistible Perfume and see it in its new Easter box. The fragrance is like spring. It goes with the flowers, the fashions, and the romance of the light-hearted season. A touch of Irresistible will make you feel as exciting as does your new spring bonnet.

RICH IN DEXTROSE
HI HO!...HI HO!
TO SPREAD THE NEWS I GO!
Before you're "batter-up"—Big Boy—remember BABY RUTH, the Big League candy bar that packs a wallop in both flavor and food energy.
Help keep your pep up—and you help keep your score down. BABY RUTH will aid a lot the last nine holes!
'Morning, busy mother. How about this BABY RUTH—makes your work a pleasure—helps ward off fatigue!
Five little princesses—all in a row. BABY RUTH is the first and only candy ever given to the famous Quintuplets.
World Copr. 1942 King Features Syndicate
CURTISS
Baby Ruth
5¢
CANDY
RICH IN DEXTROSE
Look for me (N. R. G.) On every wrapper!
DR. ALLAN ROY DAFOE SAYS: "Baby Ruth, being rich in Dextrose, vital food-energy sugar, and other palatable ingredients, makes a pleasant, wholesome candy for children."

Let's dine out with the STARS and here's a meal à la Murphy

Marjorie Woodwarth and Richard Denning, with obvious enjoyment, learn from an authority that intricate art of eating broiled lobster

• The grrrand old name of Murphy has long been associated with songs and stories of the Emerald Isle; but in Hollywood, sure and it's better known as the name of the genial proprietor of the House of Murphy. This famous dining spot is the top favorite with such hale and hearty stars as Edward Arnold, Jack Oakie and Edgar Bergen—all lovers of fine food in the generous, old-time tradition and not in the least bit afraid of giving free rein to their healthy appetites.

On the night we dropped in, the place was thronged with Hollywood notables, all intent upon good food and gay conversation. We joined a group at a table in the corner of the Jiggs room where Bob himself, acting as master of ceremonies, was delivering a lecture to Marjorie Woodward and Richard Denning on the gentle art of extracting the last toothsome morsel from a broiled lobster.

After the subject of lobsters had been exhausted Bob started on some of his famous reminiscences. His has been a colorful career. He used to be in charge of all the Fred Harvey kitchens, but deserted that famous chain to tour in vaudeville. Here he spent so much of his time cooking special dishes for his pals that he found it difficult to get to the theater on time! So, he gave up vaudeville as a bad financial venture and came out to Hollywood.

When he opened the House of Murphy, four years ago, it had a capacity of thirty-two. Now, four years later, it has grown so that it has several rooms and holds as many as two hundred and fifty people. It has dark panelled walls and red printed tablecloths on the tables. There are strips of "Jiggs and Maggie" cartoons around the wall of the Jiggs room, named in honor of the famous cartoonist, George McManus, who has been a friend of Bob's for over thirty years. Over the entrance to this room is a sign reading: "Dedicated to George McManus, whose intake of Corned Beef and Cabbage is equalled only by his output of cartoons. Selah."

Bob's personality is probably one of the reasons for the popularity of his restaurant—he's extremely informal, a grand teller of stories and has a booming laugh that makes his guests feel happy, too. Great names do not impress him, and if people come to Murphy's solely with the idea of creating a big impression, they're apt to find that their host has no time for anyone except those who have a true appreciation of fine food.

Among the most regular of his patrons are Bill Fields and George McManus, who have been holding a Corned Beef and Cabbage derby. They're now tied for the record. Each has eaten thirty orders in thirty days! Edgar Bergen says that Murphy's is the only place where he can get real Fiskaballa (Swedish Beef Balls in Cream). Mary Astor is a regular patron and usually orders Prime Ribs of Beef. Ann Sheridan loves the Murphy Chicken, and Alice Faye actually insists on having steaks that have been cooked with garlic!

But the secret we wanted most to pry out of Bob was just why that plebeian dish, Corned Beef and Cabbage, is the gustatory delight of all the men stars—and even of some of the glamour girls—of this sophisticated cinema city. According to Bob it's all in the choice of a good piece of well-corned beef, proper seasoning and long, slow cooking. Here's how they go about it at the House of Murphy—it takes time but the results are wonderful!

By Helen Holmes

'Tis himself—the jolly host of the House of Murphy, famed for his wit and "Irish turkey."

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE

METHOD: Place brisket of corned beef in cold water and very slowly bring to boiling point. Allow to simmer for 30 minutes to 1 hour, in which time excess salt should be removed. Drain off water and rinse very well. Entirely submerge again in cold water in which have been placed celery tops, a carrot, an onion, a cabbage heart, 2 peppercorns and 1 garlic bud. Let this simmer slowly, never reaching an actual boil, until done—which should be in about 3 to 4 hours. Remove corned beef and strain stock. Quarter cabbage, place in pot and pour over it the strained stock. Boil 25 minutes or until cabbage is tender. For each portion, serve one quarter of cabbage and three or four slices of corned beef. (With mustard, of course!) Delicious with boiled onions and potatoes.

Another Murphy specialty is crisp salad de Cicco, mixed by the waiter at the table practically under your nose, so that you can savor the aroma of all the good seasonings that go into it. It's a whole meal in itself, so try it when you want something very much out of the ordinary.

Guess What?

Unh-Unh . . . guess again.
Something worse. . . . Give up?
All right, here's what's wrong . . .

This young man is lonesome. He wants company. He wants that wonderful woman who always understands him. Even if he can't talk. So he's sending a hurry call for Mother.

And Mother? Well, today was washday. Her poor back aches. Her arms are like lead. And she just has to rest another minute before flying up those stairs again. If only she had some help . . .

And so she should. Especially on washday. She should have the help that only Fels-Naptha Soap can give . . . two wonderful cleaners—gentle naptha and richer golden soap—combining to banish dirt, without the rubbing that wears a woman out.

Making washdays easier and shorter.
Giving her more time and strength to lavish on this lusty youngster.

[MORAL: On washday, a boy's 'best friends' are his Mother—and Fels-Naptha Soap.]

Golden bar or Golden chips_FELS-NAPTHA banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

RADIANT HAIR* sprinkled with "Star Dust"

* How gloriously feminine your hair looks when it's star-studded with sparkling highlights — gleaming with glorious sheen. This glamorous loveliness can easily be yours — with the help of Nestle Colorinse. For Colorinse rinses those beautiful highlights into your hair — gives it a warmer, richer tone — a softer, satin-like sheen. Notice how Colorinse leaves your hair easier to comb, easier to manage — helps your curl stay in longer. Take your choice from the 14 flattering shades on the Nestle Hair Chart. For a lovelier hair-do — use Nestle Shampoo BEFORE and Nestle Superset AFTER Colorinsing.

At beauty counters everywhere

10¢ and 25¢ sizes

GOOD-BYE, CAROLE

(Continued from page 27)

with cushioned chairs like Roman benches, clothes, clothes, clothes—

And then that all went gaily overboard. She met Clark Gable. Clark was all he-man. A boy from Cadiz, Ohio, who'd come up the hard way, he found Hollywood glitter and glamor a lot of expensive hooey. "Let me get enough money to have a sure ten thousand a year," the kid who'd been a fighter and a laborer and a bum maintained, "and I'm all set." "What about Carole?" friends asked, and Clark said coolly, confidently, "Carole will take it—and like it."

all for fun . . .

And how she did! Overnight the lusty, swearing, striding, arrogant gal became a woman. Overnight she became a wife. Crazily human—the gags, the trick presents, the insane jests that took place on every lot where Clark and Carole played, were tradition. But they were man and wife. They slipped away and said words that made them one, and Carole meant it. Her career was second. The man she loved came first.

Clark wanted a ranch, so they bought one out in the Valley. Carole hauled on a sunbonnet and marched about the chicken yard. She studied the alfalfa crops, and she sat up nights listening to weather reports and planning protection for the precious citrus trees. No tiny anxious lantern burning in a single orchard represented more sincere love and hominess than did the lights that blazed on the Gable ranch.

She can't be dead—

For friendship is a permanent record, set in granite, and all Hollywood was Carole's friend. Jack Benny, whose radio program had followed the fatal news of December 7th, and who had gone through his own illnesses and troubles, could not speak to his world on Sunday night after that crash. He'd just made a picture with Carole. Living in his memory were her merry jokes and her sturdy workmanship, the sight of her gaily marching through their scenes. The people on the lot, the extras, the stand-ins, the employes knew her as a gallant sincere friend. They knew that a recent edict against swearing on the set had sent a rueful Carole to practicing "Oh hecks!" and circumlocutions for her gamin language, and they knew, too, how really womanly she was beneath all this show of hardboiled strength.

Carole dead? Alice Marble shook a blonde head in unbelief. When Alice was recovering from a collapse in Paris, Carole was taking lessons from Eleanor Tennant, her coach. Into the frail girl's life poured the unfailing stream of Carole's vital interest. "Send a letter to her from me, Teach," she told Miss Tennant. "Stick in this check for a hundred dollars—she can buy a present to pep her up." And when they met, Carole had an inspiration. Alice had a voice, and singing gives one confidence. Carole had a voice teacher. Studying with her was one of the chores Carole had taken on and couldn't quite make. Suppose Alice took the lessons?

She did. She went into the State Competition and she developed the "killer instinct" that Carole preached. And over the top she went, strong, sure, a tennis ace, then singing at the Waldorf. Working at her job as Assistant Director of Physical Fitness in Civilian Defense, she heard the incredible news.

brave new worlds . . .

Russ Columbo's mother had laid down her letters. When Russ died suddenly, his mother, too ill to bear the news, waited for letters from him.

"Don't tell her," Carole dared firmly. "There's no reason she should be hurt. We'll read her letters from him, tell her he'll come—" and so to the end, the mother was happy, waiting, touching letters, hearing— Wherever they may be, those friends of Carole's gone ahead, they'd be saying it, too—Carole dead? She can't be!

It wasn't all easy. The world saw the Glamour girl made Gamin Girl. The YIPPEE, FANS!

At last we have it for yau—that up-ta-the-second chart af yaur favarite "Westerns" yau've been begging far! Imagine having at your fingertips the real names, birthplaces, birthdates, heights, weights, haw they gat their start and studia addresses af over 60 of thase raugh-riding heraes, leering villains and wide-eyed heraines af yaur pet "horse opries"! Made up in a mast attractive farm, it will make yaur album praud as anything. Just send five cents in cain ar stamps with the coupan belaw and your new revised "Western" chart is just as gaod as lassaed!

INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York City

I am enclosing five cents in stamps ar cain far which kindly send me yaur chart of the Western Stars.

Name.....

Street.....

City..... State.....

Please print name and address plainly world saw her striding through the town and country. "She hunts like a man," Harry Fleishman said. "She carries her own equipment, retrieves her own birds, handles a 410 shotgun, never complains—"

The studios saw her putting a new touch into decorating. They saw offices with gay curtains, pine writing tables, chintz chairs and sofas. Like the throwing back of shutters letting in light, Hollywood was suddenly bright and fresh again.

They saw her joking with "Pa" Gable, they saw her laughing and shouting.

But there was another side. She went into the desert with a purpose. There was a time when she stayed there, away from the night life and parties. Anxiously furrowing that broad brow of hers over health schedules and booklets, anxiously studying the routine her doctor gave her.

There were rumors and stories and Clark, scowling blackly, denied them. But Carole wasn't bothering—she had a dream, and she was working at it with her selfless, little girl courage.

A dream that died.

She came back out of the retirement with her mouth a little tight and a shadow in her clear eyes. There wasn't to be a baby after all. She had to fold up the booklets and schedules, she had to tuck away some rather special prayers. So—

"What'll I do, Pappy?" she asked Clark.

It wasn't enough for her, the hard, gruelling work of the studios, the extra warm friendliness that overlooked no needs, the social life and the ranch. It wasn't enough. The stars were fretting about income taxes, they were scolding and figuring and trying to think up ways to dodge taxes. Blonde hair tossed back, scornful grin flashing, Carole hooted at them. She'd worked herself to dangerous thinness, dangerous fatigue, and she'd earned $465,000, and now the government wanted sixty per cent of it. What was she going to do? She was going to pay it. "For what the country's done for me and you, that's too much? It isn't too high," Carole said. The others flushed a little and high tax talk wasn't fashionable any more.

mission for three . . .

But it wasn't enough for Carole—

"What'll I do, Pappy?"

Clark had the answer ready. He's a big man, a rough man, without veneer. From the day war was declared by the United States, he'd been working and thinking about the job that a he-man has to take on now. He was chairman of the motion picture committee in charge of bond sales, and he was the one to assign stars to entertainment at the camps. The lights in the gun-room at the ranch burned late while Carole and Clark worked shoulder to shoulder mapping out campaigns for the country.

"It isn't enough, Pa. What'll I do, me, myself?"

"How about selling stamps and bonds back home in Indiana?"

She liked the idea. "I'll take Mother along," she said, and Clark wanted Otto to go, too. Otto Winkler, their publicity man and friend. Otto had gone over the border with them when they were married. Clark trusted him with his life—and with something more precious, his gay girl, his wife.

The party set off. Carole marched to the train platform and told the people there about the bonds. At last she had something to do with those crowds that jammed up to stare at her. At last she could pour all the vitality of her taut little body and strong little soul into a

AN ANNOUNCEMENT BY

Constance Luft Huhn

HEAD OF THE HOUSE OF TANGEE

Makers of the World's Most Famous Lipsticks

3 LOVELY TANGEE SHADES

TANGEE RED-RED..."Rarest, Loveliest Red of Them All!"... harmonizes with all fashion colors.

•

TANGEE THEATRICAL RED ..."The Brilliant Scarlet Lipstick Shade"... always flattering.

•

TANGEE NATURAL... Orange in the stick, changes to produce your own most becoming shade of blush rose on the lips.

NOW, at last, all you've longed for in a lipstick is combined in our new Tangee SATIN-FINISH ...a softer, glossier sheen...a texture not too moist —yet not too dry... a lipstick that stays on and I really mean stays on, without blurring or smudging.

With this basic Tangee improvement, which we consider our most important news in 20 years, you now have not only Tangee's gloriously clear shades —not only the famous Tangee cream base that feels so soothing to your lips—but the exquisite grooming of a SATIN-FINISH that lasts for hours and hours.

TANGEE Lipsticks

WITH THE NEW SATIN-FINISH

SEND FOR COMPLETE MAKE-UP KIT

The Geo. W. Luft Co., Distributors.....417 Fifth Ave., New York City
Send "Miracle Make-Up Kit" of sample Tangee Lipstick, matching rouge and face powder.
LIPSTICK & ROUGE: CHECK ONE ☐ NATURAL ☐ THEATRICAL RED ☐ RED-RED
FACE POWDER: CHECK ONE ☐ Peach ☐ Light Rachel ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Dark Rachel ☐ Tan
I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). (15¢ in Canada.)

*Name*_____ *Street*_____
[Please Print]

*City*_____ *State*_____ MM42

RIT CALLS ALL GIRLS TO THE COLORS

Make last year's clothes do—but make them charming with RIT

• Save and serve—but don't let drab, faded colors rob you of charm. Treat the men-in-your-life to cheerful, sparkling colors and they'll never dream you're wearing last year's clothes. Give all your frocks a beauty bath with RIT—they'll sparkle and so will you. Buy extra Defense Stamps with the savings.

• Just be sure you get RIT. No boiling needed. Colors "take" beautifully. Perfect results.

28 Colors
Sold everywhere

NEVER SAY DYE . . . SAY RIT TINTS & DYES

cause she believed, a meaningful cause.

Salt Lake City, Chicago, Indianapolis—

She shoved back that mane of hair and talked. How she talked! And how she sold! It seemed almost unbelievable, but the totals sped up and up—Carole had sold two million dollars worth of bonds.

She got Clark on the telephone. He told her he'd bring Mrs. Winkler and come to meet her. Would she come by train? She pondered. "We'll flip a coin," she said. "Heads it's the plane—" A coin flipped and destiny moved a hooded head— Why? We may never know.

The plane was late. A huge-framed man began to pace a little, nervously, but he laughed and reassured his companion. "They're all right—weather bad maybe—nothing can happen to Carole—"

The hours went on. An ominous message came in. "We cannot establish contact with the plane—" But this was Carole—the Gamin Girl, the lusty, laughing, striding rancher, the strong, the free, the sure— This was Carole who joked with everyone. This was Carole whose voice was still merry and warm in her husband's heart.

Far out on Table Rock Mountain, this night of January 16th, a plane cracked into a mountain, flames soared, bodies hurtled—there was a moment's horror of sound and flame and then silence—

Clark was impatient now, desperate. He demanded horses, supplies, people. Then he'd go alone. He wasn't waiting here, not any longer.

Death was no stranger to Clark Gable. He was playing in a picture with another beloved screen star when it swooped down over the studio. He had to finish out the picture with a shadow, and once he turned away, his fists clenched and said between his teeth, "I can't do it, I can't DO it—" Death had come to Jean Harlow then. But this was Carole, his wife.

"I'm going out there," he roared. "You can't stop me. I'm going."

And then they brought the word—

Teletypes clicked out their unbelievable message. Wires flashed hot with it. A cinema montage of rolling newspaper presses, shouted headlines, radio dials twirling, aghast, unbelieving faces—

A man's heart bleeding, torn, wrenched.

The White House and a tired executive pausing to speak words that should carry a nation's sorrow and gratitude.

salute . . .

Did a little gamin form rise from that wreckage, toss back its blonde hair and grin? Did she stare in amazement at the crashing of words, words, words, lamenting, describing? Did she whisper, "The President—talking about me?" And did her hands stretch out in blind helpless pity to someone who could not accept or believe—

If she did, she saw a wonderful thing. Planes speeding off an assembly line in shining rows—ships raising invincible prows—guns blunt-nosed and menacing—she sees them roll on and on and on with the power that one small girl's eager husky voice has given them. For two million dollars worth of bonds go marching on—

Carole Lombard is not dead. She is alive in the stirred hearts of those who knew her. But in more than that, she is alive. Somewhere she is laughing in sunlight and saying, "What'll I do now?"

Silent, brooding, lost, Clark Gable is going back to work. He'll work for defense—and he'll finish the picture on which he'd done one day's stint. It's name—"Somewhere I'll Find You."

THE LADY IS A TRUMP

(Continued from page 43)

broken and stuck away in a corner, where she comes on it six weeks later, and the culprit murmurs, "Oh, that happened ages ago." She knows things have to be broken sometimes, but she wants to be told about it.

It's with an air of ruefulness that Bette says she knows things have to be broken. You get the feeling that she's not thoroughly convinced. She could lose her whole wardrobe with a better grace than almost any object she's bought for her home. Home is a dominating interest. She hates shopping for clothes. Shopping for the house is a delight and relaxation. If she weren't a career gal, she'd have been the queen of housewives. As it is, she does all right.

Her housekeeper's been with her for seven years. During the first three years of her tenure, Bette spent a lot of time with her—to such good purpose that she learned to do even the flowers to suit the boss—a feat verging on miracle. At other people's houses, Bette has to sit on her hands to keep them out of bowls and vases that are none of her business. You can have gardening. All she wants is the finished product.

model housewife . . .

When she gets a day off, she goes on a cleaning jag. Closets are her specialty. She can't bear having things around that she doesn't use or having the things she does use in disorder. Unless your belongings are orderly, she doesn't see how your head can be. She sorts out the magazines she wants to keep, sends the rest to the Salvation Army, goes through records and books, linen and crystal. If anything torn or broken can be fixed, it's fixed. If not, the hell with it. She won't have a chipped plate in her china-closet. She thinks maybe she overdoes it, but then, on the other hand, she returns love for beauty—never enters her bedroom without a glow of pleasure in the Sheraton desk and New Orleans pineapple bed she craved for years, never gets over being grateful that she can afford to buy lovely things, never takes them for granted.

Her cleaning finished, she'll get herself a decent manicure. Studio make-up doesn't allow for nails, so on pictures she does her own and has worn them nude for the last couple of years because polish, though beautiful, is too much trouble. Then she tackles her correspondence—on the typewriter lately, in the hope of improving her technique and making herself useful to the Red Cross post in New Hampshire, where she's vacationing till early spring.

Not till everything's done can she relax with a book. Reading in a chair, she sits on her spine or foot. Talking, she tangles her legs 'round a couple of rungs. At the movies—with the theatre, please heaven, half empty—she maneuvers her feet through the crack of the seat in front and keeps them parked. Her stand-in says that a year's work with Bette qualifies one as a trained contortionist. She plays with her hair, can't talk without using her hands and has always walked faster than any three men, to the despair of her teen-day swains. "What's the use?" one complained bitterly. "You turn around, and she's galloping six blocks ahead."

She dresses to suit herself and hasn't stepped into a dress shop for five years. A woman in one shop, familiar with her tastes, sends her stuff on approval. Or she'll like something she's worn for a picture or fashion sitting and buy that. Her favorite daytime colors are blue, black and especially brown—for dress, cherry red and a certain beige-gold. Suits for the street, slacks for the house and simplicity in evening clothes. She buys most of the latter at Bernie Newman's end-of-the-year sale, rejects anything dated this-year-but-definitely-not-next and laughs at the Hollywood pother about not being seen twice in the same dress. Hers stay by her three or four years. Why buy it at all, she argues, if you don't like it well enough to give it a run.

She and Farny agree on the essentials of a well-spent evening. Six or eight people discussing things over drinks. Or two people, a fire and a book. A well-played rubber of bridge relaxes her when she's tired, and gin rummy's swell if you're stuck on a train or—she guesses—in a blackout. But she's no gal for games, and feels both irritation and sympathy for a hostess who keeps them going like mad so her guests can go home and at least say they played backgammon.

Entranced by the pleasant household vision of a husband and wife reading aloud to each other, that's what she and Farny said they would do. They don't. Bette reads faster, prefers reading to herself and, being an actress, enjoys novels of exhaustive character analysis, which bore Farny. He goes in for biography, current history and aviation.

canine capers . . .

They share their chairs with a dog or two. Bette's sense of tidiness doesn't banish dogs from the furniture. For one thing, furniture looks dead till it's been lived in, and dogs are to her an important part of living. For another, you're doing a dog no favor by taking him in and keeping him huddled in corners. If you won't let him enjoy his life, don't have him at all. Anyway, chairs and carpets can be cleaned.

Tibby and Peckett are Scotties. Having long thought she'd like a dachs, Bette took a chance that Farny would, too, and presented him with Hideho on his last birthday.

They've been taught to bother the family and leave guests alone. When no one's around they beg for tidbits—and get them. With strangers at dinner, they barely cock an eye. Bette's most talkative with them at breakfast time, tells them how beautiful they are, confides her problems to them and sounds to an eavesdropper like a borderline case.

She and Farny take night-clubbing as they'd take medicine—it's good for them once in a while. Two married people can get very lazy, and a dressy evening at Ciro's or the Scheherezade freshens them up and gives them laughs for weeks. Bette loves to dance but wouldn't be found dead in a rumba or conga, whose ludicrous aspect blinds her to their charms, if any. She likes best to dance at the New Hampshire lakes, where there's plenty of room, no staring or being stared at.

It's her firm belief that if you work hard to earn money, you should get fun out of it. She gets fun out of hers in divers ways. Remembering awful years when birthdays and Christmas rolled by and she couldn't give, her biggest kick maybe comes now from the fact that she can. For the rest, her pet extravagances are books, furs and her two-year-old niece, Fay. Going in to buy Fay a dress, she walks out loaded with half the baby shop's stock. She turns resolutely from the sight of fur, tempted to buy every

"My Romance was dying of starvation"

A TRUE STORY OF THE
"ONE NEGLECT"
THAT ALMOST WRECKED A MARRIAGE

1. Before we were married, we were so much in love! But after our wedding Bill changed—his attentions grew less and less. I suffered the miseries of neglect.

2. Then at the club one day I met a famous woman doctor—and overcame my pride enough to tell her my troubles. She shocked me by saying, "I'm afraid it's your own fault—you see, there's one thing husbands don't forgive in their wives—carelessness or ignorance about feminine hygiene.

3. "So many married women come to me with the same story. And my advice to them, and to you, is—use Lysol disinfectant regularly for intimate personal care. Lysol cleanses and deodorizes—and at the same time it instantly kills millions of germs, without harm to sensitive tissues. Lysol is safe."

4. That's how Lysol became my standard practice for feminine hygiene. It's so gentle to use—and so economical. And you never have to worry about its effectiveness. It works! As for my romance—we're more in love than ever.

Check this with your Doctor

Lysol is NON-CAUSTIC—gentle and efficient in proper dilution. Contains no free alkali. It is not carbolic acid. EFFECTIVE—a powerful germicide, active in presence of organic matter (such as mucus, serum, etc.). SPREADING—Lysol solutions spread and virtually search out germs in deep crevices. ECONOMICAL—small bottle makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. CLEANLY ODOR—disappears after use. LASTING—Lysol keeps full strength indefinitely, no matter how often it is uncorked.

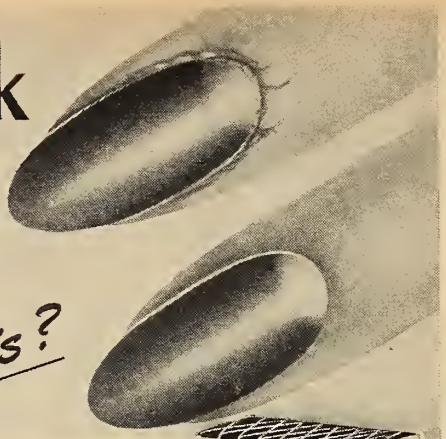
Lysol Disinfectant

FOR FEMININE HYGIENE

Copr., 1942, by Lehn & Fink Products Corp.

For new FREE booklet (in plain wrapper) about Feminine Hygiene, send postcard to Lehn & Fink Products Corp., Dept. M.S.-442, Bloomfield, N. J., U. S. A.

Cuticle Look



Get CUTEX Oily Cuticle Remover

● Don't gnaw at ragged cuticle! Soften and loosen it with Cutex Oily Cuticle Remover! All you do is wipe the dead cuticle away with a towel! Have your hands admired! Get a bottle today! It contains no acid.

Saturday is "Manicure Day." Look for the special display of Cutex accessories on your favorite cosmetic counter — Cutex Cuticle Remover, Cuticle Oil, Brittle Nail Cream, Orangewood Sticks, Emery Boards.

Northam Warren, New York

Used by more women than all other Cuticle Removers combined

SATURDAY IS "MANICURE DAY"

kind in the market and has compromised over a period of years on a mink coat, a cape of Baum martin, a silver fox and—the most thrilling article in her wardrobe—an ermine coat.

No first-edition hound, she loves owning beautiful copies of books that mean something to her—like "South Wind." Children's books enchant her, and Fay's a good excuse for investing in them, A jealous sense of possession about books and handkerchiefs makes her cringe when they're borrowed, but her family cheerfully raids her stock of both while Bette stands by, inventing reason after reason why she can't live twenty-four hours without that particular article.

She likes bracelets that jingle because they make her feel elegant—which she calls proof of an inferiority complex. Among precious jewels, she hankers only after diamonds, wants one diamond bracelet before she dies but would die before buying it for herself, she'd feel so idiotic. She's informed Farny that he's the pink of perfection, except that he's never given her a diamond bracelet.

Off-screen she wears her hair in a long plain bob, feels too dressed up when it's fixed any other way, uses lipstick only—plus a little mascara for evening, prefers tubs to showers, with any kind of bath salts that smell good, and is probably the world's prize sucker for eau de cologne, rushing out to buy every new brand advertised so she can smell it quick. She can dress in twenty minutes flat, deplores her own celerity and blames it on her boarding-school training.

a sucker for sentiment . . .

Small pieces of soap drive her crazy, the money spent on laundry appalls her, she hates to carry a bag, sit at ringside tables in restaurants or eat desserts. Give her potatoes, and the government can ration the rest. For coffee she drinks Sanka, for conviviality Scotch, and for love champagne.

She can't stand saving paper and bits of string but hoards old dance programs and other items of sentimental significance. If she could rescue just one object from a burning building, it would probably be the pressbook she's kept for twelve years. Some actors scorn pressbooks. Bette thinks she'll have fun looking through hers twenty years hence. She's often wished her family had collected things to pass on to her. If she ever has children, she hopes they'll enjoy the pressbook. If not, there's always Fay.

She likes the little wood and china dogs Farny picks up for her. In a house bright with order, she likes a cluttered desk—garnished, it looks like a stage prop. She loves the movies and, but for the curse of double bills, would go more often. When she does go—on Sunday afternoons as a rule, she acts like any Susie Doakes, can't be budged till the picture's over, no matter how corny, petrified lest the right football team shouldn't win.

She gets spasms of self-improvement. For one year she worked on a system to keep her stocking seams straight. They're still crooked. For three months she gave up cigarettes, till she decided the misery wasn't worth it and went back to lighting one weed from another. When her best friends told her they'd rather be shot than call her up—brusque was the kindest word they found for her phone personality—she spent weeks trying to cultivate charm on the phone. It didn't work.

She's happiest at Butter Nut, where life is simple, where she and her mother do the marketing, with a hired girl for what Bette calls the dull work—like dishes—and a hired man for outside. The girl gets breakfast. Otherwise, when you want to eat, you eat. Farny, who fancies cooking, does all the meats over an open fire. His wife does the vegetables.

Normally, she's easy to get along with—gay, good-humored, considerate. But, with the standards of a perfectionist, work and its problems fray her nerves and exhaust her body. Besides, she sinks herself so wholly in what she's doing that, for any other purpose, she isn't there. When she was a child, Mrs. Davis had a phrase for it. "Bette's gone to Canada," she'd say.

Knowing her own vagaries and disillusioned by the failure of her first marriage, Bette tried three times to make up her mind to marry the man she'd fallen in love with. He had no qualms but not because of unawareness. Writers, musicians, people skilled in the arts had always been part of his background. He took them for granted. Bette was an actress, so what? He wasn't dazzled, he didn't feel he had to make an equally brilliant name in his own field to keep his self-respect—it was too well-rooted. Acting was her work. The rest was Arthur Farnsworth and Bette Davis, and what did her work have to do with that? She'd been twenty-three when she married first. If ten years hadn't brought her more wisdom to cope with life, what good had they been? So, on the last day of 1940 she said, "I, Bette, take thee, Arthur—" two yanks in Hollywood . . .

Farnsworth's six foot one, blond, scrubbed-looking. His eyes are kind and intensely blue, his quietness spiced with a dry New England humor. You like and trust him on sight.

Head of the West Coast division of Minneapolis Honeywell, he spends most of his time in California. His prime interests are aviation, music and horses in that order. He plays the violin, has taught Bette the finer points of horsemanship and unwittingly helped her overcome—to a limited degree—her terror of planes. She wouldn't fly, and he wouldn't urge her to, but when he fell ill in the Middle West, she flew to him, unurged. She'd still think twice before trusting herself to the air, but at least she's no longer paralyzed by the thought, which pleases them both.

She doesn't pick his ties but once bought him a couple, Indian-woven, on a cross-country trip. He was very polite about them. When a studio crisis upsets her, he says he's sorry and leaves her alone. He's less silent than before his marriage. The Davis family habit is to talk and talk and not listen to anyone else, so he's training himself to scream along with the best of them.

Bette's worst social sin is finishing other people's sentences. She's always remorseful but, thinking faster than most, continues to sin. Farny will have none of it. Her proffered help falls with an anticlimactic thud into the pool of his silence. Then—"Will you let me finish my own sentence?" he suggests.

Like a spanked child, she shuts up.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

Chico Marx, suffering heavy losses among the hearts, clubs, diamonds, and spades, had to borrow $3,000 to make good on a $7,000 debt?

—Look Magazine

ALL CLEAR FOR YOUR SKIN

(Continued from page 49)

a lovely one. Fresh air and outdoor exercise are as good for your skin as for the rest of your body, and sunshine is definitely known to benefit any kind of skin, particularly the oily type. When your acne is particularly severe or does not respond to the treatment for oily skin, which we have just been discussing, consult a physician and follow his advice. Whether you are your own doctor or under the care of a professional, don't fool yourself into thinking that cleanliness begins and ends with the scrubbed face. Always use clean towels, fresh powder puffs, sterile cotton and cleansing tissues, and never touch your face except with clean hands.

Just to make complexions complex, there is the skin which is both oily and dry. Since most of the oil ducts are concentrated along the nose, chin and forehead, these parts are apt to have too much lubrication, while the rest of your face has too little. For a combination type skin, cleanliness, as always, is your first rule. Then, use drying methods for the too-oily parts and supply extra lubrication for dry areas.

If you keep your complexion always fresh and healthy, you probably are not often bothered by those annoying blemishes known as blackheads. When they do occur, however, be assured that they need not mar your skin permanently. Minor ones will come out of their own accord after a few scrubbings with soap and water and a complexion brush—and deeply imbedded ones can be removed easily in the following manner: scrub your face thoroughly, then cover your skin with a steaming towel to relax the pores and press out these blemishes with a sterilized comedone (blackhead) extractor. If they resist your first attempt, leave them alone a few days, continuing your cleanliness and stimulation routine, for all this activity will help work the blackheads closer to the surface of your skin. Always, after removing blackheads, touch a little alcohol or some other antiseptic to the parts to help close the pores and to ward off possible infection. Never use your fingers to remove a blackhead, unless they are protected by cleansing tissue or gauze, for sharp nails may break the skin and aggravate the blemish.

So you see a glowing complexion is not a gift you have or have not because the gods flipped a coin. It is beauty you can bring on yourself by the simple rituals of cleanliness, stimulation and protection.

If you want to do your skin four beauty favors all in one, try Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream. Here is how it will add to your glamour: It will cleanse your skin gently but thoroughly; it will soften it; it will help guard against large pores; and it will smooth your skin, making a more perfect base for powder and make-up. See if your skin isn't lovelier and more enchanting almost from the very first time you use Lady Esther's 4-Purpose Cream!

You don't need to hide out at home when you have a complexion blemish. Why not use "Hide-It" instead? It comes in natural skin tones and when spread over surface imperfections, makes skin look clear and flawless. What's more it's waterproof and won't rub off. Keep a jar of "Hide-It" always handy.

COSSACK COWBOY

(Continued from page 41)

don't say that to anyone else. Makes me feel like a sap," his position being that he's done nothing to warrant such kudos, or, for that matter, any kudos at all.

Acclaim for what he hasn't done embarrasses him. Besides, he's healthily skeptical about fairy tales, especially one he's living himself, believes in it on a strictly day-to-day basis and, if it went up in smoke, would be less surprised than if he were to see it prolonged. Nor would his heart be broken. The movies to George are a means to an end, and the end's in Montana. He'd be grateful for five years in the movies, which he figures would net him enough to buy that ranch. Five years or no, he'll get the ranch some way, being the kind of egg who won't quit till he does.

home on the range . . .

His feeling about Hollywood is akin to his feeling about clothes. Clothes, says George, are a funny proposition. First they fit you, then all of a sudden they're tight or loose or something, and you're not comfortable in them. On the other hand, you never get tired of blue jeans. They're like Montana. You look at those mountains and—well, that's all there is to it. Get a ranch and you get your freedom, you're your own boss. That's what people work for, isn't it? Stay in the movies, and you're going to be bossed all your life. Which is silly. In America, you're supposed to be free.

Nostalgia for one's childhood doesn't start, as a rule, till the middle years.

GOODBYE DANDRUFF

Don't let dandruff spoil your beauty! Keep your hair shining with natural life and color, antiseptically clean, AND COMPLETELY FREE OF DANDRUFF by using Fitch Shampoo regularly each week. Fitch Shampoo is sold under a money-back guarantee to remove dandruff in one application, and it is the ONLY shampoo whose guarantee is backed by one of the world's largest insurance firms.

Results Are Different—Because Fitch Shampoo Is Different!

And you apply it differently, too—right to the DRY hair and scalp. That's when it dissolves the dandruff. Next add hard or soft water. Fitch Shampoo foams into a rich abundant lather that carries away all dirt and dandruff without the aid of an after-rinse, leaving your hair soft, manageable and lustrous. Good for all colors and textures of hair—so mild that it's recommended for even a baby's tender scalp. Economical—no wonder Fitch Shampoo is the largest selling shampoo in the world! Barbers and beauticians testify that it reconditions as it cleanses.

After and between Fitch Shampoos you can keep your hair shining and manageable by using a few drops of Fitch's Ideal Hair Tonic every day.

THE TRUTH ABOUT SOAP SHAMPOOS

Soap Shampoo

1. This phatagraph shaws germs and dandruff scattered, but nat remaved, by ardinary saap shampaa.

Soap Shampoo

3. Micraphata shaws hair shampaaed with ardinary saap and rinsed twice. Nate dandruff and curd depasit left by saap ta mar natural luster of hair.

Fitch Shampoo

2. All germs, dandruff and ather foreign matter campletely destrayed and remaved by Fitch Shampaa.

Fitch Shampoo

4. Micraphata after Fitch Shampaa and hair rinsed twice. Nate Fitch Shampaa removes all dandruff and undissalved depasit, and brings aut the natural luster af the hair.

Fitch's DANDRUFF REMOVER SHAMPOO

Des Moines, Iowa • Bayonne, N. J. • Los Angeles, Calif.

Capr. 1942 F. W. Fitch Co.

George already hankers to go back and relive his, though he knows it could never be the same. When he was a kid, the cattle roamed for miles, and the land stretched fenceless farther than the eye could see. There are fences in Montana now. He doesn't like fences.

An older brother—his eldest was born twenty-six years before George—came to this country first and wrote his father of the glories of homesteading. Papa Lyetz arrived to look things over, returned and brought back the older children, then returned a second time for Mamotchka and what George calls the litter. Papa still recalls, and with undiminished wrath, the gyp steamship agent who promised them three scarlet smokestacks and came through with one, dirty gray.

The four-thousand-acre homestead lay fifteen miles from a cattle depot where a train stopped every week or so to let a couple of cows off. Father and sons built a long wooden house, in whose attic Mamotchka stored her preserved meat and fruits against the long winter. Hoisted on his brothers' shoulders, it was George's job to swipe apples from the attic. Apples could be had for the asking, but they tasted better swiped.

At four he tended rabbits, watered horses, clambered up behind his brothers to go coyote-hunting. With a bunch of hounds he'd race four miles to the schoolhouse, thumb his nose at the kids penned up inside while the dogs yipped approval, and run back like hell when the teacher tried to catch him. At six he saw his first movie with Harry Carey and, penned up himself now, confided to teacher that he wanted to be an actress. "Actresses," she said, "are ladies." This, together with howls of derision from his mates, shamed him out of his first ambition.

In summer a score of farm kids would get together, saddle up, take lunch and go swimming in the river fifteen miles away. In winter, with seven Lyetzes of school age, the older boys hitched a team to the bobsled and hauled the younger fry, snug under canvas, to school. In the spring George and Maurice played hookey, climbed to the cupola of the grain elevator and stalked pigeons with BB-guns, taking care to wound them as slightly as possible. What they wanted was pigeons 'round the house Most of them flew away as their hurts healed. The boys all but killed with kindness the few that stuck around.

There was always enough to eat, enough to do, enough to think about. You had your work and plenty of time for play, and the work was half play, anyhow. The mountains gave you a sense of peace, not loneliness, and you never felt you were missing out on anything. Given the choice, not one of the eight Lyetz boys or five Lyetz girls would have traded in their childhood for the city life.

Having been graduated with honors from the Black Falls High School, George entered the University of Montana, because people told him college was a good idea. For him it wasn't. A rangy, overgrown, awkward farm kid, he fell between two stools, having no passion for study and few social assets. His dancing was a joke. Frats ignored him and girls brushed him off. Working his way through by tending bar at night, he began playing hookey to tend bar in the daytime, finding the atmosphere cozier than that of the classroom, though he didn't drink then and doesn't now. After a year he called it a day and went home. To milk cows and pitch hay, to harvest and herd. He tried amateur boxing and never lost a match but quit to keep from getting his teeth knocked out.

westward, ho . . .

He worked mostly for other farmers. Activity on their own place had dwindled. Four of the girls and four of the boys were married. Bad years had forced his father to sell sections of the land, and mortgage what was left. The ranch was a shadow of what it had been. In '37 his brother Mike, a roving engineer, suggested that George join him in Los Angeles. Papa said, no, mamma said, please. "Please, Georgie, find yourself a job in some nice warm store and stay here with us." George found himself a job—they called it landscaping, he called it good old WPA work with the pick and shovel—collected some money and went to Mike.

Mike had a friend who acted as movie agent for Cossack riders. Two days after hitting town, George was up at M-G-M, dashing into Garbo's house in "Conquest" and smashing up the furniture. He liked that, but it only lasted three days. Bublichki, the Russian restaurant on the Strip, was in process of construction, so Mike, who knew every Russian in town, got him in on that. Interior decorating they called it. George called it good old painting-and-carpenter work.

He was back tending bar again at a night club—making hamburgers, French dips and eighteen a week, with everything found—pretty pleased with himself, in fact—when another of Mike's myriad friends came butting in. "Gee, Mike, why don't you get the kid into movies? They're hollerin' for cowboys. Why don't you take him around?"

He got Mike hepped up. Mike got the kid into cowboy togs, with a hat whose brimspread cast him into the shade. They made the rounds.

"Yeah, swell, fine, fine, I can't use you, but I'll give you a letter—"

They got eight letters and saw eight casting directors. Mike talked. George felt foolish. By the time they landed at Republic, Mike's fervor was running low. "All you do," he snapped, "is stand around like a calf. This time you say something."

Republic's casting director at the time was one of those guys who looked as if he were in training to sub for Ned Sparks. His face sent a chill down our hero's spine.

"Want to be an actor, huh?"

"Yup."

"Done any acting?"

"Nope." Then, with Mike's ultimatum in his ears, he heard his own voice adding, to his own surprise: "But if I can't do better than some of these jerks you hire, I'll go back to the farm."

This brought a sour grimace from sub-Sparks. Still, he had George read and two weeks later gave him a day's work. The director shot a close-up of him laughing. Which led to his being tried out, with sixteen others, for the Lone Ranger. His turn to read came five minutes before lunch. He opened

FREE OFFER!

Mail us your answers to the questionnaire below. If your letter is among the FIRST 500 to reach us, you will receive a FREE PORTRAIT!* Mail postmarked later than midnight, March 4th, will not be honored. Besides, we have only 500 PORTRAITS. So hurry!

QUESTIONNAIRE

What stories or features did you enjoy most in our March issue? Write 1, 2, 3 at the right of the titles of your 1st, 2nd and 3rd choice.

Good-Bye, Carole (Lombard) ☐
Double Exposure (Stack) ☐
The Strange Case of George Sanders ☐
Dear Diary ☐
Cossack Cowboy (Montgomery) ☐
"In This Our Life" ☐
The Lady Is a Trump (Davis) ☐
It's a Date (Jinx and Glenn) ☐
Nelson Eddy Talks His Head Off ☐
Good News ☐
Co-Ed ☐

Which one of the above stories did you like LEAST?.....

What 3 stars would you like to read about in future issues? List them 1, 2, 3 in order of preference.....

.....

Do you read the beauty department every month ☐? occasionally ☐? never ☐?

Should the beauty department be made longer ☐? shorter ☐? stay the same ☐?

My name is.....

My address.....

I am ..... years of age.

*I want an autographed portrait of.....

ADDRESS THIS TO: POLL DEPT., MODERN SCREEN, 149 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK, N. Y.

his mouth. Nothing came out. He'd forgotten every word. Mike, still nursing little brother, leaped to the rescue. "The kid's a little nervous. Try him again after lunch."

up and at 'em . . .

After lunch he just about made it. But his riding was so masterly that they took him anyway—him and five others. To mix the kids up, the Ranger was played in successive episodes by different actors, each donning the mask and white gloves in turn. George was killed in the sixth episode but played the serial out. They said he was fine, he knew he stank. Again they made the rounds. "Well—uh—no," said the studios. So George said nuts, he was going home and went.

He returned in '39 to see Mike off to South America. Mike wanted a picture. The photographer who took them showed them to an agent. The agent asked him if he wanted to try again.

"I've got nothing to do for a couple of months. Why not?"

Maybe the agent's technique was better than Mike's. He showed the pictures first, then presented his client. "What do you think of him?"

"Fine." George says he knows how cattle feel, sold on the hoof. At Twentieth Century-Fox they weighed him—by eye—passed him from hand to hand, finally tested and gave him a contract. His news failed to impress the folks at home. Into his moustache Papa muttered the Russian equivalent for "Foolishness!" Mamotchka wrote wistfully: "Why don't you come back home? You could get a job in a nice warm store—"

He got a job instead in "Cisco Kid and the Lady" and decided he should have taken mamma's advice. "I was godawful," he says with simple fervor. Others must have shared his view, for assignments dropped off. But by now George had the bit between his teeth. He didn't like to be licked. He studied every day with Tom Moore, and whenever they needed a man for a test, George was on hand. One of the tests proved a honey. His agents showed it at other studios. "Who's the guy?" they asked. "Bring him around when Fox drops his option." So Fox picked his option up, and gave him bits in "Stardust" and "Young People." Also the lead with Joan Bennett in "I Married A Nazi" but yanked him after three days because he looked too young to play the kid's father.

This still left him nowhere. One day he bumped into Ralph Dietrich, the producer. "How do you like the business?" asked Dietrich, not expecting to be told.

George said he liked Montana better. He said if something didn't break pretty doggone soon, he'd forget the whole thing and go back to Montana. In brief, he blew his topper about Montana while Dietrich listened, impatient at first, then with mounting interest. "Son," he said, "you've given me the rough idea for a story. With you in the lead."

"Yeah," sneered George to himself. "Hollywood promises."

At the drop of a hat he'd run up to Montana. Any excuse would serve. Once he brought his mother down. Mike, back from South America, hadn't been home in ten years, and Mamma was determined to get him there if she had to drag him herself by the scruff of his neck.—Once he made the fourteen hundred miles in twenty-four hours, because his sister had left on a visit without the grapes and oranges their mother always asked for. Seeing from a distance that the family was gathered on the porch, he stopped the car, hoisted the fruit to his shoulder and swaggered up, yelling: "Sis, you forgot the oranges." From the top step Maurice broad-jumped to his back and sent him sprawling. Papa shook his head, grinning. He thinks his American children are nice, but crazy.

It was from one such trip that George was hailed back to test for "Cowboy and the Blonde." Driving southward, he made silent apologies to Dietrich for his silent sneer. The picture proved a sleeper. Previews, sneak and otherwise, put Montgomery's name on the Hollywood map. At his own request, he made a couple of Westerns. But the torrent of fan mail that followed "Cowboy's" release put an end to that nonsense. His A-career started with Landis in "Cadet Girl," he plays the reporter opposite Ginger Rogers in "Roxie Hart" and is John Sutton's rival for Maureen O'Hara in "Ten Gentlemen from West Point."

family affairs . . .

Once settled, he talked his parents into leaving the ranch, bought a modest house near the studio and moved in with them and his sister Lyda. Papa is eighty, Mamotchka seventy-six—both sturdy as seasoned trees. George says he has no superstitions but knocks wood when he mentions the state of their health. Papa digs up the ground, lets it settle for a day, then digs it up again. A man must have something to do. Mamma runs the house. George's pleas for a part-time maid upset her so that he gave it up and vacuums the rugs himself. They like California because George is there, though after Montana Mamma finds it a little warm. Relatives drop in at will—for a night, a week, a month. There are twenty-three grandchildren,

YOU CAN'T HELP INHALING—BUT

YOU CAN HELP YOUR THROAT!

IT'S true — all smokers sometimes inhale. But — between PHILIP MORRIS and other leading cigarettes there's a tremendous difference in irritant qualities. Doctors who compared the five leading brands report that . . .

IN STRIKING CONTRAST TO PHILIP MORRIS, IRRITANT EFFECTS OF THE FOUR OTHER LEADING BRANDS AVERAGED MORE THAN THREE TIMES AS HIGH—AND LASTED MORE THAN FIVE TIMES AS LONG!

Finest tobaccos—of course. But that's not enough! PHILIP MORRIS are made differently. They taste better — they're proved better for your nose and throat.

Just Remember—It's America's Finest Cigarette

Get a Man's Eye View OF YOUR FACE POWDER

Men see every tiny complexion flaw. But Cashmere Bouquet Face Powder, even in a close-up, gives your skin heavenly smoothness, supreme naturalness.

ANY face powder can pretend to smoothness under a kind hatbrim, or soft, romantic candlelight. But Cashmere Bouquet Face Powder promises your skin utter smoothness even in a face-to-face close-up.

Prove it! Apply Cashmere Bouquet Face Powder. Then—look critically in your mirror. You'll see exactly what a man sees in a Cashmere Bouquet close-up. No particles of powder; no pin-points of color. But a delicate flattering, life-like finish that Nature herself might have given your skin.

In the close-up, too, your skin will breathe the "fragrance men love" . . . exclusive with Cashmere Bouquet.

6 ravishing shades. In generous 10c and larger sizes at all drug and toilet goods counters.

Cashmere Bouquet Face Powder

Another member of Cashmere Bouquet—the Royal Family of Beauty Preparations whom the grandparents adore, while feeling that the figure is nothing to brag about.

George goes home to lunch. It's only a two-minute drive from the studio. Anyway, he likes eating at home, and it makes a nice break in the day for his mother, whose idea of recreation is feeding people. Milk, steak and peanuts are his favorite foods. He eats peanuts with orange juice for breakfast. As a kid, he sneaked his brother's cigarettes and found the taste so lousy he's never wanted to try it again. Coffee he drinks only on hunting trips.

When working, he goes to bed at nine and studies his script there. He reads between takes, likes Conrad, Shaw and O'Neill, and invariably picks a straight-backed chair to sit on—or a box, if he can find one. He takes care of his own Cadillac—a cinch when you've spent your life messing with tractors—plays the mandolin, sleeps in pajama pants, has a weakness for cowboy hats, owns three suits—all gray—and a dozen pairs of blue jeans. What he'd like best to forget is himself wearing a sarong in "Cowboy and the Blonde."

No phone conversation with George lasts more than two minutes if he can help it. He loves music, from which category jazz is excluded, and approaches radios fearfully, lest his ears be blasted by one of our better swing bands. Baseball, football, boxing—any of the hardier sports—are his dish. Nowadays he plays tennis and golf to escape utter frustration. "Don't box, you might get your ear clipped," the studio tells him. "Don't fool around horses, you might get a kick in the snout." matrimonial intent . . .

"Luckily," he says, "they don't mind my painting. No matter how rotten the picture is, the easel never rears back and clouts me one." He's rigged up the den as a studio, and most days off find him out in the sun with his palette. Once a week he takes the folks to the movies. Mamma came home from "Riders of the Purple Sage," wailing. "Why did you treat the men so mean?"

His closest friends are the Fondas, MacMurrays and Watson Webb, a cutter at Twentieth Century-Fox. Because of the ever-present relatives, he doesn't entertain at home. "You can't ask four people to dinner, when maybe eight more'll drop in unannounced." Night clubs he can do without. His dancing has improved, but it still doesn't fit in, he explains, being strictly Montana style, a hop and a skip. He's gone to parties at Ciro's when invited, but never on his own.

Ask him about girls in general and Ginger in particular, and his friendliness congeals slightly but thaws right out again. It's a case of the burnt child. "Ginger's a lovely person, and my friend. But I haven't had a date with her in a long time, and there never was any question of marriage. They make mountains out of molehills. Ann Miller went out with me once, and they had us going together for the next six weeks, which I happened to be spending in Montana. I haven't been out with a girl since I took Elyse Knox to the opening of the Cornell show. That was a good two months ago."

Matrimony isn't in the cards yet. When it is, the girl can be tall or short, blonde or brunette. But she's got to like to laugh, and she's got to feel the same way about the ranch that he does.

The ranch is uppermost in his mind. He bought a huge old silver candlestick, because it looked as if it belonged on a farm. He bought andirons too big for his present fireplace, but they'll be just right for the one he's going to build in his ranch-house. He'll breed cattle and raise every conceivable kind of food. "After all, how would the people around this town live, if it weren't for what's raised on a ranch?" He'll have books and a Capehart and records like "Scheherezade" and the "Grand Canyon Suite," and a girl who likes to laugh. Evening chores over, they'll sit by the fireplace, read and listen, laugh and be free.

"Even if I were sap enough," says George, "to take a Ciro girl and try to put her on the farm, I couldn't afford it. She'd need her airplane to fly back and forth. And I'll need the money for grain."

THE STRANGE CASE OF GEORGE SANDERS

(Continued from page 34)

benefits and money-raising parties for Britain since have been conspicuous for his absence. This has raised several interesting theories about town.

One is that George Sanders is really more Russian than British and therefore not too concerned over King and Empiah. He was born in Russia, and his mother was half Russian. Another theory is that his sister, married to a German and living now in Berlin, might face retaliatory measures if he campaigned in Hollywood against the Reich. A third is that Sanders doesn't "belong" to the right little, tight little British set back home and is therefore locally snubbed by the limey colony.

A reason that holds better water, however, is that George's singular philosophy rises above such trifles as nationalities and wars. It's not exactly laziness so much as disdain. He has never been cooperative in what he considers non-essentials.

Four years ago when George made "Lancer Spy" at Twentieth Century-Fox, it was decided he had something worth a publicity build-up. T.C.F. runs notoriously to romances in the ballyhoo department. There were many unattached stars around the Zanuck lot then. Efforts were made to couple George romantically with such lovelies as Alice Faye, Sonja Henie, Loretta Young and Virginia Field. Parties at the Trocadero were promoted only to have disappointed sirens jilted by George. "I don't like night clubs, and I don't like women!" he said. "They bore me." When repeated pressure finally managed a date with a certain star, they met for an introduction at the studio. As George left, he took the lady aside.

"Look," he said, "if we must go out, let's go to a quiet place where we won't be seen. You see, I'm already romantically involved with another girl, and I wouldn't want her to know about it. Please do me this favor. You don't mind, do you?"

The star flared like a Roman candle. "I certainly do mind!" she sizzled and stamped out of the place. That was the last attempt to build up George via the gossip columns.

The romantically involved young lady was George's present wife, Susan Sanders. Susan's original name was Elsie, but when one of George's studios, RKO, began glamorizing Elsie the Cow, she changed her name, rather touchily. She is twenty-six, nine years younger than George.

Mrs. Sanders went with George three years before they were secretly married about a year ago. No siren or screen queen of movieland has ever threatened their romance, although Susan is not the bedazzling type to battle Hollywood glamor. Susan is small, on the plump side, with brown hair and eyes, an extremely sweet face, entirely in love with her husband and super-wifely in attention to his interests and comforts. She was a former Hollywood high school girl, is a non-professional and has no more social ambitions for the gay screen set than George. All who know her like and admire her. But few indeed know her.

She has never been to a premiere, a preview or out to dine and dance at the Mocambo or any other night club. She has never been to a Hollywood party. His wife has never seen George shoot a scene. None but his intimate friends and family have met her. The mystery man has a super-mystery wife.

The Sanders live most of the time in Laguna Beach, a resort riviera south of Hollywood. Laguna is an ideal retreat for dreamy George. First, because it's an artist colony where no inquisitive Babbitts can bother his private life, and second, because it's on the sea. George's prime passion in life is swimming and boating. He's an excellent diver and has been building his own boats and sailing them since he was a kid. When he first came to Hollywood, he built a sloop and lived on it, shifting around from Santa Monica to San Pedro to Catalina so elusively that his studio, Fox, hired a marine sleuth to relay his set calls.

The sloop ate into George's income too much, however (George counts his pennies), and he gave it up to take one of those early Spanish, late Sears-Roebuck mansions on the right side of the tracks in Beverly Hills. There he lodged himself, his brother and mother and father, whom he brought over from England. But both the plush surroundings and family eye on his private life got too sticky for George. He moved into an apartment in the Hollywood hills and shipped the family to Laguna. Now he maintains both places, moving with Susan from one to the other as studio appointments demand.

a local Rip Van Winkle . . .

In both he leads a sort of feudal, baronial life. Comfort for King George is the prime order of the house. His brother, Tom Conway, who works at M-G-M, also dwells with his wife in the Hollywood apartment. Each night after dinner, George and his brother retire from the dinner table, leaving the women to themselves. They play chess far into the night without a word to their wives. Sometimes they graciously include them in a rubber of bridge.

In Laguna, George is seen riding around in his Buick convertible while Susan drives, she in the front seat, George imperially in back. Sometimes he wears tweeds or beach clothes, sometimes a robe and slippers. Some visitors to the Sanders' seaside haven were once startled when Mrs. Sanders met them in the front room and said, "You don't mind if George makes himself comfortable, do you?" They said of course not. Whereupon George traipsed in clothed in a billowing nightshirt, adjusted himself in a prone position on a chaise longue and yawned a greeting. From then on he was charming.

Things like this have brewed a local Rip Van Winkle legend around George Sanders. He himself says he needs sixteen hours in the hay daily to feel good. On the set he cat-naps between takes, and even dozes in the face of people talking to him. The general impression is that life has handed George a perpetual sleeping powder—but that's not exactly the case.

As a close friend of his debunks this: "George pulls the sleep act mostly to avoid boring small talk and cheap conversation. It's a defense. He actually has such a high-speed mind that he can't stand ordinary people and their chatter."

If Sanders snoozed all available hours away from the camera, as the drowsy legend has it, he would have time for nothing else but mattress work. The fact is, no star in Hollywood uses his waking brain more. No star is better read, more correctly informed, more wrapped up in abstract studies, personal projects and hobbies. None has such an elastic mind, can speak as many languages as well or can hold forth as intelligently on as many subjects. He couldn't possibly handle all that knowledge with his face in the pillow.

George can rattle off flawless Russian, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian and several more tongues with ease. He proved that briefly in "Man Hunt," in which the perfection of his Nazi gutturals astonished audiences who knew German. But the other day, spouting Spanish for a "Falcon" picture, George caused Latin Mona Maris to exclaim, "It's impossible to believe you aren't a Latin American. There isn't a trace of accent in your Spanish; it's perfect."

George reads as well as talks in all six tongues. The philosophers, historians, novelists and biographers of most lands are familiar to him, as well as the mathematicians, engineers and scientific theorists. As a matter of fact, George Sanders is an intellectual and a scholar, a fact which he likes to disguise by bawdy humor and a sleepy, indifferent pose.

When he's buried, either in a book or his thoughts, he resents being approached. Not long ago his brother brought a visiting Englishman into the Sanders house,

I ROLL MY OWN!
I PUT KLEENEX TISSUES AROUND EACH LOCK OF HAIR BEFORE FASTENING METAL CURLERS—IT HELPS PREVENT HAIR-ENDS FROM SPLITTING—MAKES CURLS LARGER—SOFTER!
(from a letter by E. M. G., Fresno, Calif.)
Thumbs UP!
WHEN THE CAN OPENER SLIPPED—I USED SOFT, ABSORBENT KLEENEX AS AN EMERGENCY BANDAGE—DINNER WAS READY ON TIME!
(from a letter by M. G., Los Angeles, Calif.)
"TELL ME ANOTHER" AND WIN $5.00 says KLEENEX*
WE PAY $5.00 FOR EVERY "TRUE CONFESSION" WE PUBLISH ON KLEENEX* TISSUES.
MAIL YOURS TO KLEENEX, 919 N. MICHIGAN AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
WHEN MY NOSE IS SORE I'M SORE ALL OVER!
... SO IT'S KLEENEX FOR MINE WHEN I CATCH COLD... THE TISSUES ARE FULL SIZE, SOFT AND STRONG!
(from a letter by C. E., Peoria, Ill.)
(*Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

led him to the front room and excused himself. George was stretched out on the divan, deep in some tome and his reflections on it. The visitor stood about awkwardly, as George made no move to greet or even notice him. After a few minutes, he was startled by George's deep voice, booming, "For God's sake, Old Man, don't hover about like that!"

stony silence . . .

Directors, actors, cameramen and all Hollywood set busybodies have learned to leave George strictly alone on his sets. That doesn't mean he's necessarily a male Garbo. When he's in the mood, George likes to be the life of the party. But he has to ask for it. It's that way all along.

His stand-in, Jack Dawson, worked for him six months before George spoke to him. Jack never prompted the conversation for a good reason. He had told RKO he was a pal of George's and had worked with him for months before. Actually, they'd never met. Finally, one day George turned to Jack and frowned, "How did you ever happen to be my stand-in, anyway?" Jack confessed the hoax promptly. "Priceless, Old Man, priceless!" bellowed George. They've been firm set friends since.

Irving Reis, who has directed the last few "Falcons," never mentions his next scene to George, even though he knows full well Sanders never learns one line of dialogue in advance. "If I disturb him and upset his thoughts, he'll brood," Reis explains. "By the time we get to it, he'll be exasperated with the idea and give it drudging attention. If I wait and say, 'George, here's what we do now,' and spring it cold, he'll hop right to it and do it perfectly."

George Sanders never studies his lines at home. He seldom learns them sitting on the set. Usually he finds out what he's to say in the scene's rehearsal. "Any dialogue in this one?" he'll ask. Then his quick mind catches it in one reading. Most directors place him on their "best actor" list. Usually, too, he comes up with suggestions about his lines or action that are pure inspiration. More than once he has solved knotty shooting problems for directors—but always ones in which he is involved. Never does George kibitz or offer help to other actors. When they volunteer advice to him, he returns it with sarcastic scorn.

Wendy Barrie is an impulsive, talkative actress who has been withered at work more than once by George. Once she was nervously impatient at the slow way George entered the scene. "Come in faster, George," she cried. "Snap it up." George gave her a cold stare and slowed down. Each time she repeated the advice he came in irritatingly slower until he was finally creeping. That cured her.

Set sociability is completely out when it's offered unsought to Sanders. Sometimes, when pretty extra girls are sitting around, he is intrigued and regales them with jokes, songs, wisecracks and mild flirtations. Usually, however, he sits in his chair nodding (and thinking) or deep in a stack of magazines. He always eats alone, reading the while, in the commissary. He is not amused in the slightest by set jokes or playful gags.

When George made "Saint in Palm Springs," he was more jolly than usual, because most of the action was outdoors in the sun beside a swimming pool, and the landscape was packed with beautiful bathing girls. The unusual sunshine in George's soul emboldened set cut-ups. While he dozed in the sun, a joker planted that famous American waker-upper, a hot-foot.

George reacted satisfactorily to the exquisite pain. But he never said a word. He walked slowly to the pool, took off his shoe and bathed the burning toes. Then he picked up his clothes and walked off. It took some high-powered persuasion and apologies by almost everyone in the company to lure him back.

For a time, George lived next door to Maureen O'Hara, until one Fourth of July when Maureen set off a string of cannon crackers in her yard. George leaped from bed, dashed out in his pajamas and told Maureen what he thought of people like that.

As a matter of fact, Sanders in his private life is not the good neighbor by any stretch of the imagination. His complete independence and Olympian self-interest brews feuds wherever he goes. In Laguna, currently, he's carrying on one with Slim Summerville.

nix on neighbors . . .

That particular vendetta started when model airplanes on which Sanders is presently hipped, started buzzing from his front yard and zooming dangerously across the nose of Slim, resting on his veranda. When one model finally stukaed Slim on the head, he smashed it, angrily holding forth on what he thought of grown men who played with toys. An army bomber hedge-hopped the beach shortly after, and George sarcastically invited Slim to grab that one. In no time at all they were belligerently into the subjects of loud radios, offensive parties and everything.

What Slim Summerville didn't realize is that George's model airplanes aren't toys to him. If there's one thing Sanders is dead serious about it's his models and inventions. Some of them have been on the Rube Goldberg side, screwy gadgets —weighted chess boards that stayed level aboard a wallowing boat, self-waxing skis—things like that. Today aero-dynamics has George completelly absorbed. Already he has perfected a new wing design, and his major advance interest is rocket-propelled ships.

George's gadgets are in dead earnest, all right, but some other inventions of his aren't quite so on the up-and-up. In certain malicious moods, Sanders can invent wonderful tall tales about himself, for instance. Publicity men are always certain of a daily item or a "story"

I SAW IT HAPPEN

What happens when Sonja Henie loses her balance? Has she ever? It happened twice, before 2,000 spectating Chicagoans. First time, she passed it off; second time, though, she sailed into a corner, sat with her bowed head resting in her hands, crying. Her husband stood by consoling her. The sympathetic audience rose to the occasion, applauded madly, bringing her out again despite her bleeding knee. She was doubly cheered until the final curtain.

Eileen Koonce,
Hattiesburg, Miss.

* * *

Nelson Eddy was singing to a full house in a recent Chicago Civic Opera House concert. For an encore, he launched into "Wenzel's Song," the stuttering half-wit's aria from "The Bartered Bride." As he operatically stuttered in glorious half-wit fashion, a distracted lady in the audience jumped to her feet and tore down the aisle to the nearest exit, crying, "Good heavens! What's wrong with the man?"

M. W.,
Pekin, Illinois

Try Modern Halo Shampoo — Reveal Your Hair's Natural, Lustrous Color!

OLD-FASHIONED soapy shampoos leave a dull soap-film that robs your hair of natural beauty . . . a film like the soapy scum that collects in your washbowl!

That's why thousands of modern women are using ultra-modern Halo Shampoo!

Halo contains no soap . . . therefore can leave no soap-film! Halo is made with a special new-type ingredient—shampoos your hair to its natural, beautiful color and luster . . . lathers gloriously even in hardest water!

And Halo removes dandruff from your scalp the very first time you use it!

What's more, Halo leaves your hair so sweet and clean you don't even need a lemon or vinegar after-rinse!

So switch to Halo Shampoo today . . . available at all toilet goods counters in generous 10¢ or larger sizes!

A Product of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet

REVEALS THE BEAUTY HIDING IN YOUR HAIR

Don't be a Hide-out use

Hide-it

SEE HOW SKIN-BLEMISHES VANISH FROM SIGHT!

No need to let either temporary or permanent blemishes spoil your charm. HIDE-IT conceals pimples, birthmarks, freckles, dark under-eye circles, most scars and other blemishes. Lasting . . . harmless . . . used by millions of women.

PERFECT FOR POWDER BASE

Makes skin look smoother. Holds powder amazingly long. Large jar, $1.00 at Drug and Dept. Stores. Purse size at 10c counters—or send us 10c and shade wanted (Light, Medium, Rachelle, Brunette, Sun-tan).

CLARK-MILLNER SALES CO.
308 W. Erie St., Dept. 242, Chicago

if they press George for one. "Only," as one laments, "they're all dreamed up and you can't use them." It's just another symptom of George's scorching disdain for what the world thinks of him, also a subtle protective device. If everyone doubts everything, they won't print anything, which suits him perfectly. He never reads what's written about him; half the time he never sees his own pictures.

Not long ago, Twentieth Century-Fox received a letter from a man in the East. He said he wanted to thank George Sanders for saving his life, but he couldn't reach him. The letter unfolded this tale:

malice and honey . . .

Some months ago, this man had been at the end of his rope, jobless, homeless and hungry. With no hope in sight, he was wandering to the Santa Monica Pier to end it all, when a car rolled past and a big guy yelled, "Hey, Buddy, how about having a steak with me. You know, I simply can't bear to eat alone." The steak was a three-dollar one, and when the big guy let him out of the car, he yelled, "Say, I believe you dropped something." It was a ten-dollar bill. That (said the letter) meant a shave, bath, rest and a start toward the East and an aircraft factory job. A wife came next and a baby, and now that everything was rosy (said the man) he'd like to thank Sanders, whom he'd later recognized, for saving his life.

It was a terrific story. Confronted with it, George shrugged. "I don't remember," he said. The publicity man swooned. He couldn't use it.

When all sorts of rumors floated about Hollywood concerning George's marital status (he has never openly admitted matrimony) implying he was flouting conventions, George fed the fire with wisecracks. One blunt question drew this answer: "This is a Hell of a town! A man can't live in peace without scurrilous rumors of matrimony spreading around."

For a gentleman with such unconventional actions and attitudes, George Sanders is surprisingly conservative in a lot of things. In clothes, for instance, he sticks to dark suits and ties, and his favorite hat is a midnight-blue Homburg. He owns not a speck of jewelry, not even a watch. When a wrist ticker was necessary for his "Saint" roles, RKO had to dig up a prop one. Despite his storied laziness, he is perennially prompt, carefully shaven and meticulously clean. He's especially careful of his hands, which are graceful and well manicured. On the set he empties the water cooler keeping them washed.

He is never sick, and how his 220-pound, six-foot, four-inch frame survives on his sparse, irregular diet is another mystery. Half the time he skips lunch, lying on the set munching apples and nuts, reading and chain-cigarette-smoking. He never wears make-up—except powder. His uninspired haircuts are the bane of the make-up rooms. George fancies himself clipped close up the sides, short on top, à la the best American dandy style. He looks far better with some nap around his big ears. So studios have overcome this by offering free, supervised haircuts for a month in advance of every picture.

That appeals to George, because in money matters he is canny. He makes $1450 a week, not a top movie check, but not bed-ticking, either. Most of this he salts away. Outside of his parents, whom he supports, his own expenses are pretty negligible, as movie expenses run.

George recently bought several lots in Hollywood between Melrose Avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard. Typical of his indifference to swank, the site lies in a decidedly unfashionable location, where no other star in Hollywood would dream of building. Typical of his shrewdness, it allows him to build at low cost and low taxes a large house with enough room for a badminton court and swimming pool. That will satisfy one of his major athletic ambitions—to step from his bedroom to a court to a pool without interrupting his thoughts.

On the muscle side, George used to box and play tennis. Now he prefers stretching out on the beach with an occasional plunge in the surf. At Laguna his favorite group athletic pastime is a queer game called "French cricket." It differs from the Eton variety like this: You never run. You just stand in one place while people bowl balls at your legs which you deflect with the bat, never lifting this bat off the ground. When a ball hits it and bounds away, runs are scored by passing the bat around your midriff. As many times as you can circle the tummy, that many runs do you score. Only Sanders could seize on a motionless ball game like that and really enjoy it!

The Sanders house project refutes his most oft-stated ambition. That is, to get out of Hollywood and retire to a Sanders-owned island somewhere in the South Seas or the West Indies. For years George has said he's only hanging around the studios to collect enough wealth to sail somewhere away from telephones, inquisitive females and first-of-the-month bills, where he can tinker and reflect in peace.

It may be he has decided the stack of cash will take a while more to collect; or again, since women for some unaccountable reason have picked on his cad roles to idolize, Hollywood may be taking measures to keep him around.

anti commercial . . .

In the meantime, George is seeing to it that his unique personality, comforts, and general outlook on life aren't warped by crass Hollywood commercialism.

The other evening, Director Irving Reis needed George for some important wind-up scenes of "A Date With the Falcon." He was due back at Fox the next morning for "Son of Fury," else heavy cash penalties loomed ($3500 a week is Sanders' loan-out price).

Since George has no watch, Reis decided to trick him into sweet oblivion until he could get the scenes. Quickly he called some pretty extra girls and told them to be entertaining. The prop room wheeled over a piano. That worked for a few hours while carpenters labored to dress the set. When George stopped playing, Reis sent waiters scurrying in with pitchers of his favorite light beverage, ale. That put George to sleep. The twelfth hour passed.

Knowing all would be well if George rested until called for action, Reis strictly shushed all hands. They hammered with rags over nails and gumshoed around silently shifting lights. At the fifteenth hour, all was about ready for action. Then a carpenter on high dropped his hammer. It landed near George with a loud "Ka-lump."

Mr. Sanders straightened up in his chair, gazed around the set and out the dusk-darkened door, at the people still padding ghostily around, long after hours. Then he bolted to his feet.

"What the Hell am I doing here?" he shouted and tore out into the night.

They never saw him again.

Greyhound Does

Double Duty

ON AMERICA'S

HIGHWAYS TO VICTORY

Greyhound is putting America's highways to work for America! Super-Coaches are now actively in the war—taking selectees to military centers, carrying men on leaves and furloughs, serving in emergency military movements.

Motor buses are indispensable to civilian war effort, too—carrying workers to more defense projects than are served by any other transportation. What's more, Greyhound travel saves precious fuel, rubber and metal needed to win the war.

Mail to Nearest of these Greyhound Offices:
NEW YORK CITY • CLEVELAND, O. • PHILADELPHIA, PA. CHICAGO, ILL. • FORT WORTH, TEX. • MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. • CHARLESTON, W.VA. • BOSTON, MASS. • CINCINNATI, O. • DETROIT, MICH. • ST. LOUIS, MO. WASHINGTON, D. C. • LEXINGTON, KY. • RICHMOND, VA. MEMPHIS, TENN. • NEW ORLEANS, LA.

GREYHOUND

DESTINATION: VICTORY FOR THE U. S. A.!

This brings Defense Map of America

Just off the press—lithographed in full colors—fit for framing. Shows principal Army, Navy, Marine camps and bases . . . gives information on military insignia, rank of officers and men. For your free copy, mail this coupon to nearest Greyhound Information Office, listed above.

Name_____

Address_____ MO-4

In Laxatives, too, there's a

HAPPY MEDIUM!

EX-LAX is
—not too strong!
—not too mild!
—it's just right!

WHAT kind of a laxative do you take? One that's so strong it weakens and upsets you? Or one that's so mild it fails to give you the relief you want?

Then try Ex-Lax—the Happy Medium laxative! Ex-Lax is as effective as any laxative you'd ever want to take. But it's kind and gentle, too! It won't upset you. It won't make you feel bad afterwards. What's more, Ex-Lax tastes good—just like fine chocolate!

Ex-Lax is as good for children as it is for grown-ups. Naturally, like any effective medicine, Ex-Lax should be taken only according to the directions on the label... You can get a box at any drug store for only 10c or 25c.

IF YOU HAVE A COLD AND NEED A LAXATIVE—

It's particularly important when you're weakened by a cold not to take harsh, upsetting purgatives. Take Ex-Lax! It's thoroughly effective, yet not too strong!

EX-LAX
The Chocolated Laxative

Copyright, 1942, by Ex-Lax, Inc.

"GAS"? HEARTBURN? For fast, longer relief from acid indigestion, heartburn and other discomforts, due to excess stomach acid, try JESTS! Mint-flavored. Contain no bicarbonate of soda. Gnaranteed by the makers of Ex-Lax.

10c A ROLL—3 for 25c

High School Course at Home Many Finish in 2 Years

Go as rapidly as your time and abilities permit. Course equivalent to resident school work—prepares for college entrance exams. Standard H.S. texts supplied. Diploma. Credit for H. S. subjects already completed. Single subjects if desired. High school education is very important for advancement in business and industry and socially. Don't be handicapped all your life. Be a High School graduate. Start your training now. Free Bulletin on request. No obligation.

American School, Dpt. H-414, Drexel at 58th, Chicago

IN THIS OUR LIFE

(Continued from page 61)

midnight, because he had to operate next morning at his stupid hospital.

Within six months of that night she'd slipped away with Peter into romantic moonlight, Stanley knew that she was bored with him.

It was dreadful to be bored. It frightened her. You grew old, so soon. And then you were bored all the time; and drab and unexciting.

Yet somehow she'd never quite counted on the violence of the last row between them. She'd never expected Peter to all but order Betty out of her house, even drunk as he generally was nowadays. She hadn't expected him to slap her, when she began to abuse and taunt him.

And the next morning—finding his dead body in a quiet heap of eternal reproach. To Stanley, suicide was incomprehensible.

But Peter was dead. His growing misery was ended, so suddenly. And Betty was telephoning Long Distance frantically. And Stanley was lying in a dark room, sobbing and screaming and—way down deep inside her—terrified. Terrified because anyone could want death.

Roy came from home and looked after her. Peter's brother appeared and made many bewildering arrangements. Then Stanley was starting off again, with Roy's steady arms around her to comfort her.

"I loved him, Roy," she sobbed. "I—loved him!"

woman alone . . .

They bought her black clothes, assuming that she'd want to wear them. Widow's weeds. She was Peter's widow! The word depressed her almost as much as the somber dresses. It was hateful, having to mope around a house when outside a whole world spun and shimmered.

Even Roy and Craig had gotten over their unhappiness. They saw a lot of each other. People said they might be married. Life still offered them plenty. What did it offer her? Peter had cheated her!

The fast roadster Uncle William had given her before her runaway still stood in the garage. But now Uncle William was afraid she might run off in it, leaving him again to be bored by his dutiful wife and his various tiresome ailments. So he laid down a law that Parry (Ernest Anderson), the son of her mother's old negro, Minerva (Hattie McDaniel), must drive for her.

Never in her swift-paced life had Stanley obeyed an order. Besides, Parry worked daytimes in Craig's office; struggling to rise above his humble origins, to become a lawyer like his idol. Why should a chaperone spy on every move she made?

She drove the car herself, knowing Uncle William could be aware of no difference. Fast motion—eighty-five miles an hour, with wind in your face!—was a blessed relief, a renewal of excitement, a rise of wings in her breast. She had begun to live again, Stanley had.

"And now—" she murmured to the wind—"Now, about Craig!"

Craig never really had belonged to Roy, she assured herself. Only their mutual suffering had brought them together. He had been hers. He still could be hers! Of course, he'd been giving her that dead-fish look whenever they met in her father's parlor. But—

A few days after she had discarded her mourning, Parry was showing Stanley into his employer's office. It was about poor Peter's insurance; a policy withholding payments until a year after death. Stanley looked wide-eyed up into Craig's face, explaining her troubles. Couldn't she borrow on it? Just a little something, so she could go away somewhere? No one knew how wretched she was. No one knew!

Craig was more difficult than she had anticipated. He didn't react to her smile, to her nearness, the way he once had. Oh, but she could change all that!

"You're afraid of me!" she challenged him. "You wouldn't dare meet me tonight, at seven, at the South Side Tavern—alone!"

She went to the tavern, confident her taunt and his own desire would bring him. But he didn't come. At seven-thirty, she called her father. But he told her that Craig had gone out with Roy for the evening.

Stanley hung up the receiver with a hard glint in her eyes, and marched outside to her roadster. So! Craig had jilted her, now!

The speedometer quivered as she urged her car onward, working out her rage in deadly speed. She never even saw the woman and child in the path of her headlights—until the wheel jerked in her hands.

annoying questions . . .

The police came to her father, Asa Timberlake's (Frank Craven) house, next morning.

There had been no close witness to the fatal hit-and-run accident they were investigating. But a gray roadster had been glimpsed, speeding away. Just such a roadster had been found abandoned in an alley. It was Mrs. Kingsmill's roadster. Much as they hated to question a lady—

Stanley was charm itself. Stanley was all fluttering horror at what they told her. But she had not left her father's house since she came in, yesterday, before dinner. Hate to admit it as she did, Parry Clay sometimes drove for her. Yes, the negro boy. Perhaps—?

Parry's arrest was in the evening papers. And Craig, his boss and best friend, had refused to represent him. And the police had not listened to his statements that he had been at home, studying, the night before. The relief which shook Stanley was tremendous!

She was dancing near her phonograph, sipping a drink as she wheeled, when Roy came home. There was something grim about Roy's eyes. Stanley didn't like them. They made her nervous again, as she'd been until it was quite sure that Parry would pay for that miserable mishap.

Roy came in quietly and sat down and began to ask questions.

"Stanley—you love driving fast, don't you? Sometimes, accidents happen. Terrible as they are, the worst thing is not 'fessing up."

Questions! Hadn't Minerva, Parry's mother, been telling the truth when she swore Miss Stanley had 'phoned her boy not to come by for the car last night? Wasn't Parry telling the truth, in his cell?

Question after question! Roy never lifted her voice, nor dropped the cool appraisal of her glance. It raked Stanley's raw nerves like hot claws, that examination. It left her screaming denials, shrieking for her parents, sobbing in her mother's arms. But Roy kept on.

"If Stanley doesn't tell you both, I must." Roy! Roy, revenging herself now for losing Peter! Stanley hated her, hated her!

"I was at home when the accident happened! I was!"

But Roy only shrugged. "When did she telephone you, Father?"

And Asa Timberlake wouldn't lie about that. It was seven-thirty. And Stanley couldn't have got back from where she was between that hour and the time the speeder struck.

Craig came in, too. The police had found keys in the car, Craig said. Parry's keys? Oh, no, Craig said. For Parry's set was safe at his ramshackle cabin on Catfish Row!

deeper and deeper . . .

He was going to take her down and make her admit she had done it, before a magistrate! Stanley couldn't believe it. But all her smiles, all her sobs, all her pleas, hadn't swayed him.

She went upstairs to get a hat, pretending compliance. She sped down by the back way, out to the garage, into her returned roadster. Its great motor howled defiance as it flung through the town toward Uncle William's mansion. Uncle's money, Uncle's power—

But Uncle William sat huddled before an unlit fire. He never even listened. When she screamed at him, trying to make him comprehend, he only groaned about his own troubles.

Stanley left him, still sobbing out the black bitterness of her hatred. She crouched at the wheel of her roadster, and it whipped on through rocketing darkness. They couldn't catch her! They'd never catch her! Ghosts seemed to be screaming at her heels; Asa, Uncle, Craig, Peter, even loyal black Parry. But they wouldn't try to help her now!

A siren wailed to her rear. A police car, giving chase! But it couldn't catch her! Once she rounded this next bad curve ahead and—

She never heard the scream in her own throat as her car left the highway, sideswiping a tree. She never felt the jarring impact as it rolled over. She never knew that a tall young officer in uniform climbed out of the police car, a moment later, and bent above her.

To the last man in her life, Stanley Timberlake wasn't even a name. He couldn't fill it in on the blank where he wrote, presently, his terse report of an accident. Woman driver. Found dead.

PRODUCTION

The first turn of the cameras recorded a Brent-de Havilland love scene—their first since "Wings of the Navy" four years ago.

After Take No. 1, George stepped back, eyed Olivia closely, exclaimed "My, how the young lady has grown up!" Olivia smiled thoughtfully, said nothing to remind him that since 1938, she's been made love to by cinematic experts Charles Boyer, Errol Flynn, Henry Fonda and "gone steady" with Jimmy Stewart, Franchot Tone, Gene Markey.

George's conversation between scenes was limited to three subjects: Guns, sailboating and life in Hollywood. His observations on them never varied. Guns are wonderful; sailing is a great sport; Hollywood is a hard-working little village where everyone turns in by 11:00 P.M.

Chicken dealers got to be a familiar sight on the set. George had overheard Annie, the love of his life, telling a pal she wanted chickens on her new ranch. As a surprise, he bought her a pair of every known species. Now that they're married and living on the ranch, he's the one who has to rise in the early morning hours to feed 'em!

During production, Olivia was notified that she'd been chosen Official Nansen Hut Girl by the boys at Camp Barrow, Iceland. Every iron dwelling now has an especially autographed photo of Livvie hanging on the wall. Excerpt from one of the "thank you" notes: "Your picture is as good a unit of heat as our stoves."

two-day emoting . . .

The top dramatic scene took such emotional toll of Bette Davis, the master scene was shot on one day, and the close-ups were postponed 'til the following day. In it, Bette turns on the hysterics, pleads pitifully to Charles Coburn to save her from the police. Coburn, playing his role of William Fitzroy in a wheel chair, has only eight short but important words of dialogue in the entire scene. Commented Mr. Coburn after his day's work: "I felt exactly like the cymbals in a symphony orchestra, coming in at the precise moment I'm needed, then fading away into the background again."

Cameraman Ernest Haller is Hollywood's Emily Post on the subject of man-hits-woman scenes. Began studying the correct technique while filming "Gone With The Wind," then followed up with post-graduate course while photographing "Jezebel," "Dark Victory" and "Manpower." Says he's hardened to it now and didn't flinch once while watching Dennis Morgan following his advice on how to administer a beating to Bette Davis.

Lanky John Huston is the topic of the month in Hollywood because of his direction of "The Maltese Falcon." When he was assigned to "In This Our Life," the "Falcon" cast made him promise them he'd give them parts in the new picture. If you look closely, you'll see Mary Astor as a bar-room floozy; Peter Lorre will be an undistinguishable shape dodging in front of Bette's car; Humphrey Bogart, as a menacing shadow on a glass

GIVE YOUR EYES A CHANCE—AND WIN A PRIZE!

How would you like to be chosen as the girl with the prize winning eyes? If you have expressive eyes, here's how you can make them lovely enough to win a movie contract, 6-piece wardrobe, or any one of ten exciting prizes.

Let Camille mascara, the new smearproof, waterproof cosmetic that makes lashes look longer and lovelier, and Camille eyebrow pencil, the color-right, smooth-marking crayon, bring out all the hidden beauty and expression your eyes really have! Then, with your eyes gloriously at their best, enter this contest, sponsored by Camille, Inc., and Republic Pictures for the girls with the loveliest eyes.

TO ENTER THE CONTEST: Buy any three 10c Camille products at your 5 and 10c store. Send these three cards or boxtops (or reasonable facsimiles thereof), together with your photo or snapshot (preferably your face only, and the larger the better). Any number of your photos may be sent, but each must be accompanied by three cards or boxtops. Address: Contest Director, Camille, Inc., Morristown, N. J.

FIRST PRIZE:

A screen role in a Republic film for two weeks, at the Republic Studios in Hollywood, at a salary of $100 per week. As the guest of Republic Pictures, all expenses (such as hotel bill and transportation) will be paid. IN ADDITION you will be presented with a stunning fur coat from I. J. Fox, "America's Largest Furriers."

HERE ARE THE OTHER THRILLING PRIZES:

- A strikingly original, 6-piece wardrobe from Townley Frocks Inc., consisting of fall suit, daytime dress, dinner gown and lounging pajamas, all created by Claire McCardell, leading American designer.
- An exquisite diamond 17 jewel, irridium platinum Wrist Watch by Gruen, makers of the "Precision Watch."
- A genuine Tecla necklace of perfectly matched pearls from Tecla Pearls, Inc., famous for the "World's Finest Culture Pearls."
- A Scholarship in Fashion and Photographic Modelling at smart Mayfair Mannequin Academy, Fifth Avenue, New York.
- And 5 gorgeous, jewel-encrusted sets of costume jewelry, consisting of bracelet, necklace, earrings and ring, by "Karu," well known Fifth Avenue jewelers.

JUDGES: M. J. Siegel, President Republic Pictures; Walter Thornton, head of Thornton Model Agency; the Beauty Editors of Photoplay, Glamour, Motion Picture, Screen Guide, Screenland and Modern Screen.

ALL ENTRIES MUST BE IN BY JULY 1st, 1942. (All selections will be final.)

BLACK • BROWN • BLUE • GREEN

CAMILLE

GLAMOR-EYES MAKEUP

Cake Mascara — Cream Mascara — Eyebrow Pencil. 10c at leading 5 & 10 cent stores, also at many drug stores — or for information write to Camille, Inc., Morristown, N. J.

FIRST LADY LOVELY LADY
CENTURY
2 BLOCKS OF STERLING SILVER ARE INLAID AT POINTS OF WEAR ON MOST USED SPOONS AND FORKS OF THIS BETTER SILVERPLATE.
Youth
DANISH PRINCESS

ASK ANY AUTHORIZED DEALER TO SHOW YOU COMPLETE SERVICES IN THESE POPULAR DESIGNS. SET FOR 6, $36.25 . . . 50 PIECES, ENOUGH FOR 8 PLACES, $63.25.

HOLMES & EDWARDS STERLING INLAID SILVERPLATE

Copyright 1942, International Silver Co., Holmes & Edwards Div., Meriden, Conn. In Canada, The T. Eaton Co., Ltd. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

5 x 7 PHOTO ENLARGEMENT FREE

ANY SUBJECT OR GROUP

Send any clear snapshot, photo, bust, full length, groups, scenes, baby, mother, dad, sweetheart, etc. We will enlarge to 5x7 on salon quality photographic paper FREE. Just send print or negative. We will also include information about hand coloring by expert artists who specialize in reproducing life-like likenesses and FREE FRAME. Your original returned with your FREE enlargement. Send now and kindly enclose 10c for return mailing. (Only 2 to a customer.)

IDEAL PORTRAIT COMPANY
P. O. Box 748 G. T., Church St. Annex, New York

Smooth AS A PUSSY WILLOW
See how HAMPDEN'S powder base 'smooths out' your skin, makes it soft, youthful! It subtly 'tints' your complexion, helps hide blemishes, gives you that lovely 'portrait finish.'
POWD'R-BASE
hampden
50c also 25c & 10c sizes
Over 18 million sold

door, will scare the dialogue right out of Olivia and George.

Before turning director, Huston was a cavalry man with the Mexican army, painter, actor, writer and magazine editor. Famous father Walter has agreed to trade-mark all his son's pictures by an appearance as a bit player. In this one, he's a bartender.

Shooting was interrupted by the studio's first air raid drill. Cast and crew ran to their assigned shelters, found them equipped with juke boxes, automatic "coke" machines and cards for gin rummy.

"Parry," the young colored boy, is played by Ernest Anderson, who's been working as a service attendant at the studio for three years, hoping for just such a chance as this. Bette recommended him for the role after hearing his beautiful speaking voice. Ernest is a graduate of Northwestern University's School of Speech.

Bette chose all the clothes she wears in the film. She had to be well-dressed, "with just a little bad taste showing through." Her make-up is typically "hussy." Peroxided locks, phony eyelashes, heavily-rouged lips fashioned in a full Cupid's bow.

Quickies: Hattie McDaniel gave her lucky rabbit's foot to Olivia, who in turn sent it to Gene Markey. . . . Billie Burke has christened her new station wagon "The Busy Bee." . . . Dennis Morgan gifted every member of the cast with a recording of the memorable "Bill of Rights" program. . . . Brent turned over his huge Hawaiian plantation to the government for use as an evacuation center for children in case of an air raid.

DOUBLE EXPOSURE

"A SIMPLY SUPER SOMEBODY"

(Continued from page 28)

a surprised male voice said, 'How . . . er . . . how are you?' I said I was fine enough to be giving a party on such and such a night and would he come, bringing his own girl. Still sounding baffled, but pleased, he said he'd love to, thanked me, and we hung up. I leaned back in my chair and wished that I hadn't invited this Bob person, because he seemed so astonished at the whole thing.

"Came the night of the party, and Bob Stack showed up with his girl—whom I happened to know. Always the perfect hostess, and thinking this tall, blond Mr. Apollo-stuff had come with one of the girls, I bounded up to him and said brightly, 'And I'm afraid I didn't catch your name.' He told me, and I realized then what I had done. I practically passed out, but when I came to, I explained, and he has been laughing about it ever since. However, that indicates one of Bob's best traits—he can handle any situation with perfect composure and poise."

Another thing that Ann likes about Bob is that, as she says, he isn't "entirely the Ciro kid." In Hollywood, where almost everyone is camera conscious all the time, Bob never seems to be aware of himself as a newsworthy object. He never "prepares to pose" several hours in advance.

Last fall he invited Ann to go to one of the season's top football games. She was all agog because she had a lush new Hattie Carnegie suit, a Persian lamb muff and hat, and she was prepared to cut a pretty dashing figure. When she opened the door for Bob, there he stood in weary grey slacks, a polo shirt open at the throat, enrobed in his cardinal varsity sweater with three gold bands that he had earned as a member of the polo team at U.S.C.

He looked at Ann, emitted a long, low whistle and said, "Whew!" in appreciation.

"Then," remembers Ann, "he was overwhelmed with the look of a small boy who has gotten himself into a terrific jam and doesn't know exactly how to get out. When he decked out for the game, he dressed just as Bob Stack, alumnus of U.S.C. should dress without giving a thought to the personality of Bob Stack, actor, to whom he refers as 'that jerk.' Considering what goes on in this town, you have to admire a boy who never takes it big, so I went straight upstairs and changed into rough-ems."

Every girl in this broad land who has gnawed her nails up to the last moment before the Big Party, hoping the man of her choice was going to telephone—finally—will relish this Stack news.

"Another thing about Bob that is simply super," says Ann, "is that he calls for a date about a week in advance of any important function. In case of opera, he asks several weeks in advance. Furthermore, he always calls my mother a day beforehand and asks her what color dress I'm going to wear. Even if I answer the telephone, he asks for mother. Then, upon hearing what the color is, he finds out what kind of flowers she thinks would be appropriate."

With this system in operation, it is no wonder that florists report that Bob has ordered everything from a halo of red carnations to a muff of violets.

the ideal suitor . . .

Continuing with the Rutherford appraisal, "Bob always notices what sort of a dress or suit a girl is wearing. He doesn't sabotage Webster, telling you how wonderful you look, but his eyes sort of light up and he says, 'Mmm-mmm!' or 'Whew!' and that starts the evening off with gusto—but gusto."

When there isn't a big date planned, Bob may call at seven, eight or nine some evening and say, "If you have no other plans, let's go somewhere." Or he may call and inquire, "How would a chocolate soda taste in about thirty minutes?" The "go somewhere" or the chocolate soda are usually prologues to an evening of bowling or record-listening.

"Speaking of dancing, now there's an athletic event at which Mr. Stack excels," reports Ann. "You can't know Bob very long without finding out that he has magnificent muscular coordination. By that I don't mean that because he was awfully good at whirling in 1928 in grade school, he goes on whirling all the days of his life, or that he ends every dance with a mighty dip. No, I mean that if the orchestra plays a waltz, he waltzes; if the music is rumba, he rumbas; if it's a conga chain, he takes you right into the first section instead of mumbling something about the floor being crowded, and dragging you back to the table. When it comes to music and rhythm, Bob is strictly from knowledge. His closest friend is a brilliant pianist with a name band, and the Stack collection of records makes me writhe with envy. But what else could you expect of the nephew of Richard Bonelli and the grandson of Modini Wood?"

A fourth E for excellence may be handed to Bob for his modesty, according to Ann.

"One evening I was invited to go on a beach party with a group of service men and their dates, but I was supposed to bring my own escort. Problem: who would feel at home under any circumstance and be liked instantly by the gang? I telephoned Bob, and he said sure, he'd be right over. Well, the evening was marvelous. We rode all the mad mechanical things on the pike—even went down the Chinese slide head first when none of the uniforms would chance it that way. Finally the boys began to tell about their experiences on the rifle range. One of them seemed to be pretty good, and the others were building him up as a Dead-Eye Dick. You should have seen Bob. He asked courteous questions about what kind of guns they used and how much target practice they were given, and how they were graded. He had those boys talking their heads off about range and bulls'-eyes, rounds and wind velocity. They were building themselves up—but BUILDING!

"Here's the pay-off: in 1937, Bob won the Western Open Skeet Match in competition with his own teacher, and in 1938 he won every single 12-gauge competition held in this country. But he didn't breathe one word of it to those boys. How's that for modesty?"

fast ones . . .

Wit is another of Bob's 22 carat possessions. To illustrate what Ann considers a fast and subtle pun, she recalls an incident that took place when she and Bob were dancing at Mocambo one night. Floating past them was a vision in white tulle. The stranger whooshed, she fluttered, she swooped. In her hair were two wings of tulle that added to her gliding effect.

"She looks whipped-creamy," Ann confided to Bob's adjacent ear. "She looks like something on top of a wedding cake."

"Yep," agreed Bob tersely. "A fly."

"Another appealing thing about Bob," Ann says further, "is his behavior with his mother. Betzi Stack is an unusual woman, of course, and something super in the mother line. But here's the point: Bob is independent, he could have his own bachelor apartment away from home, but the idea doesn't interest him. He and Betzi have a wonderful time, ribbing each other. They live in exactly the same house in which they lived when Bob was 5 years old, and the only change they have made is the purchase of the lot next door and the construction of a swimming pool. One afternoon we were all sitting around the pool. You know how men are: they act the way they're dressed. When they wear cowboy suits—they're cowboys; when they wear dinner clothes, they're Lucius Beebes; when they wear swimming trunks, they're Tarzans. Well, Bob was playfully pushing people into the pool, leaping over furniture and using a nearby table for a diving board. His mother called to him with authority, 'Robert, you stop that this instant.' He grinned and waved to her. 'Okay, Mother,' he said with an odd mixture of deference and indulgence."

Naturally, no character sketch is complete without a few whispers about the principal's lerve life. "Bob," explained Ann, dimpling nicely, "has two distinct sides to his amorous nature. He's affectionate—he likes to hold hands in a movie and to cuddle in a car. But if a girl felt low in the mind and wanted to have a good old cry, she could weep her woes on his shoulder without awakening the wolf in his nature. On the other hand, he's very responsive to moonlight and good music, and a summer drive along the beach. Beyond that I'm not saying a word, on account of I'm a gentleman, and gentlemen don't kiss and tell."

DOUBLE EXPOSURE

"THE GUY'S A JERK"

(Continued from page 29)

more mature. In "Bad Lands of Dakota" I thought that, by working without make-up, I would look fairly aged-in-the-wood, but when I saw a rough cut of the picture, I could taste ham on wry. And I mean W*R*Y. In the scenes with Richard Dix, who is plenty smooth, I looked like a Junior G-Man. They tell me that I'll get over this in time, but I'm in more of a hurry than time is."

Up until the end of the above sentence, Bob had been seated on the geographical center of his being—the small of his back—but he's as restless as a Mexican jumping bean in a corn popper. Leaping up he began to pace back and forth, hands sunk in pockets and chin sunk into the open neck of his shirt.

"Another thing that throws me for a loss is my reticence about calling people on the telephone. I'll walk around a

Will WAR Stop Hollywood DIVORCES?

FAST LIVING, fat salaries and phony attitudes toward life led many a movie star into divorce. But that is all changed now. Heavy taxes, war work, imminent personal danger and appreciation of life's serious side have sobered them all. See what has happened to Hollywood's Reno-bound stars in Screen Guide's searching exposé—this month!

Other Scoops in April Screen Guide—

What Clark Gable Will Do Now. Learn what he has planned since tragedy stole Carole Lombard from him.

How War Revolutionized Hollywood Night Life. The public once basked in stars' glory; now that's all reversed!

"Don't Tell Everything You Know!" by Paulette Goddard. No girl will forget what Paulette reveals here!

Lana Turner's Private Life. A "real life movie" of the affairs of the most-discussed star since Jean Harlow!

How Ida Lupino Gets By Without Beauty! An answer at last to a question most girls must answer for themselves.

"Why Jimmy Cagney Struts!" See "inside" his personality.

COLOR PORTRAITS of Irene Dunne, Ida Lupino and Paulette Goddard—each one worth framing! Also a sensational one-day diet; fashion news and beauty hints; pages of gossip and reviews!

SCREEN GUIDE APRIL ISSUE Now on Sale at ALL NEWSSTANDS 10¢

ATTENTION!
for those lovely Eyes

Attention, yes!—and love and romance, too—for the girl who learns the secret of lovely eyes.

WINX brings out the natural beauty and charm of your eyes. Makes lashes appear darker, longer, more luxuriant. WINX enlivens your whole appearance — gives you a new, fascinating loveliness.

Try WINX today. It's so easy to use. WINX (solid or creamy) Mascara, Eyebrow Pencil and Eye Shadow come in harmonizing shades. At drug, department or 10¢ stores.

Winx
FOR LOVELY EYES

Does your lipstick give these 4 DON JUAN beauty extras? Compare!

1. DON JUAN STAYS ON when you eat, drink, smoke, kiss, if used as directed.
2. LOOKS BETTER. No greasy "hard" appearance—no need for constant retouching. Over 5,000,000 sold. Try!
3. NOT DRYING OR SMEARY. Imparts appealing, soft "glamour" look. No ragged moth-eaten lip edges. Creamy smooth-easily applied. See for yourself.
4. STYLE SHADES: Military Red, clear red red; Hostess Red, brilliant red; No. 6, dark red; No. 7, dark raspberry.

Deluxe sizes $1. (7 shades) refills 60¢. Matching powder & rouge $1. each. Intermediate sizes 25¢ (prices plus tax). At Drug, Department Stores and Beauty Parlors.

LARGE PURSE SIZES AT 10c STORES

LIPSTICK REFILL SERVICE: Now Don Juan will clean and refill lipstick cases of all brands with new Don Juan Lipstick, for only 60c each. We match color in stick with approximate Don Juan shade. Simply mail lipstick with 60c and your address to Don Juan, Inc., 67 Vestry St., New York, N. Y.

telephone for an hour, eyeing it as if it were an octopus that I had to grapple, before I'll get up enough courage to spin the dial. People say, 'Give me a buzz some time soon,' and I say, 'Sure.' Then, when I don't call, they think I'm rude. I guess my trouble is this: I don't think you can judge by the voice on the other end of a wire what a person is really saying. I like to see the whites of their eyes—particularly when I ask a girl for a date. Over the telephone I can't tell whether a girl is just telling me off easy when she says she's sorry, but she happens to have a previous engagement. Yet, if I'm looking down at her in person, I know whether it would be policy to ask her again some time."

A siren came wailing up Sunset Boulevard and Bob loped over to the window to see what gave. Apparently it was a police car answering a hurry call, and not an air raid alarm—as one half expects all the time nowadays—but Bob was lost in preoccupation. Eventually, coming to the surface of the present, he blinked and looked mildly astonished.

out of this world . . .

"There I go again," he grumbled. "If I'm not an absent-minded professor, I don't know from Tuesday. It isn't that I lose interest in what is going on, it's just that I get to thinking about something and I'm oblivious—I mean, I'm out of this world. That habit gets me into plenty of trouble, take it from me. One night I took Mother and a friend of hers to a preview of a picture in Glendale. After the showing, we were walking through the lobby, and I was musing about some angles of the picture. I'm a great guy to 'why' every sequence, not only in my own pictures, but in each one I see. I was so busy analyzing that I was wandering along in a daze. So help me, I didn't even see this fellow come up to me, and I certainly didn't hear anything he said. The first thing I knew, Mother was jabbing my ribs as inconspicuously as possible, and I became conscious of a very angry and very important man in pictures dropping his proffered right hand, giving me a look you could have sold for cyanide and turning to walk away. It all dawned on me—he had spoken to me, started to shake hands and been met with old sleep-walker Stack's absent treatment.

"Naturally I jumped after him, pumped his arm and tried to make up for the slip, but I've never felt that he liked me since then. I notice that he always makes me speak first when we meet nowadays."

Sample 2 of Stack somnambulism deals with his birthday party this year. He decided to make quite a festivity of it, but he knew he would be in Palm Springs for a week or ten days beforehand. Whereupon he invested in some note paper and wrote two dozen invitations. He telephoned his mother to confer on the sip and bite items and planned an extensive menu. In a final lavish moment, he even engaged a three-piece Hawaiian orchestra, stranded in Los Angeles for the duration, thrilled by the chance.

Came the night of the party, and the clock ambled around to ten o'clock with a tick that could have been heard through the Stack silence halfway to Pasadena. It occurred to Bob to investigate his topcoat pockets. Umhuh, you guessed it—he forgot to mail the invitations.

Sample 3 (and we'll stop there before we scare ourselves into buying a memory course) finds Bob under a sun lamp, fast asleep. He was out of this world so long that he sustained a very serious burn and had to spend eight days in a hospital.

start from scratch . . .

Bob went on, "I'm gradually recovering from one trait of character that I hate in myself: frequently I take rumors too seriously. When a certain radio commentator hinted over the air one night that I had bought my way into pictures, I nearly blew my top. Just to set the record straight, I got my break in pictures just the way most of the beginners do nowadays. I worked for it by enrolling in a dramatic school and doing my share of spear-bearing for experience. The truth is that I, personally, don't think a person can buy his way into anything on a permanent basis; good, hard work is the only coin that trades for real success. I hope I'm not getting soggy when I say that I'm deadly in earnest about improving my work so that I'm a more capable actor with each picture I finish.

"All of which brings up another thing that I wish I weren't. I'm a perfectionist. I like to have things right. You know, the British have a saying to the effect that an Englishman plays a game for the sake of the game, but that an American only plays to win. Well, that's me all over. I never go into anything just for the exercise; I want to be good.

"To be quite honest, I always want to be champion. Not that I'm a trophy room hound, nor a medal worshipper. Once I win, the outward sign doesn't mean a thing to me—I'm a little embarrassed by cups and trophies. But the winning does something for my insides.

"For instance, one year I entered a 12-gauge match against the man who had taught me everything I knew about skeet shooting. We were the two finalists, and the shoot went into four extra innings before there was a winner. There I was, a punk kid, shooting it out with a guy I liked from the bottom of my heart. Something in my heart kept saying, 'Let him win.' But something in my head that I hate, just wouldn't quit. I won the match, and this fellow came over and

I SAW IT HAPPEN

Tomboy Lana Turner, then in the second grade in Wallace, Idaho, was playing a game of Cops and Robbers, and captured a girl "robber." Lana lassoed a rope around the little girl's neck—and then dragged her around! The innocent victim, grown up now, still has a scar on her neck.

Ruth Westfall,
Osburn, Idaho

LET US HEAR FROM YOU!

Fans! Be a MODERN SCREEN REPORTER! See your name in print, and win $1!

All you have to do is write us an entertaining true story, such as the one above, about some Hollywood star whom you've known or made faces at or met—a story which we in Movietown will never hear unless you tell it to us. Send as many as you like, and FOR EVERY ANECDOTE WE USE WE WILL MAIL YOU ONE DOLLAR.

Of course, we reserve the right to edit and revise all stories we use, and no contribution will be returned unless accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Look for other April winners on pages 68, 84. Mail your inside story TODAY to MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York City, N. Y.

put his arm around me. 'I'm proud of you,' he said, and I wanted to bawl like a baby. 'Put your whole soul into every undertaking, fight clean and hard, son, and you'll do.' Now there was a prince of a guy."

brother Casanova . . .

He brought an imaginary gun to his shoulder and sighted down the invisible barrel. "Xclk," he said, clicking his tongue. "Broke that vase."

Setting the phantom armament in the corner, he strolled over and collapsed in a chair—the chief burden of his weight divided evenly between his heels and his neck.

"There's something else I should get off my mind," he admitted. "There was a time when it drove me crazy to take a girl out on a date, and then to hear the telephone ring at the crack of dawn next morning because someone wanted to verify my quote engagement unquote. Because of the way I was brought up, it seemed to me that such publicity was frightfully unfair to the girl in the case. So I would never call any girl for a second date, and I was criticized—but plenty—on that score. Eventually I foiled the rumor mills by getting myself a reputation as the big brother type. So that's me—Stack, the Local Big Brother Bureau. My final beef is that I no longer want to be anybody's big brother," he explained, rocking on his heels and trying to control a devilish grin.

There he sat, well over six feet of muscle and brawn, a trifle absent-minded on occasion and stricken with telephone fever. Obsessed with a will to win, but to win fairly, and bothered about protecting the reputations of sundry local lassies—in spite of the birds-and-bees glint in his eye. Definitely the big brother type—even as a gent named Casanova.

DON'T LET SMOKE SMUDGE
MASK YOUR SMILE
Bryten up...smile—ond sporkle! Keep your teeth free from smoke smudge—or any unsightly smudge by using IODENT Toath Paste or Powder twice o day. Use IODENT No. 2 for hard-to-bryten teeth. You'll like refreshing IODENT. Mode by o Dentist; guoronteed sofe. At oll syndicote stores.
BEAUTY'S GREATEST TREASURE
A Lovely Smile
IODENT
TOOTH PASTE·POWDER
BUY DEFENSE BONDS

GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 58)

me here anymore. From now on you can reach me at 1603 ———— St. You have the phone number, but don't give it out, whatever you do!"

Kathryn was stunned. The address her husband mentioned was certainly not the one he was sharing with her! With numbed fingers she began to return the phone to its hook. Suddenly she stopped. She had recognized the voice at the other end of the wire. It was her father! Her own father! And praising John's treachery, too!

"You're a mighty smooth lad," Mr. Grayson was saying, "I hope Kathryn doesn't find out and spoil everything!"

"Don't worry," John replied. "I've covered my tracks too well! When I bring her out to that house tomorrow, she'll never understand how I was able to buy it and furnish it without making her suspicious!"

Kathryn dropped the phone in relief. So it was a new house and not a new woman! She wanted to cry, but she didn't. Instead she tore out of her room, jumped into her little roadster and zoomed out to Brentwood to inspect John's surprise. And there it was. A lovely English farm-style cottage, even more beautiful inside than out!

Kathryn's first impulse was to hurry home and tell John she was thrilled. She changed her mind, however, when she recalled how hard he had worked to keep his secret. On the following day, when he brought her out to see the house, she played innocent as a babe! And, until he reads these lines, Mr. Shelton will never know why the "amazement" on his wife's face looked more like Drama Puss No. 3B than the real thing!

SHORT SHOTS

The newly-wedded Mickey Rooneys will start their married life with a small apartment but a big family! They're moving into a modest parlor-bedroom-and-bath setup, but Mick's three dogs (two Scotties, called Sheila Ryan and Joe Yule, respectively, and a third pup, a gift from Norma Shearer) will move right in with them! Mickey's Number Four dog, Orson Welles, was killed not long ago . . . And speaking of the Rooneys, a close friend of the pair tells us Ava won Mick by using the old "disinterested" technique. When Mick gave her the go-by or failed to telephone her, Ava ignored him just as completely. After years of being chased by palpitating females, Mickey couldn't resist a girl who was nonchalant!

Man Mountain Dean, famous wrestling hillbilly, once "stood in" for Charles Laughton . . . Jackie Searl and Richard Barthelmess, missing from the Hollywood scene for many months, both made news, recently. Jackie enlisted in the Army Air Corps; Barthelmess in the Naval Reserve . . . Carole Landis is the newest member of the Movietown bomb shelter set . . . Fearing priorities might create a shortage, the Johnny Weissmullers have ordered 200 diapers for their bundle from heaven, due in April!

SOMETHING FISHY HERE!

Whew, what an experience! It happened to Rita Hayworth only the other evening. She invited some friends in for dinner and instructed her cook to start the meal with crab meat cocktail.

The guests assembled early, and Rita led them into her playroom where they sat before the fire chatting peacefully and awaiting the call to eat. Suddenly the cozy quiet was broken. There was a terrible noise in the kitchen, and Rita's cook burst into the room, white and trembling.

"It's the Japs, Mrs. Judson!" she screamed. "They're trying to kill us! What will I do!"

Rita went weak to her wrists. "The Japs!" she gasped. "Where are they?"

The maid stood there whimpering. "They're trying to kill us," she repeated piteously. "With their crab meat! I just opened a can—and it's full of ground glass!"

"I called the FBI as soon as I pulled myself together," Rita reports. "But believe me—not one of us could eat a morsel that night!"

YOU GO YOUR WAY

The day Eric Maria Remarque sat beside Lupe Velez at a dinner party and announced to all within earshot that "for me 1942 will be a year of work—not love," was the day we realized Lupe had come to the end of another romance. Her affair with Remarque, we figured, would fizzle out in the usual Hollywood manner. The pair would bust up, temporarily reconcile, bust up again and finally agree they would be "good friends always." It was inevitable, we thought.

But we thought wrong. It's true Lupe and Remarque are through. But there will be no teary reunions, no rumors of love reborn. Because Mr. R. has quit Hollywood. He has

(Continued on page 92)

For life's most precious moment . . .

enchanting as star sapphires . its fragrance sets off the fire of your spirit like a precious gem in its setting. In thrilling scents for your different "persanalities" $2.50 to $10.

Gardenia Rare Orchid Lily of the Valley Sweet Pea Violet

Ronni
PRECIOUS PERFUMES

ATTRACTIVE PURSE-SIZE FLACONETTES
AT YOUR NEAREST 5 AND 10c STORE

TYPEWRITER 1/3 PRICE

STANDARD OFFICE MODELS
About 1/3 MFRS. ORIG. PRICE
Easiest Terms as Low as 70¢ a Week
All models completely reconditioned.
FULL 2-YEAR GUARANTEE
No Money Down—10 Day Trial
Send for FREE price smashing literature in colors. Shows all models. See our literature before you buy. SEND TODAY.
FREE COURSE IN TYPING INCLUDED.
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCH.
Dept. 461, 231 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill.

10c A DAY

MAKE MONEY AT HOME!
Learn to color photos and miniatures in oil. No previous experience needed. Good demand. Send for free booklet, "Make Money at Home" and requirements.
NATIONAL ART SCHOOL
1315 Michigan Ave. Dept. 2364 Chicago

FOR BETTER TISSUES USE...
SITROUX
Cleansing TISSUES
PRONOUNCED SIT-TRUE
softer • stronger more absorbent
AT 5 & 10¢ — DRUG & DEPT. STORES

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Lupe and Remarque . . . all quiet . . . no counter-attack!

departed. Scrammed. Gone. And he's not coming back for a long, long time.

Surest proof of that is the fact that he's buttoned up his Beverly Hills home and turned over his $100,000 art collection to the Los Angeles County Museum, with instructions to the Museum to hold the property "indefinitely." The collection, consisting of rare Oriental rugs, paintings by such French notables as Daumier, Degas, Manet and Renoir, and Chinese pottery dating back to 900 A.D., is Remarque's pride and joy. He would not be separated from it unless it were impossible to have it with him. And it's obvious that the New York apartment to which he has removed himself, however swank, is no fit place to spread precious objets d'art.

As for Lupe—it is not likely she will go in pursuit of her wandering boy friend. She's just had her rumpus room completely bomb-proofed and, from all indications, intends to dig in for the duration.

KISS THE BOYS GOOD-BYE

We wonder if Annie Sheridan is aware of the wallop she dealt the bachelor boys when she hied herself to the altar with G. Brent. Despite all that "just a pal" stuff, Ann aroused something more than friendship in the men who filled her spinster days. Take the case of Cesar Romero. Cesar squired Annie for years. He was supposed to have considered her the ideal dancing date. However, intimates hint he also considered her the ideal sweetheart!

Sad thing is that Cesar received his only sign of encouragement from Annie only a few months ago. For the first time since they've known each other, Ann surprised him with an elaborate Christmas gift! Cesar decided he was doing all right and had himself primed for sweet romance. But Annie squelched his dreams when she phoned to say she was going to be married!

Another gent whose crush on Sheridan has never been recorded is Stirling Hayden. All the while Madeleine Carroll was supposed to be top guy in his heart, Stirling was maneuvering for an introduction to Ann! Unfortunately, he left town before a meeting could be arranged.

Stirling, by the way, is on patrol duty in Canada, and not even his mother has heard from him in several months.

DISA AND DATA

Maybe he suspects eavesdroppers or saboteurs, but George Sanders never uses the studio telephone. When he has a call to make, he steps outside to a pay station . . . Judy Garland's most treasured possession is a letter from Lord and Lady Halifax, congratulating her on her marriage to Dave Rose . . . Dancer Ray MacDonald greets friends with a "Victory" tap step—3 dots and a dash . . . The Louis Haywards have illuminated doorknobs throughout their home . . . Race-driver Mal Ord is building a new speed car for the town's Number One thrill demon, John Carroll . . . Maureen O'Sullivan, whose husband, John Farrow, has been very ill, is quitting pictures to look after him . . . "Captains of the Clouds," theme song of the Warner picture of that name, has been adopted as the official tune of the RCAF . . . 17-year-old singing star, Mary Lee, has banged out a nifty tune about defense stamps, titled "Buy and Buy" . . . In his next picture, Ronald Colman will hide behind a homegrown goatee!

Burgess Meredith, back in town again, has brought Olivia de Havilland out of her long months of seclusion . . . Geraldine Fitzgerald's son doesn't know what has come to live in his house. Since his Mama took to wearing her "Gay Sisters" monocle at home, the toddler's been thoroughly baffled! . . . Ann Sothern's new secretary is Bob Sterling's sister, Helen!

FASHION FLASHES

Seen about town: Judy Garland smarter than smart in a pair of low-heeled suede pumps

DO YOU KNOW THAT

Hedy Lamarr presented her maid with a swanky new coupé as a bonus? Norma Shearer's no tightwad either. Following the completion of one of her recent pix, she gave bottles of perfume to each of the female scene-stealers on the set. The luscious-smelling liquids set her back $20 an ounce, some of it shooting as high as $30.

—Look Magazine

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

she picked up in a local children's shoe department . . . Evelyn Keyes Sunday-morning brunching in a glazed-chinz breakfast coat with tight bodice and short flared skirt that wraps around without bothering with priority-yanked zippers . . . Irene Dunne sporting purple pumps and emerald green gloves with a white chiffon evening gown

The O'Sullivan . . . career-quittin'.

. . . Joan Bennett and daughters Diane and Melinda, dressed exactly alike in lavender-striped ticking dresses with white organdie pinafores. All three skipping along in black patent leather low-heeled pumps with tiny bows at the toes!

GADGET GAB

Ida Lupino owns one of the most unusual rings in Hollywood. It's composed of three gold bands of varying widths. The widest band is worn on her middle finger, a band a fraction of an inch narrower on the next finger, and the final section, a thin gold sliver, around her curled-over-a-teacup digit. The gal who designed the tricky trio for Ida is Marjory Cummings, a young woman bursting with original, easy-to-imitate jewelry ideas.

We're betting that inexpensive imitations of Miss Cumming's latest lapel foible will sweep the country in a month. It's a stein of beer, executed in clear amber, with a jeweled pretzel for a handle and a foam, made entirely of tiny diamonds, cascading over the top!

FOR THE DEFENSE

Paramount's Betty Jane Rhodes wears lapel pieces, cut out of felt in the shape of soldiers, sailors and Red Cross nurses . . . Ann Sheridan is the first Hollywood gal to wear Defense Savings Stamps shellacked on the square wooden buttons of her dresses . . . When she's off duty, Lt. Ida Lupino sports a suit adapted directly from her Ambulance Corps uniform. It's a mist grey, instead of military khaki, with arm chevrons of bright red substituting for the official dark blue insignia of her war-work garb.

"Middle-Age" Women (38-52 YEARS OLD)

HEED THIS ADVICE!

Watch Out For These Symptoms Which May Often Betray Your Age

Do you hate those trying years from 38 to 52—does this period in a woman's life make you get fretful, nervous, so tired, worn out, blue at times, perhaps suffer dizziness, headaches, backaches, hot flashes and distress of "irregularities"?

Then start at once, try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—famous for helping relieve distress—due to this functional disturbance. Taken regularly, this remarkable medicine helps build up resistance against such annoying symptoms.

Pinkham's Compound has thus helped thousands upon thousands of women to go smiling thru trying

"middle age". It's the best known medicine you can buy today—made especially for women. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Younger Women, Too!

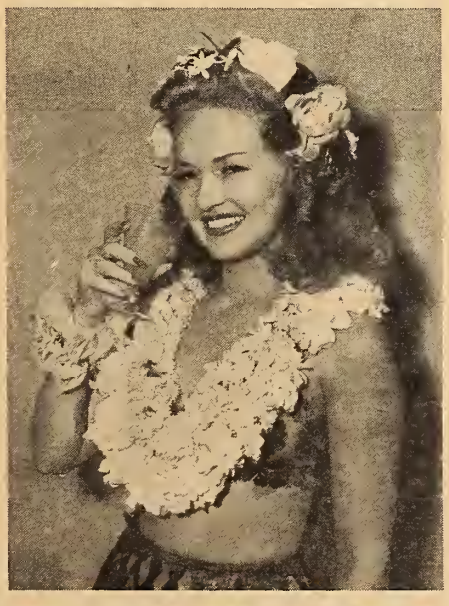
Girls in their 'teens, 20's and 30's should also find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very beneficial to relieve pain and tired, weak, cranky, nervous feelings—due to functional monthly disturbances. Follow label directions.

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND

CHASSIS CONTROL

Offer a four-figured check to Marjorie Gateson for one certain dress that hangs in her closet, and you'll get a flat "No, thanks!" in answer. The dress isn't a lucky creation; it doesn't have any particular sentimental value; but it is a perfect barometer of Marjorie's figure!

Every few months Marjorie pulls it from its hanger and tries it on. If it fits too snugly at any spot, she gets busy with the proper exercises and works until she can slip into it again without risking any seam-popping. She says it's much easier than facing those bathroom scales every morning!



Betty Grable picked up the pineapple juice-for-vitamins habit on location of "Song of the Islands."

YOU'LL BE WEARING

—your keys clipped to your lapel. Jean Rogers dipped duplicates of her house, car and bank vault keys in gold, and keeps them handy for emergencies by wearing them strung along her favorite bar-clip.

—gloves painted with bright red finger nails. Marlene Dietrich flashed her first pair in Hollywood's face during the holiday season.

—blackout coats. Barbara Stanwyck's is coal black wool gabardine, cut like an officer's topcoat and buttoned with tiny silver airplane propellors, especially dulled so they won't pick up betraying light reflections during emergencies.

FOR SWEATER GIRLS

If you have a scar on your soul left from the time you had to choose between your yummy-but-shedding angora sweaters and your best boy-frind, thank Mrs. Regis Toomey for the niftiest news of the month!

Mrs. Toomey loves to whip up sweaters and beanies of the super-soft-stuff, but her conscience began to ache one day when she saw hubby Regis bravely but silently fighting his way out of the house through a veritable fog of clinging wisps. Mrs. Toomey did a little research and discovered the answer to her dilemma. Now she places the knitted bits of fluff in the ice box for twenty-four hours before the first wearing. The chill, she says, anchors the tiny hairs indefinitely!

(Continued on page 94)

Lovable
THERE'S MORE
TO BEAUTY
THAN
A PRETTY FACE
Beautiful Marie Wilson, Hollywood screen star . . no wonder most girls prefer Lovable—the less-than-a-dollar brassiere with million-dollar appeal! Be lovable—write Dept. M for free style book.
LOVABLE BRASSIERE CO.
358 Fifth Ave., New York
In Canada: Canadian Lady Corset Co., Ltd., Montreal

NEW! 1942 MODEL POCKET RADIO! NO TUBES NO BATTERIES
BEAUTIFUL PLASTIC CABINETS
BAND-DIAL — MAGNOPHONE
Fits your pocket or purse—Wt. 5 ozs., ABOUT CIGARETTE PACKAGE SIZE—FIXED POWER CRYSTAL! OWNERS REPORT 2-3 YEARS SERVICE—THOUSANDS SOLD! W. C. of Wisc. says "WORKS SWELL"!
GUARANTEED TO WORK—ONE YEAR SERVICE GUARANTEE
Sent complete ready to listen with instructions for use in homes offices, hotels, in bed, etc. NO ELECTRIC "PLUG IN" REQUIRED —EASY PAYMENT PLAN AS FOLLOWS:—
SEND ONLY $1.00 (cash, M. O., check) and pay postman $1.99 plus postage on arrival, or send $2.99 for postpaid delivery! LIMITED PRODUCTION!—GET YOUR NEW MIDGET NOW—for real enjoyment! Ideal gift for anyone—ORDER NOW!
MIDGET RADIO CO., DEPT. W-4, KEARNEY, NEBRASKA

NO DULL DRAB HAIR
When You Use This Amazing
4 Purpose Rinse
In one, simple, quick operation, LOVALON will do all of these 4 important things for your hair.
1. Gives lustrous highlights.
2. Rinses away shampoo film.
3. Tints the hair as it rinses.
4. Helps keep hair neatly in place.
LOVALON does not permanently dye or bleach. It is a pure, odorless hair rinse, in 12 different shades. Try LOVALON.
At stores which sell toilet goods
25¢ for 5 rinses
10¢ for 2 rinses
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Rib tickler and ticklee . . . them Skeltons.

RIGHT DRESS

Those for and ag'in the military motif in styles can line up behind a couple of screen stars and start plugging.

Norma Shearer has gone all-out for her new cadet slacks, Adrian-designed for her to wear in "We Were Dancing." The jacket topping the yellow trousers is cut exactly like an officer's coat, with brass buttons marching in orderly twos down the front and across the pockets. Adding the final martial touch is an authentic Sam Browne belt that diagonally bisects the upper half of Miss Shearer's slim, trim torso.

Champion of the feminine look in casual clothes is Gene Tierney, who says, "The further we get away from anything resembling a uniform, the more the boys will like it. I'm going to stock up on light wool dresses, cut with full skirts, dirndl style. And for home entertaining, Oleg is designing some special house coats, cut very full, made of the softest materials and yummiest colors."

DUDS FOR DUDES

If a dude ranch gets your dough come vacation time, this is for you. I talked to a friend at Roy Rogers' shop who knows as much about women's clothes as he knows about horses—which is plenty.

From a male point of view, this constitutes a complete outfit exactly as he gave it to me: A Stetson, Ranchero model; two dress shirts, one plaid, one two-tone; two regular shirts; a pair of levis; one pair of frontier pants (to match the two-tone dress shirt); suit of red flannels (long); tooled leather belt and a leather hat band; boots, wool socks and pigskin gloves. "Please tell 'em," he says, "to practice wearing their Western clothes for a couple of weeks like the heroines in the Hopalong Cassidy series do. It takes at least that long to get the special knack of feeling really at home in those range-riding outfits!"

BEAUTY BITS

Madame Maria Ouspenskaya stands on her head for a few minutes every morning. Says it clears her brain of all fogginess . . . Georgia Carroll accents her exposed ear lobes with tiny black beauty patches in the shape of a "V"—for Victory . . . Priscilla Lane has nailed up a mirror on her garage door, for a final check of her make-up in the bright daylight before starting off to work.

MY HEAVENS!

Blanca Holmes, Hollywood's top movie astrologer, is rapidly convincing us. In one of our first talks with her, early in 1941, she told us (a) That Judy Garland would be married within the year, to someone who'd been married before (Dave Rose was once Martha Raye's man), (b) That George Brent's next would be a woman born under his own astral sign, probably Ann Sheridan, although Blanca did think it would be best if he never married again. (Ann Sheridan became Mrs. Brent on January 5th, 1942, in Palm Beach, Florida), (c) That the Tyrone Power-Annabella marriage, then rumored to be floundering, would survive longer than the gossipers. (They're still holding out and happier than ever) and (d) That Garbo would never marry Dr. Hauser. (Well, has she?)

The above is not bad predicting, you'll have to admit. Which is why we have no compunction about offering you other Holmes' forecasts. Says Blanca:

(a) Eddie Albert is due to altar-trek with a woman now married.

(b) Dorothy Lamour will take herself another husband—this time a foreigner.

(c) The James Cagneys are due for domestic trouble in 1943.

MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please send me your newly revised chart listing the heights, ages, birthdays and marriages, etc., of all the important stars. I enclose 5c (stamps or coin) to cover cost of mailing.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

(d) The next man in Garbo's love life will be an actor.

(e) Charles Boyer will remain on top till 1945; Cary Grant till 1950.

(f) Bette Davis will have the longest-lasting career in all Hollywood history.

Boyer . . . travelling salesman.

MOONLIGHT AND SHADOWS

You gals who are letting your boy friends chase you 'til you catch 'em shouldn't pass up the advice of Metro's Robert Planck, whose expert lighting of sets is as important to a production as the actors themselves.

Planck says all you need to make your man pop the question is the proper time, the proper place and romantic lighting. It's a scientific fact, he says, that a woman is most alluring and mysterious when the light is at her back. The glow sets off her figure silhouette-like and casts intriguing, imagination-stirring shadows on her face. Pale moonlight tops any other type of oomphy illumination, but if you can't get lunar cooperation, try luring your prospective mate into a room equipped with warm, rose-color lights. Something about the soft pinky glow seems to prompt males to mutter romantic nothings, until, without realizing it, they're asking you to keep step with them on their trek to the altar!

OPTICAL ILLUSION

If you think there's even a shred of truth in Dorothy Parker's crack about guys not making passes at gals who wear glasses, you should see the males flock around Bette Davis, Joan Bennett and Annie Sheridan when they're wearing "cheaters." Make-up chief Perc Westmore gave them expert advice about choosing spectacles and making up to the best advantage while wearing them, and we're not exaggerating when we say the glasses give 'em added charm.

Perc says to be sure you choose frames that won't leave any sort of mark over the nose. The lens should never follow the line of the eyebrow—it's better if they extend beyond or below the curve.

Final tip: If you want to switch the center of attention from your eyes, concentrate on making up your lips as beautifully as possible.

PLATTER PATTER

It's all over now. That swell system Freddie Bartholomew and Jane Withers had worked out for carrying on their romance via the radio record-request programs. Before wartime restrictions, aimed at code-sending spies, knocked the programs off the air, Freddie and Janie used to scorn ordinary phone conversations and send messages via their loudspeakers. Like so . . .

On no-date nights, Freddie would give Jane a quick buzz, tell her to tune in on a certain local station, and hang up. Jane would rush to her radio, flip it on, and in a few minutes would hear a number requested by Mr. F. Bartholomew entitled 'What Are You Doing Tonight?" If she was free, Jane would call the radio station and have them shoot back a double feature consisting of "I'm In a Dancing Mood" and "How About You?"

On nights she was stuck with homework, Jane's turndown would consist of "Schooldays," followed by a bid for the following evening with Will Osborne's "Let Me Borrow An Hour of Tomorrow."

"It was fun while it lasted," Freddie told us. "But we don't mind so much having to give it up. It was getting out of hand, anyway. A couple of the other fellows found out what we were doing, and one night they had the station play two songs and announce they were dedicated to me by Janie. The songs were 'Let's Call It a Day' and 'Get Out of Town'!"

INTERNATIONAL LADY

When the annals of this war are written, Hollywood may find that its place has been secured in the pages of history by none other than Deanna Durbin. More than any other star, Deanna has been featured in the international scene because, unwittingly, she has become the tool of Axis propagandists.

First, there was the famous letter supposedly addressed to Deanna by Mussolini himself and published in the Fascist press. In it, Il Duce told Deanna what a swell kid Italians thought her, and how sorry they were to see her dragged toward war along with the rest of American youth by the President of the United States. As a parting pat, he urged her to use her influence to persuade American youth to resist the President and open their eyes to the beauty and poetry that was in the hearts of Germans and Italians. That was one love letter Deanna never answered!

Now, from the other side of the world, comes word that the Japanese, following in the footsteps of their Axis brethren, have enlisted Deanna's aid in their battle against the British! According to an English officer who escaped from Hongkong after its capture by the enemy, the Japs set up loudspeakers in Kowloon, across a narrow stretch of water from Hongkong and played Durbin recordings of "Home Sweet Home" and "Way Down Upon the Swanee River." Purpose of the songs, the officer said, was to make the British defenders "lonesome" and "willing to give up"!

Oddly enough, a love for Deanna is one thing the Japanese and British have in common. She is the favorite movie star of both

(Continued on page 97)

Movie Star's
"GOOD BEHAVIOR" SLIP
Seams over-stitched with NYLON will NOT twist when you walk will NOT strain at seams when you bend will NOT ride when you sit
IN 3 LENGTHS
S-M, medium, short sizes 32-44
Junior Sizes
11-13-15-17
RAYON SATIN
tearose, white
ABOUT $1.39
REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY
Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping
IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN
at your favorite store or write to MOVIE STAR SLIPS 159 Madison Ave., New York

JUST OUT! NEW 1942 ISSUE
The Modern Hostess
COOK BOOK
100 pages chock full of usable information and tested recipes. The biggest cook book value ever offered for ten cents!
NOW ON SALE • ONLY 10c

Beautiful NAILS
AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE

DON'T ENVY long, tapering smart nails—have them! Simply cover short, broken, brittle nails with NU-NAILS. NU-NAILS can be worn any length and polished with any desired enamel. So natural they cannot be detected. They even have half moons. Helps check nail biting habit. Will not harm nor soften natural nails. Protect fragile nails while they grow strong again. Easily applied, remains firm, waterproof. Removed at will. Set of Ten, 20c at all ten-cent stores.

Nu-Nails, Dept. 15-D, 5251 W. Harrison St., Chicago

NU-NAILS
Artificial Fingernails

Feet to the Fore

Janet Blair, who has been in only three pictures up to now, takes the leading feminine role in Columbia Picture's exciting "Trinidad," her fourth and best so far. Smart from head to foot, she dramatizes her suit with b-l-a-c-k. Look to the sketch for a closeup of the elasticized patent pumps.

Unless she's spoofing, the gal seems mighty pleased with what she hears on the 'phone. Maybe it's personal and maybe it's still more compliments on her emoting opposite Brian Donlevy and Pat O'Brien. This is the morning for real walking. Hence the new beige low-heelers with deep tan banding and softly scrolled bow.

One young starlet who is really on the way up, according to Gregory Ratoff. He thinks she has great acting ability, and he should know. So Janet poses on the stairs, the better for us to see her maracain pumps, elasticized for comfort and double-bowed to subtly flatter the foot.

FOR STORES CARRYING THESE PARIS FASHION SHOES, SEE PAGE 101.

peoples! In fact, one of Deanna's early pictures, "One Hundred Men and a Girl," ran in a Tokyo theatre for three solid years!

SHALL WE DRESS?

If Errol Flynn and Bruce Cabot squirmed and looked uncomfortable in those fancy duds they wore to usher at the Gloria Vanderbilt-Pat DiCicco wedding, this is the reason why. Bruce and Errol were wearing suits rented from a local costume company! The boys don't own high-falutin' cutaways and, even as you and I, Flynn would rather invest in defense bonds than in clothes he doesn't need . . . Hedy Lamarr was bounced out of the Bar of Music, the other evening, before she could even get to her table. She was wearing slacks, and the club has a ban on same . . . Laird Cregar has talked 20th Century-Fox into paying for half his movie wardrobe. Male stars always provide their own clothes for pictures (except costumes), but Laird's overwhelming size makes his so expensive, the studio has agreed to split the cost 50-50!

CAMOUFLAGE

If Bob Taylor didn't know it before, he knows it now. There's no sense arguing with a woman. You can't win.

Bob found that out when he got into a little tiff with Lana Turner a few weeks ago. Lana was about to take off on a motor trip to New England, and Bob tried to dissuade her. Motor trips were okay for the average gal, he argued, but a luscious dish like Lana, known to every man, woman and child with a pair of eyes, would have a tough time plowing through the fans who would trail her each inch of the way.

That was where Bob made his mistake. Because Lana didn't waste time on words. She plunked a wad of dough on the line, bet Bob the total amount in defense bonds that she could manage the journey without being recognized by a soul and went her way.

A week later, Bob received a wire from the East. It read: "Pay up, pal. I'm here, and not even a swallow peeped in my direction. I'll be back soon to collect. Lana."

And pay up was exactly what Bob did.

University of Michigan grad, Otto Krueger, will be 57 this September.

Because, man-like, he had reckoned without the wisdom of woman and the M-G-M make-up department. Lana, it seems, had set forth wearing a jet black, studio-made wig—and not a fan between the Atlantic and the Pacific had given her a backward glance!

As we've said, Bob paid up. But there was one prop boy who refused to accept Lana's explanation.

"She musta left her sweaters home," said he.

PRETTY COLD FOR JUNE

There's not a whiff of truth to those rumors that June Havoc will follow the example of sister Gypsy Rose Lee and return to her estranged husband. June, at 24, has declared a moratorium on men. Her experience with the opposite sex dates back over ten years. For the next few years, she claims, she can live happily without any of them.

Well, maybe she means it and maybe she doesn't. If she is sincere, we can well understand why.

June's career has been like no one else's in Hollywood. Born to a theatrical family, she was put on the stage when she was only four. Her parents separated, and she was raised by her mother. At 15, she was still trouping. One day, fed up with the life she was leading, she eloped. Her first trip with her new husband was to Seattle to visit her father. Expecting congratulations, the bridal couple were greeted, instead, with horror. It was Mr. Havoc who told them June was even more of a child bride than they thought. Producing documents, he revealed she was not 15, but 13 years old! Her age, they discovered, had been skipped up a few notches to facilitate dealings with theatrical unions and guilds!

June stuck to her matrimonial guns, anyway. Five years later, when she was 18, her baby was born. Shortly after, her husband died. There were four years of widowhood, and then she remarried. It's this second mating that now seems headed for the rocks.

Yup, it's been rough going for the little Havoc. If she wants to give spinsterhood a try, who can blame her?

GOOD NEWS: about Michele Morgan

Though she's been on North American soil and under its sun for well over a year now, blond, limpid-eyed Michele Morgan (née Simone Roussel) still mentally hies herself home to pre-war France for her juiciest memoirs. Remembers her first "date" way back when . . . he was a man of seventeen, she thirteen . . . they walked and walked in a Bois on the outskirts of Paris . . . he was wonderful, of course . . . kissed her good-night under the street gas lamp at 6 p.m. . . . pangs of conscience sent her scampering upstairs scared as a pup and worried no end . . . since then has simply adored (1) Clark Gable when she was fifteen, (2) Bob Taylor when she was seventeen, (3) Ty Power when she turned nineteen, and now that she's finally met them, thinks they're all swell-elegant. As for the real thing . . . refuses to commit herself on how many times she's been no-doubt-about-it in love . . . "I'll tell you when I'm fifty—until you are quite old, you don't know if it was really love!" Michele's definitely on the shy side . . . acted scared to death all the way through her first screen test . . . 'cause that's what she was s'posed to do. Laughed almost hysterically when she was told that she was going to be in the movies . . . her family cried . . . "We were so poor

(Continued on page 98)

The Right Girl—but the Wrong Impression

DON'T LET A soiled POWDER PUFF BE YOUR SOCIAL ERROR!

Keep a fresh supply of Betty Lou puffs always handy. Buy them in economical MULTI-PACKAGES of 2, 3 or 4 puffs.

EXTRA SOFT YET THEY COST NO MORE

Betty Lou POWDER PUFFS

AT ALL STORES . . EVERYWHERE

IF YOU HAVE GRAY HAIR and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist for over 40 years, I am proud of my Color Imparter. As you use it, the Gray Hair slowly becomes Darker; each application deepens the color. EASY and CLEAN to use; it can't leave stains. I want to convince you by sending my Free Trial Bottle, and booklet All About Your Hair. CAUTION: Use only as directed on label. No skin test needed.

ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3. LOWELL, MASS.

ALMOST LIKE A MIRACLE

—is what women of society, stage, screen, office, and home say about FaSet, the new tissue form. You too will be enchanted with the firm beauty it will give to your face and neck. FaSet lifts, helps strengthen muscle tissues, remove double chin and heavy face lines. Soft, porous, washable, delightfully comfortable to wear during sleep or leisure hours. Adjustable, on and off in a moment.

Face Set

Not sold by stores—Obtainable only direct. Send check or M. O. or pay postman $1.25 plus small postage. (Plain pkg.)

FaSET CO., DEPT. S-3 ROCKVILLE CENTRE, L. I., N. Y.

Earn $25 a week AS A TRAINED PRACTICAL NURSE!

Practical nurses are always needed! Learn at home in your spare time as thousands of men and women—18 to 60 years of age—have done through CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING. Easy-to-understand lessons, endorsed by physicians. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Nurse Cromer, of Iowa, now runs her own nursing home. Others prefer to earn $2.50 to $5.00 a day in private practice.

YOU CAN EARN WHILE YOU LEARN!

Mrs. B. C., of Texas, earned $474.25 while taking course. Mrs. S. E. P. started on her first case after her 7th lesson; in 14 months she earned $1900! You, too, can earn good money, make new friends. High school not necessary. Easy payments. Equipment included. 43rd year. Send coupon now!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

Dept. 234, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.

Please send free booklet and 16 sample lesson pages.

Name_____ Age_____

City_____ State_____

Wonderfully Soothing

TO ROUGH RED HANDS

The Hand Cream so many nurses use is BARRINGTON, an extraordinarily delightful, shell-pink cream containing special ingredients for comforting and softening work-or-weather roughened hands. They say there's no hand cream quite like it. See what this amazing new cream can do to make your hands softer, lovelier! Buy the generous size 44c, 25c or 10c jar—at leading 5 and 10c stores, independent variety, drug and department stores. Or write North American Dye Corporation, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Barrington HAND CREAM

A NADCO QUALITY PRODUCT

Marvel

WHIRLING SPRAY SYRINGE for Women

At DRUG COUNTERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Free Booklet—The Marvel Co., 440 East St., New Haven, Conn.

FALSE TEETH Low as $6.85

90 DAYS TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you BY MAIL from your mouth-impression! Money-Back GUARANTEE of Satisfaction. Free impression material, directions, Booklet of New Styles and Information. Write today to PARKER DENTAL LAB., 127 N. DEARBORN ST., DEPT. 27C, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FREE

SEND NO MONEY

BUY SOME EVERY WEEK!
U. S. SAVINGS BONDS & STAMPS

HAVING A BABY?

Regular medical care during pregnancy is vitally important. Your doctor can regulate diet to provide minerals, iron and vitamin content so essential to good teeth and sound physical development in the baby. Ask his advice on feeding infant.

HYGEIA NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE

SAFER...because easier to clean

See Your Doctor Regularly

GOOD NEWS (Continued)

Romero and Kelly . . . two on a rebound.

at the time. To us it meant so much to have a little money." But when she saw the first results, nearly died away . . . thought she looked as skinny as a rail, felt her acting looked as monotonous as setting-up exercises, her smile as crooked as a pretzel . . . has never been known to be intolerant or the kind who gets in somebody's hair . . . remembers her introduction to Hollywood hospitality at a New Year's party way back in 1941 . . . she'd been on this side of the Atlantic Ocean for all of one month . . . sort of stood around quietly when the chimes rang in the new . . . was spotted and immediately taken under wing by good girl Ginger Rogers . . . Michele's never forgotten. Maybe that's why she feels so all-over good about her own recent love-thy-neighbor deed . . . seems she gave a bunch of good-luck charms to a gang of visiting soldier boys on the "Joan of Paris" set . . . short time later received a grateful note from one of the lads . . . said he was writing from Luzon to tell Michele he was sure it was her lucky charm that had saved his life when things began getting rough on the Japanese front . . . Horoscopists say there may be something to it, Michele having been born on a strange day, February 29th (she'll celebrate her sixth leap-year-day birthday in 1944) . . . Is all kinds of art-crazy . . . studied piano for five years in la France, plans to take up where the downbeat left off . . . is usually found planted behind an easel, painting, on her days and hours off . . . wants nothing more than to play "The Constant Nymph" eventually . . . thinks any Debussy record would be perfect company on a swanky desert island that had a phonograph. . . . Amazing girl, she never uses any cream or powder on her face, but would sooner be seen with her goggles on than with her lipstick off . . . Wonders what life will be like without lusciously sour French pickles, which she dives for at the slightest sign of one! . . . Thinks Garbo's eyes are candidates for eighth and ninth wonders of the world . . . saw the Lonely One in "Camille" five times . . . just to watch them. Of la Hayworth's performance in "The Lady In Question" which la Morgan did in French version "Hearts in Paris", Michele says, "It was SO funny to hear her say the same things I had said!" Manages to keep her shapely 5 feet 6 inches up to 105 pounds with no little trouble . . . "and I am such a clumsy one," she moans . . . everybody should be so clumsy, Michele!

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send today for the new, up-to-date list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is o convenient size to handle or keep in o scropbook. To receive o list, oll you hove to do is write to us ond osk for it, enclosing o lorge, self-oddressed ond stomped envelope. Don't forget thot lost item, os no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Informotion Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, N. Y.

For the Love of Pete

...or Jim or Bill

KEEP YOUR EYES LOVELY!

Whatever his name, he'll find you more enchanting if your eyes have the crystal-clearness that brings out the beauty of their coloring.

Wash your eyes with this specialist's formula, today. See how they sparkle... how refreshed they feel. Eye-Gene is safe, hygienic, stainless. At all drug, dept., and ten cent stores.

Buy Now

EYE-GENE

Timely Help

with your COOKING PROBLEMS

More than just a collection of recipes, the new Modern Hostess Cook Book offers you:

- VITAMIN CHART — to help you choose foods high in vitamin content . . .
- MENUS to act as a starting point in planning better meals . . .
- IDEAS for party and special occasion dishes . . .
- HINTS to make food preparation easier, faster . . .
- STAND-BYS — those familiar basic recipes everyone wants . . .
- NEW DISHES to add new interest to your menus.

All recipes—carefully planned and compiled by experts—are thoroughly home-tested by housewives like yourself. Directions are easy to understand and follow, with the ingredients clearly listed in order of use. It's the biggest value ever offered in a cook book—don't fail to get your copy today!

THE MODERN HOSTESS

COOK BOOK

ON SALE NOW—ONLY 10c

(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10c to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.)

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 15)

orchestra, floor show and entertainment.

They arrive in Cat Tail at a dramatic moment; independent farmer George Tobias is bucking Gene Lockhart, owner of the only vegetable packing plant in town, who slowly has been squeezing the farmers into poverty. Reagan, who has never lost his dream for land of his own, sides with Tobias; Whorf, tired of being a sucker, sees a chance to mend his fortunes by tying in with Lockhart. The two friends split bitterly.

In a sudden and dramatic move, Ronnie and George hire a fleet of trucks to carry their produce into the Atlanta market. Lockhart and Whorf try to stop them, but fail. The success of the venture breaks Lockhart's monopoly.

Angry, full of hate, Lockhart kills George one night and then frames the murder on Ronnie and Ann. Egged on by Madden, the angry farmers and workers develop into an ugly-tempered lynch mob. They march on the jail for Ronnie and Ann. But this is more than Dick can stand. Hunting out Lockhart, he forces a confession from him. He saves Ronnie and Ann; but train whistles are in Dick's blood. He doesn't stay in Cat Tail with Ronnie and Ann. With only a casual good-bye, he slips out of town to see what's doing over the next range of hills.

"Juke Girl" is more than blood and thunder melodrama, although it's put together with all the drive of a Warner gangster picture. There's a feel for people and for the scene throughout; Jo-Mo, the negro who sells luck charms; Skeeter, the little girl of the picker's family are characters struck out of an original setting. "Juke Girl" is the dramatic story of a little-known slice of American geography.—W. B.

P. S.

School wouldn't keep when word got around that Ann Sheridan was emoting on the premises of a local gas station. Miss Miller, 7th grade teacher of the Moorpark Junior High School, said, "The boys refused to concentrate on their books and wouldn't pay attention in class" . . . 3 tons of tomatoes were tossed around during one fight scene. An equal number of heads of lettuce were bought for marketing scenes and salvaged for stock food after being photographed. . . . One of the authors of the original screen play, A. I. Bezzerides, is the same man who wrote "They Drive By Night". The cast went on a night shift for over a month; most of the action takes place after dark. . . Juke box manufacturers (6 of 'em) sent samples of their products to Sheridan, with letters expressing the

(Continued on page 100)

VEDA ANN BORG appearing in "Trinidad" a Columbia Production uses GLOVER'S

Everybody's Talking about this Wonderful

New SHAMPOO

GLO-VER Shampoo cleanses the scalp — makes hair more glamorous—brings out natural lustre—leaves it easy to manage after washing! A safe, gentle Shampoo made from special liquid soap that rinses out instantly, removes DANDRUFF! If not delighted with results, we'll refund purchase price. Send 10c for trial size and FREE booklet "Care of scalp and hair"! GLOVER'S Dept. 684, 460 Fourth Avenue, New York.

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST TODAY!

GLO-VER Beauty Soap SHAMPOO

Economy Size 50¢

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Made by the makers of GLOVER'S MANGE MEDICINE

Stop that Itch

Relieve itching of eczema, pimples, athlete's foot, rashes and other skin troubles. Use cooling antiseptic D.D.D. Prescription. Greaseless, stainless. Stops itching quickly. 35c trial bottle proves it—or money back. Ask your druggist for D.D.D. Prescription.

Start $1260 to $2100 a Year

MEN—WOMEN. Common Education. Write immediately for free 32-page book, with list of positions, sample coaching lessons and particulars telling how to qualify for a job

Government JOBS

Franklin Institute

Dept. H254, Rochester, N. Y.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED 47¢

Size 8x10 inches. Original returned safely. Send No Money. Just mail photo, snapshot or negative—receive promptly handsome Enlargement. Pay postman only 47c plus postage Standard Art Studios, Dept. 1332-D, 113 S. Jefferson, Chicago 3 for $1.00

The X-Ray shows now outgrown shoes injure baby feet. Better buy correct but inexpensive WEE WALKERS and get a larger size often. Ask your baby doctor. Infants' Department of these low-profit stores. Birth to size 10.

W. T. Grant Co. S. S. Kresge Co. J. J. Newberry Co.
H. L. Green Co. Charles Stores Co. G. R. Kinney Co.
Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc. I. Silver & Bros.
McCrory Stores Schulte-United F. & W. Grand

FREE: Correct size scale with pamphlet on care of baby feet. Write Moran Shoe Co., Dept. M, Carlyle, Ill.

WEE WALKER Shoes BIRTH to SIZE 10

FOR wee WALKERS

IDEAL FOR SWEATER GIRLS!

Adola

BRASSIERES

79c

AT ALL STORES

Not pointed, not flat, . . . just right to wear with sweaters. Many other smart Adola bra styles, in all fabrics, long lines too, at this unbelievably low price! FREE!

Write for 'Adola Secret' how to choose your bra. Also name of nearest dealer.

No. 78

ADOLA, 31 W. 27 St., N.Y.C.

GRAY HAIR KILLS ROMANCE

You know that gray hair spells the end of romance . . . yet you are afraid to color your hair! You are afraid of dangerous dyes, afraid that it is too difficult, afraid that the dye will destroy your hair's natural lustre—afraid, most of all, that everyone will know your hair is "dyed".

These fears are so needless! Today at your drug or department store, you can buy Mary T. Goldman Gray Hair Coloring Preparation. It transforms gray, bleached, or faded hair to the desired shade—so gradually that your closest friends won't guess. Pronounced harmless by medical authorities, no skin test needed. It's so economical, so easy—if you can comb your hair, you can't go wrong!

Buy a bottle today on a money-back guarantee. Or, if you'd rather try it first, write for free sample (name your original hair color). Mary T. Goldman Company, Dept. 8473, Goldman Building, St. Paul, Minn.

2 Enlargements GIVEN!

ROLLS developed and printed. Two beautiful professional "Life-time" enlargements given with 8 prints. Or 16 sharp, clear prints. Or 8 large over-size prints, (deckle-edge if desired). 25c postpaid. Credit for unprintable negatives. Reprints 3c each. Fast 1 day service. Satisfaction guaranteed.

35MM Prices: Ultra-fine grain developed and vaporated—3x4 inch prints—36 exposures $1; 18 exposures 60c.

FREE MAILERS MAY'S PHOTO Dept. M4 LaCrosse, Wis. WORK GUARANTEED

Help Your Country and Yourself!

BUY

U. S. SAVINGS BONDS AND STAMPS

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 99)

hope that their particular music-maker would be used in the picture. . . . The town of Cat Tail, Florida, was "constructed" on the Warner Bros. ranch near Calabasas; painters worked on the set for two weeks before actual shooting began, making the newly-built tourist camps, shacks, tin can bungalows and juke joints look like something that'd been left out in the rain for two months. . . . Richard Whorf spent his spare time painting portraits of leading Hollywood stars, as they appeared in their favorite screen characterizations. His first one is a life-size painting of Tyrone Power in "Blood and Sand". . . . George Tobias won a $300 bet from Whorf by losing 35 pounds in 35 days. . . . While the company was working in a bean field near Los Angeles, a paint factory near by went up in smoke. Not one of the crowds of people watching the movie company left to follow the fire engines to the big blaze!

SABOTEUR

When Alfred Hitchcock makes a picture you can be sure of one thing: two and two rarely add up to four. His pictures seem to be made on the run, spontaneously, with each new twist added as it comes to mind. Oddly enough, he is one of the most careful workers in Hollywood. He plans every action, every gesture, every camera angle before a crank begins turning. But planned or unplanned you can't outguess his plot.

In "Saboteur," for instance, who would expect a circus caravan to be a method of escape for the hero? The solemn conclave of the Fat Lady, the Human Skeleton and the Midget, voting whether to turn the hero over to the law or help him to escape, has an eerie, unpredictable reality. It's typical Hitchcock.

Like most of his pictures it's really a glorified chase. Robert Cummings is suspected of the sabotage of an airplane plant. In order to establish his innocence he sets out to hunt down the real saboteurs. It becomes a three-corner chase with the law chasing Bob, and Bob desperately trailing the saboteurs.

The chase snakes over the California landscape into Nevada and through the wild mountainous country of the Rockies. In the cabin of a blind man (I dare you to expect that one!) he meets up with Priscilla Lane and, to stop her from turning him over to the police, he is forced to take her along with him. The trail leads to a deserted ghost town where Barry meets up with two of the saboteurs; and still on the trail of the higher-ups, he convinces them that he is in the gang.

The scene shifts to New York where Bob, discovered as an impostor by the gang chiefs, is imprisoned in a storeroom cellar. He escapes, barely in time to prevent damage to a ship about to be launched from the Kearney shipyards.

Each sequence brings him closer to the heart of the mystery, but the final solution remains tantalizingly out of reach. Only at the smashing climax is the whole tight fabric of the plot finally revealed.

It's criminal to spoil a Hitchcock picture by telling too much of the story. The story is a sequence of small surprises, ingenious devices, mounting suspense; you may recognize some of them from past Hitchcocks, but like old friends, they wear better the second time. There's a little more romance in this than in any of his previous films, but the romance doesn't interfere with the swift pace and charged incident of the picture. You can get romance in a dozen pictures any month; but an honest-to-goodness Hitchcock thriller doesn't come along very often.—Univ.

P. S.

Bob Cummings really worked hard for that new three-room dressing suite and hefty lift in salary. . . . Four days he spent, wrists bound together with steel handcuffs, trying to swim across a river that had been strewn with rocks—just to make it a little tougher. . . . For two days, he tramped, tramped, tramped across an authentic reproduction of the Nevada wastelands, with the wind and the sand in his hair. . . . Half a week went by before Director Alfred Hitchcock was satisfied with the scenes in which Bob's costume was nothing but a wet blanket. . . . Topping it off was the 34 hours he spent scrunched up in the luggage rack of a cross-country bus. . . . Roly-poly "Hitch" likes to use well-known actors made up so they're unrecognizable to the audience. Alan Baxter's features were aged 15 years. . . . Jeanne and Lynn Romer, beautiful blond twins, have been taking dancing, dramatic and singing lessons since they were ten years old, preparing themselves for a movie break. They make their cinematic debut as the Siamese Twins! . . . Mary Curtis, 38-inch high, 50-pound midget, plays a truck driver in some special effects footage. . . . Writers worked on the script almost to the end; then Hitchcock took over and wrote the last three pages himself. Final scenes were shot behind closed doors, so no one knows how it ends. . . . John Halliday, paged for an important part in the picture, couldn't book passage to Hollywood from his home in Hawaii because of war conditions. . . .

WARNING—Don't Cut Cuticle!

Remove It This Quick, Easy Way... Use

TRIMAL

Complete with manicure stick and cotton

WRAP cotton around the end of an orangewood stick. Saturate with Trimal and apply to cuticle. Watch dead cuticle soften. Wipe it away with a towel. You will be amazed at the results. On sale at all cosmetic counters. Trimal Labs., Inc., Los Angeles.

Priscilla Lane broke her long-standing engagement to John Barry to concentrate exclusively on her career. . . . Hitchcock, who always appears somewhere in his own pictures, decided to make use of his ability as a sign language expert. He plays a deaf-and-dumb pedestrian, asking a girl for a date for dinner!

SONG OF THE ISLANDS

"Song Of The Islands" is a good-natured, tuneful musical which allows Betty Grable to strut her stuff under swaying palm trees and over beautifully curving Hawaiian beaches. Since Miss Grable is a star performer who's proved what she can do in previous films, it's strictly a case of whether or not you feel in the mood for a musical.

The plot, like the plot of all musicals, is pretty thin and, come to think of it, pretty unimportant; you won't be thinking of the plot while the song numbers are on, and Jack Oakie takes up most of the time in between. The only startling note about it all, is that this idyllic

Hawaiian paradise is also, supposedly, the locale of a cattle ranch, Texas panhandle style. That's what the picture says, take it or leave it.

John Payne and Jack Oakie are on a tour of Papa's far-flung ranches and come finally to this island of Ami Ami, shared by the ranch and the O'Brien family (Thomas Mitchell and Betty Grable). John is no little surprised to find anything quite as delectable as Betty Grable in this out-of-the-way spot and promptly falls in love with her. There are any number of complications, occasioned by mistaken identity and the long-horned cattle. John's Papa finally flies down to take things in hand himself. He ends up charmed with the island, and in a grand finale he gives his blessings to Betty and John. All through, of course, Jack Oakie has been up to his tricks. And there are song numbers and dancing, Hawaiian style and American.

The scenery is guaranteed genuine, the mood is genial and pleasant, the natives all seem to have good voices and marked dancing ability which makes it a pretty simple matter to stage spectacular production numbers. Jack Oakie's partner in comedy is an Hawaiian miss named Hilo Hattie. As for Betty Grable she must have found making the picture a pretty pleasant chore; not only were the role and the songs tailor-made for her, but she's also the only white girl on the island of Ami Ami, which simplifies things a good deal, if you think about it.

Not that Betty Grable has to be afraid of competition.—TCF.

P. S.

Pink-and-white Betty Grable is the only American girl in the film. All the other gals—120 of 'em—are chocolate-and-cream Polynesian honeys. . . . Betty, Victor Mature, Jack Oakie, Thomas Mitchell and the rest of the cast had to keep their tans under control. The 38,800,000 candle-power of the set lights darkened their epidermis so quickly, scenes taken a few days apart wouldn't match. . . . Two acres of Hawaiian landscape fade into a background of 18,000 square feet of canvas, beautifully painted to represent purple mountains wreathed in soft mist. . . . The painting was more expensive than sending a camera crew to photograph the actual islands. Advantage to the studio was that the "distant weather" could always be perfectly controlled. . . . Eighty-foot coconut palms, some swooping in low arcs, were surrounded by flaming-hued hibiscus bushes, purple-red bougainvillea, patches of yellow lichen, hundreds of lilies and a waterfall of copper sulphate blue. . . . One of the high spots of the picture is the knife dance done by 9 big brown boys. The knives closely resembled medieval battle axes, and the extra girls refused to sit anywhere near the dancers. One of the gals, watching the boys sail the heavy blades through the air, said she'd hired out as a dancer, not as both halves of a girl sawed in two! . . . 1826 blooms were woven into the blossom gown Grable wears—280 each of gardenias, pink camellias, pale blue plumbago, soft yellow jasmine, bright pink hibiscus and dusty yellow acacia. . . . The actual flowers would have wilted in one minute under the lights, so the gown was constructed first with fresh blooms, then photographed in color. The final model is an exact replica of the original, but made of velvet. . . . Harry Owens and Mack Gordon wrote 6 songs, among them "What's Buzzin, Cousin!" The boys think it will add some new phrases to the fad now sweeping the nation, viz: "What's dunkin, punkin?" "What's tickin, chicken?" and "What's knittin, kitten?"

RINGS ON HER FINGERS

Designed to take your mind off whatever is ailing it at the moment, this pleasant bit is a variation on the ancient and honorable theme of the fake Cinderella and her phony Prince Charming. A pair of high society sharpers (Spring

(Continued on page 102)

FASHION MERCHANDISE SHOWN ON PAGE 96

Paris Fashion Shoes shown on page 96 cost about $4 and available at the following stores:

Hale Bros.
San Francisco, Cal.

Auerbach Co.
Salt Lake City, Utah

Fontius Shoe Co.
Denver, Col.

Davison-Paxon Co.
Atlanta, Ga.

McCurdy & Co.
Rochester, N. Y.

CAROLE LOMBARD'S
LAST FILM
presented in complete fiction form
READ
"To Be or Not To Be"
—the illustrated story based on the great Ernst Lubitsch production, exclusive in April issue of STARDOM, Hollywood's Most Exciting Magazine of Facts, Fiction and Photos, in full four colors—the movie magazine you've been waiting for.
At your newsstand 10¢
STARDOM

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

FALSE TEETH
AS LOW AS $7.95
Per Plate. DENTAL PLATES are made in our own laboratory from your personal impression. Our workmanship and material GUARANTEED or purchase price refunded. We take this risk on our 60-day trial offer. DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY! MAIL POST CARD for FREE Material and Catalog of our LOW PRICES. DON'T PUT IT OFF—Write us TODAY!
BRIGHTON - THOMAS DENTAL LABORATORY,
Dept. 1097 6217 S. Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill.

ASTHMATIC? Try ASTHMADOR
Try Dr. R. Schiffmann's ASTHMADOR the next time an asthmatic attack leaves you gasping for breath. ASTHMADOR'S aromatic fumes aid in reducing the severity of the attack—help you breathe more easily. And it's economical, dependably uniform, produced under sanitary conditions in our modern laboratory—its quality insured through rigid scientific control. Try ASTHMADOR in any of three forms, powder, cigarette or pipe mixture. At all drug stores—or write today for a free sample to R. SCHIFFMANN CO. Los Angeles, Calif. Dept. N-62.

BLONDES! Try New 11 Minute Shampoo and RINSE at Home!

1. New method—not a liquid. Fragrant powder dissolves into rich creamy cleansing lather.
2. Specially made for blondes. Washes hair shades lighter safely—fine for children's hair.
3. Helps keep light hair from darkening. Brightens faded blonde hair.
4. For exquisite lustre and radiance top off shampoo with Rinse.
5. Takes only 11 minutes to use and gives that fluffy "just-shampooed" look for whole week.
6. Costs very little to use at 10c, drug and dept. stores.

BLONDEX

Shampoo and Rinse for Blondes

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FALSE TEETH

LOW AS $7.95

90 DAYS' TRIAL
TEST THEM
EXAMINE THEM

We make FALSE TEETH for you by mail from your own impressions. You have satisfaction of MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Customers report satisfaction but you be your own judge.

SEND NO MONEY WRITE TODAY for FREE Booklet and Material.

J. B. CLEVELAND DENTAL PLATE CO.
Dept. 97-D2, East St. Louis, Illinois

New FOOT RELIEF

Dr. Scholl's KUROTEX, velvety-soft, soothing, cushioning foot plaster, when used on feet or toes, quickly relieves Corns, Callouses, Bunions, Tender Spots. Stops shoe friction; eases pressure. Economical! At Drug, Shoe, Dept. and 10¢ Stores.

Dr Scholl's KUROTEX

MOVIE REVIEWS (Continued)

(Continued from page 101)

Byington and Laird Cregar) are on the look-out for a charming piece of feminine bait to dangle before reticent millionaires. They happen on Gene Tierney, are quite pleased with her (as who wouldn't be) and pop their little proposition. Gene, fed up with her life as a shop girl, falls for their line of malarkey, mush and millionaires, and off they go to Palm Beach, where the bright sun makes it easy to spot dollar signs a mile or so away.

Sure enough they stumble on Henry Fonda who casually remarks that he's shopping for a sailboat; would fifteen thousand dollars do the trick, do they think? Not only do they think so, but they know just the boat. The price? A measly fifteen thousand. The deal is made, and Henry is left with a lovely boat, and, incidentally, the owner of it, who turns up and wants to know what the devil he's doing on his property.

Getting out while the getting's good, and fifteen thousand dollars richer, our three merry swindlers return to New York and are soon camping on the trail of John Shepperd, millionaire number two. John (as who wouldn't be) is in love with Gene. But just then who should show up as a bosom pal of John's but Henry Fonda. This might complicate matters except that Henry is in love with Gene, too (as who wouldn't be), and admits that he was a fraud and the fifteen thousand represented his total savings to that date. With two proposals to deal with and only one Gene Tierney, she decides to marry Henry (as some might) and leave John to the debutantes. On the way out, Gene lifts the fifteen thousand from her sharper friends and makes off with Henry.

It's not quite as simple as all that. The fifteen thousand makes a few more trips up and back. There's a spot of misunderstanding here and there. John waits in the wings eager and willing to marry Gene. But the final scene finds Gene and Henry back together again, clutching tightly that much more ravelled fifteen thousand, a bit befuddled by it all.

Who wouldn't be?—TCF.

P. S.

A little over a year ago, Gene Tierney was a virtual unknown in Hollywood. Twentieth-Century-Fox thought she looked good, gambled a paltry $171,000 on her, including $16,000 in salary before she ever stepped up to a camera, $4,000 for more than 40 hair-do's, make-up and wardrobe tests to determine her "type," $3,000 for coaches, $128,000 for extra shooting days on her first three pictures . . . "Rings On Her Fingers" is Gene's first comedy role . . . Henry Fonda's severe case of laryngitis won him director Mamoulian's praises rather than a day off. Canny Mamoulian had him whisper his love to Gene, said, "That shows what a sore throat will do for an actor. Hank, you've never done a better scene" . . . The rope ladder Laird Cregar climbs is actually a camouflaged cable, one that's strong enough to withstand his full 300 pounds . . . Rouben Mamoulian got his first look-in on backstage antics back in the old contree, when Russian big timer Boris Glagolin thought he was a nice child. Mamoulian evened the score over here when he bunked into 62-year old Glagolin on Hollywood Boulevard, out of a job. Now he's cast as the croupier in "Rings" and, with Mamoulian's aid, in line for a term contract . . . The lucky dice and spinning wheel that always seem to hit the right numbers really do just that. They should! They were laboriously "fixed" in advance by an experienced crew of professional chiselers . . . "Joe" director Mamouian said casually, "get rid of that mountain for me, will you? I'm going out to lunch." Not Joe Mohammed, but Joe Behm, prop man, who was assigned to remove a sizeable crag on Catalina Island that just didn't fit in with the supposed-to-be-Palm-Beach background of the story. But a job's a job, and Joe made fast work of his—by the ingenious expediency of planting a full-foliaged, far-flinging palm tree smack in a strategic spot, completely covering the bothersome mountain to all intents and purposes of the camera.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

The largest public library in Cleveland, Ohio, had to order 125 extra copies of "David Copperfield" to meet the overwhelming demand created when that picture was being made? Before the rush order, the library had 500 copies of the book on its shelves, but that was nowhere near enough. Snoops say there wasn't a copy of any Dickens book on the shelf for weeks 'n' weeks. As for "Wuthering Heights," four publishing houses were completely sold out on all editions of the book, and libraries and book stores were left completely stranded, unable to replenish their suddenly exhausted stocks when the Bronte novel went into movie production.

—Look Magazine

TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP

Just because Selectee Bruce Bennett's pals Gleason and Durant can't get into the army, they get into a mess of trouble. Newsgal Florence Rice sees it all through while Bruce saves the army from hiding out a gang of murderers. Flo gets the story, and, incidentally, Captain Bruce Bennett.—Col.

SPY SMASHER

The exciting heroics of Spy Smasher Kane Richmond and his twin brother (played by Kane) in outwitting German spy-master The Mask. Before the picture ends they have surmounted such difficulties as the gallows, secret radio beams in the White Mountains, harbor mines, sinking submarines and crashing planes, bringing The Mask to a deserving finale. —Rep.

TORPEDO BOAT

Dick Arlen and Phil Terry invent a torpedo boat which leaves nothing but tragedy in its wake . . . trouble with girl friends Mary Carlisle and Jean Parker, quarrel between the boys and Phil's death. All ends as well as can be expected with Dick and Mary in a clinch. —Par.

BORN TO SING

Pals Leo Gorcey, Ray McDonald, and Larry Nunn get into trouble getting Virginia Weidler out of it. They threaten to picket a producer who has stolen a play written by Virginia's pa, get themselves accused of extortion, and end up by successfully putting the show on themselves, outwitting their deceptive competitor. —M-G-M.

A TRAGEDY AT MIDNIGHT

John Howard's always a step ahead of the police in solving murder mysteries. The cops don't like him, and it's just what they're looking for when Howard blows a kiss to wife Margaret Lindsay with whom he thinks he's crawled into bed, but wakes up to find it was someone else's corpse. He fools 'em anyhow in the end.—Rep.

TWO YANKS IN TRINIDAD

It takes a war to bring racketeers Brian Donlevy and Pat O'Brien together. Arch enemies, they both land in Trinidad with the army, fall for the same gal (Janet Blair), outwit enemy agent John Emery, save the U. S. Fleet and finally decide to patch up!—Col.

CANAL ZONE

There's only one white woman (Harriet Hilliard) in Ginger Bar, Canal Zone, jumping-off spot for bomber-ferriers to Africa. Aviators John Hubbard and Chester Morris get it bad, but she keeps 'em guessing until a near-fatal crash in the jungle makes up her mind for her. —Col.

SOUTH OF SANTE FE

The Sons of Pioneers are at it again with blood and thunder. This time they're helping Roy Rogers and Gabby Hayes protect Linda Hayes' gold mine from the clutches of city slicker Paul Fix. It takes a rough chase or two and several hairbreadth escapes before they bring the villain to justice and rescue the mine.—Rep.

HELIOTROPE HARRY

After the birth of his daughter, Heliotrope Harry (Brian Donlevy) decides to give up jewel-snatching to follow the straight and narrow in Conn. Wife Miriam Hopkins objects, double-crosses him, and he winds up in Sing Sing. Years later he escapes to prevent Miriam and blackmailers from ruining his daughter's future, succeeds and returns to Ossining a relatively happy man.—U.A.

Relieves
STUFFY NOSTRILS

● You've won half the battle against cold discomforts if you can open those stuffy nostrils and breathe through your nose without that smothery feeling. If your nostrils are clogged up, insert Mentholatum. Note how effectively it eases your breathing and relieves the sneezing, sniffling, soreness, swelling, and redness. With all these annoyances checked, you can go about your activities in comfort. Jars or tubes, 30c. For generous free trial size write Mentholatum Company, 175 Harlan Building, Wilmington, Delaware.

Recommended Good Housekeeping Bureau

MENTHOLATUM
BUY DEFENSE BONDS and STAMPS

Hair OFF Face Lips Chin Arms Legs

Happy! I had ugly hair . . . was unloved . . . discouraged. Tried many different products . . . even razors. Nothing was satisfactory. Then I developed a simple, painless, inexpensive method. It worked. I have helped thousands win beauty, love, happiness. My FREE book, "How to Overcome the Superfluous Hair Problem", explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer. No obligation. Write Mme. Annette Lanzette, P. O. Box 4040 Merchandise Mart, Dept. 176, Chicago.

NEWEST STYLES

GLASSES $2.95 & UP COMPLETE by MAIL!
16 DAYS' TRIAL! SEND NO MONEY!
Good Looking! We GUARANTEE SATISFACTION or Your MONEY BACK. We also repair Broken Glasses. Write today for our catalog and information FREE
U.S. Eye-Glasses Co. 1557 Milwaukee Av. Dept. 4-104, Chicago

IF SPRING IS IN YOUR HEART
Blue Waltz

Its lilting fragrance . . . enticing, exciting as spring itself . . . dances into men's hearts, makes you the girl of their dreams. Surround yourself with BLUE WALTZ glamour by touching this exquisite perfume to your hair, throat and wrists.
Now in a darling Easter Box only 10¢.

10¢ AT ALL 5 & 10¢ STORES

WANT TO KNOW ABOUT
Feminine Hygiene

There's no reason to be without information. There are facts every woman should know.

BORO-PHENO-FORM the modern, easy, simple medicated suppository method of Feminine Hygiene—deodorizing, cleansing, astringent, soothing—ready for instant use. For years, Boro-Pheno-Form has been the choice of thousands of women who testify to its satisfactory use.

FREE! Interesting and informative booklet explains the Boro-Pheno-Form way of Feminine Hygiene. Your copy is FREE.

Ask Any Druggist Anywhere—or write
Dr. Pierre Chemical Company
162 No. Franklin St.—Chicago, Illinois—Dept. D-14

DR. PIERRE'S BORO PHENO FORM

Give Your Lazy Liver This Gentle "Nudge"

Follow Noted Ohio Doctor's Advice To Relieve CONSTIPATION!

If liver bile doesn't flow freely every day into your intestines—constipation with its headaches and that "half-alive" feeling often result. So stir up your liver bile secretion and see how much better you should feel! Just try Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for his patients with constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only stimulate bile flow to help digest fatty foods but also help elimination. Get a box TODAY. 15¢, 30¢, 60¢.

FALSE TEETH by MAIL

from WORLD'S LARGEST DENTAL PLATE MAKERS

$7.95 to $35

60 DAYS' TRIAL—Send No Money! Made for you from your own mouth impression! Money Back Guarantee of Satisfaction! FREE impression material, directions, catalog. U. S. Dental Co., 1555 Milwaukee Av., Dept. 4-104, Chicago

SUFFERERS FROM PSORIASIS (SCALY SKIN TROUBLE)

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Use DERMOIL

Prove it yourself no matter how long you have suffered or what you have tried. Beautiful book on psoriasis and Dermoil with amazing, true photographic proof of results sent FREE. Write for it.

Don't mistake eczema for the stubborn, ugly embarrassing scaly skin disease Psoriasis. Apply non-staining Dermoil. Thousands do for scaly spots on body or scalp. Grateful users, often after years of suffering, report the scales have gone, the red patches gradually disappeared and they enjoyed the thrill of a clear skin again. Dermoil is used by many doctors and is backed by a positive agreement to give definite benefit in 2 weeks or money is refunded without question. Send 10c (stamps or coin) for generous trial bottle to make our famous "One Spot Test". Test it yourself. Results may surprise you. Write today for your test bottle. Give Druggist's name and address. Print name plainly. Don't delay. Sold by Liggett and Walgreen Drug Stores and other leading Druggists. LAKE LABORATORIES, Box 547, Northwestern Station, Dept. 3009, Detroit, Mich.

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE

©1935 LAKE LAB.

NELSON EDDY TALKS HIS HEAD OFF

(Continued from page 53)

"What new job?"

"You said last night I could be a reporter."

"How old are you?"

"Sixteen."

"You've got to be eighteen. Get out."

He got out, dragging with him the shattered wreckage of a dream. He looked down at his best suit and his black notebook. Slowly rage fused with pain, and both hardened to resolution.

Down the street he marched to the Evening Public Ledger, rival sheet, and headed for the city room. A copy-boy flagged him. "Where you going?"

"In here," said Nelson, brushing him off.

Ben Raleigh was the editor. "What do you want?"

"I want to be a reporter."

"How old are you?"

"Eighteen."

"What do you know about reporting?"

"Nothing."

Raleigh crashed his fist to the desk. "First honest applicant ever stepped into this joint. Report Monday morning."

P. S.—On Monday morning the happiest boy in Philadelphia was relieved by a kindly colleague of his black leather notebook. "A reporter makes notes on the back of an envelope and wouldn't be found dead with a pencil on him." Thus ended the first lesson in journalism!

Should an unforeseen chain of events strip Nelson of current assets, including vocal pipes, he'd have a second incentive for moving heaven and earth to get himself a job as war correspondent. His first incentive lies in the changeless conviction that journalism is the world's most exciting profession.

ARMISTICE, 1918

The news came flashing over the wires—no phony armistice this time, but the real thing. Through the office pandemonium, Nelson heard his name bellowed. "Go interview that old guy who said Germany'd win. Fling it in his teeth. Ask him who's loony now."

He'd gone with distaste. In the face of all this, it seemed pointless to gloat. What could the poor old half-crazy galoot say? Relieved that the job was done, he was back on the streets. Bells rang, sirens screamed a wild paean of victory. Men and women went mad, waved flags, blew trumpets, snake-danced, yelled themselves hoarse, hugged and kissed strangers who yelled beside them.

A sudden surging emotion like nothing he'd ever known stopped Nelson in his tracks. Realization hit him. It was finished—the slaughter and the dread, the nightmare of men's broken bodies, the agony of women who waited. Tears started to his eyes, and he let them roll. He didn't care who saw them. He didn't know. Din and crowds were blotted out by one shining vision. There was nothing in the world but a boy standing on a street corner, crying with joy because the war was over.

To repeat the thrill of that day is something he looks forward to with prayer and certainty.

THE FIRST CURTAIN GOES UP

He was hungry, not nervous. He'd won the competition of the Philadelphia Operatic Society for local baritones. He was about to debut as King Amonasro in "Aida." He knew the part, he was in good voice, why be nervous? He was just hungry. All-out opera singers, he'd heard, never ate before singing. Bent on all-outness or nothing, Nelson had dined on a cup of tea.

Another thing bothered him. Young and skinny, he had to play a tiger-man, a hairy, wall-eyed Ethiopian big shot. Aida, his little daughter, equalled two of him. That wouldn't help much. Well, it was too late to worry. He was on—

He never did have a chance to get nervous. The audience response was prompt and unmistakable. Their applause electrified him. Next day the papers said he'd electrified them. That phrase kept him going—

P.S.—He sang with the Society—later the Civic Opera Company—for six years, and instituted two changes in his routine—dined before singing and padded himself with phony leg muscles till his own calves developed.

He hopes to return to opera some day and thinks his second debut will be more exciting than his first, because now he's got sense enough to be scared.

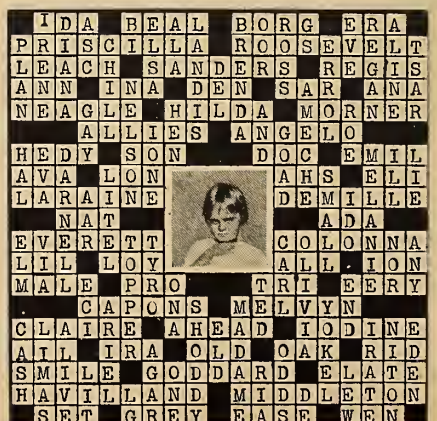
BON VOYAGE

This was the day. He'd dreamed of it, saved for it, stretched out his arms toward it in a kind of fever of anticipation. His first trip abroad. They were sailing at midnight. He couldn't understand why the taxi man, the purser, the steward failed to share his elation. He beamed at them all, but nobody beamed back. Maybe if he told them this was his first trip— He decided against it.

Climbing to the top deck, he stood there alone as the last "all ashore" was called, the gangplank drawn in, the parting whistle blown. Before him burned the unsleeping lights of New York. He was still landbound. Then something moved—so slowly, creepingly, that he couldn't be sure it was movement till his fascinated gaze dropped to the thin, dark, unbelievable line of water between ship and shore that hadn't been there before.

They were under way. He was inexorably parted from solid earth, committed to this moving bridge at whose other end lay Europe, which had been a name and now suddenly took on the shape of reality. There was no turning back, no chance of changing his mind.

Solution to Puzzle on Page 14



He stood on deck till the last lights dropped below the horizon, and his heart stopped thumping.

The thrill of the first time doesn't come twice. But when Nelson has a lovely dream, he dreams of being again on an ocean liner, this time with his wife who has yet to see Europe. He won't rest till he's taken her to a certain little inn on the Tiber, driven her through the English countryside, shown her Michelangelo's ceiling and Notre Dame. "I'll be insufferable," he explains, "—every fibre shouting, 'This is mine, I invented it, but you can have some of it, too.' "

They hope it will all come true when the war is over.

IT CAN'T HAPPEN AGAIN

Glancing at his watch as he stepped out on the stage, Nelson hoped they'd make it snappy. He was due in Berlin that night for the opening performance of Hindemith's "Cardillac" and had to make tomorrow morning's boat-train for London.

The directors of the Dresden Opera were auditioning applicants. Contracted for concerts and opera at home, Nelson was no applicant. He was singing to oblige his teacher, who had three or four girl pupils trying out, but wanted to show what he could do with a masculine voice. So Nelson had stayed over for the afternoon train. He couldn't afford to miss that.

Two songs—then they asked for "Eri Tu" from "Maskenball." "No score," said the pianist.

"Get it," said a director.

Nelson looked at his watch again. This was taking too long. On the other hand, who was he to turn down the directors of the Dresden Opera! They'd asked for "Eri Tu." "Sorry, gentlemen, no music," he apologized, stepped to the piano, plunked down a note, opened his mouth and sang it cold. Jaws dropped. What did this crazy American think he was doing? Someone scurried out and scurried back with the score. Halfway through the aria, the pianist came in and met Nelson, still on pitch. Astonishment merged into radiant approval. They liked the crazy American—his poise, his willingness, his voice, his ear.

He liked them, too. He got a kick out of both their astonishment and approval, but couldn't wait for more. Was that all, gentlemen? That was all. Thank you.

He grabbed his hat, just made the train for Berlin and his date with a girl who'd been one of the maestro's pupils and had promised to show him the town. She'd assembled seven boy friends to help with the job. Berlin was wide open. After the concert, Nelson saw Berlin as he never expects to see any other town. They wound up with breakfast at seven, after which his friends escorted him to the train.

From Dresden Opera through Hindemith concert and Berlin nightspots, it had been, he decided, a kaleidoscopic and thoroughly satisfying sequence of events.

P.S.—On a Paris boulevard two weeks later, he caught sight of his maestro, waving a frenzied handkerchief. Wondering at the frenzy, he waved back. Maestro fell on his neck. "Let me salute the leading baritone of Dresden. Thirty dollars a week."

He never got over Nelson's turning it down. Nelson never quite got over it either. The crazy American keeps a warm spot in his heart for the members of that appreciative board.

It couldn't happen again, but he wishes it could, especially the night in Berlin.

"THEY'RE ROLLING"

He stood shaking in his shoes. MacDonald. Van Dyke. Naughty Marietta. To his mind's eye the names flashed on and off like names on a marquee. After the piddling little parts he'd played, here he was—about to be inducted into big-time shooting. With Jeanette MacDonald. In "Naughty Marietta." Directed by W. S. Van Dyke, produced by Hunt Stromberg—names to conjure with in the movie world, to which his name meant nothing.

Miss MacDonald had been perfect. No fuss. No obvious graciousness. Just matter-of-fact acceptance of her co-star on an equal footing—he who a couple of days ago had been on no footing with her at all. It was Van Dyke who scared him—One-take Van Dyke, the man who growled like a bear, who'd take no nonsense—not from Garbo herself or from John X. Bigshot. Other directors had coddled him, patted him on the back—made him feel sometimes, it was true, like a backward child.

"We're turning," called Van Dyke. This was it.

* * *

Boy, what a day! Boy, what a whale of a day! Fifteen setups! Himself saying, "Next time we shoot it—" Van Dyke saying, "Whaddaya mean, next time? It's in the bag." Building Nelson's self-confidence, treating him like a professional, not a toddler—expecting as much from him as anyone else, bawling him out when he didn't give it. Boy, what a day, what a director, what a picture! The whole thing smelled good, it smelled like success!

* * *

In the lobby of Grauman's Chinese after the preview. Crowds milling. Van Dyke thwacking his shoulder. "Well, how does it feel to be a star?"

"I don't know how to act."

"You're telling me!" roared his director—a crack Nelson still loves to repeat, to the glory of Van.

After twelve pictures he knows that the thrill of his first day on "Naughty Marietta" is one of those once-in-a-lifetime things.

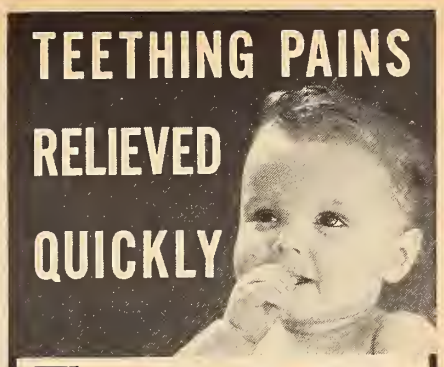
HE FELT FINE

His manager had got some dates mixed, booked him for a concert in Hartford on Sunday afternoon and a radio program in New York at seven-thirty that evening. It seemed impossible, but the impossible would have to be done.

The concert, over at five, was topped by one of the most gratifying tributes ever paid him. Instead of storming and clutching for autographs, the audience lined up on either side of the drive and applauded as his car went by, giving quiet expression to the pleasure he'd given them. Nelson felt fine.

At the station a special train waited—engine and two streamlined coaches—bought and paid for by Eddy. Why two coaches were needed for three people—manager, accompanist and self—he never could figure out, unless one was for ballast.

They started off on a record-breaking run. By the time they'd finished their box lunch, it occurred to Nelson that this was a pretty expensive trip and damned if he wasn't going to get his money's worth. Whereupon he rose, marched the length of the train and sat successively in each seat in each car till he'd sat in them all. This made him feel much better.



WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved promptly.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist and has been used by mothers for over fifty years. One bottle is usually enough for one baby for the entire teething period.

DR. HAND'S
TEETHING LOTION
Just rub it on the gums
Buy it from your druggist today

● Now, at home, you can quickly and easily tint telltale streaks of gray to natural-appearing shades—from lightest blonde to darkest black. Brownatone and a small brush does it—or your money back. Used for 30 years by thousands of women (men, too)—Brownatone is guaranteed harmless. No skin test needed, active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Lasting—does not wash out. Just brush or comb it in. One application imparts desired color. Simply retouch as new gray appears. Easy to prove by tinting a test lock of your hair. 60c at drug or toilet counters on a money-back guarantee. Retain your youthful charm. Get BROWNATONE today.

FREE CLUB PIN & RING CATALOG
PINS 30¢ up-RINGS $1.50
Our new book shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs by Bastian craftsmen ... oldest, largest makers. Write for your Free copy today!
BASTIAN BROS. Dept.57, Rochester, N. Y.

IF YOU suffer from corns you should know about this simple, sensible treatment that lets you walk them away! First, the soft felt pad helps relieve pain by lifting off pressure. Then the Blue-Jay medication gently loosens the corn so that in a few days it may be easily removed—including the pain-producing "core!" (Stubborn cases may require more than one application.)

Blue-Jay Corn Plasters cost very little—only a few cents to treat each corn—at all drug and toilet goods counters.

They reached the radio station in time for a five-minute rehearsal with the supporting male chorus, then went through the program. His last number was "The Lord's Prayer." He felt fine, singing it. I happened to hear it. I happened to be moved to tears.

The final note out, he fell flat on his face. And came to ten minutes later, resentful at finding himself on the floor, doused in spirits of ammonia facing a small but very worried studio audience.

"What is this?" he demanded, indignant if weak-voiced. "A cheap nervous breakdown?"

He wouldn't mind having it all happen again, at the same cost to his pocketbook and nerves.

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED

They didn't want to elope. To them it wasn't an elopement. They just wanted to be married without benefit of hullaballoo. Publicity terrified Ann, who was no professional, and it wasn't fair to subject her to it.

So Nelson drew up a brief outline of the wedding plans, leaving blanks for a few unknown particulars, addressed it to a friend in M-G-M's publicity department, attached a picture of himself and Ann, stuck the whole thing in the top lefthand drawer of his dresser and locked the door.

Then he and Ann, his mother, Doris Kenyon and his manager drove quietly to Las Vegas.

The judge was businesslike, not to say casual. He barely looked at them. "You stand there, you stand there, you stand there," he said, clipped on his fountain-pen and cast an eye over the license. That was when he stopped being casual, proving that judges are people.

"What's this, what's this, what's this, are you Nelson Eddy?"

"Yes, sir."

"You're my favorite singer."

Not knowing quite what to say to that, Nelson countered neatly with, "You're my favorite judge."

For being his favorite judge's favorite singer, he got an extra dash of fervor in his wedding ceremony.

They spent a twenty-minute honeymoon at Boulder Dam, spit over the side for luck and drove back to the hotel for dinner. The hotel manager sent up a bottle of champagne with his best wishes. Nelson sent off some wires. He also phoned his friend at M-G-M.

"Where are you?" The guy sounded suspicious.

"Never mind where I am. Get the key to my dressing room. There's an envelope for you in the top lefthand drawer of the dresser. You'll have to fill in a couple of blanks. The exact time was so-and-so. The judge's name is this-and-that—" Hell started popping at the other end of the phone. Nelson rang off.

Their plan to drive quietly to the train was thwarted. Las Vegas had the news. The car was plastered with signs and hung with tin cans. Curiously, they found they didn't mind. In fact, they liked it. In fact, they decided, a completely tin-canless wedding would have left them feeling cheated.

So they jangled happily out of town, eluded pursuers, doubled back on their tracks and returned by train to face the music.

The question of marital regrets doesn't even come up. The answer is no, a thousand times no. They're blissful!

HE MEETS THE GOVERNMENT

FDR's third inaugural. The gala concert at Constitution Hall. Chaplin, Raymond Massey, Rise Stevens, Doug Fairbanks, Ethel Barrymore, Nelson Eddy, Mickey Rooney, Hans Kindler and the Washington Symphony—all appearing by Presidential request.

Luncheon at the White House next day. The reception line first. Mrs. Roosevelt receiving alone, to spare the President for the actual inaugural ceremony. He had no idea the line moved so swiftly for, even as he bowed, he felt a hand groping for his, turned, found it was Mrs. Roosevelt's, and gave out with a startled oh!

He hung on to her hand till she looked him full in the face. It was her turn then to give out with a startled oh! Nelson moved on, content.

At luncheon he got a kick out of seeing the political big-wigs plain, faces he'd seen in the papers and newsreels.

After luncheon they formed a lane, through which the President passed to his inaugural. He looked bigger, fuller, stronger than Nelson had pictured him. The famous smile was missing. He moved gravely and with great dignity.

Of all the impressions he carried away with him, Nelson retains most vividly the memory of Eleanor Roosevelt's personality, the magic by which, with a smile and a swift handshake, she can wholly win you. The President, he's heard, has that quality double. His friend Van Dyke, for instance, would die for the President.

Nelson hopes really to meet some day the great man Van Dyke would die for.

CO-ED

(Continued from page 16)

month or so. (Hint: Marshmallows are even better shock-absorbers than tissue paper, and if you pack your goodies carefully with a couple of layers of 'em they'll arrive practically intact.) More important than food—if you can believe it!—is mail, so write to him faithfully every week. Cease turning out those bilious missives to your poor brother. Don't think he's the only one who reads them. Why that tall, blond 1A peering over his shoulder may be furloughing up your way some time, and if you sound promising—you know what me mean? Ulterior motives aside, a gay, newsy letter from home is a terrific shot in the arm. This holds for letters to swains-in-uniform, too. Less moonlight and roses and more about how the home team's doing is what they need.

In letters to an extra-special private, give him "Dearest John" or "John dear." Then devote a paragraph or two at the end to "lerve" and all that. Warning: Don't get so eloquent you make him more lonely than he is, and don't write stuff that haunts you for days after the letter's gone.

Anything stronger than "Dear John" is in poor taste if you're writing to just another guy. If you'd like him to be more than that, be subtle about it. "We all miss you so darn much" is far less sledge-hammery than "I miss you." The frequent use of his name in the letter is a good stunt. It makes the whole thing more intimate, somehow. "Yours," is a safe and effective ending. It can mean so much or nothing at all.

Volumes have been written on the subject of feminine behavior at an army camp, but the things to bear in mind seem to be as follows. Don't wear anything even vaguely military. The more utterly civilian you look the easier on the eye you'll be. Wear comfortable shoes so you can walk happily for hours. Do not have on your ravenous wolf appetite the day you visit at camp. Twenty-one dollars a month really is hay, you know. Don't keep talking about the war and what you're doing for the Red Cross.

Having disposed of the brass-buttoned contingent, how about a bit of morale-boosting for that unsung hero in mufti, your dad? He can stand it. Keep his light bill down by turning off all non-essential lamps. This, incidentally, conserves electricity which is urgently needed by defense plants. Take it easy on the car. Before long it won't be too easy to replace worn-out parts. Handle the toaster with kid gloves and baby the iron. They're probably the last ones you'll be able to get. The factories that used to make them are now manufacturing munitions.

If taxes have eaten up the beautiful wad of green stuff that was going to buy your Easter elegance, don't—for Pete's sake—sour-puss it around the house. Dig out your last year's suit and have it dyed something shrill and South American and devil-may-care.

Begin to stretch your allowance by hanging on to your lipstick till the very last gasp; by keeping track of bobby pins so that every week doesn't see you investing in another card; by reserving perfume for Occasions instead of syphoning it on as the whim strikes you; by using up all your cold cream and nail polish before laying in a new supply. Your dad will appreciate your thrift and so will Uncle S. There still is no cosmetic shortage, but with oil being one of our most vital defense needs, it's terribly wrong to waste them.

All these little economies help like mad, but your most important job is something kind of intangible. It is keeping that lovely, casual, pre-war atmosphere in your home. You know—Jack Benny on Sunday nights, inconsequential chatter at dinner, with-malice-toward-none brawling over who'll do the dishes. It won't be easy to preserve that spirit with a harassed pop and a Red Cross weary mom to contend with. But really try. Appoint yourself Gen. Cheerer-Upper on the home front, and you'll be doing your part croix-de-guerreishly!

DRESS FOR HIM?

Then send for our chart on how to dress for all occasions and for all boys! Doesn't matter what your type is. The chart has your number!
Enclose 5c in coin or stamps and address: Co-Ed Chart No. 1, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York City.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

Printed in the U. S. A. by the Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

CAROLE LOMBARD'S

LIFE STORY

A COMPLETE MAGAZINE ENTIRELY DEVOTED TO THE GLORIOUS LIFE HISTORY OF VIVACIOUS CAROLE.

150 THRILLING PICTURES—MANY NEVER BEFORE PUBLISHED

There can be no more moving memorial to Carole Lombard than the complete story of her fine, generous life. Moment for moment —each word eloquent because she lived it so well—all is here. Things you never knew about America's most beloved star are revealed for the first time. Great moments of her screen career are brought back again for you. It's a book you will want to keep —get your copy today.

ONLY 10¢

NOW ON SALE AT MAGAZINE DEALERS EVERYWHERE

(If your dealer cannot supply you, send 10c to Dell Publishing Co., 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.)

BABY'S BEAUTIFUL SKIN...

so sensitive, so smooth, looks to Doctor for proper care. For years Doctor has said, "Ivory for baby," and Ivory for you, too! Now kinder to skins of every age, New "Velvet-Suds" Ivory is milder than 10 leading toilet soaps! Try baby's own beauty treatment!

CAPTIVATING 'TEENS

and early twenties . . . your fresh, youthful beauty is often marred by too-active oil glands. Avoid hot water. Scrub with heavy lukewarm Ivory lather (note how quickly New Ivory makes rich suds). Rinse. Repeat lathering. Warm rinses, then cold. Repeat 3 times daily. If skin blemishes persist, consult your doctor.

BIRTHDAYS DON'T COUNT!

Whatever your age, Doctors advise "baby-care" for a lovelier complexion!

Your complexion never outgrows its need for "baby-care." What's best for the world's Most Perfect Complexion—baby's own—is best for beauty at every age! For baby's daily beauty-care—and yours—doctors advise gentle Ivory Soap!

Today you may enjoy the beauty boon of New "Velvet-Suds" Ivory—the mildest Ivory ever to touch your skin! See how your loveliness responds to New Ivory Soap's kinder lather. So creamy, so quick—and milder than 10 leading toilet soaps!

FOR BEAUTY BEYOND 35...

Your skin tends to be drier. More reason than ever to rely on New Ivory's extreme mildness. No dye, medication, or strong perfume that might be irritating. Each night massage your skin with New Ivory's quick-creaming lather. Use lukewarm water, never hot—for both Ivory massage and rinse. Pat dry. Since your skin lacks sufficient oil, apply lightly a little cold cream.

"BABY-CARE" ALL OVER?

Of course! Your body deserves complexion care. See how gratefully it responds to the soft, creamy richness of "velvet suds." New Ivory is faster-lathering, kinder to your skin than 10 leading toilet soaps! Thrill to the caress of a velvet-suds bath tonight!

TRADEMARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. • PROCTER & GAMBLE

99 44/100 % PURE
IT FLOATS

"Baby-care" is Beauty-care · · · use

New Velvet-suds IVORY SOAP

MODERN SCREEN

COPYRIGHT DEPOSIT

lay 0 nts

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
APR 21 1942

ANN SHERIDAN

Inside Story of the PAYNE-SHIRLEY DIVORCE!

NOW! ALL YOU'VE LOOKED FOR IN A LIPSTICK

In Tangee's New Improved Satin-Finish

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

by Constance Luft Huhn

Head of the House of Tangee, Makers of the World's Most Famous Lipsticks

ARE YOU ONE of the thousands of women who have longed for a lipstick with a softer, glossier sheen ...an alluring satin-finish? A lipstick, not too dry—yet not too moist...that strokes on so easily, so smoothly, it almost applies itself? A lipstick that stays on—I really mean stays on?

After two years of almost ceaseless effort to blend all these qualities into a single lipstick, we, at Tangee, are happy to offer you our new and exclusive Tangee SATIN-FINISH!

SATIN-FINISH, we believe, is the most important announcement Tangee has made in years. SATIN-FINISH means that you now may have—not only Tangee's gloriously clear shades that blend so perfectly with your complexion; not only the famous Tangee cream base that feels so soothing to your lips—but the exquisite grooming of a SATIN-FINISH that lasts for hours and hours.

So whichever shade you like best—whether it's Tangee Natural, the lipstick that changes on your lips to produce your own most becoming color—or the more brilliant Tangee Theatrical Red—or Tangee Red-Red, the rarest, loveliest red of them all... each now flatters your lips with a new and alluring Satin-Finish.

TANGEE RED-RED

..."Rarest Loveliest Red of Them All."...harmonizes with all fashion colors.

TANGEE THEATRICAL RED

..."The Brilliant Scarlet Lipstick Shade."...always flattering.

TANGEE NATURAL

...Orange in the stick, changes to produce your own most becoming shade of blush rose on the lips.

TANGEE Lipsticks

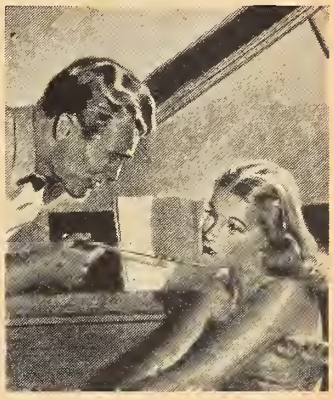
WITH THE NEW SATIN-FINISH

"A company that has pleased the women of America with over 100 million lipsticks can't help but learn every possible lipstick requirement," says Constance Luft Huhn, head of the House of Tangee. "We've listened eagerly and patiently to thousands of suggestions and comments—yes, and criticisms, too. And we are constantly seeking to improve our Tangee—to give it exactly those qualities you tell us you want in a lipstick. That is how our new and exclusive SATIN-FINISH was created. You wanted it—we produced it!"

"It takes a Pretty Smile to Sell a Song—

And yours, My Pet, is on the Blink. I suspect 'Pink Tooth Brush'"

"You're a nightingale, sister! You've got youth, charm, personality—everything, until you smile. That's fatal. You can't star with my band until you can flash a smile that travels right from the stand into the customers' hearts."



"Now, no tears, pretty face. It's not that bad. You've just been careless. Box office smiles and 'pink tooth brush,' sparkling teeth and sensitive gums just don't play the same bill. We're booking you first with my dentist. Tomorrow—no, today!"

"Our modern soft foods don't give gums enough work! And sparkling smiles depend largely on healthy gums. Give your gums more work, daily massage." (N.B. A recent survey shows dentists prefer Ipana for personal use 2 to 1 over any other dentifrice.)

"Am I following that dentist's advice! It's Ipana and massage for me—every day! What a clean, freshening flavor Ipana has! My teeth are brighter—and that stimulating tingle every time I massage my gums seems to signal, 'You're going to make the grade'."

Then on opening night the crowd went wild . . .

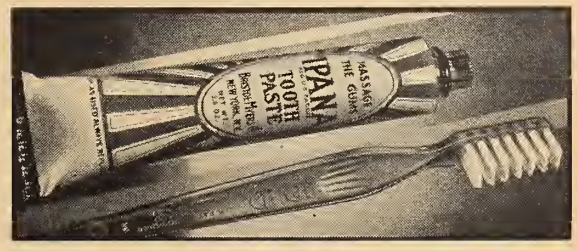
(Soliloquy of a nightingale) "I'm singing the blues but they're not in my heart. I'm the happiest girl this side of anywhere. Listen to that crowd—three encores and they're still banging the china and calling for more. Well, here's one little girl who sees her name in lights and Ipana Tooth Paste in her beauty cabinet forever and then some."

Help keep gums firmer, teeth brighter, smiles more sparkling with Ipana and Massage!

"PINK" on your tooth brush means see your dentist at once. He may simply tell you that eating too much soft, creamy food has denied your gums the exercise they need for firmness and health. And, like many dentists, he may very likely suggest "the healthful stimulation of Ipana and massage."

For Ipana is specially designed, not only to clean teeth thoroughly but, with massage, to help make your gums firmer. So each time you brush your teeth massage a little extra Ipana onto your gums. That invigorating "tang"—exclusive with Ipana and massage—tells you circulation is increasing in the gums—helping gums to gain new firmness and strength.

Get a tube of economical Ipana Tooth Paste at your druggist's today. Let Ipana and massage help you to have a lovelier smile!



A Product of Bristol-Myers

IPANA TOOTH PASTE

APR 16 1942

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S
LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month

The greatest star of the screen!

April showers bring Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer flowers. One is a daffodil and the other a daffy-downdilly.

★ ★ ★ ★

"I Married An Angel" and "Rio Rita".

In the former Nelson Eddy is the "I" and Jeanette MacDonald is the "Angel".

★ ★ ★ ★

But in the latter Abbott is not "Rio" and Costello is not "Rita".

★ ★ ★ ★

These are two excellent starring combinations and two excellent pictures.

★ ★ ★ ★

Anita Loos—a neater screen writer we never knew—made "I Married An Angel" into a photoplay.

★ ★ ★ ★

She had as a basis the celebrated Broadway (and points west) stage success produced by Dwight Deere Wiman.

★ ★ ★ ★

This was a musical adaptation by Rodgers and Hart of the play by Vaszary Janos.

★ ★ ★ ★

W. S. Van Dyke II directed. And an adroit job, too. He has missed none of the charm.

★ ★ ★ ★

The idea: Nelson Eddy, disillusioned with the quirks of matrimony, asks for an angel. Heaven obliges. She arrives wings and all.

★ ★ ★ ★

The entertainment is down-to-earth.

Getting down-to-mirth, consider "Rio Rita".

★ ★ ★ ★

This is the biggest enterprise the King Zanies have ever graced.

★ ★ ★ ★

Abbott and Costello are their funniest. The film is all theirs.

★ ★ ★ ★

But one or two renowned and attractive personalities augment the proceedings. You can't not-mention Kathryn Grayson or John Carroll.

★ ★ ★ ★

"Bud" and "Lou" in their first big Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer opus will have you rolling in the aisles.

★ ★ ★ ★

So let's go rolling down to "Rio Rita".

—Leo (Rita)

MODERN SCREEN

STORIES

Gorgeous Hunk—Vic Mature 26
The Divorce That Couldn't Happen—Payne-Shirley 30
Juke Boy—Jimmy Dorsey 34
Made in Heaven—The Holdens 36
How They Spend Their Money 42
Superman's Kid Brother—Bob Sterling 44
The Marriage That Couldn't Happen—Brent-Sheridan 50

COLOR PORTRAITS

Susan Hayward 54
Priscilla Lane 55

FEATURES

"I Married an Angel" 32
Academy Award Winners 38
Candidly Yours 84
Buy for Victory! 108

BEAUTY

Hold That Smile 56
Modern Screen's Smile Chart 58
Speak Out for Beauty 61

FASHION

Around the Clock in Color 62

DEPARTMENTS

Movie Reviews 6
Movie Scoreboard 9
Our Puzzle Page 10
Co-Ed 16
Portrait Gallery 19
Good News 46
Modern Hostess 72

ALBERT P. DELACORTE, Editor
HENRY P. MALMGREEN, Associate Editor
SYLVIA KAHN, Hollywood Editor
CONRAD W. WIENK, Art Editor
RUTH FRANK } Editorial
ANNETTE BELLINGER } Assistants

Cover:
Ann Sheridan
Appearing in
Warners' "Juke Girl"

Val. 24, Na. 6, May, 1942. Copyright, 1942, the Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 149 Madison Ave., New Yark, Published monthly. Printed in U. S. A. Office af publication at Washingtan and Sauth Aves., Dunellen, N. J. Single capy price 10c in U. S. and Canada; U. S. subscriptian price $1.00 a year; Canadian subscriptian $2.00 a year; fareign subscriptian $2.20 a year. Entered as secand class matter, Sept. 18, 1930, at the pastaffice, Dunellen, N. J., under Act af March 3, 1879. Additianal secand-class entries at Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; Dallas, Texas; and New Orleans, La. The publishers accept no respansibility far the return af unsolicited material. Names of characters used in semi-fictianal matter are fictitiaus. If the name af any living persan is used it is purely a coincidence. Trademark Na. 301773.

The sky's the limit
in M-G-M's MAGNIFICENT MUSICAL EXTRAVAGANZA!
BROADWAY'S SENSATIONAL MUSICAL COMEDY HIT
BRINGS LAUGHTER AND SONG TO THE SCREEN!
AND THIS PAIR FROM PARADISE IS GLORIOUSLY REUNITED!
JEANETTE
MacDONALD • NELSON EDDY
In
I Married an Angel
with EDWARD EVERETT HORTON • BINNIE BARNES • REGINALD OWEN DOUGLASS DUMBRILLE • MONA MARIS • JANICE CARTER • INEZ COOPER
Screen Play by ANITA LOOS
Directed by MAJOR W. S. VAN DYKE II
Produced by HUNT STROMBERG
An M-G-M Picture
Hear famed Rodgers and Hart song hits including:
I Married An Angel
Paris In The Spring
The End Of A Dream
Twinkle In Your Eye and others

MOVIE REVIEWS

REAP THE WILD WIND

Dynamic always has been the word for De Mille. His pictures have the flash and roar of an exploding firecracker and the color of a roman candle; they're as subtle as a blast of dynamite, but just as exciting. De Mille makes movies the way Americans celebrate the Fourth of July—with noise, color and a handful of talk.

"Reap The Wild Wind" tells the story of the Florida coast a century or so ago. Down where the Atlantic meets the Gulf of Mexico lies Key West, surf beaten and hurricane swept. There, in the days when the clipper ships sailed the waters, was the home port of the tough and weathered salvagers who swept out in the gales when ships ran aground on the treacherous shoals. Their job was to save the cargo before the ships foundered and sank; it was dangerous work, a gamble with fortune and death. Key West was home port for outcasts and cut-throats, for adventurers and thugs.

It was home port, too, for beautiful, rebellious Loxi Claiborne (Paulette Goddard), who asked favors of no one and whose schooner raced out with the salvage fleet whenever the wreck call echoed over Key West. Loxi . . . Queen of the Keys, who knew the answer to a stormy life, stormy weather and stormy men.

But men and weather can be unpredictable; and Loxi found herself caught up in the passions of two men, violent as the cross currents of a gale. Jack Stuart, handsome young captain, driving, ambitious; stranded in Key West after his ship foundered on the shoals. And Stephen Tolliver, whose charm had tinkled the sedate cut-glass of Charleston.

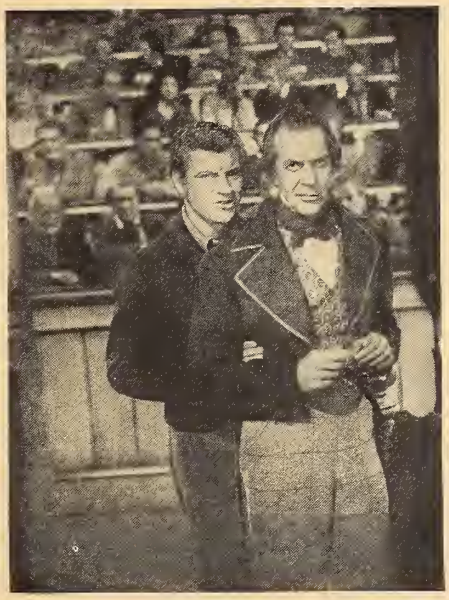
She was caught up, too, in the rivalry between these two men. For Tolliver was a director of the fleet, one of whose ships Stuart had commanded; and both, in the past, had fought each other bitterly. Tolliver came to Key West to investigate suspicions of piracy and the rising rate of wrecks in the Keys; and in pursuit of Loxi.

But there was no time for rivalries in Key West; and precious little time for romance. For over the town lay the ominous shadow of King Cutler (Raymond Massey), ruler of the Key West underworld, ruthless and powerful. Events moved swiftly as Cutler fought Tolliver's investigation; and Loxi was ensnared in the dangerous game.

In the stormy waters off Key West, the drama winds to a climax. There in a hurricane, the threads of destiny weave their final pattern. There, King Cutler, meets his judgment. And there, Loxi makes her final choice between Stuart and Tolliver.

It's no easy choice. Both men have claims on her heart. And before she makes it, there's the terror of another wreck on the shoals; and a scene of tense suspense when both men dive beneath the treacherous waters to a wrecked ship. The story of these three is as storm-swept as Key West in a gale, as warm as its sun-drenched streets, as exciting as its fighting schooners sweeping out to a wild sea. (Continued on page 12)

BY ZACHARY GOLD *



* For biography of Mr. Gold, see page 103 in Good News.

DURA-GLOSS *nail polish contains Chrystallyne

Your fingers will be as lovely as jewels; and this polish "stays on" amazingly

Thousands and thousands of women know the special brilliance and beauty and luster and life, of Dura-Gloss Nail Polish. No other polish ever became so popular, so quickly. The blessed way it sticks to your nails—the happy surprise that it doesn't get dull and ugly-looking for days on end—doesn't "peel" or "fray"—is all because of a special ingredient in Dura-Gloss, CHRYSTALLYNE*. This wonderful substance gives Dura-Gloss its lovely sparkling highlights, and unparalleled adhesion-qualities. Dura-Gloss is a remarkable nail polish. No other polish is like it. Enjoy its wondrous gleam and sparkle, now, today. Have the most beautiful fingernails in the world, with Dura-Gloss.

*Chrystallyne is a special resin-ingredient developed by chemistry-experts who were dissatisfied with existing nail polishes. Before being blended into the superb Dura-Gloss formula, it looks like glittering diamonds.

10c
PLUS TAX

3 New Colors for Spring
Blackberry
Mulberry
Wineberry

LORR LABORATORIES
Paterson, New Jersey
Founded by E. T. Reynolds

© 1942, LORR LABORATORIES

It's DURA-GLOSS for the most beautiful fingernails in the world

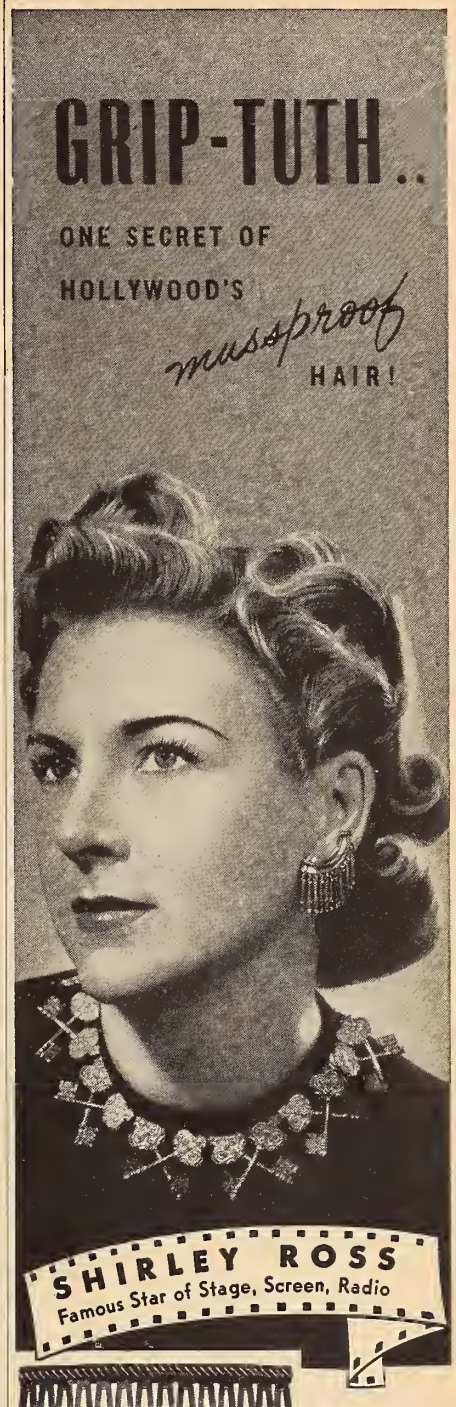
MOVIE SCOREBOARD

200 pictures rated this month

Turn to our valuable Scoreboard when you're in doubt about what movie to see. The "general rating" is the average rating of our critic and newspaper critics all over the country. 4★ means very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor. C denotes that the picture is recommended for children as well as adults.

Picture	General Rating
A Yank on the Burma Road (M-G-M)	2½★
All That Money Can Buy (RKO)	3½★
All Through the Night (Warners)	3½★
Apache Kid (Republic)	3★
Arizona Bound (Monogram)	C 2½★
Babes on Broadway (M-G-M)	4★
Bad Man of Deadwood (Republic)	2½★
Bahama Passage (Paramount)	3★
Ball of Fire (RKO)	3½★
Belle Starr (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Belaw the Border (Monogram)	2½★
Birth of the Blues (Paramount)	3★
Blonde from Singapore, The (Columbia)	2★
Blondie Goes to College (Columbia)	2½★
Blue, White and Perfect (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Blues In the Night (Warners)	3★
Body Disappears, The (Warners)	2★
Bombay Clipper (Universal)	2½★
Born to Sing (M-G-M)	3★
Borrowed Hero (Monogram)	2★
Burma Convoy (Universal)	2½★
Buy Me That Town (Paramount)	3★
Cadet Girl (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Call Out the Marines (RKO)	2★
Captains of the Clouds (Warners)	3★
Charley's Aunt (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Charlie Chan in Rio (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Confessions of Boston Blackie (Columbia)	2½★
Confirm or Deny (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Corsican Brothers, The (United Artists)	3★
Death Valley Outlaws (Republic)	2½★
Design for Scandal (M-G-M)	3★
Devil Pays Off, The (Republic)	2½★
Dr. Kildare's Victory (M-G-M)	2½★
Doctor's Don't Tell (Republic)	2★
Dumbo (RKO)	C 3½★
Ellery Queen and the Murder Ring (Columbia)	2½★
Father Takes a Wife (RKO)	2½★
Feminine Touch, The (M-G-M)	3★
Flying Cadets (Universal)	2★
Forbidden Trails (Monogram)	2★
Forgotten Village, The	3½★
Frisco Lil (Universal)	2½★
Gay Falcan, The (RKO)	2½★
Gentleman at Heart, A (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Go West Young Lady (Columbia)	2★
Great Guns (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Gunman from Bodie, The (Monogram)	2★
Harmon of Michigan (Columbia)	2★
Hellzapoppin' (Universal)	3½★
Henry Aldrich for President (Paramount)	C 3★
Here Comes Mr. Jordan (Columbia)	4★
H. M. Pullham, Esq. (M-G-M)	3★
Hold Back the Dawn (Paramount)	3½★
Honky Tonk (M-G-M)	3★
Honolulu Lee (Columbia)	2½★
How Green Was My Valley (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Hurricane Smith (Republic)	2★
I Killed That Man (Monogram)	2½★
I Wake Up Screaming (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Internationanal Lady (United Artists)	3★
International Squadron (Warners)	3½★
Jesse James at Bay (Republic)	2½★
Joan of Paris (RKO)	3½★
Johnny Eager (M-G-M)	3½★
Jungle Book, The (United Artists)	4★
Kathleen (M-G-M)	3★
Keep 'Em Flying (Universal)	3★
Kid From Kansas (Universal)	2★
Kings Row (Warners)	2½★
Ladies in Retirement (Columbia)	4★
Lady Be Good (M-G-M)	3★
Lady For a Night (Republic)	2½★
Lady is Willing, The (Columbia)	2½★
Last of the Duanes (20th Century-Fox)	C 2½★
Law of the Tropics (Warners)	2½★
Look Who's Laughing (RKO)	2½★
Louisiana Purchase (Paramount)	3½★
Lydia (United Artists)	3½★
Mad Doctor, The (Universal)	2★
Maltese Falcon, The (Warners)	3½★
Man at Large (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Man From Montana (Universal)	2½★
Man Who Came to Dinner, The (Paramount)	4★
Married Bachelor (M-G-M)	3★
Marry The Boss's Daughter (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Masked Rider, The (Universal)	2½★
Men in Her Life, The (Columbia)	3★
Mercy Island (Republic)	2½★
Missouri Outlaw (Republic)	2½★
Mob Town (Universal)	2★
Moon Over Her Shoulder (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Moonlight in Hawaii (Universal)	2½★
Mr. Bug Goes to Town (Paramount)	C 3★
Mr. and Mrs. North (M-G-M)	3★
Mister V (United Artists)	4★
Navy Blues (Warners)	C 3★
Never Give A Sucker An Even Break (Universal)	3★
New York Town (Paramount)	2★
Night of January 16 (Paramount)	3★
Nine Lives Are Not Enough (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
No Hands on the Clock (Paramount)	2½★
Obliging Young Lady (RKO)	2½★
One Foot in Heaven (Warners)	3½★
Pacific Blackout (Paramount)	2★
Paris Calling (Universal)	3★
Pittsburgh Kid, The (Republic)	2½★
Playmates (RKO)	3★
Public Enemies (Republic)	2★
Quiet Wedding (Universal)	3½★
Red River Valley (Republic)	2½★
Remember The Day (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Riders of the Badlands (Columbia)	2★
Riders of the Purple Sage (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Riders of the Timberline (Paramount)	2★
Rise and Shine (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Roxie Hart (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Royal Mounted Patrol, The (Columbia)	2½★
Saddle Mountain Roundup (Monogram)	2★
Sailors on Leave (Republic)	2★
Secrets of the Lone Wolf (Columbia)	2½★
Sergeant York (Warners)	4★
Shadow of the Thin Man (M-G-M)	2½★
Shanghai Gesture, The (United Artists)	3½★
Sing Another Chorus (Universal)	2★
Sing for Your Supper (Columbia)	2★
Skylark (Paramount)	3★
Smiling Ghost, The (Warners)	2½★
Smilin' Through (M-G-M)	3★
Son of Fury (20th Century-Fox)	3★
South of Tahiti (Universal)	2★
Stork Pays Off, The (Columbia)	2½★
Sullivan's Travels (Paramount)	4★
Sundown (United Artists)	2½★
Sun Valley Serenade (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
Suspicion (20th Century-Fox)	4★
Swamp Water (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Tanks a Million (United Artists)	2★
Tarzan's Secret Treasure (M-G-M)	2½★
Texas (Columbia)	3½★
They Died With Their Boots On (Warners)	3½★
Three Cockeyed Sailors (United Artists)	2★
Three Girls About Town (Columbia)	2½★
Tom, Dick and Harry (RKO)	4★
Tonto Basin Outlaws (Monogram)	2★
Too Many Blondes (Universal)	2★
Treat 'Em Rough (Universal)	2½★
Two-Faced Woman (M-G-M)	3½★
Unholy Partners (M-G-M)	2½★
Weekend in Havana (20th Century-Fox)	3★
What's Cookin' (Universal)	3★
When Ladies Meet (M-G-M)	3★
Wild Bill Hickok Rides (Warners)	3★
Wolf Man, The (Universal)	2½★
Woman of the Year, The (M-G-M)	4★
Woman's Face, A (M-G-M)	3½★
Yank In the R. A. F. (20th Century-Fox)	3★
You Belong to Me (Columbia)	3★
You'll Never Get Rich (Columbia)	4★
You're in The Army Now (Warners)	2★

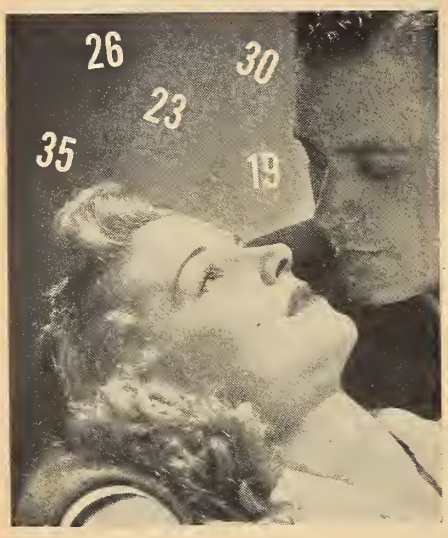


Here's one Hollywood trick you may not know. Many a star depends on Grip-Tuth to keep her hair camera-perfect! Pins are unsightly. Combs fall out. But Grip-Tuth slides discreetly out of sight—locking each curl exactly as you want it—taming those straggling ends! Want a bow or flowers in your hair? Grip-Tuth holds them securely. And a Grip-Tuth sewn inside in your hat anchors it against the stiffest wind! Only 25c for card of two (or one extra-length, as shown). Get some today. NOTE: if notion counter or beauty shop can't supply you, send 25c for card. State hair color.

GRIP-TUTH: Diadem, Inc., Leominster, Mass., Dept. 46

Nu-Hesive Surgical Dressings, by our affiliated company, are one of our contributions to National Defense

He'd Never Guess Her Age!



New kind of face powder makes her look years younger!

ONCE this lovely girl looked quite a bit older. For she was the innocent victim of an unflattering shade of face powder! It was a cruel shade—treacherous and sly. Like a harsh light, it showed up every tiny line in her face—accented every little skin fault—even seemed to exaggerate the size of the pores.

But look at her now! He'd never guess her age! Is she 19—30—35? She has found her lucky shade of face powder—the shade that flatters her skin, makes her look young and enchanting.

How old does your face powder say you are?

Are you sure the shade of powder you use doesn't lie about your age—doesn't say you're getting a bit older?

Why take that chance? Send for the 9 new shades of Lady Esther Face Powder today! Try them one after another and let your mirror tell you which is the perfect shade for you!

Lady Esther Powder is made a new way—blown by TWIN HURRICANES until it's softer, smoother by far than ordinary powder. That's why its shades and texture are so flattering.

Send for all 9 shades

Find your most flattering shade of Lady Esther Powder. Mail the coupon for the 9 new shades and try them all. You'll know your lucky shade—it makes your skin look younger and lovelier!

Lady Esther

FACE POWDER

LADY ESTHER, (78)
7110 W. 65th St., Chicago, Ill.

Send me your 9 new shades of face powder, also a generous tube of 4-Purpose Face Cream. I enclose 10¢ to cover cost of packing and mailing.

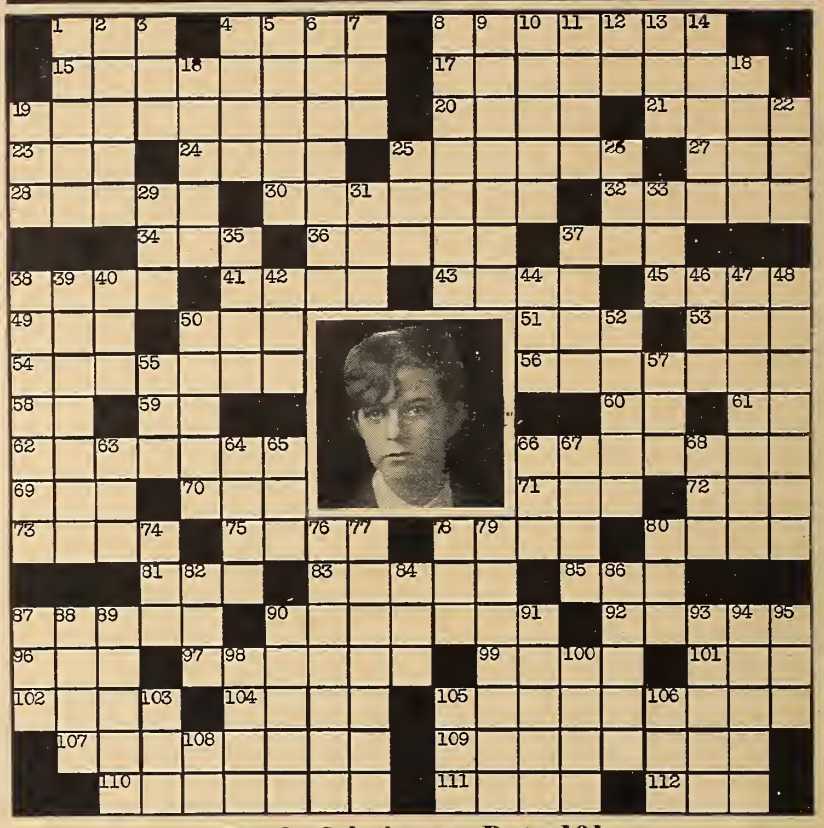
NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Toronto, Ont.)

OUR PUZZLE PAGE



Puzzle Solution on Page 101

ACROSS

1. That lady
4. Actress in "Sullivan's Travels"
8. Striking out
15. The actress pictured
17. Resonant
19. Irish actress in "'Til We Meet Again"
20. A film production unit
21. Femme in "The Remarkable Andrew"
23. Swiss river
24. "The Adventures of Martin ----"
25. Other man in "Skylark"
27. Man's name
28. She's now Mrs. Justin Dart
30. Producer of "slap-stick" comedy
32. Star of "Mrs. Miniver"
34. Peggy's aunt in "Double Date"
36. "The Young Mr. Pitt"
37. Comic in "Shut My Big Mouth"
38. Funny guy in "Song of the Islands"
41. Places
43. A film shot
45. Husband of "Model Wife"
49. Room in a harem
50. French agent in "Joan of Paris"
51. "Dumbo's" outstanding feature
53. "Meet John - - -"
54. Brian's wife in "Heliotrope Harry"
56. Famous director
58. "Sta - - ey and Livingstone"
59. Printer's measure
60. At home
61. A Swedish comedian
62. Sportswriter in "Woman of the Year"
66. What movies excel as
69. Triumphant exclamation
70. Silkworm
71. "The Bride C - - - C.O.D."
72. Vehicle
73. Cozy corner
75. Pouches
78. The "Thin Man's" dog
80. A camera's "eye"
81. Grief
83. Central organ of the body
85. Hurry
87. Director-producer of "The Magnificent Ambersons"
90. New leading man in "The Man Who Came to Dinner"
92. Weaving machines
96. Comedian in "Ride 'Em Cowboy"
97. Fields of action
99. Air vehicle
101. Brazilian coin
102. Wife of Charles Laughton
104. Level
105. Pure
107. Soonest
109. Last name of 15 Across
110. Knitting implements
111. Luli D - - - -
112. "Henry Aldrich For Pres - - - nt"

DOWN

1. Bedaub
2. Bing Crosby's real name
3. Period of time
4. Cartoon: "A - - - - in's Lamp"
5. Constellation
6. The "slow hurn" comedian
7. "Summer" to Michele Morgan
8. Forfeit
9. March's co-star in "Bedtime Story"
10. Inactive
11. Johnny - - - - s
12. Irene Rich: init.
13. Bow
14. Her first name's Sigrid
16. In "So Ends Our Night"
18. Withered
19. Prate
22. Our star's husband: Hay - - - d
25. Newcomer in "Dr. Kildare's Victory"
26. Self
29. Diving hird
31. Numbers: ahbr.
33. Screen and radio funster
35. He's in "Yokel Boy"
37. Starred in "The Devil and Miss Jones"
38. Rival in "Appointment for Love"
39. "Roxie Hart's" lawyer
40. Headgear
42. Affirmative votes
44. New Zealand parrot
46. Artificial language
47. Coburn's daughter in "King's Row"
48. Belonging to star of "Sweetheart of the Campus"
50. Chop in small pieces
52. Elevate
55. Male lead in "Juke Box Jenny"
57. Anne Gwynne's title
63. Dawn goddess
64. Gaelic
65. Inlet
66. Priscilla's nickname
67. Oriental nurse
68. Frost
74. Our star has - - - children
76. What "Charlie Chan" is
77. Intersecting line: Math.
78. L - - - ine Day
79. Low horizontal sheet of cloud
80. Pancho in "Road Agent"
82. Mother Gin Sling in "Shanghai Gesture"
84. Admiring exclamations
86. Gal in "International Lady"
87. Johnson's partner in "Hellzapoppin'"
88. Film part
89. Actress in "Among the Living"
90. Songwriter
91. Apportioned
93. Mountain nymph
94. Being between two extremes
95. What Joan is to Olivia
98. Silent era movie hero
100. Irritate: Colloq.
103. Exist
105. Compass point
106. 56: Rom. num.
108. French article

From the stage hit that had A LAUGH FOR EVERY LIGHT ON B'WAY
HENRY FONDA is the worm that turns from
OLIVIA DeHAVILLAND
to JOAN LESLIE (Sgt. York's sweetie) in the hit that's got all the priorities on laughin' and lovin'!
"The MALE ANIMAL"
It's women that make him wild!
WARNER BROS.' hilarity-packed hit ... about the college professor who was in a class by himself with the gals!
with JACK CARSON·EUGENE PALLETTE·HEBERT ANDERSON
Directed by ELLIOTT NUGENT
Screen Play by Julius J. & Philip G. Epstein and Stephen Morehouse Avery
From the Play by JAMES THURBER and ELLIOTT NUGENT • Produced by Herman Shumlin

MOVIE REVIEWS

(Continued from page 7)

"Reap The Wild Wind" is highly colored and highly dramatic. It leaps from the genteel salons of Charleston to the dingy dens of Key West. It sweeps through hurricanes and disasters with unfailing vigor. The tides of battle, adventure and romance roar across the scene; but never so brilliantly that they obscure Loxi Claiborne. It's Loxi's heart that gives life to the story.

It's a full and tense canvas done in broad sweeps. Movement is the essence of adventure, and the picture moves from climax to climax; De Mille isn't afraid of big scenes. If talk slows the action a bit, it's sure to be followed by a knock-down and drag-out fight; when human menace fails, he rings in an octopus.

It's brawn and action that make De Mille pictures; for an hour or so in a movie, the world becomes heroic and romantic. There's plenty of meticulous De Mille detail, too, in "Reap The Wild Wind." You're right there when matches are introduced to an incredulous Charleston society; you're on board one of the first steam boats to replace the canvas-bannered clippers. There's a smattering of history and a big dose of atmosphere that goes with every De Mille production. All of this, besides plenty of action, plenty of romance and plenty of wind. —Par.

P. S.

This one is No. 66 on the list of Cecil B. De Mille Productions . . . C. B. says it's the biggest and toughest undertaking he's attempted in 30 years of making motion pictures . . . The Mayors of Los Angeles, Charleston, Key West and Washington, N. C. (De Mille's home town), declared June second to be "De Mille Day"—and "Reap" went into production after eight months of study by the research department . . . Four separate units were at work most of the time . . . Location trips used up eight weeks of the shooting schedule . . . Everything, to the last detail, was worked out on paper first. "I make my pictures across a desk," says De Mille. "When I walk out on a set, all I have to do is put my blueprints on celluloid" . . . One of the most gripping (literally) scenes in the film is the attack on Ray Milland and John Wayne by a giant squid on the floor of the ocean. The squid used in the picture has a ten-foot body, a sixty-foot spread and eight-inch eyes. Part of the sequence was filmed in the enormous 1,000,000-gallon tank especially constructed for the picture at the Pacific Marine Museum in Santa Monica . . . De Mille, himself, donned a diving outfit and strode along the bottom of the tank, issuing orders to his actors by means of a telephone hook-up connecting their helmets with his . . . Ray Milland had to learn ventriloquism so he could pull a Bergen-McCarthy with Romulus, his dog. The little mutt has absolutely no personality; was chosen, in fact, because he seemed to be suffering from an inferiority complex . . . Neither Ray nor John Wayne used doubles for the fight scenes . . . Susan Hayward first caught De Mille's eye because she looks exactly like his 6-year-old granddaughter Cecelia—on a larger scale . . . Now that he's worked with her, he's predicting stardom for her within three years.

Forgive us for our error in the April issue's movie reviews. In "Song of the Islands," leading man is gorgeous Vic Mature, not John Payne, as stated.

THE MALE ANIMAL

A note for your nature book: a male animal is a creature found in various parts of the world. His local habitat is a deep, comfortable chair surrounded by tobacco smoke known as "home" or a small enclosed space surrounded by a desk known as an "office." He can be easily recognized since his customary costume consists of two cylinders of cloth known as "pants," as distinguished from the female who wears a single cylinder known as a "skirt." However, through some unexplained peculiarity of the language, the female is commonly referred to as "wearing the pants." The male is reasonable, patient, forgiving and kind; this also serves to distinguish him from the female.

All this is an introduction to a civilized, little comedy that played the New York stages a season or so back. It's been made into a picture, and much of the flavor of the original is intact. The movie is a close translation of the Elliot Nugent-James Thurber play.

It concerns Professor Tommy Turner of Midwestern U., settled into domestic bliss with his wife Ellen, satisfied with

DANDRUFF HAD ME WILD!

My wedding day was only a week away! And my hair hung dull—lifeless—and worst of all, thickly sprinkled with ugly dandruff! I was frantic! Then on Sunday evening, I heard the Fitch Bandwagon* over the radio. The announcer said, "Fitch Shampoo is sold under a money-back guarantee to remove dandruff with the first application. This guarantee is backed by one of the world's largest insurance firms." I bought a bottle of Fitch Shampoo that night. I found that even in hard water it is effective. It really goes into the tiny openings of the scalp. And it certainly rinses out easily! I believe it actually reconditions the hair! "The season's loveliest bride!" they said of me. And today, my husband says Fitch Shampoo keeps my hair as lovely now as it was the day we were married!

LISTEN TO THE FITCH BANDWAGON presenting a different "big name" band each Sunday at 7:30 p. m. Eastern War Time, over 117 NBC Red Network Stations.

GOODBYE DANDRUFF

1. This photograph shows germs and dandruff scattered, but not removed, by ordinary soap shampoo.

Soap Shampoo

2. All germs, dandruff and other foreign matter completely destroyed and removed by Fitch Shampoo.

Fitch Shampoo

3. Microphoto shows hair shampooed with ordinary soap and rinsed twice. Note dandruff and curd deposit left by soap to mar natural luster of hair.

Soap Shampoo

4. Microphoto after Fitch Shampoo and hair rinsed twice. Note Fitch Shampoo removes all dandruff and undissolved deposit, and brings out the natural luster of the hair.

Fitch Shampoo

Unlike ordinary cake soaps, Fitch Shampoo does not contain those solids that leave a dull film on the hair. Fitch's rinses out completely without the aid of lemon or vinegar.

Fitch's TRADE MARK

DANDRUFF REMOVER SHAMPOO

Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping

Copr. 1942 F. W. Fitch Co.

The F. W. Fitch Company • Des Moines, Iowa • Bayonne, N. J. • Los Angeles, Calif.

MOVIE REVIEWS (Continued)

his job and asking nothing of life except that it drop an occasional interesting book in his lap. Well, life isn't always as obliging as all that. In a rapid shake or two of the dice, Professor Tommy Turner stands in danger of losing his wife, his job, his peace of mind and a good part of his library.

You wouldn't think an ex-football player could do all that, would you? But Joe Ferguson wasn't a run-of-the-mill athlete. All-Time, All-American, good as they come. That was Whirling Joe, all right.

He whirled into the Turner household like a minor hurricane. Just the breeze of his passing raked up the dead embers of the school-day romance he had with Ellen. And Ellen? Well, how would you like to be belle of the ball again, Queen of the Homecoming Rally? And all just a lark. Absolutely innocent.

It was innocent, that is, to everybody but Tommy. Reasonable, profound, analytical Professor Turner comes to the bright conclusion that his wife is in love with Whirling Joe; and if that is her happiness, he will not stand in her way.

But then, enter the "male animal," which in this case is the urge to fight for your mate. Does the tigress give up her cubs? Does the sea lion forsake his mate? And is Tommy Turner any different?

To be perfectly frank, Tommy is different. For one thing, compared to Joe Ferguson, he's a flea bothering an elephant, with about as much chance of success. For another, Tommy has a little instrument tucked away in the top of his skull known as a "brain," whereas Joe has a skull all right, but not being one to do things half way, he's all skull. Brains or brawn; which wins the girl?

The issue isn't quite as simple as all that. There are a few complications in the plot: a problem of free speech, a subplot of junior love rampant on the campus. But it all comes out in the end. And quite neatly.

Henry Fonda and Olivia de Havilland play the merry, mad Turners. Jack Carson bulls his way through as the fullback. Eugene Pallette, Joan Leslie and Hattie McDaniel wander happily about.

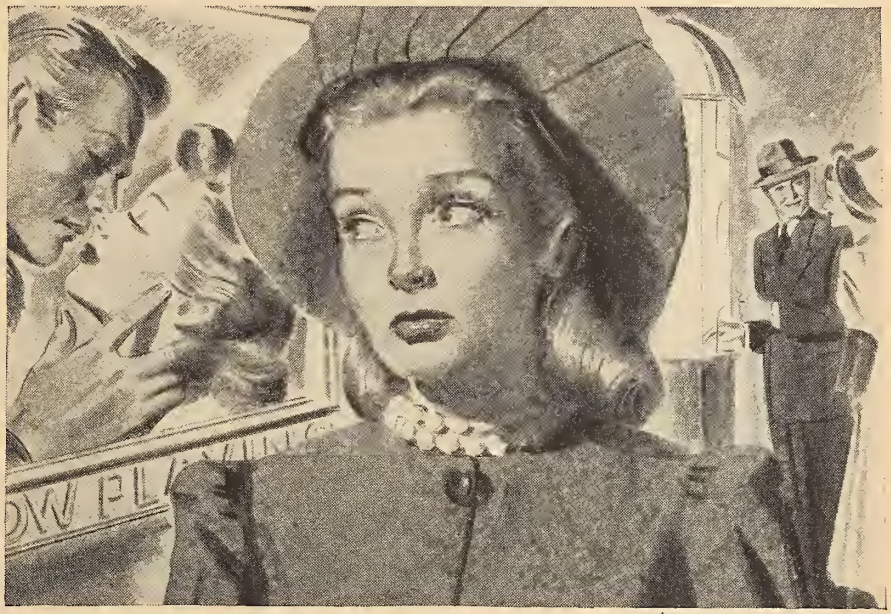
And, oh yes! Midwestern noses out Michigan 15-14 to win the big game. Everybody happy?—W. B.

P. S.

"Male Animal" Henry Fonda is always referred to by Nunnally Johnson as "one of our 'Aw Shucks!' boys" . . . Fonda didn't once set foot in the fancy dressing room assigned to him. He left his hat and coat in Jack Carson's cubicle and spent all his time between scenes sitting

(Continued on page 14)

A "Close-up" was only a Movie Term to Paula, until...



Act 1: Paula is pretty! She sings like an angel and can dance like a breeze. But there are few compliments and dates in Paula's young life, few eligible bachelors—BECAUSE—well, Paula is guilty of one little fault, she's careless about underarm odor!

Act 2: (Enter pretty friend) Wake up to the facts of charm, my Pretty! Of course you bathe every day—before every date. But a bath only takes care of the past...to give your charm a future, use Mum.

Act 3: (Paula's soliloquy) Now I can play a love scene! Mum is so marvelous—so quick, so easy to use, so sure! Only 30 seconds to use Mum, and daintiness is safe for long hours. Safe for skin, safe for dresses, too!

Mum takes only 30 seconds, effective for hours!

Mum prevents underarm odor, without stopping perspiration!

Mum is harmless to sensitive skin and to delicate fabrics. Get Mum at your druggist today!

For Sanitary Napkins—Gentle, safe Mum is the favorite deodorant for this important purpose. Try it this way, too.

MUM

Takes the Odor Out of Perspiration

Product of Bristol-Myers

on the steps of the sound stage or working out a little close harmony with a trio of electricians . . . Warner Bros. used Pomona College as the setting for all campus scenes. The "collegians" (250 registered film extras) made the 80-mile round trip by bus every day for three days . . . Olivia de Havilland got all tuckered out doing crying scenes. Had to leave her car at the studio and be driven home . . . The spectacular rally bonfire was constructed of dry goods boxes and telegraph poles arranged around a framework of concealed gas pipes and jets so the flames could be controlled between 'takes.' Studio firemen were on hand, ready to douse the flames with water from a 3000-gallon tank . . . Director Elliot Nugent is co-author with James Thurber of the original play. He played Fonda's role in the stage version . . . Joan Leslie, during production, received 23 invitations to be guest of honor at major university football games this fall. Joan, actually a high school junior, plays a college co-ed . . . Herbert Anderson signed up with the army on completion of the picture . . . Tom Walker, University of Southern California drum major champ, was hired to coach players in the intricacies of baton-tossing. Had to instruct them to the tune of the Notre Dame Victory March, the only record of that type the studio had handy . . . Fonda did the longest scene he's ever made twice in a row without a bobble—a drunk routine running seven minutes, ten seconds . . . Olivia carried on a mild campaign, between scenes, to secure naughtier roles. Says she's getting tired of being a faithful friend and understanding sister.

THIS ABOVE ALL

We forget about people in a war. We talk glibly of battles and strategy and armies of fifty thousand men here and casualties of a million or so there. We look at maps and lines, at charts and production schedules: at meaningless numbers and lifeless machines. It's a necessary adjustment, for the tragedy of human life in a war, if we could imagine it, would completely overwhelm us.

Yet it is just as necessary that we feel the pulse of life in all the cold machinery around us. It's no platitude to say that there is a man behind every gun, and a woman behind every man. And it is the story of these men and women, not the generals and marshals, that "This Above All" tries to tell.

It's a love story whose lovers reach for happiness in a time of death and stress and war. It focuses on two people caught up in the hell of war-torn England at the height of the blitz. And the truth and tenderness of their story is a counterpoint to the blast of the guns and roars of the airplane squadrons.

Prudence Cathaway (Joan Fontaine) and Clive Briggs (Tyrone Power) meet on a blind date one night when she is on leave from her WAAF unit. Drawn toward each other, their love builds lowly and unspoken. It flames when they meet at a time when Prue has a two-week leave. Grasping for their moment of happiness, they go together to a seaside resort.

But there's a secret between them. Clive is not in uniform and never offers any explanation. At the resort a friend of Clive's, Monty (Thomas Mitchell) finds them, and through him Prue discovers that Clive has deserted from the army. It's a curious desertion, though, since Clive went through Dunkirk and had been awarded honors for his heroism under fire. Clive is not a coward. His desertion springs from something deeper and far more disturbing.

For Clive, disgusted by the inefficiency of Dunkirk, remembering his own hard youth, afraid that the war is being fought only to preserve those things he hates and despises, cannot believe that it is worth fighting. It's this struggle

Fitzgerald Twins see amazing proof that

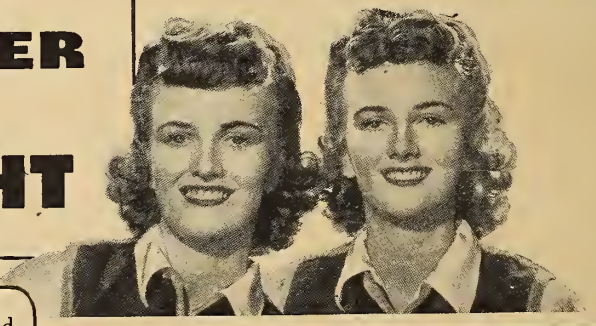
PEPSODENT POWDER

makes teeth

TWICE AS BRIGHT

"CHECK" says Bernice, radio network accountant

"DOUBLE-CHECK" says Bernadette, Chicago business girl



"We used to date teachers and friends to tell us apart. But that was before we made a tooth powdet test. Lucky me! We flipped a coin and I won Pepsodent. Betnadette chose anothet leading brand."

"Who'd have thought it would be so noticeable! Everyone remarked about it. My teeth became twice as bright as Sister's. Even Dad marveled that Pepsodent made such a difference...so Pepsodent's the choice of the whole family now!"

"Seeing was believing! Nothing but Pepsodent for us!"

FITZGERALD TWIN TEST
CONFIRMS THIS FACT:
INDEPENDENT LABORATORY TESTS FOUND NO OTHER DENTIFRICE THAT COULD MATCH THE HIGH LUSTRE PRODUCED BY PEPSODENT.
BY ACTUAL TEST... PEPSODENT PRODUCES A LUSTRE TWICE AS BRIGHT AS THE AVERAGE OF ALL OTHER LEADING BRANDS!

For the safety of your smile . . . use Pepsodent twice a day . . .

see your dentist twice a year.

MOVIE REVIEWS (Continued)

with his conscience, heightened and pointed by his love for Prue, that carries the burden of the picture. It is through an amalgamation of these two things that Clive finally finds his answer.

"This Above All" tries to probe beneath the veneer of easy war slogans. It tries to say in terms of Prue and Clive what it is we are fighting for. It depends for its intensity on a simple love story, told every day on every corner; of two people meeting and loving.

Out of the common bricks of everyday life they try to build a shining and splendid palace. They steal their minutes in tea rooms and in drab streets, in a corner of country, at a seaside resort. It's a story that goes beyond the picture. It's in people who, somehow and everywhere, have managed to keep their dreams bright and their love alive; these things above all.—T.C.F.

P. S.

Tyrone Power had special permission to come in late on Mondays. He's an air raid warden in his home district and has to be on duty every Sunday between midnight and dawn . . . Toughest costuming problem was getting 300 uniforms like those worn by the Women's Auxiliary Air Force of England. Permission for the use of the actual design and material couldn't be secured. Edward Lambert, head of the studio wardrobe department, rounded up 1,000 yards of plain material, dyed it himself and had the required number of uniforms whipped up, copying photographs of the outfits in English publications . . . Two honest-to-goodness WAAFs, Flight Lieutenant Kathleen Hunt and Assistant Section Officer Iris Houston, were imported from Washington to act as technical advisers. Both women are attached to the Royal Air Force Commission working in the capitol . . . The WAAF camp had to be built indoors to avoid destruction by winter rains. The entire 25,000 square feet of the sound stage (plus an extra 1250-square-foot extension) was covered with trees, shrubs, hills, assorted buildings, telegraph poles, dirt roads and a corrugated steel bombproof cellar. The entire set cost $26,000 . . . Without actually playing a role, Tyrone Power's mother appears in the picture. The prop man, instructed to get a picture of a handsome woman to represent Joan Fontaine's mother, used the first one he found—a photo of Mrs. Patia Power . . . Joan Fontaine invited Ida Lupino, from the "Moontide" set, to lunch with her one day in Joan's dressing room. Next day, Tyrone Power asked if he might join them. Day after that, Ty brought Charles Boyer from the "Tales of Manhattan" set. Each day after that, another star joined the group—referred to around the studio as the Fontaine salon . . . The debris littering the London set actually came from England. Britain shipped the rubble as ballast on ships returning to America after delivering lend-lease material. 20th Century-Fox made arrangements to purchase 100 tons of the stuff and has already used it in two other pictures—"Yank in the R.A.F." and "Confirm or Deny" . . . Only casualty during filming was Director Anatole Litvak's stumbling over some metal dolly tracks. Result was a broken foot . . . Litvak rehearsed his cast for two weeks before starting production, so they'd understand both the script and each other when filming began.

(Continued on page 82)

Smile - Sister, Smile!

YOU'VE got the glooms . . . want to crawl off in a corner and have a good cry. But you keep saying to yourself: "Snap out of it . . . I won't be a slacker . . . there's so much to do today!"

Big important things that mean far more than your own fun and frolics. Things that really matter!

Making bandages this morning. A Defense Stamp luncheon. Then you've simply got to finish that navy helmet.

And tonight, the boys come home from camp. You'd be a fine citizen spoiling their furlough with a faceful of frowns.

What's the answer? . . . simply give up? NO, a thousand times . . . there must be a way to be comfortable and at ease on trying days of the month!

There is a way! . . .

Too bad if you're one of those who didn't discover Kotex sanitary napkins long ago! Because if it's comfort you're after . . . you'll find Kotex is more comfortable!

For Kotex is made in soft folds so it's naturally less bulky . . . more comfortable . . . made to stay soft while wearing. A lot different from pads that only "feel" soft at first touch.

Kotex does things for your confidence, too . . . builds you up and doesn't let you down! That's because Kotex has flat, pressed ends that keep your secret safe. And a moisture-resistant "safety shield" for extra protection.

So try Kotex . . . it won't take you long to discover why it's more popular than all other brands of pads put together. After all, that's proof that Kotex stays soft . . . the best proof!

Be confident...comfortable... carefree—*with Kotex!

INTIMATE HINTS FOR GIRLS! New free booklet, "As One Girl To Another". Tells what to do and not to do on "difficult days". Mail name and address to P.O. Box 3434, Dept. MM-5, Chicago.

(*T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

Co-ed

Are too many of your dates one-night stands? Here's a bit of siren stuff that'll bring 'em back for more!

BY JEAN KINKEAD

Ever stop to think how many kinds of dates there are? There's the terrifying first date, the good old "double," the exciting "blind" . . . and each one's kind of a problem child in its own little way—till you know the ropes. By grilling a few "queens," we've accumulated enough date data to make everyone of 'em fizzle-proof, beginning right with

That very first date! When Joe phones, don't let him know that the most momentous thing in your whole life is happening. Talk slowly and calmly. Remember he's ten times as nervous as you. Get all the details straight—time, destination, etc.—so that you're not on tenterhooks the night of the date wondering if he said 8 or 8:30, and whether you're going to look too Madame Queen-y in your red silk.

Then from various sources glean as much information as you can about him (where he lives, who his friends are) for your family's benefit. When in doubt your mother invariably assumes that Joe is some absolute rat with the world's worst intentions, so any evidence you can dig up to the contrary will make her much happier.

Practice a smooth introduction so you're not all teeth on the night. "Joe, I'd like you to know my mother and dad. This is Joe Jones of baseball fame, Pop." Always present your chums to your parents, never vice versa, and if possible, give them a conversational straw to clutch at while you're getting your coat.

Now you've closed the door on your nice, safe living room and you're off. Rule No. 1—No matter what state of nerves you're in, display a serene front and make him feel at ease. A few minutes of casual conversation will do the trick, but casual—no frantic jabbering. Discuss where you're going: If it's a movie, quote a kind word from some review of it; if it's a party, ask who'll be at it and act genuinely pleased when you hear. A big smile and "Oh, this is going to be fun" will start things off elegantly.

After the movie, party or where-were-you you lay the groundwork for a second date. Get him talking about himself by such ruses as, "Do you know you're a very comfortable person to be with?" He'll say, "How d'ya mean?" You say, "Oh, you seem to have everything under control. Bet you never worried in your whole life." That's his cue for "Oh, haven't I!" or "No, come to think of it—" Either way, he's off, and all you do is look starry-eyed over your large coke. Get him to take you home while conversation is going strong. Make him feel there's still so much to say that the next date can't come soon enough.

At your front door, tell him how really lovely the evening was and leave him with a warm handclasp. Never, never kiss him goodnight after your first date.

Double date. This is not the time for you and Mary to catch up on your small talk. Nothing drives men crazier. However, why not have a kind of gentlewoman's agreement to play each other up for all you're worth. If Mary has a terribly funny anecdote up her sleeve, say "Oh, Mary, you've got to tell them about so-and-so." This kind of team work is invaluable once you get on to it.

If you and your date are old (Continued on page 70)

For Girls Who Want More Glamorous Hair
SILKIER, SMOOTHER, EASIER TO ARRANGE !

Allure—for your more frivolous moments! Hair swept smoothly up off neck and face. Tuck artificial fruit or fresh flowers behind ears. Hair shampooed with new, improved Special Drene.

Amazing difference due to hair conditioner now in new, improved Special Drene Shampoo! Leaves hair lovelier, easier to manage!

You'll be thrilled by the difference in your hair the very first time you use new, improved Special Drene Shampoo! For that wonderful hair conditioner now in Special Drene gives simply amazing results right away...leaves hair so much silkier, smoother, far easier to arrange right after shampooing! Just try improved Special Drene once, and you'll see!

Unsurpassed for Removing Dandruff! Are you bothered about removal of ugly, scaly dandruff? You won't be when you shampoo with Special Drene! For Drene removes ugly dandruff with the first application. And besides, Drene does something no soap shampoo can do—not even those claiming to be special "dandruff removers"! Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre and color brilliance.

So, for extra beauty benefits—plus quick and thorough removal of loose dandruff—try improved Special Drene right away. Or ask for a Special Drene shampoo at your beauty shop! You'll see an amazing difference!

REPLACEMENT OR A REFUND OF MONEY ★ Guaranteed by Good Housekeeping IF DEFECTIVE OR NOT AS ADVERTISED THEREIN

Procter & Gamble
Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Avoid That Dulling Film Left By Soaps And Soap Shampoos!

Don't rob your hair of glamour by using soaps or liquid soap shampoos—which always leave a dulling film that dims the natural lustre and color brilliance! Use Drene—the beauty shampoo which never leaves a clouding film. Instead, Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre! Remember, too, that Special Drene now has hair conditioner in it, so it leaves hair far silkier, smoother than ever before!

Special DRENE Shampoo with HAIR CONDITIONER added

★ ★ ★ Meet
LIEUTENANT MARY CARTER
of the U. S. Marines!

She's off with the fighting leathernecks on their most thrilling adventures in 166 years of glorious history!

MAUREEN O'HARA, the breathtaking heroine of "How Green Was My Valley"!

TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI

A RED, WHITE AND BLUE ADVENTUROUSING HIT IN TECHNICOLOR!

starring JOHN PAYNE • MAUREEN O'HARA • RANDOLPH SCOTT

with NANCY KELLY • WILLIAM TRACY • MAXIE ROSENBLOOM
Henry Morgan • Edmund MacDonald • Russell Hicks • Minor Watson

Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK

Directed by Bruce Humberstone • Associate Producer Milton Sperling Screen Play by Lamar Trotti • Original Story by Steve Fisher

A 20th CENTURY-FOX PICTURE

20th CENTURY FOX

Romance is all the sweeter ... when life is dangerous!

Watch for it at your favorite theatre
COMING SOON

Coming! Eric Knight's sensational best-seller!
TYRONE POWER • JOAN FONTAINE
in "THIS ABOVE ALL"
Produced by DARRYL F. ZANUCK

Ray Jones

Marlene Dietrich

"She is so beautiful I wish all the women in the world looked like her!" said Burgess Meredith of spellbinder Marlene Dietrich. Known as the streamlinedest siren who ever swept $1,000,000 in legal suits out of a courtroom, U. S. Citizen Dietrich, formerly Mary von Losch, has upset the equilibrium of a long list of strong men—Fairbanks, Jr., Von Sternberg, Eric Remarque, Gabin—but won't divorce Rudi Sieber until their daughter Maria, now 16, is married. Before Universal's "The Spoilers" and after a two-year stay-away, Dietrich came East with a broken ankle, affectionately embraced Rudi three times for photographers. Marlene says she's not "hard," contrary to critics' words—simply must always be in love with someone. Always does her own make-up because she knows her own face best, lives on air to keep her 5' 5" down to 118. Love-pirate? Not our Blue Angel!

Mickey Rooney

"I'll marry when I'm 28 or 29," he announced a year or so back, in his pre-Ava Gardner days. Now, at 21, Mickey Rooney thinks he's Hollywood's luckiest married guy. His 19-year-old bride has hitched her wagon to a star and aims to match Mick's No. 1 box office rating, careering up from small $75-a-week extra roles. She's plenty persevering, too—waited until midnite for Mickey to show up on their very first date, a hamburger and chocolate ride. Both admit there's only one real jitter 'n' jiver in the family—and it's not Ava! Looks like M-G-M keeps pace with the private life of Mr. and Mrs. Rooney, Mickey's latest bell-ringer being "The Courtship of Andy Hardy." Considers himself too short to be a leading man (Ava tops him by an inch), but Mick's plenty big enough for Bob Montgomery to dub him "the greatest scene stealer in the business."

C-U-T-E—spells Ann Rutherford, the heap biggest dish of feminine dessert ever piled into 105 pounds, 5 feet 3½ inches. Talk about wild life, and Ann will lead you straight to her zoo-zoo room that's chock full of nothing but her 12 canaries, 9 parakeets and 4 turtles. Gab on about clothes, and she won't withhold the vital statistics on her wardrobe: 24 hats, 44 pairs of shoes (not counting skating and riding shoes), 14 bathing suits, 23 blouses and then the things she really wears that would fill the better part of a two-room suite. But Ann really has "the stuff," too. She paints, knits and cooks like a trouper; tennises adeptly, and one date with her convinces anybody ('specially jive pianist Skitch Henderson) why "The Courtship of Andy Hardy" got under way when Andy met up with her. She's a Toronto Canadian, but Ann's typical U. S. A. mm-mm girl in anybody's language!

Ann Rutherford

Clarence Bull

In the midst of war-torn England, Laurence Olivier is happy . . . happy because he's serving the land he loves and because he's with the woman he loves, Vivien Leigh. They're blissfully settled with favorite pussy Tissie in a tiny cottage by the sea . . . Viv doing a cracking good job at housekeeping . . . arising at 6 to breakfast Larry before he motor-bikes to his Royal Fleet Air Arm base . . . giving up the stage to raise a namesake. On special occasions (like his 35th birthday coming up May 22nd) they celebrate by puffing up to London in their 14-year-old car and doing all those gay things they used to take for granted. It took the combined efforts of the British and Canadian governments to drag Larry out of active service long enough to play in Columbia's recent, Canadian-made "The Invaders" . . . which he swears will be his last till the war's fought and won!

Laurence Olivier

Clarence Bull

Donna Reed

It was her pretty puss that upset the applecart! Born on an obscure Iowa farm, Donna spent an uneventful childhood feeding the chicks, minding brattish brothers and sisters . . . and yearning with all her heart and soul to be a private secretary in a tall city skyscraper! Conscientiously enrolling for a stenographic course in high school and college, her 5' 3" chassis and that gorgeous phiz of hers definitely interfered with her work, won her title of "Campus Queen." Studio offers came and went, but it wasn't till after graduation that Donna turned tail on all things secretarial, took a screen test and emerged with a contract a mile long and a chunky part in M-G-M's "Mokey." Satisfies her yearning for the country with home-made bread and churned butter . . . bowls in the 170's, avidly skirts bridge games and typewriters!

Schuyler Crail

Ronald Reagan

He can't help it if everybody likes him. It's just his nature! Ronnie Reagan has so many friends in Hollywood he has to keep three appointment books going at once to be sure everything's straight. Trusts people instinctively, lives within his bank account allotments, insists on planning his own life and long shots though he knows his doting spouse Janie Wyman has had more experience in the ups and downs of the business. He thought they should wait before they had their first baby, she didn't—result, their pride and joy Maureen Reagan, age under one year, familiarly known as Monkeypuss, Nutsy and the IT girl. Ronnie's cute 'n' crazy ways made him the darling of Warners' current "Juke Girl," convinced Janie that golf and horses were more exciting than beer halls and night clubs. Now it's strictly "bring on the outdoors, gang, us Reagans are ready!"

Had it not been for the lure of Florida's sun, she'd probably be wielding a mean scalpel today and listening for "Calling Doctor Keane!" Yup, that's featherweight Veronica Lake, one-time Constance Keane of McGill University, a serious pre-medical student, but not so serious that when Mom and Pop left for Miami, she could resist the temptation to go along. In 1938 she couldn't resist another temptation—Hollywood; and in 1940 she succumbed to the real thing—art director John Detlie. Now they have a baby, but Ronnie's still "Mousie" to John, and he's "Mutt." Paramount musses her goldilocks up fine in "This Gun For Hire." Ronnie 'fesses her method's been to make 'em marvel at her over-one-eye sheep dog hair-do, keep 'em intrigued with her freckled nose, slay 'em with her believe-it-or-not 18½-inch waist. P. S. It works!

Veronica Lake

Gorgeous Hunk

Jack Albin

VIC MATURE SALUTES VIC MATURE—ADMITS HE'S A GREAT GUY!

He ended up in the hospital after refusing to let a double do tough tor-ond-feother scenes.

Bright Boy Mature bought o bike to ride oround Selznick's office. The "GENIUS badge was immediotely oworded.

BY KIRTLEY BASKETTE

Vic's soying whether blonde dozzler Lono Turner crashed the poges of "The Incorrigible One"—self-outhorized tale of his own life ond loves for which the curly hoired incorrigible demonds $25,000 of T.C.F.

IN New York last year, somebody asked Moss Hart, the Broadway producer, what kind of a guy this exotic Adonis, Victor Mature, whom he'd signed for Gertrude Lawrence's leading man in "Lady In the Dark," really was.

Mr. Hart is pretty handy with words as a rule, but that stumped him.

"I can't tell you," he replied. "All I can think of is a play I once wrote. Victor Mature is something that happens Once in a Lifetime!"

The "great big hunk of beautiful man" has been called plenty of things around Hollywood, Manhattan and elsewhere—most of them flavored with razzberry. He's been termed a "lush Lothario" and an "over-ripe Romeo." He's been dubbed a lens-louse, a publicity hound, a poseur, a phony and the pretty boy winner of Hollywood's unpopularity contest.

Right now the impression also prevails in Hollywood that Vic Mature is as nutty as a chocolate bar. On his home studio lot, Twentieth Century-Fox, people shake their heads and grin as he gallops by in khaki overalls with a great white brand on the back—"GENIUS."

If you want a genuinely candid opinion on all this baffling business direct from Victor Mature,

He married actress Frances Evans in June, 1939. She filed for divorce in same year.

Gorgeous Hunk

CONTINUED

himself, he's strictly a "2-4-6-8 guy."

What is a 2-4-6-8 guy? Well, the closest translation is a character who knows what he wants and sets about getting it no matter how, when or what. Vic can say it another way: "Day and night I'm all out for Mature!"

That's being frank about it. That's being 2-4-6-8—See? Most of Hollywood is on the 3-6-9-12 side. So naturally they think Vic is cuckoo when instead of saying, "I'm not understood," he comes right out and says, "I'm the most hated man in Hollywood. Today four guys waved when I drove in the studio. I must be slipping!"

Crazy? Well—sometimes it looks like it. On the other hand—it gets results. Every time Vic's progress has been blocked, instead of shadow boxing, he has punched right to the heart of the thing, letting the quips fall where they may. And in the process he's built up the most fabulous personal legend since Valentino.

Take his New York break—the thing that really put Mature on the map. Vic engineered that like a fast express. He was backed on to a Hollywood siding at the time. After "One Million B.C." and the leopard skin sarong, the producers thought all he was good for was a (Continued on page 94)

Roach discovered him in "To Quito And Back" and signed him up pronto. Now he's in T.C.F.'s "My Gal Sal."

Martha Kemp, his June 1941 bride, didn't like the love nest he bought, but she won't admit they're rifting.

Gorgeous hunk No. 2—Rita Hayworth, is Vic's gal Sal in their latest. Vic's role was first meant for Don Ameche.

BY IDA ZEITLIN

The divorce that couldn't happen!

Juke boy

It's raining gutbuckets on jivin' James of the fighting Irish Dorseys since he chucked his Caesar for a sax!

The day of panhandling à nickel-for-a-cuppa-java is gone. Now it's a nickel-for-a-slugga-jive. Honest! The rhythm-mad little pickaninnies down south started it, and it's spreading. From Memphis to Mobile. From Harlem to Haiti. And Jimmy Dorsey's the guy to blame. A faster man with a nickel around a juke-box you never saw. Why the kids are even hocking Gene Autry belts to get funds to hear his "Arthur Murray Taught Me Dancing In a Hurry" and "I Said No"—and greater love hath no twelve-year-old.

Confronted with the news that he's the official Juke-Box King, J. D. gives you that incredulous stare that involves the bluest eyes you ever saw except on Ivory Soap ad babies. "How'd this happen to me? Gosh, I never wanted to be a band-leader. Never even wanted to be a musician."

Department of gross understatements. He fought against music lessons like a small panther. At four his brilliantly musical dad, Prof. T. Dorsey, Sr., bought him a cornet. It was as big as he was, and Jimmy hated it. He was six before he could even tolerate the thing and well into his teens before he developed a real affection for music. Papa Dorsey, however, was no softie for tears or tantrums, and he had Jimmy and Tommy (two years younger) doing "Stars and Stripes Forever" before they were even old enough to go to school.

"Listen to that, Tess," Mr. Dorsey would say to Mrs. of an evening while they listened to the two infants practicing in the backyard. "Great kids."

"Yes, great." But her heart would be breaking for the pair of them as she thought how tired their little arms were getting and how red their faces. "They'd probably both be insurance salesmen or something if they'd had to depend on me for (Continued on page 76)

Cut-up vocalist Helen O'Connell and the gang glitter up Para's "The Fleet's In."

Actually dressed to kill! Tammy, with fist traditionally clenched; little sister Mary, a completely unmusical Dorsey, now married, and Jimmy, hair parted in middle because it wouldn't stay any other way.

Made in Heaven

"Obviously," confide the Holdens, "we're meant to stay together forever and a day or two!"

"I don't especially like her," Bill Holden jerks a mammoth thumb in the general direction of his wife, "but she's crazy about me." Mrs. Holden makes a terrifying face at him, and then they throw their arms around each other and scream with laughter. Like a child bride and groom. They've been married eight months, and wouldn't you think they'd be getting a bit old-married-coupleish about now?

"Wouldn't you think?" says Brenda. "But we seem to get worse and worse." And you know darn well she means better and better, and they wouldn't change their beautiful screwball setup for anything on earth.

Incredible thing, when Brenda came to Hollywood three years ago, the one person in the world she didn't want to meet was Bill Holden. She had seen "Golden Boy" on the stage, had gone mad over Luther Adler in the title role and harbored a deep and terrible resentment against Bill for daring to be the screen "Golden Boy."

"Who'd's he think he is?" she'd hear herself muttering insanely whenever his name was mentioned. "Got some nerve." And the first time she actually saw Bill in person (it was on a Warners' set), she skulked behind scenery for hours so she wouldn't have to meet him. Inevitably, of course, they were introduced—"and gosh, I liked the guy. He was kind of Bill had to give up skeet-shooting on account of a bum arm (dislocated while combing his hair for the President's Birthday Ball). He and chum Glenn Ford hunt with a Rhodesian hunting dog sired by Errol Flynn's pup.

by Kaaren Pieck

They're both terrifically jealous, can hardly sit through each other's cinema love scenes. He's currently romancing in "The Fleet's In," and she's a-courtin' in "Washington Broadcast."

shy and cute . . ." That was September 29, 1938, and romance loomed instantly. However, it was a year and a half before Bill so much as breathed his intentions.

Every night she'd think, "Mm, tonight's the night. I couldn't be looking more glamorous." So they'd go to the movies, and he'd bring her home, and it would be just another case of, "Well, goodnight, hon. See you tomorrow."

The very day after she got her final decree, however, he appeared with the ring. And none of this waiting for evening and a romantic setting, either. "At high noon with egg from his lunch on his face, he put this little box in my hand. No proposal whatsoever. Just 'I love you very much,' in a (Continued on page 64)

Oscar was Coop's second oword this yeor. First one wos the Redbook presentation ot which time he gave o huge purse to Red Cross representotive Joon Leslie, (above) his co-stor in "Sergeont York."

Academy Award Winners!

1941 Oscor winners, Lieut. James Stewort ond Ginger Rogers, presented the owords this yeor. Admission wos cut to $11 and white ties bonned.

Armed with o badyguord, chief speoker Wendell Willkie came with Jaon Bennett. Wos given o huge avotion ot start ond end of his speech.

Aword for the best femole performonce went to Joan Fontaine ("Sus picion"). Spouse Brion Aherne flew from the Eost (obove with Myrno Loy).

Despite an early morning air-raid alarm and blackout, there wasn't a single cancellation to the 7:45 P.M. dinner. Above, Betty Grable ond George Roft.

1600 spectotors cheered Gory ot the golo Acodemy Aword dinner ot the Biltmore Bowl.

Prizes for top supporting roles went to Mory Astor for her octing in "The Greot Lie" ond Donold Crisp for "How Green Wos My Volley."

CONTINUED

Academy Award Winners!

Joan had to grab Ginger Rogers for support. Gary forgot to take his Oscar off the platform with him, retrieved it pronto!

Cameramen glued their lenses to both Joan Fontaine and her sister, Olivia de Havilland, snapped this one of Joan the moment the announcement was made that she was the winnah!

Bill and Brenda Holden came with the Reagons, but she preferred a swankier dinner gown.

Lindo Darnell with Carole Landis, the sole violator of the wartime "don't dress" rule.

M. C. Bob Hope gave Jack Benny a special skirt-draped Oscar for Jack's struttin' in "Charley's Aunt," playfully dubbed him "the best cigar-smoking sweater-girl in Hallywaod."

Four hundred pounds of whew! John Payne and Vic Mature escorted each other, alone and wifeless.

The Reagans—Jane Wyman and Ronald—arrived promptly, chose simple attire, beamed all night.

Rival Livvy de Havilland with Buzz Meredith tells sis Joan how swell!

Continued on Page 66

Here's what happens to those fabulous salaries, straight from the budgets of Betty Grable, Anne Gwynne and the Ronnie Reagans!

HOW THEY

Dinners with Roft go sky-high, but moke no dent in the Groble budget! Geo. tips enormously for seots ot o corner toble!

Huge slices of the Groble income go into her platter collection. Troveling expenses hove been cut woy down since the studio ordered her to substitute train treks for flying!

BY CYNTHIA MILLER

SPEND THEIR MONEY

When you've dreamed of being a movie star, have you ever dreamed how you'd spend your money?

MODERN SCREEN picked four Hollywood players—Betty Grable, an unmarried star: Anne Gwynne, an up-and-coming starlet: Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan, a popular young couple—and asked them how they spent their salaries last month.

What impressed us most was their common sense. If these four are typical—and we think they are, for we picked them at random—there'll be no ex-stars ten or twenty years hence, haunting Central Casting for extra work. Read how it's done.

Betty Grable

Betty lives with her mother, sister, brother-in-law and little nephew, Peter, in the house she bought her mother four years ago, and for which she pays at the rate of two hundred a month. Rent on a similar place would be as much or more. This way, says practical Betty, you have a house to show for it instead of just rent receipts.

She puts half her weekly salary aside and forgets about it. That's income tax, it doesn't belong to her. The studio puts one sixth into a trust fund—a kind of insurance against temperament. "If I'm a bad girl, they say I can't have it." Sometimes the entire balance goes into savings, sometimes half and half into checking and savings, depending on how her checkbook looks.

Last month, with an accumulation of savings, she bought ten thousand dollars worth of defense bonds and asked the studio to put her trust fund into bonds. She has no patience with the viewpoint of certain players, who refuse to make too many pictures because it ups them into higher tax brackets. "If you don't take it, somebody else gets it, and the government doesn't. Suppose you only keep two hundred out of five thousand and the government gets forty-eight hundred, what's the matter with that to help beat the Japs?"

Food comes to between a hundred and a hundred twenty-five, including Red Heart for three dogs, and practically excluding Betty, who always dines with George. Gas and oil for her mother's Cadillac and her own runs around twenty-five. She keeps a car for at least three years, this being her second. In Brentwood, where everything's long distance, the phone bills are high—about twenty-five. Utilities—fifteen. She's not sure if they use electricity or gas for cooking, but thinks it must be gas. You just turn the thing, and it goes on without further fussing.

Everything's insured—house, furniture, cars, furs, jewels. The minute she acquires an item, it's automatically covered, so she can't figure out just how much her insurance costs. Ever since the square-cut diamond, her engagement ring from Jackie Coogan, was stolen in Chicago, she's been a bug on insurance. She holds life and endowment policies. "I want it fixed so I can get out of this business before I start falling apart. That is, if they don't kick me out first." (Continued on page 85)

No matter how little they spend, the Reagans always have a super-colassal time! A first-class romanticist, Janie says, "I wish every girl would send lipstick-impressianed X's to her soldier."

Bob used to peddle neckties at the studios just to get a look-in at the bigwigs. He bucked M-G-M's sales resistance, now it's "This Time For Keeps."

Superman's Kid Brother

BY DUGAL O'LIAM

Bob's been the breadwinner for Pop, Mom and Sis Nell since Pop became ill.

BOB STERLING CRASHED THROUGH HOLLYWOOD'S CLOSED DOORS WITHOUT A VISITORS' CARD—HE RANG THE BELL LATER!

There's something reassuring about meeting a young man who's been a Hollywood actor for a year and a half and who still says, in describing a school-day romance, "Gosh, I was stuck on that girl." People may be slain by each other, on each other's beam or out of this world in Hollywood, but in Bob Sterling's home town—Newcastle, Pa.—they're still getting stuck on each other. And Bob isn't streamlining his vocabulary or his personality to fit the Hollywood groove. Not that he's anybody's Mortimer Snerd. You ought to see the rumba he unleashes occasionally on Saturday nights at Mocambo! It's just that he's a wholesome, unaffected, honest guy who can't put on any other kind of an act.

Listening to him talk about his family, his philosophy of life, his taste in women, you know it's strictly the stuff. No artificial coloring added. His dad, he'll tell you proudly, is "Hub" Hart, an ex-catcher for the Chicago Cubs. (Making him the sole movie star's father who isn't for publicity purposes a tycoon of some sort.) He broke his knee going after a fast one and switched very successfully from baseball to golf. "Hub" was managing a Newcastle golf club before Bob transplanted the whole family (Mom, Pop and Sis) to Hollywood.

They're living in a nice little house in Beverly Hills until Bob can swing a place in the San Fernando Valley. "Nothing swimming pooly, you understand," he says quickly. "Just something with an acre or two around it where Pop can have a garden to putter in." "Pop" recently had a stroke and has kind of lost interest in things, but Bob knows he'll be fine again the minute he has a temperamental tomato or two to worry about. "Mom doesn't have to cook any more," he says wistfully, remembering her indescribable shortcakes. (Continued on page 80)

He idolized Garbo, profited by her advice on the set, lived for her applause.

Ann Sothern keeps him guessing, hired his sister Helen as private secretary.

Ward's araund that Jackie Coaper and Bun Granville will merge saan. En raute East with Pat Marisan!

Back fram a six weeks trip ta Mexica, Paulette trekked to New Yark where she charitably treated service men ta ane an Gaddard at each club she visited. Above, with Mary Martin.

Deanna Durbin, Irene Dunne and Bab Hope made things hum an this West Caast braadcast. Bab's just wan a dauble-award far the best pragram and the tapnotch camedy an the airways!

BY SYLVIA KAHN

VIEWS

Dietrich and Mature desert Hollywood for Braadway! Michele Margan inherits French railway depat! Bab Taylar minus a mustache!

The Awful Truth

With Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck looking back on eons and eons of marvelous matrimony, it's kind of funny to recall The Incident that nearly split them up.

Years ago, when Bob and Barbara first put their hearts on the griddle and announced they were meant for each other, their love idyll was suddenly disrupted by the appearance of Another Woman! This young person, a well known character-about-town, telephoned local reporters one black midnight and informed them that she, and not Miss Stanwyck, had taken dinner with Mr. Taylor that very evening!

The reporters, eager as ever for a smack of scandal, smeared the tidbit over their papers, hinting a bust-up, quarrels, jealousies and similar tripe for Barbara and Bob. They knew their informant was publicity-mad, but they were positive she wouldn't dare give them a bum steer.

Faced by a hurt and angry Barbara, Bob flatly denied the story. He insisted he had never dated the girl! However, the young lady, pinned down by the newspaper scribes, declared herself willing to swear on a stack of Bibles that she and Mr. Taylor had dined tête-à-tête!

Finally the controversy reached such major proportions, Bob's studio stepped in and appointed a special representative to get to the bottom of the matter. The movie colony waited with bated breath for the outcome of the investigation: At last the representative emerged bearing the all-important communique.

"Mr. Taylor did dine with the young lady in question," he admitted wearily. "The meeting took place in Schwab's drugstore. Bob was seated at the counter eating a plate of soup and some scrambled eggs. The girl saw him and moved into the next stool. They exchanged a few words. After he finished his coffee, Bob went home. That's all there was to it. The girl has caused us considerable dismay—but she has been telling the truth!"

Micraphabias

Not all ether fright is suffered on the operating table. In Hollywood's Radio City where ether means waves, and not fumes, the mere mention of the word causes panic. For great movie stars who can meet a mob of fans or a horde of wolves without flexing a finger, go limp at the thought of facing a network microphone.

To dispel ether fear, Jack Benny stuffs a stogie between his teeth before every broadcast, only removing it to mouth his lines . . . Irene Rich nearly pulverizes her pencil . . . Red Skelton twists his hat around and around and winds up wearing it upside down. It slays the studio audience, but it also relaxes Red's nerves . . . Bette Davis always arrives for a show with an old Thot Jeanette MocDonold-Gene Roymond romonce continues bigger ond better thon ever. Gene's volentine to her wos o recording of his new love song, which is dedicoted to wife Jeanette!

Except for one broodcast with Ty Power, Moureen O'Sullivon constantly bedside-nursed hubby Johnny Forrow, stricken in the Conodion Novy. He's goined 10 lbs., plons to direct o pic soon!

High school junior Joan Leslie plays a college senior in "The Male Animal." Off-screen she's one of Hollywood's most active Red Cross workers.

GOOD NEWS

CONTINUED

hankie clutched in her fist. She rolls and re-rolls it and, before she's through, has it torn to shreds . . . Ann Rutherford is another shredder. Her script looks like confetti when she finally puts it down . . . Barbara Stanwyck takes her shoes off . . . Joan Crawford's "mike" appearance is a signal for the prop men to start working. Before Joan will face the Demon Ether Wave, a wooden chair must be nailed to the floor. Joan grips it for dear life while she's acting and collapses into it when she's through.

Didja Know

That General Douglas MacArthur's first wife is the present spouse of Movie Villain Lionel Atwill . . . That the Mocambo, star-packed by night, is used by day as a rehearsal hall for Army camp shows . . . That Jean Gabin, man of the people, has thumbs-downed all dress-up roles? Says one sophisticated Frenchman in Hollywood is enough—and Mr. Boyer is filling the bill very nicely . . . That great actress Helen Hayes has two cows on her farm—one, a beautiful, big-eyed Jersey named Bette Davis, and the other, a sad-faced Holstein called Edna May Oliver . . . That George Sanders is scowling at future "Falcon" roles? Claims he rates nothing but "A" productions from now on . . . That Bill Gargan and wife were remarried in Palm Springs on their 14th wedding anniversary . . . That Barbara Stanwyck thinks her husband looks "just awful" since his mustache bowed to a razor?

That even when they're working at the same studio, Ann Sheridan and George Brent scootle home to spend their lunch hour

Besides second-lieutenonting ond movie-moking ("G-2") for the oir corps, Jimmy Stewort defended Chorlie McCorthy ot his "court-mortiol" oiring!

As soon as Freddie Brisson gets his citizenship papers, he'll start army service. Wife Roz cooks one dinner a week on her own hook!

Now thot Woyne Morris hos turned Ensign, U.S.N., it's mostly hoil ond forewell for him ond wife Pot O'Rourke. Meonwhile, she's coreering.

far from the maddening crowd . . . That Lew Ayres is crooning sweet airs to his new leading lady, Ann Ayars?

That the cute little seven-month-older you'll see with Richard Carlson in "My Heart Belongs To Daddy" is Dick's own son. Baby's salary will go to the infantile paralysis fund . . . That Gary Cooper, Hollywood's Number One Silent Man, made a 15 minute speech in L. A.'s Pershing Square, urging the crowd to buy defense bonds . . . That Michele Morgan recently fell heir to a railway station in Arles, a city in Southern France . . . That the only way Alexander Korda could get to England was to buy the bomber that took him there and donate it to the government on his arrival!

Lucky Partner

We don't know why everyone picks on Errol Flynn. Just because his screen heroism is an endless wonder, local townsfolk expect daily demonstrations of bravery in his private life!

What folks don't seem to realize is that being brave at a studio all day is hard work, and a guy can't go around battling Indians and pirates in his off-hours, too. Anyway, what Errol needs in his private life isn't fearlessness—it's strategy. Ever since his separation from Lili Damita, he's had to face an army as determined as any Custer ever met. Only Errol's assailants aren't soldiers—they're women. And you can't go after them with a six-shooter!

One of Errol's slickest methods of warding off the gals who hope to become the second Mrs. Flynn, is the scheme he's developed with Bruce Cabot, his apartment-mate. Whenever an ambitious female pleads for his phone number, Errol gives her one which is listed in Bruce's name. Bruce answers all calls that come into the apartment and, if Errol is avoiding a girl, tells her Flynn isn't with him, and he doesn't know where he can be reached. If she's a little dish Errol happens to approve, Bruce tells her he's visiting a friend at such-and-such a number—which happens to be the phone across the room. Errol waits patiently for her second call and, unless the gal's bright, she never even knows she's on his private line!

Unfortunately, the stunt has bad as well as good points. While it rids Errol of countless undesirables, it has also lost him many a worthy date. Bruce, it seems, extracts payment for rendering his services by telling the choicer morsels that Flynn has gone to Alaska—but don't go away now, Gorgeous, Cabot is available!

Rhumbatism

Mind you, we don't endorse it. But if you know anyone who's troubled with rheumatism, you might pass on this proven cure, authorized by Gary Cooper's mother.

Mrs. Cooper, a spritely young thing, aged 68, was afflicted with rheumatism two years ago. She was immediately provided with the best in medical attention and, being a responsive patient, managed to find some relief in her doctors' treatments. But not enough. She was accustomed to activity and couldn't bear being left a semi-invalid. So when a new physician advised her to take up dancing, she hopped to it—literally!

It must have worked because the other afternoon, Mrs. Cooper, tall and stately and looking every inch the dignified grandmom, arrived at the monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Mothers of America Club with her dancing instructor in tow—and for one solid hour wowed the assemblage with her snappy interpretations of the conga, rumba and samba!

In the audience, Mrs. Anna MacDonald, Jeanette's mom; Mrs. Anna Le Sueur, Joan Crawford's mother; Mrs. Nell Panky, Mickey Rooney's "best girl," and a dozen others, sat pop-eyed with amazement. When it was all over, Mrs. Lela Rogers, whose daughter, Ginger, is no terpsichorean washout herself, was seen staggering to the telephone "to warn Astaire!"

Name-Calling

Anna Lee's new daughter (her second) has been tagged Caroline after the giddy heroine of Anna's first American movie "My Life With Caroline" . . . Martha Scott's baby (her first) has been christened Carleton Scott Alsop, in honor of his pappy, Carleton Alsop . . . And the Oscar Levants wire that their expected heir (they already have a daughter) will be called Quiz Kid if it's a boy—Question Mark, if it's a girl!

A Woman Scorned

Hollywood has its eyes riveted to the romance of that well-known movie duo whose marriage has been predicted for the past two years. According to their own admission, the pair have been living for the day the divorce of one of them would be final, leaving them free to bee-line to the preacher. (Continued on page 102)

In Johnny Weissmuller's latest, "Tarzan's Secret Treasure," he sticks exclusively to a 97-word vocabulary. Above, with the missus at the Kelly shindig.

Nancy and her dad threw a huge party for Mamma Kelly on her recent birthday, invited hordes of Hollywood chums. Mr. K.'s in the business end of the theatrical business while Mrs. is an ex-actress of note!

For this surprise birthday gift to Gearge, Ann had ta have blueprints made by an expert in miniatures. She ond her co-canspiratar made several secret trips ta the harbor ta check details and perfect scoling.

Ann and Gearge must O.K. each ather's staries before production begins. On the Worners' lat, his "In This Our Life" ond her "Juke Girl" possed muster right off.

Ever since the Brent-Sheridan tie-up, Gearge's Russian walfhaund and Ann's French poodle have fought with each other like mad. The poodle was a gift fram Gearge, wha is an authority an dogs af all natianalities.

THE MARRIAGE THAT COULDN'T HAPPEN

BY FREDDA DUDLEY

George Brent and Ann Sheridan gave each other the double-decker freeze from the start . . . so of course marriage was out of the question!

● Once upon a time—as all good love stories should begin—in a little town in Texas, there lived a lanky tomboy with red hair and the confetti of freckles across her nose. Her name was Clara Lou Sheridan. Every time a Gary Cooper picture played at the local movie, she sat through it until she had it nearly committed to memory. Her taste was strictly on the rugged side—she liked her entertainment bang-bang and giddyap, with the villain exceedingly dead at fade-out.

However, when she sought amusement on the suave side, her hero was a young and dashing leading man. Although his parts were limited to drawing room comedy (he himself says, "For seven years I've been the set-dressing against which beautiful women were photographed"), all accounts of his private life indicated a past that would recommend him to a lively girl from Texas. As a youngster, he had been the courier for Michael Collins, the Irish revolutionary who was eventually executed. At this time, a price was placed on George's head, so the kid proved the value of his cerebral equipment by going to the one place considered unlikeliest by the authorities—London. From there he got to the United States. Because of this evidence, Clara Lou decided that the guy must be okay in spite of his fancy clothes, so she tacked up a picture of George Brent beside that of Gary Cooper.

The Brents were importants at the opening of the U.S.O. Recreational Center in Hollywood. Ann donated for scrop iron a medal which the Thailand government oworded her several years back

Lap dissolve to 1936:

Clara Lou has lost her lanky look, her freckles and even her original tag. She is now Ann, and—irritated as it makes her—the name Sheridan is frequently coupled with the noun "oomph." Gary Cooper is still her favorite actor, but she has caught glimpses of the Brent man on her home lot and found him even more attractive off-screen than on.

However, George came on the set one day—where Ann was working in a picture with Jimmy Cagney. Naturally, Mr. C. took George over to present him to Miss Sheridan, who was playing a portable phonograph and practicing athletic dance steps.

"How do you do, Mr. Brent," Ann said, extending a hand capable of the grip of an oarsman.

"How do you do, Miss Sheridan," answered George, returning as good a grip as he got.

Ann noticed his hands with approval. They hadn't the soft palms of the actor; they were calloused, brown and muscular from tennis and boxing. She waited for her original good impression to be strengthened by some amusing conversation.

But that day George was busy talking politics with Jimmy. George, when he discusses taxes, administration and government, is entirely the Irish Republican who became an American Republican. Ann is a southern Democrat. She listened as long as she politely could, then murmured an excuse and dissolved from the spot. "There," she told herself, "is a stuffed shirt and how! A dead-pan guy without a laugh in his whole system."

Mr. Brent thought, "Strictly jitterbug, but her eyes are magnificent. It's too bad that she's so shallow."

THE MARRIAGE THAT COULDN'T HAPPEN

CONTINUED

Lap dissolve to 1942:

Mrs. George Brent (née Ann Sheridan) is seated on the platform at a Warner Brothers' rally along with several officials. Stars and employees file into the meeting. Ann, chaffing the person seated next to her, still manages to keep an eye on the door. Finally George comes in. He lifts his hand in a small salute and Ann waves.

Apparently two inconsequential greetings, but between them flashes a long, uncensored look: a look as old as rain and as new as tomorrow's violets. A look that is fine and clean and lovely as sunlight. A look that only a man and a woman in deepest love can exchange.

P. S. The lady's favorite actor is still Gary Cooper, which proves that a wife can be loyal to her husband without giving up her girlhood hero.

Puzzle: What happened between that refrigerated meeting in 1936 and the Warner rally in 1942 to make it possible for George to place a ring on Ann's third finger, left hand?

The romance, having started at zero, rapidly progressed to zero-zero. They couldn't see each other for frost. They nodded when they met on the lot; they spoke when they unexpectedly bumped into each other in the commissary. But you probably write to your congressman oftener than Ann thought of George or vice versa.

Then, on December 31, 1939, Mrs. Jack Warner gave a party to welcome 1940. Ann says, "Everyone was there—but everyone!" She was seated at a table where stories were being exchanged—typical Hollywood stories, not off-color, but strictly cockeyed. The story about the bird who got caught in a badminton game. The story about the man who wouldn't jump out of a thirteenth story window because he was superstitious.

George ambled over to the table. He listened and laughed politely, but mainly his expression was deadpan. Finally, when a lull occurred, he started a story of his own. This special (which Ann says she has subsequently heard again and again) is a drawn-out history of a talking dog. It has more verses than Old McDougal had animals, and is just about as sensible. George talked on, suavely, smoothly, as only George can. People began to hold their ribs, two cases of laughing apoplexy occurred, and one man nearly strangled of mirth while deadpan Brent talked on.

It was then that Ann discovered one of George's greatest assets. "It's the thing of this twinkle. His entire face remains calm and almost without expression, but his eyes simply dance!"

The next day he asked Ann to have dinner with him on the seventh of January at Harry's Steak House. She said yes, thank you.

On the way home that night she said, "You had me fooled. I really didn't credit you with such a swell sense of humor. How come this dead-pan stuff?"

Tipping back his head, as George does when he allows himself to laugh, he said, "If you'd spent as much time on legit as I have, you'd know how necessary a dead-pan is. For years I had callouses on the inside of my cheeks from closing my jaws hard on the flesh to keep from laughing. It's (Continued on page 90)

George hos to go cruising on his friends' boats nowodoys! He'd plonned to honeymoon on his own yocht, but he hod junked his dld engine, ond Wor priorities prevented him from buying o new one.

For that Spring-Lovely Look

POND'S TWIN BEAUTY SPECIAL

Luxurious enough for a princess—soft-smooth Pond's Cold Cream is priced for thrifty purses! Use this smooth-as-silk cream for your daily Pond's glamour care. Slather it thick over your face and throat. Tissue it off. "Rinse" with lots more Pond's. Tissue it off again. Do this every night—for daytime cleanups, too. Lovely how Pond's takes off every little smitch of soil—leaves your skin so much softer, so much smoother!

Gossamer-light Pond's NEW Dreamflower Face Powder! Your choice of 4 flattering new Dreamflower shades, each blended to give your face a magic touch of glamour-soft color. New smoothness that lends a dreamy "misty-soft" quality to your skin. Adorable new Dreamflower box! The 28¢ size is free with your purchase, at the regular price, of the medium-large jar of Pond's Cold Cream in this Pond's Twin Beauty Special!

Get these Two Delightful Beauty Aids—for the Price of the Cream alone

You'll find this Pond's Twin Beauty Special at your favorite beauty counter—the Cold Cream and Powder conveniently packaged together to take right home. Don't wait—this offer is for a limited time. You pay only for the Cold Cream (the medium-large size)—the 28¢ size box of Pond's Dreamflower Powder comes with it free—a gift to you from Pond's!

● "I just love Pond's Cold Cream. It makes my face feel so fresh, clean and soft," says Ann Swanson of Washington, D. C.—one of Pond's lovely engaged girls.

● "I'm so pleased with Pond's new Dreamflower Powder! The texture is lovely—fluffy as air—but so clinging! And the box is simply sweet!" says beautiful Geraldine Spreckels, of the famous California family.

Free 28¢ size Pond's Dreamflower Powder with purchase of medium-large jar of Pond's Cold Cream at the regular price. Such a large jar for so little. At your favorite beauty counter. Sold only in this convenient package, this Twin Beauty Special is for a limited time only.

Susan Hayward
in
REAP THE WILD WIND

Hold that Smile

BY CAROL CARTER

Carol Adams—Republic player

Give those sparklers of yours the care they deserve if you want the kind of smile that is always young, confident and engaging. Here's how you can do it!

What happens when you smile? Are you suddenly prettier and more animated, or is your beauty dimmed by teeth that aren't all they ought to be?

Radiant, even teeth are important to you, no matter what your ambitions or dreams—whether you hope to be a movie star, to make a success of your job or to hold your boy friend's affection. They make themselves visible with every word you speak, every smile, every wholehearted laugh—and if they are bright and lovely, they add sparkle to your personality. Happily enough, well-cared-for teeth are the useful ones, too, for it takes strong, regular teeth to cut, shred and chew food thoroughly for easy digestion and consequent good health.

If your teeth are just average—neither assets nor liabilities—or if their irregularities make you self-conscious about smiling, they don't have to stay that way. You can make them healthier and brighter by regular cleansing and polishing, daily massage and proper nourishment. And their imperfections can be corrected by dentistry.

Teeth, you know, consist of three principal parts—dentine, enamel and cementum. Dentine is a semi-hard, elastic substance, which comprises the major portion of each tooth and inside of which lies the nerve. Enamel —the hardest material your body produces—encases the part which shows above the gum, while cementum covers the root. When these outer coverings become injured in any way, then your tooth troubles begin, and you make a flying trip to the dentist. Incidentally, he's the one person in your life you should visit twice a year, for he'll clean your teeth thoroughly of stubborn deposits that mar your smile, and he'll check defects before they have a chance to cause you serious difficulty.

But the major job of tooth beautification depends on you. There's nothing glamorous about brushing your teeth, but it's the best smile brightener we know. Choose a brush that's small enough to reach all corners of your mouth, and whose bristles are firm and long enough to penetrate and cleanse all the tiny little crevices and depressions in your teeth. Then, use it after every meal. Whether you use paste, powder or liquid dentifrice is a matter of your own choice, but select one whose texture and flavor leaves your mouth feeling clean and fresh. Then, you'll never be tempted to forego that important service to your teeth.

Hold your brush at a 45-degree angle to your teeth and stroke from the gums toward the biting edges, both inside and out. Then, scour the chewing surfaces thoroughly. Concentrate on two or three teeth at a time, then move on to the next group until all thirty-two of your precious sparklers are thoroughly scrubbed.

If you want your brush to do a good cleansing job for you, do the same for it. After every use, rinse it thoroughly in cold water and hang it where air can get to it. It's a good idea to keep two brushes handy and alternate their use, so one will always be dry and firm. If you work away from home, keep another in your desk, locker, or some other convenient place, so your smile will be as bright after luncheon as it was in the morning. You'll be glad to have a brush handy when you have a special date after work. The effective life of any tooth brush is only as long as the (Continued on page 89)

Brush your teeth frequently during the day with a firm-bristled brush and your favorite dentifrice.

Use dental floss carefully every day to clean hard-to-get-at spaces between your teeth.

Keep your mouth and breath fresh and clean by using a mouth wash after every meal.

Chew gum to exercise gums and mouth muscles and to help keep teeth bright and sparkling.

New . . Luscious! Pond's Dreamflower Powder

New Shades—Radiant! They do more than merely match your skin! New Dreamflower shades throw a lovely veil of glamour-soft color over your face!

New Smoothness—Luxurious! Dreamflower's fragrant new silkiness clings tenderly . . . Gives skin a wonderful "misty-soft" look!

New Box—Adorable!
Gorgeous big box—only 49¢!
2 smaller sizes, too.

"Pond's new Dreamflower Powder is delightful. It has everything a powder should have —lovely shades, delicate, smooth texture and such a pretty box!"
MISS FERNANDA WANAMAKER

10¢
Also a larger size

Discovered!
Pond's "LIPS"
New! Stays on Longer
Smash-success new lipstick in 5 "Stagline" shades. Yummy colors that stay on and on!

FREE—All 6 new Dreamflower Powder shades

POND'S, Dept. 9MS-PE, Clinton, Conn.

I should love to try all of the new Dreamflower Powder shades so I can be sure of finding the one that is perfect for my coloring. Will you please send me free samples right away?

*My name*_____

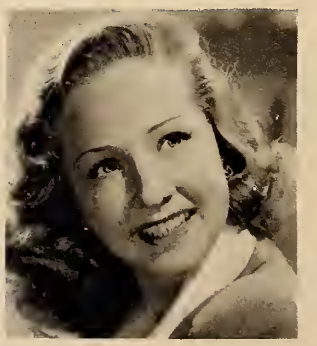
*My address*_____

(Offer good in U. S. only)

modern screen's smile chart . . .

FOR	DO THIS	USING THESE AIDS
Radiant Teeth	Brush your teeth faithfully after every meal with a reliable dentifrice—either paste, pawder ar liquid. Cancentrate an two ar three teeth at ane time, brushing from gums ta biting surfaces, bath inside and aut, then ga an ta the next graup. In arder ta have a dry, firm-bristled brush each time, keep two gaad brushes an hand. Dental flass should be used daily, tao, ta remave faad particles, etc., that accumulate between the teeth. Rinse and cleanse yaur teeth and mauth regularly with a gaad mauth wash. Chewing gum alsa helps ta keep teeth bright.	Dentifrice—either paste, pawder or liquid type, 2 firm-bristled brushes, dental flass, mauth wash, chewing gum.
Healthy Gums	Brush and stimulate yaur gums daily, when brushing yaur teeth. Alsa, massage them daily with yaur dentifrice and a special rubber gum massager ar yaur finger wrapped in clean gauze. Chewing gum and eating hard, crisp faads are ather gaad exercisers. A gaad mauth wash will alsa help ta saathe inflamed mauth tissue and will rinse faod particles fram yaur gums.	Dentifrice, gum massager, clean gauze, chewing gum, mauth wash.
Firm Chin Contours	Rub a rich lubricating cream aver your thraat and chin in upward and autward mavements. Using the backs of your hands, slap under chin briskly. Then apply bracing skin taner ar astringent. At night, apply a rich naurishing cream ta thraat area and leave it on while yau sleep. Chewing gum vigarausly is another gaad malder af lavely chin cantaurs.	Lubricating cream, naurishing cream, chewing gum.
Fragrant Breath	Tharaugh cleansing af teeth as autlined abave is mast impartant, but ta tharaughly cleanse the mauth af faad particles and ta neutralize faad adars, be sure ta use a gaad mauth wash after every meal. Swish the salution araund in yaur mauth a minute ar more. Chewing gum will alsa help to keep yaur breath clean and fresh. Drink citrus fruit juices and plenty af water.	Dentifrice, 2 firm-bristled brushes, dental flass, mauth wash, chewing gum, fruit juices, water.
An Engaging Smile	Make up yaur lips becamingly by selecting shades to suit yaur skin calaring and castume. Keep yaur lips soft by lubricating at night with naurishing cream ar lip pamade and by cleansing lips tharaughly with cleansing tissue and cream before every application af lipstick. Be sure ta use a dentifrice regularly so yaur smile will reveal clean, sparkling teeth. Chew gum ta keep mouth muscles exercised and mabile. Yaur breath is always kept fresh by using mauth wash regularly.	Harmonious lip make-up, lip pamade ar rich naurishing cream, cleansing tissue, cleansing cream, teeth cleansers, chewing gum, mauth wash.

Virginia Gilmore will appear in 20th Century's "Sundown Jim."



Bonita Granville did a fine job in "H. M. Pulham, Esq."

Linda Darnell will be seen in the "Loves of Edgar Allan Poe."

Help your BEAUTY bloom this Spring!

Give your skin Ivory "baby-care," doctors recommend Help yourself to a fresh complexion . . . to go with your new spring clothes. Use as your model of skin perfection the Loveliest Complexion in all the world . . . baby's own!

Do as you do for baby . . . take doctors' beauty advice! Give your skin, too, the gentle daily care of New "Velvet-Suds" Ivory Soap . . . now milder and faster-lathering than ever!

What finer beauty-care could your complexion have than that advised by doctors for baby's lovely skin?

Make your skin SPRING FRESH

Avoid WINTER-DRIED "flakiness"

Help bring spring's bloom to your skin by "babying" it this way every night: With New Ivory's creamy, quick lather (lukewarm, never hot!) gently massage your skin upward, following facial contours. Warm rinse. Pat dry. Since your skin is "winter-dried" apply lightly a little cold cream.

Avoid OILY-SKIN drabness

Since oily skins tend to hold dirt, give yours this thorough spring-cleansing each night and morning: Work up a cleansing-mask of quick, thick Ivory lather on your face. Then scrub with a washcloth. Rinse. Repeat Ivory-mask cleansing. Warm rinse, then cold. Let New Ivory be spring to your beauty!

I'M MOSTLY COMPLEXION—

To help keep my sensitive skin perfect, Doctor recommends New Ivory Soap. It's an improved Ivory — milder than ever, and contains no dye, medication, or strong perfume that might be irritating.

ENJOY "BABY-CARE" ALL OVER!

Sink back into a caressing sea of "velvet suds" that quickly creams off your big white floating Ivory cake. Every pore responds to gentle Ivory! Then you step out to untroubled sleep . . . and waken with "Spring-Fresh" beauty!

99 44/100 % PURE IT FLOATS

"Baby-care" is Beauty-care . . . use New Velvet-suds IVORY

TRADEMARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. • PROCTER & GAMBLE

Ladies!

HERE IS SUCH A SPECIAL

INTRODUCTORY OFFER

TO READERS OF THE MODERN SCREEN

WE HOPE YOU DON'T MISS A WORD OF IT

SEND YOUR NAME...WE'LL SEND THE RINGS

SEND NO MONEY

MAIL COUPON TODAY...TEST 10 DAYS ON GUARANTEE OF FULL SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK! The beautiful, sentimental solitaire has a gorgeous, brilliant center replica, nearly ¾-karat size and two dazzling replicas on each side. The mounting reproduces in fine detail the same popular ring styling which has been the rage from Miami to Hollywood. It is the ring of youth, of love, of affection. You have your choice of genuine sterling silver or yellow gold-plate mountings. Remember, we're not trying to tell you these are real diamonds. The originals would cost $100.00, $200.00 or perhaps more. But these replica diamonds ARE one of America's greatest imitations. Not too big, not too flashy, it takes the closest inspection to tell the difference. Stage stars, celebrities, social leaders and millionaires don't risk their precious originals but wear replica diamonds without fear of detection.

The solitaire is offered to you for only $1.00. The solitaire and wedding ring to match are specially priced at only $1.69 . . . the perfect pair for only $1.69. Send no money. Just mail the coupon below and deposit $1.00 for the solitaire alone or $1.69 for both the solitaire and wedding ring, plus 10% Federal Excise Tax, and postage charges. Inspect these beautiful replica diamonds. Wear them, see how real-like they sparkle, how amazingly brilliant they are, how envious your friends may be. Convince yourself—compare these replica diamonds with originals. Consider them on-approval, on free trial for ten full days. Then, if you can bear to part with your rings, if you aren't satisfied in every way, return them and get your money back for the asking. Don't wait, but mail the coupon, today!

THE DIAMOND MAN, Dept.504, 207 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR RING SIZE

Use the chart below. Cut out the strip accurately, wrap tightly around middle-joint of ring finger. The number that meets the end of the chart strip is your ring size. Mark it down on the coupon.

Send a Letter or Order From Convenient Coupon

Ladies . . . have you ever wished to own an expensive diamond ring? Well, you know that the marching armies of Europe have brought the diamond centers of the world to a virtual standstill. With genuine diamond prices shooting skyward, it might be a long, long time before your dreams come true. But here's amazing news. If you act now, today, you can obtain a beautiful solitaire replica diamond ring, nearly ¾-karat solitaire, one of America's greatest imitations, in a gorgeous sterling silver or gold-plate mounting, during one of the greatest value-giving advertising offers in all history! Simply mail the coupon below. Inspect this remarkable solitaire replica diamond, wear it for 10 days. If you aren't delighted in every way, you need not lose a penny!

HAVE YOU EVER WISHED TO OWN A BEAUTIFUL EXPENSIVE-LOOKING REPLICA DIAMOND SOLITAIRE?

Just think! No other type ring so beautifully expresses the sentiment of true love as a solitaire . . . a replica diamond solitaire, gleaming in its crystal white beauty . . . exquisitely set in a sterling silver or yellow gold-plate ring that proudly encircles "her" finger . . . the perfect symbol of life's sweetest sentiment . . . an adorable token of love and affection. Replica diamonds are decidedly new and very fashionable. So closely do they resemble real diamonds in flaming, dazzling colors, the average person can scarcely tell them apart. So you, too, should inspect this replica diamond solitaire. Mail the coupon, see for yourself that it is one of the world's most popular ring styles. Consider your replica diamond on-approval for ten days. If it doesn't amaze you and your friends, return it and you aren't out a penny.

"The Perfect Pair"

The solitaire replica diamond ring, in either a sterling silver or gold-plate mounting is offered at $1.00. The wedding ring to match is only 69c extra, both the solitaire and matching wedding ring for only $1.69. Mail the coupon today.

CLIP AND MAIL THIS COUPON TODA

THE DIAMOND MAN, Dept. 504, 207 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, I

Send for my inspection and approval, replica diamond rings as check below. I will pay the postman amount indicated, plus postage on arrival, on t understanding I can return the rings for any reason in 10 days and you w refund my money immediately without question.

☐ Replica Diamond Solitaire—$1.00 plus 10% Federal Excise Tax
☐ Replica Diamond Solitaire and Matching Wedding Ring—Both For $1.69 plus 10% Federal Excise Tax

Size..... ☐ Sterling Silver ☐ Yellow Gold-Plate

Name.....
(print plainly)

Address.....

SPEAK OUT FOR BEAUTY

By Carol Carter

SPARKLING white teeth, anyone will tell you, are the first requisite of a beguiling smile. But don't count on their brilliance alone to dazzle your public.

The way you paint your lips, for instance, can make or break your smile. And a doubled or redoubled chin will deglamorize the most beaming countenance. Another thing—people associate your voice with your mouth, so it is important to sound as attractive as you look. And lastly, watch your mouth mannerisms, for as the colored mammies always tell the storybook belles, "Yo' has to ack pretty too, Honeychile."

Harmonious and artistic lip make-up can beautify and glorify your smile, so choose one of the clear new shades for spring that will highlight your coloring as well as your smile. If your skin has a golden tone, choose a lipstick with an orange-red cast, or if your complexion is pale or neutral with a faint pink tint, you will look your best in a shade slightly on the blue-red side. Clear red make-up is flattering to all skin types, whether golden tan, ivory or a pale neutral shade.

Rouge your upper lip first, then by pressing both lips together, transfer the color to your lower. Next, outline with your lip pencil and fill in again with color. Finally, remove the excess by taking an impression of your lip rouge on a cleansing tissue. As to shaping your lips, Hollywood make-up experts agree that you should avoid the appearance of a small mouth and thin lip line. On the other hand, if your mouth is too wide or too full, it is best not to outline lips to their fullest extent. If your mouth is of normal size and in correct proportion to your face, shape it clearly, keeping the corners turned up slightly. Use cream or pomade on your lips at night to keep them soft and alluring.

If you don't see what your voice has to do with beauty, try to imagine Deanna Durbin, the smiling Jean Arthur or Joan Fontaine with a strident, squeaky voice. The rich, effective timbre of their voices contributes to that subtle quality of personality just as a smile does. Men, too, comment (Continued on page 88)

Deanna Durbin's smile captures hearts. She's just back from a U.S.O. taur ta begin a new picture far Universal.

AROUND THE CLOCK IN COLOR

IF you are like any of the other girls we know, overcast morning skies mean a search through the closet for the brightest, most colorful thing you own. Many of you even have pet gloom chasers. A red felt beret that defies grey clouds or a vivid flower garden of a blouse. Diana Lewis, we hear, cherishes an emerald green flannel jacket for just that purpose. Color, whether unrelieved or sharply contrasted, does something to you. And just as important, it lifts the spirits of those who have to look at you. So these days, when even a sunny morning can turn droopy by grim noonday headlines, why not be smart and stock up on gloom chasers, every variety. The red calf shoes and green ones, too, seen everywhere around town, are doing their walking best to brighten the scenery. And even the conservative, navy-blue girls are giving in to signal green topcoats and violet wool suits. Color is rampant, and the prints are bold, just like we told you.

The southern cotton boll has gotten itself a new lease on life and is going places from morning till night, via the striking new cotton print, made into housecoats, evening dresses and a wonderful three-piece play suit, including shorts, backless dress and bolero, which can be worn a number of ways. With its gay red background and white cotton bolls scattered here and there, this print is bound to pep you up and chase away the doldrums.

Red it is again, in a three-piece suit of spun rayon linen, with white rayon crepe shirt and trim little butcher-boy vest. There isn't any law that says you have to wear the white shirt with the suit, either. If you have one with stripes or flowers, give that a try.

Now that white has established itself as an around-the-year favorite, you don't have to wait for June to get into the Sunday special above, with panel and pockets of red roses done in dainty petitpoint—simulated, of course.

Perfect print ensembles are ever scarce. By perfect, we mean a print dress that hangs well and can stand by itself, combined with a jacket that converts the print into a smart street costume. The one above does all it should and more, with sailor collar and printed piping. Sprawling red and green palm leaves add a colorful splash to any background, be it sunshine or clouds!

By Elizabeth Willguss

For further fashian information, see page 88.

THEY'RE Charming
Irresistible
THEY USE IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME AND LIPSTICK
Mother and Daughter . . . both glamorous, adored and admired wherever they go. Both accent their charm with the exotic lasting fragrance of IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME. A touch of Irresistible will make you divinely enchanting, unforgettable! Try it today. Now in adorable Mother's Day Box.
10¢ at all 5 and 10¢ stores
IRRESISTI
Mother
USE IRRESISTIBLE LIPSTICK
Brilliant new reds and ruby tones. The lipstick that's WHIP-TEXT to stay on longer . . . smoother . . . . . 10¢

MADE IN HEAVEN

(Continued from page 37)

kind of funny voice and a grip on my hand that hurt." And six weeks later they flew to Las Vegas with Brian and Marge Donlevy and were married "by a little one-armed man with a growling tummy. I cried through the whole thing, but Bill was so calm. Little did he dream, poor angel, what a heller he was getting."

Mrs. Holden's one claim to hellerdom is her heckly streak. She doesn't know what possesses her, but she simply cannot refrain from a well-placed heckle. They'll come out of a preview of one of Bill's pictures, and Brenda will be bursting with pride. She'll rave over it all the way home, and then suddenly she'll hear herself saying, "Too bad the old shuffling walk slipped in in that one spot." "Yeah," he'll say in such a miserable voice that she'll feel like biting her tongue off. And there's her silent heckling—a small tug at his tie, a yank at his collar. "It's my vice," she tells you with immense contrite eyes. You'd think she was Mrs. Al Capone or someone.

They live in a dream of an old English farmhouse with a flagstone walk and an acre of land. It has eight rooms, and only the dining room is "anything definite." It's French Provincial. The living room, two bedrooms, den and playroom are lovely mixtures of everything in the world. Bill and Brenda decorated the whole house themselves, and it has taken on a lot of their sort of slaphappy charm. There are pictures hung not quite straight, and pipe ashes lurking under carpets. But you only see the softness of all the colors and the comfortable sat-in look of the chairs and a kind of tangible happiness all over the place.

"Betcha," you think, "these walls have never heard a cross word uttered." It develops you're right.

battle cries . . .

"You simply can't get mad in this nice firesidey atmosphere, we discovered—but where we have really divine brawls is upstairs in the bathroom. Oh divine! We turn on the shower so that no one can hear us, then—mm—the yelling! For all of about five minutes you'd think Reno, Nev., was positively the next move. Then the whole picture will strike us so funny we just stare at each other and hoot."

Once in a while there'll be a killer-diller of a fight that no amount of shower-running will cure. Brenda will sulk off to bed and lie awake half the night brooding. Bill will have terrible nightmares and get up at dawn to write her one of his heartrending notes of apology. "Dear Ardis," he'll write (that's her real name, and he's never called her anything else), "I've been very stupid and I love you very much. Bill." He puts it on her pillow and contrives to get silently out of the house before she sees it. She wakes up, reads the note and cries her head off over his cuteness. "It's his big ugly writing that kills me, and his 'Dear Ardis'—never 'darling' or anything. Half the time the anticipation of one of those notes bedevils me into prolonging a fight overnight. Isn't that awful? I save the things—they're so Billish."

She has yet to get a real love letter out of him. They all begin "Dear Ardis," and go on to say how he is, and how is she? Then after several matter of fact pages, "much love, Bill." "That was the gist of them even when I was on location in Canada last July—a bride of three days!" Mrs. Holden's man Bill admits he's no Casanova. On the telephone however, he couldn't be more Charles Boyer. He phones her daily when they're separated, and they hang on the wire by the hour—knocking the living hell out of their poor budget. ("Serves it right, the damned old trouble-maker.")

That budget drives them crazy. They've somehow gotten into the toils of a fiend of a business manager whose motto seems to be, "If it's fun, it's out." To hear Brenda tell it, their entertainment allowance is virtually non-existent. "An ice cream soda here, a movie there. But splash? Never." As for clothes—well, once ages ago she binged and bought a stunning I. Magnin dress. She has since learned to loathe it, for she's still paying for the thing "out of this miserable, tiny little pittance that man allows me. Haven't had another stitch since, except this suit which I picked up for almost nothing." It sounds grim, but she looks like Mrs. Harrison Williams and they're saving enough money to let themselves retire before too, too long.

her bill . . .

Bill spends most of his clothes allowance on boogie-woogie records. "And God help us all when he's depressed," says Brenda. "He closets himself in the den for hours and plays every Duke Ellington he owns. Then he feels better and starts on Jimmy Dorsey. I happened to look in on him one night around three—not having laid eyes on him since dinner—and isn't he playing an imaginary drum! Then a piano, also phoney. And finally a sax like absolutely crazy. I often wonder how I got affiliated with him—I who ask only for a bit of Kostelanetz of a Sunday afternoon." We happen to know, though, she's aiding and abetting him every step of the way. Smuggles money from the food allowance to buy him albums of Count Basie and Bing. Funny, though, she doesn't associate Bill with jive. He's irrevocably tied up in her mind with "Begin the Beguine" and Cesar Franck's "Symphonic Variations," because those were the two pieces he kept playing for her the first night she was invited to have dinner at his house.

(Continued on page 67)

UP-TO-DATE ADDRESS LIST!

Send todoy for the new, up-to-dote list of Hollywood stors with their correct studio oddresses. It is o convenient size to hondle or keep in a scrapbook. To receive o list, oll you hove to do is write to us ond osk for it, enclosing o lorge, self-addressed ond stomped envelope. Don't forget thot lost item, os no request con be complied with otherwise. Pleose send request to Informotion Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Modison Ave., New York, N. Y.

"A Whole Week Without Polish Chipping" Mrs. Mervin Lane

Hand MRS. MERVIN LANE

Polish NEW CUTEX "BLACK RED"

Time 7 DAYS AFTER MANICURE

After a whole busy week Cutex Nail Polish was still wearing like a dream—still sparkling like a dream on Mrs. Mervin Lane's lovely, long nails!

Mother of four active children, a successful illustrator and now a busy war worker . . . MRS. MERVIN LANE. No wonder she's so enthusiastic about the way Cutex stays on her nails! "At the end of a whole busy week there wasn't a chip or peel in my polish!"

Wear Cutex Sugar Plum, Gingerbread, Lollipop, Butterscotch, Sheer Natural, Black Red! See if you aren't thrilled with the way their beauty lasts! Only 10¢ (plus tax) in the U. S.

Northam Warren, New York

Wear CUTEX

APPLY 2 COATS FOR THAT PROFESSIONAL LOOK AND LONGER WEAR

Academy Award Winners!

Sixteen hundred poirs of eyes floshed an Livvy when Jaon's nome wos announced. See o resemblance?

Two-million-dallar Defense Band seller Dottie Lamaur with Novol Commander Bolton, T.C.F. go-between in current Service-film tie-up.

Maureen O'Haro ond husband Will Price smiled while her ca-workers in "Haw Green Was My Valley" won directing, acting honors.

Brendo Morshall and Cory Gront knew they weren't in the running, tolked colmly while awaiting results of 10,000 ballots counted.

by Helen Holmes

minutes longer or until chicken, onions and mushrooms are tender. (Reduce oven heat to moderate—350°F.—for this final cooking.) Remove chicken and vegetables to a hot serving platter, simmer juices in the casserole on surface of range until slightly thickened. Serve over the chicken.

The stars all enjoy the combination of chicken, vegetable and sauce in this next recipe. Sometimes use tender tips of broccoli or asparagus in place of spinach.

CHICKEN MOCAMBO

For this you will need large slices of cold chicken, so we suggest that you boil 1 or 2 chickens and reserve the breast meat. (The meat from the legs, wings etc., may be used for creamed chicken or croquettes.) Cut in slivers, about 12 blanched almonds. Brown them in butter. Add 2 to 3 cups chopped, well-drained spinach, which has been freshly cooked and well seasoned. Make 2 cups of well-seasoned white sauce of medium thickness, using rich milk. When slightly cool, add 1 tablespoon mayonnaise and 1 tablespoon whipped cream. Place spinach in bottom of a greased shallow casserole, arrange slices of chicken over it and pour sauce over all. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan type cheese and brown slightly under the broiler.

You'll also like this very simple recipe for Veal Scallopine, with sherry sauce.

VEAL SCALLOPINE

Purchase veal cutlets, ¼ inch in thickness, from very young veal. Allow 1 for each person to be served. Whack meat with the back of a heavy knife or potato masher to flatten it out. Dredge with flour, seasoned with salt and pepper. Fry in butter on both sides, until tender and golden brown, being careful not to let the butter burn. Remove meat from the skillet and place it where it will keep hot, while you prepare the sauce.

SAUCE

Put a pinch of white pepper in the skillet with ¼ cup of sherry wine. Simmer for two minutes. Add ½ pint of light cream or top milk and simmer until slightly thickened. Add a teaspoon of finely minced fresh spinach. Pour over the veal. Then taste what the cinema lads and lassies eat on their evenings out!

SALAD DE CICCO

(Omitted from last month's "House of Murphy" article)

Shred the hearts of 2 crisp heads of romaine and 1 head of lettuce into a large salad bowl. Make 12 1-inch croutons of French bread and fry them in olive oil. Rub each with garlic. Add to the greens, then break in 2 hot 2-minute coddled eggs. Toss together, then add the following ingredients in the order given, tossing until the greens are coated with the dressing.

½ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons wine vinegar
Juice 2 lemons
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
Dash of salt
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
12 anchovies (optional)

Serve on chilled plates with a sprinkling of freshly ground pepper. Serves 4 to 6.

"Can't Make It— TODAY WAS WASH-DAY!"

Bill is beginning to wonder . . ."It's funny how Jane always folds after wash-day. I see other women . . ."

HOLD it Bill! Washing a tubful of clothes is no pushover. If you saw the time it takes, the way Jane has to rub—and rub—just to get your shirts clean, you'd get a shock.

She doesn't have to work so hard though. Not if she'll use Fels-Naptha Soap. Fels gives her a combination of gentle naptha and richer golden soap that gets dirt out much faster. No matter how it's ground in.

She won't spend so much time bending over the washtub if she uses Fels-Naptha Soap. She won't have to break her back, nor ruin her hands, rubbing. You'll have whiter shirts and they'll probably wear better . . .

We've been trying to get Jane to use Fels-Naptha Soap—like 'those other women.' Maybe you can persuade her.

Golden bar or Golden chips—

FELS-NAPTHA banishes "Tattle-Tale Gray"

Don't "Soap" Your Hair!

GLORIFY IT WITH HALO!

Halo Shampoo Rids Hair of Dull Soap-film . . . Reveals Luster

WANT your hair to have that gleaming, burnished, radiant look men always admire? Then throw away your old-fashioned soapy shampoo! Try that amazing discovery for hair beauty . . . Halo.

All soaps—even the finest—leave a dulling soap-film on hair. A film like the soapy scum that collects in your wash-bowl. But Halo contains no soap, leaves not the slightest trace of soap-film.

Made with a patented new-type ingredient, Halo lathers freely, even in hardest water. Removes loose dandruff the first time! Rinses so perfectly you don't need lemon or vinegar.

Hair is easy to manage, too, after a shampoo with Halo. Easy to curl! Radiant with "life" and gloss, bright with natural color.

Get Halo Shampoo today at any toilet goods counter. 10c and larger sizes.

A Product of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet

REVEALS THE BEAUTY HIDING IN YOUR HAIR

SITROUX Triple-Tested CLEANSING TISSUES

SOFTER Say "Sit-True" for tissues that are as soft as a kiss on the cheek.

STRONGER As strong as a man's fond embrace. Sitroux is made from pure cellulose.

MORE ABSORBENT Drinks in moisture. Ideal for beauty care and a thousand and one uses everywhere.

AT 5 & 10¢—DRUG & DEPT. STORES

THE DIVORCE THAT COULDN'T HAPPEN

(Continued from page 31)

transforms the world. A couple of weeks later she ran in to her mother's room.

"Mother, mother, I want to bring John up. He wants to ask you something."

Mrs. Shirley was in bed. "Wait a minute, young woman. He may be your John, but I hardly know him. Do you mind if I dress?"

Hollywood was enchanted. Anne deserved the best, which was what she'd gotten in John Payne. He had looks and charm, kindness and breeding, and he obviously adored the ground she walked on. Bless you, my children, here's one Hollywood marriage that will stick.

wedded bliss . . .

I saw her three days after the wedding, and she radiated joy. She talked about the ceremony at Santa Barbara and about the phone call to John's people in Virginia. She bubbled over his brothers. "Now I feel I've got brothers, too. It's a wonderful feeling when you've been an only child for years."

But mostly she talked about John and the wonder and perfection of John, till you got the idea that to be eighteen and Anne Shirley Payne, head over ears in love with her husband, was the most glorious destiny ever allotted woman on this earth.

Well, most girls feel that way, you'll say, three days after marriage. All right, I saw Anne again over two years later, shortly before the birth of her baby. Her happiness seemed just as flawless. She was wearing a new gold bracelet, John's birthday gift. On the heart hanging from it, he had had inscribed: "To match the golden heart you already have."

She talked off the record about John that day, because they'd agreed on no more joint publicity. At the time of their marriage, Anne's position in pictures was established, John was a beginner. Since then, a year's contract at Warner's hadn't done him much good. Not till he went to Twentieth Century-Fox did his career start looking healthy.

He wanted to make his way as John Payne, not as the husband of Anne Shirley. There were to be no more Mr.-and-Mrs. stories. John would talk about anything but his wife and home. Their careers were to be divorced from their private lives. Anne was in full sympathy with his viewpoint.

So when she talked about John that day, it wasn't for publication. Now the reason for keeping it out of print is gone.

That old chestnut, career versus marriage, came up, and Anne laughed. For her there wasn't any versus. She had no burning ambition. She could be happy in pictures forever, she could also be happy if she had to quit tomorrow. Please don't think her ungrateful or disinterested. She was neither. She had the movies to thank for everything, including her present happiness with John. If they threw her out next week, she'd still be grateful. She couldn't expect a million years. She was no raving beauty like Miss Jane Tiddledypush. And if it ever came to choosing between husband and career, what was a career? The end of an option, and good-bye. A husband, said Anne, was for life.

She and John had everything they wanted. Which didn't include a town car or a choice assortment of jewels or a yacht. If they ever got such things, it would be very nice. If not, it would still be very nice. She didn't want to sound like a sweet little nitwit, making Pollyanna noises. The fact remained that she didn't see how people with yachts and diamonds could get any more fun out of life than she and John got. It was fun to take walks or pick flowers in the garden or see a good picture or lie on the beach, worrying only about what kind of sun-tan they were getting—or run down to the delicatessen for food when the gang dropped in. Having fun was their hobby. They thought they had the finest friends in the world. "And I know," said Anne, "that I have the finest husband."

Anne's mother, a wise and lovely woman, thought so, too. Anne was so young when she married. "Such a little girl," as Mrs. Shirley put it. To give such a little girl into a man's keeping was a serious thing. Yet she hadn't hesitated. She'd felt that the boy was right and that in the final analysis, Anne's marriage was her own business. She'd never held with women who felt they owned leases on the lives of their children. "Suppose I'd said no, and things turned out wrong. I'd always feel I'd stolen something from her." About John, she had no fear, only hope, that he was what she thought he was.

"He's better than I thought," she said. "He treats her like a little queen. When he looks at her, it's like being in church. After two and a half years, they're still moonstruck. Let them be together, and they don't know anyone else is around. John's more tender of her feelings than I am."

They'd gone, all three, to see "Pygmalion." Mrs. Shirley and John were crazy about it, Anne wasn't.

"Oh, it's just over your head," teased her mother.

"It's not either," John objected and, while Mrs. Shirley chuckled, found twelve good reasons why Anne shouldn't like the picture.

major calamity . . .

What happened in a year to strike at the roots of such happiness? Because we know now that it's almost a year since the possibility of divorce was first broached between them. Meantime, to romantics their marriage remained a symbol, proof that shining young love could flourish on Hollywood soil. After seeing "Remember the Day," I overheard a woman in the lobby tell her companion: "Grand guy, John Payne—married to Anne Shirley—four and a half years and still crazy about each other—" Next morning the separation was announced.

It staggered Hollywood. Never by word

SLAY THE STAG LINE?

If you don't, we'd advise a session with our magical beauty chart! No matter what shape face you have, we'll whip you up into something gorgeous!

Enclose 5c in coin or stamps and address: Co-Ed Chart No. 2, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York City.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

or sign had either of the two betrayed himself. There had been none of the customary underground rumblings. Mrs. Shirley herself—and no mother has ever been closer to a daughter—didn't suspect.

What happened in the course of that year? A girl like Anne doesn't divorce a man who treats her like a little queen and looks at her as if he were in church. All Hollywood asked the question. Only John and Anne know the answer, and they're not telling. Oh yes, they talked, and when they got through talking, you were still asking, why?

The known facts are few, the conjectures myriad. We know that the idea of divorce presented itself to Anne almost a year ago, and that John pooh-poohed it. His wife was a girl who thought for herself. Nothing happened to disperse the clouds, whatever their cause. On the contrary.

Anne finally reached the conclusion that, for John and herself, separation was best. But how about the baby? What would be best for Julie Ann? At last she figured it this way. Since she and her husband were no longer happy together, who could guarantee that they wouldn't break up a year hence, or two or five? The wrench would be minimized for a child of two and aggravated by each succeeding year. Having found that answer, there seemed nothing to wait for.

They'd been out to dinner one night. When they got home Anne said: "I've got something important to talk over with you."

John had six pages of new dialogue to learn for next day. Couldn't it wait till tomorrow?

"This is more important than new dialogue, John."

He knew then what she meant. They talked far into the night. John had to leave for the studio early. When he got back, she and the baby were gone—to her mother's, he concluded.

But she hadn't gone to her mother's. She'd rented a house with a big backyard. The house wasn't much to look at, but that didn't matter so long as the baby had sunlight and room to play. John took her and Julie back to the house where they'd lived together and moved his own belongings to a hotel.

If Anne doesn't mention the heartbreak through which she moved to her decision, it's because she has no instinct for self-dramatization or pity. Anyway, she doesn't have to. The pain is in her eyes. It's in John's, too. That's what makes the whole thing so incredible.

court proceedings . . .

The divorce papers cite mental cruelty—a legal phrase which may mean anything from a sock in the jaw to reading in bed. Anne calls it incompatibility. Most women speak of divorce in terms of the past—what the brute did to bring her to this pass. Anne speaks of hers in terms of the future.

"We just couldn't seem to be happy together any longer, and I think we're both nice enough people to deserve a happy life. Maybe we can find it alone or, eventually, with somebody else."

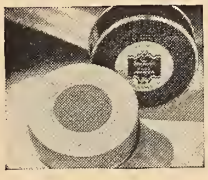
Each is quick in defense of the other. John says it must be his fault, it can't be Anne's. Anne says it's nobody's fault.

"We can't point to any one big cause of conflict, so people are going to find it for us, and we'll just have to bear it. But don't you believe them. I'm not in love with anyone else, nor is John. It's just a question of looking ahead five years or ten and doing what must be done now, however it hurts.

"I used to hoot and howl when newly-divorced couples said, we're the best of

Ellen Drew
IN PARAMOUNT'S
"The Remarkable Andrew"

Beautify dull, lifeless skin
with
Color Harmony Face Powder



ENHANCE the appeal of your beauty by giving your skin a lovelier color tone. You can do this with the correct color harmony shade of powder created for your colorings by Max Factor Hollywood. Once you try it, you'll always like it because...

. . . it imparts a lovely color to the skin
. . . it creates a satin-smooth make-up
. . . it clings perfectly and really stays on

Remember, whether you are blonde, brunette, brownette, or redhead, there's a color harmony shade of Max Factor Hollywood face powder to individualize your beauty. One dollar.

TRU-COLOR LIPSTICK . . . the color stays on through every lipstick test. One dollar

ROUGE... lifelike color harmony shades to beautify your type. Fifty cents

Max Factor • Hollywood

PURSE MAKE-UP KIT

Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR MAKE-UP STUDIO, HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.

Send Purse-Size Box of Powder, Rouge Sampler and miniature Tru-Color Lipstick in my color harmony shade. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and Illustrated Instruction Book, "The New Art of Make-Up"..... FREE. 24-5-71

NAME_____

STREET_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	BROWNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐	BRUNETTE Light ☐ Dark ☐
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐	REDHEAD Light ☐ Dark ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐	If Hair is Gray, check type above and here ☐
Sallow ☐	Black ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (Color)
Olive ☐	Light ☐
SKIN Dry ☐	Dark ☐
Oily ☐ Normal ☐	AGE

Simple Splendor

A "Face-framing" Coiffure . . . brushed back in soft Waves to accentuate a lovely Natural Hair Line. Arrange back Hair in a Chignon or Braided Bun at nape of neck. DeLong Bob Pins will hold it securely in place . . . They just won't slip out.

All Bob Pins Are Not Alike

You don't have to be annoyed by loose, falling pins that do not keep their shape. Look your best with DeLong's . . . they have a strong, lasting grip . . . they won't slip out.

DeLong

BOB PINS
WON'T SLIP OUT

friends. I used to think if I couldn't dream up a better one than that, I'd keep my mouth shut. Now I feel silly, because I can't. John's one of the nicest people I know. Then why am I divorcing him? Because we're still not happy."

Which brings us right back where we started. For three years they were blissfully happy. What stopped them?

Anne was unfortunately right on one point. People will look for reasons. One nasty rumor had John drinking. He met that charge in the open, if with understandable grimness. Yes, he took an occasional cocktail like you or me. But if someone would tell him how you could work for twelve solid months on end, always be there, always on time, always up in your lines and still be a drinker in the sense implied, he'd be glad to pass the formula on to those interested. For himself, he wasn't.

But the blame, he says, lies on his shoulders. Yes, Anne did bring up the possibility of divorce a year ago but he never believed it would happen. He hadn't been as attentive as he should, but after this picture, he thought, he'd have more time, they'd straighten things out.

blue world . . .

Then came another picture and still another, one overlapping the next, with John working through the twelve-week period of layoff, sometimes Sundays and evenings. No time for picking flowers, having the gang in. No time for people in the garden or lying on the beach or —who used to be more important than anything else. No time even for Anne.

Up at six, he'd reach home exhausted. He wasn't offering alibis or making excuses, just telling what happened. Anne's schedule happened to be less heavy. She'd be waiting at home. Instead of the gay considerate companion, in would come a man often too tired to talk. Or too grumpy for companionship, so that he'd go off by himself to read or write or work on his music. He remembers evenings when they'd planned to have dinner with friends, and because he couldn't face the effort of dressing, he'd let her go alone while he went out with the boys. Nor could he blame it all on overwork, says John. He's a moody guy, not too easy to get along with. Looking back, he can see how small slights, small omissions, small failures piled up till a barrier loomed between them.

That's how John explains it, and people make skeptical noises. It's not enough, they say. Anne's too understanding. She'd make every allowance for the strain of nervous fatigue. If that were all, things would never have reached an impasse. It's an explanation, they say, which doesn't explain. I'm sorry. It's the best I could get. You're at liberty to decide for yourself how to reconcile Anne's statement to Hollywood with what the papers reported her to have said in court—that John had been so rude of late to her friends, her mother and herself that she grew nervous and ill to the point where it was difficult for her to continue her work.

John is to see the baby whenever he likes. Anne sent her to him the first Sunday he was off. On that subject she's passionate. Julie's as much John's baby as hers, he loves her as well, he has an equal claim to her. To interfere between them would be wickedness.

It's been no fun seeing Anne or John or Mrs. Shirley these past weeks. They're three unhappy people, trying to keep their unhappiness to themselves. When you're hurt, your first impulse is toward flight, escape from torturing reminders. Anne and John escaped as soon as they could. The studio released John from a picture he was scheduled to make, and he went to his family in Virginia. The day after her interlocutory decree was granted, Anne left for New York to stay with Phyllis Fraser, her closest friend.

Hollywood watched them go and had nothing to say. Except that we're very, very sorry. Something lovely faded for all of us when their happiness faded.

JUKE BOY

(Continued from page 35)

inspiration," she says. "I couldn't get them in fast enough to murder them with milk and cookies." Mrs. Dorsey is sweet-faced and white-haired and very Irish. It's no wonder, you think the minute you've seen her, that the boys are crazy about her.

"Occasionally," she confesses, "I'd go strictly against their father's orders—God help me—and let them out of their practicing entirely. He'd go into town to some concert and tell me to see that they each ran through eight solos before bedtime. Or was it fourteen?—some tremendous figure anyhow. He'd hide their shoes so they couldn't go out. Well, I'd see the two poor little men blowing and blowing, their cheeks like tomatoes, and I'd slip out to the yard with their shoes and two dimes. 'Here,' I'd say. 'Go to the movies a while.' Then I'd quake for three hours imagining Tom, Sr., coming home unexpectedly and finding me out for the sinner I was."

Jimmy says he was about twelve before he could read a note of music, and keeping this item from his exacting dad was no picnic. He finally devised a scheme: numbering the keys on his cornet, then numbering the notes of the score. It was a most laborious operation, but Mr. Dorsey never got onto it and used to brag to his musician cronies about the "magnificent little sight reader" his James was. He never told the kids how proud he was of them, and they grew up completely oblivious to the fact that they were any way unusual. "We were never exactly heroes around the house," Jimmy grins. "Kind of the reverse, what with our terrific tempers and mediocre marks." junior lady killer . . .

Maybe not around the house, James, but with the local gals a killer diller. A regular terror, we understand. When he was seven, he suddenly got into the habit of coming home from school at impossible hours, like six-thirty and quarter of seven. His straight hair would be mussed, and Mrs. Dorsey would wonder if she'd been seeing too many Theda Bara movies or was that lipstick all over his face.

"It's late, James."

"Yes'm."

"Were you kept in?"

"No, mom."

"Well, where were you till this hour?"

"I been playing 'Spin the Bottle.'"

Upon further grilling, it developed that the girls in first year high had taken to giving lots of parties after school at which Spin the Bottle was the piece de resistance. All of the males invited were eligible fourteen-year-olds except Jim, who had captured their fancy and was always included.

Mrs. Dorsey would be just about to give him a terrible scolding when he'd shove his hands into his coat. "Here, Mom." He'd have every one of his pockets bursting with candy and cake, squashed and unappetizing. "I brung 'em for you."

"Brought, James," Mrs. Dorsey would say, hugging him. And the next day the infant Casanova would be off again enslaving more females.

Growing older, his interest in women waned and his fondness for music grew. The war broke out when he was ten, and he and Tommy fell in love with martial tunes. By the time the U. S. went in in 1917, they had quite a repertoire. "Hey, Mac," Jimmy said one day (Mac's still his name for Tommy), "let's follow those soldiers down to the station and play our stuff." So the two got out their trumpets and ran after the doughboys playing "Over There" and "Stars and Stripes Forever." Eventually they built the band up to five, and they got to be quite famous around Shenandoah, Pa., where they lived.

"That," says Jimmy, "was the original Dorsey Bros. band—and a stinker if you ever heard one." It was no stinker at all if the truth were known. In fact, John Phillips Sousa heard them play and thought them magnificent.

About this time, school was beginning to pall unspeakably. Music was in the kids' very bones, and they begrudged every second they had to devote to anything else. One lone day in high school sufficed to show Jimmy that algebra and Latin verbs were not for him, but that music definitely was. He swapped his Caesar for a saxophone and organized the Dorsey Novelty Six. Tommy was right with him, and before Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey could say boo, weren't they off to a Baltimore honky tonk for their first out-of-town engagement.

"That," says Jimmy, "was in the early 1920's. The F. Scott Fitzgerald post-war era of wine, women and racoon coats. Baltimore was sort of a mecca of early swing musicians, and I especially remember two red hot colored bands—The Louisiana Dixieland Five and Mamie Smith and her Jazzhounds! Gosh that name Jazzhounds tickled us. We kept wishing we'd thought of it. Novelty Six sounded practically Philharmonic by comparison, so we changed it to Dorsey's Wild Canaries. And did that pack 'em in!"

The band was paid $285 a week, and each member got $45 except the pianist, who got $60. "Not that he was any Paderewski. Damn bad, in fact, as I remember him. But he was married, and that was that." Jimmy and Tommy were about seventeen and fifteen at this point, right at the age where any sentimental attachment for home and mother is thoroughly squelched, and any correspondence with same is unthinkable.

big shots . . .

"Never a line out of them," says Mrs. Dorsey, "for months on end. The only way I knew they were still in the land of the living was that their laundry would come home occasionally." Sometimes she'd break down completely and call them up. "'Hello, Jimmy darling, how are you?' I'd say. 'What's that?' a tight little voice would come over the line. 'One moment, please.' Then I'd hear him telling the boys in the band that it was an important business call and to get out so's he could hear himself think. They'd leave, and he'd whisper

SAYS LARAINE DAY

(AMERICAN BEAUTY BLEND)

LARAINE DAY, NOW STARRING IN "FINGERS AT THE WINDOW," AN M-G-M PICTURE

"Find a Lovelier Skin"

AS TOLD TO LOUELLA PARSONS, famous Movieland Commentator

"I'm a Yankee blend of blond and brunette strains. My skin's hard to match! So once I had to have my powder shade 'handmade' for me.

"But no more! For, lo! In that thrilling new Woodbury Color Controlled shade, Windsor Rose, I've found my exact 'Skin Twin'!"

Right, Laraine! Working with Hollywood directors, we found there are but five skin types. Then by the magic of our new Color Control process, we styled new shades for every type. There's one for you. A shade of new life, new radiance, new longer-clinging beauty!

Study the chart in every fragrant box to find your type, your shade. (Regular sizes are 50¢ and $1.00. Introductory sizes are 25¢ and 10¢.) Smooth on your "glamour dust"... and see new interest in his eyes!

New Beauty Bonus! Now in the $1.00 box, you get Woodbury Powder, Rouge and Lipstick, a complete Matched Make-up all for $1.00!

WOODBURY

Color Controlled powder

FREE . . 6 NEW GLAMOUR SHADES & CHART

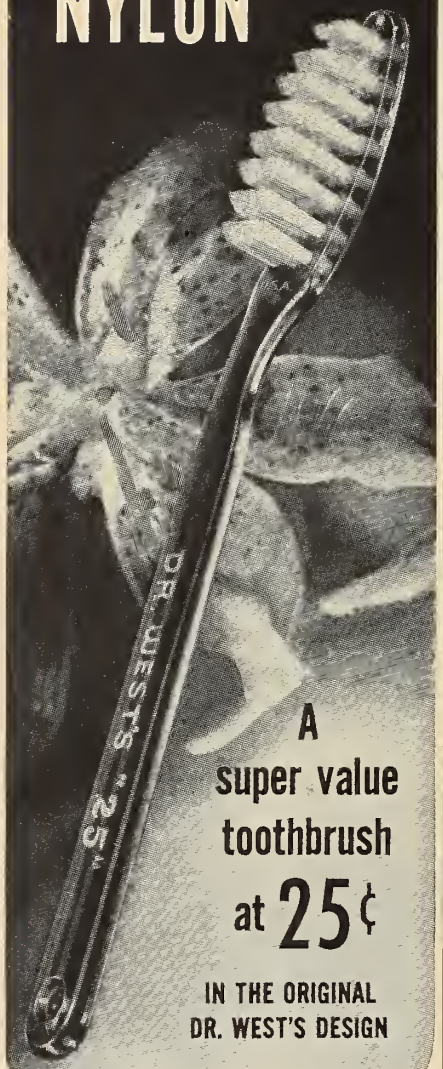
Paste this on penny postcard. We'll send you, fast, all 6 shades of Woodbury Color Controlled Powder. And a helpful little color chart so you can find your type. Address, John H. Woodbury, Inc., 8124 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada: John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ont.)

*Name*_____

*Street*_____

*City*_____ *State*_____

DR. WEST'S NYLON



A super value toothbrush at 25¢

IN THE ORIGINAL DR. WEST'S DESIGN

● This outstanding toothbrush value is made possible by streamlined manufacturing and by the development of the new Nylon bristle. A really fine brush, within the reach of everyone, it offers many of Dr. West's famous quality features including the double convex brush-head. Ask for Dr. West's "25".

By the makers of DR. WEST'S MIRACLE-TUFT TOOTHBRUSH into the phone, 'Gee, mom. How we gonna command any respect if the boys get on that you call us up? What are we, babies?' 'I just want to know are you keeping good and warm, and do you need your winter underwear yet?' He'd nearly go frantic at that. 'Christmas, Mom,' he'd hiss. 'It's hot down here. This is the South, remember? For the love of Mike don't send any of that stuff. The boys think the cookies and taffy you send is funny enough. Not that it's not swell, Mom—but good night—'

"The telephone operator used to listen to every word, and when I'd ring off, she'd call me back and we'd have a grand cry over them."

When they came home after that, their parents hardly knew them. They were men of the world. "Derby hats and everything, God help us," reminisces Mrs. Dorsey. "And rich as Croesus, the pair of them." From then on they were never home very much.

Jazz was in the air, loud and exciting. Whiteman and Lopez were its more sophisticated purveyors. And there was Bix Beiderbecke, who played a marvelous throbbing new kind of music later to be known as swing. Those were the days of the sensational all-night jam sessions at Plunkett's on Fifty-third Street. Jimmy used to leave his saxophone there after work, dash out for a shower and a bite to eat and come back and play till morning. Bix would be there, and Art Tatum and any number of spectacular colored musicians. They'd stimulate each other, and by three or four in the A. M. they'd be dishing up music that was out of this world . . . Those were the days when gangsters lurked in every night club, and hold-ups and murders were a dime a dozen. ("Closest I ever got to a 'gangster,'" says Jimmy sadly, "was when George Raft m-ceed for our band for a while.") . . . It was the era of fabulous money when a trip to Europe was about as unusual as a week-end in Atlantic City.

"Even I," Jimmy beams, "got to Europe. J. D. who'd never saved a nickel in his life." He'd married a darling little 18-year-old named Janie (a beauty contest winner, incidentally), and that was their honeymoon. "Exactly $1,800 it cost us, and we did it up right. London, Paris, Vienna—" gay twenties . . .

